Sambo's Denies Protests Caused Change in Plans

By CHRIS BLAKE
Hartford Reporter

EAST HARTFORD — Sambo's Restaurant has decided not to build an outlet at 299 Main St., a company official said this morning.

Buzz Wires, northeast regional manager for expansion, said the decision has nothing to do with pressure from local and state groups who object to the name Sambo's.

Critics of the name change that it is offensive to black persons.

Wires said the company could not come to terms with the property owners for a lease arrangement and dropped the site last December.

He said the company was seeking a subordinated land lease but couldn't work out the details with the bank which held the mortgage. The company also had difficulties in negotiating a rent for the site, he said.

He said the company has no plans this year for any more restaurants with the name issue," he said.

The name has drawn criticism in the northeast and citizen groups have threatened boycotts of the chain's restaurants.

He said the company also dropped another site at the Shop Rite plaza on Spencer Street in Manchester because it couldn't get a release from the John Hancock Insurance Co. of Boston, which owns the shopping center.

The Cherry Hill, N.J., chain has five outlets in Connecticut. They are located in Vernon, Avon, Middletown, Meriden and Southington.

Two more Sambo's restaurants are under construction in Hamden and Enfield.

Wires said the chain has done "exceptionally well" in the state and hopes to continue to do well here.

Oil Prices Offset Food

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sharply higher prices for gasoline and heating oil canceled a dramatic improvement in food costs during April as wholesale prices climbed 0.9 percent — the fifth straight month of double-digit inflation, the government reported today.

Food ready for sale to groceries declined by 0.3 percent last month, by far the best performance since last August. Food prices had climbed by at least 1.2 percent during each of the previous four months.

But fuel prices remained at discouragingly high levels, the Labor Department said in its monthly analysis of inflation at the wholesale level.

Gasoline prices shot up 4.4 percent, the largest rise since August 1975, and have now surged 9.8 percent during the past three months alone.

Further, home heating oil jumped 6.7 percent to raise the three-month increase to almost 13 percent, a particularly gloomy statistic for shoppers.

The heating oil jump was the biggest since an 8.1 percent increase registered in June 1974. Gasoline in fact, the cost of all products at the wholesale level other than food climbed by 1.3 percent, the biggest increase that category since October, 1974 — a sure sign that inflation will remain a big concern for the next several months.

The overall 0.9 percent increase in the cost of goods ready for sale to retail outlets was the lowest since November's 0.7 percent rise.

But that was small consolation to inflation-weary Americans because if wholesale prices rose over the year at the same rate as in April it would mean an 11.4 percent inflation rate. Wholesale prices increased 1 percent in December, February and March and by 1.5 percent in January.

The April Wholesale Price Index — which costs $100 in 1967 were prices at $110 last month.

The new report on wholesale prices — which strongly affect what consumers will pay at the retail level in future months — was a mixed bag. There was good news in some sectors, such as food, and depressing statistics in other areas.

The only other glimmer of hope contained in the report involved prices of crude goods, those just starting to work their way through the supply pipeline.

Crude goods costs fell by 0.4 percent during April, the best performance since an 0.7 percent decline in August 1977.

Crude food prices dropped 0.3 percent, the first decline since last July. In the finished goods category, the food price decline was led by a sharp 10.7 percent drop in vegetable prices encouragingly declines in prices for pork, coffee and poultry.

Prices for beef and veal, eggs and sugar rose less than in March. On the other hand, prices rose more than in March for rice, bakery products and fresh fruits, which increased 3.7 percent.

The prices of consumer non-durables surged 1.7 percent, more than in any other month since a 1.9 percent rise in July 1974. Gasoline and home heating oil were the major culprits in this category.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The state educational opportunities as students in more affluent towns.

Last summer, Horton and Fitzmaurice went back to court, saying the Legislature had not done enough to remedy the problem. Rubino agreed and set a May 1 deadline for a new school finance plan.

The Legislature held the deadline by days and Gov. Ella Grasso last week signed into law a plan that would more than double state aid to local school systems over the next five years.

If the new school finance law were fully funded today, it would cost the state $391 million. But there's no telling how much the complicated plan will cost five years from now after inflation, escalating property values and student enrollment have taken their toll.

"You don't know how much it's going to cost," Horton said.

Both Horton and Fitzmaurice said first-year funding under the new plan — $30 million — is "totally inadequate."

"But a number of factors in the formula appear to be responsive to inflation," Horton said.

Fitzmaurice said they will give the formula a chance to work for a while "rather than force a constitutional crisis."

Both lawyers said Rubino will need "strong evidence" before he will overturn the new law and they don't have that evidence at this time.

Last week, Fitzmaurice had labeled the plan totally unacceptable and said a court challenge would be filed immediately.

The new plan would more than double the present $100 million the state pays in grants to local towns, with the bulk of the additional money going to the state's large cities and small, rural towns.

Each community, no matter how rich, would also be guaranteed at least $250 per pupil. The state would also require towns to spend a minimum amount on each student and the State Board of Education would be given the authority to take communities that violate the law to court.

Carson Won't Quit NBC

Johnny Carson took the heat off both his network and his fans Wednesday night, opening the "Tonight Show" in Hollywood by laying to rest reports of his imminent departure from NBC.

His audience gave him a standing ovation when he promised, "We are going to stay around here and we are certainly not going to do this show ... We're going to do the damn best job we can."

Then, with a quip, Carson summed up his feud with NBC — which makes $50,000 a minute for each of eight network commercials a night on his show.

Said he, "Since I've been here I've hosted the Academy Awards on ABC and I was on 60 minutes on CBS. I thought I'd give NBC a shot tonight."

Carrot Cavors

"American Dance Broadway" is sort of a cross between a Broadway-style show and an ongoing theatrical workshop dedicated to the teaching and preservation of dance styles from vaudeville onward.

One of its most dedicated students is talk show host Dick Cavett, so it was only natural Tuesday night that he should volunteer to kick off the Machine's fund drive in New York.

Under his gentle persuasion, one woman in the audience wrote a $50 check on the spot and another paid $100 for the Machine T-shirt he was wearing. Cavett studies tap dancing with the group — says his specialty, "the Lancashire" classic of vaudeville — is the only one choreographer Bob Fosse can't perform.

Beating the Odds

Three years ago, aspiring singer Kathy Morris was felled at the age of 22 by a brain tumor when she was just one semester short of graduating from Manhattan School of Music in Hollywood. Her doctors pronounced her career over — said she'd never sing again, if indeed she survived surgery.

She did both. Miss Morris has emerged "musically fluent in five languages" in a battle now to be recorded in a CBS-TV movie starring Penelope Milford. The film, for fall release, will be based on "Seize" — a biography of Miss Morris written by Charles L. Mee Jr. The doctors call her recovery "nothing short of a miracle."

Unto Third Generation

Hollywood titan King Vidor is 85 now, but all he needs for a taste of immortality is visit to the film set where his twin 3-year-old grandsons, Casey and Michael Adams, are working.

They're making their acting debut in the television movie "Son-Rise: A Miracle of Love." Their big break actually may be as much an accident of birth as an inherited talent. Movie-makers love identical twins. Since California labor laws sharply limit the amount of time such young actors can work in a day, twins — playing a single role — mean the producers can shoot twice as long.

One for Diogenes

When disco singer Wardell Pifer dropped an envelope containing $25 Tuesday in a New York department store, everybody won.

Manhattanite Bob Herman, who saw her drop it, collected a $50 reward and an autographed copy of her latest album when he returned it. Miss Pifer won a renewal of faith in human nature.

Says she, "Who says there are no honest people in the Big Apple?" Diogenes, take note.

Elliott Gould and Genevieve Bujold are on location in California filming "The Last Flight of Noah's Ark" for Home Studies. The New York Philharmonic has extended the contract of its Bombay-born musical director Zubin Mehta for five years.

Country Awards Given to Rogers

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The Academy of Country Music gave its highest honors to Kenny Rogers, Barbara Mandrell and the Oak Ridge Boys at its annual award ceremony Wednesday night.

Rogers, who won four awards last year, took two this year, including the top award, the Entertainer of the Year hat.

"Now I can justify to my wife being gone so much," the burly, bearded picker joked as he accepted the statuette of a cowboy hat decorated with a guitar neck and microphones.

He also picked up the best male vocalist award, but his big hit, the wryly philosophical "The Gambler," lost out in the best song category to "You Needed Me," sung by Anne Murray.

Barbara Mandrell, whose most recent hit was "How Long Has This Been Going On," was chosen best female vocalist.

The Oak Ridge Boys, a former gospel singing quartet who jumped to the top of the secular charts with a song about a bar, won the best vocal group and album of the year awards for "The Y'all Come Back Saloon."

Don Williams' "Tulsa Time" was awarded top single record of the year.

"A lot of work and a lot of effort went into this," said Rogers. "Everything I've done in the past was my training ground."

His competition for the entertainer of the year "hat" was Dolly Parton, Roy Clark, Willie Nelson and Loretta Lynn. Miss Lynn, long a top name in country music, was nominated in four categories but won nothing.

More than 2,000 academy members — singers, songwriters and others in the country music business — cast ballots for nine performing awards. For the first time, two-hour award ceremony — hosted this year by Miss Mandrell, Roy Clark and Dennis Weaver — was televised nationally from the Hollywood Palladium.

The award for top new female singer went to Christy Lane who made "Simple Little Words" and "I Just Can't Stay Married to You."

Aillon Returns to Court

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — Guillermo Aillon had served 1 1/2 years in prison when the state Supreme Court overturned the conviction because of a conversation the trial judge had with a woman juror.

A second trial resulted in a hung jury earlier this year. Aillon's attorney, Howard Jacobs, has filed papers seeking dismissal of the murder charges, claiming the state doesn't have sufficient evidence against Aillon.

The 40-year-old Bolivian native, a former New Haven Jaycee man of the year, was convicted in 1973 of the murders of his estranged wife, Barbara, and her parents, George and Bernice Montana, in the couple's home in August 1972.

Job Protection Passed

HARTFORD (UPI) — Employers must try to find alternative work for pregnant women in hazardous jobs under a bill approved by the Senate and sent to Gov. Ella Grasso.

The Senate voted 30-5 Thursday to approve the measure, which would require an employer to make a "reasonable effort" to relocate a woman to protect her fetus and herself from possible injury.

Moving through more than 70 bills, the upper chamber also sent to the governor measures to raise fines for violations by gambling operators and to exempt firms afflicted "by natural disasters" from paying into the unemployment compensation fund.

The gambling bill would allow the state gaming commission to raise its maximum fine for gambling operator violations from $5,000 to $75,000.

Also given final action was a bill that will make public the names of individuals and firms delinquent in paying state taxes for more than 90 days.

The chamber voted down an attempt by Sen. George Gunther, R-Stratford, to dump a House amendment that excludes pending cases from being made public.

State GOP Backs Nukes, Tax Cuts for Alternates

HARTFORD (UPI) — Connecticut's Republican leaders and officials favor expansion of nuclear power and overwhimingly support tax exemptions for the use and development of other alternative energy sources, a party poll shows.

Sixty percent of the 700-plus Republicans polled by GOP members of the state Senate said the state should expand its present nuclear capacity while 28.6 percent said it should be kept at the present level and 9.1 percent said it should be reduced. The remaining responses were undecided.

Results of the poll, which questioned GOP lawmakers in the House and Senate, members of the party's state central committee, town chairmen and vice chairmen, mayors and selectmen and former candidates, were released Wednesday.

Eighty-five percent favored granting tax exemptions as incentives for residents to use other energy sources such as solar and wind power. Only 11.7 percent opposed the incentives and 2.7 percent were undecided. The majority of Republicans who responded also said they did not think stores should be closed one day in the week. But 54 percent said they favored a statewide referendum to decide whether stores should be closed on Sundays.

About 260 persons — or 38 percent — responded from the more than 700 questionnaires distributed, according to a spokeswoman for Senate Republicans.

Of the 23 questions asked, the Republicans showed the most support — 82 percent — for mandatory proof of insurance for car registration.

They were most undecided on whether the state should tell coastal communities how to run their shoreline programs. Although 52 percent were in favor, 21.5 percent were opposed and 16.4 percent were undecided.

Asked about imposing a moratorium on new or additional gambling, 66.7 percent favored such a ban and 30 percent did not. Republicans also were top heavy in supporting the removal of trouble makers from school and placing them in special classes, with 82 percent of the respondents backing such a measure.

Another 82 percent said no to allowing teachers the right to strike. In the closest vote of the poll, 46 percent were against repeal of the binding arbitration law for municipal employees, another 41.8 percent favored the law and 7.8 percent were undecided.

Free Film at Church SOUTH WINDSOR — A filmed adaptation of John Bunyan's classic, "Pilgrim's Progress," will be shown free of charge at the Avery Street Christian Reformed Church May 3 at 7:30 p.m. Friends and neighbors in the community and surrounding towns are invited to attend.

The motion picture was filmed in the natural beauty of Northern Ireland. It follows the Pilgrim through many of the adventures described in the book, with the visualization adding depth and emphasis to the events.

EDC To Help Downtown

MANCHESTER — Now that the newly developed Downtown Industrial Park is well underway, the town's Economic Development Commission may try to assist one of Manchester's oldest problems — the depreciating downtown area.

Members of the EDC this morning talked about the commission's future now that much of its work for the industrial park has been completed.

One member, Phillip Harrison, said he hoped the EDC now will work on a type of low-cost loan program for improvements to downtown buildings.

Some members questioned where funding would come from for such projects. Chairman James Quigley asked that the town manager's office investigate the powers of the EDC and what programs, if any, it might participate in to aid downtown.

Much of the Community Development funding for the next two years was targeted at downtown improvements. Town voters, however, agreed to withdraw from the program for two years.

Harrison, who is a Main Street merchant, said, "We've had the rug pulled out from under us." He said there is no committee or agency that has any power to assist downtown. He hopes the EDC will assume that role.

Harrison and other members said the plan developed for Main Street might also be applicable to other parts of town.

The matter is expected to be discussed again at next month's EDC meeting.

The arrest was made by State Police in connection with the holdup and robbery, several weeks ago, at the Route 6 and 4A Package Store in Bolton.

Violette is being held at the Hartford Correctional Center in lieu of posting a $25,000 bond. He is the second dog to a local veterinarian, but person to be arrested in connection with the same incident.

Roger Michael of Route 44A, Bolton, was also charged last week in connection with the robbery and State Police said they expect to arrest a third suspect who is now in jail on other charges.

Vernon Blanch A. Ruberto, of 37 Delmont St., Manchester, was charged Wednesday with fourth-degree larceny (shoplifting) on complaint of the Finast Super Market, Vernon Circle.

Solons Vote Phase-In Repeal Change

HARTFORD — A bill approved by the state Legislature's Finance, Revenue and Bonding Committee would repeal the phase-in of property taxes in effect for the three communities — Manchester, New Haven and Ansonia — that already have adopted it.

The bill, which also would permit those three communities to extend the phase-in to new construction, essentially is a combination of two bills submitted separately by State Sen. David Barry and State Rep. Walter Joyner, both of Manchester.

Barry, however, plans to submit an amendment to the proposal passed by the committee.

He and State Sen. Marcella Fahey will propose an amendment that would place a moratorium rather than a repeal on adopting the phase-in. Barry said such a moratorium probably would be for five years. This would permit the state Legislature to review how the phase-in has worked in Manchester, New Haven and Ansonia before it decides whether or not to repeal the law, Barry said. No other communities would be able to adopt the phase-in during the moratorium.

The phase-in was passed last year by the Legislature near the end of its session. The bill permits a community that has just completed a revaluation to spread the increases in property assessments from that revaluation over a five-year period. This was done in Manchester because residential properties generally increased at a much higher rate than commercial or industrial properties. The phase-in in Manchester caused a shift of some of the tax burden from residential to the commercial and industrial properties.

"It's worked in Manchester because of the real property taxes," Barry said. He feels there are situations where the phase-in would not be useful, but in towns such as Manchester it is a benefit, he said.

Barry and former State Rep. Ted Cummings, whom Joyner defeated last fall, were the major sponsors of the phase-in bill last year.

Joyner, however, has disagreed with the phase-in and has sought its

Suit Appeals Zone Rule For Adams Street Yard

MANCHESTER — An Adams Street couple has filed a lawsuit that says the town's Zoning Board of Appeals should not have granted a sideyard variance for a neighboring property.

Ralph and Beulah Lewis of 149 Adams St. filed the suit because they feel a variance granted Lasso Szarka of 256 Scott Drive was not proper.

Szarka owns property at 145 Adams St., the site of the Laco Machine Co., and was granted a sideyard variance by the ZBA on April 18.

That variance permits expansion of the existing building within one-half foot of the Lewis property line. The normal sideyard required by zoning regulations in that area is 15 feet.

The suit says the ZBA "granted a

Early Bird Catches the Bird at Valley Falls

VERNON — It will be the early bird who "catches the bird." Saturday at Valley Falls Park.

The Friends of Valley Falls have planned a series of free spring nature activities at the park on Valley Falls Road, and the first will be an early bird, bird walk scheduled for Saturday at 6 a.m. until about 7:30 a.m.

The walk will be led by Carroll Burke and Dale Martin who said the nesting season is here and this is the height of bird activity.

A second walk for "not so early birds," is scheduled for 8:30 a.m., also to be led by Mrs. Burke and Martin. They said this will be particularly suitable for beginner bird watchers.

Fond life will be explored from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. under the supervision of nature guides from the Friends of Valley Falls. A wide variety of wild flowers will be in bloom and a flower walk to show areas of special beauty, will start at 10:30 a.m. Members of the Friends group will spend about an hour identifying plants.

Memorial Parade Planned

SOUTH WINDSOR - A Memorial Day Parade, the first in several years, is planned through the efforts of the Abe E. Miller American Legion post and the South Windsor VFW post, as well as Mayor Nancy Callin.

Mrs. Callin said the staging area for the anticipated five division parade will be behind the Wapping Church and the new town library. The parade will form at 11:30 a.m. and move out at noon.

The parade route will be north on Sullivan Avenue to Sand Hill Road to Nevins Road and on to the high school athletic field where appropriate ceremonies will be observed.

C-marshal for the parade will be Albert Rose, 88, of 811 Ellington Road and Dexter Barnham. Rose is believed to be the oldest living veteran in South Windsor, having served in World War I during 1917 and 1918.

Burnham, a former selectman and councilman in South Windsor served in the Pacific during World War II with the U.S. Marines. He is a past commander of the Abe E. Miller Post and also holds membership in the VFW.

Roy Nelson, VFW commander, is making arrangements for the parade along with Edward Daily, past commander of the Legion Post, who is in charge of the ceremony at the high school.

The South Windsor High School Band, the Timothy Edwards Band, the Youngs Pipe Band, the Golden Saxes and the Connecticut Natimuggers Drum Corp. have already been engaged for the parade.

Representatives from many local groups have been invited to participate including the Boy and Girl Scouts, women's clubs, YWCA, Fire and Police Department, Little League, Scantle Valley Riders, the CAP of Manchester, and local hockey teams.

Any group not contacted to participate in the parade is requested to call Nelson or Daily for details.

Authority Formation Advances

HEBRON - The Board of Selectmen has agreed to draft a warning and resolution concerning the formation of a Water Pollution Control Authority when it meets Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Town Office Building.

First Selectman Aaron Reid said that he has no changes to propose for tentative draft and other board members said they didn't either.

The board also is seeking applications for two CETA positions that are open. The jobs are both for laborers. Only Hebron residents may apply if they meet the eligibility requirements of the CETA program. Applications for either position may be obtained at the Connecticut Employment Service, Valley Street, Wallingford.

The board has also voted unanimously to proceed with replacement of two town bridges, one located at the town line abutting Colchester and the other over Raymond Brook on Gravelle Falls Road. Funding for the projects will come from unallocated state funds for town roads. The estimated cost of both projects is $26,000. Colchester will split the cost of the bridge abutting that town line.

The board also voted to draft another resolution to establish a Town Office Building Study Committee to be made up of the entire Board of Selectmen, one Board of Finance member and three members-at-large. Colchester will be placed on the agenda for the annual Town Meeting, May 14.

Pupils Picked For Programs

These students will join students from other towns at a week-long symposium at the University of Connecticut and the United States Coast Guard Academy. During the week the students will learn about U.S. government and state and local government.

Lobby Rule For Solons Is Buried

HARTFORD (UPI) — An attempt to prevent former Connecticut legislators from prowling the halls of the state Capitol as lobbyists right after they leave office has been left to moulder in a legislative grave. The House buried the amendment Wednesday and then killed the original bill to prohibit Department of Public Utilities Control Commissioners from taking jobs with the companies they regulated for one year after they leave their posts.

The so-called revolving door proposal, which included the DPUC consumer counsel, was rejected 76-65. The controversial amendment proposed by Rep. Charles Matties, R-West Hartford, went down 87-55. Matties said it was time the Legislature began policing its former colleagues.

"Anyone who needs further deliberation on this question has not been living in Connecticut the past couple of years," said Matties in response to opponents' arguments that the issue was too complicated to be acted on hastily.

A number of bills to restrict lobbying by former legislators and other state officials never made it out of the Government Administration and Policy Committee this session.

"I don't even think this has conceptual merit," said Deputy Majority Leader Timothy Moynihan, D-East Hartford. "I urge its defeat."

"This amendment has merit because there has been abuse," countered Rep. Christopher Shays, R-Stamford. He referred, though not by name, to the number of former legislators who have become lobbyists.

Bill Bans Nuclear Waste

HARTFORD (UPI) — Lingering fears about radioactive leaks at the Three Mile Island atomic power plant gripped the House Wednesday as it moved to prohibit Connecticut from becoming a burial ground for nuclear wastes.

The accident at the Pennsylvania nuclear-power plant was mentioned by several legislators who argued the time had come for Connecticut to act. The state is highly dependent on power from its three nuclear power plants. The proposal would ban the burial of nuclear wastes within the state's borders without the Legislature's consent. The measure excludes low radioactive refuse created by hospitals and during university research.

The bill sailed through on a vote of 106-33 and is now in the Senate's hands.

"Three Mile Island has become prominent in the newspapers so citizens are aware of what happens when no precautions are taken," said Rep. Natalie Rapoport, D-Waterbury.

"The federal government has been unduly naive and they've allowed the nuclear waste problem to go unattended — like a newborn baby being disregarded by its

House OKs Many Bills

HARTFORD (UPI) — The House approved an avalanche of bills Thursday, including one to make insurance companies write their contracts in "clear language" so consumers understand what they're getting.

The proposal was passed 145-1 and shipped to the Senate. The House delayed action on a related bill to require all other businesses, including banks and real estate firms, to write their contracts in simple English.

In past years, the so-called "clear language bill" has run into stiff opposition from Connecticut's business community. But Rep. Robert Frankel, D-Stratford, said this version is more palatable to firms who use contracts.

The Senate was sent another bill that would require financial disclosure by the state gaming commission, the executive secretary and the directors of the commission's three divisions. It sailed through without discussion.

The House sent Gov. Ella Grasso a bill to prohibit utilities from turning off electricity or gas to financially pressed consumers from Nov. 1 to April 15. Residents would be allowed to pay on an installment basis.

Mrs. Grasso also will be reviewing a bill to limit to two terms leaves of absence for state employees elected to public office. The bill also would guarantee, in some cases, the employees their former jobs and wages on return.

The House voted 128-11 on a Senate-bound bill to allow employees and former employees in both private and government jobs to look at their personnel files. The bill would go into effect Jan. 1, 1981. The lower chamber also whisked to the Senate a proposal to have the commissioner of the Department of Human Resources keep track of incidents of spouse abuse in Connecticut.

The House adopted 131-0 a compromise measure to change the workmen's compensation statute.

Spring Gardening AND Home Improvement

Blossoms Lovely On StarMagnolia

By FRANK ATWOOD | A neighbor thought I should come to see the lovely star magnolia blossoming at her home on Gerard Street. I thank her for the tip. It is a lovely tree, covered in late April with dazzling white, star-shaped blossoms.

Mrs. Appleby said her uncle gave her the tree when it was "just a twig." That was nine years ago and the tree is now 10 feet tall and almost 10 feet wide. It has grown, she said, at the rate of about a foot each year, and I think it may continue growing for a while. The tree has a sheltered location at the foot of a slope behind the house where it should also get plenty of moisture for its roots. It could perhaps double in size.

The star magnolia is among the first of our flowering trees to put out blossoms in the spring, opening with forthright. It is well ahead of its cousin, the saucer magnolia, which is blooming now in a number of Manchester dooryards. The saucer magnolia is named for the shape and size of its large pink flowers.

The star magnolia is a native of Japan and seems perfectly adapted to our climate. The saucer magnolia came from Europe and is said to have been hybridized by one of Napoleon's soldiers in about 1820 by crossing two other kinds of magnolia. Some of the "saucers" can be 10 inches across. The "stars" are a modest three inches, made up of 12 to 15 narrow petals.

There are many other varieties of magnolia, several native to North America, but the "star" and "saucer" are most popular. Connecticut is near the northern boundary of the climate zone that is favorable for magnolias. My wife and I, both growing up in Vermont, had never seen these trees until we came to Connecticut. Comparing notes, we agreed we had thought magnolias were known only in the South.

Red and White Garden
The Perennial Planters have decided to plant a red and white flower garden this year in the Munro Park on E. Center Street where the club plants an oval bed of annual flowers each year.

Mrs. Jacqueline Britton, Munro Garden chairman, said the plants are being grown more recreational land in town.

The Recreation Commission is seeking directors for the summer swimming program or the summer recreation program. No one has applied for either job. Debbie McPartland, chairman, said the commission won't conduct programs without qualified directors. Interviews for the positions will be conducted May 24.

Commission members have agreed to investigate resuming the summer film program. Board member Ed Stanchfield said the program was started as a family situation but it didn't turn out that way and last summer the commission voted to end it.

Hebron Panel Suggests Buying Recreation Land
HEBRON — At the Board of Selectmen's meeting tonight at 7:30 in the Town Office Building, the Recreation Commission will present a request to buy 17 acres of land on Wall Street for recreational purposes.

The land, across from Rham High School, is owned by William Leary. The town is seeking an appraisal.

A sketch of the area, prepared by John Marco, a member of the Recreation Commission, shows three softball fields. No firm plans have been made to use the land.

Commission members said first it should be determined if residents want

Washington - There are few documents more important than the Congressional Record, Lyndon Johnson once remarked. Unfortunately, he was right.

The daily transcript of debate on the floor of the House and Senate is used by federal agencies, the courts and historians to determine what Congress intended when it passed a given piece of legislation.

The trouble is that by the time members of Congress exercise their self-authorized right to "edit," "amend" and "extend" the remarks they actually made in debate, the result is often unrecognizable. In other words, the Congressional Record is a fraud.

Insiders have called it a travesty, a comic book, a monumental sham.

The discrepancy between what was really uttered on the floor and what appears in the Record has been known for years to reporters who cover the House and Senate.

Sometimes, indeed, it is an alert reporter's catch of a lawmaker's verbal foul ball - and his query to the congressman later - that will cause the member to revise his remarks into something less controversial.

But until now, the extent of the liberties congressmen take with faithfully transcribed floor debate has been undocumented. After stubbornly plowing through row after row of bureaucratic thickets, our associate Dale Van Atta became the first reporter to see the original transcript - and the changes made in it by members of Congress.

The existence of the verbatim transcript is something of a national secret. Few if any congressmen realize that the Government Printing Office - for its own protection - keeps the original record and its tell-tale "Corrections" on file for three years.

Van Atta selected two days of relatively heated debate - Oct. 8 and 15, 1978 - to study for evidence of our lawmakers' oratorical shell game. He discovered literally thousands of deletions, insertions and changes.

The unimaged editing would appal American trial reporters, who never change a word that is spoken in the courtroom. It would perhaps be the envy of British and Canadian legislators, who have never voted themselves the right to have their speech thoughts transcribed as original history.

In many places, the members of Congress have simply thrown away the official transcript (which is then lost forever) and glued in speeches or remarks they never made. Where the transcript has been preserved, there is a profusion of scribbled rewriting by such industrious political editors as Sen. Russell Long, D-La., who uses a heavy black felt pen, and Rep. Jim Santini, D-Nev., who favors a blue felt-tip. Former Rep. Robert Sikes, D-Fla., apparently ran the transcript through his own typewriter.

Frequently the changes tone down intemperate remarks made off the cuff or in the heat of debate. Rep. Tom Riffe, R-Ill., for example, called a memo by Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano "devious" on the floor. When the congressman cooled down, he scratched out "devious" and wrote in "ill advised and poorly motivated."

Rep. Philip Sharp, D-Ind., thought better of accusing a fellow congressman of "distorting" facts, and changed it to "misunderstanding."

Former Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., had this to say about former Senate aide and convicted felon Bobby Baker: "I can say Bobby because Bobby was from my home state and I know him and I happen to get along with him and like him." The entire reference was cut from the transcript.

Sometimes the meaning of the spoken words is turned completely upside-down by the editing. Rep. David Bowen, D-Miss., evidently felt some doubts about a certain bill, noting on the floor that "most people can take issue" with it; this became "most people can take heart" in the Record.

And former Rep. Frank Evans, D-Colo., said flatly of a proposed amendment, "I would vote for it." After thinking it over afterward, he changed "vote for" to "strongly oppose."

Henry Kissinger, as a personality, is not one of my heroes, but as an observer of the nation's foreign policy he knows his trade inside and out. Last fall, Kissinger criticized Carter for not supporting the interim Rhodesian government headed by Smith and three black nationalist leaders. He urged that Washington give some encouragement "to people who are trying to govern on the basis of the vote. . . . We're putting ourselves in the wrong position" by supporting totally "those whose primary claim is that they have the guns. . . ."

Well, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., is leading a fight on Capitol Hill to force Carter to accept the recent voting Rhodesia and restore financial and trade relations with Salisbury. Have at it, Jesse, and never mind if it is inconvenient for Carter and the State Department to know that an election is fair and free.

Last fall, Kissinger criticized Carter for not supporting the interim Rhodesian government headed by Smith and three black nationalist leaders. He urged that Washington give some encouragement "to people who are trying to govern on the basis of the vote. . . . We're putting ourselves in the wrong position" by supporting totally "those whose primary claim is that they have the guns. . . ."

Well, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., is leading a fight on Capitol Hill to force Carter to accept the recent voting Rhodesia and restore financial and trade relations with Salisbury. Have at it, Jesse, and never mind if it is inconvenient for Carter and the State Department to know that an election is fair and free.

Contract Hikes Salaries Of School Administrators

BOLTON - A three year contract for School Supt. Raymond Allen has been approved by the Board of Education following an executive session.

Board members also approved three year contracts for the school principals.

Allen was granted a six percent salary increase for the first year and seven percent increases for the second and third years of the contract.

Allen will receive longevity payments for his fifth and sixth year of $250, for his seventh and eighth year of $300 and for his ninth year of $400.

The school principals' each received a five percent salary increase for the first year and five and one-half percent increases for the second and third years.

The principals will split a $1,350 meritorious service award - the split to be decided by Allen. They will each get a longevity payment of $150 for their fifth and sixth year and $250 for their seventh year.

The principals may receive a two percent annual performance based salary increase as determined by the superintendent.

Joseph Fleming, Bolton High School principal, is currently earning $23,900. For the three year contract his salary will increase to $25,095, $26,475 and $27,931 respectively.

Together Richard Packman and Siegmund Blumberg, principal and assistant principal of Bolton Elementary Center School, respectively, earn $39,950. A breakdown of their salaries is not shown in the contract or the Board of Education budget.

Together their salaries for the three year contract will increase to $41,947, $44,254 and $46,680 respectively.

The school board's vote for all contracts was not unanimous. Board members Louis Cloutier, Michael O'Connor, Michael Parsons and Barbara Smith voted yes.

Board member James Marshall voted no. Andrew Pinto was absent and Haloburdo, as chairman, did not vote.

Marshall gave three reasons for voting against the contract. He said he isn't sure what the positions should be paid, he questions the possibility of inequities to other staff members and the closeness to going over the present guidelines.

Under state law, residents have the right to petition a Town Meeting for the purpose of rejecting the contract within 30 days of its filing. The contract was filed yesterday.

The superintendent's contract is not on file at the town clerk's office.

Haloburdo said he believes either state law or Department of Education regulations say you do not have to file that contract.

Cemetery Roads Worry Murdock

BOLTON - Robert Murdock, a member of the Bolton Cemetery Association, questioned the Board of Selectmen about what is being done to improve the roads in the cemeteries at a meeting Tuesday.

In 1977 the town learned it was responsible for the cemetery roads. At the time the board voted to have its road subcommittee survey the roads and estimate the costs to bring them to an acceptable condition.

Selectman John Carey said the whole matter was investigated at that time but he doesn't remember what the estimated cost was to fix the roads. He said some patch work has been done on them.

Carey and First Selectman Henry Ryba will check into the matter and again determine what repair costs would be.

The board gave permission to the Giglio brothers to plant corn in the field south of the entrance to Herrick Memorial Park.

The field is currently planted with rye as a soil retainer. Stanley Bates, park directors, said the plantings help to keep the land open and save the park crew from having to mow the area. Bates favored the rye.

John Whitham, fire commissioner, notified the selectmen that his term on the commission is expiring and he "respectfully declines reappointment."

The registrar of voters notified the selectmen that there are 67 registered Democrats, 771 registered Republicans and 694 unaffiliated electors in town.

The board's regular meetings on the first and third Tuesday of each month will begin at 8 p.m. from May 15 to Sept. 4.

No One Attends Hearing

BOLTON - No one from the public attended the Board of Selectmen's public hearing on several proposed ordinances and use of revenue sharing funds Wednesday at the Community Hall.

Besides the selectmen, Catherine Laitner, town clerk acting as secretary and Jerome Walsh, town attorney, those at the meeting were Douglas Cheney, Public Building Commission chairman and candidate for selectman, Richard Morra, Planning Commission member and former first selectman, Dorothy Miller, commission clerk, and The Herald reporter.

A special meeting of the Planning Commission ended minutes before the hearing got under way. Shortly after the hearing began, Donato Rattazzi, road foreman, and Morris Siverstein, Board of Finance member, arrived.

Several changes to the election laws, that will require ordinances, were proposed by the registrars of voters.

Morra said, "The biggest concern of election workers is that they want their lunch provided for them by the town but the finance board refuses to appropriate money for it."

The proposed ordinance calls for two shifts of election officials at all elections and referendums.

Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Leiner spoke in favor of having one registry list that would show the party affiliation, if any, of all electors.

The ordinance calls for the polls to be open from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m.

The ordinance calls for the polls to be open from noon to 8 p.m. for referendums only. The polls will remain open from 6 a.m. to 8 a.m. for elections by individual garages called on a rotating system.

The selectmen will act on the ordinances at their May 15 meeting.

No one at the hearing voiced objections to the selectmen's proposal to spend $3,045 of revenue sharing funds on new doors for the town garage.

Walsh said the ordinance could be adopted at any time and would go into effect when the regulations were "duly adopted."

Those attending the hearing on proposed ordinances spoke in favor of the ordinance concerning parking on public highways and providing the town with the authority to tow and store vehicles in violation.

Resident State Trooper Robert Peterson, in a letter to the board, said towing and storage should be elected by individual garages called on a rotating system.

The selectmen will act on the ordinances at their May 15 meeting.

No one at the hearing voiced objections to the selectmen's proposal to spend $3,045 of revenue sharing funds on new doors for the town garage.

Walsh said the selectmen must have a public hearing on the

You get an Energy Savings

Payback of between $169 and $212 with a new Pilotless Gas Range

What's ESP? It's the Energy Savings Payback you get based on the cost of operating an appliance over its lifetime. Most people buying a range consider only features and price, not the cost of operation. But it's the Lifetime Operating Cost (LOC) that can be cut dramatically when you replace your electric or conventional gas range with a new, energy-efficient gas range.

The average life of a range is 13 years in 13 years of average use, an electric range uses 15,850 kilowatt hours of energy. A conventional gas range uses 1,325 thermal units of energy. A new pilotless gas range uses only 923 thermal units. Based on these averages and current gas and electric rates in CNG's service area, here's how the ESP works:

Table comparing Electric Range LOC ($599.00) and New Energy-Efficient Gas Range LOC ($387.00) with Energy Savings Payback ($212.00).

With the purchase of any new major gas appliance, CNG is offering free the new Saver Shower showerhead. The Saver Shower cuts hot water consumption without decreasing pleasure or cleaning power. It's a $9.95 retail value, and it could give the average family an ESP of up to $100.00 a year.

What could be more down to earth than saving $169? Not much, except for saving $212.

Nursing Home Blasted For Patient Treatment

HARTFORD (UPI) - The state mental retardation commissioner and a Hartford nursing home's lawyer have denied an advocacy group's charges that state officials have ignored inhumane treatment of retarded people at the facility. The Connecticut Association for Retarded Citizens, which is opposed to the state's plan to close the facility, said Wednesday it has asked for a federal investigation into conditions at the Lorraine Manor nursing home. The advocacy group said it has unsuccessfully sought help from the state Health and Mental Retardation departments to correct abuses allegedly ranging from lack of adequately trained staff to an abnormally high death rate at the home. State Mental Retardation Commissioner Gareth Thorne conceded there are problems in similar facilities statewide, but not to the degree the CARC charges. He said the department has visited Lorraine Manor, which opened in 1977, "almost daily" and has found it to be "emerging as an adequate facility" as programs are developed and staff is trained. Lorraine attorney Anthony DiFabio said the U.S. Health, Education and Welfare Department found some problems in its last inspection, but the major intends to correct them. "In no case has there been any evidence of negligence," the commissioner said.

A question-and-answer period will conclude the program. For further information, call the Women's Center at 646-9000, extension 232 or 286.

Measures Help Animals; Steel Trap Ban Doubtful

HARTFORD (UPI) - The Senate has approved bills aiding man's best friend and other animals, but it fell into a parliamentary quagmire over whether to outlaw steel trap laws. It took no time at all for the Senate Wednesday to approve and send to Gov. Ella Grasso a bill to ban the use of decompression chambers to destroy unwanted animals. The Senate also gave final approval to bills to conduct health tests on livestock and animals that may be used in carnival games or contests. The Senate even approved and sent to the House "an omnibus dog bill" that fines owners who leave their unleashed. It also provides that dogs can be shot only if actually attacking or threatening farm animals. But the senators, despite more than an hour of debate and maneuvering, couldn't decide on a bill that would outlaw the use of steel trap laws in the state. The bill had been rejected by the Environmental Committee, but Sen. Salvatore DePauro, D-Bridport, gained enough Senate signatures to bring it on the floor. Committee co-chairman Sen. Eugene Skowronski, D-Derby, urged rejection of the bill. He said the issue was "an extraordinarily complicated one that we don't feel we understand." The Senate voted down Skowronski's bill and in effect placed the bill on the floor. But Sen. Michael Skelly, D-Tolland, immediately called it off of order and said the issue should be called for in the calendar for today. Because of fines called for in the bill, Skowronski said the bill posed legitimate concerns between being humane toward animals and crop losses, wildlife population control and economic losses to the trapping industry. He pointed out that wildlife officials of the state Department of Environmental Protection spoke out against the ban on steel traps.
