

Hebron's Finance Board Recommends New Budget

HEBRON - Following an executive session Wednesday night the Board of Finance voted unanimously to recommend that the residents of Hebron adopt a combined general government budget and education budget, for 1979-80, in the amount of $3,024,738.

At the same time the finance board estimated that the mill rate would be set at 43.5 mills for the coming fiscal year.

It is expected that the Board of Selectmen tonight will set the date for a second town meeting.

Members of the Board of Finance voted to conduct a special meeting at the close of the town meeting, for the purpose of taking any appropriate budget actions, and if the budget is approved, to set the mill rate.

During the first town meeting, May 14, the Board of Finance saw the deficit of its recommended budget, in the amount of $2,945,400, by a standing vote of 123-79.

The board members voted to remove $3,500 from the general government budget, which was for addition plans for the Town Office Building and to return that amount to the capital non-recurring expenses account, along with $70,000.

The board had tentative plans to use these funds to help defray costs which they anticipate will be incurred in replacement of the roof on the Gilead Hill School. The net effect of the action increased the general government budget by $66,500, or a total increase of $799,665 for the coming year.

Mrs. Evelyn Croston mentioned that the turnover in the town office is not large and this should tell the board something about the quality of personnel. Richard Grant, chairman of the board, said he will take the matter under consideration.

In other business, the board, on request of Reed, voted to transfer funds to the following accounts: Postage, $200; Zoning Board of Appeals, $150; insurance and bonds, $4,700; and gasoline, $5,000. These amounts were transferred from the labor, interest, unemployment compensation and legal expenses accounts.

The board also voted to appropriate an amount not to exceed $450 to buy a transcriber for commission hearings.

Park St. Bridge Repair To Cost $15,000 More

MANCHESTER - Repairing the Park Street Bridge will cost at least another $15,000, Walter Senkow, town engineer, said Wednesday.

The Town Board of Directors has approved $5,000 to pay for repair of the bridge, but Senkow said he will ask for a total of $70,000.

The sidewalk on the bridge is in very poor shape and will need to be repaired, he said.

The town received a bid of about $49,000 to do the bridge work. But, that price did not include some reinforcement work that Senkow said last week would be needed.

Now, the sidewalk work will add to that price, he said.

Parents of Truants Arrested in Shelton

SHELTON (UPI) - A little-known state law is being used to seek the arrests of the parents of "chronic" truants who have as many as 30 unexcused absences from Shelton schools this year.

Edward C. Finn, superintendent of schools, said Wednesday the crackdown is aimed at about 15 to 25 chronic truants, most in the seventh and eighth grades. So far, local police have issued warrants for the parents of only one student.

The student in the test case has been absent without an excuse about 50 times and the warrants are being reviewed by the state's attorney's office, school officials said.

"We did everything we could to get the kids back to school and we're not getting anywhere. We had to come up with something to deal with the kind of parents who are depriving their kids of an education," Shelton special education director Thomas E. Tinsley said.

"I'm not about to let this go. The law is there and I'm going to see that it's enforced. It's not just Shelton, it's a statewide problem. This will force the state Department of Children and Youth Services and the juvenile court to take a look," he said.

Some of the parents were keeping their children out of school because "they need the kids for servants," Tinsley said.

"The law says they have to send youngsters to school and it's their responsibility. We hope that this is a step in the right direction," Finn said.

The statute holds parents responsible for seeing that their children aged 7 to 16 attend school regularly or be subject to arrest, prosecution and fines of up to $5 a week for class time the student misses.

Joyner: Merit Selection Would Pass on a Second Vote

HARTFORD - A state representative from Manchester believes a bill on the merit selection of judges would have passed had a second vote been taken.

Walter Joyner, who represents Manchester's 12th District, said he was confused about an amendment to the bill and wanted to change his vote. And he was not alone.

The House Monday rejected by two votes a proposal to change the state Constitution to permit merit selection of judicial nominees.

Joyner supports the merit selection of judges, but he voted against the bill. He said he misunderstood an amendment and thought the bill did not contain adequate provisions for legislative review of the nominations.

Joyner said there were others who also had been confused about the legislative review provision, so he asked for reconsideration of the bill. He said his and a few other votes would have been switched in favor of merit selection, and the bill would have passed.

Only Joyner's proposal to reconsider didn't pass. The reconsideration request was defeated by an 80-66 vote. Joyner was encouraged that his proposal to reconsider drew support from many Democrats. There are only 42 Republicans in the House.

But, the support for reconsideration was not enough, and the proposal to permit merit selection of judges is dead for this year's legislative session.

Society Is Offering Old Home Markers

MANCHESTER - The Manchester Historical Society sent letters this week to more than 50 owners of historic homes, dating from the 18th to the mid-19th century.

The letter offers a 16-inch by 7 1/2-inch marker to be placed on the front of each house.

The basic markers are being made and painted by students at the Howell Cheney Regional Vocational Technical School under the supervision of Roger Morau.

When acceptances of the offer are received by Mrs. Constance Adams, president of the Historical Society, they will be placed on file, and the markers completed by a local sign company in the order received.

There are 50 more homes that also fall into the designated time period, and these owners will be notified at a future date.

Although no charge is being made for the signs, donations to the society will be accepted.

Landscape Your Patio

STORRS—With another season for outdoor living on everyone's minds, many homeowners might be taking a look at their patios—or the spot where they wish they had a patio—and wondering what improvements might be made.

Dr. Edwin D. Carpenter, extension consumer horticulturist at the University of Connecticut, offers several suggestions on improvement of your patio, or construction of a new one.

The easiest way to improve the outdoor living facility is to plan for patio pleasure by keeping location, size and privacy in mind.

Locate the patio with convenience access to the house. Ideally, it should be planned as an extension to at least one indoor room. In this way the patio will be more useful in the overall living pattern of the home.

Try to locate the patio so that you will enjoy both sun and shade. A southeastern exposure is considered to be ideal. However, any exposure can be made to work by proper planning and landscaping.

Size is also an important consideration. To be really useful, a patio should be as large or larger than the averaged room. Remember that the patio has to accommodate outdoor furniture which tends to be bulky. Perhaps the minimum size that a patio should be is 8 by 10 feet.

Your patio should also have a certain amount of privacy from the general public and neighbors. If you are to feel as much at home there as you would in an indoor room. For this reason patios are more frequently placed in back of the house or on one side of the house.

Patio privacy can be obtained by using a constructed screen or plants or a combination of both. Screens close to the patio need to be only four or five feet high. Plants useful as hedges do well for privacy screens, too. Taxus, privet and viburnum are but three types of plants that would serve for this purpose.

Tuberous Begonias

STORRS—Homeowners looking for a plant to add lots of color in a shady nook, on a porch or that grows well in a hanging basket should try planting tuberous begonias. This gardening tip comes from Dr. Edwin D. Carpenter, extension consumer horticulturist at the University of Connecticut.

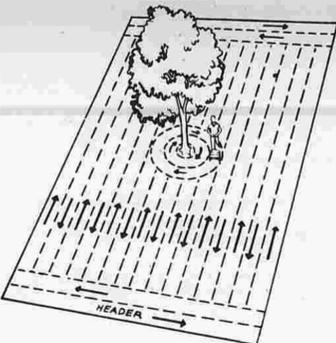

Diagram shows the best way to use a lawn spreader.

Tips About Spreader Can Save You Money

MARYSVILLE, Ohio — Researchers at Scotts have issued eight recommendations for lawn owners on how to use a spreader to best advantage when applying fertilizer, grass seed or other lawn care products. Homeowners are almost sure to save money because they will be using just enough to do the job right, but not so much that it is wasteful or possibly harmful.

1. Operate the spreader the long way of the lawn, as shown in the diagram above, but first apply header strips across each end to provide turning space. Then go back and forth between ends. If you lawn is irregular in shape, apply a header strip completely around it. Then go back and forth the longest way.
2. To avoid double application, shut off the spreader when you reach the header strips and when backing, turning around, or coming to a complete stop.
3. Always fill your spreader on a walk or drive—not on the lawn. Be certain the spreader control is in the closed position, then pour the product into the hopper.
4. When ready, start walking and simultaneously open the spreader by pushing the operating lever forward. Always push the spreader when making an application unless product directions specify otherwise. When pulled backward while open, excessive and possibly harmful amounts may be applied.
5. If trees are in the lawn, either circle them with a header strip or shut off the spreader just before getting to the trunk. Continue the spreading pattern on the other side. Shut off the spreader while you are crossing treated header strips.
6. Avoid skips or missed streaks. This means pulling the edge of each strip you spread against the edge of the previous strip. To do this requires material still clinging to the spreader, paying special attention to the bottom surface of the hopper.
7. Never leave material in the spreader when you through.
8. Wash out with a hose any material still clinging to the bottom surface of the hopper.

Science, Law Combine To Give Us a New Pea

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The hottest thing in home gardening since rotifers is a new edible podded pea that owes its existence to a fortuitous "cross" of science and law.

Its developer, Calvin Lamborn of the Gallatin Valley Seed Co. of Twin Falls, Idaho, says it might never have happened if Congress had not passed the Plant Variety Protection Act of 1970. Lamborn was working on the new pea about that time, starting with a "rogue" pea he had discovered.

He credits the law with opening "a new attitude toward the continued investment" in research of new varieties.

Before the act was passed, Lamborn said in a telephone interview, his company could put money and years of effort into developing a new variety, and another seed producer "could somehow get a hold of our seed and produce and sell it to suppliers more cheaply, because they did not have the overhead of having researched and developed the new variety.

"It may have been unethical, but it was not illegal" before the protection certificates were issued, Lamborn said.

As an All-American Selection of the United States seed industry, the Sugar Snap has become so popular with home gardeners that suppliers are hard pressed to keep up with demand. Although it is not being grown on a mass commercial basis, some grocery chains have managed to stock small supplies. They sell out quickly.

The new pea can be shelled, but most cooks prefer to use it whole, raw in salads or on relish plates, or cooked briefly, either by steaming or stir-frying in a small amount of oil. Brief cooking is essential to maintain its crispness and flavor.

Since 1980, the U.S. Patent Office has given legal protection to developers of asexually produced plants—those produced by budding and grafting, for example. But until the 1970 act was passed, developers of new varieties of sexually reproduced seeds had no way to control their sale once the seeds went on the market.

The act established the Plant Variety Protection Office in the Department of Agriculture to determine what plant seeds qualify as "new and novel" varieties, and empowered the office to issue Certificates of Protection.

Mark Sutcliffe is a high school sophomore who has his own greenhouse. He built it with his father's help after he had first worked for the neighbors, to buy materials. He moved his plants into the greenhouse in December.

This year he has been raising flower and vegetable plants that he hopes to sell to the same neighbors and set out in the family garden. He expects to graduate in the vocational agriculture program at Glastonbury High School in two years and, some day, to become an intern at Longwood Gardens, the fabulous public gardens and conservatory established with DaPont money at Kennet Square, Pa.

Longwood Gardens takes a small number of young people each year in a work and study program that is fine preparation for a career in horticulture. At age 16, Mark is too young to be considered at this point as an intern but he will learn more about the qualifications when he visits Longwood Gardens for the first time this summer with his parents.

Mark's high school grades should make a favorable impression on those who will choose the interns. He is in the honors program for most of his classes at Glastonbury High School, earning extra credit and doing extra work.

He decided on vocational agriculture when a teacher and two students from the school visited Iling High School where he was a student. Manchester pays tuition for him to take the vocational agriculture course and provides transportation. A mini-bus provided by the town stops in front of the Sutcliffe home at 7 a.m. and drops him off there at 2:30 in the afternoon. Work Experience

Each student of vocational agriculture must have a supervised work experience program, on which he is graded as if he were another high school course. As a freshman, each student is assigned to an advisor, who works with the same students as long as they are in high school. Mark's advisor is David Monroe, teacher of plant science.

Mark keeps records for Mr. Monroe that show how many hours he has worked, how much he has spent and how much he has earned. While he is building the greenhouse, the net amounts were on the minus side, but Mark is working toward the break-even point and thinks he will reach it soon.

In his work experience program, Mark planted seeds of three kinds of lettuce, plus cabbages, broccoli, eggplant, coleslaw and pansies, back in January. He set his flats on top of the furnace to give the seeds some bottom heat. After he transplanted the seedlings he moved them to the greenhouse or outdoors in a cold frame. From later plantings, Mark has Rex begonias, coleslaw, tomatoes, bell peppers, zinnias, snapdragons, portulaca, spearmint, parsley, celery and small, fibrous-rooted begonias. For Christmas he will raise poinsettias, glorioxa, cyclamen and calceolaria. He is raising some of the new Colorado geraniums that flower in one year from seed.

In part of the garden Mark has started a small nursery with cuttings of juniper and lilacs.

Following the old idea, now revived, of conserving the sun's energy, Mark set up a row of plastic milk jugs filled with water and black dye to store heat from the sun in his greenhouse, where the heat would help keep the greenhouse warm at night. The experiment had to be called a failure when he found some of the jugs had split and lost their contents of black water.

Plays Snare Drum

The greenhouse, opening off a back porch, is 16 feet by eight feet with a single bench three feet wide and 28 inches high. The walls and the roof are fiberglass. The foundations are made of concrete blocks, started below ground level in a trench. Mark starts cuttings on a preparing bench equipped with a heating cable, providing bottom heat to replace the top of the furnace.

His tomatoes are Jet Star, which he finds very popular. Super Red, another called Tropic from seed he got by sending a cereal box top to the cereal manufacturer, and a hybrid called VF Gardener. The initials of Fife and Drum of Coventry, a name that is correctly written without adding the word "corp's." Mark plays a snare drum. His father is a color guard and his mother is an "artificer," working in the kitchen when the Coventry group puts on a day's program that includes a meal.

'Plant Science Day'

NEW HAVEN—The annual "Plant Science Day" open house of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station will be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Aug. 1 at Lockwood Farm in the Mt. Carmel section of Hamden.

Joan Faust, garden editor of The New York Times, will deliver the main talk of the day at 11:35. More than 30 experimental plots will be open for inspection, and Station staff will give short talks on several topics during the day.

Scientists will be on hand to answer questions about their work. There is plenty of free parking and no charge for admission.

For more information and a map showing how to get to the farm, write to Plant Science Day, the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station, P.O. Box 1106, New Haven, CT 06504.

Midget Tomatoes

STORRS—Midget or pot tomatoes have small fruits with vines so tiny you could hide them under a four-quart saucepan. They mature rapidly, set loads of fruit and begin to decline fairly rapidly, says a University of Connecticut extension consumer horticulturist. Dr. Edwin D. Carpenter of the Plant Science Department notes that the tiny vines just don't have the vigor required to keep bearing fruit all summer except where growing seasons are short.

Weather Cuts School Schedule

So, why should the finish of the season be any different? The 1979 schoolboy spring sports schedule commencement was slowed by rain—and so will its termination be affected.

Rain wiped out Wednesday's schedule, save for one indoor tennis match, and probably will dampen today's as well.

One probable offshoot of the inment weather is Penney High won't need a school record-setting light win to qualify for the State Baseball Tournament. The 9-9 Black Knights' tilt yesterday against cross-town East Hartford High was postponed and rescheduled Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock at Penney's diamond.

The Knights are slated to visit South Windsor today but... Tournament qualifying deadline is today and a minimum .500 record is required.

The East Catholic at South Catholic tilt was postponed until Saturday morning at 11 o'clock with site to be announced. The Eagles' slated second clash with Manchester High probably will be cancelled. Manchester's game against Windham Wednesday was washed out and must be played the next possible date—today—inasmuch as CCIL games take preference. This will be the second year in a row the second East-Manchester diamond game has been cancelled.

Manchester girls' softball, boys' and girls' tennis, boys' track—all scheduled Wednesday—have been rescheduled today—weather permitting. The Tribe boys' track date against Hall and Fernald is important in that the locals must beat Hall to secure outright possession of league honors.

East Catholic boys' tennis match against Xavier was postponed. No new date has been set.

Stone Labeled Before First Pitch

NEW YORK (UPI)— Before he even threw his first pitch in professional baseball, Steve Stone found himself labeled due to his religion.

You'd think something like that would upset him, but he didn't mind at all.

"They billed me as 'another Sandy Koufax' primarily because I'm Jewish," laughs the stocky Baltimore curve-baller. "I can say honestly and unequivocally I'm the best right-handed Jewish pitcher to come into the game in the past 20 years mainly because I don't know of any other ones to come in during that time."

Stone is the only player to have gone through the re-entry draft twice and would have been signed twice. The White Sox signed him for a second tour of duty with them after he played out his option with the Cubs in 1976, a year in which he came up with a score and appeared in only 17 games.

"Nobody believed I could pitch anymore except Bill Vecek, after I suffered a rotator cuff injury in 1976," Stone says. "He guaranteed me a one-year contract when no one else would. He told me, 'You won't be a free agent after one year, you'll be back here.'"

Stone surprised a lot of people by having a fine year for the White Sox in 1977. He won 15 games, and according to his agreement with Vecek, he could have become a free agent again and gotten big money but he didn't.

"Bill, I'll tell you what," he said to Vecek. "I know loyalty is not a big commodity in this game, but you gave me one year when nobody else would and I'm gonna give you back that year. But I want it stipulated in my contract that I'm a free agent at the end of 1978."

Vecek agreed, and at the end of last season, he made Stone a generous one-year offer. The Orioles said they'd go for four and that was what it did.

"The Orioles' 31-year-old gourmet, wine connoisseur and poet (some of his poetry has been published) has had to make some adjustments since he lost his fastball three years ago."

"What I've had to do is master the three chief facets of pitching—physical, emotional and psy-

Marathon Swim

Stella Taylor announced a third marathon swim attempt Wednesday, this time from Riding Rock to Fort Lauderdale in early June, but says she won't submit her body "to the punishment of the other two swims."

Taylor's last 180-mile effort in October was foiled by strong currents about 20 miles from the Fort Lauderdale coast. She said she will not attempt the 65-mile from Riding Rock, about 20 miles south of Bimini, except under the best weather conditions.

TIP OF THE WEEK

Pinging the sound of a lean mix—Some pinging is normal with an engine set up for maximum gas economy. If you don't hear the sound when accelerating hard, you've no guarantee that your timing is set for maximum economy. However, if your engine pings with slight acceleration on a flat road, the timing is probably set too far advanced. Set your timing for one brand of gas and stay with it, since different brands have slightly different octane ratings.

You want your helpful tip, too! Come in to your Car Care Man Auto Parts Store and enter your tip on an official entry form. Your Car Care Man counterperson will immediately give you a $1 credit toward your next purchase worth $10.00 or more. Credit good any time.

Tiant and Lemon Not Talking Beattie Rising Star

BOSTON (UPI)— They are at different stages of the emotional roller-coaster ride which is only too familiar to a starting pitcher in baseball.

Jim Beattie and Luis Tiant, two New York Yankees pitchers with New England Angles. Beattie, the pride and joy of South Portland, Maine, who lives in Andover, Tenn., the venerable hurler who had three 20-win seasons in Boston before defecting to the world champions.

Jim Beattie

Beattie cracked the New York starting rotation and proved he was no fluke when he hurled a 10-0 shutout against the Red Sox. Tiant, the future director of Yankees Latin American affairs, has been battered in his few outings. He's finding starts as rare as a Havana cigar.

"I wish I could be pitching more," the cigar-smoking Tiant said upon his return to Fenway. "I'm happy here (in New York). I'm just not pitching. And when you're not pitching, you're on the sideline. I don't know anything. The manager (Bob Lemon) doesn't talk to me and I don't talk to him. Nobody has said anything to me about anything since spring training started." Tiant said.

Beattie has known the frustration of not pitching—and being shuffled off to the minors to get more work. He had been sent down to Columbus before the season started and baffled the minor leaguers. He had done the same last year when he was shipped to Tacoma after being clobbered by the Red Sox in a June outing at Fenway.

He then returned in style, winning a playoff game and pitching his first major league complete game in capturing the fifth game of the World Series.

"I can look back on it now and say it was beneficial going to Columbus. To get in a good groove, to get my confidence back and come back into the starting rotation. The World Series was icing on the cake. Now I'm trying to have a good year, forget about all the ups and downs and try to be consistent," he says.

Beattie was as shocked as everyone when he failed to make the Yankees team this spring.

"I was pretty unhappy because I didn't realize what the situation was right away until they explained they wanted me to get some work. I couldn't foresee coming up with the five started they had," Beattie said.

Beattie's recall was precipitated by his own sharp pitching, the ineffectiveness of Tiant and the injury to reliever Rich Gossage. But Beattie proved he was in the majors to stay for awhile with his shutout.

"I enjoy coming to Boston," said Beattie after he pitched a four-hit shutout. "Just being in Fenway Park is a thrill. And pitching against guys like Yaz and Scott, I used to watch them on television."
