Robert Redford Is Camera Shy

He crawled on his hands and knees. He flinched when camera strobes erupted and women squealed in ecstasy. He groaned. "I hope I won't regret this."

Asked in rapid order - after entering on all fours to avoid a battalion of photographers - "How many children do you have? How do you like having a famous father? And does your wife work?" he proved a man of few words. His answer - "Three ... Well ... Yes."

Mason, Leaving Post, Sees Progress

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter
MANCHESTER - Six years ago, Alan Mason became the town's first director of human services. This week, his term as the first and only holder of that position comes to an end.

Mason believes his department - despite some public criticism - has done much in the past six years. But, he also believes there are many human service needs still to be met in the community.

Mason, who also has served as the town's Community Development coordinator, announced his resignation in March during the midst of debate about the Community Development program. In April, town voters agreed by a 3-1 vote to withdraw from the program for two years.

worked and the services that have developed. "We were able to further the whole delivery of services to people," he said. The department, since its birth in 1973, has helped develop new programs and expand existing ones, he said. The list ranged from day care to outreach for the elderly, from legal aid to transportation.

These accomplishments, along with the people he worked with and the variety of the job, made his six years in Manchester good ones, Mason said.

"I certainly never got boring," he said of his work. Along with controversies about Community Development and such programs as day care, the department sometimes was the target of the conservative watchdogs of town government. They pointed to some of the human services programs as unnecessary and wasteful.

Mason, however, feels the programs have helped the town's needy residents. And he sees a need for future expansion. "Contrary to what some people believe, there are tremendous needs in this community for human services. They will continue to grow, and they will continue to demand services," he said.

Cops Probe Burglaries

VERNON - The Vernon Police Department investigated in burglaries during the period of May 4 through May 17. Goods taken were valued at an estimated $455.

Burgs were reported into homes on Vernonwood Drive, East Street, Pinewood Drive, Pillsbury Hill, Mt. Vernon Drive, and Hany Lane, into businesses on Pitkin Street and Windsor Avenue, town property on Hale Street Ext., and private property on Bolton Lake.

"We just do not have the staff to do more than scratch the service in that area," he said. Mason has been job-hunting the past month and will continue to do so once he leaves Friday. He lives in Bloomfield with his wife, Nancy, and their two children.

'Scuffle' Follows Tax Vote

SOUTH WINDSOR — Deputy Mayor Robert Myette said this morning that he has not decided if he will press charges against Republican Councilman Lincoln Streeter because of a "scuffle" after a Town Council meeting Tuesday night.

Streeter allegedly hit Myette in the face after Myette accused him of submitting to GOP pressure to defeat Myette's proposal for a two-payment tax plan for the town.

Myette, who drove himself to Hartford Hospital after the incident, said he met Streeter outside council chambers, after a 5-3 vote defeated the tax proposal. Streeter, who was the Republican, said he hit Myette on the forehead. Myette said he commented to Streeter, "They (the Republicans) finally got to you, didn't they?" Myette added, "Streeter then swung twice and I ducked but he landed the third punch." Myette said he didn't attempt to retaliate but went down to the police department to report the incident. Myette said this morning that he is considering resigning from the council.

"This whole thing is getting ridiculous. I don't mind verbal abuse, but when things start to get physical, it's too much," Myette said.

Streeter, obviously upset by the incident, said today he did not wish to comment to any great extent. "What can I say? I was terribly upset by the accusations made by Myette, and unfortunately I lost my temper," he said.

The council unanimously approved a tax rate of 38 mills which is a reduction of 1.8 mills in the current rate.

The meeting was peppered with sharp remarks about a $501,000 surplus in the current budget.

Council members were told by the former town manager that there probably would be a surplus of about $400,000.

No Decision Reached On Disability Pension

MANCHESTER — After spending another hour discussing the case of a former Highway Department employee who is seeking a disability pension, the Pension Board Tuesday came to the same decision it has in the past — none.

Only three of the five board members — Chairman Fred Geyer, Jon Norris and Herman Passantelli — were at the meeting, and Passantelli has indicated he will abstain on all votes about the Louis Miller case.

Passantelli did agree to vote in favor of a tabling motion Tuesday so the matter could be continued until the board's June meeting. Geyer proposed a special workshop on the case that would include the Pension Board, a representative of the town attorney's office and the town's Health Department.

Miller worked with the Highway Department from 1967 to 1975. He suffered three on-the-job accidents that led to a back injury.

Pension Board members told attorney L. Paul Sullivan, who represents Miller, that they agree he is "permanently and totally" disabled. Such a classification is required to receive a town disability pension.

However, they questioned whether his disability is totally job-related. Miller has several medical problems that may be contributing to his disability.

Sullivan told the board, however, that it has to consider the question of what Miller will do now. He no longer can do heavy labor work because of his back injury, and he does not have the training or experience for other types of employment, such as desk work, Sullivan said.

Sullivan also said his client has qualified for Social Security, and he feels the Social Security standards for disability are stricter than those set by the town.

Geyer raised a technical question about Miller's application for a disability pension. He said the application was not filed within a year of termination.

"You've got to be kidding on that one," Sullivan told Geyer.

The Pension Board also approved the early retirement application of Morris Riback, an employee with the Highway Department for 14 years.

News for Senior Citizens

By WALY J. FORTIN

How did you enjoy the Senior Fishing Derby at Sautters Pond. All local seniors, 60 years of age and older, will have a chance to try to hook into more than 200 trout, with prizes awarded the winners in a number of categories. No charge for this affair, which will be held from 7 a.m. to noon. Bring your own fishing tackle and bait and join in the fun.

By the way, we will be starting a new system when registering for our trips. Lately, we are getting a number of cancellations at almost the last minute and those doing so expect a refund. We're not a travel agency, and have tried to help as best we can; however, most travel agencies have a time limit and will not make any refund after a certain day. We have tried to accommodate everyone in the past but it is now becoming a burden. So once you sign up, we will not make a refund after that time unless there is a serious problem, health, accident or death. So please take this into consideration when you sign up. Before the final week if one wishes to cancel we will make a refund only if we can get a replacement.

We are also making a call for women volunteers.

Because of the holiday we have no news about our normally busy Monday. I guess we'll just have to tell you about our big tag and bake sale coming Saturday, June 23. To make it real big we need your family and friends to come up with articles we can use. Please check the house and garage, and we'd appreciate it if you would drop things off at our center. If you can't get here, call 647-3211 and we'll arrange to pick the items up. Proceeds will go for furniture and equipment for our new center. Please help us make this a real gala affair by donating some articles.

We are still working at the Green School and are now painting the windows as well as a few other jobs. So if you men, especially — but we won't turn any ladies down — come to give us a hand, just drop by any morning around 9.

While you're reading this column, some of our senior golfers have joined a new experience. Through the hard work of Joe Dinamico, arrangements were made to team up with senior members of the Manchester Country Club. They played a tournament and the results will be told Saturday.

Keep in mind that on Saturday, June 9, there will be a Senior Fishing Derby at Sautters Pond. All local seniors, 60 years of age and older, will have a chance to try to hook into more than 200 trout, with prizes awarded the winners in a number of categories. No charge for this affair, which will be held from 7 a.m. to noon. Bring your own fishing tackle and bait and join in the fun.

Pool Plan On Agenda

SOUTH WINDSOR — The Public Building Commission will hold a special meeting tonight at 7:30 in the Community Conference Room at Wapping Community Center to consider plans for hiring an architect for the new proposed indoor swimming pool.

The pool was proposed by the Republican members of the Town Council in response to complaints from some members of the community that there were not enough recreational activities available for the town's youth.

The Council has allotted $5,000 in this year's budget to cover preliminary architectural drawings for the project. One of the places considered for the proposed pool is in the area near the high school.

Also on the Public Building Commission agenda is a request for a public hearing on the pool proposal and detailed specifications to be prepared by the Park and Recreation Commission. The proposal would be a referendum item on the November ballot.

Installation

MANCHESTER — The Anderson-Sea Post of the VFW and its auxiliary will hold a joint installation of officers Saturday at 7:30 at the post home.

Free Concert Set at Bennet

MANCHESTER — One-hundred-twenty students from Bennet Junior High School will perform Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the school's annual seventh grade choir Spring Choral Concert. Walter Grzyb is the director, and Heather Howard, the accompanist.

The concert is free and is held in the auditorium in the Main Building. In addition to the choir selections, there will be several soloists. They are Marsha Warren, Kristen Harvey, Heidi Mayer, Heather Howard, Elizabeth French, Susan Dagenais, Donald Gaston and Kim Le.

The program lists selections by Sondheim, Richard Rodgers and Vancorn and Bokim. Among the special choir numbers are "Dust in the Wind" featuring Jeff Fields on guitar, also, "The County Fair," an English dance tune, dedicated to Louis Gamache, math teacher at Bennet.

Choralists To Perform
HARTFORD — The Choralists, a singing group with piano accompaniment, will present Broadway hits and selected song favorites in their June 9 performance at the Greater Hartford Arts Festival at 2 p.m. on the Shell Stage.

The group, composed of 12 male and female singers, was organized in 1966.

MHS Sets Park Concert

MANCHESTER — The Manchester High School music groups will combine their talents in the school's annual "Concert in the Park" Thursday at 6 p.m. in Center Park behind Mary Cheney Library.

Performing will be the high school band, choir, Round Table Singers, wind ensemble and selected soloists.

Directing the concert will be Martha White and Karen Krnjak. The theme of the performance is "This Is Our Country." The music featured will represent the major ethnic groups that make up the multi-lingual, multi-cultural society called Manchester. The following nationalities will be represented through music — German, French, Italian, Irish, Scotch, Swedish, Polish, English, Latvian, Jewish, Black African, Brazilian and Russian.

Persons attending are invited to bring a picnic supper, folding chairs or blankets. Beverages will be available for purchase.

MANCHESTER — Open castings will be held by The Little Theatre of Manchester Inc. for its fall production of the musical comedy, "Bells Are Ringing." The castings will be held Sunday, June 3, at 6:30 p.m. and Monday, June 4, at 7:30 p.m. at the LTM Workshop, 22 Oak St., Manchester.

The castings will be for all roles including leads as well as members of the chorus. People wishing to try out are asked to be prepared to sing from the score of the show to be presented, if possible. Also, everyone is asked to dress appropriately to demonstrate their ability to dance.

The production will be presented in November with rehearsals starting in September.

Members of the casting committee include Betty Spalla, director; Lee and Beverly Burton, choreographers; Ralph Maccaroni, musical director, and Lynn Gerr, assistant stage manager.

The Little Theatre of Manchester is a non-profit theater organization which has a membership open to any area resident.

Old and New Sounds Heard at Band Shell

MANCHESTER — Sounds of the '40s through the '70s will be heard Tuesday, June 5, at 7:30 p.m. at the Manchester Bicentennial Band Shell located on the Manchester Community College campus off Wetberel Street.

The featured group, "Hartford," was organized in 1978 and has performed throughout New England.

"Hartford" creates its sound based on arrangements for keyboards, guitar, bass, drums, trumpet, saxophone, trombone and female vocals, including background vocals of up to six parts.

The event is free and sponsored in part by the Bicentennial Band Shell Corp. and the Music Performance Trust Funds in cooperation with the Hartford Musicians Association Local 400.

Those planning to attend should bring folding chairs and blankets. Rain date for the program is scheduled Thursday, June 7, at the same time. Cancellation because of weather conditions will be announced over radio station WINF.

The Voice Of Phil Randolph

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The 26th anniversary of the Supreme Court school desegregation decision on May 17 was the occasion for widespread comment on minority progress or the absence thereof since 1954.

Some marveled at the educational, economic and political advances made by blacks and other minorities in the last quarter century. Others said there had been little movement and less sign of a real commitment to equality by the white majority.

A voice not heard was that of A. Philip Randolph, a man who was personally responsible for or involved in much of the progress of blacks in this country in this century.

Randolph was a man who did not mistake progress for victory and who probably would have been among those who stressed the slow pace of improvement since the Brown decision.

Harry Truman was next. The military services were as effectively segregated as any southern town during World War II, but it wasn't until 1948 — with a peacetime draft looming — that Randolph and other civil rights leaders were able to demand action against Jim Crow in uniform. Again a White House meeting, again a firm stand and a presidential order banning practices that had gone on for decades.

It wasn't just presidents in the White House who Randolph defied. He fought the discriminatory practices of his own labor movement and in 1959 so angered George Meany with a hell-raising convention speech that the AFL-CIO chief dressed him down right on the podium.

By the 1960s, new black leadership was stepping out, but Randolph also played a part in the gigantic 1963 march on Washington to demand jobs and civil rights legislation. Like his predecessors, John Kennedy was not enthusiastic about playing host to a half million marching blacks (city officials closed the liquor stores and prepared as if for a siege) but eventually welcomed representatives of the rally in his office. Randolph, of course, was one of them.

In the Washington scene, Randolph was not a "reasonable" man. He insisted on things that obviously would be hard to accomplish. He saw some of them accomplished, but he never would have said the job was finished.

Letter to the Editor

Manchester Citizens Not Racists

To the editor:
It is most distressing that a certain church leader from Hartford who lacks empathy and sympathy for his people and clergy would ever infer that the citizens of Manchester are racist because of the recent elections against HUD.

The citizens of Manchester have never been dictated to by any spiritual leaders of our churches or synagogues. All churches and synagogues of Manchester practice The Golden Rule and respect people of all races and religions.

The Ecumenical Spirit is practiced here in the community of Manchester. The Manchester Area Conference of Churches is doing an excellent job for all religious denominations.

Has the Archbishop of Hartford ever visited The Food Pantry in the Congregational Church where food is given to many poor people in dire circumstances? We do have many poor people here in the community of Manchester. We are not an affluent community. However, we do believe in the taking care of our poor and elderly citizens.

The people of Manchester are not racists. We are hard working

U.S. Conducts a Seal Slaughter

WASHINGTON — The annual slaughter of seal pups off Newfoundland has drawn official condemnation from Congress as well as protests from environmentalists.

But what is not generally known — and what sanctimonious members of Congress conveniently overlook — is the fact that the United States government runs a similarly bloody seal slaughter of its own each summer in the city of Pribilof, Alaska.

Last year, 15,000 seals were clubbed and bled to death more than 25,000 seals from 2 to 8 years old on the barren island of St. Paul and St. George, far out in the Bering Sea north of the Aleutian chain. The seals bring upwards of $100 each after processing in this country. Most of the seal skins wind up in fur salons abroad. About 1 percent of the annual kill is used for food.

A Crucial Loss of Nerve

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The results of a recent national survey suggest that the manufacturers and marketers of consumer goods may not be getting much value for their money when they purchase high-priced television advertising time.

Only 13 percent of those polled said "most television advertising makes them feel more like buying the products advertised," while 16 percent said the commercials actually made them less inclined to buy.

Fawcett (R.I.) Evening Times scared gut wrenches. And now Jimmy Carter. Another president in trouble. Another president beginning to flail about wildly to salvage what is left.

Is the man unfit for the job or is the job simply unfit for this man? Or any man?

We think the former may be true. And the latter, also. The troubled American presidency in a century of relentless stress may well be predestined to fail if the nation is willing to allow it.

Frequently, we seem frighteningly times parents and undermine parental authority.

All of the critical language was removed before the survey results were made public in a press release distributed to hundreds of daily newspapers that subscribe to the "ABC News-Harris Survey" results. Although fees from those newspapers pay for a significant share of the costs of conducting national surveys on various subjects every three weeks, the largest financial supporter by far is ABC News.

In the case of the poll on television advertising, "I didn't suggest the topic to them (ABC News)," says Harris. "It was suggested to me. I thought it was quite an act of courage."

Somewhere along the line, however, there was a crucial loss of nerve. What originally was characterized as the public's "downright hostility" toward television commercials finally emerged as "some skepticism about TV advertising."

Penney Spoils EHHS Outright Crown Bid

By KEVIN CASEY
Correspondent

Getting a clutch hit from Peter Cace and a strong pitching performance by southpaw Bob Burnat, Penney High spoiled East Hartford's bid for sole possession of first place in the CCIL with a 3-2 17-inning marathon victory yesterday at the Black Knights' field.

The Hornets, 13-5 in the league, had to settle for co-championship with Conard, a 9-2 victor over Hill, Penney finishes 9-9 in CCIL play and heads towards state tournament play 10-9 overall.

Burnat, a senior, earned a day's pay. He went 16 innings, threw 175 pitches to the 52 batters faced, fanned 12, walked two — and wasn't involved in the decision. Burnat heard plenty of praise from both sides.

"Bob pitched a very courageous game for us today and showed a lot of character," stated Penney Coach Mike Lippas. "East Hartford won 14 games and hadn't seen a better opposing pitcher than Burnat," he added. "Burnat pitched the best game of any pitcher we faced thus far," stated East Hartford Coach Al Lussier.

The Knights won with it two-out early started on a walk and stolen base by Dino Peruccio. Bob Linnell's slow roller down the third base line was thrown away by third sacker Bob DeSaulnier. Peruccio scored the equalizer and Linnell stopping at second. Dave Blake was intentionally walked and Cace then won it with a single to left.

Although Burnat pitched one super game it took junior Paul Pires to get the Knights out of a jam in the 17th. The junior right-hander went in and the Hornets out in order. Burnat pitched to three batters, one scoring. Pires picked up the win to raise his record to 5-2.

The Hornets scored the go-ahead run when Chris Nicholson walked and Tyler Jones singled. Nicholson swung third with catcher Linnell's leg going into leftfield, Nicholson scoring for a 2-1 lead.

"When we got the tie breaking run in our top half I figured we'd hold on as long as our pitching would hold up," voiced Lussier.

East Hartford scored its first run in the opening frame while the Knights tied it in the ninth. Bob Ouellette hurled 8 1/3 innings for the Hornets, walking one and striking out five. Tom Guidotti went the rest of the way and absorbed the loss. He's now 5-3. Guidotti walked three and fanned seven.

"The kids wanted the game and went out and did it," expressed Lippas. "This is the best game I've ever been associated with at Penney."

East Hartford is slated to face Norwich Tech today at home in a Class L Region III playdown while Penney sees tourney action Friday at Windsor in a Class LL Region III first round clash. Both games are slated for 3:30 starts.

Golfers Step Nearer Title

Moving a step closer towards the CCIL lead, Manchester High upset league-leading Conard High, 3-2, and blanked East Hartford High, 5-0, in golf action yesterday at the Manchester Country Club.

The setback snapped Conard's 17-match winning streak and puts the Chieftains 14-2 in the league. Conard did defeat East Hartford. The streaking Silk Towners have won 11 in a row and stand 12-3-1 in the CCIL and 20-5-1 overall.

"We'll probably get ours tomorrow, but how sweet it is today," noted Manchester Coach Tom Kelley.

Manchester visits Conard today in a tri-match at the Chieftains' course in West Hartford along with Penney. Carl Baker took medalist honors with a 2-over par 74, including an even par 36 on the front nine. Chris Hickey and Cliff Bickford each carded 78 while Jeff Dolin fired an 82. Baker won his match, Dolin and Bickford each halved against Conard with the Indians taking the medal point by six strokes to pull out the victory.

Results: Manchester vs East Hartford — Hickey (M) def. Jim Ladue 6-4, Baker (M) def. John Ladue 6-5, Dolin (M) def. Beauhew 1-0, Bickford (M) def. LaForge 5-4. Manchester won medal point, 312-346; Manchester vs Conard — Gentile (C) def. Hickey 5-1, Baker (M) def. Miller 7-6, Dolin (M) halved with Witkowski, Bickford (M) halved with Callahan. Manchester won medal point, 312-318.

Knicks Want McGuire, Says He Won't Coach

NEW YORK (UPI) — Al McGuire felt a touch of nostalgia over the weekend, so he went back to see what was doing in his old neighborhood, Rockaway Beach here in New York.

That's where he grew up as a kid where he and his older brother, Dick, began their basketball careers which converged when they played together for the New York Knicks in the '50's.

Lately, there has been talk that Al McGuire would like to do a little more than merely visit the old neighborhood. He has been away from coaching now more than two years, ever since leading Marquette University to its first and only NCAA title in the Omni in Atlanta March 28, 1977, and the feeling is he'd like to come back to take over the Knicks.

The Knicks have talked to him about the job twice, this year and last year, but he isn't going to replace Red Holman as coach. McGuire says he's never coached anywhere again.

UConnns Included In New Hoop Loop

BOSTON (UPI) — Athletic departments of seven eastern college basketball powers have announced plans to form a "Super Conference," their own basketball league organized within the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference.

The move, announced Tuesday by the sports directors of seven ECAC Division I colleges, is aimed at boosting the schools' basketball programs. They are Boston College, University of Connecticut, Georgetown University, Providence College, Seton Hall University, St. John's University and Syracuse University.

The separate conference will commence with the '79-80 season, said Providence College spokesman Mike Tranchese.

A new NCAA rule, effective in the '80-81 season, says members must play round-robin with other conference teams during the season in order to get an automatic berth to NCAA post-season playoffs.

As the ECAC is now set up, the seven schools would have to schedule in-conference matches at least once a season with relatively weak ECAC competition, possibly resulting in poorer games and less recruiting success.

Bullets on Brink of Defeat
SEATTLE (UPI) — With his bullets on the brink of losing their NBA title to the Seattle SuperSonics, Washington Coach Dick Motta flared up at what is becoming a very popular target during this playoff season — the officials.

"I am very upset," Motta said following the bullets' 114-112 overtime loss to the Sonics Tuesday. "Seattle played the last 14 minutes of that ball game and didn't have a single foul called. In an NBA game, at least one foul is committed in the last 14 minutes."

The victory gave Seattle a 3-1 lead in the series and put the Sonics within one game of the first NBA championship in the 12-year history of the

KEEP SMILING KEEP HAPPY

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Enclosed please find my check for $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope for your book, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding."
This wedding has to be specially lovely, because it is for a special daughter and a special young man. Both were labeled retarded as children, but have overcome their handicap and grown into mature, capable people. (She is 31 and he is 29.) Both work and are able to manage their own affairs with a little assistance from both sets of parents.
Friends and relatives are so happy that this beautiful couple found each other. If they were growing up today I'm sure they would not be labeled retarded, but would be considered to have "learning disabilities." They will be married in a church because their religion means so much to both of them.
This is my first letter to Dear Abby, and the only advice I need is how to make this wedding one of the loveliest our family has ever had.
REJOICING IN N.Y.

DEAR REJOICING: Thank you for a beautiful letter bearing a message of hope for all "special" children and their families. May the happy couple enjoy all of God's blessings.

DEAR ABBY: Framed asked if birth control pills were deductible, and you replied, "Only if they don't work."
Cute answer, but for your information, according to Internal Revenue ruling 73-200, birth control pills are deductible whether they work or not - if prescribed by a physician.
NEIL WILL THE IRS

DEAR NEIL: Thank for the info. Who am I to argue with the IRS? They're the nice people who know you can't take it with you - so they remove the temptation.

DEAR ABBY: I have two big, good-looking sons. One is 18 and the other is 16, but he's as big as his older brother. These boys have been fighting each other ever since they were old enough to swing their arms.
The 15-year-old just bought himself a secondhand car with his savings. He drove past his brother walking down the road and wouldn't even give him a lift.
The younger brother has his clothes in better shape, so the older one helps himself to his brother's clothes without asking. These boys fight and cuss like a couple of mule skinner.
Why can't they act like brothers?

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Enclosed please find my check for $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope for your book, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding."
This wedding has to be specially lovely, because it is for a special daughter and a special young man. Both were labeled retarded as children, but have overcome their handicap and grown into mature, capable people. (She is 31 and he is 29.) Both work and are able to manage their own affairs with a little assistance from both sets of parents.
Friends and relatives are so happy that this beautiful couple found each other. If they were growing up today I'm sure they would not be labeled retarded, but would be considered to have "learning disabilities." They will be married in a church because their religion means so much to both of them.
This is my first letter to Dear Abby, and the only advice I need is how to make this wedding one of the loveliest our family has ever had.
REJOICING IN N.Y.

DEAR REJOICING: Thank you for a beautiful letter bearing a message of hope for all "special" children and their families. May the happy couple enjoy all of God's blessings.

DEAR ABBY: Framed asked if birth control pills were deductible, and you replied, "Only if they don't work."
Cute answer, but for your information, according to Internal Revenue ruling 73-200, birth control pills are deductible whether they work or not - if prescribed by a physician.
NEIL WILL THE IRS

DEAR NEIL: Thank for the info. Who am I to argue with the IRS? They're the nice people who know you can't take it with you - so they remove the temptation.

DEAR ABBY: I have two big, good-looking sons. One is 18 and the other is 16, but he's as big as his older brother. These boys have been fighting each other ever since they were old enough to swing their arms.
The 15-year-old just bought himself a secondhand car with his savings. He drove past his brother walking down the road and wouldn't even give him a lift.
The younger brother has his clothes in better shape, so the older one helps himself to his brother's clothes without asking. These boys fight and cuss like a couple of mule skinner.
Why can't they act like brothers?

Win at bridge

but one which is going to fail unless South gives the hand very special play.

The simple play is to draw trumps and try to set up hearts with one ruff. This play will fail if hearts are 4-1. How about trying to ruff two diamonds in dummy. This play looks awkward and will probably fail if hearts are 4-1.

Can anything be done about a 4-1 heart break? South takes his king of hearts at trick two. Then he plays at trick two to discard his four of hearts. Now he has a heart, enters dummy with a high trump, ruffs another heart, draws trumps, stopping in dummy and eventually loses one diamond.

This play works and is certainly ingenious, but it has one slight flaw. With hearts 3-2 and trumps 4-1, this line would fail because the defender with four trumps would wind up with the last trump.

COOKOUTS UNLIMITED

COOKING OUTDOORS... ANYTIME, ANYWHERE, AT HOME AND ON THE GO

Cooking outdoors has progressed since early cave man huddled over an open fire roasting the spoils from the day's hunt. Today, this scene has changed to the patio or backyard green, or venturing away from home, to a mountain campsite or sandy beach to "rough it" with nature. Wherever you set up the grill, though, the experience is fun and exciting and the atmosphere is relaxed and enjoyed by all.

Naturally, food is the focal point of the event, and luckily you can expand beyond the traditional hot dogs and hamburgers and prepare anything from hors d'oeuvres to dessert.

For a family and friends get-together on the patio, a juicy glazed ham is always a winner and so easy to prepare on a covered kettle grill. This grill offers the cook a nice change of pace, and its convenient size provides all the versatility of the indoor oven. Alongside the ham, cook a Broccoli-Cauliflower bake, topped with a tangy bacon cheese spread, in a foil bundle to keep it hot and flavorful. Try a new bread taste sensation with Sweet Potato Roll-Ups that can be prepared the day before and reheated in a foil packet. Even the Mini Peach Crisp dessert can be heated in individual foil bundles as the ham is carved and served.

But what if your outdoor plans take you beyond the backyard? Tote along a handy portable grill and you can eat just as well "under the pines" as you would at home. Include in your menu pit-bred sandwiches with a teriyaki beef filling easily cooked in a foil packet to keep the beef strips tender, mingle all the delicious flavors and make cleanup a snap. Chive-Buttered Carrots, also wrapped in foil, are a colorful vegetable accompaniment, and a lima bean salad can chill in the cooler until the meal is ready. Under the stars, you can enjoy dessert, too, cooked on the grill. A strawberry sauce to spoon over cake slices can be whipped up in minutes. Frozen strawberries will thaw on the way to the campsite and just thicken with an almond-flavored paste for a yummy topping.

If you like, you can line the grill fire bowls with heavy duty aluminum foil for easy removal of ashes when the fire has cooled. To maintain draft and even circulation, perforate foil to fit damper holes in kettle.

When using a kettle-type unit, all cooking should be performed with the lid positioned on the kettle for maximum efficiency.

IT'S EASY TO MAKE A FOIL DRIP PAN

A drip pan, located under a ham on the grill rack, will catch drippings and help prevent flare-ups. It's easy to make a drip pan with heavy duty aluminum foil. Just follow these directions:

A. Tear off a sheet of 18-inch wide heavy duty or extra heavy duty aluminum foil, double into a large rectangle to fit your grill.
 B. Fold up the sides and miter the corners.
 C. Before lighting the fire, set drip pan in place between the briquets in the grill fire bowl directly under where the ham will be located.

BAKED HAM
 Charcoal - Indirect Method Gas - Indirect Method (Low Heat)

12 to 14 pound whole, bone-in "fully-cooked" ham
 Whole cloves
 Brown Sugar Glaze*

4 to 5 canned pineapple slices, drained and cut into wedges
 Maraschino cherries

Remove rind from ham if necessary. Score fat criss-cross fashion with sharp knife, making shallow cuts so juices will not escape. Stud with whole cloves. Insert meat thermometer into center of thickest part of ham, with point away from bone and fat. Center ham, fat side up, on the cooking grill directly above drip pan. Cover kettle and cook until thermometer registers 140°F. Fully-cooked hams need only be heated to serving temperature (approximately 8 to 10 minutes per pound). Baste ham with Brown Sugar Glaze during last 30 minutes of cooking. Garnish with pineapple wedges and cherries 10 minutes before end of cooking time. Brush with glaze and allow fruit to heat.

Cured and smoked (cook-before-eating) hams may also be prepared. Cook until thermometer registers 160°F. (Approximately 10 to 15 minutes per pound.)

*BROWN SUGAR GLAZE
 Combine 1/2 cup firmly-packed brown sugar, 3 tablespoons water and 2 teaspoons prepared mustard in small saucepan; mix and heat until sugar melts. Brush over ham and fruit.

CHEESY BROCCOLI-Cauliflower BAKE

1 package (10 oz.) frozen Broccoli-Flowerets, thawed
 1 package (10 oz.) frozen cauliflower, thawed
 1 can (4 oz.) sliced mushrooms
 1/4 teaspoon salt

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
 1 jar (5 oz.) pasteurized process cheese spread with bacon

Place broccoli, cauliflower and mushrooms in center of 18-inch square of heavy duty aluminum foil. Sprinkle with salt. Dot with butter. Bring four corners of foil up together in pyramid shape. Fold the opening together loosely to allow for heat circulation and expansion. Seal by folding over ends and pressing to package. Cook under grill hood over medium hot coals 20-25 minutes. Carefully open bundle and spoon on cheese spread. Grill 5 minutes or until cheese melts and vegetables are tender. Makes 6 servings.

SWEET POTATO ROLL-UPS

2 cups buttermilk baking mix
 2/3 cup cooked, mashed sweet potatoes
 1 tablespoon butter or margarine, melted

Preheat oven to 450°F. Combine baking mix and sweet potatoes. Gently gather dough into ball; knead 5 times. Roll into 12-inch circle; brush on melted butter. Cut into 12 wedges. Roll up each wedge starting at rounded end. Place, with points under, on ungreased baking sheet. Bake 8 to 10 minutes. To reheat on grill.

MINI PEACH CRISP

2/3 cup crushed macaroon cookies
 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, softened
 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg

1 can (20 oz.) peach halves, drained

Combine all ingredients except peaches. For each serving, place two peach halves in center of square of heavy duty aluminum foil, large enough to permit adequate wrapping. Sprinkle with macaroon mixture. Bring four corners of foil up together in pyramid shape. Fold opening together loosely to allow for heat circulation and expansion. Seal by folding over ends and pressing to package. Grill over medium hot coals, 15 to 20 minutes, or until peaches are hot. Makes 3 to 4 servings.

TERIYAKI BEEF FILLING

1 tablespoon cornstarch
 1/4 cup soy sauce
 1/4 cup water
 1/4 cup dry sherry
 3/4 cup pineapple juice
 1/4 teaspoon ginger

1/8 teaspoon garlic powder
 1 small onion, sliced
 1 small green pepper, chopped
 3 cups cooked, sliced beef, cut in 2-inch strips

Combine cornstarch and soy sauce in medium saucepan. Add water, sherry, juice, ginger and garlic. Cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until thick and bubbly. Add onion and green pepper; cook 1 minute. Remove from heat. Add beef; mix well. Pour into center of 18-inch square of heavy duty aluminum foil. Bring four corners of foil up together in pyramid shape. Fold the opening together loosely to allow for heat circulation and expansion. Seal by folding over ends and pressing to package. Grill over medium hot coals, 30 to 40 minutes, or until heated through. To serve, spoon mixture into open pita bread. Makes 3 cups filling.

CHIVE-BUTTERED CARROTS

1-1/2 pounds carrots, cut in 3/8-inch strips
 1/4 cup butter or margarine

1/4 teaspoon salt
 1 tablespoon chives
 2 tablespoons water

Place carrots in center of square of heavy duty aluminum foil, large enough to permit adequate wrapping. Dot with butter. Sprinkle with salt and chives. Add water. Bring two foil sides up over carrots; fold down loosely in a series of locked folds allowing for heat circulation and expansion. Fold short ends up and over again; crimp to seal. Grill over medium hot coals, 30 to 40 minutes, or until carrots are tender. Makes 6 servings.

CALICO SALAD

1/2 cup mayonnaise
 1/4 teaspoon salt
 1/8 teaspoon garlic powder
 1/2 pound bacon, cooked and crumbled

2 packages (10 oz. each) frozen lima beans, cooked, drained and cooled
 1 small tomato, diced

Combine mayonnaise, salt and garlic. Add remaining ingredients. Mix well. Chill several hours before serving. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

GRILLED STRAWBERRY SAUCE

2-1/2 tablespoons cornstarch
 2 teaspoons almond extract

2 packages (10 oz. each) frozen strawberries, thawed

Mold 18-inch square of heavy duty aluminum foil over large can or other object that will provide a saucerpan shape. Remove foil and crimp down edges to make a rim. On small square of foil, mix cornstarch and extract to form a paste. Combine strawberries and cornstarch paste in foil-shaped pan. Grill over medium hot coals, 25 to 35 minutes, stirring occasionally until thickened. To serve, spoon over slices of angel food cake. Makes 2 cups sauce.

Savings on Self-service Gas Can Be Wiped Out

By JEFFERY L. SHELER UPI Auto Writer DETROIT (UPI)—With gasoline prices soaring, millions of motorists are finding they can save a penny or two per gallon by pumping their own gas at cut-rate self-service stations in the United States. But their savings could be wiped out by huge repair bills if regular maintenance, normally performed by service station attendants, is neglected. The Automotive Information Council recently reported on a survey by the operator of a Los Angeles service station who checked the cars of 100 customers who pumped their own fuel. He found 56 of the cars were in at least a quart low on oil, 34 needed radiator coolant, 33 had low pressure in at least one tire, 29 needed power steering fluid, 28 were low on brake fluid and 27 needed battery water. "All of these items are so easy to check and so expensive to remedy that a motorist is being unwise to neglect them," the AIC said.

Here are some maintenance hints if you are pumping your own gas: Check the crankcase oil frequently. Once a week is not too often, especially if you drive many miles. The proper level is indicated on the dipstick, which is readily visible and accessible on most cars. Check your owner's manual for exact location. Also, follow the manual's recommendation for frequency of oil changes. Check the water level in the radiator every two or three weeks. If the cooling element is visible, add water until it is covered. Anti-freeze and summer coolant also should be used. An inexpensive gauge can be used to check for the proper amounts of these additives.

Proper air pressure in tires helps prevent premature tire wear and can improve fuel economy. This can be checked with an inexpensive penicillike gauge. Once every two or three weeks should be sufficient. Power steering and automatic transmission fluids should be checked at least once a month. Like checking the oil, this is done with dipsticks calibrated to show proper levels. Again, check the owner's manual for locations. Battery water should be checked every two or three weeks and water added to each chamber as needed. (Some new batteries are sealed and do not require additional water.) Also, keep battery terminals clear of corrosion.

No Response To Rust Plea

By MICHAEL J. CONLON Safety Administration. The agency has ruled that 180,000 Flats built from the early 1970s onward may have severe safety-related rust problems on their cars so far has produced almost no response from the industry. The request was made March 25 by Transportation Secretary Brock Adams and Esther Peterson, President Carter's consumer adviser. They asked both foreign and domestic manufacturers to give American consumers the same rust warranties that are available in Canada.

In Canada persons who buy a new car are given a three-year or 74,000-mile warranty against holes caused by rust, and a one-year or 24,000-mile guarantee against surface rust corrosion. Mrs. Peterson's office reports receiving only two "substantive" replies so far. One was from the Ford Motor Co., which said it is studying the marketing and engineering implications of such a warranty and "the probable cost of providing some form of anti-corrosion warranty for our cars sold in the United States." Ford also said the Canadian program did not begin until October 1978, and "it is not yet clear what our final experience will show for the full three-year coverage period. Nevertheless we hope to be in a position to resolve the matter at a relatively early date."

The other reply — a rejection — came from Fiat Motor Co. That firm told Adams and Mrs. Peterson Canada has "severe weather conditions" unlike those in the United States, conditions that are "further aggravated by the widespread use of salt. We think the situation is certainly different from most of the U.S. territory." "With this in mind there seems to be no reason to offer a similar warranty in the United States which would add considerably to the purchase price of the car," Fiat added. Coincidentally, Fiat is being investigated by the National Highway Traffic

EYE ON SAFETY

Safe Sports In sports, keeping your eye on the ball — which could be traveling at speeds of over 100 mph — should include keeping the ball off your eye. Eye injuries among tennis, squash and paddle ball players are increasing, but most of the 38,000 sports-related injuries last year could have been prevented. "Ducking faster isn't the answer. Special protective eye-wear could be. Byguards or safety specs" are inexpensive and available at many sporting goods or hardware stores. They may not only save your sight, but can also improve your game, since properly protected players may overcome the subconscious fear of catching a ball or racket in the eye. For a free booklet on eye safety, write your state to Prevent Blindness Society, or the National Society to Prevent Blindness, 19 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10016.

Old-fashioned Foods, Remedies Are Harmful

ST. LOUIS (UPI) - Anyone using old-fashioned natural foods and folk remedies without having the old-fashioned wisdom to go with them may be doing more harm than good. Botany expert Dr. Walter Lewis keeps close track of accidental poisonings and deaths caused by abuse of seemingly harmless products found in many health food stores. Such accidents were rare for a long time, he said, but they are growing at an alarming rate. "As we moved into the 20th century and put our health into a doctor's care, we got away from the tradition of self-medication," Lewis said in his office at Washington University. "Suddenly in the last decade we're moving back." Surrounded by specimens of harmful and beneficial plants, Lewis leafed through data on one particular plant, noting that one fatality was reported in 1913 and the next did not come until 1978. "We've got a gap of two generations in which these practices were lost, maybe for good reason. There's a re-emphasis on herbal medicine. It's not scientific, but it's perpetuating information that is not in any way documented." Lewis discussed a long list of harmful effects from apparently harmless plants, including: • Chamomile tea, which he said can cause severe reactions in people allergic to ragweed pollen. • The root, stems and leaves of the poke plant, all of which can be fatal. • Licorice, either the root or the candy, which should be avoided by people suffering from high blood pressure. • Pennyroyal oil, designed for external use but reported to be a means of abortion. Recent deaths have been reported in the cases of women who took just one teaspoon of it internally. "If you take a teaspoon of anything and it can kill you, it's poisonous," Lewis said. "It shouldn't be in a health food store, but the tie-in is that it's supposedly an old herbal recipe." Lewis estimates that for every case of abuse of natural foods or medicines that is reported to authorities, 40 cases go unreported for various reasons. Getting government regulation of these products is difficult, Lewis

Special Summer Camps Helps Kids with Problems

By JO-ANNE BYRNE MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) - Camp is a magic word for kids. It means fun in the sun, swimming, horseback riding, a dizzy world of delights after a long cooped-up winter. But most camps don't accept all children because some have health problems such as diabetes or asthma, or physical disabilities ranging from speech and hearing impairment to crippling disorders. Others are mentally retarded. Those children must rely on specialty camps. They have one thing in common - an interest in providing a camping experience for kids who need it more than most. At Camp Neelapoint, which accepts diabetic children, "it was the first time I realized I wasn't the only diabetic in the world," said Mr. Farrell, a former camper and now assistant camp director. Neelapoint is one of about 60 camps for diabetic children across the country. It is held at Camp St. Croix in Hudson, Wis., and accepts 125 to 130 children from the ages of 7 to 16. Dr. Don Eitzwiler, medical director, said diabetic children frequently suffer from psychological problems as well as "mainstream" restrictions and their parents suffer guilt feelings. In many cases, the children are over-protected. Neelapoint gives the child an opportunity to take part in a group experience and to learn while doing it. "Once you've learned how to test your urine in the woods behind the bushes," Miss Farrell said, "you don't have too many apprehensions." Eitzwiler has seen an increased need for the camping experience in older age groupings and has begun a wilderness challenge program for young adults, 16 to 18. Three groups of eight or nine teen-agers will backpack and canoe this summer in the Boundary Waters Canoe Area in northern Minnesota, Michigan's Isle Royale National Park and the Big Horn Mountains in Wyoming. Camp Courage near Maple Lake, Minn., is one of those for physically disabled children and adults and retarded child who can be "mainstreamed." The camp, and a second in northern Minnesota, serve over 900 persons a summer, ages 7 through senior citizen. The emphasis is on as much physical involvement as is possible for each individual. Campers learn breathing exercises, how to take medication and how to cope with and avoid asthmatic attacks. "Parents of asthmatic children are in a conflicted situation," Cushing said. "They are very protective and also very tired. Camp gives them a chance to free themselves and let their children from the constant problem." Camp Superkids has served as a model for a number of camps in Illinois, Nebraska, Indiana and Michigan. "We've proven our point and have a system that works," Cushing said.

Joe's World

By JOE GARMAN

The air smelled fresh and sweet; that special way it does just after a rain, and the trees arched over the swift running river, gave it a green canopied look.

The fisherman checked upstream and down; spotted two other fishermen further downstream, and then waded out into the purling water to work his way upstream, rod flashing and working, as he cast his dry fly ahead of him.

Ten minutes later, as his Hendrickson floated down toward him, there was a flash; the fly disappeared in a flurry, and bingo! He was into a trout. A short time later, he slid his net under the fish, and admired the dark coloring of the "native" brookie, before slipping it into his creel.

Really sounds good, doesn't it? It is good! In fact, it's great, and it happens on many of the small rivers in our part of the state. The incident described above happened to me just last Saturday on the Yantic River and has been duplicated many times over on streams such as the Fenton, Mt. Hope Scantic Still and Little Rivers.

This year with the gas situation so "iffy," and a lot of fishermen wondering about where to go, taking a good look at our own area east of the Connecticut River might be well worth while.

We all have a tendency to look further afield, and I'm no different than anyone else. But every so often I stop, take a deep breath, and really look around at what we have so close to home and I can't believe it.

Just running out east from Manchester, there's the Skungamaug, the Willimantic, Fenton, Mount Hope, Bigelow Brook, Roaring Brook and the Natchaug. The first four rivers are all within 25 minutes of Manchester, and the Skungamaug is but 15 minutes away.

The "No kill-fly fishing only" area on the Willimantic is one of the nicest stretches of water in Eastern Connecticut. The area above and below Interstate 86 is scenic and good looking, except for the stretch immediately below the highway where the construction is going on. This part of the "Willie" above and below holds an abundance of trout from 9 inches up to 3 pounds. Poke on farther downstream, too — There are some real sleeper areas.

The Natchaug River is another favorite of mine. I like it early in the season up through June and then I back off, because of the summer crowds from the campsites and the park area. But then I like to come back and hit it again in the fall. It can be another super "trout season," fishing this river September, October, and November. There are some really good sized fish in that river.

Another neat river to fish, located not far from Manchester is the Salmon. There is a fly fishing area running from the Glastonbury section into Marlborough, and then into Blackledge where it is open for general fishing. I like to fish the open stretch even more than I do the fly fishing section, because there are some great holding areas along this part of the river. And when there is a fly hatch on the water, it can be super.

Not too long ago I fished the Little River around the Scotland area, and I had a first class picnic. I hadn't fished it in quite a few years, and went back for a return visit. One stretch of the river holds some of the scrappiest holdover rainbows I've seen in a long time. They are not big fish, but they are active.

I know I haven't covered all the streams and rivers in this part of the state, and I've neglected the ponds and rivers, but space just doesn't permit. Ask around about the ponds — There are some really good ones; Crystal Lake is producing like crazy right now.

So take a tip from someone who has a deep appreciation of what we have close around us. Look it over — There's a lot of good fun in the neat waters close at hand.

No Shortage of Places to Go Fishing in State

Fishing is one of the easiest, most relaxing and most popular sports in Connecticut.

Fishermen may pursue such freshwater species as trout, bass, pickerel and shad, or take to the salt water for the seasonal excitement of bluefish and striped bass.

There's no shortage of places to go fishing in Connecticut. More than half of the state parks and forests are open for fishing, and there are scores of lakes, ponds, streams and rivers open.

If you're new to Manchester, here's a list of the most popular fishing spots in the area. The list is by no means complete.

• Bolton Lake, with access from Rt. 44A. Experts say it's best for small and large mouth bass.

• Bolton Notch Pond, at Bolton Notch. There are a lot of small fish, particularly bluegill and perch, and it's best for youngsters.

• Coventry Lake,

reached from Rt. 31. Large mouth bass are plentiful.

• Crystal Lake, off Rt. 30 in Ellington and Stafford. It's good for trout and bass.

• Mansfield Hollow, off Rts. 89 and 195 in Mansfield. Large mouth bass and pickerel are found in great numbers.

• Walker's Reservoir, off Rt. 31 near the Wilbur Cross Highway in Vernon. It's one of some 250 lakes, ponds and streams stocked with trout.

• Mashapaug Pond in Union, off Rt. 171 near the Massachusetts state line. Mashapaug holds the state record for small and large mouth bass.

• Williams Pond on Rt. 207 in Lebanon. Again, small and large mouth bass are found.

• Moodus Reservoir off Rt. 66 in East Hampton. A variety of fish.

• Gardner Lake, off Rt. 54 in Salem. Large and small mouth bass are best.

• Hop River, near Rt. 6 through Andover and Columbia, stocked with trout.

• Scantic River in East Windsor and Podunk River in South Windsor, relatively small rivers, both stocked with trout.

• Farmington River, through Granby and Windsor. One of the best-stocked trout streams.

• Mt. Hope River and Natchaug River, both emptying into Mansfield Hollow. Both good for trout.

• Last but not least on our select list, the Connecticut River. It's said to be the best in the U.S. for shad during the April-to-June season. It's possible to find anything there, though. The closest places for access are in East Hartford, Glastonbury and Rocky Hill.

Open fishing season in Connecticut runs from the third Saturday in April to the end of February, but some species close at the end of October.

Resident fishing licenses are available in town clerk's offices and selected sporting goods shops.

Anglers Don't Mind Fishing This Course

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — It may go down in the annals of higher education as the only college course people love to repeat.

In fact, some people have taken it nine or 10 times, paying $335 for the privilege and traveling hundreds of miles to the classroom.

The subject matter ranges from blue marlin to freshwater bass and the classroom can be a 48-foot charter boat in the Gulf Stream or the piers and beaches of Hatteras on North Carolina's Outer Banks.

The course is the Sport-fishing Shortcourse through North Carolina State's Division of Continuing Education, and its annual classes are generally comprised of at least 20 percent repeaters.

"I'm going to take it again, and when my boy gets old enough to enjoy this I'm going to take him down," said Val Valentine, a Raleigh real estate man who just graduated from the unique course with honors by virtue of landing a 325-pound blue marlin.

The course is offered once each year and draws the experienced as well as the novice fisherman, said Dr. William Hassler, a North Carolina state zoologist who heads the teaching staff.

"We have people who have fished all over the world," said Hassler. "Then we have people who have never been fishing and end up catching a blue marlin. We have a lot of doctors and dentists and middle-aged people who are looking for a hobby."

The five-day course consists of classroom work, lectures in oceanography, ecology, conservation, marine biology, and fishing techniques. But where the fun comes in is on a trip to the world renowned fishing grounds at Hatteras where the final work is done on the way for a "Bass degree" — "Bachelor of Angling Science and Secrets," as it is referred to by the teaching staff.

At Hatteras, the aspiring angler is given a chance to try his hand at surf fishing and pier fishing, and two offshore trips are included.

The catches have included a 450-pound blue marlin, a 101-pound wahoo, 40 to 50 pound dolphin, a 50-pound cobia, and bluefish in the 22-pound range.

"Some other colleges have tried the same thing, but they haven't been successful," said Hassler, who at age 60 is an avid scuba diver and underwater photographer. "I think the reason we've been so successful is that we have excellent offshore and surf fishing in North Carolina, some of the best in the world as a matter of fact. The name Hatteras also has some glamor attached to it."

The course pays its own way, with expenses being met out of the $335 fee, and draws a large number of its students from major cities in the North and from Florida.

Dennis Jackson of the Division of Continuing Education said many people indicate when they register that they want to repeat the course.

"We usually find some way for them to fail," said Jackson.

Market for RVs Is Changing

NEW YORK (UPI) — Recreation vehicles — or RVs as they are commonly known — are expected to sell in record numbers again this year despite concern over gas supplies. However, the 1979 RV market will prove to be different than in the previous 15 to 20 years, according to one expert in the field.

Robert C. Honke, Ford Division RV sales manager, said the market had been dominated for years by large trailer homes but in the last couple of years the sales swing has been in the direction of motorized campers, including customized vans and pickup trucks. In 1973, for instance, vans and mini-homes represented only 12 percent of all RV sales. Today, they comprise almost 55 percent.

"This major shift to smaller trailers and vans, pickups and off-road vehicles is due mainly to rising gasoline prices and an industry-wide downsizing of cars and engines to meet strict Federal fuel economy standards," Honke told a press conference in New York.

"Even so, we expect industry sales of travel trailers, motor homes, vans and pickups will increase a healthy 10 percent over 1978, which itself was a record year. By yearend RV sales should reach 597,000, or about 5 percent above the pre-oil-embargo year of 1973."

To gain perspective on just how big the RV market is in the United States, consider that more than 50 million people currently camp or take to the road regularly in recreation vehicles. Last year more than 6 million RVs were in use, and some 20,000 campgrounds in North America and the U.S. national parks system bulged with more than 280 million visitors, setting a new record.

The Recreation Vehicle Industry Assn. projects that, at the current rate of increase, nearly 10 million RVs will be in use by 1980 — or that one of every eight families in the U.S. will own an RV. In addition, large industries have developed to supply the vehicle and equipment requirements of RVs.

Surveys show the average recreation vehicle owner today is 44 years old, married, has two children and tends to move around during a vacation trip instead of setting up a single campsite or staying in one general area.

A large number of Americans in their early 30s are graduating from hiking and backpacking jaunts to tenting trips utilizing vans and pickup trucks to haul boats, snowmobiles and off-road motorcycles.

By comparison, the average buyer of a larger heavier travel trailer is 55 years old and over, some who are retired and use the big trailers as a home away from home.

Honke said RVs have come a long way since Henry Ford himself helped launch them back in September 1908, when he drove off on one of the earlier automobile vacations. Climbing aboard his first factory-built Model T in Dearborn, Mich., he headed for the woodlands of northern Wisconsin on a hunting trip, with a modest array of camping gear. It was the first of many such camping trips for Ford who, during the 1916-1923 period, often was joined by Thomas A. Edison and Harvey Firestone.

Outer Banks Abound in Beaches

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (UPI) — Campers looking for a secluded island can find one on the Outer Banks of North Carolina. It is called Ocracoke Island and it can be reached only by ferry. It takes almost three hours from the North Carolina mainland to Ocracoke by steamer, and a reservation is required. From the north, Ocracoke may be reached by ferryboats which run across the Hatteras Inlet about every 40 minutes. The long trip across Pamlico Bay costs up to $15 and campers with reservations must be in line at least 30 minutes before departure time. Campers without reservations will be accepted on stand-by call on a first-come, first-served basis. There is no charge for the short ferry trip between Hatteras Island and Ocracoke and, in good weather, it is a delightful ride. Two government-operated campgrounds on Ocracoke have 70 campsites between them. Information may be obtained in advance by writing to the Superintendent's Office, Cape Hatteras National Seashore, Manteo, N.C. 27954.

Campers entering the national seashore from the north by way of Nags Head can reserve campsites on any of the three main islands, if there are available spaces, at the Ranger Station. There are 740 campsites in the government-owned campgrounds which rent for less than $5 a day. These campsites are spacious but primitive. There are no electrical or water hookups and only cold-water, outdoor showers are available. Several privately owned campgrounds offer modern conveniences for campers who do not wish to rough it. The KOA campground at Rodanthe is a comparatively luxurious place with pull-through sites and electric, water and sewer hookups as well as clean restrooms with hot showers. Holiday Inn has erected a Trav-L Park a few miles down the highway from KOA and it, too, gives the camper an easy night. The Outer Banks, which stretch 175 miles along the North Carolina coastline, are not known for scenic beauty. The sand spits are almost barren and tall trees can be found only in the Hatteras village area. Even so the islands are a haven for wildlife. And they are worth visiting for historic reasons. Blackbeard the pirate used the ocean side of the Outer Banks as a base of operations until 1718 when he was killed in a battle with ships sent from nearby Virginia. Legend has it that Blackbeard's body was buried on Ocracoke Island. The Outer Banks also was the site of man's first power-driven flight in a heavier-than-air machine. On Dec. 17, 1903, Orville and Wilbur Wright made their brief, but historic, flight from Kill Devil Hill at Kitty Hawk. The Wright Brothers National Memorial, an aviation museum, was built at Kitty Hawk in 1927 and is a major tourist attraction. And there is the famous lighthouse at Cape Hatteras, the tallest in the United States and an ideal scenic background for camera buffs. Roanoke Island, only a short drive from Kitty Hawk and Nags Head, is the location of "The Lost Colony." The English, under the sponsorship of Sir Walter Raleigh, established a settlement on Roanoke Island between 1585 and 1587. It became known as

"The Lost Colony" because all of the settlers vanished without a trace. Among those who disappeared was Virginia Dare, the first white child born in the New World. Each summer a play staged at Fort Raleigh National Historic Site near Manteo tells the story of "The Lost Colony." If there were no historic attractions, the Outer Banks would still be worth traveling hundreds of miles to visit because of the wide, clean beaches. Except for holiday weekends they are relatively uncrowded. There are eight piers for fishermen and those who do not have gear can rent what they need. The beaches are ideal for surf casting, especially for flounder and sea bass. Birdwatchers may look for almost 300 species but the most spectacular are the gulls, which have black headfeathers and red beaks.

Recreation Playgrounds in New York

NEW YORK (UPI) — State lands of New York are ideal recreation playgrounds for campers and other lovers of the great outdoors.

The state parks and state forests are easy to reach and most of them impose only a small fee for use of the facilities.

These camping spots are a big bonus to visitors, especially those from out of state, because upstate New York is one of the most beautiful parts of the United States.

There are some natives of New York City, a sizable group, who have lived all their lives in Manhattan and believe that anything north of the Big Apple and west of the Hudson River is an insignificant Never Never Land.

These poor encapsulated people are unaware that only a few hours away lie picturesque valleys, large lakes, rippling springs, mountain vistas and enchanting waterfalls.

A few of the state parks are worth traveling many miles to see.

Perhaps the most grandiose is the Robert Moses State Park at Massena, near the Canadian border.

It is located in the St. Lawrence River and covers 4,122 acres. The layout is something like a vast country club and the campsites are roomy. Some have electrical hookups.

Among the nearby attractions are the Moses-Saunders Power Dam, which generates almost two million kilowatts of power, and the Eisenhower Lock, which ships transit on a regular posted schedule. Visitors can watch the ships enter the lock and descend, as the water is lowered, from one altitude to another.

Part of the channel in the lock is on a highway overpass, giving an unsuspecting driver an eerie feeling as he watches an ocean liner suddenly appear over the roadway.

Another unforgettable camping spot is the Chenango Valley State Park near Binghamton, about four hours from New York City. The layout rivals that of the Robert Moses State Park and most of the campsites are spacious. It is a fine place for the whole family as facilities include a playground, a golf course, a skating rink and snowmobile trails.

There are several good parks in the Utica area, only a few miles from the spectacular view at Watkins Glen and about an hour's drive from the Corning Glass Works (admission free) at Corning.

The Robert Treman State Park, about 10 miles south of Utica, has a beautiful layout and a natural swimming pool fed by a waterfall which forms a backdrop. Unfortunately, the campsites are too close together, affording little privacy. But there is so much to see nearby that camp sites are used mostly for sleeping.

New York's state forests are fine places for campers who like to rough it, or at least don't mind doing without electric and water hookups.

There are several campgrounds in the Adirondack Park section. One of the best is the Sacandaga Forest, near Wells. This campground will become a strategic stamping ground during the 1980 Olympics because it is not far from Lake Placid. Other nearby attractions — within a few hours' driving time — are Lake George and Saranac Lake.

Taconic State Park, at Copake Falls, about three hours' drive from New York City, is a popular campground. It is near Lenox, Mass., and cultured campers from Taconic go to Lenox to attend the Boston Philharmonic concerts at Tanglewood.

Possibly the most popular state park in New York is Hither Hills at Montauk, at the end of Long Island. The state park is on the Atlantic Ocean beach and reservations must be made far in advance.

Twin-Keel Boats for Shallow Water

NEW YORK (UPI) — The bane of many shallow water sailors' existence is the centerboard.

It takes up too much room and divides the cockpit and cuddy cabin in two. Manipulating the board up and down for different points of sailing and varying depths of water is a nuisance no matter how efficient the tackle.

On wood boats, the centerboard trunk often leaks a little and the skipper worries lest the leak get bad enough to be dangerous. He is constantly trying to find the leak but seldom succeeds. Fortunately fiberglass centerboard trunks almost never leak.

But boats with fixed deep keels are useless in shallow bays and rivers and even in lakes that have wide shallows near the shore.

One solution could be the twin keel boat, popular in England and much of Europe. The twin keeler only draws about half the depth of a fixed deep keel. It draws more than a centerboarder going downwind with the board all the way up but much less than a centerboarder going to windward with the board all the way down.

The British love the twin keeler because they have so many bays and estuaries with a big rise and fall of the tide and have very few suitable marina sites.

In these narrow waters boats have to be moored so close to shore that they can sit on the ground at dead low tide. The twin keeler can do that. Americans don't have to sail in such cramped waters, which probably is why the British have not succeeded in selling more twin keelers in America.

You can get plenty of argument about the efficiency of twin keels. The few Americans who have bought them seem to like twin keelers and it appears that they have better initial stability than a centerboarder. But critics cast doubt on their ability to go to windward in a real blow and their self-righting capability compared with the deep single keel or a real good centerboarder.

It is difficult to convert a centerboard to twin keels. The hull may not be beefy enough in the area of the turn of the bilges to support the twin keels and access to these areas may be impossibly expensive in a fiberglass boat.

Location of the two keels is critical. They must be truly perpendicular to the arc formed by the bottom of the hull and their angle to the boat's mast must be just right, somewhere around 25 degrees. They usually are made of steel plates or steel rod and mesh skeletons covered with fiberglass.

Tips on Getting Your Barbecue Started

NEW YORK (UPI) — An outdoor barbecue gadget introduced 10 to 15 years ago is getting a new lease on life, thanks to the energy crisis.

The chimney-like device eliminates the need for chemical or electric fire starters. At least two brands are currently available in retail stores and-or by mail order.

"It's based on a very old theory," said Jack Capen, a sales and marketing executive for one manufacturer, Millstone, Inc.

"People used to use No. 10 tomato cans (an institutional size popular with restaurants, hotels and other institutional food services)."

Capen said sales of his company's knockdown unit were "kinda slugging along" until recently.

"Until the energy crunch it never got much attention."

"About 15 minutes ago I got an order for 1,000 from California," he added in a telephone interview.

He said the aluminum-coated steel device lasts longer than the homemade tin can variety.

Testing both side-by-side on a cool, windy evening, we found the commercial unit fired up slightly faster than our homemade device, apparently because it had better draft.

But you can't beat the price of the homemade kind: zero.

To make a charcoal starter chimney, remove the paper label, if any, and both ends of a clean, dry No. 10 can or a three-pound coffee can. Using a beverage can punch, make holes about 1 inch apart around one end of the can and two holes at the other end, spaced just far enough apart to insert the two tines of a long-handled barbecue fork. Using pliers, flatten the two fork holes cutouts against the inside of the can but let the metal punched out at the other end remain at right angles to the side of the can. This helps support the fuel until the fire is blazing.

Both the homemade and store-bought units work the same way:

• Stand the chimney, with the ring of holes down, near the center of the firebowl of your grill.

• Place a single layer of tightly wadded single newspaper pages (black-and-white only; color pages release toxic gases when burned) in the bottom. Rest them on the tabs inside either unit to allow air to circulate below.

• Add briquettes, then light the paper through several of the bottom holes. Within minutes, flames should be leaping upward.

• The fire is ready for cooking when the coals look ashy gray by day or glow bright red at night. This should take 20-40 minutes, depending on the number of briquettes and how windy the day.

When the coals are ready, use the handle that comes with a commercial unit or a long-handled fork with the homemade type to lift the chimney slowly and carefully — letting the pile of red-hot coals settle gently in the firebowl.

(It's a good idea to have a tray of sand nearby to set the hot chimney on — it could mar a concrete or brick surface or char a wooden one.)

• Then, use long-handled tongs to spread the coals in a single layer; put the rack and food on.

One Layer Ample for Charcoal Grill

NEW YORK (UPI) — A common mistake many outdoor cooks make is using too many briquettes for the amount of food to be cooked.

A single layer of briquettes extending about one inch around the outer edges of the food is ample, says the Chicago-based Barbecue Industry Association, a trade organization.

For roasts and other large cuts of meat, fish or poultry that need longer cooking time, the association suggests placing a few extra briquettes around the edge of the firebowl just before starting to cook. They should just touch the hot coals. They will ignite gradually as the food cooks and be available when the previously lit briquettes start to die down.

The association estimates cooking complete meals over coals can save one-half to one-third of the energy needed to cook the same foods on a kitchen range. How much you save depends both on the menu and the number of briquettes used.

Some other tips from the association:

—Before cooking meat and poultry, trim away as much visible fat as possible to prevent flare-ups. If they occur anyway, several measures should help: raise the rack higher or spread out the coals or remove some of the coals (use long-handled tongs in either of the last two cases).

If all else fails, remove the food to prevent charring, spray the coals or sprinkle them with water or baking soda until the flames die, then return the food to the rack.

—Depending on brand, briquettes take varying times to reach cooking temperature. One way to determine fire temperature: Hold your hand, palm side down, at cooking height. If you can keep it there two seconds, the temperature is high.

—To reduce cooking temperature, either raise the rack or spread out the coals with long-handled tongs.

—For rotisserie cooling, place a foil drip pan in front of the coals in the fire box to catch drippings and help prevent flare-ups.

Annual Boat Maintenance Suggestions

NEW YORK (UPI) — Spring is here and the armchair sailors of the winter months now are busy with the annual ritual of preparation and maintenance.

For those fortunate enough to own a "glass" boat with a gel coat (outer surface) in good condition, the job should be quick and fairly painless. Don Miller, marine market manager for Owens-Corning Fiberglass Corp., has a few timely suggestions:

First, make a careful inspection of your boat. "This could save you time, money and headaches later on," Miller said. List everything that needs to be done and stick with your check-off list.

Most repairs on a fiberglass boat — from simple gel coat crazing to holes in the hull — are within the capabilities of do-it-yourself boatowners.

After the initial inspection, wash down the hull with a good household detergent. If no repairs are needed, treat the hull with a fiber glass wax available at marine supply stores.

"Long hours in the sun tend to dull the shine of a fiberglass hull," Miller says, so a waxing every spring before launching protects the gel coat and smooths the surface, prolonging its life.

If the hull is extremely dull, a coat of paint may be needed. Epoxy paints currently are among the most popular. Consulting with the boat builder and paint manufacturers is advisable before application.

Before applying antifouling paint to the bottom, Miller advises "again wash the bottom with a good, strong household detergent. Then sand the bottom enough to rough it up so the antifouling paint has a good surface to adhere to."

After years of service, hairline cracks — called "crazing" — can appear in the gel coat of fiberglass boats.

"If the crazing is below the waterline, the antifouling paint will take care of it," Miller says. "Cracks above the waterline need a little more work."

These cracks should be opened up with a powered abrasive tool. A V-cut extending slightly into the laminate is best. Then, using a spatula, apply a gel coat paste (available from your marine supply store).

Miller suggests covering the patch with cellophane for about 20 minutes to aid curing. After that, the paste will have hardened and the cellophane can be removed.

The next step is to take a sharp putty knife or razor blade to trim and level off the patch. The area can then be fine sanded and compounded to fill any voids and bring back the finish.

"Don't worry about the color difference between the repair and the rest of the hull," advises Miller. "It may take a few months of weathering to see it blend in with the rest of the hull."

Miller also says that scratches above the waterline generally can be removed with polish and large doses of elbow grease. If the polish does not remove the scratch, try a rubbing compound. Powered buffing tools should be avoided here as they tend to create excessive heat.

If the hull has been damaged and a full patch is needed, Miller says "you should use the same resin and fiberglass used to make the hull. Contact your boat dealer. He should have the specifications or be able to get them for you. He, or your local marine supply store, can supply the resin and glass."

Resins require a temperature of 70 degrees to cure properly and if springtime temperatures are not high enough, infrared bulbs can be used to raise the temperature in the repair area.

Work from inside the hull. Clear away jagged pieces of damaged fiberglass and bevel the perimeter of the hole or crack, Miller says. Then tape a piece of cardboard over the damage on the outside of the hull. This will shape the patch and give it a smooth surface.

Next, apply resin-saturated fiber glass in layers until the desired thickness is reached.

"The repair should be at least as thick as the original laminate and perhaps a bit thicker for added insurance," Miller believes.

After the resin has cured, remove the cardboard and apply gelcoat to the outside of the patch. Follow the same procedure as for crazing repairs.

Now, as far as the hull exterior is concerned, the boat should be ready for launching.

Anchoring from Stern Is Dangerous Practice

NEW YORK (UPI) — One of the most dangerous of all boating practices is anchoring from the stern. It can drown you.

Dropping an anchor from the stern may be necessary once in a while to keep from running on a rocky shore if the motor conks out, but as soon as the anchor catches good, the rode line should be taken off the stern cleat and carried forward and cleated to the bow so the boat will swing around and face the oncoming wind and waves and get a proper lift.

Stern-anchoring usually is resorted to by amateur fishermen. Perhaps the angler is too lazy to move around in the boat or perhaps he imagines the boat will swing around less if anchored by the stern. It may appear to be steadier in current and wind, but the price that can be paid is high.

The risk is not so great in a boat with a high transom, but in a skiff with an outboard motor hung in a low cutout on a transom that is low to the water to start with, it is great. The bow wave of a large passing boat that would simply lift the skiff up if it passed under the bow may come over the transom and swamp the skiff if it is held to the bottom by a taut line to a stern anchor.

Pulling the anchor up from the stern means adding the weight of whoever is doing the pulling to the weight of the motor at the aft end of the boat. This can alter trim so much that tugging on the taut anchor line literally will pull the stern under and cause the boat to sink or at least capsize. If you have anchored by the stern, for heaven's sakes, unclasp the line, then move forward at least to midship before you start hauling the anchor in.

The Coast Guard and marine police in various states can cite numerous serious mishaps caused by stern-anchoring of small boats. In recent years, at least 10 drownings in the United States have been attributed to the misguided practice. It is dangerous in lakes but much more dangerous in streams or in tidal waters with stiff currents. Any move aft of one of the occupants of the boat could be disastrous under these circumstances.

Another dangerous (and illegal) practice is hitching to a buoy to catch crabs or fish, which often are plentiful around buoys.

Boat Engine Failure Can Prove Serious

NEW YORK (UPI) — Engine failure in a boat can be a frightening even a fatal experience if the wind whips up high waves.

The boat loses steerage way and soon turns broadside to the waves. Water may come over the side and cause the boat to heel and list. It may capsize unless power is regained or a sea anchor can be screamed out from the bow to keep the boat's head into the waves.

A manufactured sea anchor is a canvas cone with a bridle, but a sea anchor can be jury rigged with any bulky object that is buoyant but no so buoyant it will overrun the boat.

The terrifying thing about engine failure for most boaters is there is nothing in the average person's experience with auto engines to prepare one to cope with it. In addition to the miseries the auto engine is subject to, the marine engine can be conked out by the rocking and pitching motion of the boat in a heavy sea. This interferes with the free flow of fuel and the motor begins to starve and falter. What has happened is that the fuel sloshes around in the tanks and creates big air bubbles and also may stir up minute amounts of sediment in the bottom of the tank. The air bubbles and dirt get into the carburetor or the diesel fuel injectors. Eventually the engine is sucking too much air and not enough fuel and dies. It may be difficult or impossible to get it running again until the waves calm.

Outboard motors are nearly all two-cycle, which means they are lubricated by mixing oil with the fuel. This makes them much more subject to spark plug fouling than the four-cycle engine, and spark plug life is short.

Both outboard and inboard marine engines live in a damp environment and on salt water in a highly corrosive environment. So the ignition cables and the rest of the electrical system are much more subject to shorts caused by condensation that rarely affect the auto engine. Drying fluids in aerosol cans are the best cure for this.

The only cooling problems the motorist is used to are leaking radiators and broken fan belts, both comparatively easy to fix. The boat owner has to worry constantly about the raw water intake of his engine cooling system silted up the power plant with suspended salt mud, weed or bits of drifting paper, cloth or plastic. Any of these can cause an engine to heat up in a hurry and cook out. Eliminating the trouble may be difficult.
