

Board of Education Approves Two-Year Contracts

MANCHESTER — The Board of Education Tuesday night approved a tentative two-year contract agreement with school secretaries, paraprofessionals, custodians and maintenance workers.

The agreement calls for a salary range of $7,965 to $10,910 for the 65 members of the Manchester Association of Education Secretaries.

In the tentative agreement with the town's about 85 school paraprofessionals, the salary range would be $4,315 and $8,430. The majority of the paraprofessionals are represented by Local 3175 of the American Federation of Teachers.

The salary range for the 100 custodians and maintenance workers is between $6,865 and $14,830. These employees are represented by Local 991 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

There are no increases in fringe benefits in any of these agreements, according to Wilson E. Deakin Jr., assistant school superintendent, who is the school system's union negotiator.

The recommended pay increases are within the six percent limit set by the school board.

The board is planning to hold an auction of all surplus and obsolete equipment the school system has accumulated.

Many of the items, according to school business manager Raymond Demers, are obsolete and replacement parts are unavailable. Also, there are a lot of doors and windows that, because of revised building and safety codes, have been replaced.

Demers said he and Maurice Pass, the town's general services administrator, would arrange for conducting the auction. Money from the auction would go into the town's general fund, Demers said, and added that whatever isn't sold will go to the junk yard.

In a $100,000 cut needed to meet the town's appropriated $16.2 million school budget, the board has approved such reductions from its original budget as program improvements, maintenance and custodial supplies, field trips, new and replacement equipment and textbooks.

However, reallocation of some funds to other accounts will permit a part-time nutritional consultant, money for roof repairs at the Manchester High School and Illing Junior High School, and a full-time elementary school teacher. These adjustments account for a $69,000 budget cut.

Another $31,000 cut from the original budget was originally designated for such items as a new paved area at Robertson School, increased parking area at Verplanck school, relocation of athletic fields with new baseball backstop at Illing, and a fence along the baseball field at Bennett Junior High School.

The board also approved an agreement with the town whereby the two parties would share maintenance costs of the Washington School/West Side Recreation Center. The board approved a $23,700 budget for the Regional Occupational Training Center. This budget allows for a population of 110 students, of whom 55 are Manchester residents and 55 students are participating members of surrounding towns. Tuition charges for non-resident students make up $137,945 of the ROTC budget.

Approval was given to a program which will provide teachers for the gifted students in all local elementary schools.

WHAT'S NEWS

Border Gas Drain

HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. Ella Grasso said Friday state energy officials are keeping an eye on New York motorists who are traveling to Connecticut and draining off precious gasoline supplies in border towns and cities.

She said the "unusual situation" was detected during the past 24 hours and her energy people will be "monitoring" the problem by checking license plates.

"This is a pattern that is beginning to emerge and it is not a good one," Mrs. Grasso told her weekly news conference. "Good faith and cooperation are greatly to be desired. There has to be enough for everybody."

Pope Welcomed

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Poles rolled out a 500-yard-long red carpet of welcome Friday for the return of their native son, Pope John Paul II, to his homeland amid a tremendous outpouring of warmth and love that likely will exceed any such display in Polish history.

Up to 3 million people crushed into Warsaw for the pope's arrival at 10 a.m. Saturday (4 a.m. EDT). Security men, worried about the pope's plan to stop his motorcade and mingle with the crowds during his seven-mile ride into the city, tried to keep details of his itinerary quiet.

Medicare Mystery

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The head of the $46 billion agency that oversees Medicare and Medicaid said Friday the government cannot be sure "where all the money is going" because recipient states use conflicting reporting procedures.

Leonard Schaeffer, 33, who runs the Health Care Financing Administration, told the National Conference of State Legislatures that even though his agency is responsible for health benefits for 50 million poor and elderly Americans, he cannot say for certain whether the task is being performed well.

"I'm not sure we understand where all the money is going. And when I say 'we,' I mean 'we,'" Schaeffer said with a gesture that included himself and others in the room.

Tourism Threat

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — Tourism officials Friday said they are worried gasoline problems, unequal advertising power and an unfavorable currency exchange rate will discourage Canadians from vacationing in Maine this summer.

"I was in Old Orchard Beach or another area that depends heavily on Canadian travel. I would be very concerned," Bruce Taylor, the Maine Publicity Bureau's director of vacation travel marketing, said in an interview.

Taylor explained the Canadian government is advertising that people should not visit the United States due to reports of gasoline shortages splashed across the Canadian media. Even though fuel supplies in Canada are equal to or more expensive than in the United States they are more plentiful, he added.

"It's even gotten to the point that our own embassy in Ottawa told a woman not to travel to the United States," Taylor said.

Quake Potential

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Scientists warned Friday that crustal stress bottled up along a 150-mile section of rugged coast on the Gulf of Alaska is likely to produce a great earthquake there anytime within the next two to four decades.

Age No Barrier For MCC's Grads

By CHARLIE MAYNARD Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — More than ever before, the 1979 Manchester Community College graduating class represents a diverse student population.

Its ranks have evolved from a predominantly traditional student body — the under-25 or just-out-of-high-school crowd — to one reflecting the seventies — the over-25-set returning to college after a several year hiatus.

"We have more people over 25," MCC President Ronald Denison told the commencement address Friday evening. "That we've had in past years."

That point was accentuated when the valedictorian and the commencement speaker gave accounts of their own college experiences at graduation ceremonies for the 15th commencement of the college.

Adelia L. Ugliak of Vernon, who resumed studies in 1970 on a part-time basis, told her fellow graduates to "get out your rut" and adjust to changing circumstances.

"Most of us are well beyond what one considers is college graduating age — me, in particular," said the mother of three children. "We have to set new goals and move forward. Man can adapt to change. He can grow. The minute he stops learning, life passes him by."

Mrs. Fahey, a 1975 graduate of MCC and the first alumna to speak at graduation ceremonies, quoted renowned philosophers like Aristotle and Thomas Jefferson when exhorting the audience to keep an eternal vigilance on freedom or lose it.

"Our minds and imaginations are probably more fertile right now than ever before," she told the graduates. "Don't let that slip away. Look to the general election in the fall. A brilliant sun and summer-like conditions gave way to a threatening sky and a cool breeze, but no rain came to spoil the evening for the nearly 775 graduates.

In her commencement address, Mrs. Fahey told the students and the rest of the audience there is an urgent need for citizen participation in the political process.

Mrs. Fahey, who is completing her first session as the senator from East Hartford and parts of Manchester, said she had plenty of contact with lobbyists, reporters and bureaucrats.

"But in that process of making laws which will govern us all," she said, "I have found one thing missing — not entirely — but in great degree, and that one missing essential ingredient is you, the people."

"It is a basic tenet of our political system that without an informed and interested electorate there can be no enlightened democracy," she continued. "Without your active input your representatives have no guideposts. They can only grope blindly, following their own instincts and guessing at what the popular will may be."

Street Supervision Called Police Need

By CHRIS BLAKE Herald Reporter

EAST HARTFORD — A consultant from the National League of Cities has recommended an increase in the number of ranking officers who supervise street patrols in the police department.

Quinn Tamm's long-awaited report on police operations and procedures, released Friday by Mayor Richard H. Blackstone, said street supervision is insufficient and should be increased by at least one sergeant and one commander for each shift.

The report, however, did not recommend a return to neighborhood cruiser beats — a measure the East Hartford Citizen Action Group has demanded since each shift.

Tamm, a former FBI training director, said there are actually more patrols on the street during certain times of day under the two-sector patrol system than there would be under a neighborhood cruiser system.

The major criticism of the department in the two-page report is the lack of street supervision. Tamm said he noticed last month when he rode in a cruiser with a sergeant that there was only one sergeant supervising 75 officers on the street.

The only back-up to the sergeant was a desk lieutenant stationed at the Tolland Street police headquarters, he said.

He said there should be at least two sergeants on the street at all times because of the way the town is divided into patrol sectors. Police Chief Clarence A. Drummond divided the town into north and south patrol sectors with Interstate 86 serving as the dividing line.

In addition to increased street supervision, Tamm recommended having the shift commander spend more time on the street, especially during the period from 5 p.m. to 2 a.m., when crime is highest.

He also said the department's highest ranking officer on a shift is often only a sergeant during these peak crime hours.

"This is not a good practice and increased supervision, I am sure, will substantially reduce the number and nature of complaints you are receiving," he said.

Tamm also said the mayor should check the department's handling of calls from the public because sarcastic comments by an officer could cause resentment and criticism.

Police Chief Drummond said the department is now restructuring its table of organization to include five more sergeants and more high-ranking officers.

He said any changes would require the approval of the mayor and the Town Council since he would have to hire more officers to replace men who would be promoted.

Drummond said he was pleased Tamm spotted the lack of patrol supervisors as an inadequacy in the department.

"We've known that for a long time," he said.

Drummond said there is a shortage of high-ranking officers because the department has been hurt by attrition and many simultaneous retirements of officers in recent years.

"I believe the level of service in the East Hartford Police Department is second to none," Drummond said.

"And, we are constantly striving to improve that level of service," he said.

Blackstone was unavailable for comment on the report.

The mayor ordered the study after repeated citizen complaints about the two-sector patrolling system, an effort largely mounted by EHOAG's crime committee.

EHOAG members said the officers would become more familiar with individuals, neighborhoods and patterns of crime in an area if they patrolled that area every day.

Wings of Morning A Malpractice Suit Against a Clergyman?

By CLIFF SIMPSON
What would it be? Bad advice in a sermon? Some years ago, a young lady in our community tried to kill herself. She was a completely frustrated by the indifference she felt rampant in our town toward the various volunteer boards, groups, and service projects. She was very civic minded and had accepted positions in nine different agencies.

All went well until the following Sunday when I preached on the responsibility of the Christian to serve others. (It was my custom to outline a year's preaching in the summer on a topic and a text beginning right after Labor Day.) She came after church in tears wondering just what to do. Might not this advice given in a sermon be a possibility for a malpractice suit?

If a very conservative Christian (Biblically and theologically) came to worship, heard a sermon on "The Word Made Flesh" and because of the intellectual conflict engendered faith was lost, what say the law courts about that?

I received in the mail the other day an advertisement about insurance that would protect me as I remember it, from $20 to $300,000 if a need sued. Apparently, there is a market for this product. Can it become as lucrative as suing a doctor? So far, I have not read of any such suit, but who knows what will happen down the pike?

Have You Had a Baby?
Here is a thought from Christopher Morley:
"Standing by the crib of one's own baby, with that world-old pain of compassion and protectiveness which this little creature that has all its course to run, the heart beats back in yearning and gratitude to those who fed just to toward one's self. Then for the first time one understands the homely succession of sacrifices and pains by which life is transmitted and fostered down the stumbling generations of men."

Muscle-Bound Religion
Bill Krisher attended the University of Oklahoma where he was an American and earned as well as the nickname of "Crusher" for bruising tackles. When he entered professional competition, work got around that he was a "Sunday school teacher."

Once as he crouched in the Pittsburgh Steeler line, his opposing tackle leered at him and threatened, "I've heard you're a Sunday school guy, Crusher." He paused a second, spit out a string of curses, and added, "I'm going to hit you so hard, you'll lose all your religion."

"And God Was There!"
The careless abandon with which he was spending our substance has been caught up short by the deeper meaning of Memorial Day. Instead of "opening the camp" or participating in the first fling of summer, it is good for us to stop and realize at what a price our 'good life' has come.

This poem, published with the above title, was found on the body of an unknown American soldier:
"Look, God, I have never spoken to You.
But now I want to say, 'How do you do?'
You see, God, they told me You didn't exist,
And like a fool, I believed all they said.
Last night from a shell hole I saw Your sky.
I figured right then they had told me a lie.
Had I taken time to see things You do, I'd have known they weren't calling a spade a spade."

I wonder God, if You'd shake my hand;
Somewhat, I feel that You will understand.
Well, I come to this to this hellish light.
Before I had time to see Your face,
I guess I must have been much more to say,
But I'm sure glad, God, I met You here.
I'm not afraid since I know You're near.
The signal! Well, God, I'll have to go.
I like You lots, this I want to know.
Look now, this will be a horrible fight.
Who knows, I may come to Your house tonight.
Though I wasn't friendly to You before,
I wonder, God, if You'd wait at Your door.
Look, I'm crying! Me! Sheddng Your sky.
I wish I had known You these many years.
Well, I have to go now, God. Good-bye!
I wonder, since I met You, I'm not afraid to die."

A huge birthday cake will be served after the service. There will be a "how to dress" problem for some worshippers because immediately after service there will be fun, food and games for everyone on the lower lawn (dressing rooms will be available for changing into casual clothing).

He did it again and we can only applaud.
Richard Nixon, whose admiration for George Patton and John Wayne is legendary, has again displayed those qualities of audacity and courage which made America great. Nixon has followed the dictates of his conscience against arguments based on good taste, prior promises or fair play. We refer, of course, to the recently disclosed sale of Cas Pacifica.

The Nixon bunker in San Clemente was fixed up to the tune of $703,367 in federal money — ostensibly for security measures. Nixon's definition of security turned out as broad as his definition of executive privilege: $100,000 went for shrubbery and plantings. These presumably kept Nixon secure from the prying gaze of surfers, beach bums, taxpayers and other riff-raff who might threaten his peace of mind.

But when the amount of money Uncle Sam spent on Cas Pacifica was made known, Nixon gallantly announced that he would not be selling the estate. No, he would bequeath it to the nation for public use. Well, Nixon has again taken the lonely road and followed the dictates of his conscience. Cas Pacifica has been sold off, presumably at lush profit for the Nixons.

So we applaud Dick Nixon. He is a certifiable tough guy, just like his hero, in fact, if Nixon was born 75 years earlier we bet he would have been a gunslinger — though not a sheriff. He would have robbed the poor.

WASHINGTON — Six months ago, Saudi Arabia warned Washington that its oil production would be reduced from 9.5 million to 8.5 million barrels per day, that other oil powers could be expected to cut back production and that the United States should "make arrangements to head off an embargo. The warning went unheeded.

Commentary Oil Policy and New England Primaries

By LARRY LIGHT
Congressional Quarterly
WASHINGTON — To 1980 presidential primary-watchers, one fact of life is looming large: It will be held in New Hampshire next winter.

Energy may be the pivotal issue in the four New England states that will hold the beginning round of primaries in 1980.

Bitter winters and increasingly scarce energy supplies have greatly increased home heating bills in the region.

President Carter's oil prices to begin a phased decade of oil depletion in Connecticut, Democratic Rep. Toby Moffett, who is a likely candidate for the Senate in 1980, attacked Carter's oil decontrol decision and narrowly failed in the House Commerce Committee to block the president's plan.

Carter, on a recent swing through New England, sought to shore up damage to his candidacy by announcing a major issue of California Gov. Jerry Brown, as expected, challenges Carter for the Democratic nomination.

Energy will be a big issue up here," said state Rep. Barney Frank, a Massachusetts Democrat. "It will be a big one for somebody to go after Carter on."

The most significant complaint has come from Carter's most formidable potential rival for the 1980 Democratic nomination, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

Kennedy is fighting to keep oil price controls and has branded the president's tax plan to recover oil company "windfall profits" as "no more than a transparent fig leaf over the vast new profits the industry will reap."

Another possible Carter rival in 1980, California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., so far has been reluctant on decontrol and has dodged questions from reporters about it.

Brown, meanwhile, has attracted national attention for his efforts to alleviate a serious gasoline shortage in his state.

Potential pitfalls stemming from Carter's oil decontrol decision face the president throughout New England.

In New Hampshire, Democratic Sen. John A. Durkin has threatened to oppose Carter in his state's key 1980 primary if the policy continued to curtail an energy policy the state has long favored.

He has called for closing the senator sees as detrimental to his region.

"One-one in New Hampshire today, the Ayatollah could beat Carter," Durkin told reporters. "There is an anti-New England bias in the White House."
In Massachusetts, Democratic Sen. Paul E. Tsongas has indicated he might run as a favorite son in his state's presidential primary to show displeasure over Carter's energy policy.

Some regard this as a thinly veiled stalking horse bid for Kennedy.

Rancho Seco atomic plant in his state was designed by the Babcock & Wilcox Co., the same company that built the Three Mile Island units, and is similar to the Pennsylvania facilities.
Carter, a nuclear engineer during his Navy days, still feels that nuclear power is one means of weaning the nation from overseas oil and favors "prudent development" of atomic energy.

After the Pennsylvania incident, the president toned down his support for the nuclear alternative and emphasized the need for better safety controls.
Kennedy takes a skeptical stance on the nuclear issue and recently introduced legislation to impose a two-year moratorium on licensing new atomic plants until safety questions are resolved.

All the Republican candidates basically back nuclear power, with the proviso that adequate safeguards be in place. The nuclear issue presently does not appear to be a factor in the GOP wastebasket.

A large portion of New England's electricity comes from atomic — as much as 70 percent in Vermont — and this economic reality may tend to mute any large-scale political debate on the nuclear issue.

Although some of the dates are subject to change, New Hampshire's traditional kick-off of the primary is now scheduled for Feb. 25, to be followed one week later, on March 4, by Connecticut, Massachusetts, Vermont and New Hampshire.

This regional contest prompted a move in the Texas legislature to move that oil-producing state's presidential primary to March 11 from May 3 in an effort to offset the influence of the consumer states.

Such a shift reportedly was pushed to help Texas Connally overcome any disadvantage set back and score an early primary win.

Here is how energy affects the political situation in New England on a state-by-state basis:
* New Hampshire. The price and availability of heating oil next February and gasoline this summer could have a significant impact on the Democratic bidding.

Should Kennedy decide to run — he says he has no plans to do and expects to support the president for re-election — the Massachusetts senator has done himself no harm in New Hampshire by fighting to retain oil price controls.

In addition to his pledge to make sure the state has sufficient oil next winter, Carter has proposed that tax credits be given for wood-burning stoves, which are widely used in the rural north woods.

Nuclear power could be a factor on the Democratic side.
New Hampshire is the home of the Clamshell Alliance, an anticuclear activist group that sought unionization to block construction of the controversial Seabrook atomic plant.

Anti-nuclear groups have vowed to make sure atomic power is on the agenda next year and Brown reportedly is looking for their allegiance, perhaps recalling how effective a dedicated band of activists were in the state of Eugene J. McCarthy in 1968 and George McGovern in 1972.

Vermont. In many ways, Vermont is like neighboring New Hampshire — rural, mountainous and cold in the winter. The difference is that New Hampshire has some urban areas and a slightly larger population. Nonetheless, the cost and lack of energy is viewed with the same urgency in both states.

On top of worries about heating oil next winter, Vermont officials voice concern that gasoline shortages will cripple their state's tourism industry.

Republican candidates have been through the state regularly. Newspaper criticism of Bush and Connally as "Texas oilmen" has reportedly been a major embarrassment here. Governor Richard Snelling, though, is getting behind Bush. Snelling himself is uncommitted.

Massachusetts. Carter stands out as a major embarrassment here if Tsongas runs as a favorite son. Should Kennedy get in the race, the president almost certainly would lose the Democratic primary in the Bay State.

The large liberal and academic community regards Brown, who wants constitutional amendment for a balanced budget, with suspicion in both states. Brown (the liberals) might be the nuclear thing," pointed out state Rep. Frank.

State political watchers say energy will not have a large impact on the Republican primary.
Connecticut. Carter faces problems here. Two House Democrats wholly will be running for the Senate — Robert Dudd — are critics of his decontrol policy.

Again, energy does not seem to figure in the Republican primary. Bush's father, Prescott, was a local hero but outweigh any concerns about the candidate's Texas connection.

The letter was no surprise. For in addition to her tender cooing of Sharon, Hoyt had not been reluctant to call attention to what she regarded as shortcomings in the patient's care as evidenced by persistent bed sores, unpleasant body odors and swollen, bleeding gums. In June 1977, for example, Hoyt filed a complaint with the state listing 18 specific lapses she had observed in St. Mary's operations.

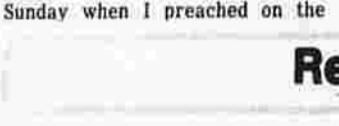

We have seen affidavits from two attendants who worked with Sharon, and they lend credence to Hoyt's charges. But a state investigation turned up no verification of the conditions cited in her complaint.

It is possible, of course, that the level of care was upgraded after Hoyt's complaint was filed. Nursing home experts told us it's not unusual for corrective action to be taken in anticipation of a state inspection. At any rate, Hoyt was not satisfied, and filed additional complaints.

Hoyt, who holds degrees in educational psychology from Harvard and Waite is quietly working on regulations that would spell out the access rights of outside groups. As matters stand now, access can be denied even in the patient gives permission. Doctors need not certify that a visitor is causing medical problems to recommend a ban on such visits.

Footnote: A preliminary review of Sharon's case by HEW concluded: "It appears that the facility's actions violate federal regulations guaranteeing patients the right of free association. The regional HEW office has been asked to look into the matter."

Tolland Man Picked For Town Engineer

EAST HARTFORD — A 32-year-old civil engineer from Tolland has been named the town engineer, Mayor Richard H. Blackstone announced Friday.

Paul J. Kraucunas will replace Charles P. Sheehan, who left in April to take a position with a private engineering firm in Glastonbury. Kraucunas will start June 25.

The appointment ends a two-month search which attracted only seven applicants and, among them, four finalists for the position.

Kraucunas has been a staff engineer for A.R. Lombardi Associates Inc. of Vernon the past 18 months.

Before that, he worked as a resident engineer in Australia for five years. He was employed by Tea Gardens Sewage.

While in Australia, Kraucunas was in charge of a $9 million sewage construction project.

He was also the officer in charge of the Kooragang Island development project. He was responsible for supervision of the project, which involved the dredging and reclamation of the Kooragang Island area for industrial use. The administration of the project included supervision over $1 million a year.

He also worked as a staff engineer for the Gosford-Wyong Water Supply, which provides water for 250,000 customers.

He was graduated from the University of Connecticut with a B.S. degree in civil engineering in 1968. He was also an engineer in the U.S. Army Officer Candidate School.

Blackstone said he believes Kraucunas "will be an outstanding employee for the town."

Sheehan was paid $162 a year when he left, but the mayor indicated during Town Council budget hearings that the town could pay either more or less than that figure. He has budgeted $20,707 for the position in the 1979-80 fiscal year budget.

In its 16th year and 15th commencement, Manchester Community College graduated nearly 775 students from its halls Friday evening. President Ronald Denison said the

Abuse Action Late In Death of Child

EAST HARTFORD — The state Department of Youth Services lagged in responding to reports of suspected child abuse involving a five-year-old boy who died in early May at his home, said a state DCYS department memo last fall show four separate instances where Tarver was referred to the school nurse because of bruises.

Farrington said he will personally do this study.

Another study will be done by a review team comprised of a division staff member and outside professionals. This report is complete, but will be reviewed by Gov. Grasso before being released. Gov. Grasso has asked to see it.

Farrington said it is normal procedure to probe the deaths of children with whom the agency has dealt.

Board Will Look Over Items for Bond Issue

By CHRIS BLAKE
Herald Reporter

EAST HARTFORD — The Board of Education Monday night will review a laundry list of capital improvement items for a possible bond issue.

Robert Bowen, administrative assistant to the school superintendent, has drawn up a list of capital items which includes roof repairs and insulation, resurfacing of parking lots, renovations for the handicapped and new windows.

The proposed improvements at Penney include a permanent press box and bleachers, fencing for the football field, posts and backstops and a loadshedder, which is designed to save energy.

The major area of estimated costs include: $300,000 to purchase the George Street maintenance center (now leased); $150,000 to replace the roof at East Hartford High and $103,000 for Penney High School.

School officials say the problem with the roof results from their flat structure, which wears down under rain or snow.

The council must act on all bond issues before they can be placed on the ballot. They must act before Sept. 7 by state law.

In other board business, School Director of Business Services Dominic Falch has presented a memo which shows the school department has been able to reduce expenses in the salary account by $186,394.

The reduction has been achieved by delays in hiring and hiring new staff at the lowest salary step.

The board will meet at 7:30 p.m. at Penney High School.

Girl, 10, Has Twins, Case May Be First

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — A 10-year-old girl who gave birth to twin daughters may have made medical history and almost certainly is the youngest mother of twins in U.S. history, medical experts said Friday.

Doctors who helped in the premature delivery at Indiana University Medical Center called the births "extremely unusual."

The American Medical Association went one step further, saying it was an unheard-of occurrence.

"I've never heard of anything like it before," said American Medical Association science and news editor Frank Chappell in Chicago.

"There have been births to girls so young, girls as young as 6 years old in some certain Indian tribes, so a 10-year-old girl giving birth is unusual but it has happened before."

"But twins — our records just don't show anything like it before," he said.

Citing privacy rights of the mother and her family, officials have refused to identify her or to say what will become of the twins. The identity of the father also was withheld.

Doctors said they suspect the twins are identical but are awaiting a pathology report to learn for sure.

The infants were reported doing well Friday.

The babies were born by induced labor last week. They were six weeks premature and weighed 3 pounds, 6 ounces each, said Dr. Robert A. Munick, professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the IU School of Medicine and a staff physician at the hospital.

They were reported to be gaining weight without benefit of an incubator, he said. Munick said the mother was hospitalized for toxemia, a condition in which poisonous substances spread through the body — when doctors induced labor.

"The mother had mild toxemia, which is not uncommon in young mothers or in multiple births," he said. "We had her in the hospital, but she wasn't responding to treatment, so we induced labor and she delivered vaginally."

The mother was released from the hospital Monday but the twins will be kept a couple weeks longer, Munick said.

Prober Criticizes Safety Exemption

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The chairman of a presidential investigating panel said Friday it was "shocking" that the Three Mile Island nuclear reactor and other plants were exempted from important new federal safety standards.

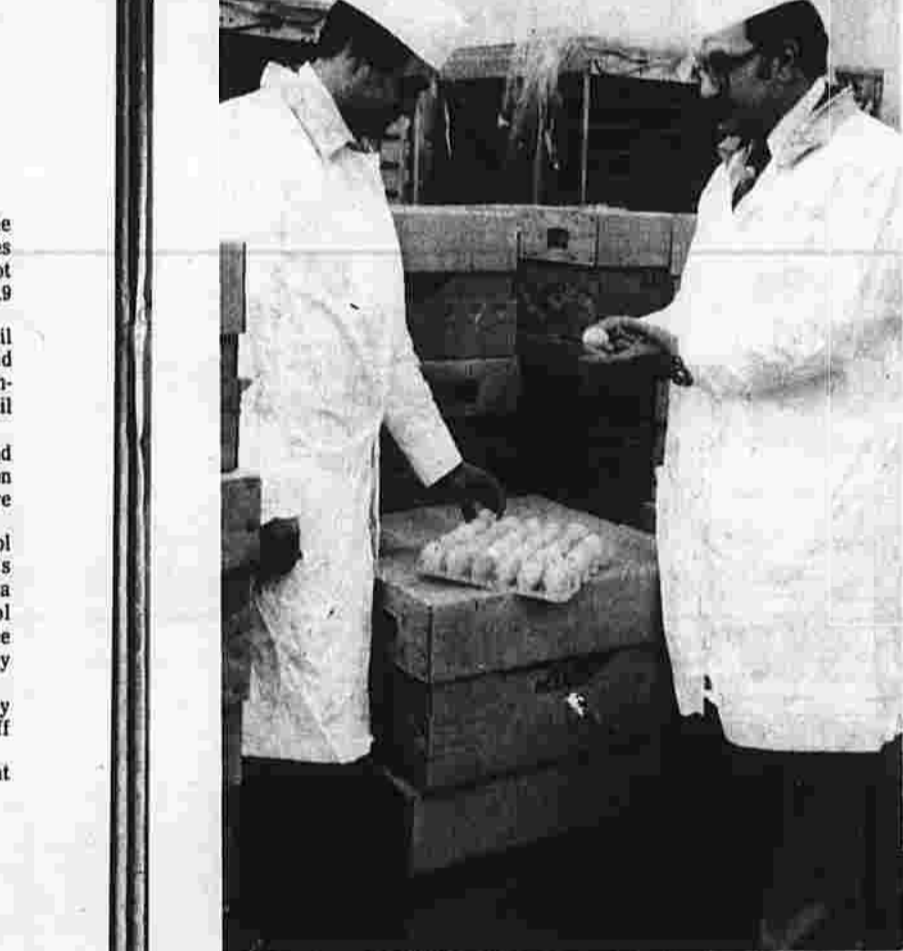

A wrong assumption about the water level at Three Mile Island was a major factor in the March 28 accident, the nation's worst.

Mattison said that reactors granted construction permits in or before 1976 were exempted from new safety requirements. He said it was possible Three Mile Island unit 2, which started operating commercially Dec. 30, could have been active 40 years without the backup "containment isolation system" required of newer plants.

Touring Perdue Farms Vet, Nutritionists Give Chicks TLC

By BETTY RYDER

"A chicken in every pot," was a Republican campaign slogan in 1882 and Frank Perdue is still in favor of it — if it's a Perdue chicken.

The 58-year-old chairman and chief executive officer of Perdue Farms, Inc., with facilities in Virginia, Maryland and North Carolina, was presented with 50 chickens to care for when he was just a child. Obviously, his first venture into the business was a success because today, his four commercial hatcheries have the ability to hatch more than 2 million chicks every week.

His dad, Arthur, started the family business in 1920 when he paid $5 for 50 leghorn chickens, built a coop, and entered the table egg industry.

During a recent tour of the Perdue Accomac (Va.) Processing Plant, representatives of various supermarkets throughout Connecticut and Western Massachusetts, together with members of the news media, saw, first-hand, the unique process initiated by Perdue.

At the plant, 34,000 birds (chickens) are processed per hour. Special areas for removing remaining feathers are set up. Each eviscerating line has three U.S. Department of Agriculture inspectors assigned to it. Every bird that is processed is checked for wholesomeness at this point. House Inspection Stations are located at the end of each eviscerating line. At this location every bird is inspected to be sure it is "ready-to-eat."

After many other phases of processing, the birds are graded, stuffed with hand-wrapped giblets, and enter the wing tagging station. After receiving its wing tag, the bird is automatically sized by weight and dropped into a packing bin. A quality control person is assigned to these sizing scales to constantly monitor for incorrect sizes. Each packer marks the box with his number and the line number so that information generated in Quality Control checks can be traced to a specific line.

From this point, the box of chickens is conveyed to the scales where it is electronically weighed. At least 15 pounds of ice is put on each box of chickens to help maintain low temperatures for a longer shelf-life.

During a visit to the cut-up department, whole birds are cut and graded to Perdue parts specifications.

In order to assure proper nutrition for the birds, Perdue has a soybean processing and grain storage division which relies on the farmers of the Eastern Shore for 18 million bushels of grain during a growing season, nearly all of which is required to produce a year's supply of feed.

There are three grain receiving facilities in Maryland and Virginia from which grain is shipped by barge or truck to Salisbury and the newest facility in Cofield, N.C.

Of special interest, was a meeting with the Perdue nutritionists who using computer feedback on the quality of the flock processed, adjust the feed formulas weekly.

There are three teams of technicians who operate an analytical laboratory around-the-clock; an average of 267 tests are run every 24 hours aimed at maintaining the nutritional balance of each and every flock.

As one of the nutritionists explained, "If a particular flock is less or not gaining weight as

CSEA Hints Job Action If Negotiators Delay

HARTFORD (UPI) — Connecticut's largest state union, which Friday hinted it might take some kind of job action July 1 if state negotiators don't speed up contract talks.

"The state negotiators haven't been really given free rein to negotiate," said Edward Caffrey, executive director of the 16,000-member Connecticut State Employees Association. The union's contract expires administratively on June 30.

"Apparently the only thing the state responds to is a threat of confrontation," he said. "If that's what it takes, then July 1 we'll take that back to our membership and see how they feel about it."

Caffrey referred to the recent threatened job action by Local 1169 of the New England Hospital and Health Care Workers' union, which prompted the state into round-the-clock talks.

The CSEA, one of several bargaining agents for Connecticut's 30,000 state employees, recently sent a letter to Gov. Ella Grasso asking her to make the state's negotiators get on the ball.

"Your appointed negotiators have still not seen fit, either through ineffectiveness or by direction, to commence real negotiations with the CSEA's representatives to the bargaining table," Caffrey said in the May 29 letter.

Mrs. Grasso said at a news conference Friday that she had just received the letter and referred the matter to Administrative Services Commissioner Eli Freedman.

"They're (state negotiators) getting orders from someone up on high because it's obvious they're very programmed," Caffrey said. "The negotiators are acting like robots."

"We're not threatening anything at this point. But the Legislature adjourns next week and we don't want to go to force in the negotiations. It's been stall, stall, stall. It's very frustrating, tiring and unproductive."

The CSEA is negotiating nine different contracts with the state. Among the union's members are state police, clerical workers, fire fighters, security guards in state institutions, engineering employees and two education units.

Legislator Wants Faults Made Public by N-Plants

HARTFORD (UPI) — Records of nuclear power plant problems which might endanger employees should be made public, especially in light of the Three Mile Island nuclear accident, Rep. John Anderson, D-Newtown, said Friday.

There were 11 incidents at Northeast Utilities' Millstone I atomic power plant in the first three months of this year, Anderson said. The problems were filed with the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission, as "Reportable Occurrences."

The Millstone reports showed jammed or improperly inserted fuel rods; gas turbine generators failing to complete their starting sequence; fractured gear casings; computer omissions of surveillance schedules and faulty pressure switches, he said.

Anderson said the reports also showed three of four reactor shutdowns during the three-month period were forced because of equipment failures or mechanical problems.

"Northeast Utilities has taken measures to correct these problems at Millstone I," he said.

But he said similar problems also were detected this year at the Connecticut Yankee nuclear power plant.

The Millstone plants are in Waterford. The Yankee generator is in East Haddam.

"It's clear to me that nuclear power plants are not immune from human errors and equipment failures and that, in fact, these are common problems," Anderson said.

The last major accident at a Connecticut nuclear power plant involved hydrogen explosions at Millstone I in December 1977.

The Legislature this year passed a bill which would place a moratorium on future nuclear power plant construction in Connecticut until a method is found to dispose of nuclear wastes. The proposal excludes Millstone III, which is under construction.

Hill White you're reading this column, our travelers are pumping their way closer to home from their three-day visit to the Nation's Capital.

Speaking of trips, come Monday and two buses will be off and running for five days in Wildwood Crest, New Jersey. The buses will leave at 7 a.m. so all the travelers should arrive at the center around 6:30 a.m. We will have your baggage tags ready for you when you arrive.

O.K. the action here starts with our Wednesday morning pinocle games when we had 40 players and the lucky winners were Paul Ottone, 58; Marjorie McLean, 52; Sam Schors, 56; Lillian Lewis, 54; Bob Hill, 54; Rene Maire, 54; Floyd Pest, 53; Elta Hammond, 53; George Last, 53; Mina Reuther, 52; Edna Farmer, 52; Betty Grant, 52.

Then in the afternoon we had four tables playing bridge and the lucky prize winners were Marge McLean, 5,030; N. Flanagan, 5,020; Tom Regan, 4,280; Jack Oliver, 4,180.

We would like to extend our condolences to Alice Jarvis Magnusson whose husband, Clifford, passed last week.

Things here at the center keep rolling along, and we are going along very well at the school, but we sure could use more help up there. Right now we have pretty well completed the scratching and scraping the windows on the outside. Now we could use help in repairing the window frames. So although we keep asking for men, we are now ready for women who have that paint brush touch.

The Furnishing Committee wants me to remind you to come on up with some articles for their super big tag sale and if you can't deliver them to our center call our office 647-3211, and we'll arrange to pick them up. However, we won't make any pickups this coming week, but if you stack them in a corner, we'll get to them soon after that.

By the way, our regular meals program comes to an end on Friday, then after a week's layoff, we will be serving once again. Our great friends from UNICO have come through again with a substantial donation so we can keep our meals going for another five weeks. We really appreciate UNICO adopting us and the way they have and thank all the members very much.

Every once in a while we mention having name tags available and hope that most every member will pick one up. Right now the name pins some have ordered are ready to be picked up and we ask you to please pick yours up soon.

News for Senior Citizens

By WALLY FORTIN

Hill White you're reading this column, our travelers are pumping their way closer to home from their three-day visit to the Nation's Capital.

Speaking of trips, come Monday and two buses will be off and running for five days in Wildwood Crest, New Jersey. The buses will leave at 7 a.m. so all the travelers should arrive at the center around 6:30 a.m. We will have your baggage tags ready for you when you arrive.

O.K. the action here starts with our Wednesday morning pinocle games when we had 40 players and the lucky winners were Paul Ottone, 58; Marjorie McLean, 52; Sam Schors, 56; Lillian Lewis, 54; Bob Hill, 54; Rene Maire, 54; Floyd Pest, 53; Elta Hammond, 53; George Last, 53; Mina Reuther, 52; Edna Farmer, 52; Betty Grant, 52.

Then in the afternoon we had four tables playing bridge and the lucky prize winners were Marge McLean, 5,030; N. Flanagan, 5,020; Tom Regan, 4,280; Jack Oliver, 4,180.

We would like to extend our condolences to Alice Jarvis Magnusson whose husband, Clifford, passed last week.

Things here at the center keep rolling along, and we are going along very well at the school, but we sure could use more help up there. Right now we have pretty well completed the scratching and scraping the windows on the outside. Now we could use help in repairing the window frames. So although we keep asking for men, we are now ready for women who have that paint brush touch.

The Furnishing Committee wants me to remind you to come on up with some articles for their super big tag sale and if you can't deliver them to our center call our office 647-3211, and we'll arrange to pick them up. However, we won't make any pickups this coming week, but if you stack them in a corner, we'll get to them soon after that.

By the way, our regular meals program comes to an end on Friday, then after a week's layoff, we will be serving once again. Our great friends from UNICO have come through again with a substantial donation so we can keep our meals going for another five weeks. We really appreciate UNICO adopting us and the way they have and thank all the members very much.

Every once in a while we mention having name tags available and hope that most every member will pick one up. Right now the name pins some have ordered are ready to be picked up and we ask you to please pick yours up soon.

Thomas O'Neill wishes to thank the Entertainment Committee for their help in making the Bowling Banquet the best ever, especially Helen Burford, Jack Jaskowski, Celeste King, Ida Cormier, Peg O'Neill, Loretta Jaskowski, Herb Patterson; also Burt Gloss and Ginger Youkas from the Bowling Alleys who did a wonderful job.

Here's Joe's Corner: First the prize winners for the golf tournament with our league players learning up with the Senior Swingers from the country club. The winning team was Tony Golas, Frank Watraba, Walt Ferguson, and Ted Flodzik with a 71. Runners-up honors went to Earl Anderson, Reg Curtis, Bill Castelluccio and Stan Mioganski with a 72. Other prize winners will be contacted by Joe. The raffle winners were Jim Gleason, Nils Shoning, Joe Quinn, Ralph Frank, Frank Traygis and Tony Golas. They too, will be contacted by Joe.

O.K. Remember that June 9 is the big Senior Fishing Derby at Sautlers Pond. Let's everyone join in the fun. You don't have to be an expert fisher person to participate. It's free and there are lots of prizes to be awarded.

Speaking of fishing, there will be a free fly-tying class here at the center this Tuesday evening starting at 7:15

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Good Husbandry

DEAR ABBY: I notice that the first of your TEN COMMANDMENTS FOR HUSBANDS is: "This shall put your wife before thy mother, thy father, thy daughter and thy son, for she is thy lifelong companion." Abby, does your husband put you before his mother? And does your son put his wife before you?

CURIOUS IN N.J.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has promised to abide by your decision. Our problem is his snoring. He starts to snore the minute he does off, and he snores like a bull. I have put up with his snoring for the seven years we've shared the same bed. Not once have I nudged him or asked him to roll over because I didn't want to disturb his much-needed sleep.

However, I complain bitterly when he insists on falling asleep in the living room while I'm trying to watch TV. When I complain he says he enjoys doing it with the TV on, that it's his living room, too, and I am being unreasonable.

I say that he is being unreasonable to subject me to his snoring while I'm trying to watch TV. What is your verdict?

BOTHERED IN BELLEVUE

DEAR BOTHERED: I hereby declare the living room off limits for snoring. If hubby enjoys dozing off with the TV on, let him get a portable TV for the bedroom and snore to his heart's content.

Furthermore, if you continue to snore in silence every night while your husband snores like a bull, I order a psychiatrist's examination for you (and your husband, if you're a martyr). Get some earplugs. Court adjourned.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 23 and my husband is 31. We've been married for two years and have no children. He has a small business and I have a full-time job. We have separate checking accounts and separate lives. I refuse to discuss his business or income with me.

He is never at home at night until he has cooled, and on weekends he's never at home even in the daytime. I get so fed up with being alone, I left him once. When I try to talk to him about our problems, it helps for a few days, then he goes back to his old ways. What should I do?

LEFT ALONE

DEAR LEFT: Nowhere in your letter do you mention "why." Why did you marry? Surely not to have separate lives. As I see it, your husband enjoys being married as long as he can live like a bachelor. If you want a real marriage, free yourself from this empty, in-name-only relationship and find a man who wants to be a full-time husband.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "MARRIAGE IN TROUBLE IN VENTURA": Your letter tells me that your husband is using the television to avoid talking about what's really bothering him. You need to talk honestly to each other. Open up a dialogue with love - not in anger.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet, "How To Be Popular: How To Have Fun, How To Be A Star, How To Be A Hero, Self-addressed, stamped (25 cent) envelope to Abby, 132 Lady Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Bonds with someone you already deeply care about will be strengthened this coming year. The increased devotion, multi-plied shared, will be exhilarating. You're likely to end in rationalizations today, but certain that you will write or say in any way.

AGNIUS (Jan. 28-Feb. 19) Be very selective today regarding your personal affairs with a long, steady, careful how you conduct yourself. Be sure everything out in the open.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Should you find it necessary to give anyone verbal or written instructions today, be certain that you write or say in any way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Don't do things for other today just because they're able to do something for you in return. This isn't your style. You need to do something for you in return. This isn't your style. You need to do something for you in return.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Try to keep your budget in balance today. It will be the small expenses that get things out of control.

STALKING TIGER

Harassed by an army of searchers, this Bengal tiger, accidentally released from its circus cage, pauses for a drink of water in part one of a two-part action drama, "A Tiger Walks," on NBC's "The Wonderful World of Disney," Sunday, June 3.

No one said fighting crime was easy, and when a merciless mummy backs Spiderwoman into a corner, Spiderwoman uses her wall-crawling skills to stay out of reach on ABC's animated adventure series, "Spiderwoman," to premiere Saturday, Sept. 8.

Dial-ogue

TWIN TRAP — I want to know if it was one girl or two in "World of Disney" show "The Parent Trap." Also, how old is she. Has she played in any other roles? — Susan Mannis, Dandridge, Tenn.

You were probably not even born when the actress of whom you speak began acting. Haley Mills, now 33, played both parts, through the wonders of split-screen photography. She began her film career in 1959 in "Tiger Bay." She won a special Oscar in 1960 for "Pollyanna," perhaps her most famous role. "The Parent Trap," was made the following year. She went on to make numerous motion pictures, both here and in her native England. You may know her sister, Juliet Mills, who was the nanny in "Nanny and the Professor."

WILD DAUGHTER — I know Robert Conrad's daughter was supposed to be on "The Wild, Wild West Revisited," which I greatly enjoyed, but I couldn't figure out who she was. Can you help? — Mrs. K. Mosger, Richmond, Va. If you blinked you might have missed her. Conrad's daughter, Joan, actually played two brief parts. She was the Secret Service boss's (Harry Morgan) secretary, and was also one of the horsewomen seen from a distance in the segment where the assorted foreign agents come galloping towards Loveless's compound. Joan also supplied four of the horses used in the show.

ENDANGERED SPECIES

Simon Ward and Susan Anspach, as Jock and Betty Leslie-Melville, star in "The Last Giraffe," a true-life dramatic special centering on a young couple's efforts to save the endangered Rothschild giraffe, Thursday, June 7, on CBS.

Movie debut

Actress Cheryl Ladd will make her dramatic television movie debut on ABC as she stars in "A New Start," a straightforward look at the growing problem of child abuse in America. Robert Ulrich co-stars with Ms. Ladd as her husband in a role that is an equally dramatic departure from the course of his career. Ms. Ladd, a parent of a small child, is an activist in the rehabilitation war against child abuse.

Moscow games

NBC Sports personalities Dick Enberg, Bruce Jenner, Donna de Varona, O.J. Simpson and Bryant Gumbel will be among the hosts for NBC Sports' coverage of the 1980 Olympic games in Moscow. In addition to the broad-caster assignments, over 250 historical, instructional and profile pieces of athletes will be presented.

The actual sets of "Sesame Street" will be reassembled inside the Smithsonian Institute as part of this summer's exhibit.

How to Get to Washington's Sesame Street

By JOAN GEOGHEGAN

Big Bird and Oscar the Grouch are going to Washington, D.C., for the summer. No, they're not lobbying the Environmental Protection Agency because pollution is endangering large birds. Instead, they'll be entertaining visitors who have come to the Smithsonian Institute to view a special "Sesame Street" exhibit.

From June 1-Sept. 3, the actual "Sesame Street" sets, Bob and Mr. Hooper and the two muppets will help acquaint the public with the innovative children's program and the contributions it has made to preschool education during its 10-year lifespan. Carl Scheele, curator of the Department of Community Life at the museum, comments that "Sesame Street" "has had a significant impact on the quality of preschool education in a medium primarily associated with entertainment."

Two films will accompany the exhibit. The first is a walking tour of "Sesame Street" with actor James Earl Jones; the second is the film made by the Whitney Museum of American Art to accompany their "Sesame Street" exhibit this last January. Joan Ganz Cooney, the president of Children's Television Workshop, is the innovative wizard who started "Sesame Street." She's flattered that her show is being honored — the first television show to be feted at the Smithsonian.

She started "Sesame Street" because she believed all children could benefit from a preschool program and because there was such a dearth of high-quality children's programming. Feedback from teachers has convinced Ms. Cooney that the show is reaching its audience. "Kindergarten teachers have to hit the ground running," she says. "The teachers write and say that, because of 'Sesame Street,' children come into the classroom knowing the alphabet, numbers and reading skills."

Another innovation on the CTW drawing board is a science program for children 8 to 12. A drama, mystery and documentary format will be used.

"Science has been cut back in the schools because of the back-to-basics movement," Ms. Cooney says. "CTW wants to fill the void."

"Sesame Street" is unique in that its reruns are as instructive as the new programs. "The Electric Company" is in reruns now, and children watch it every day.

According to Ms. Cooney, however, children pick up on trends in TV. They get bored with the older shows.

"We change the curriculum every year," she says. "There will be more health and nutrition spots in the upcoming year." Also, the first five "Sesame Street" shows, which will air in November, were shot in Puerto Rico. The location was chosen to enhance the "Sesame Street" commitment to cultural diversity. She admits that "Sesame Street" has influenced two other quality programs for preschoolers, too: "Captain Kangaroo" and "Mr. Rogers." Both shows have incorporated more educational facets into their formats.

However, Ms. Cooney compliments both shows and insists that neither "Sesame Street" nor CTW's show for ages 6-8, "The Electric Company," is in competition with either "Captain Kangaroo" or "Mr. Rogers."

CTW has influenced network programming too. ABC has "Schoolhouse Rock," and health and nutritional spots will be part of the Saturday morning line-up this fall. Also, the networks will cut back the number of commercials shown during Saturday morning programming.

WILD RYAN — I'm ready to kill my husband. He insists he saw Ryan O'Neal in the Western movie, "The Wild Bunch." I say he's nuts. He says he vividly recalls O'Neal and William Holden in the movie together. I still say he's nuts. What do you say? — Karen Falson, Tri Cities, Wash.

I say he's not as nuts as you say he is. Ryan O'Neal was not in "The Wild Bunch," but he did co-star with William Holden in another bloody, but beautifully-photographed Western, "The Wild Rovers," which is where the confusion probably arose.

NAME THAT MACRAE — For some reason, I had it in my head that Meredith Birney Baxter, who plays on "Family," was Meredith MacRae's daughter. I was recently told I was wrong. I would like to know if I am. — P.G. Bluffs, Ill.

Afraid so. First off, it's Meredith Baxter Birney. Secondly, Meredith MacRae is Meredith MacRae. As for Meredith Baxter Birney, she is the daughter of Whitney Blake, who played Dorothy Baxter on "Hazel" for many years. The Baxters get a bit confusing, but I think you'll be able to straighten it all out.

From News Room to Board Room

Julian Goodman Pioneered TV at NBC

By DAN LEWIS

In the days when Julian Goodman first became associated with broadcast journalism, radio was the important medium. That goes back to 1945, when Goodman, fresh out of the U.S. Army, joined NBC as news writer for its Washington, D.C., station, the base of the news operation.

Thirty-four years later, he is about to retire, behind him a glorious career that paralleled the growth of network television in this country. He rose from a news writer on that Washington radio station, owned by NBC, to become the company's top officer, chairman of the board and chief operating officer before he decided to retire.

In those intervening years, Goodman played an integral part in the growth of television. He moved from radio to small-screen journalism during television's infancy, strode through the network's news division and into the overall direction of the company, as executive vice president, president and then chairman of the board. He also became a member of the board of the parent company, RCA.

Goodman was an innovator in news programming and reporting. He produced the first radio broadcasts from Congress in 1951 and developed the "instant news specials."

He directed the filmed NBC News reports of the 1952 political convention, and produced the second of the "Great Debates" between John F. Kennedy and Richard Nixon during their presidential campaign.

His administrative qualities, as well as production skills earned him promotions, and in 1965, he moved from the News division into the network operation as chief administrative officer.

He subsequently relinquished his post as chief operating officer to Herbert Schlosser two years ago, but Schlosser was removed a year later, to be replaced by Fred Silverman. Goodman continued with the company as Chairman of the NBC Executive Committee last October, but then decided not to renew his contract when it expired May 31.

All has not been harmonious in recent years at NBC, which explains Goodman's decision to leave the company although far from retirement age. He is only 56 years old.

Nor does he have any intentions of retiring. He may play some more golf, which he loves. He has already started a book, which he will concentrate on completing.

He also intends to continue in broadcasting, but he is leaving the options open. Very much in demand as a speaker, he will travel to Washington, and then New Orleans, in the first week after he leaves NBC.

"I am retiring from the company," he emphasizes, not from working.

He leaves network television convinced that it is a stronger medium today than ever before, but realizes that there is room for considerable improvement, too.

"The entertainment aspects of television have improved," he declares, "far more than television is given credit for. Television occupies so much time. It appeals to mass audiences, and shouldn't be criticized for presenting mass-audience shows. We do a lot of good things."

But he says he would like to see more products on television that appeal to the special audiences. In this respect, he says, "I'm not that opposed to Paley's suggestion" that the three networks get together and agree on special quality programming in specified time periods. Goodman looks back to what he considers the milestones in television, events that had the most impact.

"First of all, there was color," he recalls. "Gen. Sarnoff (founder of RCA) was willing to invest, really, the future of RCA."

RCA won the war of color television. "After that, there were a number of technical milestones through the 1950s," Goodman remembers, "naming satellites and minicameras."

But television really came of age in the coverage of the Kennedy assassination.

In a strange way, Goodman reflects, the country came together. He credits television.

"I think television literally held the nation together. Everyone watched television," he says, recalling, too, that he didn't sleep from Friday to Monday during that dark period of American history. "Sunday night, we put the cameras in the rotunda of the Capitol (where Kennedy's casket lay) and we had only music in the background as mourners filed by through the night. People at home awoke, and they knew if they turned on their set, the world was still there. It gave them a certain sense of security as they saw people passing the coffin and heard only music."

Another, more recent milestone, is the development of satellite transmission. "In 1977, we were able to take 220 incoming feeds at one time — signals from the satellites."

Goodman sees cable expanding, but he doesn't see it as doomsday for free television. "I don't see it knocking out free TV," he notes, predicting that as it grows, it will face regulations. "I don't see Congress letting people be charged for what they now get for free."

"Galactica" just didn't pull in the ratings necessary to warrant its enormous cost. The movie now making its way to neighborhood theatres is a strung-together assortment of series episodes. It's nothing fans of the series haven't already seen, only now it's in surround.
