Whaling Ban

LONDON (UPI) — The International Whaling Commission, brushing aside fierce opposition from Japan and the Soviet Union, has agreed on an indefinite ban on factory ship whaling. The U.S. delegate predicted other major conservation victories during the weeklong session.

"This will be the greatest series of conservation measures we have had," said U.S. delegation chief Richard A. Frank following the landmark decision by the 23-nation commission Wednesday.

Frank said new measures are likely to include creating a "whaling sanctuary" in the Indian Ocean, slashing by 35 percent to 50 percent the current 20,000 quota on killing whales and imposing a ban on importation by member countries of whale meat caught by "pirate" whalers.

Bad Weather

Harsh weather killed one person and injured at least four others Wednesday in the South, and rain in the Detroit area created a scene "like the evacuation from Vietnam."

Severe thunderstorms that produced tornadoes and heavy rains threatened the Dakotas today.

Tropical storm Bob, blamed for the collapse of a metal roof that killed a man in Lafayette, La., crumbled into a large thunderstorm as it crawled northward, dumping rain on Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama.

Bob was the Atlantic zone's first hurricane of the season and the first to bear a masculine name.

Four people were injured Wednesday by a tornado that touched down in the Alabama community of Red Level, authorities said. Police said the twister knocked down utility poles and trees and caused extensive property damage.

Nearly 3 inches of rain poured down on parts of Wayne County, Mich., producing what one official called the worst local flooding in more than 10 years.

Death Photos

MIAMI (UPI) — A judge has ruled that a series of color photographs of two murdered sorority sisters will not "inflammate" the jury against Theodore Bundy, but reserved judgment on one, which he said is in poor taste. Bundy is charged with bludgeoning-strangulation killings of the girls in their Tallahassee sorority house.

The judge said Wednesday his initial reaction "as a parent" was to withhold the photos to spare the victims' families, but noted that they are necessary for the prosecution to determine the severity of the crime.

Hotel Blaze

SARAGOSSA, Spain (UPI) — Flames engulfed the plush Hotel Corona de Aragon early today, killing at least 50 people and injuring scores more. The injured included the widow and daughter of Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

The civil government of Saragossa reported the death toll had reached 50 and that 81 injured were admitted to four hospitals in the northern Spanish city, 160 miles west of Barcelona.

Among the guests in the city's most luxurious hotel were Carmen Polo Franco, the 79-year-old wife of the late Spanish dictator. She was in Saragossa to attend the graduation of her grandson, Cristobal Martinez Bordiu Franco, from the General Military Academy.

Determined President

Appearing grim and determined, Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza gestures as he speaks in front of a portrait of his father. Somoza addressed the Liberal Labor Party in the Bunker Complex in Managua Wednesday. He told the politicians he would not resign and called on all to resist the rebels. (UPI photo)

Somoza Rejects Offer by Rebels

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — The Sandinista rebel junta offered to safeguard the lives of Anastasio Somoza's followers if the Nicaraguan ruler resigned but Somoza rejected the offer today and declared: "Nuts to you."

A Sandinista communique issued Wednesday in San Jose, Costa Rica, said the rebel government promised to guarantee the lives of guard officers and privates and pledged safe conduct passes out of Nicaragua for those military and government officials "not guilty of serious crimes against the people."

In a telephone interview with UPI early today from his windowless, fortified bunker in Managua, Somoza said, "They (the junta) are crazy because that (the plan) does not give anybody any guarantees in Nicaragua. So they guarantee exile, which is not within the constitutional rights with which we live today."

"No, I don't accept it. This shows their colors... What I can say to that is what (U.S. Gen. Anthony C.) McAuliffe said in Bastogne: 'Nuts to you!'"

In a move indicating a softening of opposition to U.S. peace initiatives, the rebels said they plan to discuss proposals with the representatives of the United States and American countries today.

The provisional government or "Junta of the National Reconstruction" has been meeting in San Jose with U.S. special ambassador William Bowdler as well as representatives of the pro-Sandinista governments of Costa Rica, Venezuela and Panama.

The junta has apparently decided it can be more flexible because its troops control most of Nicaragua and are within striking distance of Managua, Somoza's last holdout.

"We are studying the political and diplomatic situation to see whether our military position lets us be more flexible without hurting our principles or endangering our victory," a communique read over rebel Radio Sandino said.

Somoza has offered to resign and leave the country if the United States can guarantee the institutional survival of his national guard and Liberal Party.

The junta's new plan reaffirmed intentions to dissolve the guard, replacing it with "a new army," but made no mention of the future of Somoza's Liberal Party.

The Sandinistas have rejected an American peace proposal, which called for massive reconstructive aid to the rebels in exchange for the addition of moderates to the leftist-dominated junta.

Skylab Ends With Dazzle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A dazzling, multi-colored starburst marked the final moments of Skylab, the derelict space station whose suspenseful demise rained hundreds of fiery pieces out of the night sky over western Australia.

Early reports Wednesday said the bulk of the space junk fell into the Indian Ocean, but a later report from Air Force space trackers — and excited eyewitness accounts from the spot — said most of the dying space laboratory fell on a sparsely inhabited area of Australia near Perth, whose residents had turned on their lights as a beacon for U.S. orbiting astronauts early in the space program.

The exact time of touchdown may never be known, but came between 12:30 p.m. and 1 p.m. EDT — up to a half-hour later than the technicians predicted.

The Australian government said there had been no reports of injury or damage from the crash of the largest, man-made object in space.

But President Carter sent a message of apology, and offered assistance.

"I was concerned to learn that fragments of Skylab may have landed in Australia," he said. "I am relieved to hear your government's preliminary assessment that no injuries have resulted. Nevertheless, I have instructed the Department of State to be in touch with your government immediately and to offer any assistance you may need."

The North American Air Defense Command, which monitored Skylab's demise, said in a report Wednesday night that the impact point of the heaviest pieces, including two estimated at 2 tons each, was in the Cabinet post.

general vicinity of Kalgoorlie, a southwestern Australia city with a population of 20,000.

Police in Esperance, 450 miles southeast of Perth, and Kalgoorlie, 370 miles northeast of Perth, began searching for debris following reports from residents that they had seen Skylab breaking up at close range.

"If you can imagine a train on fire with bits of fire burning all the way down the carriage, that was what it was like," said John Bradley Smith, an employee at Perth's Bickley Observatory.

Pilot Bill Anderson, flying 28,000 feet high 130 miles northeast of Perth, described the show in a report to the mission control center in Houston.

"It had lights and a distinct blue glow, almost like aircraft headlights. I had the impression it had a bubble shape."

"As it descended further it changed from a bright blue to an almost orange red and you would see the breakup starting to occur. As the breakup continued, it finished up as a very bright orange ball in the front and a remainder in the behind giving off sparks and you could almost detect the metal or whatever it was falling down to Earth."

Two Soviet cosmonauts, meanwhile, whirled above it all only four days away from setting a new manned spaceflight endurance record. On Saturday they will break the old manned spaceflight record of 139 days, 14 hours and 48 minutes.

It was the medical experience gained by flights lasting up to 84 days aboard Skylab six years ago that helped pave the way for the Soviet duration missions.

Carter Summit Talk Extends to Weekend

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter is stretching his Camp David domestic summit into the weekend, with the resignation of Energy Secretary James Schlesinger and a top-level shakeup reported to be in the making.

A White House aide said Wednesday Schlesinger is going to resign because he has become a "political liability" to the president. Press secretary Jody Powell called the story "uninformed speculation," but refused to deny it flatly.

Several aides indicated Carter plans to make an address to the nation Sunday night, outlining his program for dealing with the energy crisis and economic woes of Americans.

Powell said Carter told a group of labor, business and urban leaders Wednesday morning that "we do face an economic downturn and unemployment is going to increase although nowhere near the level of 1975-76."

He said the president based his pessimistic forecast on economic indicators that were to be made public today.

The presidential spokesman said Carter is canceling his schedule for the rest of the week and will remain at the mountaintop retreat, meeting with staffers.

He also will take time out to reflect on the advice he has solicited from some 140 public figures summoned for meetings since he retreated to Camp David July 3, the day before he abruptly canceled a speech scheduled for television and radio.

In addition to accepting Schlesinger's resignation, an aide said, Carter will make other staff changes — making top aide Hamilton Jordan his chief of staff and establishing "cleaner lines of authority" for press secretary Jody Powell and chief domestic adviser Stuart Eizenstat.

The aide said Schlesinger "wants to resign; he wants to get out."

"It's a shame," the aide said. "He has done a good job and the people in the industry think so. But he has become a political liability."

Schlesinger's No. 1 deputy, John O'Leary, has submitted his resignation to take effect Sept. 4. Both vacancies will give Carter a chance to appoint new leadership to the controversial department.

A number of congressmen have called for Schlesinger's resignation on grounds he has failed to put urgent energy matters into focus. He has twice submitted his resignation, according to Powell, but has been persuaded in the past by Carter to stay in the Cabinet post.

John Ehrlichman Changes His Mind

John Ehrlichman came out of Arizona's Safford Federal Prison with changed ideas about the illegal Mexican aliens with whom he was housed while doing time for his Watergate role. In the August issue of Esquire magazine, in New York, he says they became his clients, then his friends - and now they're something of a crusade.

Ehrlichman calls them "disciples of some Mexican equivalent of Horatio Alger... mostly good family folk who embody the work ethic." He blames labor leaders for the immigration crackdown that jails them when they cross the border in search of work - says, "A Mexican work force willing to deliver hard work at a minimum wage is the deadly enemy of the kind of unionism that stands for less work and more pay."

Apart from That

California Gov. ful he would if he could. Says he, in Sacramento, "I'm somewhat flattered by it. I don't find the governor of Nevada or the governor of New York the subject of all this attention."

Reggie's Return

Glitter-rocker Elton John startled fans in 1976 by announcing he would do no more concerts. At the time, John was a colossus of the pop music world. But he had recorded three albums in four months, spent six years on the road, and his latest recordings were getting a poor reception.

But following his successful tour of Russia, Reggie Dwight - his real name - says the adrenalin is flowing again and he'll launch a 46-concert tour of the United States in Phoenix, Ariz. Sept. 19.

Belated Payday

For the past year, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers has been trying to track down Big Joe Lee Williams. On Wednesday it found him in Nashville, Tenn., and handed him $3,000 in royalties accrued years ago when he was one of the foremost blues writers and singers of the era.

Williams, who says he's "at least 75," turned out such hits in his heyday as "Baby, Please Don't Go," "Highway Stomp," and "Wild Cow Moan." Said he as he picked up his long overdue check - discovered in an ASCAP audit a year ago - "You just made my day."

Glimpses

Former President Richard Nixon leaves tonight for Mexico City for a visit with the Shah of Iran who is in exile there. But Reynolds is in London, costarring with Lesley-Anne Down and David Niven in "Jack of Diamonds." Martin Landau and Mike Connors are in Norfolk, Va., filming an ABC-TV disaster flick called "Amusement Park."

Skylab crashed to earth Wednesday scattering tons of glowing debris over the night skies of Australia. The heaviest pieces fell in the Indian Ocean but the flight (line-patterned arrow) carried debris into West Australia where sightings were reported in Albany, Perth, Katsoriele and Esperance. Indications were that debris continued to head inland possibly into the uninhabited Simpson Desert. (UPI photo)

Longer Gas Lines Seen As July Comes to End

Town To Cut Gas Use; Mileage Rebate Hiked

MANCHESTER - Town departments will receive less gas and employees will receive more money per mile traveled based on the first energy-related steps taken by Town Manager Robert Weiss. Weiss and members of his staff met Tuesday to review what steps to take to reduce the town's consumption of gasoline in light of recent gas supply and cost problems.

South Windsor Can Join Wheelchair Bus Program

SOUTH WINDSOR - The Greater Hartford Transit District has given the town an opportunity to participate in a program which requires the town to pay only 15 percent of the total cost of a 16-passenger, two wheelchair van. This program may make it possible for the town to acquire another mini-bus to service the elderly and handicapped. Sara Hensley director of the social services department said the Operating and maintenance costs are reimbursed to the town on a 45-50 percent basis.

Official Advises Doctors On Letters for Travelers

MANCHESTER - The town's health director, Dr. Alice J. Turek, has sent information to town physicians concerning smallpox waiver letters to travelers. She said that, based on relative risk information from the World Health Organization, the Center for Disease Control has said that health care providers should issue a smallpox waiver letter rather than vaccinate people who are traveling in countries that still require smallpox vaccinations.

State Gasoline Dealers Plan to Join Shutdown

HARTFORD (UPI) - A representative of Connecticut's 1200 gasoline dealers says they will join a nationwide shutdown Monday unless the federal government acts to raise profit margins. Retailers want the federal regulations simplified and modified to allow for a basic 30 percent profit margin. Wayne Kontishek, president of the Connecticut Gasoline Retailers Association, said Wednesday.

Evidence Defends Falby

BRIDGEPORT (UPI) - The defense continued to present evidence that Edward Falby, on trial for the death of 9-year-old Kari Jo Spivey, was not mentally responsible for his actions at the time of the slaying. A Yale University psychiatrist testified Wednesday that Falby suffers from brain damage which could have caused him to kill the Sparkleland child last summer.

Waste Cleanup Goal

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Environmental Protection Agency says the clean up of 151 potentially hazardous chemical waste sites around the country has become its "highest agency priority." EPA announced Wednesday it has found 90 new sites across the country where possibly hazardous wastes have been dumped - bringing to 151 the number of sites on EPA's list.

Action Tabled On TBC Role

MANCHESTER - The Town Board of Directors Tuesday tabled action on a request that the Town Building Committee oversee construction of the water treatment plant.

Director Thomas Connors moved that the matter be tabled. He praised the work of the Building Committee but said he felt professional administrators, such as the town manager and director of public works, should oversee the project.

Connors said the building itself is just a shell enclosing the heart and most of the expense of the project - the water treatment equipment.

Jay Giles, director of public works, had requested that the Building Committee be appointed to oversee the plant construction. The committee does oversee all school buildings, but it must be appointed by the board to any other project.

The board agreed to table action on the proposal.

Coventry Sets Housing Check

COVENTRY - Local and state officials were to inspect the town's housing project for the elderly, today, and if final approval is given, tenants could be moving in within the next few days.

The 40 units have all been rented and there are about 20 people on a waiting list. With the help of federal subsidies, tenants will pay no more than 25 percent of their income for rent and utilities. This could mean that some tenants will pay rents as low as $20 a month.

The total cost of the project is about $912,000 and construction started just about a year ago on land on Main Street.

The complex contains single-story buildings, some built for single or double occupancy and some built especially for handicapped persons.

Landscaping around the buildings is being done by various groups in town.

Members of the Coventry Fire department have set up a list of safety evacuation procedures for tenants and are having safety drills before the tenants move in.

Tedone Retires

HARTFORD (UPI) - Veteran Republican City Councilor Margaret Tedone, 55, has announced she will not seek re-election next fall so she can spend more time with her family.

In a surprise announcement Wednesday, she said she wants to give other GOP candidates a chance at the council.

Mrs. Tedone, one of two Republicans on the council, is retiring in seniority to Democratic Deputy Mayor Nicholas Carbone.

Despite her retirement from city politics, Mrs. Tedone said she will continue to speak out on issues concerning Hartford.

Solons to Investigate Racial Imbalance Law

HARTFORD (UPI) - Connecticut's racial imbalance law, which has been on the books for 10 years but was never enforced, will be given a "sunset" test by a legislative panel.

"We're going to look at the law and see if it's still appropriate," said Rep. Dorothy Oster, R-Greenwich, one of the subcommittee members named by the Legislature's Education Committee Wednesday to review the desegregation statute.

"We've got to have some kind of law on the books, but we'll see if it needs amending," she said. "It was passed before any of us now on the Education Committee were in the Legislature."

The Legislature's Regulations Review Committee, for the second time since the law was passed, last week voted down regulations proposed by the state Board of Education to implement the law. There was little discussion before the vote.

Under the law, the percentage of minority students in a given school must be within 25 percent of the number within the entire school district.

The proposed regulations would have required the state to check each school district for the number of minority students in all primary and secondary grades.

Education Commissioner Mark Shedd said at the time of last week's vote, he wasn't sure what should be changed to make the regulations acceptable to the committee, but said he'd be back with a new draft at the panel's meeting in August.

The committee is empowered by the Legislature to accept or reject the proposed regulations.

Under the law, Shedd said five communities have schools that are considered segregated - Bridgeport, Hartford, Waterbury, Stratford and New Haven. But he said all the cities but Stratford are working on plans to balance racial distribution.

A group of parents and the NAACP had filed a lawsuit against the city of Bridgeport alleging that racial segregation did exist in the city's public school system. The agreement let it up to the U.S. District Court to decide how best to restore racial balance.

Butterworth Acting Prexy

HARTFORD (UPI) - Farmer Division of Public Utilities Control Chairwoman Miriam Butterworth has been named acting president of Hartford College for Women, effective Sept. 3, school officials have announced.

Mrs. Butterworth succeeds Joan Davis who will become assistant to the president at Mount Holyoke College in South Hadley, Mass.

Mrs. Butterworth was an organizer of the 1971 State and local education officials admitted to a recent consent decree that the schools were racially segregated. The agreement let it up to the U.S. District Court to decide how best to restore racial balance.

Green Manor Surveyed On Removing Sidewalks

MANCHESTER - Residents sometimes are polled about what they watch on television or who they would like to see run for President. But, residents of the Green Manor subdivision in town are being asked to give their opinion about the removal of sidewalks on one side of some of the streets.

Jay Giles, director of public works, has sent about 450 letters to persons living in the area bounded by East Middle Turnpike and Parker, Woodbridge, Lydall and Vernon streets.

The town received a federal grant more than two years ago for sidewalk repairs around town. The grant was less than the town had hoped - $779,000 compared to a requested $2 million - so Giles is working to spread the money as far as possible.

Sidewalk repairs are planned for the Green Manor subdivision, and Giles has developed a plan to repair sidewalks on only one side of most of the streets. The walks on the other side of the street would be removed according to his proposal.

This will permit more of the sidewalks to be repaired and will eliminate walks on both sides in those areas where pedestrian traffic is not heavy, Giles said.

First, however, the idea must be approved by the area's residents.

The two-page letter from Giles explains the proposal and includes two opinion boxes the residents can check. One says the person is in favor of eliminating the sidewalks on one side of the street as proposed. The other says the person is not in favor of the idea.

The results will be brought to the Town Board of Directors, which will make the final decision about the sidewalk removal.

Town subdivision regulations had required sidewalks on both sides of the street unless the Planning and Zoning Commission felt this was unnecessary. Now, though, that idea is seen as wasteful in some areas.

Giles said many of the subdivisions recently built or approved in town have sidewalks on only one side of the street. Giles and Alan Lamson, the town planner, also have been working on a plan that designates streets where sidewalks are needed on only one side.

These designated streets include most of those in the Green Manor subdivision.

Giles said he has received a number of responses already, although he has not counted the number or totaled the vote for and against the sidewalk removal.

He expects to do the tabulation in about a week when most of the responses should be in, he said. The letters were mailed about a week ago.

One resident who attended Tuesday's meeting of the town board of directors was not pleased with the entire idea. He said not give his name and only spoke briefly before leaving about his opposition to the idea of removing existing sidewalks.

Giles wrote in his letter that the removal process for all the walks could take a total of five to 10 years. The town's Highway Department would do the work and would restore lawns, driveway entrances and curbing once the walks are removed.

He feels the removal will prevent future repair costs for walks that are not used frequently.

Registrars Step Up Vote Turnout Plans

MANCHESTER - The 51 percent voter turnout in 1977 was the lowest in the town's history and was the continuation of a trend that has been declining voter turnouts for town elections during the past decade.

Because of this, the registrars of voters plan to have a stepped-up campaign this year to have Manchester voters come to the polls to elect members of the Town Board of Directors, Board of Education and other positions.

Democratic Registrar Herbert Stevenson and Republican Registrar Fred Peck met Wednesday with representatives of the League of Women Voters and the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce to discuss the proposed voter campaign. Democratic Town Chairman Ted Cummings also attended the session, and GOP head Richard Weinstein was invited but was not able to attend because of a prior work commitment.

The campaign still is in its formative stage, but it appears it will include increased advertising and talks to local groups and organizations to stress the importance of the town election.

Manchester's turnouts for state and national elections generally have been good, but the local election total peaked at 50 percent.

"We're developing plans to get the vote out," Stevenson said. He said another meeting will be held Aug. 8 to discuss the matter.

Peck mentioned the 1977 town election turnout and said, "Certainly, it should be the highest. But, it's always been that way."

James Breitenfeld, president of the Chamber, and Elizabeth Lauder, representing the League of Women Voters, both indicated their organizations probably would be interested in working in the drive to increase voter participation.

"Naturally, we will be involved in some fashion," Mrs. Lauder said. "The league has always been involved in trying to increase voter participation."

Talks Set July 18 On I-86 Expansion

VERNON - Plans are being formed to hold a meeting at 9 a.m. on July 18 with representatives from the Department of Transportation, the Federal Highway Administration, the Talcottville Neighborhood Association, and town officials.

The meeting is being arranged by Mayor Frank McCoy on request of the Talcottville residents who are concerned about the proposed expansion of Interstate 86 in the Talcottville area.

Plans are to have a median strip 104 feet wide and from the start, town officials and other residents have commented that this is unusually wide. Talcottville residents would like a narrower median which would give them more protection of the historic area and the pond.

Residents have already convinced the state to put in wooden noise barriers rather than the large cement barriers that have been put up along the rest of the highway expansion area.

The resident said the lines are showing up too close to the gorge area where there is a pond and ruins of a cotton mill built in the 1800s.

The Talcottville association has emphasized it is not trying to stop expansion of the highway but just to have some minor changes made in their area.

Mayor McCoy said he hasn't definitely heard if the meeting will be in Hartford or in Vernon but said there are any questions the group can go to Talcottville to see the area the residents are concerned about.

The concern of the residents intensified when they saw where the state had indicated the taking lines would be.

Anti-Nuclear Coalition Contests Plant Safety

HARTFORD (UPI) - A coalition of anti-nuclear groups is preparing to take a stand behind obscure state laws they claim could pave the way toward investigations, and possible shut down, of Connecticut's nuclear plants.

The coalition, called the Mutual Safety Group, is contesting safety conditions at the Millstone and Connecticut Yankee atomic power plants.

The group said Wednesday it plans to submit a complaint to state utility regulators within a couple of weeks.

State law gives the Division of Public Utilities Control far-reaching power to investigate a public service company if safety issues are at stake.

Maureen Lecht, a spokeswoman for the group, said its aim is to find "an orderly, but rapid phase-out of state reliance upon nuclear generation."

She said under state law, any person can complain to the DPUC about plant or equipment flaws in any public service company and the DPUC can then call public hearings and conduct an investigation if warranted.

Ms. Lecht said with the aid of legal and nuclear experts, the group can show the need to shut down nuclear power plants because of grave safety questions. She said facts on file with the Nuclear Regulatory Commission demonstrate there are fire and radiation hazards at the plants.

Directors Approve Funding for Stairs and Fence

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER - The stairs leading to Center Springs Park will be repaired and the long-awaited fence at East Cemetery will be installed.

The Town Board of Directors Tuesday night approved funding for both projects.

The board approved a transfer from the Capital Improvement Reserve Fund to pay for the stair repair, $6,000, and the fence, $4,300.

The stairs have deteriorated and been closed for about two weeks. The fence will run along Autumn Street and is expected to prevent vandalism and vehicles from driving onto the cemetery property at that location.

Two persons who spoke at Tuesday night's meeting - Walter Von Hone, a member of the Permanent Memorial Day Committee, and Donald Maynard, a member of the Veterans Council of Manchester - both favored the fence installation. The funding had been sought by several persons who have been concerned about vehicles driving on the cemetery property and damaging the graves.

The directors took no action on the proposed purchase of property at the corner of Oak and Cottage streets.

The matter has been referred to the town's Ethics Commission because Carl Zinsner, a member of the board, is the real estate agent for the property.

One director, Peter DiRosa, said the board should act on the matter now. He said there could be no conflict unless the board has taken some action to approve the proposed sale.

Other members, however, disagreed and said the matter should be tabled until the Ethics Commission rules on Zinsner's possible conflict.

Another property matter - the relocation of Burnham Street - also was tabled. MAP Associates, the developer of the proposed Buckland Commons project, has requested the relocation.

MAP, however, wants to wait for action by South Windsor's Planning and Zoning Commission before it proceeds with its request to relocate Burnham Street.

If South Windsor approves a zone change needed for the project, the street might not have to be moved.

The directors approved a change in the regulations governing the Manchester Country Club. The change sets a maximum of 10 percent for a requested rate increase in one year. It also will help speed action on any such requested rate increases in the future.

There are no rate increases being sought by the country club this year. The town rents the golf course property to the club, so rate changes must be acted on by the Town board members.

Before its August meeting, the directors will have a special meeting Thursday, July 19 at 5 p.m. Town Manager Robert Weiss said the meeting is needed to approve the sale of property for Holts Inc. The firm is going to buy land in the Buckland Industrial Park and wants the sale approved so it can begin construction by the end of the month.

The firm has received bids for construction that expire at the end of the month, Weiss said.

Board Tables Pay Increase

MANCHESTER - The Town Board of Directors Tuesday night tabled action on a requested increase in the pay scale of social workers.

The increase would boost the scale from $11,261$12,812 to $12,970-$14,008. Town Manager Robert Weiss said. The increase would cost $1,483 this year for the three positions, he said.

Weiss said the existing scale is lower than surrounding towns, and the social worker positions are not mid-management jobs, so they were not included in a recent study of those posts.

Director Betty Intagliata was surprised the positions had not been included in the mid-management study.

"How many times do we have to go over these things?" she said.

Stephen Penny, chairman of the board, asked that the administration prepare a report on how the town's pay of the three social workers compares to surrounding towns. Action will be tabled until then.

The board approved a bid waiver for the purchase of library books. The books are purchased annually, and the waiver helps speed the purchasing process.

The board tabled action on the appropriation of grants to the Board of Education because no one from the school administration was present to discuss the matters. They probably will be acted on at the board's August meeting.

The directors also took the following actions Tuesday night:

- Appointed Dr. Alan Kemp of 28 Plymouth Lane to the Advisory Board of Health. He replaces Dr. Kenneth Wichman, who resigned.
- Appropriated a $500 donation from the Manchester Chapter of Unico to the Senior Citizens Department. The funding maintains the summer feeding program during July.
- Approved a $1,600 state grant for the Police Department's youth services division.
- Approved the lease of a building at the Nike Recreation site to Manchester Community College. The building will be used for a temporary book store and will be rented at a cost of $60 per month.
- Granted the early retirements of Dorothy Lawson, an employee in the Planning Office, and Ethel Tangarone, Board of Education employee.
- Approved the position description for the job of supervisor of human services.

FFA Leader at Confab

VERNON - Mary-Jayne Pullen, president of the Rockville Chapter of the Future Farmers of America at Rockville High School, is in Washington, D.C., this week attending the National Future Farmers of America Leadership Conference.

The purpose of the conference is to further develop leadership confidence and skills.

While there Miss Pullen will become personally acquainted and involved with the National FFA officers and 150 other chapter representatives from throughout the United States.

As part of the conference activities Miss Pullen will also visit the National FFA Center in Mount Vernon, the Arlington National Cemetery, historical monuments and will meet with Connecticut Senator Lowell Weicker on Capitol Hill.

Delegate at Conference

MANCHESTER - Carroll Johnson-Brundrett, manager of the Fountain Village apartments on the Manchester-East Hartford town line, is a delegate from Connecticut to the eighth annual North American Conference for Separated and Divorced Catholics, which opened today at the University of Notre Dame in Indiana.

Ms. Brundrett is also an alternate for the New England Region to the conference.

Executive Park Proposed

SOUTHINGTON - (UPI) - A New York developer says he hopes to break ground in 1980 for a $100 million executive park on 120 acres off Interstate 84.

The former farmland is industrially zoned and will have to be changed to allow for the corporate office complex.

Blank bought the site for $3 million last week from Zigmon, Walter and Matthew Dukas.

Acquin Case Going Ahead

WATERBURY (UPI) — Defense motions were to be heard today in preparation for the start of the Lorne Acquin murder trial, Connecticut's largest mass murder case.

Judge Walter M. Pickett Jr. said the trial will begin at 10 a.m. Monday.

Jury selection, which began May 21, was finally completed Wednesday with the seating of the final three alternates.

Chosen were John M. Sprano and Angelo H. Mazzeo Jr. of Waterbury and Shirley B. Oulette of Wolcott. Sprano, a Fairfield University student, said he would give up a semester of school to serve on the jury for the trial, which is expected to take several months.

"I figure if people don't get involved, how are you going to do things right?" he said during questioning by prosecution and defense attorneys.

Mrs. Oulette said she was a "fair person," but admitted "it makes me jittery" that so many children were victims of the alleged crime.

The panel of 12 jurors and four alternates will hear the case against Acquin, 29, a former Maine seaman accused of murdering his foster brother's wife, Cheryl Beaudoin, 29; her seven children, who ranged in age from 4 to 12; and a 6-year-old house guest.

The nine bodies were found in the burnt out remains of the Beaudoin's modest, rural home on July 22, 1977.

Houdini's Memory Lives At Magician Convention

By CHARLES MAYNARD
Herald Reporter

HARTFORD — The ghost of Harry Houdini is stalking Hartford — at least for the weekend.

The Civic Center is expected to play host to over 1,000 masters of the sleight-of-hand for MAGICOON '79, the 51st annual conference of the Society of American Magicians.

There were not just hats and tuxedos as the magicians, magic collectors and magic dealers set up shop Wednesday in Exhibition Hall for the weekend festivities, but they still performed the old favorites of levitation, disappearing coins and sawing a person in half.

That last feat is Phil Moore's specialty. The Rutland, Vt. native and 30-year veteran of magical tricks has perfected his blade trick over the past four years.

"I was driving on a New York thruway when I came up with the idea of the blade with the hole in it," Moore said. "It's one thing to come up with the blade and hole. It's another to make the hole move around."

Moore said it took 150 man-hours to produce his blade "n' box" and he refined it just within the past two days. Unlike previous tricksters who need a cover when they pass the blade through a person, Moore removes the box and cracks his blade back and forth to show it's for real.

He demonstrated his trick before a group of reporters and curious onlookers. After getting a volunteer, Moore had him lay flat on his back with the hands above his head.

"I slice rather than saw," he said as he began his task.

Moore placed a red-marked cloth over his subject ("just in case there's a spurt of blood") and then rested the multi-colored box over the volunteer. He put his blade on its rest and proceeded to move it back and forth.

"Did that hurt at all?" he asked the volunteer. "We don't want to hurt a thing."

Moore removed the box to reveal the blade in his subject and then moved it back and forth for effect. As he did, some persons cringed as if the blade was passing through their stomachs.

The feelings are unwarranted, however, and all of Moore's subjects get up intact from the operation.

"I do this trick between 20 and 30 times a year around the Rutland area," he said. "It's great for Ladies Night at the Kiwanis."

Moore considered himself a magic innovator, not a performer. He stays pretty much around home, unlike Jimmy Yoshida, who takes his act to the road.

Yoshida, a native of Aiea, Hawaii, is one of the most respected magicians in Japan as well as the U.S., according to Joyce Zachary, one of the Hartford convention's organizers.

"Yoshida works with coins, trying to move them from one tube to another. For his first trick, he placed five coins in one vial and pretended to take one coin from the first vial and deposit it into the second.

Somehow, some way, he did it. He dropped four coins from the first one and the second vial had the lone coin.

"How do you do that?" asked the incredulous onlooker.

"I do that very well," Yoshida replied, and one knew that was the end of the explanation.

He promised the employees "we'll go as far as necessary to get a realistic settlement and that doesn't exclude the possibility of a strike."

The judicial workers staged a one day sickout June 23 that was 80 percent successful, but Santavenero charged the state with harassment and intimidation of workers who participated in the job action.

Santavenero said at issue was "the whole contract."

He said employees "want realistic language description of job duties

Job Action Planned To Gain Contract

MERIDEN (UPI) — Frustrated state judicial workers have voted overwhelmingly to stage sickouts Friday and Monday to try to force the state's hand in contract talks.

About 350 judicial workers voted in favor of the job action Wednesday night at a special union meeting.

In addition to approving the sickout, employees also authorized union officials to conduct a statewide poll of all judicial workers next Tuesday to decide whether to launch a full-scale strike.

"The people in the judicial department are hopping mad at the lack of realistic negotiations," said Horace Santavenero, chief negotiator for the 1,200 non-professional employees.

Santavenero said another bargaining session is scheduled for today.

"If there is positive movement toward a realistic contract, any action will be canceled. However, I don't see it," Santavenero said.

He promised the employees "we'll go as far as necessary to get a realistic settlement and that doesn't exclude the possibility of a strike."

Utility Regulators Quiz Times Mirror Holdings

HARTFORD (UPI) — State utility regulators are trying to clarify if the purchase of the Hartford Courant by the Times Mirror Co. violates a previous agreement made when it bought two Connecticut cable television franchises.

The Division of Public Utilities Control drafted a letter to Times Mirror Wednesday in the wake of its announced offer of $106.6 million for the morning daily, said DPUC spokeswoman King Quillen.

The question concerns Times Mirror's purchase in 1978 of controlling stock in Telesystems of Connecticut Inc. and Hartford CATV Inc. on the condition that the company inform the division of "any and all contemplated acquisitions of Connecticut media."

At the time of the sale, Times Mirror did not own a newspaper, radio or television stations in the franchise areas.

State officials indicated the problem should be cleared up with a letter of explanation from Times Mirror.

Times Mirror spokesman Paul Bertness said the state agency was informed of the proposed sale agreement Wednesday, at the "earliest possible time."

Area Police Report

Vernon
Earl D. Fortin, 37, of Candlewood Road, South Windsor, was arrested Wednesday on a warrant charging him with third-degree assault.

Police said the arrest was made in connection with the investigation of an incident that occurred in Vernon last March.

He was released on a $500 non-surety bond for appearance in court in Rockville on July 17.

Kemp Steward Jr., 23, of 201 Regan Road, Vernon, was charged early this morning with reckless driving. He was involved in an accident on South street.

Police said Steward was driving a motorcycle and was being pursued by a cruiser for a traffic violation.

Police said he lost control of the cycle. No injuries were reported and damage to the motorcycle was minor, police said.

Steward is scheduled to appear in court on July 17.

South Windsor
South Windsor Police said there has been a rash of bicycle thefts in town over the past few weeks and they are urging residents to make sure their bikes are secure before leaving them.

Police said the thefts have occurred all over the town. The theft of three bicycles was reported Wednesday and two more were reported today.

$20,000 Grant Won't Complete Senior Center Work

MANCHESTER — A $20,000 grant the town is seeking will pay for complete improvements to convert Green School to a senior citizens center, but more funding might be required to complete the work.

Diane Wicks, human services supervisor, provided information to the Town Board of Directors about the grant application and what it will fund.

Ms. Wicks and board members toured the Green School before the board's regular meeting Tuesday night. Some board members expressed surprise at how much work still is not done at the school.

The $20,000 figure is the maximum the town can apply for through the Older Americans Act Grant program, Ms. Wicks told the board.

She said more than $20,000 might be needed to complete the Green School work, though. Figures are being compiled and should be completed this week for the final cost estimate to finish the project.

The application was based on estimates made by Richard Mankey, architect for the job.

He broke the $20,000 expense into four categories — installing carpets, painting, refinishing and resurfacing auditorium floor and putting tile on the cafeteria floor.

The prices he listed for those categories are — carpeting, labor, $2,000, supplies, $9,000; painting, labor, $2,000, supplies, $2,000; refinishing floor, labor, $2,500, supplies, $500; tiling floor, labor, $1,000, supplies, $1,000.

Despite some concerns about the appearance of the building, Mankey said all of the structural work has been completed. The work to be done now is for improvements to the appearance of the rooms.

For instance, all the partitioning of rooms and installation of needed equipment has been completed. This includes installation of an elevator and completion of restroom facilities that are accessible to a person in a wheelchair.

The elevator and restroom work, along with ramping of the building, have been completed to meet federal requirements for access to the handicapped.

Ms. Wicks also reported to the board that the senior center's program will be expanded. It will include more programs for men and such items as Nationality Day and outdoor recreation and gardening programs.

Improvements to the center that have been completed were funded with $200,000 in Community Development funds along with some state grant money and private donations.

Wally Fortin, director of senior citizens, said he will continue to seek donations to pay some of the completion costs.

Station Funding Queried

HARTFORD (UPI) — A plan to renovate Union Station into a commercial transportation center now facing the legality of obtaining federal funds to finance part of the public-private project, officials said.

The Greater Hartford Transit District and the owners of Union Station have worked out a compromise agreement to modernize the historic site, ending more than two years of bitter debate over who would take over the facility.

The agreement calls for the owners to lease the station and lease it for 30 years to the transit district.

In renovating the station the owners would be using plans developed by the transit district and paid for with $300,000 in federal money.

The transit district would pay the transportation portion of the lease through a federal grant, said Mark S. Shipman, acting chairman of the transit district.

The lease for the rest of the station would be covered, in part, from the rent the district collected from subsidizing the commercial space, he said.

Officials said the cost of the lease or the renovations was not to exceed $8.7 million.

Shipman said one legal question is whether the owners can renovate the station privately rather than follow the competitive bidding process required of public projects.

Donald G. Sullivan, a federal transit official, said regulations may require the owners to adhere to guidelines governing a public agency if federal funding is connected to the project.

Shipman said if the plan isn't approved the transit district would once again move to take over the station through eminent domain.

Expert Says Thevis Lied

HARTFORD (UPI) — An FBI polygraph expert has testified post-nuptially that Michael Thevis was not telling the truth when he claimed to have $502,000 in cash in his car at the time of his Nov. 9 arrest in Bloomfield.

Paul Minor, chief polygraph examiner for the FBI, also told U.S. District Court Judge T. Emmet Clarke that Thevis, 46, was not telling the truth when he denied knowing whether his companion, Anna Jeanette Evans, had disposed of any of the money.

Miss Evans, 45, a real estate saleswoman of Marietta, Ga., and Thevis were arrested at a Bloomfield bank after he tried to withdraw about $30,000.

The FBI has said there was only $42,000 in Thevis' car along with an estimated $1 million in jewelry.

Clarke ordered the hearing Wednesday to clear up questions surrounding the discrepancy in the amount of money in the car.

"It's an attack on the judicial system," Clarke said. "It's the duty of the court to find out who took the money."

The hearing was to resume next Wednesday.

U.S. Attorney Richard Blumenthal said Minor's testimony along with affidavits filed by other FBI officials who searched the car prove there was no wrongdoing on the government's part.

DPUC Mulls New Rate Hearing

HARTFORD (UPI) — The Division of Public Utility Control was scheduled to deliberate today whether to re-open hearings into the record $86 million rate increase it has granted Northeast Utilities.

State Consumer Counsel Barry Zitser asked the DPUC earlier this month to hold the hearings and reverse its decision. He said the rate hike granted was "unprecedented, expensive and anti-consumer."

Zitser also filed a complaint with the Freedom of Information Commission, claiming the more important aspects of the Northeast case were decided by the DPUC behind closed doors.

A spokesman for the DPUC said commissioners David Harrigan and Paul Weiner and newly appointed chairman John Downey would meet at 3 p.m. today to "decide how to respond to Mr. Zitser's motion."

Weiner himself has been the subject of criticism from the U.S. according to Joyce Zachary, one of the Hartford convention's organizers.

Weiner and Harrigan were two of three commissioners who decided on the Northeast rate case. The third member was former DPUC chairwoman Miriam Butterworth who left office July 1 when her term was not renewed by Gov. Ella Grasso.

Also dropped by the governor were commissioners Thomas Standish and Gerald McCann. They were replaced by Edith Gaynes and Marvin Loewith.

David Truskoff, director of the Connecticut Committee for Lower Utility Bills, said he will file an appeal this week asking Downey to investigate alleged improprieties in the case.

He's questioning a trip Weiner took to Irving Trust Co. in New York City last November with Northeast President William Ellis. Truskoff said Northeast Chairman of the Board Lelan Sillin is a director of the bank and Northeast has a $6 million open account with the bank.

Weiner has said the trip was only to gather data on the utility's finances.

Grasso Signs Bills

HARTFORD (UPI) — A law allowing "whistle blowing" by state employees who have information about alleged government corruption has been signed into law by Gov. Ella Grasso.

The governor, who has one more bill to act on, also vetoed a measure Wednesday which would have allowed a municipality to pick up for free excess property bought by the state Transportation Department for highway construction.

Mrs. Grasso said the proposal would have cost the state "well in excess" of $5 million. The bill would have required communities to reimburse any federal funds which had been used to buy the land.

The "whistle blowing" bill, effective Oct. 1, allows the state attorney general to investigate allegations by state employees about corruption, unethical practices, violations of state law or misuse of funds.

The governor has signed 714 bills and vetoed 19.

Spotlight of National Publicity To Hit Mobster Marcello

WASHINGTON — The three faces of Carlos Marcello will soon appear in the fall glare of the national spotlight.

Face No. 1 — To the underworld, he is known as "the little man" because of his five-foot-two physical limitations. But he is, according to Justice Department files, the biggest little man in organized crime.

Federal investigators have identified him as one of the nation's top three god-fathers whose swarthy, sinister visage casts a chill across the underworld. His criminal domain, they say, now stretches from New Orleans to Dallas.

Face No. 2 — To his immediate family, Marcello is known as a generous, doting grandfather, who has been honored by federal authorities. Last month, he mailed a personal handwritten appeal to Hugh J. Brien, the assistant immigration commissioner who has been keeping him under close scrutiny.

"I am sure my name is not unknown to you," wrote the mobster, "as I have been under one type of supervision or another for the past twenty years. I am appealing to you as an understanding human being for relief from this situation."

"I would like to spend the rest of my days with a clear head and mind, knowing that I have proved myself to my adopted homeland. Never have I ever considered any other place in the world my home. I beg of you, and to those who are concerned with lifting this darkness from my head and heart, to please consider my request for its removal."

Face No. 3 — To the House Assassination Committee, Marcello is probably the chief suspect in the John F. Kennedy assassination plot. The committee will not point a direct finger at Marcello but, rather, will lay out a "web of circumstances."

This will begin with acoustical evidence that the late president was the victim of a conspiracy. The accused assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald, had conspiratorial ties to New Orleans. Eight witnesses have testified behind closed doors that they saw Oswald in the company of David Ferrie, who has been identified as a pilot and investigator for Marcello.

The committee will cite other "reliable" witnesses, who will claim that Oswald and Ferrie became acquainted as members of the New Orleans civil air patrol. The two were also seen together in a limousine at Clinton, La., in the fateful summer of 1963.

Oswald used the famous 544 Camp Street address in New Orleans, a place where Ferrie also had offices. The committee will speculate cautiously that Ferrie might have recognized Oswald as someone who could be recruited to carry out an assassination.

Marcello testified that he and Ferrie were together at the federal courthouse in New Orleans at the time of the Kennedy assassination. But this merely intrigued committee investigators. They have noted privately that crime lords usually arrange an alibi when they know in advance of a crime.

If Oswald could be traced to Marcello, as the investigators suspect, then the mobster would want to eliminate Oswald at all costs.

In fact, Jack Ruby boldly murdered Oswald while he was in the custody of his police escorts. The committee found no personal links between Marcello and Ruby. But there were indirect links which the investigators thought were significant. Both Marcello and Ruby placed calls, for example, to Nofio Pecora at the same telephone number at Tropical Court Tourist Park in New Orleans. Pecora was identified by law enforcement officials as one of Marcello's three most trusted aides.

Ruby spoke with Pecora for one minute on October 30, 1963, less than a month before the assassination. Marcello's man Ferrie also spoke for 15 minutes to a woman named Jean West in September, 1963, who turned up at the Cabana Motel in Dallas where she had drinks with Ruby on Nov. 21, 1963.

The committee will also allege that Dallas mob leader Joe Civello helped Marcello take over the Dallas underworld. Ruby was a decade-long friend of Civello.

Finally, the committee has reviewed the FBI's surveillance transcripts on most major organized crime figures. These showed that the nation's top mobsters hailed the Kennedys and talked about killing them. But the transcripts cleared them of any actual complicity in the assassination. The committee will name at least six other mobsters who had ties to both Ruby and Marcello.

Unaccountably, Marcello was not kept under close surveillance during the crucial assassination period. There is no surveillance transcript, therefore, to clear him.

The committee will emphasize that it has found no "smoking gun" implicating Marcello in the assassination. But it will probably invite the Justice Department to take up the investigation where its own investigators have left off.

Designers Feel Inflation

By United Press International
There are no fears, you outrage at the crazy prices for men's fashions is being heard loud and clear.

There is a single table recently set the most important designers in the world of men's fashion. And what did they talk about? Lapel width? But-tonholes? Nope. Tops on their minds, like those of so many other people, was inflation.

It was the first time that all the nominees for the 1979 Coty Award — the Oscar of men's fashion designing — had been brought together, and they tried hard to explain to their customers why dressing well has become so expensive.

"I buy material in large quantities, and I experiment a lot with fabric," she says. "When I get a shipment that I can't use, I have to absorb that cost."

And that means you're the customer, prices don't matter? said Alexander Julian, one of fashion's most articulate and intelligent voices.

Julian, who won the 1974 Coty, will receive a special "return" trophy this year honoring him for his collection of tailored fashions. The three nominees in contention for the regular Coty Award to be announced in September — Gil Truedsson, Lee Wright and Thane Barnes — quickly chimed in.

"The costs are incredible. The wholesale cost of my clothes now is the same as the retail cost five years ago. When clothes become that expensive, no one can afford to throw them away, and buying something has got to be a real love affair."

"We're all dealing with inflation," said Truedsson, who's also been honored with a special Coty for his innovative shoes. "We know the average guy is having a hard time keeping up with prices, but it's not because we like it that way. The cost of material keeps going up and so our prices do. But because I use so much material, I'm trying to streamline the process, get more efficient."

Thane Barnes, the 25-year-old who's the kid who's proven that women can design for men, learned early in his career that artists don't always get their way.

Stearns Delivers Hit

NEW YORK (UPI) — John Stearns had gone 0 for his last 9 when he came up in the bottom of the 10th inning Wednesday. There were two out, and the bases were loaded. Los Angeles reliever Dennis Lowallyn threw Stearns a breaking ball, and the New York catcher stroked it to left, giving his team a come from behind 4-2 victory. "We don't win if Steve Henderson (the New York left fielder) doesn't save the game in the ninth with that great catch on the ball hit by Dave Lopes," insisted Stearns. "And we don't win if the three dudes coming out of the bullpen don't hold the Dodgers from the third inning on."

Upsetting Evening For John McEnroe

NEW YORK (UPI) — John McEnroe was in a bad mood Wednesday night — and understandably so. He lost the first set in 55 minutes. But the 6-foot-4 Pecci pushed McEnroe, who slipped repeatedly on the rain-soaked court, to a surprising 2-1 victory. McEnroe's frustration was evident in his body language. He was slumped over, his head buried in his hands. He was shouting at the crowd, and he was cursing. He was in a bad mood. He was in a bad mood. He was in a bad mood.

Steuernagel Just Misses No-Hit Job

Craig Steuernagel's heat was too hot for Enfield to handle as he shut them out in East Hartford's 2-0 American Legion Zone Eight triumph last night at Shea Park. Steuernagel came within one batter of pitching a perfect game and a no-hitter. After retiring the first 11 batters, Jay Wheeler batted a two-out single near the rightfield foul line in the fourth for the only Enfield hit. He was the only Enfield base runner.

Third Straight for MBs

Streaking Moriarty Bros. won its third straight Twilight League III last night following the Arrows, 16-0, at Gastonbury High. The Gas Housers moved their record to 7-2 and 16 points while Gastonbury drops to 6-2 and 12 points. Gary Perkins twirled a three-hitter in the best performance by a MB hurler this season. USA Image Tattered

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — Having won the crucial confrontation with Cuba Wednesday night with Renaldo Nehemiah bolting to victory over Alejandro Casanas in the 100-meter hurdles, the United States now must concentrate on mending its tattered public image in the Pan American Games. Reeling from two severe blows to its confidence and self-esteem, the men's basketball squad, 4-0 in the final round, plays Brazil today in preparation for its showdown with undefeated Puerto Rico Friday night — a game in which the U.S. will get almost no support. Early Wednesday it was learned that guard Kyle Macy, who was punched by Cuban Tomas Herrera during the 101.55 victory Tuesday, had suffered a fractured cheekbone and would be lost for the remainder of the games. Then came the news that coach Bobby Knight will have to stand trial Friday for aggravated assault on policeman Jose de Silva Sunday.

PM-AM GAMES

100-meter dash at the games. Wilkins, an Olympic champion from Soquel, Calif., won the 100-meter dash at 207.8 and Centowitz, of Puerto Rico, took the 5,000-meter run at 14:01.6. The women's softball team doubled Canada, 5-0, to build its record to 10-1 with a smooth first five. "I was in control of the race. I ran a smooth first five," said Nehemiah, who won in 1:20. "I was in control and he had to catch me. He was going to be the man to make the mistakes." When asked about Casanas' remarks that Nehemiah's technique was flawed, Nehemiah retorted: "It's good enough to win races for me and good enough to be the world

JUNIOR LEGION With Skip Moreau spinning a three-hitter, the Manchester Junior Legion blanketed Wethersfield Sports Inn, 2-0, last night at Eagle Field in Jayce-Courant League Senior Division play. Manchester plated both runs in the second inning on bases loaded walks to Mike Oleskiński and Moreau. Moreau struckout six and walked none and didn't allow a hit after the second run. Moriarty's 5-3 in the league, 7-5 overall. Wethersfield went to 3-5 with the loss.

College Football

Three two-run innings lifted the Manchester Merchants past Williamantic "A", 6-5, last night at Moriarty Field. Tim McCarthy belted a two-run, two-inning triple and singled to pace the Merchants. Mark Butler went the distance to notch the win, tossing a four-hitter. He fanned 10. The Merchants are home Sunday morning at 11 o'clock against Coventry at Moriarty Field.

Alumni Junior

Brian McAuley twirled a three-hitter in leading Moriarty Bros. to an 8-0 whitewash win over Krause Friars last night at Cheney. McAuley fanned three and walked four. Brad Freeman had two hits and two RBIs and Earl Lappert tripled, scored three times and starred defensively at shortstop for Moriarty's Jamie Cullen collected two of Krause's safeties. Krause pitched Mari-Mads Tuesday at the West Side, 12-7. Ray Custer had two hits including a triple and Pat Farrell doubled for Krause. Leggett Parkade took the measure of Fire & Police last night at the West Side, 13-8. Ray Lata roped two hits and Jim Kibicki doubled for Leggett's while Mike Prignano doubled for F&P.

Tiant Has 1.98 ERA in Last Six Starts; Yankee Pitcher Butt of Much Needling

By MILT RICHMAN NEW YORK (UPI) — An egotist is a guy who thinks that when it rains, only he gets wet. An optimist, on the other hand, is a guy who smokes cigars in the shower, like Luis Tiant does, and figures they'll stay dry. Somehow, he has found a way of keeping them lit while he's soaping himself off and although his feet don't exactly put him in the same class as former Dodger outfielder Babe Herman, who once stuffed a cigar in his pocket while in the segments of a ball on the first bounce was out, but the one thing no one ever makes jokes about is his pitching. "That is nothing to kid about, especially if you've ever faced it, and practically all the Yankees have when Tiant was with the Red Sox."

The Yankees' cubic-shaped right-hander takes a lot of needling from the other Yankee players about those foot-long cigars he smokes. He takes even more needling from them about his age because he never really can get anybody to believe he's "only" 38 as he claims. Looie is kidded about his life-style, about the TV commercials he makes and about having been around in those bygone days when catching a ball on the first bounce was out, but the one thing no one ever makes jokes about is his pitching. "That is nothing to kid about, especially if you've ever faced it, and practically all the Yankees have when Tiant was with the Red Sox."

Being Cuban, Luis Tiant has a deeper appreciation for a truly good cigar than most other people and he began pitching for a living with the Mexico City Tigers five years before that. In his last six starts, only one of which he lost, Looie's earned run average has been 1.98 and he has been pitching as well or better than at any time in his career. In all the years Tiant has been around, I've never heard a single bad word about him. True, he's not overly crazy about running, but how many pitchers are? And as one of them once remarked: "It's running is supposed to help you so much, how come Jesse Owens never won 20 games?" Part of Tiant's general appeal lies in his own inimitable style of English. He doesn't fight it, he shows boxes it. One imaginative TV advertiser, seeing the merits of his unique usage of the language, signed up Tiant for two separate commercials. Looie is seen endorsing this specific brand of bacon on one of the segments and the same brand of frankfurters in the other.

In the first commercial, he is seen preparing breakfast and a voiceover says: "Looie, you're early making breakfast for the family, aren't you?" Tiant only nods, but says nothing. The voiceover then asks him, "But you can't wait to eat breakfast, can you?" Again a nod, and again Tiant says nothing.

"You're going to share the bacon, aren't you?" is the last question. "Nooooooowooooo," the Yankee pitcher finally breaks his silence, rolling his eyes. In that second commercial, he's shown looking at those hot dogs, and he makes only one comment again. "It's great to be with a wiener," he says, in that natural, rolling, speaking style of his, and the way he says it, the viewer is free to make up his or her own mind whether Looie is referring to the product or the new ball club he's playing for this season.

Any baseball conversation with Tiant sooner or later gets around to the Red Sox, the club he pitched for the last eight years before deciding to become a free agent and sign a two-year contract with the Yankees for $740,000 last November. He was skeptical about the Red Sox' pitching this spring, not because he no longer was a part of it, but because he believed Boston was trying to go with too many inexperienced hurlers. At no time, however, did Looie ever write off the Yankees in the second half or even if he was four or five years older than the 38 he says he is. When the players talk about Looie, they don't talk so much about his age as they do about how he has this faculty for keeping a ball club loose and how his eschewance of the weight with me since 1975. "That's for sure. He knows how to play the game. Rice is such a good hitter, it's hard to believe. Fish and Rick Burdick are smart, always helpful, always in the ball game. I know he's having trouble with his arm, but he's still a real ball player. I know he's having trouble with his arm, but he's still a real ball player. I know he's having trouble with his arm, but he's still a real ball player."

"If my life was on the line, Looie is the guy I'd like to be pitching the game for me." Red Sox outfielder Dwight Evans told me not long after Tiant left about his age as they do about how he has this faculty for keeping a ball club loose and how his eschewance of the weight with me since 1975. "That's for sure. He knows how to play the game. Rice is such a good hitter, it's hard to believe. Fish and Rick Burdick are smart, always helpful, always in the ball game. I know he's having trouble with his arm, but he's still a real ball player. I know he's having trouble with his arm, but he's still a real ball player."

"I know I'm a wretched manager," Joe Morgan liked me. It was sure someone would want me. I didn't want to be traded because I was here. But I wanted a career in the major leagues. And it had to be elsewhere, well... Ripley comes from a baseball family. His father was up for a cup-nay, a sip — of coffee in 1935. The elder Ripley, at the time then young ever age (19) for a Red Sox hurler, pitched four innings and was never heard from again.

"He was in such awe of the big players that he would throw batting orders any time they asked him. Doing that, plus the fact he was a rail of a guy, (6-6, 165), put a real strain on his arm," Ripley recalls. But his father, Walter, never lost his zeal for the game. And Ripley finds his father experiencing his hoped-for career through his son's efforts.

Ripley Found Out Fast, Didn't Have All Answers

BOSTON (UPI) — He had arrived in Boston last year on a prayer, a dream, a rag-to-riches story that movie makers seek and of which Little League dreamers. The 26-year-old kid with Harpo Marx face and devilish demeanor. The one who had given up baseball, passed some kids playing American Legion soccer and later got around to the Red Sox. The kid signed on the Rhode Island sandlots by the team he always worshipped and the one for whom his father once pitched. But Allen Ripley's dream soon became unrelieved. It lasted only 111 days. It ended up with a banishment to the minors (for, of all things, the acquisition of Andy Hassler). And it began a time of self-realization and self-reflection for the North Attleboro native.

"I thought I knew all the answers," says Ripley, who has sparkled in two relief appearances since being recalled July 1. "But I learned so much sooner or later get around to the Red Sox, the club he pitched for the last eight years before deciding to become a free agent

Archery Coming into Own; Hall Stickler for Safety

MIDDLEBURY (UPI) — Archery has suffered from under-exposure almost since William Tell split an apple on his son's head. But the president of the oldest archery company in the United States says the sport is finally coming into its own. Norman Taylor of Stelmier Archery credits the President's Commission on Physical Fitness with helping move the sport toward the recreational mainstream. "It's the intent of the presidential commission to push life-time sports. You can't play baseball, football or soccer all your life. As a result, physical education units have been developed in many of the nation's schools and that has really given archery a boost," he said. Taylor's father-in-law, Louis Stelmier, started the business in 1912 in the cellar of his Staten Island, N.Y., home, using Iremovon wood from the rain forests of Cuba for bows. Taylor says people are moving toward archery these days because the sport stresses independence and has no time or geographical limits. "You don't need a team, a uniform, a court. You can do it in a park or your own backyard." There are an estimated 2 million bowhunters in the U.S. today with an equal number of target shooters. Some target shooters may use their feet to shoot for distance of up to 500 yards. Some are equipped with bows called compounds with mechanical advantages Robin Hood might never have imagined. With their pulleys and wheels, they look like contraptions conceived by NASA engineers. The compounds allow the shooter to hold longer at full draw for the best shot and to shoot for an extended time with less muscle fatigue, says Fred Bar founder of the Gainesville, Fla., archery company that bears his name. He calls compounds the most exciting change in one of man's oldest sports.

East Hartford Title to I.O.O.F.

I.O.O.F. entry topped the National Little League baseball championship in East Hartford by whipping Capital Crane in the playoffs, 6-1. Jim Chase, Tom Porreco, Dennis Welles and Jim Berak each collected two hits with Welles and Berak sharing the winning pitching duties. Selected to the N.L. All-Star team were Welles, Berak, Van Deeder, Russ Derrocher, Andre Kolodziejczyk, Joe Sparver, John Knepp, Paul Pelletier, Mike Fisher, Mike Grobowski, Mike Lindsay, Todd Wabble, Jon Moulton and camp instructors at the YMCA's Camp Jewell in Colebrook, tucked away in Connecticut's northwestern pocket. He flunked one of the woodpecker teachers. "Nice guy and all that, but he just couldn't get the hang of it," Hall said. Knowing that there are 39 instructors who will teach thousands of kids the right way to use a bow gives Hall a sense of security. In the past he has doubled the abilities of most summer camp archers.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am an old fogey (50), but with the changing times I think we should change some of our customs. When I was young, lovers had a courtship, they were married, after which they went on a honeymoon. Then they returned to set up housekeeping.

Now the order is backwards. They go off on a honeymoon first. If that works, they get married, and friends and relatives are expected to provide them with wedding gifts. In my day, wedding gifts were for the purpose of getting the newly-wedded couple started in their new home. Couples who have lived together for two or three years are not entering into a new union. The don't need a toaster, dishes, pots, pans and coffee-makers.

So, I suggest skipping wedding presents for those who have already lived together.

Please give me your opinion.

ASKING IN ALASKA

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I and our 4-year-old son live above a retired couple who at home 24 hours a day. We are not the kind of people who have wild parties. In fact, the last party I had was two years ago, and they were all older relatives.

The man below started to complain about our "noise" a week after we moved in. He would hang on his ceiling with a broom handle when I'd shut my cupboard door, walk in my kitchen with shoes on, or slam the refrigerator door.

To top it off, my husband and I were walking out to our car and this man came at my husband with a pocketknife saying he had kept him up until 2 a.m. (We never stay up past midnight.)

This man must be off his balance. Our landlord agrees with us. Any suggestions?

M.C. IN N.Y.

DEAR M.C.: Your neighbor has already broken the law by threatening your husband with a dangerous weapon. If you and your landlord have reason to believe that the man in question is a danger to you or your husband, it is a crime to ignore the incident to occur.

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing a Dear Abby letter, but here I go. I am 64 and have been widowed for two years. A neighbor in town has been showering me with expensive presents ever since he lost his wife a year ago.

His sister is a good friend of mine and I have asked her to please tell her brother to quit sending me presents, but either she hasn't done it or her brother doesn't pay her any mind. The presents continue to come.

I am not considering remarriage - at least not HIM.

What should I do?

NOT INTERESTED

DEAR NOT: Communicate directly with the generous gentleman. Don't rely on his sister to be your carrier pigeon. Tell him that if it's marriage he's after, he has the right to marry. But if he's just a neighbor, it's a waste of time.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "BORN TO LOSE": Don't be discouraged by a failure. It can be a positive experience. "Failure is, in a sense, the highway to success, inasmuch as every discovery of what fails leads us to seek earnestly some form of error which we shall afterwards carefully avoid."

The above is a true story as it was when John Keats, the famed English poet (1795-1821), wrote it.

Sidestepping tricky trap

For the unwary, if South decides to play a low spade from dummy at trick one East will take the king and lead back his singleton club. Later West will give him a club ruff and the defense will score four tricks.

West must continue with the king of spades. If South ruffs that trick and plays a second trump he will discover the 4-1 trump break and will have to take great care to keep from losing control of the hand when West gets in with the ace of diamonds. He can handle matters by simply refusing to ruff the second spade. East will continue and now South can ruff.

At this point it is a simple matter to draw trumps. West will take the king and South will discard dummy's last spade on the long trump. Then he finishes the queen of clubs, concretes the king of hearts and the rest of the tricks.
