Temperature At Library At the Limit

MANCHESTER — Temperatures inside the Mary Cheney Library Monday went to the limit but were not quite hot enough to close the building.

Members of the Health Department took several temperature and humidity readings inside the library during the day. The hottest occurred at about 3:30 p.m. when Dr. Alice Turek, director of health, measured the temperature at 88 degrees with 80 percent humidity.

For sedentary workers, the Health Department sets the closing temperature at 91 degrees when the humidity is 80 percent. For heavy labor work, a temperature of 86 degrees is required to close at that humidity, according to the department standards.

Last year, the library was closed a couple of times because of hot weather. So far this year, however, the library has remained open, ever through Monday's heat. Monday night's rain and today's expected lower temperatures should

DEAR ABBY: My husband's mother had been a widow for a long time. About two years ago she married a nice-looking, quiet man none of us knew. They live only a few miles from out we never visit them, and neither do any of her other r children who live in this area. The reason is one you will bably not believe: Mom's husband smells like he hasn't probably not believe: Mom's husband smells like he hasn't had a bath in 50 years! I am not kidding. Their house is an absolute pigsty; every piece of furniture in the place smells to high heaven. Nobody cares to eat or drink in their house because the smell spoils their appetite.

Mom was in the hospital for three weeks recently, and every day we'd take her husband to the hospital with us lit's
