Staying Home

WASHINGTON (UPI) — First lady Rosalynn Carter's trip to Bolivia, scheduled to begin Sunday, was canceled Saturday because the Bolivian Congress had been unable to agree on a new president. The White House said Mrs. Carter's visit to Ecuador later in the week for the inauguration of a new president there remains on the agenda.

Mrs. Carter was scheduled to attend the inauguration today of a new president in Bolivia, but the July 1 national elections left no presidential candidate with a majority. The Bolivian Congress chose an interim president late Sunday. "Mrs. Carter regrets circumstances do not allow her to make definite arrangements in time to attend," said the first lady's press secretary, Mary Hoyt.

Price Increase

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Prices for the necessities of life — energy, housing, food and medical care — rose at an annual rate of 18.6 percent in April, May and June, a private economic research group said Saturday.

Fallout Blamed

LONDON (UPI) — The cancer deaths of John Wayne, Susan Hayward, Dick Powell and Agnes Moorehead may have been caused by radioactive fallout from an atom bomb that exploded in the Nevada desert in 1953, two London newspapers suggested. In addition, the London Sun and Daily Express said Saturday, other performers, the production crew and members of an Indian tribe hired as extras also developed cancer.

A New Leader

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — The Spanish government announced it was sending a diplomatic team to meet new leader, Lt. Col. Teodor Obiang Nguema Mbasogo, 33, a top-ranking aide to ousted President-for-life Francisco Macias of Equatorial Guinea. Reports said Macias, 55, was arrested in his hometown by members of his own Fang tribe and overthrown in a bloodless coup Friday. Details were sketchy because of poor communications.

Services Recall Hiroshima Bomb

By United Press International
In Hiroshima, the first victim of atomic warfare, 30,000 people bowed their heads for a minute of prayerful silence in remembrance of those killed by the bomb dubbed "Little Boy" 34 years ago. In Harrisburg, Pa., the victim of the world's worst nuclear accident, 100 people held an interfaith service.

What happened at Hiroshima and Nagasaki in August 1945 and at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant near Harrisburg this year provoked demonstrations Sunday against nuclear production at home and abroad.

Hijackers Head For Switzerland

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — A Spanish jetliner hijacked by three Spanish Foreign Legion deserters left today for Geneva, Switzerland, where the three faced immediate arrest.

The hijackers originally were reported to have taken 24 hostages. But airline officials later put the figure at 12 and said all but the pilot and copilot were released before the plane took off from Lisbon.

Swiss Embassy spokesmen said the government had granted the Iberia airlines DC9, seized in the Canary Islands Sunday night, the right to land at Geneva but that the hijackers would be "arrested immediately."

France previously refused permission for the hijackers to land in that country.

Officials at Lisbon's Portela airport, where the plane had been ringed by 150 riot police for 12½ hours, said the plane took off at 1:55 p.m. (8:55 a.m. EDT, bound for Geneva.

The hijackers, who said they were not terrorists, released most of their hostages in Lisbon in two separate groups. First they freed a couple and their two children. Then two other adults.

A little more than an hour later officials said they released three airline cleaning personnel and continued holding the pilot and copilot.

Officials reported that the mother of the two freed children, a boy and a girl under 10 years of age, said that the hijackers had "not mistreated" the hostages and that they "even played with the children."

She told officials that the deserters were armed with three submachine guns and had "a lot" of ammunition.

On takeoff from Lisbon, the control tower radioed the DC9's captain and expressed concern over his making the flight in such a tired state.

water, tobacco and milk for the children" be brought to the plane.

The pilot, identified only as Capt. Arias, warned officials in the tower to avoid "upsetting" the hijackers.

"We will only open one door," Arias said. "Don't do anything to ruin the atmosphere, which is calm."

Spanish news reports identified the deserters, who earlier claimed to be French citizens, as Noel Edwards Seijen, a 29-year-old Frenchman from Bacmout; fellow countryman Jean Francois Lyschin, 25, from Farbach, and Sergio Munoz Cadaval, 22, a Chilean.

Arias also pleaded with authorities over the radio not to attack the plane, isolated on a distant runway, and not risk the lives of the hostages, including an undetermined number of women and children.

"We are not terrorists," the armed hijackers told the control tower at Lisbon's Portela airport from the DC-9's cockpit radio. "We are deserters from the legion and French citizens. We are ready to hand over our arms but we want to land in France."

Portuguese officials said the hijackers, who stormed the jet Sunday night in the Canary Islands, told the control tower after their plane was refueled they would surrender to French authorities if they received permission to land either in Paris or the southern city of Bordeaux.

They earlier had reportedly said they would release their hostages as soon as any country offered them "political asylum."

Sources at the airport, which was ringed by scores of heavily armed police, said French officials had refused the authorization. But Portuguese Interior Minister Lt. Col Manuel Costa Braz said negotiations with Paris were still under way.

The pilot of the plane later radioed the control tower asking negotiators to "rapidly resolve" the dispute because the air pirates were getting "nervous."

The pilot told the control tower the air pirates were determined to head for France at daybreak — with or without French authorization.

He also asked 140 submachine-gun armed shock police surrounding the craft at a distance not to attack to avoid casualties among the hostages.

The DC-9 was parked on a warmup runway far from the landing zone with only its green parking lights turned on.

Airport officials said scheduled flights were arriving and departing with slight delays.

Sale of Gasohol Begins in State

STAMFORD (UPI) — The president of the Connecticut Gasoline Retailers Association said 14 Fairfield County gas stations today started selling gasohol, as well as standard brands, in a revolt against major oil companies.

Wayne Konitshek, a Stamford station owner who heads the 1,200-member organization, said the group brought 60,000 gallons to 70,000 gallons of gasohol into the state the past few days.

"We snuck in the loads over the weekend," Konitshek said at a news conference at a local motel. "The oil companies don't know anything about it. It's going to be a bad day today for them."

He refused to say where they purchased the gasohol, which is a mixture of gas and alcohol, because of possible "retaliation." Konitshek did say the gasohol was bought out-of-state and on the spot market.

He said 15 more stations will be selling gasohol by the end of the week, stretching the network to Bridgeport.

"The oil companies have spent 50 years and over $100 billion developing a protected market for themselves," Konitshek said. "Their prices aren't subject to any competition until they reach the dealer level."

"We felt it was time to act, and we're acting today," he said. Thomas Fitzpatrick, the state's energy director who represented Gov. Ella Grasso at the news conference, said Mrs. Grasso felt the announcement was "an important event."

"This is an example of the competitive and enterprising spirit of small businessmen that they will go out and get a new product in the face of indifference and give the public an alternative," Fitzpatrick said.

Konitshek said he is selling gasohol at his Harvard Exxon station for $1.08 a gallon. He said the price at other stations will average three cents above the cost of premium unleaded gas.

Lawyers representing the association told members they could sell all the gasohol they wanted without violating their franchise contracts so long as they sell at least one of the major oil company products, he said.

Konitshek said the gas will be sold at his station; Hillside Shell in Riverside; Main Street Exxon, Stamford; Briscoe's Citgo, Stamford; Sotire's Exxon, Springdale; Parkway Citgo, Stamford; Victory Shell, Stamford; Darien Sunoco and Darien Exxon, Darien; New Canaan Chevron; Canaan Parish, New Canaan; Russel's Texaco, Norwalk; Delavan Avenue Mobil, Byram; Wellington's Sunoco, Trumbull.

Oil Spill Approaches Texas

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (UPI) — The edges of the largest oil spill in world history have approached the Texas coast and the government has assembled an armada of men and machinery to battle a potential marine disaster.

A massive series of oil slicks, tar balls, petroleum "pancakes" and "mousse" — a mixture of oil and water — were reported 8 miles south of the mouth of the Rio Grande late Sunday and more reconnaissance flights were scheduled today to chart their movement.

Coast Guard officials said winds and currents were slower than expected Sunday so no major quantities of oil had entered U.S. waters as originally expected.

Meacham, a spokesman for the Environmental Protection Agency, said late Sunday night.

He said the major slicks and accompanying petroleum byproducts were located about 12 miles south of Brownsville and just 8 miles south of the mouth of the Rio Grande.

Oil "pancakes" 6-10 feet in diameter were spotted by reconnaissance planes, he said, and heavy oil and sheen covered many sections of the Gulf of Mexico 90-40 miles off the Mexican coastline.

A 1,000-foot Navy boom entered the water Sunday on the northern side of the 1,200-foot wide Brazos-Santiago pass. Crewmen also "boomed off" the southern bay area, inside the pass, and the south side of the Brownsville Channel near a sensitive oyster breeding ground.

The second boom, 1,200 feet long, and another boom, 400 feet long, went into the water at the Coast Guard station at Port Isabel to protect valuable equipment.

Today, officials said, another 500-foot boom would be placed in the water at a northeasterly angle on the south side of the Brazos-Santiago pass.

Although the ship channel itself would remain open for the time being, spokesmen said, the series of booms were arrayed at angles in order to deflect oil coming from various directions and move it toward collecting areas where it could be vacuumed out of the water with special shore-based trucks with long hoses.

"As the oil comes up, it should be trapped by one boom or another," a Coast Guard spokesman said. "Hopefully, what one misses, the other will catch."

Planes and ships from the Coast Guard, Navy, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the University of Texas and commercial operators were waiting in an attempt to protect the area's delicate ecological balance.

It's Not Exactly 'Living Together'

Former Attorney General John Mitchell says he isn't exactly living with Mary Gore Dean, widow of former Atomic Energy Commission Chairman Gordon Dean. In an interview in this week's Newsweek, Mitchell says "living with" is "not the correct phraseology." He says he has his own place in northwest Washington, but uses her house "as a place to entertain or see business associates." Upon being paroled from prison six months ago, Mitchell, the highest-ranking member of the Nixon administration convicted in the Watergate cover-up, told reporters: "Don't call me, I'll call you." He told Newsweek the book he is writing about his experiences won't touch on ex-wife Martha or ex-boss Richard Nixon.

Small Change

The wife of Saudi Arabian financier Adnan Khashoggi is asking for a divorce settlement that sounds like a Gross National Product - $2.54 billion. "This is the biggest matrimonial-type case that I know of that's been filed anywhere," said celebrated attorney Marvin Michelson, who represents Soaya Khashoggi. He said he had to keep reassuring the secretaries typing the legal papers that, yes, there were that many zeroes. A breach-of-contract action was filed in Los Angeles against Khashoggi Friday seeking $2 billion, plus $50 million in punitive damages and $40 million in general damages. Khashoggi, 43, is head of the Triad Financial Establishment. Mrs. Khashoggi said her husband, whom she married when she was 17, deceived her into thinking she would share the profits.

Twiggy Branches Out

London's little Lesley Armstrong was a peculiar aspect of the so-called "british invasion" of the '60s. She was a skinny, flat-chested, 92-pound model, better known to the world as "Twiggy" and she took the fashion world by storm in 1966. Today she is 29, a mother, an actress, and 22 pounds heavier. "Those old times were great for me," she says. "The whole world was focused on England for some obscure reason." Now she's hoping to get back in the spotlight. She's recently completed a movie, "Goes the Bride," co-starring her husband, Michael Whitney. She's also participating in NBC's "U.S. against the World," a sports competition featuring two teams of celebrities. Twiggy, now a Los Angeles resident, will be playing for the United States.

King of the Road

Mauri "Steamtrain" Graham is what you call a hobo's hobo. "King of the Hoboes" for the second straight year at the 79th Hobo Convention in Britt, Iowa, during the weekend. He rapped up the title - decided by audience applause - with a fifty-one-minute speech that convinced the audience he needed the title to visit prisoners in penal institutions around the country. "He was the big favorite," said John Stegeman, publisher in the Britt newspaper. "I'm always meeting wonderful people," Steamtrain said. "A hobo loves all desire for money. He becomes more interesting in friends."

World Gold Price Rise Spurs New Prospecting

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) - Hard-working prospectors can earn about $20,000 a year these days in California's picturesque Gold Rush country - if they can find a space. California recently ran out of licenses to permit river dredging for the precious metal which is zooming in price on the world markets. "There's still gold in the rivers. There's a lot of it. But there's nothing easy about it. Most of the places you can drive to have been worked out. Some people take weeks to pack in," said Charles Barker, 28, of Chico, Calif. Barker, a former hairdresser and construction worker who works full time sucking gold from California rivers using a raft-like dredge equipped with a motor, believes gold buyers will pay a lot more in the near future. In Nevada, mining companies are readying a sophisticated drive for the precious metal. Arizonans have taken to the hills and claims in gold-rich Alaska are soaring. Dealers stop short of calling it a latter-day gold rush, but the high price of gold has rekindled an interest in the precious metal rarely seen since the nation's gold mines were shut down in the manpower crunch of World War II. The price of gold, for decades set at $35 an ounce, closed in Zurich at $287.425 an ounce Friday after breaking the $300 mark a few days earlier. Lured by the temptation of big money, scattered miners are reopening - though costs are high for reconstruction, maintenance and safety - and would-be prospectors are scouring Western rivers for gold as never before. Gold-hungry prospectors who flocked to the West more than a century ago barely skimmed the surface, today's experts say. Modern-day mining and dredging techniques can search out gold the coverd-wagon ilk couldn't begin to tap. "The old-timers just took what was easy," Barker said. Other part-time, weekend prospec-

Police Have New Lead Victim's Bicycle Is Found

NEW HARTFORD (UPI) - The bicycle of a 12-year-old girl was riding the night she was last seen alive has been found in the woods, giving state police another lead in tracking down the killer, police say. Two couples riding motorcycles found Katherine K. Ebersole's bicycle Sunday afternoon when they stopped on a dead end road about four miles north of the wooded area in Burlington where her body was found July 28, officials said. "The Burlington girl was riding the bike home from swimming lessons at a neighborhood recreation center when she disappeared July 27. Her repeatedly stabbed body was found the next day. The yellow 10-speed bicycle, the subject of an unsuccessful earlier search by hundreds of volunteers, firemen and state troopers, was found at 3:30 p.m. about 35 feet in from South Road, said state police spokesman Joseph Crowley. "As they just happened to stumble on it. As soon as they found it they figured they had something," Crowley said, noting the search for the bike had been well-publicized. The bicycle was intact and sent to the state police laboratory in Bethany for analysis, where it will be checked for fingerprints and "anything at all," Crowley said. "We've wanted the bike all along hoping it might lead us to something else." State police are also trying to trace an inexpensive folding pocketknife they believe was the murder weapon, and a shiny red Buick seen in the vicinity of the slaying. The pocket knife was found by a volunteer Wednesday. It was described as a folding pocket knife with a 4-inch stainless steel blade and a dark, rosewood color handle. Crowley said state police were still working to locate the owner of the medium to full-size red Buick, seen parked and unoccupied near the crime scene July 27. Crowley said the area where the bicycle was discovered was searched by the state police major crime squad, but nothing else was found. The couples, who wished to remain anonymous, told police they heard about the bike in news reports and notified Canton police when they found it.

Officials Ask Chief To Resign

EAST WINDSOR (UPI) - Two town officials have called for Police Chief Gerald W. Sibley's resignation following published reports that he allegedly suppressed evidence about a police sergeant's off-duty conduct. First Selectman Edward J. Hastill and Police Commissioner Elizabeth Roman Sunday also said Sibley should be suspended pending the outcome of an investigation into a Hartford Courant report that he withheld key details about the incident last winter. On Feb. 20, off-duty Police Sgt. Thomas G. Moran was found asleep in an unmarked town cruiser on Main Street in Windsor, about 20 miles west of East Windsor. The Courant said Sunday that Sibley presented a toned-down revised version of the incident at Police Commission hearings. Hastill said Sibley's "effectiveness in this town is over" and he hoped the chief would resign "in order to save the town of East Windsor a lot of trouble." Hastill said Sibley should be suspended "without prejudice" pending the outcome of the probe. Roman also urged Sibley to resign, saying he has "hurt the town's image." The Courant said Windsor police, at the request and with the approval of Chief John F. Arcalasi, rewrote the original report and omitted Moran's verbally abusive behavior and the presence of alcohol in the car. The newspaper quoted police sources who said Sibley read both reports, but presented only the second one.

Funds Asked For Station

HARTFORD (UPI) - Gov. Ella Grasso is expected to ask the state Bond Commission to approve a $850,000 allocation as the first step in turning New Haven's Union Station into a modern transportation center. The New Haven Register Sunday reported the governor planned to ask for the allocation Aug. 24 to buy the unused 59-year-old railroad station and an adjacent parking lot from Penn Central. Plans call for the state to use federal, state and city money to renovate the building to serve rail, bus, taxi and some truck traffic. Repairs to the station roof already are under way.

Search Finds Pilot's Body

GROTON (UPI) - Searcher have recovered the body of a small plane pilot who crashed last week trying to land at Groton-New London Airport, leaving three dead. Police said the body of Dr. George Hulme, 45, of Moraga, Calif., was found Sunday floating in the Long Island Sound about 300 feet southwest of the crash site. The bodies of Hulme's two sons, Jamie, 16, and Jeffrey, 13, were found earlier in the week. There were no others aboard. The twin-engine Piper Comanche crashed Tuesday morning trying to make an instrument landing in dense fog.

Rabbi's Peace Solution Based on Experience

By CHRIS BLAKE
Herald Reporter

EAST HARTFORD — As a child growing up in what is now Israel, Rabbi Myer Asper used to play with Arab children, swim in a public Arab swimming pool and buy Arab merchandise.

Even as a child, Rabbi Asper, 45, believed that the best way to bring peace to the Middle East was to sit the leaders of Israel and the Arab world down and get them talking to one another.

"It was my feeling since childhood — not knowing the politics of major powers then — that if they would have let the local populations alone, all of the problems, the emotions, the feelings, the mental problems... all would have been solved, he said.

Rabbi Asper is the rabbi at Temple Beth Tefilah, 465 Oak St., East Hartford.

U.S. at the age of 16 on Dec. 10, 1950, more than two years after the 1948 War for Independence in Israel.

Rabbi Asper spoke Arabic fluently as a child and got along well with Arabs, as did many other Jews in Palestine.

"The British interest in the area changed all this," he said. "They separated us and separation brought hatred."

The British, he said, separated Israel from the Arab world by promising the Arab leadership that things would be done according to their will.

The British also placed limits on Jewish immigration and left airfields and ammunition for the Arabs, he said.

"I'm not trying to be political, but this is my own view from experience," he said.

"After 30 years it's been proven — all you need is to bring the two enemies together," he said.

"President Carter did the right thing," he locked them up and said, 'You're not going to do anything unless you smile at each other,' he said.

There are several reasons why the hatred has endured for 30 years, he said. These include economic incentive and the lack of communication between Israel and the Arab world.

Rabbi Asper has been the rabbi at Temple Beth Tefilah for one year. The temple has 100 families from East Hartford, Glastonbury, South Windsor and western Manchester.

The temple organized itself on May 4, 1948. It was known as the East Hartford Jewish Community Center and it was housed at the South

There are three different philosophies under Judaism, Rabbi Asper explains.

Orthodox Jews adhere as closely as possible to the origins of the faith.

Conservative Jews take a "middle of the road" approach and Reform Jews take the most liberal interpretation, he said.

Within Judaism, it is only a matter of different philosophies. When one changes from Conservative to Orthodox, no conversion is necessary," he said.

'Truly Isolated'

Before coming to East Hartford, Rabbi Asper served in Indiana, Pa., for five years.

The town was isolated from any large Jewish community, he said. The closest Jewish community was Pittsburgh, 65 miles to the west, so "I served a wide area," he said.

"It was challenging. I had to take care of Jews at happy and sad occasions, sometimes traveling 100 miles to officiate," he said.

"Also, I had to make decisions more or less on my own, even though I belonged to a group of rabbis in Pittsburgh," he said.

From 1971 to 1976, he served as rabbi of Rochester, N.Y.

"There I was part of a large Jewish community," he said. The Jewish community there was comparable in size to the Jewish community in the Hartford area, he said.

"I have to serve a local and larger community, yet I find it more challenging and a more pleasant feeling now that I am part of a larger group and not as isolated," he said.

Rabbi Asper is a member of the Clergy Association of East Hartford, an interfaith group which meets once a month and tries to bring together different faiths through interfaith services and education.

He enjoys his position on the clergy group because it gives him a chance to serve the town at large.

He is also chaplain for the Jewish sick of the area and is educational director of the religious school at the temple.

"It's a 24-hour-a-day job and a seven-day-a-week job as well," he said.

He said he hopes to join the clergy association in Glastonbury because he serves the Jewish population of that town.

Educational Training

Rabbi Asper attended a rabbinical institute in New York City and was graduated in 1956. At the same time, he attended the Hebrew Teachers Institute of New York and Brooklyn College.

He has also completed one semester of undergraduate study on political science at Indiana (Pa.) University.

He has been involved in the religious education field since 1956.

His wife is Hinde Asper and they have four children. They are Debbie, Eli, Dovv and Tammy. His family lives at 590 Oak St.

Rabbi Asper said he likes being a rabbi "very much."

Temple Officers

Rabbi Asper said the temple recently elected officers for the year.

They are Fred Ballet, president; Melvin Marcus, vice president; David Paris, vice president; Doris Factor, treasurer; Gordon Katz, financial secretary; Arlene Hoffmann, recording secretary; Eydle Meyers, corresponding secretary; Shirley Brunswick, trustee; and Carol Goldstein, trustee.

Other temple officials include William Askwith, co-chairman, membership; Victor Berman, landscape; Joseph Frank, religion; Myron Freed, plaque and cemetery; Sue Levine, education; Edie Molnau, gifts and welfare; Michelle Pilver, nursery school; David Shapiro, house chair; and Philip Snyder, co-chairman of membership in charge of Glastonbury.

New Book Deals With Andrea Doria Rescue

By WARREN TALBOT
BOSTON (UPI) —

She was a beautiful ship, perhaps the most lovely sea-going vessel of her day, inside her plush ballrooms and cabins, passengers were enjoying the last night of their trans-Atlantic sea voyage. There was singing, dancing, good food and drink.

As captain of the Italian passenger liner Andrea Doria, Piero Calamai was charged with the safety and well-being of more than 1,200 people. He was confident. After all his ship was unsinkable. So what if it was foggy. He was experienced, he had a good crew, and he had traveled this same path many, many times before.

But the path Calamai had chosen was taking his ship on a collision course with the sleek Swedish liner, Stockholm, and a night of cold terror in which the courage of men, women and children from all walks of life would be tested to the ultimate.

At 11:10 p.m. on the night of July 25, 1956 off the coast of Nantucket Island the Stockholm rammed into the side of the Andrea Doria leaving a huge, cavernous hole.

There was no time to scream.

About 40 passengers aboard the Italian luxury liner were killed upon impact either in their sleep or while getting ready for bed. Some of their bodies simply disappeared into the black sea.

The Andrea Doria, en route from Europe and scheduled to dock in New York the next day, began to fill with water. She was listing badly. The "unsinkable" ship was sinking. But Captain Calamai either couldn't or didn't want to believe it.

In 10 hours she would be at the bottom of the sea.

How more than 1,600 passengers were rescued is the subject of a book by author William Hoffer. The book, "Saved: The Story of the Andrea Doria and the Greatest Sea Rescue in History" was published on the 23rd anniversary of the sinking.

Hoffer's chronicle is not so much about how and why the sinking occurred, but about the passengers who for 10 terrifying hours fought fate and themselves each other to survive.

"It got to be one of the truly great adventures of our contemporary era," Hoffer said in an interview.

"It was without a doubt the greatest sea rescue in history. Everybody on that ship that night had an incredible story to tell.

Hoffer, 36, whose most previous work was as co-author of "Midnight Express" which was made into a hit movie, interviewed more than 100 survivors of the accident and reviewed thousands of pages of reports and investigations on the accident.

He started tracking down the survivors through old newspaper accounts.

"Everybody I talked to could remember vividly what happened to them that night. Of course they were all facing death and many fought hard to live," Hoffer said.

"Everybody wonders what they would do when faced with death. Some will tell you what they would do, but no one can really be sure until that time comes."

Hoffer said there were people who admitted they turned cowardly and there were heroes who just shrugged off their actions.

For years after the accident many passengers spoke heatedly about Italian crewmembers abandoning ship before the passengers. Many others were critical of the way Captain Calamai handled the situation.

"The chips were down. They thought they were going to die... There were men who pushed in front of women and children... There were people who fought each other for life jackets," Hoffer said.

The Andrea Doria had 16 lifeboats to accommodate all the passengers, but because of the severe listing of the vessel, all but the ones on one side were inoperable.

According to Hoffer, Calamai, who may have been in shock at the thought of losing his vessel, gave little information to the passengers on what to do. As a result most of them, with the aid of some courageous crewmembers, were left to fend for themselves.

Captain Calamai sent out an SOS which was picked up by several vessels in the area. One of those ships was the French luxury liner Ile de France. She was far away from the scene and her captain Baron Raoul de Beaudan had a choice. Either turn back or proceed to Europe.

"He was literally on the edge of responsibility. It was entirely within his discretion not to turn around. He knew there were other ships closer to the scene," Hoffer said.

As it turned out the Baron's decision to turn around was a savior. His ship had enough lifeboats to send to the stricken survivors. Calamai's decision to turn around was a savior. His ship had enough lifeboats to send to the stricken survivors.

At any moment the Andrea Doria could capsize, crushing the Ile de France lifeboats, taking the passengers and rescuers to the bottom of the ocean.

Calamai had decided he was going to go down with his ship, but he was talked out of it.

After the accident Calamai lived 12 more years never returning to sea and retiring in his hometown of Genoa, Italy.

Hoffer went to Italy to interview some of the sea captain's relatives. One of them, Calamai's daughter Marina, said her father never mentioned the sinking.

That silence was broken on his deathbed.

"It is all right. Are the passengers saved?" were his dying words.

One of the survivors, Tom Kelly, was a 28-year-old newly ordained Roman Catholic priest on his way home from Rome. He remembered that he had been in shock at the thought of losing his vessel. Kelly listened to passengers' confessions. He consoled others. Four times he went below the decks of the sinking ship to find life jackets.

"I remember I just couldn't go down there anymore. Remember the ship was listing and it was like you were walking upside down through those corridors. I came up for the last time. I had a life jacket on and in front of me there was this old man and with his eyes he was asking me for the jacket. I just couldn't give it to him. I wanted to live, too," Kelly said in an interview.

The vision of that old man stayed with Kelly for many years.

Kelly today is an associate professor of sociology at Lake Superior State College in Michigan. He is no longer a priest and is married. "I enjoyed being a priest, but I just wasn't as happy as I could have been," he said.

"I think that experience was a kind of a life experience a confronting death kind of thing. It taught me a lot about life. I really felt it helped me to get my priorities straight. For a long time — death — I just wasn't afraid of it," he said.

In one of his college courses Kelly teaches how people in different cultures react to disasters. In one lecture he relates his own experiences. "It's a vivid kind of recollection and the students just love it."

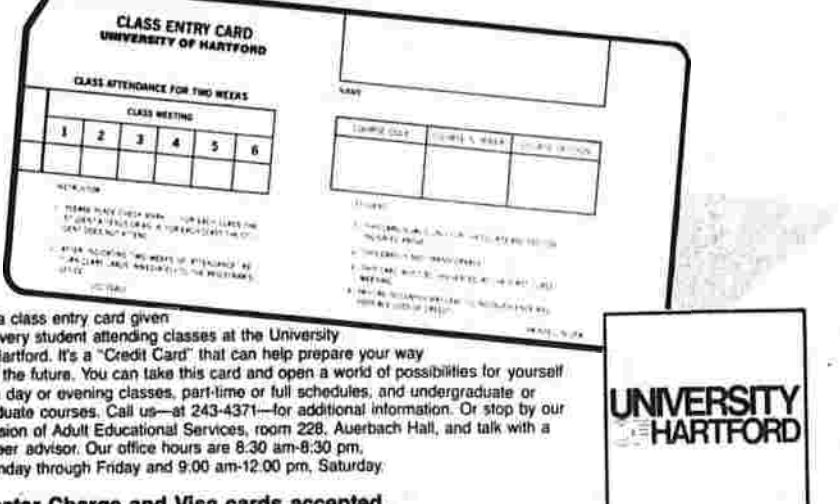

For long time after the accident Kelly said he was treated as a hero. "I never felt like a very heroic person. Heroes are supposed to be heroes all the time. It's kind of nice to know that to heroes are just ordinary people."

Adult School Plans Courses

MANCHESTER - The Manchester Adult Evening School is again planning a two-semester schedule of courses at Manchester High School beginning Sept. 17.

Brochures for the fall semester are being printed and will be available at local banks, libraries and the Municipal Building about Aug. 20th. Several new courses will be offered including some for high school credit.

More than 150 different courses were offered last year with a total enrollment of about 4,200 persons. In spite of the rising costs, registration fees will remain the same as last year. Regular courses will be $6 per course for Manchester residents and $12 per course for non-residents. Recreational courses will be $10 per course for local residents and $15 per course for non-residents. The only exception is Social Dancing which is $15 per couple for residents and $20 per couple for non-residents.

In reference to the number of phone calls received this past year, it is apparent that many people do not realize that the Manchester Adult Evening School offers only two semesters of classes. The fall semester runs from September to the end of November and the winter semester is held from February until the end of April.

Anyone interested in teaching or initiating new courses should contact the director.

Conversion of Park Now 'In God's Hands'

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Carter says he tried to convert President Park Chung Hee to Christianity and the South Korean leader was "very interested" - but matters now rest "in God's hands."

Carter's schedule today called for him to meet with bishops of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, and then attend a swearing-in ceremony for G. William Miller as secretary of the Treasury and Paul Volcker as chairman of the Federal Reserve System.

White teaching an adult Bible class at the First Baptist Church of Washington, Carter Sunday said the "root of the weakness of the Christian church, one of them anyway, is the reluctance to assume the responsibility placed on our shoulders."

Noting that a Christian should try to win new followers, the president said he would work during his trip to South Korea in late June.

Carter said he met with about 20 Catholic and Protestant religious leaders in South Korea during the visit and the discussion included human rights violations by the Park regime.

After the meeting, Carter said, the Rev. Billy Kim, a leading Presbyterian minister, approached him and asked, in reference to Park, "Would you witness to him about the Christian church?"

The president said that a short time later, he and Park, a Buddhist, were traveling together in a car, with only an interpreter and a security guard.

"I told him about our faith," Carter said. "He was very interested. I said I was sorry we didn't have more time to discuss it."

Carter then suggested he could put Park in touch with someone who could go into more detail, and Park accepted the offer. "I asked him if he had a preference and he said, 'Well, I know Billy Kim...'

The president said he contacted Kim to follow up.

"I don't know what will happen," Carter said. "Now it's in God's hands."

"This is the kind of thing that can happen between presidents and everyone," he said.

South Korea is a predominantly Buddhist nation, although it does have a large number of Christians - about 2 million.

Carter was a Baptist missionary earlier in his life, and has indicated to friends he intends to perform similar work after he leaves the White House.

He also praised the evangelical zeal of the Plains Baptist Church, in his hometown in Georgia. "No one came into our Plains community without being visited almost immediately" by a church representative, he said.

Some racial difficulties still linger, he acknowledged.

"It is still very difficult for white church members to reach out genuinely to a black," he said.

Andover Story Hour
ANDOVER - A special story hour will be held at the Andover Public Library Aug. 15, from 10-11 a.m. A puppet show, "Danny Duck," will be presented by members of the Manchester Junior Women's Club, and Mrs. Gwen Wirtalla will start the hour with stories and songs. She conducted pre-school story hours at the library last year. The program, for children 3 to 8, is free.

Reservations can be made by calling the library Monday evening, Tuesday afternoon and evening, or Friday afternoon and evening, 742-7428.

Muzorewa Denounces Settlement

LUSAKA, Zambia (UPI) - Zimbabwe Rhodesian Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa today denounced a British-backed comprehensive settlement designed to turn more power in his country over to blacks, calling it "totally unfair."

The British Commonwealth summit meeting in Lusaka Sunday unanimously adopted a nine-point peace package intended to stop the guerrilla war and increase the powers of the black majority government.

The surprising break through called for sweeping constitutional reform that would include guarantees for the white minority, lifting the economic sanctions, new elections and an end to the seven years of bloody fighting between guerrillas and government troops.

In Salisbury, Muzorewa said the settlement plan was "totally unfair and in fact an insult to the electorate" that put him in power.

Muzorewa called on Britain to rethink its position but stopped short of rejecting the package of proposals.

"What has emerged from the Commonwealth conference in Lusaka so far as Zimbabwe Rhodesia is concerned are some positive elements and some which still require substantial clarification," Muzorewa said in a statement.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher today recognized the difficulties the agreement faced, saying she is not "starry-eyed" about achieving a permanent peace in Zimbabwe Rhodesia despite the accord between Britain and front-line black African nations.

However, Mrs. Thatcher virtually ruled out the use of British troops to police the war-torn nation during free elections.

She told a news conference that enormous pressure will be put on the Patriotic Front guerrillas to accept the kind of democratic constitution that Britain has granted other former African colonies.

Her statement implied that black Africa's front-line states will now force the Front into accepting a reasonable constitution drawn up by London despite initial statements this week by guerrilla spokesmen that the Lusaka document was "unacceptable."

Speaking of the Commonwealth agreement, Mrs. Thatcher said, "If I may put myself on the back a bit, it proliferate and prosper. These are strictly commercial ventures by 'fast-buck' entrepreneurs appealing to human vanity and reaping profits from the sale of 'Who's Who' type ventures in the local area. Manchester High School principal Jacob Ludes III indicated that the school has received numerous calls from students concerning the validity of such activities.

Ludes quoted a recent advisory from the Connecticut Association of Secondary Schools which states: "Who's Who" type national promotions continue to begin implementing it "very shortly."

"If we hadn't got an agreement here," she said in a BBC interview, "the chance (for peace) might have gone forever. We've got a chance. We are determined to take it... to find a solution by the ballot box and not the 'bullet'."

Carter then suggested he could put Park in touch with someone who could go into more detail, and Park accepted the offer. "I asked him if he

Super Switches Start

BOSTON (UPI) - Interstate long distance calls made by telephone users in eastern and central Massachusetts are now being routed through a $50 million electronic switching system dubbed "Super Switcher."

The new equipment - capable of routing huge volumes of long distance calls at speeds approaching the speed of light - is located at 250 Bent St. in Cambridge and went on line Saturday, a New England Telephone Co. spokesman said.

The Bell System unit, known as the Number 4 Electronic Switching System, is owned by AT&T Long Lines and is the first such equipment to be installed in Massachusetts.

More than 100 such offices are to be installed nationwide by 1985.

Plans call for a similar unit to be installed in Springfield next year, and the two systems will handle most of Massachusetts' interstate long distance calling.

The new "Super Switcher" can connect 150 calls every second - 550,000 an hour - which is four times the capacity of the most advanced long distance switching equipment previously in use.

In addition to helping the Bell System hold down future long distance rates, the switching system has the potential for providing a variety of dramatic new communications services.

Jack Anderson Teamsters Gyped of Millions? Senate Probing Kleindienst

WASHINGTON — During the Nixon years, law and order were honored more in the parchment than in the practice. The term was introduced to politics by Richard Nixon's campaign...

The fee came from Joseph Hauser, a Beverly Hills businessman who wanted the multi-million-dollar insurance contract for the Teamsters pension fund...

The Senate investigators concluded that the generous fee was granted solely to buy Kleindienst's influence with Fitzsimmons, and that Kleindienst was quite willing to sell his influence...

Mitchell was released early this year from prison. Now Kleindienst is being investigated for his part in a sordid influence-peddling scheme...

Sound Off: Q. I think Carter is sincere but ineffectual. What do you think? — Lauri Leskinen, Mohawk, Mich.

A. The tragedy of Jimmy Carter is that he will be judged by what he does, not what he wants to do. He means well; his heart is pure; he desperately wants to be a good president. But it has become painfully obvious that he wears his presidential authority like an oversized hat on an undersized head. He has turned out, unapplied, to be mashed potato.

Comment India Gets a New Prime Minister

By SUZANNE F. GREEN NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Charan Singh, a son of the soil and India's new prime minister, is about to produce the shakiest government in the nation's history.

The 77-year-old former finance minister is a product of the same political cradle as Morarji Desai, the 62-year-old politician he replaces.

After Desai resigned in the wake of massive political defections, it took Singh 10 days to scrape together a coalition of unlikely bedfellows that parliamentary sources predict will not last six months.

His government will consist of the Janata Party, about 90 Desai turncoats; the Congress Party parliamentary opposition; a breakaway faction of former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's party; and a series of small regional and independent factions.

From outside the government, the 61-year-old Mrs. Gandhi's own Congress Party will offer its backing along with a loose grouping of socialists led by former Industries minister George Fernandes.

Leaders of most of these groups have expressed their enmity for each other several times over. And many factions changed sides numerous times during the political scramble that preceded President Neelam Sanjiva Reddy's announcement that Singh would form India's next government, its fifth in 32 years of independence.

The threat of mid-term elections has hung like a pall over the nation's politicians — with the notable exception of Mrs. Gandhi — throughout the fierce lobbying between Singh and Desai, who had hoped to succeed himself.

Mrs. Gandhi, who ruled India for 13 years from 1966 and by emergency decree between 1975 and 1977, is the only major figure on India's political scene not tarnished by participation in the Desai's government, which was characterized by ineffective handling of the nation's problems.

The diverse elements of Desai's Janata Party government, united only by their passion to oust Mrs. Gandhi in 1977, have not since abandoned their individual struggles for power.

But Mrs. Gandhi, who never lost her charisma and power with the poor, looks appealing to people who miraculously have forgotten her excesses and the repression they suffered during her rule.

Political observers suggest Mrs. Gandhi will support the Singh government until she is ready to pull the rug and walk away with the national elections the president will be forced to call.

arm in brother Robert. Lyndon Johnson, subtly certain that he could do everything better than anyone else anyway, made only intermittently effective use of Bill Moyers as a first among equals in his covey of aides.

Richard Nixon was the next president to make full use of the concept and potential of a super-assistant, and with full awareness of what he wanted. H.R. Haldeman was in effect deputy president for domestic affairs, overseeing the day-to-day details of administration and freeing the president to concentrate on broad policymaking, particularly in foreign affairs.

Jimmy Carter's promise not to have a chief of staff was in large part a reaction to the misuse of power, actual or alleged, associated with the Nixon-Haldeman relationship.

Don Graff Hail to the Chief of Staff

It may be some time before the full meaning of the Carter administration shake-up is apparent.

Is it confirmation of the president as a reborn leader or is it a demonstration of public relations image engineering?

Has it strengthened the crusade against the energy crisis or has it completely demoralized the troops?

Whatever history's ultimate answers to those and other questions, one consequence is immediately clear: Amid all the shattered political crockery in Washington, there is also a common promise — that in 1977 of the newly elected president that he would never have a "chief of staff."

There are some who would say that Hamilton Jordan has been that all along, thanks to his long-standing and well-publicized special relationship with Jimmy Carter. But not officially, not with title. And that can make a great deal of difference in both the clout the position carries and the assurance with which it is wielded, as Jordan has been demonstrating in his initial official acts.

There is nothing new about special relationships between presidents and aides. Woodrow Wilson and his Colonel House, Franklin D. Roosevelt's Harry Hopkins. But these were more confidants and special-project men, the relationship was special but essentially informal where not entirely unofficial.

The contemporary presidential chief of staff is a creation of Dwight Eisenhower. A staff man as a soldier, he carried the table of organization over into his presidency. As his administrative deputy, he selected Sherman Adams, who as governor of New Hampshire had played a key role in the Eisenhower nomination and election.

For six years access to the president for political crockery in Washington was via Adams' office, until in 1958 Eisenhower very reluctantly ended the relationship as a consequence of a now largely forgotten influence-buying scandal.

Succeeding John Kennedy had need of an officially designated deputy because he came into office already equipped with a strong right

VA News

The Veterans Administration has commissioned an in-depth survey designed to aid the federal government in making policy decisions relating to veterans of the Vietnam War.

The new effort will consist of an advanced survey which is intended to provide a relatively brief, general overview of the public's attitudes toward Vietnam Era veterans. This survey is to be completed by October 1.

A second more comprehensive and lengthy survey will measure the attitudes of four specific groups: Vietnam Era veterans themselves, employers, educators and the general public. The results of this survey are due in one year.

This survey will be designed to determine what, if any, problems each group perceives Vietnam Era veterans to have, what programs each group perceives as necessary to aid these veterans, and what sense of obligation each group feels toward the Vietnam Era veteran.

VA chief Max Cleland said today that employers and educators will be polled because these groups have had substantial contact with Vietnam Era veterans which should provide special insight into the problems of veterans.

The survey of the veterans themselves will provide information on the way they characterize themselves and their problems, and their perception of the obligation owed them by the country, he said.

'The Year of Oversight'
Sums Up 1979 Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) - "Congress has been suffering from legislative indigestion," Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker says of the decline in congressional activity this year.

From the very beginning, members of the 96th Congress, reflecting a perceived trend of conservatism among the voters, have dubbed this "the year of oversight" - meaning Congress would examine current programs, not rush to adopt new ones.

When it came to making laws, the figures were even more disparate. In 1977, the first year of the 96th, there was a Democratic president to go with a Democratic Congress - or vice versa - for the first time in eight years.

As for bills passed by both houses and signed by Carter, there were 61 at this point in the last Congress and only 41 so far this year. No bills have been vetoed.

Even the rhetoric has dropped off. The Congressional Record, which prints the daily proceedings of both houses plus lengthy speeches never delivered, was down to 18,042 pages as of July 31, compared with 21,342 two years ago - a 15 percent drop.

And the number of roll call votes dropped about a third, falling from 219 to 241 in the Senate and from 289 to 183 in the House.

AFL-CIO Without Meany

CHICAGO (UPI) - Members of the AFL-CIO Executive Council gathered in Chicago today to start work on policy stands involving the energy crisis and ratification of the SALT II treaty, but without their 84-year-old leader, George Meany.

Meany, who has been president of the 13.6 million-member federation since its inception in 1955, remained at his home in Bethesda, Md., a suburb of Washington, recuperating from a hip problem that has kept him away from work for more than three months.

He has yet to announce whether he will seek re-election to another two-year term when the federation holds its biennial convention this November in Washington.

On Sunday, Meany ventured from his home for the first time since May 21, and aides said he was anxious to make a trip soon to AFL-CIO headquarters, located only a block from the White House. That trip could occur this week.

Dairy Queen Softball Champs
Following 4-3 Decision Over Silkey's

Capturing the championship in the 1979 Connecticut ASA Major State Softball Tournament Saturday at Fitzgerald Field was the Hartford Road Dairy Queen women's team.

Dairy Queen captured the title by going undefeated in the double elimination play. Silkey's of Simsbury took second place, the Connecticut Clippers of North Haven third and Verdolini's of Meriden fourth.

Tying Run Cut Down at Home Plate in final inning Saturday at Fitzgerald Field. As catcher Kathy Walling of Dairy Queens held onto ball and blocked plate to prevent Tish Dwyer of Silkey's from scoring tying run.

Moriarty's Bow,
Three-Way Tie

Unable to take over sole possession of fourth and final playoff spot in the Twilight League, Moriarty Bros. fell into a three-way tie for the position as it dropped a 7-6 decision to Volkswagen last night at St. Thomas Seminary.

The Gas Housers, 13-10-2, are deadlocked with Hartford Jay Alai (13-11-2) and Bristol Cassins (13-12-2), each with 28 points. Volkswagen is tied for second place with the Capitols, each with 22 points.

The M-Bs face league-leading Sampson Progressing (20-4-1) tonight at 5-6 at Seminary and finish up Tuesday against the Imaginers, also at Seminary at 5-5.

Stan Lewis' three-run, two-out homer in the top of the seventh inning gave Volkswagen the decision. John Snyder clouted a three-run blast in the fourth to give Volkswagen a 4-1 lead but Moriarty's scored four times in its half to take a 4-4 edge.

Legion Junior Nine
Splits in Tourney

Still alive in the Bristol Invitational Tournament is the Manchester Junior Legion baseball team.

The locals woned Hartford, 2-1, Saturday morning at Page Park and suffered a 6-2 setback to Wallingford last night at Muszy Field in the double elimination play.

Manchester faces the Newton-Bristol loser tonight at Muszy at 6:30 with the loser eliminated.

Skip Moreau hurried a six-hit, three-run homer and striking only one, to lead Manchester to victory over West Hartford.

West Hartford opened the scoring in the first inning but Manchester scored its runs in the third. With one out, Scott Labrecque singled and swiped second. He scored on a single by Jon Dubois, who advanced to third on a perfectly executed hit-and-run single by Joe Demeo. Dubois then scored what proved to be the winning run on an Alex Britnell sacrifice fly.

Lopez Won as Expected

SUNNINGDALE, England (UPI) - Nancy Lopez, as expected, won her seventh tournament of the season and the 16th of her spectacular two-year career Sunday, but stopped a few heartbeats in the process.

Lopez, seven strokes clear overnight after carding rounds of 68 and 70, seemed all set to retain her European LPGA title with ease.

Instead, in a nightmare run of five bogeys in eight holes, the 22-year-old's tempo deserted her and she stepped onto the 16th tee only two shots ahead of Joyce Kaziemski. In a remarkable turnaround, Lopez appeared to have lost her driving flair which had intimidated the 6,174-yard, par-74 Sunningdale Old Course and the rest of the pack all week.

"We were playing very slowly and I never got my tempo going," said Lopez, who now plans a two-week break to move.

Kaziemski's second place, worth $10,780, equaled her best finish in 11 years as a professional.

Legion Wins Zone Championship,
Gains Spot in State Tournament

Legion baseball team annexed the Zone Eight title, sweeping a best-of-two-three series with Windsor.

The Post 102 crew clinched the berth in the state tournament which opens Friday at Palmer Field in Middletown with a 7-2 decision last Saturday at Windsor High.

Manchester took the opener from Windsor last Friday at Eagle Field in a rain-interrupted clash, 10-7.

The locals, 30-8 overall, will meet Zone Three champ Middletown in their first tournament test Friday evening at 8 o'clock. The clubs met twice in exhibition clashes with Middletown taking both by 5-3 and 11-1 counts.

The tournament is double elimination. Windsor, a scrappy club which refused to quit but nevertheless wilted up 15-10, had a 2-1 lead going into the fifth inning. But Mike Gilbert, filling in for the injured Mike Freiheit, slugged a seeing eye two-out, two-run single to right and that proved to be the game-winner.

Ken Hill was the architect in the clincher, twisting a four-bitter. The curve-balling right-hander went to a full count on plenty of batters but issued only one free pass, striking out seven.

"It feels very sweet," voiced a beaming Manchester Coach Jack Holk, who wasn't all that shocked when the turs overran. "It all depended on our defense and our pitching came along. They didn't walk too many," he explained.

Bosox on Spree Sweeping Brewers

MILWAUKEE (UPI) - The Boston Red Sox might have been fired in the second game of their double-header with Milwaukee, but you wouldn't have known it by the way they swung their bats.

The Red Sox blasted 27 hits in the nightcap Sunday, an American League season high, to thrash the Brewers 19-5 and sweep the twinned.

Behind front-runner Baltimore to make matters worse, Tuesday the Brewers played a six-game road trip Tuesday against the same Orioles and Red Sox who beat them seven of eight at home.

In the second game, 12 of the 13 Red Sox who stepped up to the plate got hits. Fisk triggered Boston's rousing six Milwaukee pitchers with run-scoring singles in the first and third innings.

It was the best game I've had this year," said Carlton Fisk, whose four hits and four RBI led the Boston attack in the second game. "But it was also the best offensive game our team and I had."

So all he did was go out and beat the American League East-leading Orioles 3-2 on a seven-hit, nine-run, complete 14th game of the season and becoming the first pitcher in the league to win 15 games.

Orlando Manager Earl Weaver said, "That was the worst I've seen John, and he was still damn great." John, 15, was rocked with one out in the third inning by back-to-back home runs by Ken Singleton, the 27th and Eddie Murray, his 15th, for a 2-0 Baltimore lead.

John Not at Best But Stops Orioles

New York (UPI) - Be advised, Tommy John wasn't at his best Sunday. The New York Yankees left-hander complained of a headache before the game against the Baltimore Orioles, which was played in 93-degree heat, and said that it never really let up.

John pitched the first four innings and he felt better for a while, but it never really went away. And then right in the middle of the game it started to pound, pound, pound, and I don't know if I'll be able to finish.

Munson's Memory Will Live in Ohio

CANTON, Ohio (UPI) - Baseball star Thurman Munson will be buried today, but his memory will linger in this northern Ohio city as long as there are boulevards, shopping centers and athletic fields.

Munson, an All-Star catcher for the New York Yankees, was killed last Thursday in an airplane crash. This city's most popular hero since the late President William McKinley and already dozens have started pouring in to build a tribute to his memory.

A monument, which stands at the city's landmark, once was erected in memory of McKinley. The changing of a school's name, or even a street, would seem a logical move in the wake of Munson within the next few weeks.

"Anything is possible," said Joe Gilbenson, a boyhood pal of Munson who still lives in the city. "I would say the name of the stadium in the sandlots. 'People want to donate such and such amount of dollars to get something built in his honor. I would say the stadium. It would happen where he lived in his home. A field after that."

Munson's immense popularity was never more evident than it was Sunday when thousands of fans and friends turned out to pay their last respects.

For four hours - two in the afternoon and two at night - they moved past his flower-draped casket in, appropriately enough, the McKinley Room of the Canton Civic Center. Many knelt in silent prayer and fought back tears while others wept openly as they offered condolences to Munson's wife Diane and her three
