MANCHESTER — The second phase of a drain project along Porter Street and Oak Grove Street is under way. The drain is designed to limit the amount of water that can collect in a pond at Adelaide Road and Porter Street so that it will not flood homes in the area. The second phase, which will cost about $80,000, involves installing a 12-inch plastic pipe from the pond to Porter Street and Oak Grove Street where it will join a recently installed 26-inch concrete pipe which empties into a Porter Brook on Oak Grove Street near Meadow Lane.

Vote Postpone for Young's Sake

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — In a personal tribute to U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young, the Arab bloc at the United Nations Friday agreed to postpone a Security Council vote on a Palestinian homeland resolution that Washington had threatened to veto. Kuwaiti Ambassador Abdallah Yacoub Bishara announced the decision to reporters even as Israel and the PLO set the stage for a confrontation in Security Council.

taking the floor on the second day of debate to exchange insults over the war in south Lebanon and Young's resignation as U.N. ambassador. Bishara, who himself played a role in the events that led to Young's resignation over his unauthorized meeting with a PLO official, made it plain that the Arabs were only letting the United States off the diplomatic hook because of their respect for Young.

Peach Festival Draws Crowd

MANCHESTER — The annual Peach Festival, sponsored by the 8th District Fire Department, now in its 22nd year, was crowded with peach lovers Friday night, enjoying the fruit mounted on cake and topped with loads of whipped cream. Frank Mordavsky, assistant fire chief, said that after all 4,000 tickets for the festival were sold, it was necessary to issue more. The festival's popularity is obvious to any passer-by, with lines forming to get admission tickets and patient people waiting to get their share of the dessert.

Co-Chairman of the festival, Robert Eschmann, said last year the activity raised $2,600 for fire equipment and charity. Doris Dunke, of Manchester, is the winner of the top door prize. She won't have to worry about gasoline for awhile because she now owns 100 gallons of gas as a result of holding the winning ticket. Eschmann said the peach festival sprouted from a small gathering of 50 to 100 people, when it was held by the side of the firehouse years ago, to the large assembly Friday night.

'Twiggy' Water Skis for Peanuts

SANFORD, Fla. (UPI) — Down at Chuck Best's roller-skating rink there's a squirrel that water skis. She replaced the poodle that surfed. The Florida girl squirrel named Twiggy will, at Best's urging, climb aboard a styrofoam water ski, catch a tow behind a little remote-controlled power boat, and water ski at 12 mph around a lake, her furry tail dragging in her wake. "You couldn't train just any squirrel," said the proud owner. "Twiggy's unique."

Rape Victims Absolved In Death of Assailant

GREENFIELD, Mass. (UPI) — Northwestern District Attorney Thomas G. Simons Thursday absolved two teen-agers described as "Saturday Night Special" 25-caliber pistols. The girl grabbed the weapon, backed away from Pelletier, shot him in the chest, then untied the other girl and ran screaming to a nearby resident for help.

Pelletier squatted down to untie the younger girl, he dropped the gun. "He ordered the women to remove the clothing and raped both of them," Simons said. "During this time he waved the gun at them and repeatedly told them he was going to kill both of them."

Ali Sees Children

NEWINGTON (UPI) — Muhammad Ali received a warm greeting at the Newington Children's Hospital Friday after being rejected by veterans who had his heart broken by a 5-year-old girl who refused to give him a kiss.

Threatens Suit

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (UPI) — The Texas attorney general said Friday he was "sickened and dismayed" by Mexico's refusal to pay for oil slick damages to Texas beaches and again raised the possibility of a "last resort" lawsuit.

"As I understand it, the government of Mexico said yesterday (Thursday) it was 'not disposed to initiate talks with the United States on payment of damages arising from the oil spill. Well, I am not disposed to be the matter drop there,'" Mark White said. "I am sickened and dismayed by this new development."

Will LeBeau Help Blackstone's Cause?

By CHRIS BLAKE Herald Reporter EAST HARTFORD — Ah, the ironies of politics. Over the years, Mayor Richard H. Blackstone and Democratic citizen activist Gary D. Dagon have disagreed on many issues, ranging from police patrol methods to teen youth centers.

But, LeBeau could inadvertently turn out to be Blackstone's best friend in the upcoming primary election. Looking at the Blackstone vote, LeBeau will have to share the anti-Blackstone vote and most political observers agree Dagon will get a large share of that vote. But will it be large enough to unseat the five-term mayor?

Others say the Democratic Party and its resources will rally voters behind Blackstone and get out the staunch Blackstone supporters to the polls on Sept. 11. Dagon has a solid organization of hard-working and dedicated individuals. His personable nature and wide support among grass roots Democrats might even make him a favorite to upset Blackstone.

Political observers say LeBeau won't get more than 1,000 votes. Most think he'll probably get about 500 votes from voters who signed his petitions and possibly a few more hundred from outsiders to politics and those disenfranchised from the Party.

Wetland Fine Levied By Conservation Unit

By DAVE LAVALLEE Herald Reporter GLASTONBURY — The Conservation Commission voted unanimously to impose a fine of $4,920 on the J. T. Slocomb Co. for serious wetlands violations at Wednesday night's meeting.

The manufacturing company, located on Matson Hill Road, opened up choice gates along Rearing Brook in late July. The gates were opened so that the manufacturing firm could clean the intake pipes along the brook. The company uses the water along Rearing Brook for cooling its machinery. They opened the gates without a permit.

The Town Council had recommended that before an injunction was sought, that the commission would try to solve the problem with administrative means. According to members of the commission, levying of fines is considered an administrative function of the commission.

Former Woolen Mill Making Real Barrels

By RUSS MACKENDRICK How long since you've seen a real barrel with wooden hoops? They are being manufactured right now in a converted woolen mill in Dover-Foxcroft, Maine. The new owner of the mill, Charles MacArthur (who has been written up in Time magazine and Quest/79), has adapted the five-story structure to rent out for small business ventures. There are 21 enterprises going on at present. Besides the barrels, there is a spot devoted to growing African violets, another where they are baking loaves of whole wheat bread. There is a nature-food restaurant and an area where they take an alder pole and fit it with a compass and label the item "Katahdin Hiker" to sell for $3.99. The ground floor is given over to the assembling of portable sawmills that use chain saws to make boards, shingles, clapboards, 2 by 4's and planking. It is a new invention that can be taken into the woods to use in the construction of a log cabin on the site.

Real barrels are still being made at a converted woolen mill in Maine. This one is 16 inches high.

The barrel "factory" is just great with its aroma of cedar staves waiting throughout. The cooper, Sue Bligh, has made and sold more than 200 barrels in various sizes. The one shown here is just 16 inches high by 14 across. It can be used to hold magazines, or to carry kindling for the fireplace, or to store butternuts. Another of Sue's productions is a planter shaped something like an old-time washub - also with wooden hoops. Hoops, of course, were just perfect to roll - being nice and flat, but the real charm of a barrel to a New England youngster was as a source of ski material. You could take two well-matched barrel staves and some pieces of old harness to tack on to hold the feet and you were in business. All that was needed then was a slope and a firm crust with some grainy snow on top and yippee! Nowadays its more likely to be a case of "What's a barrel, Dad?" As time goes by, this could become

Kenney Explains Stand On Hospital Budgeting

Edward M. Kenney, executive director of Manchester Memorial Hospital, today issued a statement regarding the budget dispute that the hospital is presently engaged in with the state's Commission on Hospitals and Health Care. Kenney reported that the budgetary procedure, because of its complexity, is extremely difficult to accurately convey in the relatively limited space of a new article. Occasionally, therefore, issues which are relatively minor in the deliberations between the hospital and the commission assume a greater importance than is actually the case. He cited, as an example, that the commission's contention that the hospital had expended funds in excess of those allowed in their budget has been mentioned in a number of news articles. He then went on to say that, "In spite of the fact that some of the newspaper stories, there has been no indication - neither from the hospital's data or commission's - that any of the unanticipated expenses reported were unnecessary."

East Hartford Similar To Germans' Home Town

By CHRIS BLAKE Herald Reporter EAST HARTFORD - The streets are a little quieter here and it's easier to reach public offices. But, despite these differences, a family of four from the Zebendorf district on the outskirts of West Berlin are finding East Hartford similar to their home district in size and appearance. The Moller family is nearing the end of a nine-day visit to the United States as part of the Friendship Force Flight. They are staying with Ralph and Annadelle Heintz of 62 Arnold Street. The Mollers speak very little English and were assisted in their conversation by Blackstone by Erhard Sauerbeck, who lives near the Heintz's and speaks German. Erdmann and Hella Moller operate a small dry cleaning business in West Berlin and they wanted to see an American dry cleaning establishment. The biggest difference is that one must gain permission from the government to speak to a public official there. The Mollers said they were impressed with the openness of government in the United States. "Will it ever change over there?" Blackstone asked, referring to the political division between East Germany and West Germany. "The Mollers shook their heads and said, in English, "No, no." When the mayor asked if the Mollers had seen Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, Heintz said he inquired about the possibility of a tour. But, he said Pratt & Whitney officials told him the aircraft has strict rules against foreign citizens visiting the plant. Mr. Sauerbeck said the Mollers had been dubbed "the green districts" because of its many trees. At the end of the Town Hall visit, the Mollers wished Blackstone luck in his bid for re-election to a sixth term as mayor. "We'll have to send you an e-mail permission from the absentee ballot," Blackstone quipped.

Jack Anderson Air Travelers' Alert: Ozone Levels Can Be Lethal

WASHINGTON — The dangers of air travel are not limited to pilot error, crowded skies and sloppy maintenance. Even a perfect flight can be hazardous to your health.

The silent, invisible danger — its very existence unassisted by most passengers — is ozone: the layer of condensed oxygen that acts as a barrier between the earth's atmosphere and the radiation from outer space. While ozone is a popular synonym for air conditioning fresh air, it is in fact a poisonous gas.

For at least three years, flight attendants, pilots and airline passengers have suffered from ozone poisoning without realizing the source of their discomfort. The Federal Aviation Administration and the airlines have been slow to act against the unseen hazard, and may not even be allowed to warn airline customers of the potentially lethal effect of ozone poisoning. The symptoms — which first affect the most active individuals on any flight, the cabin attendants, include severe chest pains, shortness of breath, rapid heartbeat, vomiting, coughing up blood, dry throat, swollen glands, burning eyes, blurred vision, loose bowels, clammy skin, dehydration, nausea, dizziness, faintness, loss of appetite and forgetfulness.

Long-range effects include lung and heart damage and even, some scientists believe, possible injury to chromosomes that could cause birth defects.

The ozone problem surfaced in 1976, when Boeing introduced the lightening 747 SP (Special Performance) plane. It is able to fly at high altitudes saved time and fuel, but also put it up in the toxic ozone layer.

One stewardess on a New York-Tokyo flight described the effect of the ozone on his esophagus which may have been caused by air travel. "Furthermore, the FAA's proposed enforcement of its ozone standards requires the airlines to show they're filtering the air after passing the test, the FAA would have no way of knowing it. And the FAA asks only for a "statistical confidence level" of 99 percent. This means that 16 out of every 100 planes could exceed FAA ozone standards and still keep flying.

Despite the obvious weaknesses in the proposed FAA regulations, the agency still sees no need to warn the public of the risks of ozone poisoning. With the sublime confidence of the bureaucrat, the FAA reasons that its proposed regulations will solve everything. Meanwhile, federal officials apparently feel that what air travelers don't know won't hurt them.

Ludwig's Lament
For the past 12 years, a mysterious American billionaire named Daniel general public, and this one-hour average is not to be exceeded more than once a year.

But the 82-year-old Ludwig's vast empire was acquired in the "good old days" of Brazil's dictatorship. Now that the country's new president, Joao Batista Figueiredo, has taken over and eased censorship somewhat, Ludwig's operations have come under increasing criticism. Brazilian jingos aren't at all pleased that Ludwig's holdings may end up with a Swiss-based cancer research institute, which the old man has named as his principal beneficiary.

The Brazilian parliament investigations are underway into Ludwig's operations, and there is continuing talk that the Brazilian government may nationalize the American billionaire's holdings.

By way of comparison to the FAA's relaxed standards, the Environmental Protection Agency sets an ozone concentration limit of .12 ppm for the make-up of the junta, put together in the final weeks of the offensive against Somoza, will be changed. If a strongman emerges, the betting is on man who isn't even a member of the junta — Tomas Borge, 48, a co-founder in 1961 of the Sandinista front.

Although just over 5 feet tall, Borge is a charismatic figure who is said to have recruited thousands of teenagers and young adults who fought under the Sandinista banner to end the 43-year-rule of the Somoza family.

However, many of the young Sandinistas — including foreigners who joined the fight — probably will become bored after a few months of inactivity and be anxious to take up arms again. Some will probably head north on their own, even if intervention is not government policy.

Also, there have been rumors that

El Salvador's guerrillas — who specialize in kidnappings — contributed large sums to the Sandinista coffers. If that is so, then there's an 'OJ' awaiting repayment.

Outwardly, Managua looks like Havana did during the first part of the Cuban revolution. Sandinistas in battle fatigues and carrying an assortment of machine guns, rifles and sidearms check identification at government buildings and the leading hotel where the some junta members live.

The "companion" greeting of Cuba is exchanged in Nicaragua and revolutionary slogans adorn government correspondence and communiques.

But pending any abrupt swing further left, the Sandinistas will continue enjoy the backing of the majority of Nicaraguans.

Nicaragua: One Month After Somoza

By JOHN VIRTUE
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Nicaragua's leftist revolutionary government has surprised many people by its moderation in its first month in office since dictator President Anastasio Somoza fled the country.

First of all, there have been no summary trials and executions like those in Fidel Castro's Cuba 20 years ago or in Iran today.

The ruling five-member junta has been releasing imprisoned National Guardsmen who in another time might have gone before a firing squad. Some guardsmen even sought out and surrendered to members of the Sandinista National Liberation Front whom they felt would treat them better than the average citizen.

Those released so far included 75-year-old former guardaman who Gen. Augusto Sandino, the guerrilla leader presumably assassinated on orders of Somoza's father and after whom the Sandinista movement is named.

Secondly, the junta "Government of National Reconstruction" has respected private property. The exceptions have been the holdings — including 75 companies — belonging to ex-president Somoza and other property belonging to his family, top aides and National Guard leaders.

However, many wealthy Nicaraguans — fearing the worst is yet to come — have left the country and some worried middle-class Nicaraguans now are seeking exit visas.

There are two big questions about the revolutionary government and the worry many Nicaraguans and their neighbors: will the government remain non-Communist and will it refrain from exporting revolution to its vulnerable Central American neighbors?

There is a general feeling that the seizure, Eden Pastora, better known as "El Jefe" to the thousands of Sandinistas who followed him.

Borge, who visited Castro in Havana last week, says Nicaragua's revolution will be Nicaraguan in nature and not patterned after Communist Cuba's.

However, many of the young Sandinistas — including foreigners who joined the fight — probably will become bored after a few months of inactivity and be anxious to take up arms again. Some will probably head north on their own, even if intervention is not government policy.

Also, there have been rumors that

Other Editors Say

There's one thing you can't say about Philadelphia Mayor Frank Rizzo — the ex-cop whose free-wheeling management of the Philadelphia police department has triggered an unprecedented Justice Department suit alleging systematic and widespread police brutality. You can't say he tried to conceal his "holier-than-thou" and older style from the voters.

When Rizzo was first running for the mayor's office, he would show up at posh cocktail parties with a full club stuck in his belt, stereotypically winking for all to see. Yet instead of wondering what kind of man would do such a tacky thing to get elected, a lot of voters bought it as a symbol of the kind of no-holds-barred law enforcement they wanted.

This suit names Rizzo and other high-ranking public officials as principal defendants. But if the government manages to prove its allegations, Philadelphia voters will have a hard time explaining why they don't share responsibility for the kind of law and order Rizzo gave the City of Brotherly Love.

Thoughts

While working in a tool shop a number of years ago, an engineer designed a newly purchased machine for me.

Flipping off the switch and winking to himself, he smiled and said, "The shiny eyes machine and saw. This baby can produce 30,000 pieces an hour. A mean production rate for the same type."

I spent a week in a production shop, but everything this sounds like heresy in this day of schedules and volume orders.

Yet, there needs to be room in our days for sitting back and evaluating the work we are turning out.

Time, it is said, is so precious God only gives it to us a minute at a time. So this God-created raw material, we need to evaluate just what we're doing with it.

The Politics of Diplomacy

As Karl von Clausewitz pointed out more than a century ago, is a combination of politics by other means.

Though he added a footnote to that to the effect that only if it is a matter of diplomacy, only if it is a matter of a different set of rules, and ends may be the same.

Most of the Andrew Young's detractors at the United Nations sneered this thoroughly. They mock not have much cared for it, those that had been successful politicians on the home front, but they understood.

And for a politician, the leadership of the U.S. delegation could be a particularly trying experience. For all the clamor and prestige of the position, it has been essentially that of a errand boy for Washington.

In the early days this did not matter except to navigators of the ambassadorship who craved a policymaking role. U.N. policy for the United States was essentially a matter of lining up a gaggle of allies behind Washington's position on an issue and doing a little horse-trading with the other bloc leader, the Soviet Union. Delegations not committed to either camp did not matter.

The quintessential ambassador of this period, who also held the post the longest, was Henry Cabot Lodge. He shone in discreet dealings from power, playing out scripts written in Washington and never publicly upstaging another diplomat in a way that might lead to later friction. The Berlin blockade and airlift impasse was settled in a kitchen conversation over coffee with his then Soviet counterpart.

A big man with ideas, principles and a public standing of his own — an Adlai Stevenson, Arthur Goldberg or Daniel Moynihan — usually has been uncomfortable in the post. And usually does not remain long.

Andrew Young, an all-pro politician before he was tapped by James Earl Carter to lead Washington's team in the glass house on the East River, also understands. Which makes his departure particularly ironic because it was politics that did him in. Politics of both the international and domestic varieties.

By the time he arrived at the United Nations, the good old days — if that's what they were — were long gone. The automatic U.S. majorities were no more and the so-called uncommitted nations accounted for a great deal. They held it not the balance of power, at least that of majority votes.

Young dealt with this situation skillfully and, as we have been so fully informed in recent days, made his greatest contribution in developing a new and potentially constructive American relationship with third world countries that had long distrusted it.

But the volatile politics of the Middle East are another matter. And there the reaction to his initiative, whether it was constructive but misunderstood or a mistake from the start, forced the president to let him go.

If Young's departure is a victory for longstanding critics at home, it is a Pyrrhic one because the circumstances have strewn political scenes both at home and internationally with wreckage. The Israelis may or may not have actively contributed to his removal, but in any case the price for them may be the end by high.

With Young's departure, there is at least a temporary end to maneuvering through the U.N. to get the Palestinians to accept Israel's existence. The P.L.O. is likely to pull back its feelers to Washington governments, ending what slight prospects there might have been of participation in settlement negotiations. This may be what

Tired of Waiting

To the editor:
Today, I called a local firm in order to find out some information regarding my account.

The person who answered the phone let me begin my questions and then with absolutely no explanation of why simply said, "hold on."

It seems that one always these days is asked to "hold on." Does anyone do business any more without having to hold on?

After a one second hiatus the person came back on the line and when I said I wished to talk with someone else I received a dial tone.

The person's superior said to me that his employee had been trying to transfer the call to him when I got the dial tone. I would have thought that common courtesy would have told the person who was transferring the call to tell me that she was doing this.

Courtesy of one person to another is still as important as it ever was. I feel that the lack of it may indicate a lack of caring of people for people. Let's try to be considerate of each other — the world might have many less problems then.

"Tired of Waiting," Herbert Chazky, 109 Henry St., Manchester

Parker Poetry

To the editor:
The traffic keeps growing, and growing — unbearing, yet no one seems knowing, not knowing — nor caring.

They tell us the streets are for trucks — and not people; That cars add to safety, that walkers are lethal.

Than an 8-10-12 wheeler is only a pluck, that one who complains should stop whistling "Dixie."

The street that concerns me is named wrongly — Parker. No one parks on Parker — the danger gets starker.

It were to name it I'd call it "The Speedway."

It's much more descriptive than even "The Freeway."

The youngster earlier this week escaped from his abductor by freeing his hands and feet from ropes used to tie him to a bed inside Sedach's residence in Middleboro, Mass.
"We have developed new information that he was last seen in Holderness, N.H., at approximately 6 p.m. on August 22. He was still driving a 1979 Datsun hatchback which has a maroon color," Kennedy said.
Kennedy added it had been previously thought the suspect had a Massachusetts license plate with the number 335-AHB. But, Kennedy said it is now believed the car is carrying a Florida registration, number unknown.
Authorities issued a nationwide bulletin for Sedach who allegedly kidnapped the teen-ager and drove him to Massachusetts late Sunday and early Monday. Police described the Federal Trade Commission said Friday.
Ward's agreed to notify consumers it will relocate the stoves or install heat shields free of charge. Consumers also have the right to refuse the repairs and get their money back, have the stove removed and the room in which it was located returned to its original condition — also free of charge.
The problem, the FTC said in a complaint it had proposed against the retailer, was that Ward's, through its catalog and through pitches by its salesmen told consumers the stoves could be installed as close as 1 foot to combustible walls. The safe distance in the case of some of the stoves actually is 3 feet, the FTC said.
Richard Kelley, a lawyer in the agency's Bureau of Consumer Protection, said in a briefing "there are no fires we can point to" resulting from the installation instructions but statistics to which the agency has access would not necessarily provide that information.
A Ward's spokesman said the company had received no complaints about the stoves.
"The information Ward's was putting out was at best confusing about the stoves," FTC officials said the clearance question is an important one when consumers shop for stoves because a matter of a few inches makes a large difference in the amount of usable space left in the room once the stove is installed.
Ward's will notify consumers of the problem through a full-page ad in its October 1979 catalog house clearance books, and in a similar ad in its spring and summer 1980 general catalog.
FTC officials said the company told them it had no records of who bought the stoves and the catalog approach was the only way of attempting to notify affected parties.
The notice, however, will not mention that the consumers have the right to have their money back and the stoves removed. The agency is relying on news accounts of the settlement to provide that message.
The stoves involved, which were sold from 1976 on, are No. 5722, a circulating flues make a large difference in the wood heater; No. 7971, a comfort heater; No. 7387, a parlor heater; Nos. 2107 and 2105, both Franklin stoves; No. 2135, a "Little Bear" Franklin fireplace; No. 2136, a "Big Bear" Franklin fireplace; and No. 2137, a "Giant Bear" Franklin fireplace.
The last three were also sold by Ward's under the Hearth Craft brand as model Nos. 220, 250 and 300 respectively.
The consumer has a right to free removal and refund, plus repair of the premises, in the case of all the models except Nos. 2105 and 2107, where refund and repair will be at the option of the company. The FTC said those models can be corrected by installation of a heat shield inside the unit, making it unnecessary to move the stove farther out from the walls.

Light Bulbs Can Save Oil

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Better light bulbs can cut the nation's demand for electricity by 8 percent and save the equivalent of 700,000 barrels of oil per day, Westinghouse Electric Corp. said Friday.
A research study conducted by Westinghouse's Research and Development Center predicted an efficiency goal of 150-175 lumens per watt — the amount of visible light generated per unit of electricity — can be attained with high-intensity discharge lighting.
The study said the standard incandescent bulb on the market today gives off 15-20 lumens per watt while the standard fluorescent tube yields 60-100 lumens per watt.
The report was based on a survey of more than 100 lighting experts from around the country to identify major trends in lighting technology through the year 2000.
The study also predicted the cost of lighting the average home, office building, department store or factory will be a lower percentage of electric budgets resulting from recent research breakthroughs in lighting technology. It said the cost of electricity is expected to triple within the next 20 years.
The cost of newer energy-efficient residential light bulbs will probably jump to $5 to $15 per bulb but will be cheaper to operate and last much longer, the report said, adding that fluorescent lamps will become the dominant light source in the functional areas of the home.

FTC Says Ward's Stoves Dangerous

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Montgomery Ward sold more than 200,000 Franklin stoves and wood furnaces during the past three years with confusing and potentially dangerous installation instructions, the Federal Trade Commission said Friday.
Ward's agreed to notify consumers it will relocate the stoves or install heat shields free of charge. Consumers also have the right to refuse the repairs and get their money back, have the stove removed and the room in which it was located returned to its original condition — also free of charge.

Ward's will notify consumers of the problem through a full-page ad in its October 1979 catalog house clearance books, and in a similar ad in its spring and summer 1980 general catalog.
FTC officials said the company told them it had no records of who bought the stoves and the catalog approach was the only way of attempting to notify affected parties.
The notice, however, will not mention that the consumers have the right to have their money back and the stoves removed. The agency is relying on news accounts of the settlement to provide that message.
The stoves involved, which were sold from 1976 on, are No. 5722, a circulating flues make a large difference in the wood heater; No. 7971, a comfort heater; No. 7387, a parlor heater; Nos. 2107 and 2105, both Franklin stoves; No. 2135, a "Little Bear" Franklin fireplace; No. 2136, a "Big Bear" Franklin fireplace; and No. 2137, a "Giant Bear" Franklin fireplace.
The last three were also sold by Ward's under the Hearth Craft brand as model Nos. 220, 250 and 300 respectively.
The consumer has a right to free removal and refund, plus repair of the premises, in the case of all the models except Nos. 2105 and 2107, where refund and repair will be at the option of the company. The FTC said those models can be corrected by installation of a heat shield inside the unit, making it unnecessary to move the stove farther out from the walls.

Wheels Turn For Museum

NEW BRITAIN (UPI) — Wheels are finally in motion to develop Kenneth Larson's 10-year-old idea of an industrial museum in the city.
At a Thursday luncheon meeting of about 40 local and state representatives of art, business and government, Larson presented architect Joseph D'Urso with a $10,000 check granted by the state Department of Economic Development.
Thomas Hoving, former director of New York City's Metropolitan Museum of Art, was also given $10,000 to begin consulting services. The money was donated by Connecticut philanthropist Richard Weed.
The meeting marked the beginning of a three-month planning phase for the museum.
"This museum is going to be unique," said Larson, an urban planner. "It's not going to be a static group of exhibits; it's going to be a lobby of Connecticut."
Hoving, and his wife, Nancy Hoving, will coordinate a marketing and development plan for the project. D'Urso will produce preliminary drawings for restoring the exterior and redesigning the interior of the local museum's proposed site, a building now occupied by the U.S. Post Office.
Larson hopes to raise private and public funds to get the museum into operation. He said he sees no reason why the group can't move into the post office building as early as December, if the federal government agrees to sell it to them.

Funds Set For Entry

SOUTH WINDSOR — The Town Council, Thursday night agreed to put $6,000 in an escrow account to secure a right-of-way entry permit easement for the Harry Welles property, which is necessary to go ahead with the Avery Brook federal dam project.
The escrow account will be administered by Town Attorney Richard Rittenband in case a spring on the Welles' property is damaged during the work.
The Town Council also approved the appropriation of $1,500 to be paid to Welles in order for the town to conduct borings and other tests before the consent of the Avery Brook project.
Town Manager Allan Young said that Welles was concerned that a spring, which brings water to his property, might be damaged during the work.
He told the council that the money would be paid only if such damage occurred. He said he hopes it won't be necessary but that he feels the money should be held in escrow, "just in case."

Purchase Plans FARMINGTON (UPI) —

The state Board of Higher Education will meet Aug. 28 to discuss the proposed purchase of the buildings housing Tunxis Community College — three days before the college faces possible eviction.
While the college faces the possibility of eviction, college President Benjamin Davis said Thursday "all appropriate forces in the state are working on this" and he expected something positive by when the lease runs out Aug. 31.

Iranians Retake City Rebels Held

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) - The Iranian army smashed through Kurdish rebel defenses in the western city of Saqez and recaptured the city Friday, the state radio reported.

The radio said the troops, aided by revolutionary guards, took control of the main military base which was in the hands of the Kurds and seized all key positions in the city.

The Kurds set up their own barricades in areas they controlled. Since fighting began in Kurdistan 10 days ago, newspaper estimates of casualties have added up to 600 killed.

The fighting broke out before dawn Friday and intensified before noon. It was the second time since fighting first erupted in the frontier town of Paveh that extensive use of air force gunships was reported.

The Kurds were beaten in the first military counterattack and retreated to urban centers throughout Kurdistan province.

Reports from Mahabad said an Air Force helicopter crashed during another battle Thursday night and early Friday at the Naqadeh highway fork, 25 miles northwest of the city.

Free Priest May Sue To Improve Justice

WILMINGTON, Del. (UPI) - The Rev. Bernard T. Pagano said Friday he might sue the state for falsely arresting him as Delaware's "Gentleman Bandit," but not out of revenge.

The Roman Catholic priest told UPI the contemplated suit would be designed to improve the state's criminal justice system to prevent cases of mistaken identity such as his and to seek money to cover his legal expenses.

"We've not fully discussed the possibility of this suit," Pagano said, one day after six armed robbery charges brought against him were dropped.

Ronald Clouser, 39, of Brookhaven, Pa., confessed to the crimes and was charged instead.

"If there is a way of doing it, my intent will be not to be vindictive, but to do it in such a way that the judicial system, where the police are concerned, is corrected," Pagano said.

Wary from the ordeal of the trial that began Aug. 6, and tired of the non-stop attention from the news media, Pagano escaped Friday afternoon to relax with a steam bath and a swim at a health club where he regularly works out.

The 53-year-old priest was exonerated in an emotional court session Thursday morning and immediately asked the police of failing to investigate his Ellis stories.

Dputy Attorney General Timothy Barron, the state's chief prosecutor in the case, made himself unavailable for comment Friday. One of Barron's secretaries said, "Would you blame the poor man?"

Pagano said his overall legal expenses could run three times as much as the $20,000 already raised by family and friends - and spent.

The priest said several persons had suggested he write a book about his bizarre trial or make a television film or movie about it. He said one lawyer friend was negotiating with Warner Bros. on the possibility of a movie.

Pagano said he had made no decisions on any of those projects. The priest's secretary said Clouser would probably not be sentenced for several months, pending a pre-sentence investigation.

Prosecutors in Delaware County, Pa., said no decision had been made regarding another attempted armed robbery charges pending against Pagano, who attempted robbery of a Concordville, Pa., boutique.

The press release states that both Ashley and Ellis were pleased with cooperation of Anderson in the investigation.

"In the process, review of insurance policies, Administrative Services Director Ted Ellis and School Superintendent Larry Ashley were able to save $21,000 in its insurance costs for the upcoming fiscal year."

The investigation of the town's insurance policies began during the first week in July when Ashley refused to sign vouchers for $134,000 in insurance costs for the school.

When asked if most of the savings came from commission savings, Ashley responded, "The savings came from a variety of areas including policies, premiums and commissions. The whole situation needed work and everyone benefits," he said.

Town Council Chairman Henry Kinn said both Ashley and Ellis should be complimented for their work.

"I have to compliment Larry (Ashley) for initiating this. It took a lot of guts to look into something like this. I like people who just get up and do things," Kinn said.

"I have to compliment Ted (Ellis) for his work in following up on the problem. This is the way the Board of Education and town officials should work. That's what they are hired for," Kinn said.

Anderson said he was pleased with the outcome of the investigation.

"I am very pleased with the outcome. For too long, insurance has been taken for granted in this town. We looked into some policies that came a little cheaper than the ones that were being used," he said.

While the host families in the area kept busy, there are still many places that time would not allow them to discover.

Last Sunday, the ambassadors from Germany and the host families from the U.S. played soccer at Manchester Community College's field. The Germans won.

Following a picnic on the lawn at the college, many of the families and the guests listened to the U.S. Coast Guard Band in concert at the Handsbell. Others saw El John, who impersonates Elvis Presley, at the Pumpernickel Pub in Manchester and still others relaxed with a quiet dinner at their host's home.

Speaking with a few of the ambassadors they were delighted to have visited Riverside Park in Agawam, Mass. Hans-Eiter Robel, a guest of Barbara Weinberg, New England and state director of the Friendship Force, said, "In Berlin, we do not have such a park. The show comes to certain areas over a four-month period and then travels to another location. And, to pay one price and be able to ride all day, that was wonderful." Robel, who worked five years as a civil engineer and is completing his teaching requirements, will teach civil engineering at a technical school in West Berlin. Robel has been in the United States once before this visit, when he participated in the Friendship Force's exchange to Minneapolis, Minn.

"Minneapolis was nice, but Connecticut looks like Germany with all its trees and hills. It seems like home to me."

On Tuesday, the ambassadors and their hosts went on a walking tour of Hartford with visits to the Wadsworth Atheneum, the Hartford Civic Center and browsing in shops looking for souvenirs.

Blue jeans were a popular item, and as my young guest, Christian Kluge, told me, "In Germany, they cost $30-$40 a pair."

Some ambassadors had their first taste of lobster and corn on the cob at Mystic Seaport, and others marveled at eating string beans with a cheese sauce. "We have cheese on bread," my guest said as he helped himself to another serving. It is good," he said.

On Wednesday, some ambassadors took a flight to Buffalo, N.Y., and then a bus trip to Niagara Falls.

Thursday, more than 180 ambassadors and hosts boarded buses at the Calder Shopping Plaza for a tour of New York. They visited Manhattan, toured the U.N. building and took a Circle Line Cruise of New York Harbor. Even stopped for lunch at Mama Leone's, famous for its Italian cuisine.

While the bus was cool and comfortable, many of the visitors disliked the dark windows, which while keeping the sunlight out of their eyes, also prevented them from taking pictures.

"There was not enough time in the U.N. building," one ambassador commented. "We will have to come back again."

While the younger set headed for the beaches, the not so younger set listened to music from the Broadway shows at the "Broadway Revue" at the Coachlight Dinner Theater in East Windsor.

House parties and cookouts are planned for Sunday, as a farewell to our new friends, who will depart just before midnight.

There will be some tears shed I'm sure as we say "auf Wiedersehen" but our hearts will be filled with good memories of our new friends and the hope that we'll meet again.

Wings of Morning Is Joy Inherent in Your Religion?

By CLIFF SIMPSON

clergyman will preach a gospel once believed in Old Testament times that prosperity and health were the result of good living - you can easily recall "Job's comforters" and many of the psalms. In one of our universities on three successive Sundays in the chapel the essence of the sermon was: "Be good and you will at least be president of whatever company employs you."

I think in general that if we are honest and righteous we are more likely to be successful than not. I know however that good people suffer (e.g. Christ on the Cross, or some saint sick with cancer) and it seems that the evil ones prosper. It has been suggested that Psalm 4 was written during the terrible time of the Maccabees and that is why one exclaimed, "O that we might see some good!" (verse 8)

The message of this psalm is that in our religious life we find more JOY than "they have when their grain and wine abound." While the King James version uses the word "gladness," the RVV more directly translates it "joy" for the word carries an experience of "joy" into a time of testing and lets us agree with Browning:

"Then, welcome each rebuff
That turns earth smoothness rough."
The poet in expressing the same idea as St. Paul when he writes "Rejoice always" (1 Thessalonians 5:16). Read Philippians chapter four and see how he joyfully tells others "to rejoice" (verse 4) but that he too "rejoiced in the Lord greatly" (v. 10). He who has found "the peace of God" (v. 7) has found the greatest blessing this life can offer. No wonder the psalmist could end his witness with:

"In peace I will both lie down and sleep:
for thou alone, O Lord, makest me dwell in safety." (v. 8)

The Chuckle
I am always grateful for any help that is offered whether it be a question to answer, an idea to argue, or a suitable quotation for use in the column. John Bowen was traveling in New Hampshire and found a little pamphlet called "Laughter Under the Steeple." In it was this paragraph labeled "One Way to Shock the Church Alive":

"Coming to a small Oklahoma town to be pastor of his first church, the enthusiastic Reverend W.B. Alexander was met with the flat statement that he was wasting his time, that the church was dead.

Finally in desperation, he placed a notice in the local paper that, since the church was dead, the funeral would be held the next Sunday afternoon.

The church was crowded by the curious, who were rewarded by the sight of a huge coffin covered with flowers. After reading the obituary, the Reverend Mr. Alexander invited the people to pay their last respects. As the long queue passed by the coffin, each looked in, then glanced guiltily away. In the bottom of the casket lay a mirror, solemnly reflecting the last remains of the church in the startled faces of the congregation.

"Tame Duck"
I am writing this on the edge of Rongeleys Lake in Maine where frequently wild ducks swim by, and I do so with a little squawking here and there. It is a wonderful sight - they look so cuddly. I am on such occasions reminded of one of my favorite poems with the above title. It was quoted in this column over five years ago, but I feel it can stand repeating:

"There are three tame ducks in our backyard,
Dabbling in mud and trying hard

Religion in America Episcopalians Dispute Their New Prayer Book

NEW YORK (UPI) - There is a little doubt in anyone's mind that when delegates to the Episcopal Church's General Convention in September meet in New York City, they will be meeting in a church that has a new and highly controversial prayer book.

At the same time Gallup noted that only three persons in 10 among the laity are aware that it will take special action by the General Convention to permit the use of the new prayer book.

That means supporters of the old book have a hefty political task between now and Sept. 9, when the Convention opens, in raising the awareness of their supporters in such a way as to translate that support into action at the convention.

In 1976, the last Episcopal General Convention, delegates to both the House of Bishops and House of Deputies voted strongly in favor of the new book.

But at the same time supporters of the 1928 book are expected to introduce legislation that will make special provision for continued use of the old book in parishes which so desire.

Adding fuel to the debate is now a poll taken by the George Gallup polling organization for the Society for the Preservation of the Book of Common Prayer.

The poll showed that an overwhelming 71 percent of the laity of the church favor freedom of choice legislation which will allow continued use of the old book while only 10 percent oppose such legislation.

A large and impressive majority of the nation's Episcopalians want the convention in Denver to authorize the continued use of the 1928 Book of Common Prayer, a Gallup survey announced last week.

While the dispute over the prayer books has not received the attention the ordination of women question received in 1976 or the issue of ordination of homosexuals will receive in September, some Episcopalians believe refusal of the convention to authorize continued use of the 1928 book could be far more harmful to the denomination's future than the result of the other decisions.

The prayer book goes to the heart of a person's identity as an Episcopalitan, these people point out, and is the essence of their faith.

Do you ever wonder: "Where is God when I need him?" Some become cynical, as H.G. Wells, who said of God: "He is an ever-absent being in time of trouble."

We must understand that while God hears and helps, there are times when he "hides." "Why dost thou stand afar off, O Lord? Why dost thou hide thyself in times of trouble?" (Psalms 10:1) Must it not have seemed so to Joseph while he languished in prison for years? Certainly job had difficulty in grasping his situation.

But all is now what it seems. It is often through just such unpleasant experiences that people for the first time see their need for God. It is difficult to pray, "Thy will be done!" It is even more testing to accept that will.

HARTFORD - "Youth - What is Our Approach" is the theme of the annual Layman's Conference of the Episcopal Diocese, which will convene Saturday, Sept. 15, at Camp Washington in Lakeside.

The theme is prompted by the belief that the disappearance of young people from the activities of their local church is a matter of concern to all Christians, according to the committee planning the conference.

The conference, which is open to all men and women of the Episcopal Church in Connecticut, will begin at noon Sept. 15 and conclude by mid-afternoon Sept. 16. Reservations close Sept. 7 and may be obtained by calling Philip S. Henze of 26 Arrowhead Drive, Glastonbury, 683-7151.

Why Me?"

When life deals us an unexpected blow we are tempted to curse fate and ask, "Why me-why have I been singled out for so much bad luck?" It is only natural to feel this way, but there are better ways of handling adversity than this. Instead of becoming embittered and withdrawing from life, take this opportunity to reexamine yourself. This experience could make you a less selfish person, it could provide fresh insights into the sufferings and needs of others. Your response to adversity is up to you-it's not what happens to you-but how you handle it that counts.

This page is dedicated to the building of a more spiritual community by these firms and Churches who want to see more folks going to their Church and Synagogue...

Zabel's Career Ends with Pats

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) - He's only 31, but in football it's an age where a player begins to wonder if the youth movement affects him instead of someone else.

And for Steve Zabel, his four-year reign as the starting outside linebacker on the left side of the Patriots ended last week when he was traded to Houston last week for two draft picks.

Now England General Manager Bucko Kilroy talked with several team officials and Zabel would eventually be traded.

"After I was here for awhile, I knew they were looking at a younger guy," Zabel said. "I've been lucky. I've invented wheel and I really don't need the money."

"The ideal situation would be to go home (Denver) and get back to my business and then have some time call in about a month. But I won't go to any team. I want to go somewhere I can play and where they will appreciate me," he said.

Zabel, the Eagles' first-round draft pick in 1970, came to New England in trade on July 7, 1973. Reunited with college coach Chuck Fairbanks, he immediately stepped into the starting lineup and stayed there through last season.

Soccer Practice
Soccer practice at East Catholic High starts Monday at 4:30 for boys in grades 9 through 12, Coach Tom Linn said.

Knight Hung in There

NEW YORK (UPI) - Whether or not Bobby Knight ever plays that $50 fine and serves six months in the San Juan slammer is entirely academic now.

From all the evidence I can find, he has done a magnificent job of hanging himself already.

Bobby Knight is a combination Bill Martin and Woody Hayes. He's anything but a diplomat.

Quite possibly, he's getting the worst of it in his present problems with Puerto Rico. It could even be, as some of his supporters insist, he's being "railroaded" in this particular case, but if that is true, then it is Bobby Knight's own making.

For his part, Knight has offered to resign as head coach at Indiana but officials there just laugh at that.

That is absolutely untrue, says the West Point coach. Coach Knight never said anything close to that.

USC Big Coast Power

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) - The one constant in college football this fall will be Southern California's last year's national champion which stands an excellent chance of making it two titles in a row.

With the Trojans just about everyone's pick for first or second, it's obvious the other nine teams in the Pacific-10 Conference, where USC plays, have no plans to speak for Jan. 1 unless they get lucky enough to grab a bowl invitation among the other nine with other than the Rose.

Arizona's Tom Mason, who was inducted into the Pac-10 last year along with Arizona State's better known Frank Kush, puts the 1979 conference season race in perfect perspective.

USC is the most physically talented team in the nation," says Washington's Don James.

And so it goes down the line with every coach except Kush and UCLA's Terry Donahue conceding the conference title to the Trojans before the first tackle of the season is made.

Stanford has a question-mark at quarterback where Turk Schonert hopes to follow in a long line of distinguished Cardinals' passers.

USC has two solid All-American candidates. Everywhere you look USC has a better than average player.

Joe's World

By JOE GARMAN
Varieties of Trout

Some of the trout that I have been fortunate enough to catch and release on the Willamette River, have been transplanted into many brown trout. These fish were stocked by the CFFA (Connecticut Fisherman's Assn.) about a year ago, as fish stockings. They were brought in as an experiment, to see how they would fare, and with the hopes that this strain of brown trout, by surviving fairly well, would strengthen the stock of the browns stocked by the state.

I have been impressed by the results of this stocking. The fish from the west that I have seen, have really grown nicely, are marked more strongly, light superbly, and seem to be surviving fairly well. These fish show the characteristics of their parent strain, in the hardness of their strong bodies, and the ability to survive under adverse conditions.

Most brookies of any size, are stocked fish, and in the lower New England states, and a large five to eight pound trout makes headlines in the state of Maine today.

The downturn came about mostly because of civilization's inroads, warm water temperatures (which brook trout cannot survive for long) pollution and the severe fishing pressure of man.

Trout populations live on a pyramid, with the smaller fish making up the base and the larger fish building toward the top, and ending with the largest strain at the tip.

With normal predators, most of the fish taken, are small, ill, and not equipped to survive. Introduced as a predator, and he becomes selective, taking the larger fish from the lower stratum, the stratum of larger fish.

Since there are only a few places left in North America, where the large, large, brook trout remain, and these places, in Canada, the pressure of them has been great.

However, the Canadian government, strictly limits the number of fish allowed to be taken, and as of this writing, are working on a program to make more, and more of these larger trout exist in New England waters. And because of this same fairness by the CFFA, we will find the quality of fishing improve right here in Connecticut.

Man's Way?
NEW YORK (UPI) - The nine City Council members representing the Bronx proposed the remaining of a one-block stretch of a street outside the main entrance to Yankee Stadium, "Man's Way."

Most of us here in the northeast are also acquainted with brook trout. These fish were native to this part of the country in huge numbers. The

49ers Acquire Pair
REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (UPI) - The San Francisco 49ers obtained two players from the waiver list and put two others on the list.

The new players are veteran guard Jerry Sevy, who was cut by the Chicago Bears, and rookie linebacker Carl McGee, who was cut by the Cleveland Browns. To make room for the new men, the 49ers placed defensive backs Larry Murray and Howard Ballage on waivers. Admittedly they put strong safety Bob Lilly, who has a banged-up shoulder, on an injured reserve list.

New Contract
NEW YORK (UPI) - After three days of intensive negotiations, New York Mets centerfielder Lee Mazzilli signed a six-year contract estimated at more than $1 million.

General Manager, who announced the signing, said, "This is the most attractive contract we've ever given a player and we feel justified in awarding it. His salary will stand intact for this year and escalate next year."

Battle of New York Next for Winners

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) - Joe Pisarcik and Matt Robinson already have won their respective battles for the starting quarterback position. Now they are faced with winning the battle of New York.

Pisarcik has beaten out the New York Giants' Randy Dean and Robinson has supplanted incumbent starter Mark Rypien for the Jets' No. 1 spot, and both will be trying to secure the job during the rights of New York at Yankee Stadium Saturday night in the 1979 season game for both teams.

Pisarcik will play it an elbow injury suffered in a 7-3 loss to San Diego last week does not swell. If the Jets' team will see most of the action, with first-round draft choice Drew Brees on reserve.

McRoy Thursday from Oakland for a 1980 draft choice. The bad news is the deal was necessitated by Tuesday's walkout of veteran defensive end George Martin, who led the team in sacks last year.

Giants' linemen Brad Van Pelt and Brian Kelley have minor injuries and probably will not play against the Jets, who will try to initiate some momentum under Robinson's leadership.

Robinson replaced Todd in the second half and led the Jets to their only offensive touchdown in a 27-14 loss to the Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers last week.

PBS UPDATE

'Sneak Previews' of the latest flicks

By JAY BOBBIN

In less than nine months, a pair of Chicago-based gentlemen have become two of the best-known movie critics in the United States. As co-hosts of the bi-weekly PBS program "Sneak Previews," Roger Ebert and Gene Siskel present often humorous but always straightforward analyses of major movies.

Ebert, the only film critic ever to win a Pulitzer Prize, is often at odds with Siskel on their respective opinions of the films they review both behind the scenes and on the air.

As Siskel said in a recent telephone interview, "There are two ways people can perceive us. They can see us as two clowns trying to crack a few jokes, or they can see us for what we really are, two guys who really care about and love talking about movies. People tell us that the show seems very fast-paced, but it actually takes us about two-and-a-half hours in the studio for each program."

It's unusual for two reviewers with a national audience to be based in Illinois, but as Siskel puts it, "I like it this way, because if I was in Los Angeles, I might feel like I was a prisoner of the (movie) industry, and if I was in New York, I'd feel that I was in too much competition with other critics."

One segment of "Sneak Previews" which viewers have come to look forward to is "Dog of the Week," in which each of the critics has approximately 30 seconds to make a particularly abominable film over the critical coals — assisted by Spot, "the wonder dog who can sniff out a bad movie at 30 paces."

Ebert says, "Viewers don't realize how hard it is for the two of us to go out every two weeks and find a movie we intentionally WANT to hate."

Two of the classics which recently underwent Spot's treatment are "Cannibal Girls" and "The Brood," about ravenously hungry and murderous children.

Siskel is currently singing the praises of "Rock 'N' Roll High School," a low-budget summertime film about students who take over the leadership of their school with the help of The Ramones, a real-life punk rock group. "I think it'll be the next big cult film," Siskel states confidently.

Meanwhile, Ebert is one of the biggest supporters of "Dawn of the Dead," the controversial shocker about carnivorous zombies on the loose in a suburban shopping mall.

The two reviewers aren't reluctant to praise, but they'll point out flaws or familiarities in a gigantic box-office hit. Although both critics enjoyed the current horror blockbuster "Alien," as Siskel puts it, "Strip away all the scientific mumbo-jumbo and what you have is your basic haunted-house movie."

They'll also lambaste heavily promoted features. Their tandem review of the recent "Hanover Street" was easily as much of a blitzkrieg as the London air raids depicted in the movie itself.

Ebert and Siskel are delighted that their PBS series has caught on with viewers across the country. Thanks to them, cinema buffs can look forward to good-humored glimpses and opinions of major studio releases.

TV DIALOGUE

RIB TICKLER - A few years ago there was a show about lawyers who were married to each other. What was it called and who starred in it? - Danny Rubenstein, Fairfield, Conn.

You're thinking of Adams' Rib, a television re-make of the Spencer Tracey-Katharine Hepburn classic. The short-lived TV version starred Ken Howard (now in "The White Shadow") and Blythe Danner.

B.J. - Could you tell me what has happened to "B.J. and the Bear"? It is one of my favorites and also one of my little boy's favorites. He waits for Saturday night to come around just so he can watch it. For the last two weeks it has not been playing. We wish NBC would put it back on. - Mrs. Judy Daigle, Opelousas, La.

The same thing has happened to "B.J. and the Bear" that has also happened to many other shows during the summer Standby series and pilots are given a shot, while regular shows are preempted. Never fear, B.J. will be back in the fall.

HEART WAS WON - Will Jared Martin be appearing on TV soon? Will ABC be repeating the episode of "How the West Was Won" that he was on this past winter? - M. Lee, Pleasant Hill, Calif.

Because of disagreements between the producers and the network over the format (and mediocre ratings), "How the West Was Won" will not be given another shot next season. Repeats may show up after the late night news in the spot ABC fills with old series episodes. As for Martin, his career is prospering. You'll see him early this year in a series pilot filmed in Hawaii under the auspices of Jack Lord.

ROCKY ROAD - Can you clear something up? Is Rocky (Sylvester Stallone) still living with Sasha? Do they have any children? If so, what are their names? - Selwa Moured, North Andover, Mass.

Like his movies, Stallone's marriage is also rocky. As of this writing, he and wife Sasha have split and are moving toward divorce. They have two sons, Sage, born just prior to "Rocky," and Colin, born just prior to "Rocky II."

NOT WANTED - My friend and I are puzzled. Could you please tell us the name of a detective show that starred Robert Stack, Shelly Novack and Julie Harris? - D.L. Miller, Etontown, N.J.

No, but I'll tell you the name of one that starred Robert Stack, Shelly Novack and Jo Ann Harris. It was ABC's "Most Wanted," which proved not to be wanted very much at all.

ALIASES - "Alias Smith & Jones" was a favorite of mine, and it is now in reruns. Please tell me how long it ran, the ages of Ben Murphy and Pete Duel, and what these two actors have been doing recently. - Kenneth Howard, High Point, N.C.

Pete Duel was found shot to death in his Hollywood home during the run of the series, apparently a suicide. He was 31. The series continued with Roger Davis taking over the role of Hannibal Heyes (Joshua Smith) and ran until January 1973, having premiered in January of 1971. Ben Murphy has gone on to a modest success in TV, co-starring in "Griff" the following year and "Gemini" in 1976. Neither fared too well. You can still catch him in made-for-TV movies from time to time.

SHHH - Did the movie "Silent Running" ever win any awards? When, if so? Also, who played the part of the man trying to save the animals? - B.W. Wooster, Ohio.

Although it marked the film debut of special effects whiz Douglas Trumbull ("2001," "Close Encounters"), "Silent Running" won no awards. Bruce Dern starred as the space-station botanist.

Mary is back

The Norman Lear satirical adult series, "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," which captured the attention of the nation as a syndicated program, has been acquired by CBS for late-night broadcasts in the coming season. Present plans call for the show to be broadcast in one-hour form once a week, starting after the first of next year.

Louise Lasser stars in the title role as a perplexed housewife in the fictional town of Fernwood, Ohio. Also starring are Greg Mullavey, Mary Kay Place, Graham Jarvis, Dody Goodman, Debralee Scott, Victor Kilian, Phil Bruns and Claudia Lamb.

Pre-mania

Production has been completed in London, Liverpool and Hamburg for "Birth of the Beatles," a movie celebrating the early days of John Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr. Dick Clark is producing the film for ABC.

The four young British unknowns to star as the fab four are Stephen Mackenna as John, Rod Culbertson as Paul, John Altman as George and Ray Ashcroft as Ringo. The film chronicles the Beatles' careers from their first appearances at the Cavern to "The Ed Sullivan Show."

Presidents Chester Arthur, Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson were sons of ministers.

In the first U.S. Census, taken in 1790, the center of the new nation's population was a point 23 miles east of Baltimore.
