Freedom Walk

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — Alexander, 26, a native of Russia, was not a person of renown — just a physics teacher — but he wanted his personal freedom so badly he walked, rowed and hitchhiked 2,500 miles, living off berries and wild mushrooms, to obtain it. He reached the U.S. Embassy in Stockholm Thursday and formally asked for political asylum. He had left Moscow Aug. 19.

He asked that his last name be withheld to protect his elderly mother in Moscow and told UPI, "I am not a radical, all I am interested in is my own freedom and my right to choose to do what I want." He said he chose to leave his native land because he was prevented from getting a job in his chosen profession because he refused to be a member of a Communist Party youth group.

Contract Talk

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. and the United Auto Workers Union, for the first time since Saturday discussed crucial economic demands after agreements on a number of complex non-economic contract terms were made. And it was learned the UAW was optimistic enough that it already had made contingency plans to convene local officers early next to begin the contract ratification process.

The negotiators are trying to beat a strike deadline and union President Douglas Fraser said, "I'm guardedly optimistic and I don't want to do anything that might upset that in any way." The UAW has said it will call selective strikes at 13 GM assembly plants, 32 parts warehouses and a diesel locomotive manufacturing facility if no agreement is reached by midnight tonight.

Secret Case

DESOTO, Texas (UPI) — Computer genius, James Dallas Egbert III, 16, a Michigan State University student missing for almost a month, has been found, but there is such an air of secrecy about the incident even the location of the room in which he was found Thursday was not disclosed.

Egbert now is under a doctor's care in the Dallas area, although physically he is healthy, the family's private investigator Bill Dear told reporters Thursday. He added, "I don't know when, if ever, the veil of secrecy will be lifted from this case. Perhaps for the good of the boy it shouldn't ever be."

Birth Control

NORTHEAST HARBOR, Maine (UPI) — Dr. Kenneth Mcerns was interviewed Thursday at an International Society for Biochemical Endocrinology conference on "Reproductive Processes and Contraception," at which it was announced a long-term birth control method using injections and nose drops to regulate their menstrual cycles had been developed. The drops also may be used to inhibit the production of sperm in men, Mcerns said, adding that more research is needed before they can be used widely as a male contraceptive.

McHenry OK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee Thursday overwhelmingly approved the nomination of Donald McHenry to replace Andrew Young as ambassador to the United Nations.

The vote was 13-0. The votes of two committee members, who did not attend the session, were not recorded.

The nomination now goes to the full Senate, where approval is assured.

Looting Follows Hurricane

MOBILE, Ala. (UPI) — Much of the hurricane-ravaged Gulf coast from the Florida Panhandle to Gulfport, Miss., was without power today and National Guardsmen patrolled shattered business districts with police to prevent looting.

Mayor A.J. Cooper of Pritchard, Ala., told his officers to give looters two warning shots and then "shoot to kill" if they didn't surrender.

"I imagine it will give people something to think about," said Pritchard Police Sgt. J.R. Rigby.

President Carter was to make a flying inspection today of the stricken area where damage is estimated in the hundreds of millions of dollars from Hurricane Frederic's 130 mph hour landfall Wednesday night. At least nine persons were killed in the storm's devastating sweep from the Florida Panhandle to the Louisiana coast.

Frederic weakened rapidly over land and dissipated into squalls over northeast Alabama Thursday night. In its wake was destruction far surpassing that of Hurricane David in its trek up the Eastern Seaboard last week.

The cleanup began Thursday. But sometimes there was nothing to clean up.

Dannie Roszak and his wife found that out when they surveyed the site where their business, Rusty's Marina, had stood near Pensacola, Fla.

"Our business is gone. Our house is gone. Our boats are gone. All we've got are our lives," he said.

So did Bobby Brown, viewing the shell of his home in the Sea Glades subdivision of Pensacola.

"I have nothing to salvage. Nothing at all," he said, adding that he lost two houses, valued at a total of $100,000, and his 79-year-old mother-in-law died of a heart attack in the storm.

Power was knocked out in an estimated 466,000 homes and businesses along the resort stretch and utility officials said it may be a week before full service can be restored in the area. Alabama had 285,000 customers without electricity with an additional 131,000 in Mississippi and 50,000 in Florida, which restored about half of that number Thursday.

Water shortages were widespread in some coastal areas, and Dave Oakes, an Alabama Civil Defense spokesman, said a brewing company would switch its flow of beer to water today and send three truckloads of canned water to Mobile County for distribution. Oakes said authorities were to let residents start moving back into Baldwin County today but not to Gulf Shores because of the devastation in that coastal resort town.

"We've still got to keep them out of Mobile if all possible. They're not ready to get a mass of people," said Oakes.

More than 100,000 evacuees from Mississippi's Gulf Coast returned to their homes Thursday to learn that, in addition to no power, they may have little drinking water for more than a week.

A break in the main water line compounded problems in Pascagoula, the Mississippi coastal town hardest hit by the storm. Capt. Joe McCool of the Jackson County Sheriff's office said water was being trucked in from other areas.

Small vessels and equipment at Ingalls Shipyard, Mississippi's largest industry, were badly mauled. Shipyard officials said the facility could be out of production for several days.

Mississippi Gov. Cliff Finch, who arrived on the coast at the height of the storm Wednesday night, flew over the devastated area and told reporters the damage would exceed $50 million in his state.

Florida Gov. Bob Graham was to make a helicopter inspection of the Panhandle and submit his state's second disaster report to federal officials within a week. Last weekend he requested $95 million in federal disaster relief for David.

"We've had one disaster after another," said Graham. "I hope our luck is about to turn."

Easy Loan?

The Ballows of Pascagoula, Miss., won't have to go far for a rebuilding loan as they take a break from looking for valuables in their store destroyed by Hurricane Frederic

Thursday. Unfortunately, the Commercial Credit building was also destroyed along with other buildings in the office complex. (UPI photo)

MEG Approves Contract

Union Vote Ends Struggle

By CHARLIE MAYNARD
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — Union approval of a new contract with the town may signal the end of a long and arduous negotiating effort.

The 83-member Municipal Employee Group unanimously approved a three-year pact extending to June 30, 1981. The settlement must go to the Town Board of Directors for its approval before the contract is ratified.

The major changes include lengthening the term of the pact from two to three years and reinstating the 105 days of sick leave immediately. The sick leave provision had been the major stumbling block to a settlement.

The union had opposed a provision that employees who retire after June 1981 would get paid for half the unused sick days they had accumulated during their career. The town allotted 15 days per year.

Instead, the employees wanted to return to the former policy allowing reimbursement for as many as 105 days and charged during negotiations that they were led to believe that other unions would return to such a policy.

Town Manager Robert Weiss, who was outside the hearing room in the Municipal Building after the vote took place, said both the town and the union can live with that agreement. The employees have been without a contract for over 14 months.

Weiss also said the three-year pact was beneficial to both sides because of lengthy bargaining procedures.

The contract calls for a six percent wage increase in each of the three years and an anniversary date for step increments. The employees will also be granted 45 days of sick leave, which takes effect June 30, 1981.

The contract also includes some minor arrangements which had been tentatively agreed upon earlier in the negotiations.

Applause echoed from the hearing room three times and the employees took about 35 minutes to discuss and approve the pact.

As the union officials and their negotiator, Frank Ciarcia, stepped from the room, Ciarcia said, "You can report jubilation."

Parents Fight Move to Group Homes

By JACQUELINE HUARD

HARTFORD (UPI) — James Janazzo can't tie his shoes, cross the street by himself, can't pronounce his first name and doesn't know his last name. He's 20. His father said he could never survive in a group home.

"He is profoundly retarded and has an I.Q. so low it cannot be measured," said Janazzo, who placed James, his only child, in the Southbury Training School four years ago. He doesn't want Southbury to shut down.

The Southbury Home and School Association, of which Janazzo is president, is joining with three other organizations to block a suit filed by the Connecticut Association for Retarded Citizens to close the Mansfield Training School. They say if a judge orders Mansfield shut down, Southbury is sure to be next.

Janazzo, in an affidavit filed Thursday in U.S. District Court seeking intervenor status in the CARC suit, said James receives the round-the-clock care he needs at Southbury.

"If James were in a community treatment center or group home, my wife and I would be frightened all the time that James would be hurt. If he were ever to get lost in the community, he would be unable to tell anyone who he is."

Other groups besides Janazzo's who want the CARC suit thrown out are the Mansfield Parents Association; the Southbury Training School Foundation and the Parents and Friends of Connecticut Retarded Citizens.

They represent about 1,500 of the 2,300 mentally retarded persons at Mansfield and Southbury.

CARC Executive Director Thomas Nerney, in response to the motion filed by the organizations, said there are more than 50 group homes operating successfully in Connecticut and they're not only suitable for the mildly retarded.

He said the National Association for Retarded Citizens is preparing to join the suit on CARC's side — one of several test cases across the country challenging the institutionalization of the mentally retarded.

CARC, said John Devine, president of the Mansfield Parents Association, can't be talking about his 22-year-old son Michael when they say group homes are an alternative for all mentally retarded persons.

Michael Devine lived at home until he was 8, but his father said it became impossible to prevent him, as he grew larger, from hurting himself or the couple's five other children. He has Down's Syndrome and physical handicaps.

Devine said the family, which lives in Tolland, moved to Connecticut so that Michael could be placed at Mansfield. He has been there for nine years.

"My wife and I visit Michael regularly, take him out for drives and bring him home for day visits," Devine said. "Generally, after four or five hours, he becomes bored at home and indicates that he wants to return to Mansfield."

He said he wouldn't want Michael in a group home because he can't take care of himself and because he would be afraid of how local residents would react to living side-by-side with a home for the mentally retarded.

Devine related one incident in which he took his son to a large department store.

"That store had 100 people in it and 102 were watching him, like some sort of a freak," Devine said. "They have the stigma of being the funny kids."

SALT II and Red Troops in Cuba

WASHINGTON — What disturbs some senators the most about the Soviet Union's latest military provocation in Cuba was the time it took for our intelligence agencies to discover and confirm the presence of Russian combat troops fewer than 100 miles from the U.S. mainland.

For the speed with which we can catch the Soviets in violations is a vital question, which must be resolved before the Senate is likely to ratify SALT II.

high. Were the Russians cheating on the number of missiles they had agreed on in the SALT I treaty? Up until 1970, the Soviets had put their missile-site control centers in underground bunkers near the missile sites. In that year, they began replacing these relatively primitive bunkers with underground sites that looked identical to those that housed the missiles.

When the first SALT agreement was signed in 1972, U.S. officials expressed concern that the new sites might be intended for actual missiles — an illegal stretching of the agreed-on limit. The Soviets assured U.S. representatives the sites were to be used only as launch-control centers.

The intelligence agencies were ordered to check it out. It should be noted, perhaps to the disappointment of incurable romantics, that our espionage was carried out mainly by electronic surveillance, not the old-fashioned way of using a microphone to eavesdrop on conversations.

covert agents and informants — data from such sources is regarded as a corroborative bonus.

The intelligence analysts eventually decided the Russians had told the truth, and listed five reasons for this conclusion: Capsules put in the new sites were the same kind that housed control equipment elsewhere. Protruding antennas, cable patterns and outbuildings fit the launch-control function. Only one of the new sites was being built at each missile site. New sites were the only visible launch-control centers at two sites where no underground bunkers existed, and all the new sites had been built next to the command centers they were replacing.

The Americans continued to bring the new sites up in discussions with the Soviets as late as 1976, while the intelligence agencies worked on a supplementary assignment: "What would it take to convert the control-center sites into missile holders?"

The answer to this one was that such modification would be extensive, time-consuming and costly — and, more importantly, hard to hide. So the intelligence analysts were able to tell President Carter in 1977 that "the extent of these modifications would make it very hard to adapt the sites in significant numbers without detection."

On the strength of that assurance, the United States dropped the subject. Swiss Shuffle

The Air Force and the State Department put pressure on the International Communication Agency to throw a $7.5 million contract to a Swiss firm under questionable circumstances. It was part of a deal to help two politically powerful pals, Northrup and General Electric, get a juicy aircraft contract from the Swiss.

The loser in this shady international backscratching deal was a small, efficient American firm — and possibly the American taxpayers as well. Here's how the fast shuffle was worked, according to internal government documents.

In a carrot-and-stick approach, the Defense Department got the Swiss government to buy $23 million worth of Northrup-GE F5 jet fighters. Then the brass hats sought to give a Swiss firm, Brown Boveri, the contract for 12 Voice of America transmitters.

The stick was applied to ICA, first getting the agency to waive U.S. regulations, designed to give business to American firms and then — even more outrageously — saving the specifications so the chosen Swiss firm could meet them.

The Swiss company was initially told that "restriction of the Balance-of-Payments Program may well apply to the proposed transmitter procurement." Two weeks later, then-assistant Air Force Secretary Everett Keech — apparently tipped off by Brown Boveri — wrote to ICA director John Reinhardt, urging "favorable consideration" for the rules favoring American companies.

Then-assistant Secretary of State

Richard Vine added his weight, telling Reinhardt the waiver was "of great political importance in Switzerland." Finally, when the Brown Boveri designs turned out to be inadequate, the contract specs were rewritten to suit the Swiss firm.

With this help, Brown Boveri came in with a bid of $650,000 lower than the only U.S. bidder, Continental Electronics Manufacturing Company of Dallas.

As explanation for the hanky-panky, ICA points to the $650,000 "savings" as justification and stressed that the waiver also allowed other European firms to bid. ICA denied pressure had anything to do with the waiver, and claimed the amendment of the specifications was "routine."

But Continental disputes the so-called savings, pointing out that the Treasury has lost far more in taxes than would have been paid by the company, and its workers, subcontractors and suppliers.

Town Is Energy-Conscious

NAHRAGANSETT, R.I. (UPI) — This is a very energy-conscious town. Earlier this year, officials installed a solar-heated restroom in the downtown shopping district. They are currently trying to get federal money to buy electric cars to replace the town's fleet of internal-combustion models.

The park being considered for the project covers 170 acres. That could supply about 170 cords of firewood each year, or roughly enough to supply 40 families each winter, simply by thinning and removing dead limbs.

When things start to go wrong, there's just no controlling event. So it has happened with President Jimmy Carter. The president has seemingly lost control over his image. It makes no difference whether he isolates himself at the White House or presses the flesh along the banks of the Mississippi, his popularity chart has become inversely proportional to the cost of living. It is unfortunate that the president isn't a star; he'd make a heck of a downhill racer.

The Russian Troops in Cuba

WASHINGTON — The belated "discovery" by the United States that there are about 3,000 Russian combat troops in Cuba — and that they've apparently been there since 1976 — raises troubling questions. Such as: If Washington is unable to detect the presence of Soviet soldiers on a small island just 90 miles from our shores, how can it be trusted to detect Russian chatting on the proposed nuclear arms treaty — half-way around the world and on a land mass 300 times larger than Cuba?

As it is, it took the persistence of a United States Senator, Democrat Richard Stone of Florida, who has a large number of Cuban emigres among his constituents, to force the truth to the surface. Stone warned of what was happening in July and was assured then by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance that there was no indication of "significant Soviet forces" in Cuba besides the 1,500 to 2,000 military advisers who have been there for 15 years.

Nixon Says Watergate Last Crisis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Richard M. Nixon says history will justify record that his handling of Watergate was "an unmitigated disaster" because he did not apply the lessons of the past to the problems of his administration.

Nixon made the statement in a new introduction to his old book, "Six Crises," to be issued in October by Warner Books in New York. The firm made public the new forward.

It retraces what Nixon calls the six crises of his political career, ranging from such triumphs as his vice presidential victory on the Eisenhower ticket in 1962 to his narrow defeat for the White House by John F. Kennedy in 1960.

"Since then," Nixon wrote, "I have waged two presidential campaigns, both successful, served five and a half years as president, and gone through another crisis, the Watergate ordeal, the longest-lasting and by far the most grueling of all."

He added that while the book, published 12 years before he resigned the presidency in 1974, does not include the "address" to Congress on the timeless questions of how crises develop, how they should be dealt with.

Nixon went on: "History will justifiably record that my handling of the Watergate crisis was an unmitigated disaster. After going through the six crises described in this volume, I failed to apply the lessons of the past to the problems of the present and the future."

Nixon did not say what "lessons" he had in mind but added "I trust that those who read this book will not make that mistake."

He also referred to his emotional speech to the White House staff the day he left office, recalling that he mentioned how President Theodore Roosevelt, temporarily blinded by his first wife's death, had gone to win the presidency.

This is one of the lessons of crisis: that however dark things seem at the moment, the light goes on and life goes on.

One is not finished when he is defeated, he is finished when he quits. Always keep fighting. When one door closes, another will open."

Democratic slate and emerged as deputy mayor on the Republican dominated Town Council.

Although Myette's six-year Town Council career has been marked by much controversy he has nonetheless emerged as one of the most hard-working and well known council members.

Miss Betty Krawski, vice chairman of District II is general chairman of the testimonial dinner committee. Also serving on the committee are Albert Aniello, Lou Aniello, Marge Holland, Stanley Kavarski, Frances Keipple, Wall Kupchunas, Cornelius Nicholson, Harry and Myrtle Odum, Jean Patria, Kay Richards and Mary Zrnchak.

Mrs. Audrey Wasik, Democratic State Central committeewoman and vice-chairman of South Windsor's Democratic Town Committee, will supervise activities at Democratic Headquarters along with Board of Education member, Marge Hetensky.

Outdoor advertising, including the distribution of candidates signs and bumper stickers, will be managed by Joseph Kennedy. Public appearances of candidates at such areas as shopping centers will be arranged by Stephen Riege and Mrs. Mary O'Hare will coordinate the general scheduling of candidates.

Democratic election efforts in South Windsor's four voting districts will be handled through district chairmen.

Persons wishing to work with the campaign committee are asked to call Woodcock at 644-2431.

Bolton Sets Lunch Guidelines — The Bolton School system has announced its policy for free and reduced price meals for children who are unable to pay the full price.

Children from families whose income is at or below levels set by the federal government are eligible for these programs.

Families with one child whose income is $4,590 or less, are eligible for free lunch and for the same size family and the income falls in the area of $9,420 and $11,580, the child is eligible for reduced price lunches. According to the number of children in a family the income level increases from $1,450 to $2,260 for each additional member.

In addition, families not meeting these criteria, but with other unusual expenses due to unusually high medical bills, shelter costs in excess of 30 percent of income, special education expenses due to the mental or physical condition of a child, and disaster or casualty losses, are urged to apply.

Additional copies of applications are available in the principal's office of each school. Information provided will be kept confidential. Applications may be submitted at any time during the year.

McNamara Requests Help From Police Agencies

NEW BRITAIN (UPI) — Mayor William J. McNamara, worried that additional policemen could be arrested due to a probe into municipal corruption, has told other police forces that they may need assistance in providing public safety.

McNamara wrote the state police, the National Guard and chief executive officers of four surrounding towns asking them to provide to emergency standby assistance if it was necessary.

The mayor's letter said he was "planning now for what may be a significant problem in providing for the safety of the public."

McNamara and Acting Police Chief Donald G. Parsons said Thursday there is no immediate need for the assistance.

The mayor said he was also sorry his letter had "leaked out" and stressed he didn't know if any more arrests within the police department were expected.

Four high-ranking police officials, including Chief Thomas Ormsby, have been arrested on charges stemming from a one-man grand jury probe into the alleged sale of promotions in the police and fire departments and the alleged misuse of city property.

State authorities have refused to comment on reports that a number of police officers were expected to be arrested as the investigation continues.

McNamara's letter cited "the potentially adverse effects of the municipal corruption probe" and asked the other law enforcement agencies if they would be willing and able to loan police officers to his city.

Parsons said Thursday it is "always smart and good to have plans if you need them, but I don't foresee the need on a long range basis, now."

The grand jury probe by retired state Supreme Court Chief Justice Howard Alcorn began on May 18, 1978 and officials have said the investigation is continuing.

The city's fire chief, deputy fire chief, civil service commissioner and a retired personnel director have also been arrested on charges stemming from the probe.

Interest in hypnosis has waxed and waned throughout the centuries, said Essack who gave a brief history of hypnosis before giving a demonstration.

Sigmund Freud disapproved of hypnosis as a form of therapy because he thought it would remove one symptom by replacing it with another, said Essack who believes "You can remove a symptom without replacing it with something else."

Essack did say, however, "I prefer not to jump into hypnosis with patients. You need knowledge of the patient's conflicts before you treat the symptoms," said Essack. "People with borderline cases of psychoses can become psychotic with hypnosis," said Essack who also said not to say there is no inherent danger "if hypnosis is used by an unqualified person."

"You don't have to be pulled to be hypnotized," explained Essack describing another common misconception. "Your intellect or knowledge doesn't effect your capacity to be hypnotized."

"You can't say or do something you don't want to do under hypnosis," Essack explained. Individuals who volunteer to go on stage with a hypnotist for entertainment, said Essack, "are much more willing to perform. Some are just going through the motions on stage and are not actually hypnotized."

Essack said it can be comical to see the effects of a good hypnotic subject and cited the example of a man, hypnotized into believing an elf was with him, asking for a second bus ticket.

When I regressed my sister-in-law to her 16th birthday," Essack recalled, "she described her present in detail. She became tearful and it turned out she had borrowed a blouse from an older sister and there was a small tear on the side. She was just then releasing those emotions nine years later," said Essack.

Essack demonstrated his ability on an employee of the hospital who he said rated about a three on his evaluation scale.

The woman was asked to roll her eyes upward and then shut them as she closed her eyes and imagined herself floating in her chair.

At Essack's suggestion she felt her right arm becoming lighter and raised it after he touched her finger.

He had her under his control and as he instructed she snapped back into the hypnotic state at a snap of his finger.

And, he told her the number seven was no longer in her vocabulary. Sure enough, when she counted backward from ten, the number seven no longer existed for her.

But all returned to normal at another of Essack's suggestions and his subject said she felt wonderfully refreshed.

PARENTS TELL

Why Wee Care Day Care Center is chosen over other day care centers.

"After visiting several other day care centers I found that having my son at Wee Care Day Care Center was the best thing to be able to care for him myself. Their personal interest, sincere concern and honest efforts to help in any way they can, with each and every child, gives us working parents the peace of mind that is necessary when we need to leave our children in the care of someone else."

Hypnotist Proves Point During Hospital Lecture

By LANEY ZUBOFF

MANCHESTER — Dr. J. Yasud Essack can make a subject count down from ten to one and forget the number seven ever existed; and he did just that at a lecture on "hypnosis is 20 to 30 percent."

"It's Uses and Abuses" Thursday at Manchester Memorial Hospital.

Showing Their Gratitude

The American Heart Fund presented the residents of the Meadows Convalescent Home with plaques to show gratitude for their efforts during the March 1979 Rock-N-Roll Jamboree for which over $1,200 was raised. This was the highest amount raised by nursing home residents in this region. Most of the $1,200 was donated as "ransom" for the "kidnapped" Mayor Stephen Penny. Hollywood Story Hard to Believe

By ALLEN M. WIDEM

Behind the tinsel, the tumult and the shouting of American - nay, global - movie-making lies a real-life story that few among the industry's top decision-makers are willing to concede actually exists. Samuel Marx, for many years story editor at MGM's California Studios, finally got around to reminiscing, between book covers, about the legendary Louis B. Mayer Irving Thalberg studio era ("Maver and Thaberg: The Make-Believe Saints," Random House, 1975.) In one particularly poignant portion, Mr. Marx tells of seeing the equally-legendary David Wark Griffith walking along a Hollywood street, alone, obviously far from affluent. Returning to the studio, Mr. Marx mentioned the chance incident to Mr. Thalberg. No job was forthcoming, as far as is known. Mr. Griffith faded away like the "The End" title card in a motion picture.

It is not that decision-makers look upon talent, before and behind cameras, as mere salaried help. It is, rather, the continuing realization that with constant audience taste fluctuation, what is considered "enormous," "superlative," "great" one year, is called "ho-hum" creativity the next. The age factor, of course, has a lot to do with winnowing away of talent capabilities, but who's to argue with the sound rationale of Paramount Pictures' Adolph Zukor well into his 90s?

Director Billy Wilder's new movie, "E.T.," starring William Holden, has led to yet to spark audience turnout on a scale to this day's screen accomplishments of 30 years ago-plus.

Clark Gable, "King" of Hollywood 40 years ago, continued to work to his final days he died at 60 in 1960, but his "Gone With the Wind" star appeal was gone. Peter Bogdanovich, who is well under age 50, flourished not so many years ago with fresh, imaginative screen product. More recently, there's little to cheer about with his output.

Perhaps even more than theatre, motion pictures are concerned with constant illusion. And the persons who created that illusion are endlessly bound up in the fantasy of a never-never land.

Every film in which Gregory Peck worked years ago was bound to cause an outpouring of attention. He is now over 60 and a western, "Bully Two-Hats," failed to get minimal scheduling in the nation's theatres. Joel McCrea and Roy Rogers, two more "films" from another day, have worked in film with far from spectacular success in the 1970s.

It's Sessurround. It's special effects. It's super-super-horror. And it's super-super-violence. Few efforts emanating from the Walt Disney Studios have surpassed the Connecticut boxoffice "draw" of "Mary Poppins," the Julie Andrews/Dick Van Dyke 1966 release. Today's youngsters look to Sci-Fi, regardless of story acting quality, and the once enormously popular "G" rated Disney produce languish on the vine.

Mark Sennet was unable to make the transition from silent to sound motion pictures, but in his day - and in his derring-do - he brought to motion pictures a mold, a manner of entertainment that even by today's supposedly super-super-sophisticated standards can be said to be engrossing. Over and above political/personal life developments, whatever Charlie Chaplin turned out after 1940's "The Great Dictator" never brought out the crowds that flocked to see him years earlier.

What probably brings shivers to those who seek to transmute quality to the screen is the constant realization that no matter how "great" a "personality" may be, there is a short time before, what the audience judges - and judges so very harshly, it seems - is the product at hand. And with start-up time and release date for a given film involving many, many months, who's to say, in bottom-line summing up, what's going to appeal? Movie-making is a gamble. A constant gamble. For the creative people. Latent/litigation talk show hecklers sporadically allude to an earlier Hollywood, saying, in effect, "Whatever to Sonny Tufts' career?" And yet those same hecklers, trying to stay aloft in a sea of constant public fickleness, know all too well that what happened to the Sonny Tufts career could well happen to them!

Walks Concern Zinsser

MANCHESTER - Republican Director Carl A. Zinsser has sent a letter to Town Manager Robert Weiss, expressing his concern over the condition of sidewalks in the Francis Drive area and requesting repairs in the area.

Zinsser, in his letter, contends the sidewalks, which were not repaired last year, are presently unsightly and constitute a safety hazard.

The letter reads as follows: "Earlier this week I inspected the sidewalks on Francis Drive that were not repaired last year. I was appalled to find these sidewalks in such a deplorable condition. Not only are they unsightly, but, in my opinion, constitute a safety hazard.

"I am, therefore, requesting that you have someone from the public works department go to the Francis Drive area and inspect these sidewalks, estimate the cost to repair said walks this year, and to report back to you your findings.

"I would further request that you then place on the agenda an item for the Board of Directors, at the October meeting, to take immediate action on this matter.

Along with your presentation to the board, I would expect you to indicate if the money would come from surplus, sidewalk account or other sources. "If you or any other town of company you on an inspection tour of the area so that you can personally be aware of this serious condition."

Dr. Elman also told the board that the costs of walk will increase by 40 to 50 percent.

Dr. Elman said that the local board should stick closely with measures set in 1974 which were increased by the new Board of Education, to take a 10 percent decrease in energy consumption. He said that predictions around the state are that the costs of walk will increase by 40 to 50 percent.

Hospital To Seek Budget Injunction

By LANEY ZUBOFF
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER - Manchester Memorial Hospital will probably be seeking an injunction to stop action by the State Commission on Hospitals and Health Care which Thursday night approved the hospital's budget, cutting it by $78,000, said Edward Kenney, executive director at the hospital.

Kenney said the hospital "would have settled for a cut less than $600,000 but $78,000 is far from that."

Manchester Memorial will probably be joining with one or more of the other hospitals, whose budgets came before the commission, Backus Hospital in Norwich, St. Marys in Waterbury and Danbury Hospital in Danbury, to challenge the commission's decision.

"Our counsel Paul Knag has cited several exceptions to the panel (commission's) report and a number of procedures," said Andre P. Marzani, $24.2 million. The capital budget was approved in its original amount of $245,000, said Kenney.

Kenney said "it is the contention of some that there was inadequate notice for commission meetings, said Kenney who said the commission was not allowed "secret meetings."

The hospital Board of Trustees will be meeting early next week to discuss future action, said Marzani.

Kenney said the commission's decision to reduce the budget, "there's nothing to reduce. We are recognized as a low cost efficiently run operation."

Kenney said a hospital could reduce services to reduce expenses, such as eliminating chemotherapy "but that is tantamount to health rationing the way we do it which is terrible to contemplate," he said.

The hospital's proposed budget was approved in its original amount of $245,000, said Kenney.

MANCHESTER - Manchester Memorial Hospital will probably be seeking an injunction to stop action by the State Commission on Hospitals and Health Care which Thursday night approved the hospital's budget, cutting it by $78,000, said Edward Kenney, executive director at the hospital.

Kenney said the hospital "would have settled for a cut less than $600,000 but $78,000 is far from that."

Manchester Memorial will probably be joining with one or more of the other hospitals, whose budgets came before the commission, Backus Hospital in Norwich, St. Marys in Waterbury and Danbury Hospital in Danbury, to challenge the commission's decision.

"Our counsel Paul Knag has cited several exceptions to the panel (commission's) report and a number of procedures," said Andre P. Marzani, $24.2 million. The capital budget was approved in its original amount of $245,000, said Kenney.

By Sue Peck Real Estate Editor. OWNERSHIP PAYS OFF. Why continue to pay rent when you could be paying yourself? When you pay rent you're helping to pay the landlord's property taxes, income taxes and other costs. If you own a home you build equity and property taxes pay you a legitimate income tax deduction. So is interest paid on the mortgage.
