

Experts Say Solar Power Is Efficient

HARTFORD (UPI) — Putting the sun to work is an efficient and economically feasible way to tackle the current energy crisis, specialists told a solar power workshop for the financial community Thursday.

Consultants with a federally funded solar research and information group also said the long-term advantages of solar power will far outweigh the initial investment as the cost of fuel increases.

"Solar power is a pretty simple technology. It's functional now. It works now. And it is economically feasible," said Gayle Friedman, a financial analyst for The Franklin Institute.

She told about 125 Realtors, bankers, lenders and state and local officials that solar can only meet about 20 percent of the nation's energy needs but does play an "important role" in the total picture.

Peter Hollander, a solar technician, said solar savings will become "really dramatic" if the cost of home heating oil and gas continue skyrocketing.

The public has been very receptive to the idea of solar power but needs to learn more of the facts, Ms. Friedman said.

"I think the whole issue of 'heating or eating' in this part of the country will raise the consciousness about solar," she said.

A hot water heating system is the most practical and economical solar system an average family can install in an existing home, Hollander said. The type of system depends on the location and construction of the home, and 90 to 120 gallon tank can cost from $1,000 to $4,000.

Hollander also said every system should always have an auxiliary heater.

"It is almost never economical to do solar 100 percent," he said at the workshop sponsored by the federal Department of Energy, the state and other groups.

Homeowners cannot expect the traditional less than five year payback on their investment, both said, but should expect a return in about five to 10 years.

"The real issue is out of pocket expenses. In a very short period of time it's costing you less and less every month to pay your heat," Hollander said.

Lottery Winner Surprised

MANCHESTER—Grace Raimondi, 64, of Manchester, has been playing the Connecticut State Lottery since it began but had never won, recently, however, she had to do a double take at her ticket, scanning it to make sure she was dreaming that all six digits matched the winning number in the newspaper to win her $20,000.

Mrs. Raimondi made the discovery on Nov. 9 and told her husband, Adam, to start packing his bags for Hawaii, a long-awaited dream of hers.

Mrs. Raimondi held the only weekly Money Tree ticket sold with the winning six-digit combination of 741748, drawn on the Nov. 8 "Lottery Show."

Working for Arrow-Hart Inc. for 17 years, Mrs. Raimondi retired last December. Adam is a retired pump operator for the Metropolitan District Water Bureau in Hartford. They have three children, eight grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Sheldon To Head Campaign

HARTFORD—Frank P. Sheldon, C.L.U., has been appointed east central regional chairman for the American Heart Association 1980 campaign.

Sheldon, a lifetime resident of Manchester, is an agent of the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Co., Hartford branch office. He serves on the board of trustees of Manchester Memorial Hospital and is a incorporator of the Savings Bank of Manchester.

Sheldon announced the town chairman who will develop the volunteer organizations and local campaigns for the towns in the region. In Bolton, at Lawrence A. Piantoni, Manchester, Thomas F. Ferguson of LaBonne Bemis Associates; South Woodstock, attorneys John J. Woodcock III and Stephen H. Riege; Tolland, Gary Wolfe; and Vernon, Arnold S. Zackin, Wolff-Zackin and Associates.

Final Report Released

Town Audit Shows Surplus Suggests Improvements

By LAUREN DAVIS SHEA
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER—The town auditor's report released today revealed the community finished fiscal 1972 with a $28,628 surplus and a generally sound accounting system, although some of the nuts and bolts of that system need fine tuning.

Jerome I. Baskin, the town's auditor had released preliminary data on Oct. 9 showing an anticipated $218,890 surplus. Out of these funds, the Board of Directors allocated $108,000 for the leaf pickup, an emergency fuel fund, and for restoration of the Mt. Nebo Hockey rink.

The remaining $108,890 anticipated surplus was cut by $70,852 due to bills for the board of education and the town comptroller that arrived during the final two weeks of fiscal 1972.

The audit report stated, "The accounting system is being cut out prematurely. Accordingly, certain expenditures made in the last 15 days of the fiscal year are not reflected in the proper accounting period."

"Accordingly, we recommend that methodology be devised and implemented so the town's books may be kept open beyond the calendar year-end to reflect expenditures for outstanding bills at year-end.

"In order to accomplish this, it may be necessary for revisions to be made to the data processing system so that two fiscal years are temporarily maintained simultaneously.

"$70,852 was recorded as expenditures for fiscal year 1960, when in fact, they should have been recorded in fiscal year 1972."

The auditor thus corrected the accounting error, leaving a total $28,628 surplus. Outgoing Democratic Director Joseph Sweeney said at a press conference on Friday, "We thought we had $108,000 surplus. We still have it but in a different form."

Mayor Stephen Penny added, "700 of last year's expenses got paid with this year's funds. The same $70,000 got freed up to use in this year's budget."

The report made several recommendations involving important accounting procedures that should be changed to reflect federal and state requirements. Detailed fixed assets records should be established. Town Manager Robert Weiss said this improvement would be implemented prior to the next audit.

In several instances, the report said the person who collected town money was also keeping the books. The report recommended segregating the duties, so any error one person missed, the other could pick up.

More complete bookkeeping procedures were recommended for the collector of revenue office, the treasurer's office and other offices. Changes in the investment of the town pension fund were recommended. Sweeney said, "The report is suggesting that the pension board collectively emulate the actions of Roger Negro, town treasurer."

The report suggested placing a greater share of pension funds in insurance company investments and Certificates of Deposit. Funds which are now invested by banks in the stock market are yielding smaller returns than those invested by the insurance company.

As an aside, Sweeney said he wanted to set the facts straight about a rumor he had heard. Sweeney said a town employee came to him with the erroneous impression that pension funds had been used for the leaf pickup. Sweeney said the rumor is completely untrue.

In another recommendation the report said the tax assessor should calculate the phase-in figures. Now, the tax collector is sometimes responsible for these assessments, which amounts to "back passing." Efforts are underway to ensure the back stops at the proper office.

The town's personnel is subject to the same pressures acting on any business, as one recommendation regarding the data processing system pointed out. Apparently, town offices are treating the data processing department like a typing pool, with each office wanting their work accomplished first. The report suggested work would be accomplished more efficiently if the departments met regularly to agree on the priority of their needs.

The only part of the report the mayor termed "juicy" is the deficit the water and sewer taxes reflect. The report showed taxes outstanding in these areas of $298,165. The mayor said the board of directors will be keeping an eye on this area within the next year to develop successful collection procedures.

Most of the testimony Friday afternoon hinged on the scheduling of commission meetings on the budget in August and early September.

Attorney Paul Knag, representing the hospital, questioned George Roy, chief financial officer of the hospital, about the amount of notice he received about meetings, and about changes in starting times and delays in starting.

Panel Ends Hearing On Hospital Claims

By ALEX GIRELLI
City Editor

HARTFORD—A hearing was completed Friday after a full day of testimony in Manchester Memorial Hospital's complaint to the Freedom of Information Commission over actions of the Commission on Hospitals and Health Care.

The hospital brought the complaint after the commission cut the hospital budget by $789,000 after a series of hearings and deliberation sessions.

The hospital, and the Connecticut Hospital Association, along with it, claim that the commission sessions were held with inadequate or misleading public notice and that one executive session was held in violation of the Freedom of Information law provisions.

Most of the testimony Friday afternoon hinged on the scheduling of commission meetings on the budget in August and early September.

Attorney Paul Knag, representing the hospital, questioned George Roy, chief financial officer of the hospital, about the amount of notice he received about meetings, and about changes in starting times and delays in starting.

Attorney Richard Lynch, representing the commission, questioned Bernard Forand, executive director of the commission, on the number of hospital budgets the commission must consider (3) and the limited span of time in which they must complete their deliberation.

In his summary argument, Knag contended that the hospital was prejudiced by the absence of the public from hearings. He argued that the public would be very concerned about commission proceedings "if they knew about them."

He said the commission was guilty of a consistent series of mistakes with respect to provisions of the Freedom of Information law add two FOI violations.

In his summation, Lynch denied a pattern of ignoring FOI provisions and said the commission made a genuine attempt to give notice and to file records of its actions.

He also contended that the commission is not a "public agency" within the meaning of the FOI law and that the sessions complained of are not "meetings" within the meaning of that law.

Lynch argued that the executive session complained of was a discussion between the commission (a client) and its legal counsel over the possibility of litigation.

Knag has filed a brief with the Freedom of Information Commission and Lynch will file one by Nov. 30.

FOI Commissioner Donald Friedman questioned the counsel on the time span for budget consideration, on the size and staff resources of the Commission on Hospitals and Health Care.

Friedman also asked the attorneys what remedy might be appropriate if the FOI commission found that there were violations of the FOI statute.

Knag said his clients would like the Freedom of Information Commission to restore the budget as requested by the hospital.

The FOI action is one of two being pursued by the hospital against the commission. Pending in a suit in Superior Court in which the hospital is asking the court to restore the budget.

The court has already issued a stay of execution of the commission's budget order cut. Thus the hospital is operating under its $2.2 million budget as originally requested, but a sum is in escrow pending disposition of the suit. The sum is 20 per cent of the $789,000 the commission cut.

Herald Unique Product By Changing Every Day

By STEVEN M. HARRY
Executive Editor

This is product show weekend in Manchester and, at risk of blowing our own horn, we'd like to take a little space to explain our own product, The Evening Herald.

Most readers don't think about their daily newspaper as a manufactured product because of its character and place in the lives of its readers.

The Herald really is such a product which is unique in the manufacturing world because the result of our efforts is a completely new product every day.

The Herald is produced by a team of talented professionals working day and night to bring you the news of the day. It is a herald of living history and the only source our readers can rely on for factual, unbiased news of the community.

In addition your daily newspaper is one of the few industrial products that is put together with a large investment of time and resources and put into the hands of youngsters to distribute.

Those youngsters do a terrific job distributing the Herald as independent business persons. They are given a lot of responsibility in our industry and they measure up very well.

Because ours is a product that is constantly updating the way we do our job.

Some of the recent changes include a new approach on our editorial page with local editorials in a strong format. An attractive new index on the front page to help readers find the news of interest to them, new approaches to our presentation of sport and people news and an ongoing dedication to providing the most comprehensive, current report of local news found anywhere.

Because our lives and lifestyles constantly change, so does our daily newspaper.

We'd appreciate hearing from our readers with their thoughts about the Herald.

Your comments and criticisms are welcomed at the Herald.

Just write to let us know what we can do to better meet your needs for information.

Meanwhile, we hope you enjoy what we have been doing lately and are enthusiastic about some exciting new concepts coming soon to your Herald.

Carter Cancels Holiday Trip

By LAURENCE MCGUIRE
WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Carter Friday canceled a trip to Florida and a scheduled Thanksgiving vacation in Georgia because of the hostage crisis, and asked Americans not to abuse innocent Iranians.

The White House announced Carter would, however, spend Thanksgiving week at his Camp David retreat in Maryland, where he still can keep in close touch with developments in Iran.

Press secretary Jody Powell said Carter probably would leave for Camp David on Saturday.

He canceled both a trip to Florida Saturday and plans to vacation next week on Sapelo Island along the Georgia coast "in order to continue to closely monitor the situation in Iran."

The White House said Rosalynn Carter will travel to Florida Saturday in place of her husband, who was to have attended a state democratic convention in Mt. Petersburg.

He said he is trying to protect American honor - as well as the hostages - and assured the state officials there is "no reason to panic" about potential fuel shortages because of his decision banning Iranian oil imports.

The president asked the officials to try and calm angry Americans in their states so that there will be no repercussions against the 62 U.S. citizens held in Iran at the U.S. embassy in Tehran.

"I've just gotten a report that there are maybe 80,000 Iranians demonstrating outside our embassy in a highly emotional state," Carter said during a talk in the East Room.

Wars: Hot and Cold

Editor's Note: This is the 11th in a series of 15 articles exploring "Connections: Technology and Change." In this article, physicist Herbert F. York and historian G. Allen Greb discuss how scientists and policymakers have formed a partnership that can use technology for war or for peace.

This series was written for Courses by Newspaper, a program developed by University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Manchester Community College offers a three-credit course based on the newspaper series. For information, call 646-2157.

A related 10-part television series, "Connections," is being aired Sunday evenings this fall by Connecticut Public Television, Channel 24. Copyright 1979 by the Regents of the University of California.

By Herbert F. York
And G. Allen Greb

For more than three decades now, we have lived under the threat of a nuclear holocaust. But the relationship between national security and technology did not emerge with the nuclear age.

From the time that one group of prehistoric men first used clubs and spears to force their will on another group, war and technology have been closely interrelated.

And throughout history, political and military leaders on the one hand have used science and technology to further their ends, and scientists and engineers on the other have exploited the special interests of the state to advance their own goals.

In recent years, and throughout the world, such interaction between scientists and policymakers has greatly increased. Traditionally, this partnership has employed technology to produce ever deadlier weapons. But today, advanced technology can also provide the means for arms control.

The continuing partnership between government and science seems assured; how that partnership will be used is less certain.

Escalation

From earliest times until the present, new offensive technologies have always been countered by defensive developments or more powerful offensive systems. Thus, technology has produced a steady progression of more efficient instruments of death and destruction: swords, longbows, firearms, aircraft, atomic bombs, missiles.

During World War II, for example, the Germans launched a successful blitzkrieg against most of the nations of central and western Europe. They came close to overrunning Britain and Russia as well by exploiting the latest technological developments in aircraft, tanks, and related equipment.

In the West, the British stopped the Nazi advance by making full use of another new technology, radar.

German technology, in the form of modern submarines and torpedoes, almost cut off American supplies from Europe. American technology, in the form of anti-submarine warfare and intelligence techniques, reversed that process.

And, perhaps most dramatic and politically portentous of all, World War II ended with the nuclear attacks on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

New Role for Scientists

During that conflagration, moreover, scientists and engineers did not simply respond to requests from military authorities. Rather, they became full participants in the planning process. They not only invented and built weapons, but they shared in making the decisions about which ones were needed, and even how they should be used.

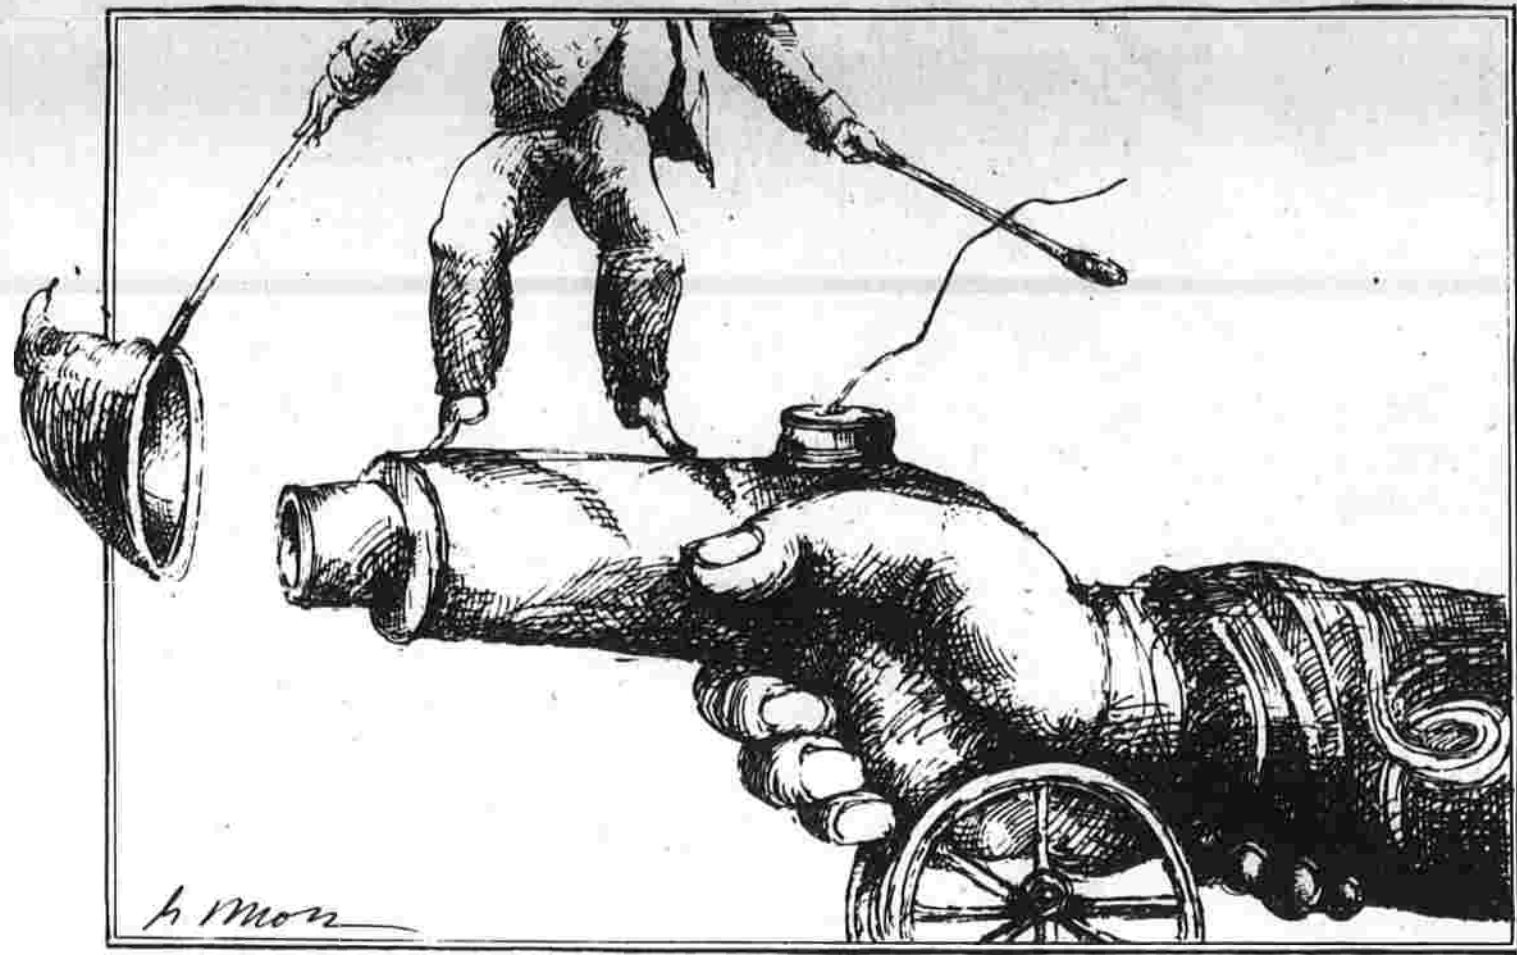

Special new institutions, both inside and outside the government, had to be created to make this interaction work effectively. Such institutions have continued to evolve and proliferate since then.

Current versions included so-called "think tanks," such as RAND and other private research institutes, university-operated institutions, such as the University of California's two nuclear weapons laboratories and MIT's Lincoln Lab; and permanent government committees composed of both academic and industrial scientists and engineers, which provide input on all matters from weapons development and deployment of arms control and disarmament.

Weapons Development

The Cold War and the wars in Korea and Vietnam caused these new relationships to continue long after World War II. Whenever there seemed to be a lull in the process, an event like the Russian launching of Sputnik came along to reinforce this political and scientific collaboration.

One major result of this further interaction of science and technology with national security needs was the invention of the hydrogen bomb - in its first version, 1,000 times as powerful as its predecessor, the A-bomb and the spread of both types of nuclear weapons to Russia, Britain, France, and China.

Another very significant result was the further development of rockets, which had been invented a thousand years earlier in a simple form, into huge and powerful devices capable of delivering nuclear weapons to within a few hundred feet of any specified point on the globe in a half-hour.

The possession of some thousands of such weapons, in several different forms, by both the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R. has defined the relationship of the two superpowers for the last two decades. It largely explains, moreover, why these nations occupy the positions of world power and influence that they do.

Policy Options

Throughout the post World War I period, scientists and engineers have continued to be full partners with state authorities, participating at all levels of government, from the President's Office down, in determining what should be done as well as how to do it.

Some of these participants have placed special emphasis on our exploring the possibilities inherent in the latest scientific discoveries before some potential enemy does. Edward Teller, commonly known as the "father of the H-bomb," and the late Werner von Braun, a leading developer of large rockets both in Germany before World War II and in America afterwards, are two well-known examples from a large group of such people.

Each of these scientists testified many times before congressional committees; each served as advisers to Presidents, Secretaries of Defense, and other leaders, each served on many special committees; and each made countless public appearances in support of his views.

Working in a similar fashion, others have promoted the use of modern science for some military applications but have opposed other applications that they considered to be especially dangerous. In short, they became not only developers of arms, but advocates of arms control.

One prominent example is Robert Oppenheimer, who led in the development of the H-bomb but who opposed the development of the H-bomb. Others are James Killian and George Kistiakowsky, who served as science advisers to President Eisenhower during the missile gap crisis but who also have become leading advocates of nuclear arms control.

Development and Control

Today, the interactions between scientists and government are continuing along two main lines: first, the development of more sophisticated weaponry and, second, the pursuit of political agreements to stop or at least moderate such developments.

This gigantic luminous dome of water rose above the lagoon, dwarfing test ships below, during an underwater A-bomb test at Bikini Atoll in the Pacific in 1946. Nuclear weapons were the product of a new partnership between science and government. (UPI photo)

CONNECTIONS TECHNOLOGY AND CHANGE

Vietnam, the first war in which technological superiority did not work to the advantage of a state, demonstrated the need to control weapons so deadly that nations are literally afraid to use them.

The development of nuclear weapons and long-range delivery systems continues: the recent advances in microprocessors and other computers are making these and other weapons much "smarter" (and more devilish); and we are hearing talk that laser beams and other so-called death rays are somewhere around the corner.

In the case of arms control and disarmament, some treaties have been worked out placing modest limits on the development of some weapons and limiting the deployment and use of certain others. The Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) are now attempting to extend these treaties, but the outlook for significant new agreements is mixed.

Advanced technology plays a key role in arms control as well as in arms development. The principal means for determining whether the various parties are complying with existing arms control treaties involves the use of very sophisticated devices. Satellites, for example, monitor both missile deployment and missile development, and very modern seismic detectors coupled with the latest data processing techniques make it possible to observe nuclear explosions from great distances.

The ever increasing complexity of both weapons development and efforts to control these devices thus guarantees the continued partnership of government and science in the technological process. How this partnership will ultimately influence society as a whole remains perhaps the most perplexing problem facing mankind.

The views expressed in Courses by Newspaper are those of the authors only and do not necessarily reflect those of the University of California, the National Endowment for the Humanities, the distributing agency, or the participating newspapers and colleges.

Next Week: Historian A. Hunter Dupree of Brown University examines the increasing role of the government in technological development.

Questions

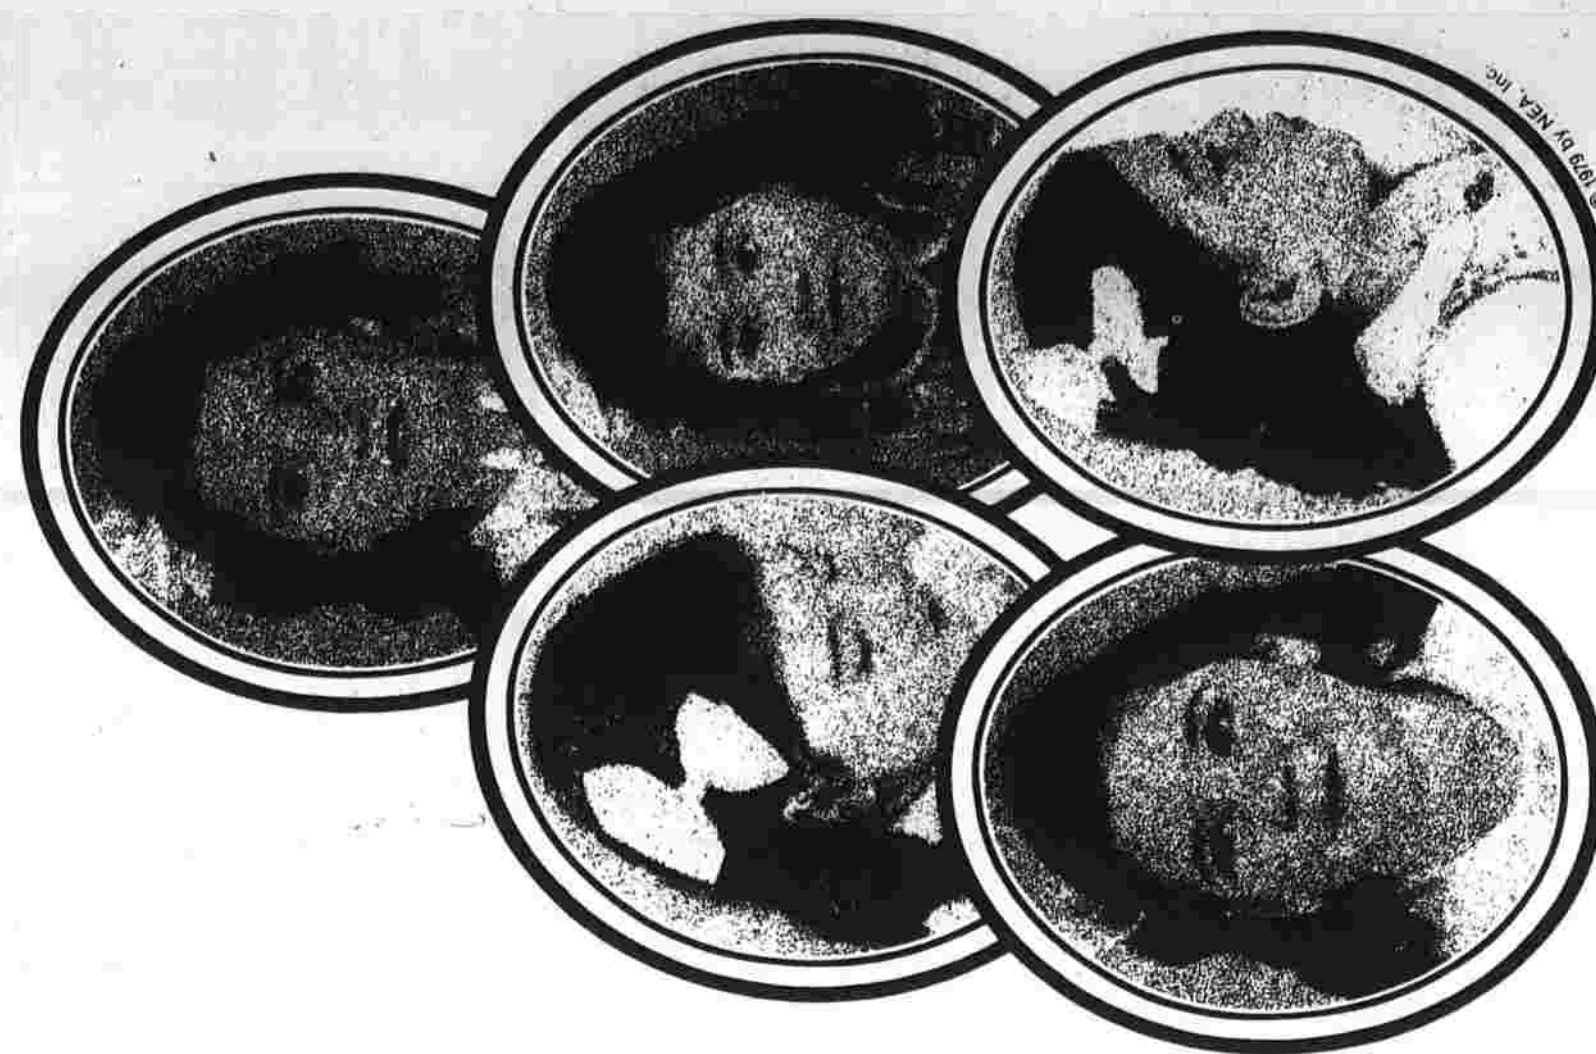

During World War II, which of the following was true, according to the authors?

- (a) scientists and engineers avoided becoming participants in military planning processes
- (b) Nazi tanks and aircraft almost defeated Russia and Britain
- (c) Nazi scientists developed radar to assist the Luftwaffe pilots
- (d) an Allied nations vote approved the nuclear attacks on Hiroshima and Nagasaki

Which of the following is NOT true, according to the York and Greb article?

- (a) technology is important to arms control as well as arms development
- (b) some presidential science advisors advocate nuclear arms control
- (c) Werner von Braun was known as the "father of the German H-bomb."
- (d) Oppenheimer led the development of the A-bomb

About the Authors

Herbert F. York is professor of physics and director of the Program in Science, Technology, and Public Affairs at the University of California, San Diego, where he was also chancellor. Director of the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory of the University of California from 1962 to 1968, he was Director of Defense Research and Engineering under Presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy and is now chief U. S. delegate to the Geneva Comprehensive Test Ban Negotiations. He is author of Race to Oblivion and The Advisors: Oppenheimer, Teller and the Superbomb.

G. Allen Greb is research historian in the Program in Science, Technology, and Public Affairs at the University of California, San Diego. His publications include articles on the Panama Canal, strategic reconnaissance, and postwar military research and development.

Tax Credit Plan Unconstitutional

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI)—The Rhode Island Legislature's latest attempt to provide aid to parents of parochial school students was ruled unconstitutional Friday by a federal judge.

U.S. District Judge Raymond J. Pettine said the 1979 law, giving a state income tax deduction for school tuition, violated the First Amendment separation of church and state.

The lawyer for 11 groups which challenged the law called the ruling "great encouragement to people with strong beliefs in the public school system." The law's author said the decision was "illogical." Attorney General Dennis J. Roberts was considering an appeal.

The law was drafted as a means of giving parents of children attending tuition-charging schools — public, private and parochial — a state income tax deduction to save them an estimated $33 annually per household.

The challenge was filed by the Rhode Island AFL-CIO, two teacher unions, the American Civil Liberties Union, the League of Women Voters, and other groups.

"Because a deduction for actual educational expenses is the economic equivalent of the state helping to provide for those expenses, the statute's primary effect is the advancement of religion," the judge wrote.

He ordered State Tax Administrator to print 1979 income tax claim forms without the deduction.

Julius C. Michaelson, former attorney general who represented the challengers, called the ruling "a source of great encouragement to

Liter Hoses

Motorists passing this Exxon station in Brewer, Maine, are being treated to signs of yesterday as the Webber Oil Co. has converted its first station to metric pricing. The price shown is for a liter of gasoline, 3.8 of which make a gallon. The price of regular, translated to a price per gallon is 96.9 cents and unleaded is 102.2 cents. (UPI photo).

Island law claimed its primary effect was to encourage religion because more than 90 percent of the people eligible for the deductions had children in Roman Catholic schools. Deductions of up to $500 for elementary students and $700 for junior or senior high school students would have saved families about $15 per student on their tax bills. It would have cost the state treasury about $560,000 annually.

Police checked his truck and when they found only two bags of hockey equipment, barred his entry.

Police said many evacuees tried to muscle their way through roadblocks.

"There is going to be a high level of chlorine in that area," he said. "It is very dangerous already but its going to be much more dangerous." Of the 250,000 persons ordered out of a 90-square-mile area Sunday, about half were allowed home Tuesday.

Eight fishermen were killed Thursday when they walked into a pocket of the yellowish, green gas. Seven were treated and released and the eighth was held for observation.

Police chief Dave Barrows appealed to the 33,000 evacuees to day night. Chemical experts were able to pump out 14 to 15 tons of chlorine from the ruptured tanker in 14 hours. McMurry said.

"We are of the view that as of last night when this operation began that approximately 20 tons remained and our approximate estimate is that some 75 percent of that has been removed," McMurry said.

He then declared that 55,000 evacuees can return to their homes and said 33,000 others, who live within the 5.5 square mile buffer, may be allowed back by Friday night.

Police chief Dave Barrows appealed to the 33,000 evacuees to

"please continue to co-operate with the police and show understanding."

Many of the evacuees, fed up after nearly six days in hotels or temporary shelters, attempted to sneak back to their homes. Those who could not slog through muddy fields tried to bluff their way in.

"They've tried everything but helicopters and hand gliders, one exasperated policeman said. "One man offered to leave his wife as a hostage if he could go home to feed his 50 racing pigeons. Police refused."

Another man flashed a water company identification badge and said he was on his way to set up an emergency transformer for work crews.

Church insisted Miller was not forced to resign, but had contemplated such action for several weeks.

Miller, 56, has suffered a series of heart attacks, the latest on a hunting trip in West Virginia last week. He was in intensive care at a Charleston, W.Va., hospital.

"No one from the union asked Mr. Miller for his resignation," Church said. "I think Mr. Miller's health forced him out. Not me, nor the executive board."

Church said action to replace him as union vice president probably will be taken at a UMW convention in Denver starting Dec. 10.

In a two-paragraph resignation letter, Miller said he regretted having to leave, but that his condition "makes it impossible to continue to serve effectively as your president."

Church said Miller will be long remembered "as a labor leader whose uncompromising dedication to union democracy brought new hope to hundreds of thousands of his brothers."

Miller came to office in 1972, in a special court-ordered election following the murder of union insurgent Joseph A. "Jock" Yablonski on New Year's Eve in 1969.

Boyle had defeated Yablonski earlier that year, and subsequently was convicted of first degree murder in the deaths of Yablonski, his wife and daughter.

Feds Levy Fines On Two Airlines

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Federal Aviation Administration Friday fined American Airlines $500,000 and Continental Airlines $100,000 for unsafe maintenance procedures on the DC-10 jetliner.

The agency said the two airlines used a special forklift device to remove and reinstall the DC-10 engine pylon assembly as a single unit, instead of following the recommended procedure of removing and reinstalling each unit separately.

The agency said the one-step procedure had the "potential for inflicting damage to the wing pylon attachment and related structure during either the removal or installation process."

ZBA Sets Date On Rink Request

By CHRIS BLAKE
Herald Reporter

EAST HARTFORD—A Newington man has requested a variance to convert the former Top Notch Foods building at 801 Silver Lane into a roller skating rink.

The Zoning Board of Appeals will hear the application of Thomas Laske of Newington on Nov. 29 at 7:30 p.m. at Town Hall. Laske represents East Hartford Family Skating Center Inc.

The plans call for conversion of the building into a 4,500 square foot rink. The variance is needed because roller skating rinks are not permitted in the zone in which the building lies.

Laske's application states the proposed rink will not change the character of the neighborhood because "the existing building would not be changed and the entire activity is inside the building."

Laske could not be reached for comment on the proposed hours of operation for the rink.

Last March the ZBA denied a variance for a roller skating rink at the Top Notch building. The request drew heavy opposition from area residents, who raised concerns about increases in traffic and vandalism which they said the rink would create.

The ZBA denied the rink request because the applicant did not prove a "hardship."

Meanwhile, the Planning and Zoning Commission is scheduled to decide on Dec. 12 whether another rink, proposed for the former Topps building at 467 Main St., is a permitted use in the business-one zone.

Attorney Charles C. Greenwald requested the interpretation of the zoning regulations because they didn't specifically state that rinks are allowed into zone.

Greenwald's client is Richard A. Dupuis, owner of Poor Richard's Pub and Cinema, which is in the same shopping plaza. Dupuis has said the town is "looking for trouble" if it permits 13 to 17 year olds youths, whom he said would frequent the rink, in the same area as the older patrons at his place and at two other nearby establishments which sell liquor.

If the rink is deemed a proper use by the PZC, the applicant will not have to go before a zoning commission to build it.

The PZC will discuss the 467 Main St. rink proposal Dec. 12 at 7:30 p.m. at Town Hall.

Get Perky & Eat Turkey

Happy Thanksgiving!!

By BETTY RYDER
Family Editor

Thanksgiving Day is a day of thanksgiving — unless, of course, you're a turkey.

But, the plump birds parading proudly in their pens at Grayledge Avian Farms in Glastonbury are gobbling loudly apparently unmindful of their date with destiny which is fast approaching.

More than 7,000 turkeys are being processed to grace Thanksgiving tables and turkey in various other forms is available, such as turkey sausage, pies, parts and even Swedish turkey meatballs.

Of course, Grayledge, will also cook a turkey of your choice, and supply the stuffing and gravy, all ready for your holiday dinner.

Touring through the Marlborough Road facility, we were treated to the smell of turkey pies cooking to a golden brown. These, incidentally, were only partially cooked and will be completed in a microwave oven at an area supermarket for customers to sample.

The farm, which raises approximately 18,000 turkeys a year, is currently building a new processing plant to be completed soon.

When it's pie-making day, between 2,000 to 3,000 pies are made in one day in various sizes. They are then packaged, placed in cartons, and stored in the huge refrigerated rooms until ready for shipment to area stores.

Did you know that some turkey growers grow their birds in confinement so they don't become sassy or tough from exercise. This keeps the meat soft and tender.

According to Grayledge, this confinement rearing also enables the farm to control the turkey's diet, which consists of specially formulated feed ingredients.

Turkeys grow rapidly and the 25 to 30 pounders are just as tender as the smaller birds, so cooking time should be carefully observed.

Grayledge also suggests using a meat-poultry thermometer to judge correct cooking time. Place the thermometer into the center of the inside thigh muscle (preferred), or thickest part of the breast. Push it in until it hits the bone and then withdraw 4-

UMW Leader Resigns

WASHINGTON (UPI)—United Mine Workers President Conrad Miller, who ousted now-imprisoned W.A. "Tony" Boyle seven years ago, resigned Friday because of poor health, ending a turbulent reign at head of 170,000 union coal miners.

Miller turned control of the union over to Sam Church Jr., a brawling 43-year-old former mine electrician from the Virginia coalfields, whom Miller chose as his vice presidential running mate when he sought reelection in 1977.

Church, with a reputation for flamboyance and a hot temper, once was a Boyle follower, but later switched his allegiance to Miller. Earlier this year, he made a record, "Black Gold," a song about why American coal should be burned instead of imported oil, with proceeds going to the union's organizing efforts.

Wearing a "Why Not Coal" button on his lapel, Church told a news conference the union's International Executive Board appointed Miller as "president emeritus" — a title also accorded to John L. Lewis when he stepped down in the 1960s.

Miller will receive his $40,000-a-year salary and full benefits until at least December 1982, when his term would have expired.

Church insisted Miller was not forced to resign, but had contemplated such action for several weeks.

Miller, 56, has suffered a series of heart attacks, the latest on a hunting trip in West Virginia last week. He was in intensive care at a Charleston, W.Va., hospital.

"No one from the union asked Mr. Miller for his resignation," Church said. "I think Mr. Miller's health forced him out. Not me, nor the executive board."

Carter Nominates Commerce Head

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Carter Friday nominated Philip M. Klutznick, Chicago financier and president of the World Jewish Congress, to be secretary of commerce.

Klutznick, 72, will succeed James Krosig, who resigned the Cabinet post Nov. 1.

Klutznick is former president of B'nai B'rith and is a prominent Jewish fundraiser. He also is chairman of the executive committee of Urban Investment and Development Co., a subsidiary of Aetna Life and Casualty Co.

White House press secretary Jody Powell told reporters that Klutznick, who served as U.S. representative to the U.N. Economic and Social Council and also in the Roosevelt and Truman administrations, "has a great deal of experience in international trade and economic development."

At the same time, Powell announced that Carter is nominating Lather Hodges to be deputy secretary in the new Department of Commerce and Trade when a reorganization plan takes effect.

Hodges, whose father was secretary of commerce under John Kennedy, is currently undersecretary of commerce and will need to be reconfirmed by the Senate.

Powell said Klutznick met with Carter Thursday to discuss the Cabinet appointment. He said Klutznick's name was "one that surfaced from a number of sources" in business and trade.

New Religions Are Treading the Fine Legal Lane

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

United Press International
It was almost a year after Jonestown and the terrible mass murder and suicide: Nine Scientologists stood in a U.S. district court room and quietly accepted guilty verdicts for their part in a plot to infiltrate the government and steal government documents.

followers of the Rev. Jim Jones at Jonestown, Guyana, may believe the leaders were saying the new religions were peaking.
George Gallup Jr., in his most recent survey of the state of religion, said that it did not appear that "either unconventional religions or cults are registering any large gains in popularity" in the United States.

At the same time, however, he said both young adults - the age group most attracted to unconventional religions - and adults of all ages are eager to "feel fulfilled" and are flirting with a wide variety of parareligious and mind-expanding movements and activities.
"Young people appear to be spiritually restless; they want a strong religious faith, but at the same time they find organized religion to be spiritually lifeless," Gallup said. "As a result they are intrigued by the parareligion and by unconventional religion and cults."

But the attention focused on Jonestown, as well as the revelations involving the Church of Scientology's infiltration of the government, has intensified both the legal and extralegal opposition to unconventional religions.
Critics of the new religions point to Jonestown and the Scientology case as examples of the dangers of all the new religion.

Because of fears of First Amendment violations, however, the result has put some mainline church groups in the curious position of trying to counter the cults with their educational material while supporting their First Amendment rights.
Focus of the concern has been the increased phenomenon of "deprogramming" — the forcible removal of an adult believer from a religious group and then holding the person until he or she recants their belief.

Dr. Ross Bartlett, president of the Alliance for the Preservation of Religious Liberty, has estimated that about 40 forcible deprogrammings are started in the country every day.
And the evidence indicates that deprogramming is going beyond the fringe sects to more established religions including efforts to deprogram Baptists, Episcopalians and Catholics.

On Capitol Hill, meanwhile, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kansas, has already held two informal hearings that featured a number of anti-cult witnesses and Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y., has promised another one to look at strengthening laws permitting parents to keep legal control over their adult offspring who become adherents of a religion of which the parents do not approve.

Special Music Festival Planned by Salvationists

MANCHESTER - The Salvation Army will celebrate a weekend of Saving Grace beginning today. Guests will be Brigadier and Mrs. Walter E. Lamie, former corps officers in Manchester from 1968 to 1964, who are presently the hospital chaplains at the Salvation Army William Booth Memorial Hospital in Florence Ken.

Brigadier Lamie will be the chairman of the Thanksgiving Music Festival tonight at 7:30, which will feature the Manchester Citadel Band and Songsters, under the direction of Bandmaster Michael Grifflin and Songster Leader Mrs. G. Alton Perrett.

Guest soloist for the music festival will be Bandman Lindsay Evans from Montclair, N.J. Bandman Evans, for more than 10 years, was the principal trombone with the internationally famous New York Staff Band. He will be presenting "Now I Belong to Jesus," an arrangement by Bruce Broughton. "The Reason," an Ernest Rance composition and arranged by Steve Bulla, and "Concert Piece" by Moreau.

Citadel Songsters will be presenting "I Can Think of Him," a composition from the pen of Major Joy Webb, "High as the Sky," from a recent Salvation Army musical by Covans Larson, "Hymn of Grateful Praise," Kocher/Huff, and "Rose of Sharon," a setting by Edwin Gracie by W.A. Gullidge, and Air Varie "Sunshine Mountain" by English composer Ray Bowes, a cornet duet, "Divorcee," by the former head of the music department of Carnegie-

Collectors' Corner Anniversary Stamp Honors Will Rogers

WILL ROGERS

Performing Arts USA Inc.

By RUSS MacKENDRICK

This coming Monday, the 19th, will be the last chance to order a first-day cancellation for the Will Rogers stamp. It was issued on the 4th of this month, on the 100th anniversary of his birth, at his hometown of Claremore, Oklahoma.

Rogers (1879-1935), got his start in show business by twirling a lariat and roping in Wild West rodeos and eventually made it to the New York stage. There he combined the rope act with patter and topical comments.

In speaking of an FDR press conference at the time of the New Deal, he said that Roosevelt could take a complicated subject like banking and explain it so that even a banker could understand it. And again: "A holding company is a thing where you hand an accomplice the goods while a policeman searches you."

Rogers became tremendously popular and had a syndicated radio show and wrote books and acted in the movies. The stamp is the third in the Performing Arts and Artists series that began with Jimmy Rodgers and George M. Cohan. It will be in six colors and there will be six plate numbers.

For an FDC, get the stamp locally, prepare your cover with a peelable return address label, and send a First Day Cancellation, Postmaster, Claremore, OK 74017.

And there's more Oklahoma: Rogers' friend, Wiley Post, will be honored on two 8-cent 25-cent airmail stamps to be issued at Oklahoma City on Tuesday the 20th. The ceremonies will take place at the Wiley Post Memorial Building.

Why a 25-cent airmail? It is the rate for a mive-up to half an ounce going to Central and South America and Bermuda. Other international rates are 31 cents - except for Canada and Mexico which are automatically sent by air for 15 cents the first ounce.

Wiley Post was a "natural" pilot. It was said that he didn't just fly a plane - he put it on. His first big flight was in 1930, winning the Los Angeles to Chicago Derby in his pet plane the "Winnie Mae," a Lockheed Vega. In the following year he and a co-pilot made a record around-the-world flight in 8 days. In 1954 he made the trip solo in seven days.

Post designed the first successful pressurized suit and wore it on a penetration of the stratosphere in 1931. One of the stamps shows him in this suit, holding a helmet on his lap. The other stamps has the Winnie Mae in the background. They are nearly square in format (19 by 23 mm). They are in multicolor but will have only one plate number. FDCs may be obtained through Dec. 3 - address First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, Oklahoma City, OK 731-125.

MANPHIL Tomorrow

Tomorrow at Elling Junior High School, 229 E. Middle Turnpike, MANPHIL 79, the annual hosting of the Connecticut Philatelic Society. There will be an auction, many dealers, the U.S. Postal Service, door prizes, cachets with special cancellations and souvenir cards. Time: 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

News for Senior Citizens

By WALLY FORTIN

This coming week will be a short one for us because Thanksgiving is here. Time is flying and Christmas is just around the corner. Funny how little we hear about Thanksgiving these days. It's almost as if we were all advertising gone on about Christmas. Sure is too bad, because even with all the hand things we have much to be thankful for. All one has to do is read about and see pictures of the people in Cambodia and we realize how fortunate we really are.

Like I said, it will be a short week as we have both Thursday and Friday off. A reminder that come Monday morning we will be signing up for a 13-day jaunt to Florida. You'll visit many interesting sites and see quite a bit of Florida. This is a great time to sit back and leave the driving to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Levinson of South Windsor and Mrs. Janice Stewart, president of Unit #133 of South Windsor.

Mr. and Mrs. William T. Barrett, #133 of South Windsor, and Mr. and Mrs. William T. Barrett, #133 of South Windsor, have been contributors to this program for several years, will be with us to hear the girls speak on their work at Laurel Girl State.

Members are reminded to bring items for the Tea Cup Auction.

"Hostesses for the evening will be the co-chairmen of the local Girl State Program, Mrs. Mary LeDuc and Mrs. Lida Duncan.

your flu shot, you have a chance to get on Dec. 7 from 9 to 10 a.m. at the Manchester Public Health Nursing office, 150 N. Main St.

This past Wednesday morning, in two hours, our public health nurses, along with some of our volunteers, gave blood pressure tests to 151 people. We have some Girl Scouts who would like to spend a little chatting with you. They would like to hear what things were like as a Girl Scout during your days. I'm sure you'd really enjoy talking with these girls and it will be a treat for them. So how about calling our office, 497-321, and we'll give you more information.

By the way, our crewel embroidery class will not meet this coming Wednesday.

Moan, 551; Gert McKay, 551; Mina Reuther, 544.

In the afternoon it will be bridge and the lucky prize winners were: Mabel Loomis, 4,770; Marjorie McLain, 4,260; Ruth Regan, 4,140; Rose Marie, 4,140; Ed Hinde, 4,030.

Indians Reach Final Round

Lombardo Scores Topple Smith, 3-0

By LEN AUSTER
Herald Sports Editor

And now, one game stands in the way of retiring Manchester High soccer Coach Dick Danielson going out a winner.

His 33rd and final Indian squad moved him within one contest of going out with a state championship as the Tribe booters squashed E.O. Smith, 3-0, yesterday in Arctic-like, sub-freezing conditions at Eastern Connecticut State College's Alumni Field to move into the Class LL finals.

The Silk Towners, 10th ranked in the original 23-team field, will face the Glastonbury-Staples winner either Sunday or Monday at a site and time to be announced.

The Indians cling to a 1-0 lead at the half as Lombardo tallied after 108 seconds of play. He ran onto Jim Gushosky pass, outracing Panther goalie Scott Gillespie for the ball, and poked it right-footed into the net.

Smith, which bows out with a 12-3-4 mark, didn't have many chances in the first half but nearly drew even with five seconds before the break.

Manchester went to its bus for the halftime break, to try to get warm for one, and Danielson warned, "They said they were starting the game all over again. That was the difference. That passing the first five minutes of the second half was beautiful. They owned the ball."

Steelers Respect Chargers

NEW YORK (UPI) — Joe Greene of the Pittsburgh Steelers calls the San Diego Chargers, "the new kid on the block," and by Sunday night, the veteran defensive tackle and a nationwide audience will know if the two teams belong in the same neighborhood.

The proud Steelers, who may be even stronger than last season's championship squad, lead the NFL in an impressive range of categories.

All-America Candidates In College Grid Spotlight

NEW YORK (UPI) — With All-America football selections just around the bend, candidates for the glamour offensive positions get in some of their last licks Saturday in an effort to persuade voters their credentials stand out above all others.

Other running backs seeking to improve their image include George Rogers of South Carolina, who faces the nation's No. 2 rusher with 1,342 yards and a 149.1 average, going against No. 17 Wake Forest.

Indiana Quintet Rated No. 1 Again

NEW YORK (UPI) — Indiana, a school shaken by suspension but eventual winner of the NIT last season under the iron command of Coach Bobby Knight, is rated the nation's No. 1 college basketball team in the pre-season balloting of UPI's Board of College Coaches.

Purdue in the 53-32 NIT. Ohio State, which went 19-12, was as erratic as any team in the country. In some games the Buckeyes looked like a 10th-ranked team.

Notre Dame, 24-6 last year under Coach Dick Phelps, is consistently good. Irish have depth and experience.

Steelers Respect Chargers

NEW YORK (UPI) — Joe Greene of the Pittsburgh Steelers calls the San Diego Chargers, "the new kid on the block," and by Sunday night, the veteran defensive tackle and a nationwide audience will know if the two teams belong in the same neighborhood.

Senate Stymies 'Workfare' Amendment

HARTFORD (UPI) — The Senate Friday defeated a "workfare" amendment which would have required able bodied welfare recipients to be trained for jobs such as insulating homes.

Many senators thought the idea of Sen. George Gunther, R-Stratford, was a good one, but they said it was too comprehensive a proposal to try to rush through in the Legislature's brief session on energy.

Gunther tried to tack the amendment onto a proposal the Senate approved which would require the Office of Policy and Management to keep track of all home heating oil programs for the poor and to make annual reports.

The kicker on his amendment was that if towns and cities didn't set up such a workfare program, they would lose any money that would be granted for energy grants to cities and towns. Municipalities would have to file a winter energy plan with the Office of Policy and Management.

Towns and cities only could spend the grant money to avoid losing wellfare recipients who refused to work would be denied general assistance. "I won't cost the state a penny," he said.

The Senate defeated his amendment 22-12.

They approved a Grasso administration proposal to bond up to $5 million for energy grants to cities and towns. Municipalities would have to file a winter energy plan with the Office of Policy and Management.

Towns and cities only could spend the grant money to avoid losing abandonments or for energy conservation projects. The proposal now goes to the House.

The Senate defeated an amendment by Sen. Richard Cunningham, R-Stamford, to rework the formula so his city would receive more money.

He said Stamford wasn't getting a fair shake under the existing formula.

Opponents said they couldn't juggle figures around to suit one particular city or town without taking some money away from other communities. Another defeated amendment would have set a minimum $100,000 to each municipality.

Among changes that were approved was an amendment introduced by Sen. Andrew Brody, D-Manfield, to restrict eligibility for federally co-insured home improvement and rehabilitation loans to one-to-four family homes.

Mrs. Beck said she wanted to make sure corporations that operate huge apartment complexes didn't receive the loans which are intended to benefit low and moderate income tenants.

The distribution formula takes into account population, the number of elderly who receive tax breaks, the proportion of welfare recipients and the community's tax base.

An estimate of the size of the grants that would be made shows Hartford receiving $583,883; Springfield, $457,683; New Haven, $403,970; Waterbury, $295,885; West Haven, $191,296; Meriden, $128,045; West Haven, $118,932; Bristol, $112,588, and Norwich, $102,615.

Ella Gets Bill On Condo Boom

HARTFORD (UPI) — The House Friday approved and sent Gov. Ella Grasso a bill intended to put the brakes on the condominium conversion boom in Connecticut. An aide to the governor said she was expected to sign it.

House lawmakers also rejected a suggestion they dig into their own pockets and forfeit a newly increased mileage allowance and free medical insurance, and transfer those funds into energy conservation assistance funds.

The lower chamber also passed and sent the Senate several measures concerning bonding and appropriations for energy assistance programs.

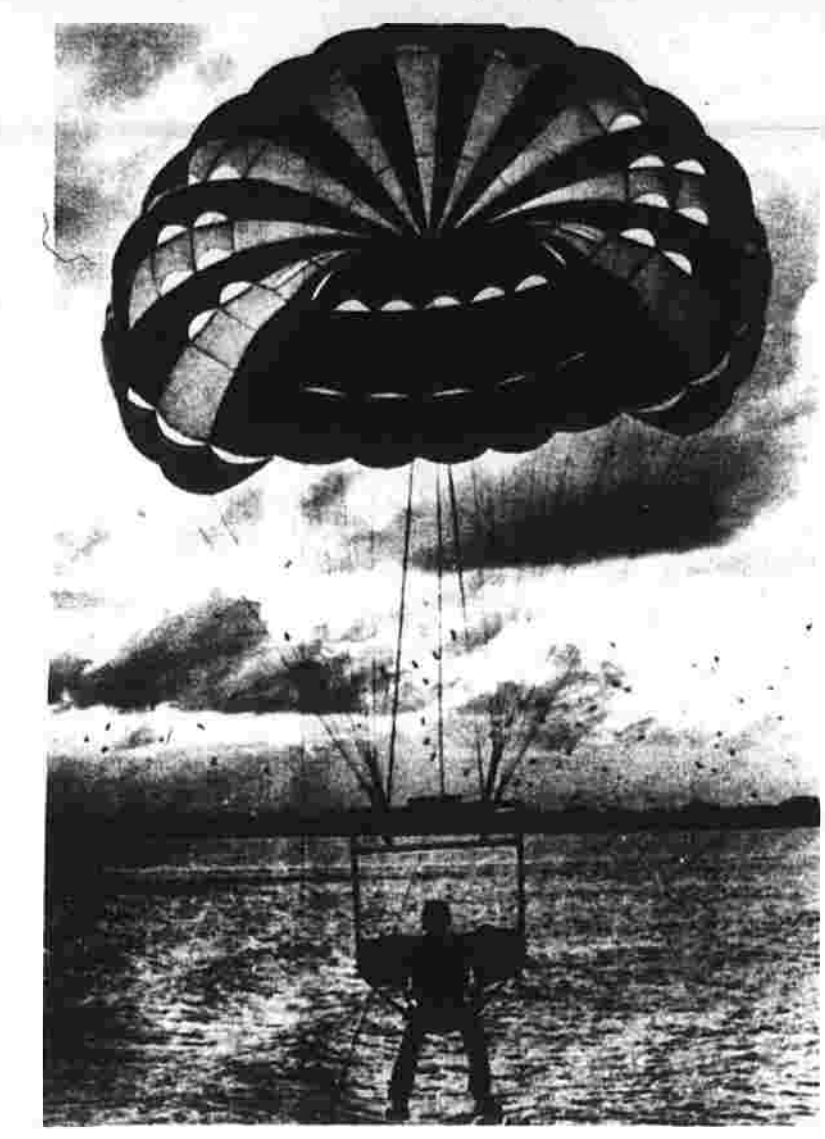

The condominium proposal, passed on a 64-40 vote, requires all apartments converted to condominiums to have their own separate heating systems for each unit. The requirement will expire April 1, 1980.

The debate over the bill, passed Thursday by the Senate, turned into a discussion of the housing shortage and displacement problems plaguing urban and suburban areas, with condominium conversion listed as a major villain.

Rep. Joseph Farriselli, D-Branchford, the measure's major backer, admitted his main goal was for a temporary moratorium on the "alarming rate" in which apartments have been converted into condominiums.

Rep. A. Boyd Hinds, D-Hartford, called the bill an "absolute necessity" and said the vast rate of conversions was "deeply related" to recent housing and energy crises.

But several legislators opposed using the separate heating unit bill as a tactic to tackle the conversion issue. The bill was Rep. Dorothy Goodwin, D-Manchester, who said legislators were going about the sub-

Bay State's Primary OK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Massachusetts Democrats Friday won permission from national party officials to hold a presidential primary March 4, which will make it second in the nation and a likely boner to Sen. Edward Kennedy.

The unanimous vote by the Democratic National Committee's Compliance Review Commission means Massachusetts will hold a primary just one week after New Hampshire's season debut.

Massachusetts Democrats had refused to postpone the contest to comply with national party rules, which specify that states with a few exemptions are eligible for their Democratic national convention delegates between March 11 and June 11.

Peter Kelly, compliance commission chairman and a President Carter's earliest supporters in 1976, said Massachusetts had refused to go along with the national rules because of "the Kennedy myth."

An early Massachusetts primary is expected to help Kennedy's presidential prospects because he probably will do well in his home state against Carter, and he could gain momentum from such a victory.

Panel member Joseph Crangle, a Buffalo, N.Y., political leader and big Kennedy backer, strongly advocated allowing Massachusetts to hold the March 4 primary.

Kelly said the decision was made because it was "not our purpose to bring the earliest prospects of Massachusetts into the national primary."

Massachusetts Democrats had argued they deserved an exemption because other states had gotten such dispensation already. They cited New Hampshire, which holds its first primary Feb. 26, and Iowa and Minnesota, which have delegate selection caucuses in January and February, respectively.

Later in the meeting, Maine was given an exemption to hold caucuses Feb. 10, since candidates for local offices will be selected at the same time. Maine officials said if they did not get an exemption, they would be forced to hold two caucuses, an impractical situation in a rural state.

Massachusetts had been a problem because its legislature controlled by Democrats had refused to change the primary date and essentially challenged national party officials to force them to do so.

The commission's decision averts a bitter fight between the Massachusetts party that would have gone to court. Another fight over how to run Wisconsin's primary already is before the courts with the key issue being members of one political party being allowed to vote in another's primary.

If the commission had refused to approve the Massachusetts primary date, the national committee might have been forced to set up its own caucus system in the state to pick convention delegates - something that never has been done.

maintaining the same level of ownership. By doing that, we're going to extend ourselves financially," he said.

Northeast Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Lelan F. Sillin Jr. wrote Public Utilities Control Authority Chairman John Downey on Nov. 2, telling him the utility would move up the completion date.

"It is essential for NU to have such support if we are to retain 65 percent ownership in the unit and advance its in service date," Sillin said.

"I do want to underscore that our decision with respect to the future of Millstone II will have a major effect on Connecticut's future electrical energy supply and costs," his letter said.

"Yet we cannot make the right decision unless we have the concurrence of the authority and are able to assure the financial community of your endorsement, in the absence of our ability to provide such assurance, NU will not be able to accelerate the unit or retain its present level of ownership," he said.

Sillin asked for a meeting with PUCA to discuss the plan.

"The plan should be built after a clear reflection now for the company and a reassessment of its cost," State Consumer Counsel Barry Zitzer said, adding it would be "impossible" for the plan to be completed by 1984.

He said cost estimates had gone up 500 percent since initial estimates in 1971 ($400 million) expecting a 1978 completion. Zitzer said it was conceivable the cost would double in the next six years.

"Can we afford to put that much money into a plant that may never be allowed to operate?" he said.

"It is a clear display of desperation designed to get the plant in as soon as possible, regardless of whether or not we're going to then have to make substantial improvements and have wasted substantial money in assurance, that the authority understands our situation. We're not asking for a rate increase or anything like that," Doughty said.

"We need a clear signal, an assurance, that the authority understands our situation. We're not asking for a rate increase or anything like that," Doughty said.

But Doughty said based on the report, "there wouldn't be any reason at all not to complete Millstone II. We don't foresee any potential for not being able to continue operating the plants that we have and the new one."

Panel Allows Maine Caucus

WASHINGTON (UPI) — National Democratic officials Friday agreed to allow Maine to hold its caucuses to pick national convention delegates Feb. 10, even though that is before the time set aside for the selections.

The Democratic National Committee's Compliance Review Commission unanimously agreed to exempt Maine from the requirement that the delegate selection be held before the time set aside for the selections.

State party officials argued the February date was required because the caucus would delegates are picked are also used to nominate party candidates for Tompkins offices.

They contended, and the commission agreed, that to postpone the delegate selection caucuses would force the party to hold two such meetings, which was impractical in a rural state like Maine.

Maine Democratic Chairman Harold C. Pachios "we have a great deal of difficulty with one set of caucuses. A second set would be impractical. We just don't do it."

Pachios said that the only way for the process to function in Maine was for the state to be "out of compliance" with the national guidelines. He said it was vital to Maine Democrats that they be allowed to pick both convention delegates and Town Meeting candidates at the same caucuses.

Pachios, in a letter to the commission asking for the exemption, said Maine Democrats were put in an impossible situation by the rule requiring the delegate selection to be done between March 11 and June 11.

Bruce Chandler, general counsel for the Maine Democratic party, said "up until recently we were pretty sure we weren't going to get it (the exemption)."

But earlier Friday, the commission allowed a similar exemption for Massachusetts in a more controversial case and that removed any doubt Maine would also get a waiver.

New Concept

A totally new concept in parasailing has been devised by Mark McCulloch, a Miami, Fla., sportsman who claims the high flying sport is now safe for anyone. Using a special hydrolic launch technique the parachute and person can be launched from the back of the tow boat. Mr. John Nettlow prepares to enter the sky nestled in the protected rig. (UPI photo)

Fotomat, Konica Join Forces

MERIDEN (UPI) — Fotomat Corp. and a major Japanese camera maker have selected a Meriden industrial park as the site of a $60 million photographic paper manufacturing plant, state officials said Friday.

State economic development officials said the 320,000-square foot plant to be constructed off Interstate 91 ranked among the largest manufacturing facilities built in Connecticut in the past 25 years.

The plant will be built in a joint venture by Wilton-based Fotomat and Konishiroku Photo Industry, a Tokyo photographic firm best known for its Konica cameras.

The plant will take up 55 acres of the 800-acre Med-Way Industrial Park.

Economic development officials said they believed the industrial facility was the largest planned in Connecticut since a Pratt & Whitney Aircraft plant was built in the 1950s.

Initial plans called for hiring 300 skilled workers, officials said.

Economic Development Commissioner Edward Stockton said the project was "a further benchmark in the state's efforts to attract new manufacturing investment from Japan," noting two other Japanese firms have located major plants in Connecticut since 1976.

Fotomat, which originally located in Stamford after moving to Connecticut from California in 1976, operates a regional processing plant in East Hartford and 3,100 retail stores nationwide.

Konishiroku, which does $250 million in business annually, invested $12 million in Fotomat in August. The two firms will manufacture photographic paper for nationwide distribution from the Meriden facility. Stockton said the firms will be eligible for state industrial incentives under the 1978 Urban Jobs and Development Act, including local property tax abatements, reduced state corporation taxes and job training and development grants.

Gov. Ella Grasso praised the Economic Development Department's efforts in bringing the firm to the state, saying the agency mounted "the most comprehensive business recruitment campaign in its history" to lure the firms which had studied several other possible locations.

CLIP AND MAIL TO: PRIZEWEEK PUZZLE
C/O THE EVENING HERALD
1 HERALD SQ., MANCHESTER, CT.

- #### CONTEST RULES
- Solve the puzzle by filling in the missing letters to make the words that you think best fit the clues. To do this read each clue carefully for you must think them out and give every word its true meaning.
 - You need not be a subscriber to this newspaper to enter. You may submit as many entries as you wish. No mechanically produced (printed, mimeographed, etc.) copies of the entry blank will be accepted.
 - Anyone is eligible to enter except employees (and members of their families) of the Evening Herald.
 - ALL ENTRIES MUST BE MAILED IN SEPARATE ENVELOPES NO LATER THAN MONDAY OF NEXT WEEK, AND BEAR A POSTMARK.
 - The Herald will award the cash amount shown above to the contestant who sends in an all-correct solution. If more than one all-correct solution is received, the prize money will be shared equally.
 - IF NO ALL-CORRECT SOLUTION IS RECEIVED, $25 WILL BE ADDED TO THE FOLLOWING WEEK'S PRIZE.
 - The decision of the judges is final and all contestants agree to abide by the judges decision. All entries become the property of this paper. Only one prize will be awarded to a family unit.
 - Everyone has the same opportunity to win, for every entry will be checked, and the winner announced. No claiming is necessary.
 - The correct solution to this week's Prizeword will be published the following Saturday.
 - The Herald reserves the right to correct any typographical errors which may appear during the puzzle game.
 - The sealed correct solution will be kept in the personal custody of Nats Agostinelli, President Manchester State Bank.

Just like in handling pop — give a fair shake and someone (or something) is going to blow a cork.

People who get a boot out of their work should be more careful not to alienate the boss.
