How do you move a three-ton rhinoceros? The answer is: Very carefully. This southern white rhino is in the process of being loaded into a crate for a trip from the San Diego Wild Animal Park to the Kwangchow Zoo in Canton, People's Republic of China.

Auto Thieves Deal in Parts

HARTFORD (UPI) — Today's car thieves, unlike teen-age joyriders who "borrow" a car and then dump it, can dismantle a stolen vehicle in less than an hour and sell the parts for at least twice what the car was worth whole.

Khomeini Raps Carter, Blames U.S. for Crisis

TABRIZ, Iran (UPI) — In his most personal attack yet on President Carter, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini today called him a traitor and urged Americans not to vote for him. He also blamed the United States for fomenting a major crisis in northwest Iran.

Carter sent Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti to present Washington's case. The army, expressing neutrality in the conflict, took over parts of the radio and television complex — the focal point of the city's running battles — and Iran's religious leadership was sending a special commission to the northwest city to try and end the disturbances.

Carter Is Optimistic

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter says the United States will prevail in its troubles with Iran because America is right and united.

"I have no doubt we in America will prevail because we are right, because we are strong, because we are united."

Hunger Problem Worse

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Presidential Commission on World Hunger said today the shortage of food may become a more serious problem than the shortage of energy within the next 20 years.

Editorial Downtown Vitality

A movement to try and save House and Hale in downtown Manchester makes sense. Communities often have ignored their central business districts as lifestyles have changed. But today downtown business is more important than ever before. Energy is at a premium and is expensive. Shoppers are realizing buying close to home has its advantages. In terms of time and money downtown shopping districts and community shopping centers within the town boundaries offer a number of advantages. In the past decade a commitment has been to help industry enter and continue in Manchester. Now we are approaching a decade and with that decade we hope will come a similar commitment to commercial business. Statistics show a dollar spent in town changes hands at least seven times before moving on. That means a dollar spent in Manchester is the equivalent of seven dollars as it passes through many hands and affects the community economy. Manchester is fortunate it was never trapped in the demolition mentality of urban renewal. Too many medium sized American communities tore down their central business district during the urban renewal epidemic. The result has been central business districts looking like they have been used for target practice for Air Force bombers. We hope inducements can be offered to try and keep a viable retail base in the downtown. An approach similar to industrial developments efforts could help turn the decay of central business districts around. The loss of a department store downtown isn't a healthy sign. But a quick commitment by the individuals and committees involved in the rehabilitation of the downtown is an important priority. It appears doubtful that House and Hale will be saved at this time, yet every possible effort should be made to seek out business for downtown. Either through contact with House and Hale or by seeking to attract a new retail tenant for the downtown site some success is possible. We hope such an effort has started and will continue.

Pot Crops: A New Source of Revenue

GARBERVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — An illegal but profitable cash crop, marijuana, has brought a new source of revenue to California's north coast. The growth of pot, particularly the expensive, potent and coveted sinsemilla variety, takes place in an area of coastal counties long noted for poverty and high unemployment. Specifics are hard to find. Effects on the local economy are subtle. Residents seldom talk to strangers about it. "You won't get any facts, there aren't any," said one resident. There's no doubt marijuana is grown in the hills of Humboldt, Medocino, and Del Norte counties. This summer and fall, sheriff's deputies and an army of state and federal agents confiscated hundreds of plants, but made few arrests.

The amount grown is small when compared to the marijuana on the market. "It doesn't scratch the smoking itch of L.A. in 24 hours," said Ted Kogan, who has lived in the Garberville area for about 9 years. Kogan operated a natural foods store until earlier this year and is a sort of bridge between many counter-culture folks and the so-called straight community. He estimates that the average grower in Humboldt County makes between $5,000 and $10,000 a year from sales of pot, although a few bigtime farmers may make more. There is talk of Mercedes and BMW's on the main street of Garberville. But beat up pickup trucks and dented Volkswagens are far more prevalent. Money from the rugged area's hill people, growers or not, was seen to flow into one store in particular — the Open Circle Trading Co. A glance at the merchandise indicates the interest of the customers — axes, wooden stoves, woolen shirts, stereo tape decks, sandals — and irrigation systems, water pumps, fencing, wheelbarrows and chicken manure. The latter equipment is important for pot growers. Manure is the best fertilizer, the pipe and pumps are for irrigation. Wheelbarrows are used to move the plants. Also on the shelves are expensive and delicate scales that measure in ounces and grams, the way marijuana is marketed.

Not everyone who buys chicken manure or a wheelbarrow is a marijuana grower, of course, but growers do represent an important segment of the market. The proprietor, Bruce Tucker, like many others interviewed, downplays the importance of marijuana on the local economy. "There's a lot of really heavy people that come into the area. That's the part that I object to," he said. Legislators are faced with having a sizeable portion of their constituency breaking the law. "Many of them are beyond government's ability to do anything about them," said Assemblyman Doug Bosco. "It isn't a conventional problem we're up against."

The Herald in Washington

By Lee Roderick
TEHRAN — When Rep. George Hansen (R-Idaho) and I arrived in Iran, the leading figure in government — next to Ayatollah Khomeini himself — was Abol-Hasan Bani Sadr. This small-boned man, whose thick mustache and horn-rimmed glasses gave him the look of a young Groucho

Marx, was personally close to Khomeini. Though Bani Sadr understands little English, his fluent French had served him well in getting close to the Imam while the latter was exiled in Paris. But the red tape we thought we had left behind in Washington began to entangle us when we sought an audience with Bani Sadr. The new government in Iran, to put it mildly, is not well organized. This has presented immense headaches for President Carter and other U.S. policy makers, who can never be certain who is really speaking for Iran. When a meeting with Bani Sadr continued to elude us, Hansen, in his customary way, took things into his own hands. Following a press conference with correspondents from 26 countries, held in the Inter-Continental Hotel, the 6-foot-6 congressman approached diminutive Bani Sadr while the cameras and tape recorders were still whirring. "I would like to meet with you today," said the towering Hansen. "I don't represent the American government but I do represent the American people. And I have some proposals I want to give you that might help ease the problems between our two countries."

Faced by such determination — not to speak of the world's press looking on — Bani Sadr was trapped. "I am in my opinion, it was that he stated if you were going to teach the mass execution of the Jews you might as well go all the way and teach the execution of all the people in the history of this planet. After all, there is a separation of the church and state or is it a separation of the state and the Roman Catholic church. Sincerely yours, Rosario T. Sapientza 39 Maple St., Manchester

Holocaust Response

To the editor: I'm shocked and dismayed by the narrow minded stand taken by some of our town residents and politicians on the statement by Frank Lupien, at a recent Board of Directors meeting. In reading the editorial and letters to the editor, all Mr. Lupien said was to teach the whole story from both sides so everyone could have a better understanding of what happened and why. I myself have read and heard a lot about the Holocaust. There are millions of Polish, Russian, Czechs, Italian, and Chinese, just to mention a few who were also killed. One question no one seems to answer is why the Holocaust happened. If everybody had access to all the information on the subject, this would help to assure that the Holocaust would not happen again. Our town is fortunate to have a citizen like Mr. Lupien, who takes in to account all aspects of a situation. The broader outlook the less chance of an error. It seems to me our town could use a lot more of it. Robert C. Stankowski Bush Hill Road, Manchester, Connecticut

Subject Suitable

To the editor: I have been disappointed and dismayed to read of the controversy surrounding the suggested study of Holocaust in our school system(s). The admittedly very large numbers of people who were killed will remain on the conscience of mankind for a long time. Millions of people were killed for no reason other than for they were Jewish. Whether it was two million or six

Lupien Supported

To the editor: For the past two weeks the papers have been running stories about the Holocaust matter. To introduce the subject of large scale deaths of any one nationality, race or ethnic group without an equal in depth treatment of the many other such disasters in recent history is totally out of order in the elementary and secondary schools of the country. I may run the risk of getting the wrath and aneurys that are being directed at Mr. Lupien. But, I am sure that he had the best interest of Manchester school children in his mind when he made his comments recently. There is not a more sincere, honest citizen who has been working for the average hard working taxpayer of

Odyssey To Iran

Now he found himself with a substantial portfolio in the new revolutionary government — including the positions of Finance Minister and Acting Foreign Minister. He also had the reputation of being the strong man on the 15-member Revolutionary Council. He would have to be reckoned with if we were to succeed in softening Iran's refusal to release the American hostages until and unless the U.S. returned the shah to that country. But the red tape we thought we had left behind in Washington began to entangle us when we sought an audience with Bani Sadr. The new government in Iran, to put it mildly, is not well organized. This has presented immense headaches for President Carter and other U.S. policy makers, who can never be certain who is really speaking for Iran. Kissinger's Rockefeller Ties May Have Allied Him With Shah

By Jack Anderson
WASHINGTON — A close examination of the Iranian Horror casts Henry Kissinger, the foreign policy virtuoso, in a murky light. It appears to be caught in a colossal conflict of interest which could dwarf and undermine his more notable achievements. We have established from a three-year investigation that Kissinger could have prevented the ruinous rise in oil prices. He held back to accommodate the shah of Iran — an incredible favor worth untold billions to the shah. But it turns out there was another beneficiary: the Rockefeller family. There is evidence that the Rockefellers actually helped the shah regain the throne after he had been prematurely ousted by Mohammed Mossadegh in the early 1950s. The grateful shah rewarded the Rockefellers with special oil, banking and real estate deals. Kissinger has had a long, close relationship with the Rockefeller family as retainer, beneficiary, counselor and now peer. In 1973, Nelson Rockefeller said of Kissinger: "He never let me down, and he's never let the country down." It is against this background that the cataclysmic events in Iran should be viewed. The shah left the throne that inflated the oil region in 1973. To feed his ravenous appetite for ar-

Fund Assists Fuel Bank

COVENTRY — Since 1976 Coventry's Christmas Wish Fund has raised money for special projects, including the FISH Program, the Soccer Association, and the buying of a projector for the new senior citizen community room.

This year it is hoped the fund will bring warmth into the homes of neighbors through the Coventry Clergy Fuel Bank. The "bank" which was organized by the town's clergy, is available to any resident who is having difficulty paying for fuel needs and who meets the income guidelines.

Doll House Display Slated for Museum

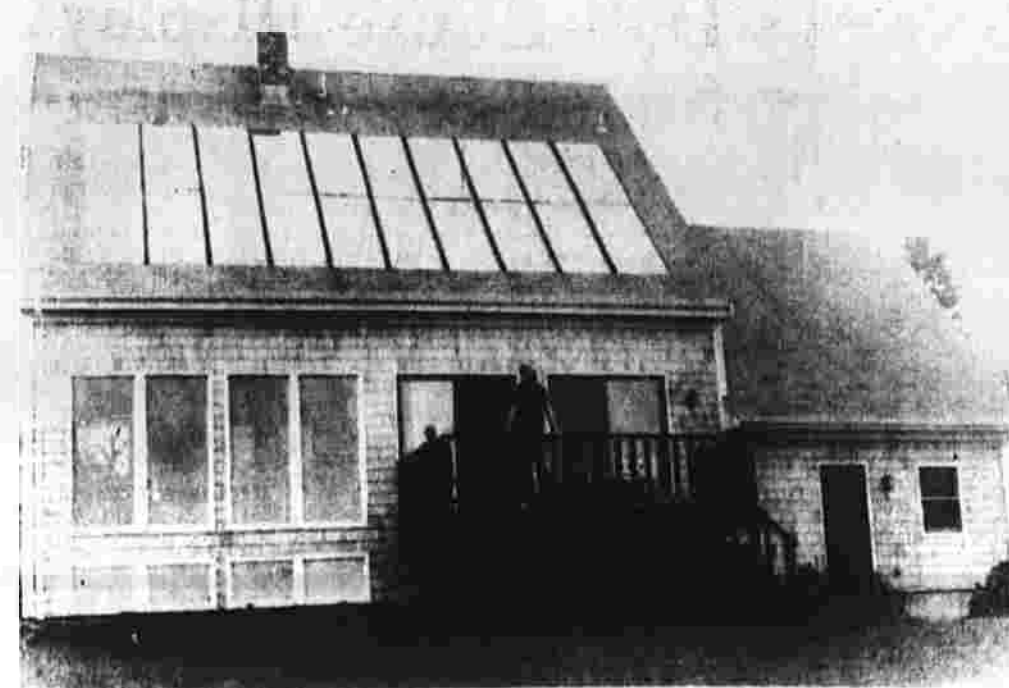

MANCHESTER — The fall housecleaning chores have been completed in the dollhouse at the Lutz Junior Museum. The dollhouse is a much-used feature in the "Doing Room" at the museum located at 128 Cedar St.

The four participant rooms have been redecorated by Nadine DeLawrence, who worked this summer as an exhibition designer. Other staff members and volunteers designed the display rooms.

The four-sided stylorama, or showcase, which contains the dollhouse was built this year by Clinton Hendrickson and Arthur Joyce, trustees of the museum. Funds for the project were a gift from the Lydall Corporation of Manchester.

Robert Mastin, standing on the back deck of his Cape Cod-style house looks like any other, but in the back there's a bank of thermopane windows to catch the sun's rays. (UPI photo)

To Avoid Big Fuel Bill, Just Don't Use Any Oil

MIDDLETOWN, R.I. (UPI) — Robert and Elizabeth Mastin found the very best way to avoid paying the high cost of heating fuel is simply to not use any.

Even as the New England weather turns blustery and bone-chilling, they live in spring-like comfort — with no furnace, no baseboards, and no wood-burning stove.

In front, their new Cape Cod-style home looks like any conventional house. But from the back, a three-level bank of Thermopane windows faces south to collect the sun's rays. That's the first hint that something is different.

Last winter, Mastin built the house, using San Francisco architect Lee Porter Butler's design principle that relies on conserving natural energy.

quilted finished. Mastin says the interior temperature remained at 57 degrees even when it dropped to 10 below outside. This winter he expects the interior temperature to remain at least 58 degrees.

The massive solarium, warm even on the chilliest winter days when the sun shines, is the most popular room in the house because of its bright, open atmosphere and view down a gently rolling field to the Atlantic Ocean a mile away.

White Mastin's house has two fireplaces, he says both are primarily for decorative use and don't affect the energy equilibrium.

There is nothing new in the individual principles involved in the energy system, but Mastin credits Butler with "their total integration into an effective and workable design."

The cost of the house — about $80,000 — is the same as for any new, custom-built conventional structure of the same size, Mastin says.

The $3,000 to $4,000 savings by skipping a regular heating system more than makes up for the extra cost of windows and insulation.

Donations to MACC Way Behind Goals

MANCHESTER—If donations to the Manchester Area Conference of Churches fund drive continue at their present pace, low income elderly and families in town will have a barebones Christmas.

Nancy Carr, executive director of the charitable group, said, "Every year I begin to hold my breath that the donations will come in. But this year, the donations are coming in slower than ever before."

The goal for the Seasonal Sharing Appeal is $5,000. Only $1,288 has been raised. "We're obviously pretty far behind in our goal," Mrs. Carr said today.

The money is used for clothing and shoes, hot Christmas meals for shut-ins, and meat for Christmas food baskets.

"Individual gifts of ham or turkey are particularly needed to supplement our baskets. We have committed ourselves to 100 baskets. We

Directors To Consider 12 Board Appointments

MANCHESTER—Appointments to 12 town committees will be considered at the Board of Directors meeting Tuesday night.

The appointments were tabled last week after the Democrats failed to renominate Carl Chudburn to the other nominees, Republicans Frank McAvanagh could have given. McAvanagh was ill during the last meeting.

McAvanagh, however, has expressed opposition to Chudburn's appointment, and also that of Assistant Town Attorney, Kevin O'Brien to town attorney.

Mayor Stephen Penny has warned if Chudburn were not reappointed, the other nominees, Republicans Frank Livingston and Wanda Franek may not receive the support of the Democrats.

The board will also consider the appointment of two members to the Regional Forum of the Capitol Region Council of Governments. The appointment of Frank Lupien to the forum caused a heated public hearing at last week's meeting. Lupien's comments at the November board meeting were interpreted by many to be anti-Semitic.

Number 43 contracts for an organizational study of the Town Human Service Agencies.

New suits at the meeting included approval of the revised affirmative action plan, a request for relocating Burnham Street, and consideration of a real estate tax deferment program for retired and disabled citizens.

Job Wages May Violate Vote on CD

MANCHESTER—Since the April referendum, the town has been using federal Community Development funds to pay Marilyn Walsh, the former town housing specialist.

Penny said that the town could not leave the HUD program, effective July 1. Republican Town Director Carl Zinsner said last Friday that wage payments may be violating that ordinance.

Ms. Walsh has been receiving about $12 an hour for part-time work. She is closing out the files, and expects to finish soon. Town officials weren't able to disclose how much Ms. Walsh has received in HUD money.

Mayor Stephen Penny and Deputy Mayor Stephen Cassano have defended using the fund for wages.

Penny said that the town could use unspent HUD money from last year's program. The town has about $119,000 in HUD funds that wasn't spent by June.

Cassano noted that when Bakersfield, Calif., left the HUD program, it was allowed to spend leftover funds on administration after its legal withdrawal date.

In that game, won by the Black Knights, 6-3, DeAngelis made 9 solo tackles and 16 assisted stops to bring his season total to a phenomenal 73 solo efforts and 107 1/2 assisted stops.

DeAngelis was the best linebaker I ever had in my 35 years of coaching," praised veteran Penney Coach Ted Kruek.

American Gymnasts Gain World Status

FORT WORTH, Texas (UPI)—The World Gymnastics Championships concluded Sunday with the American men proving their world power status, the Romanian women gymnasts they can win without Nadia Comaneci and the Soviet Union's Nellie Kim suggesting a change be made in her sport.

In seven months the world's gymnastics community will gather again in Moscow for the Olympics to determine if the Americans can still threaten the Soviets and whether the girls can dethrone the likes of Comaneci and Kim, at least one of whom feels there should be an age limit for women.

Kurt Thomas and Bart Conner personally put the United States on the gymnastic map Sunday with their surprising showing — three first places and six medals overall in the six apparatus finals that wound up the men's competition.

"For so long our flag has been down in a box somewhere," added Conner, winner of a gold and bronze medal Sunday. "They are going to be watching films of God knows I've watched a lot of films of Russians."

The United States won eight medals in these championships. Last year the Americans won just one and that was considered a major accomplishment. The Soviet Union men walked away

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Last year you printed a letter from a young lady who was discouraged about the attitude of family and friends about Christmas. She said all they thought about was presents and big dinners, so she considered taking a room in a hotel for the day, but it was too costly. It was a very fine column. Please print it again.

V.L.H. IN ATLANTA

DEAR V: Here it is: DEAR ABBY: I'm having a hard time deciding what to do for Christmas. I live about 40 miles from my parents' home, but I don't want to go home for Christmas because it is a depressing time for me. My parents go to church regularly, but they don't act like good Christians. All Christmas means is there is a pretty tree, lots of presents and good food. But it means so much more to me. When you do something for someone else, it's impossible to feel depressed. Try it. It really works. They write to me and tell me what kind of Christmas you had. I care.

YOUNG AND UNHAPPY

DEAR YOUNG: Get in touch with a nursing home, a veteran's hospital or a children's institution, and offer to visit those who have no one to visit them. You don't need to bring presents. Just bring a cheerful attitude, a happy face and a willingness to listen and chat awhile. Offer to write letters, read, make a photo call or run an errand.

DEAR ABBY: I've read letters in your column year after year from parents who are "lousy" because Grandma sends their children money for Christmas for Hanukkah instead of a gift. I agree that a check regardless of size means very little to a child, so this is how we handle it in our family. Some time before the holiday, Grandma is very grateful. Grandma sends a check to the child's mother. Mother then receives a gift that is wanted and needed, and encloses a card "From Grandma."

DEAR ABBY: This arrangement works well because:

- Grandma is not physically able to shop.
- Grandma still lives far away and may not know what the child needs. And she probably doesn't know what size to buy.
- Sometimes it costs more to ship packages than the contents are worth.
- When Grandma sends money instead:
- Grandma is happy because she knows that the child has received a gift that is wanted and needed.
- Mother is happy for the same reason.
- The child is never disappointed with Grandma's gift.

HAPPY GRANDMA IN N.Y. STATE

DEAR ABBY: As the Christmas season nears, please allow me to mention one of the best presents I have ever received. I'm in the Army, stationed in Korea. For Christmas last year, my mother presented me a parcel of goodies every month! It doesn't take much time or money, and it's greatly appreciated all through the year. I'd recommend that as a really terrific Christmas gift to any GI (or student) away from home.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

Win at bridge

Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Bidding proper contracts

newly correct as is the spade response and the two-club trump rebid. North's raise to three notrump is also correct. He sees North's king-queen of diamonds are golden cards.

Oswald: "When this hand was played in a Master Pairs event only a few South players got to this nice contract. Invariably a heart was opened. South took his king, cashed the ace-king of clubs and dummy's high diamonds and queen of clubs. This became back to his hand with the ace of spades and ran the rest of the diamonds to make five odd."

Alan: "There were two reasons why only a few Souths got to play the notrump game. Some opened hearts led by East. A bid of hearts led by East rebid three clubs after South's diamond opening and two notrump rebid. South would then bid three spades and North would go in four instead of bidding three notrump."

Oswald: "We are going to devote this week's articles to hands that presented little or no problem in play, but did present real problems in bidding."

Alan: "The bidding shown in the box is simple and appropriate of little interest. South's one-diamond opening is entirely correct."
