Sewing classes aren't just for girls as Brian Shaw, a student at the Vernon Center Middle School proves. Brian is shown modeling a snappy plaid vest he made. The home economics classes of De Toczevski put on a fashion show Wednesday to model the projects they made during the past semester. Vests proved to be the most popular item. One-year-old Bobby Paradis was the youngest model at the fashion show presented by home economics students at the Vernon Center Middle School Wednesday. The fact that he's just getting his "sea legs" didn't phase Bobby as he stepped up on the ramp to model his new blue overalls. Assisting him is Carla Armstrong, 12, who made the overalls for the show and as her project for the semester. Who made Carla's outfit? Her sister. (Herald photo by Richmond)

Tenants Ask Rent Panel

VERNON — Another group of apartment tenants has joined forces with several others to ask town officials to establish a Fair Rent Commission. The group made the proposal to the Town Council's Rehabilitation Committee. Most of the tenants involved in the requests rent apartments owned by J&D Real Estate of Manchester. Tenants claim they have continuing maintenance problems despite the fact their rents have escalated over the past two years. Tenants expressed the hope that a Fair Rent Commission could bring landlords and tenants together to talk about mutual problems. They feel while the commission wouldn't control rents or establish ceilings, it could be given the power to determine if a rent is too high. Landlords claim they are having economic troubles because the rise in rents hasn't kept up with the rising costs of utilities and such, faced by them. Robert Hurd, chairman of the Rehabilitation Committee, feels that establishment of the Fair Rent Commission could mean just another layer of government authority trying to tell someone how to run his life. The three-member rehab committee will study the matter and eventually make a recommendation to the Town Council. The dispute between tenants and landlords has been going on since last summer when J&D allegedly imposed oil surcharges for tenants of five apartment complexes. At that time, some 250 tenants signed a petition which was presented to the Town Council, asking for the establishment of the fair rent group. ## Reagan To Join Debates But Carter Remains Aloof

United Press International Ronald Reagan has been persuaded to join in debates with the other Republican presidential contenders and perhaps in one-on-one confrontations with some of them, but President Carter remains aloof from similar Democratic encounters. Gerald Carman of Reagan's Manchester, N.H., headquarters told reporters Thursday: "I can say definitely we will meet them all." He said the former California governor would accept at least one invitation "such as that of the League of Women Voters" to engage in a GOP debate for Feb. 20, six days in advance of the primary voting, and also would like to meet former U.N. Ambassador George Bush and Senate Republican leader Howard Baker in separate confrontations. Reagan's press secretary Jim Lake, however, said later Reagan only had "not ruled out" one-on-one debates but was not proposing them. The South Carolina educational TV network, meanwhile, said Thursday National Public Radio and Television would carry a debate in that state between Reagan, Bush, Baker and former Texas Gov. John Connally on Feb. 28. Bush, whose upset victory over Reagan in Iowa may have figured in the Californian's change of mind about debating, already has accepted the league's invitation in New Hampshire and has urged Reagan to join it, but there was no confirmation that he had accepted the South Carolina invitation. On the Democratic side, Sen. Edward Kennedy expressed trying to needie Carter into what he now calls a "joint appearance." Both men are scheduled to address a conference of the Consumer Federation of America Feb. 7, and Kennedy earlier in the week proposed that they appear jointly instead of separately and discuss only "non-political, non-partisan" issues such as those contained in a taxpayer-financed pamphlet prepared in the White House entitled "The Record of President Carter's Administration." So Kennedy fired off a second letter to the White House, saying he still hopes a joint appearance can be arranged and offering to discuss only "non-political, non-partisan" issues such as those contained in a taxpayer-financed pamphlet prepared in the White House entitled "The Record of President Carter's Administration." ## EPA Will Send Check

SOUTH WINDSOR — The Town of South Windsor has been notified by the U. S. Environmental Protection Agency that it will soon receive a check for $2,345,700 in payment for water pollution control construction carried out from July 1978 through June 1979. On Sept. 30, 1977, the EPA awarded the town water pollution control construction grants totalling $3,451,649. The $2.3 million is the town's first partial grant payment. Actual payment is made as portions of the project are completed. The EPA said payments, as made, may be used to reduce any indebtedness the town may have accrued as a result of construction of the wastewater treatment facilities.

Police Pact Approved

COVENTRY — The Town Council has approved a new three-year contract with the police department that provides an average wage increase of 6.5 percent in the first year; 6.2 percent the second year; and leaves the third year open for renegotiating. Included in the contract are the inclusion of police dispatchers and the police personnel. Both are now represented by the same union. Negotiations have been going on for about 10 months and two mediation sessions were held before agreement was reached. The contract is retroactive to this past July 1. The basic benefits of the previous contract remain the same with some minor changes in such sections as official examinations and manager's rights.

Man Hurt in Crash

ENFIELD (UPI) — A Massachusetts man was seriously injured when his car bounced off a guard rail and slammed into the back end of a disabled school bus parked on the shoulder of Interstate 91, police said. Manuel Sperling, 82, of Springfield, Mass., was injured in a stable condition Thursday at the Intensive Care Unit of the Bay State Medical Center in his hometown with multiple head lacerations following the accident. State police said the school bus had broken down while traveling northbound on I-91 and was about to be towed away when Sperling's car rammed into the back end of the unoccupied bus.

Florida Firm Given OK On Cable TV Franchise

HARTFORD (UPI) — A Miami firm has won state approval to buy the cable TV franchise serving New Haven and two surrounding towns but has been told it can't buy any other media outlets serving the three towns. The ruling by the Division of Public Utility Control Thursday extended a ruling made last week which ordered an end to the cross ownership of two cable franchises and the state's largest newspaper by the Times Mirror Co. The DPUC allowed Storer Broadcasting of Miami to purchase the franchise serving New Haven, West Haven and Hamden from Systems Cable TV Inc. for up to $18 million. But a three-member DPUC panel stipulated in its approval that Storer can't purchase controlling interest in any other newspaper, television or radio station within the franchise. That stipulation stemmed from the agency's ruling last week which found cross ownership of cable franchises in Meriden and Hartford and the Hartford

Courant by Los Angeles-based Times Mirror not in the public interest. The DPUC handed down a tentative ruling in the Times Mirror case ordering the firm to divest itself of either the Courant or the cable firms. An appeal is expected when the decision is formally issued later this month. The DPUC had stipulated earlier that Storer only be required to inform it of planned media acquisitions but changed that decision to an outright ban in light of the Times Mirror ruling. Times Mirror, which bought the Courant last year for $105.6 million, also owns the Stamford Advocate and Greenwich Time newspapers in Connecticut.

China, Japan in Boycott

By JANET CAWLEY
Calls by the Chinese and Japanese governments for a boycott of the Moscow Olympics gave an added boost Friday to President Carter's campaign to pressure the Soviets and may help sway some crucial European "fence-sitters," sports sources said. At the same time, sports officials from 11 National Olympic committees met in Frankfurt, West Germany, to debate their position, but adjourned after five hours without making any decision. Italian National Olympic Committee President Franco Carraro said each country's Olympic committee would make its own decision based on the Olympic charter. "Politics cannot decide the participation of the Olympic Games," he said. In Europe, West Germany is considered the key. If it decides not to travel to Moscow, U.S. administration sources believe other Western European nations will follow its lead. A spokesman for the West German NOC said in Frankfurt Friday its president, Willi Daume, met with Soviet Bonn ambassador Vladimir Semjonov but gave no details of their conversation. Daume later said, "The Olympic Games are in danger if the Olympic Games in 1980 cannot take place." President Carter's policy, which has been endorsed by Congress, is that unless Soviet troops are withdrawn from Afghanistan by Feb. 20, the Olympics games should be moved from Moscow, canceled or postponed. The U.S. Olympic committee followed Carter's stand and has put the question to the International Olympic Committee. In Paris, Vitali Smirnov, a Soviet Olympic committee vice chairman, said Friday that Moscow cannot take place. "The Olympic Games are unthinkable" to hold the Olympics without the Americans. It is difficult to draw up a definitive list of what stand each of the 143 nations accredited to the Olympics will take, since in some cases a government has called for a boycott but the country's Olympic committee has not done so — or vice versa. Following are the countries that are flat no go's: Norway, Chile, Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Morocco, China and Egypt. Those countries supporting the U.S. call for a boycott: Canada, Britain, Australia, Papua New Guinea, New Zealand, Japan and Holland. Those countries considered undecided: Switzerland, Austria, Israel, Denmark, Sweden, Taiwan (in this case the dispute centers on details of its IOC membership), the Islamic countries, Thailand, West Germany, Spain, Portugal and the Philippines. Those countries that definitely will attend: Greece, Eastern Europe, Yugoslavia, Belgium, Mexico, France, Cyprus, Finland, Cuba, Iceland, Zambia and Italy. Friday's decisions by the Chinese and Japanese governments could affect the Europeans' thinking. In France, analysts said that since Tokyo, Paris, had been trying to stay out of the growing U.S.-Soviet confrontation, the decision by Japan to firmly join the U.S. camp was sure to increase pressure on France. In Peking, a Foreign Ministry announcement said, "While the Soviet Union continues to occupy Afghanistan... it is clearly inappropriate to hold the 22nd Summer Games in Moscow." The Japanese Cabinet decided to recommend a boycott to the National Olympic Committee and its chairman, Katsuharu Shibata, indicated it would agree by saying the Games must be held "in a peaceful environment." Although neither China nor Japan had many prospective gold medalists, the withdrawal of the world's most populous nation and one of the world's economic leaders, will have a significant political and psychological impact. If Australia and New Zealand also pull out, the Asian representation will be minimal. In backing the U.S. call, China passed up its first chance to appear in the Summer Olympics since Communist rule began. ## Union Negotiations Slated to Continue

MANCHESTER — The second round of contract negotiations for the public works and police unions has been set for second week in February. Town bargainers and representatives of Local 911 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees will meet Feb. 12. On Feb. 13 the Police Union, local 1495, will discuss new terms, contract with Stephen Werber, personnel director. Although contract negotiations are kept secret, by virtue of "ground-breaking" rules agreed upon at the first session last week, Werber said he expected both bargaining sessions to be lengthy. "The town can't afford an increase to keep up with inflation," Werber said. "But I would think that we would be able to settle things without going to arbitration." "It's a matter of what the town can accept, and what the union members feel they can accept." Contracts generally are for two or three year terms. The public works contract expires June 1. The policeman's contract expires June 30. Werber has indicated he intends to try to remain within this year's budget guidelines of six percent increases. However, Robert Fuller, president of Local 911 has said he would like salary increase of 13 percent, which is close to the national inflation rate of 15 percent. "The town can't afford an increase to keep up with inflation," Werber said. "But I realize that that's what everyone wants." Fuller has said that he believes the town will relax the six percent ceilings. Also under negotiation is the town's promotional guidelines which has led to five grievances among public works employees. The employees claim promotions should be given based on seniority, as the contract states. The town has instituted a system based on qualifications. Werber said if the issue is not resolved by the in the town's favor, he might bring the matter to the negotiations. "But I do not want to be in a position where we have to bargain for the system," he said. "It's a tough year to bargain," he said.

Your Neighbors' Views: What should be done about the oil companies profits?

Vital Baulieu, Glastonbury — "It is hard to judge, but maybe the government should have more of a hand in it." Maria Carlino, East Hartford — "Prices are too expensive and the government should get involved." Marilyn Dimmoe, Marlborough — "I think something has to be done to stop passing these costs on to the consumers. We are getting mutilated." Muel Carlson, Manchester — "They should share them with us." Ed Mudrak, Glastonbury — "They should be distributing the profits into looking at solar energy and other forms of energy. These companies are still dedicated to oil." Emil Tobler, Glastonbury — "I think government should put controls on oil and gasoline. I doubt if the government does anything."

Execution Abolishment Supported

HARTFORD — Sen. David Barry, D-Manchester, Friday called for abolishing Connecticut's death penalty and replacing it with life sentences terms, including life sentences without parole. The deputy majority leader of the Senate said he will submit a bill to the Legislature and seek public hearings on the repeal of the state's capital punishment statute. Barry said eliminating paroles for those given life imprisonment for capital offense punishable by death would "actually toughen and strengthen" the present law. "No one has been executed for 20 years," he said. "But they have been given life sentences and then parole." "My bill would keep these people in jail longer, and perhaps avoid a tragic mistake by eliminating the death penalty. This bill would deal with the issue more effectively and in a more civilized manner." Barry said he did not believe the death penalty was a deterrent to violent crime. "There's no statistical evidence to support this," he said. "It's use around the country has been arbitrary and discriminatory. We should codify our reluctance to use the electric chair by substituting life imprisonment before we have a tragic miscarriage of justice in this state," he said. "It's a phony issue being for capital punishment in an election year. Most people want to see someone convicted of a heinous crime kept out of society. This bill does that effectively." In view of the track record of this bill would be a greater penalty." "People argue it may cost more, but it may keep people in prison longer who are detrimental to society." He said the recent imposition "of the spectacle of the death penalty" in other states and a case involving the death of a policeman in Plainville makes debate on the subject timely. Barry referred to the trial of Gerard Castonguay, 35, of Bristol, in the slaying of Plainville police officer Robert Holcomb in November 1977 during a burglary case. A judge ruled at pretrial hearings for Castonguay that part of the state's death penalty law was unconstitutional because it limited a jury from hearing mitigating circumstances in a capital crime. Barry proposed a person convicted of murder be sentenced to life in prison, with a judge empowered to order the defendant to serve a term of not less than 25 years. A life sentence without parole could be imposed for the murder of a policeman or prison guard, murder by contract for pay, murder by a person previously convicted of murder, murder by a kidnapper and other categories of murder now covered by the death penalty. The lawmaker said he also planned to seek determinate sentences for other major crimes "to provide consistency in sentencing and eliminate the effects of indeterminate sentencing and early parole eligibility." The senator plans to submit his bill to the legislature's opening session next week. He has been conferring with New York legislators on the bill. New York proposed a similar law.

Olympic Move To Aid Freedom

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter said Friday he wants the Olympics moved out of Moscow because of freedom — not politics — and he is determined to hold high-quality international games in some location this year. In his fullest discussion yet of the decision to respond to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan by pulling out of the summer games in Moscow, Carter told a national conference on physical fitness. "I want the world and athletes from all around the world to know that I am determined that they will have a chance to participate this year in international games of the highest quality — but, unless invading forces in Afghanistan are withdrawn, in a location other than the Soviet Union." Later Friday, Carter met with Bernard Fell, chairman of the Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee for the winter games which start in New York state this month. Carter said Soviet athletes are welcome at the Olympic winter games at Lake Placid. But he reiterated his position — backed by Congress — that unless Soviet troops are withdrawn from Afghanistan, the summer Olympics games should be moved from Moscow, canceled or postponed. The U.S. Olympic Committee has voted to relay that request to the International Olympic Committee. "The committee stood up for simple freedom, the right that is fundamental to all people and all nations — a right to live in peace," Carter said. "It was not an easy decision for me or Congress or the Olympic Committee," he said in an address to the national conference of the President's Council on Physical Fitness. He said his remarks were "carefully worded." Carter noted many people have said politics should not be allowed to interfere with the Olympics, and said, "I agree completely." But he said the issue now before the country and the world is not a question of politics — noting it does not involve the governmental organization, internal policies, political and economic system or even the human rights — of a nation. "It is not politics when one nation sends 100,000 of its heavily armed troops across a border and subjugates its peace-loving, deeply religious neighbor," the president said. "It is not politics when one nation invades that nation's capital, installs a puppet regime and participates in the assassination or death of a leader it does not like, including the families of those leaders." "It is not politics when an army of invaders sweeps the countryside, killing those who dare to stand in its way." "It is aggression, pure and simple."

Stocks Gain Trading Slow

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks, overcoming profit-taking pressures, rallied for a modest gain late Friday afternoon and closed out the week on the plus side. But trading was the slowest in almost a month. The Dow Jones industrial average, down nearly 5 points at the outset, rebounded to gain 5.63 points to 881.48. It was ahead 5.37 points for the week, despite Thursday's 6.06-point loss. The Dow gained 37.11 points in January. The New York Stock Exchange index jumped 0.47 to 66.08 and the price of a share rose 25 cents. Advances edged declines, 724 to 701, among the 1,860 issues traded at 4 p.m. EST.

Big Bear volume totaled 46,610,000 shares, down sharply from the 65,900,000 traded Thursday. It was the slowest turnover since 44.5 million changed hands Jan. 7. Brokers said investors began to buy late in the day when they saw profit-taking that followed January's rally dissipate. Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter at 4 p.m. totaled 52,793,109 shares, down from the 72,581,100 traded Thursday. At 4 p.m., Rosario Resources was the most active NYSE listed issue, off 1/4 to 7/8 to 7 1/4 in trading that included blocks of $12,000, 297,200 and 100,000 shares, all at 7 1/4. HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Conservative opponents of Rep. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., said Friday the senatorial candidate was a "big spender who promotes big government" and urged people to vote for anyone but Dodd. The congressman, in a telephone interview from Washington, said the Connecticut Conservative Caucus was "negative, with nothing constructive, and users of very cute language." "They're also not very honest about explaining my voting record. They have a selective usage of words that doesn't characterize my record," Dodd said.

The group had slapped the 2nd District congressman's voting record for allegedly contributing to inflation. They also charged Dodd with ignoring "the Soviet Union's threat to peace" by going along with President Carter's "policies of appeasement." Dana J. Andrusik, executive director of the CCC and The You Can't Afford Chris Dodd Committee, told a Capitol news conference Dodd "even votes against specific measures to balance the federal budget." Andrusik and Sen. Richard Cunningham, R-Stamford, a member of the CCC, said Dodd's record was "replete with votes for big government, encouraging high taxes and federal deficits which cause the bulk of our domestic inflation."

While they criticized Dodd for free spending, they also cited him for failure to approve military appropriations for national defense. Dodd said on the one hand he was called down for fiscal irresponsibility and on the other, "I'm accused of not spending enough for national defense." The group's claim Dodd voted "against evacuating Vietnamese refugees" was another example of "careful omission, Dodd said. "They did not mention that the bill also called for using U.S. military personnel in activities in Indochina." He said another charge he voted againstroscignin County, came while firefighters were battling a blaze in his 150-year-old farmhouse. "He called to try to get Willie-to campaign for him," said fireman Duby told President Carter Wednesday night when the nation's chief executive telephoned him to drum up support for Maine's Feb. 10 Democratic caucus. # Walsh To Run for Congress

COVENTRY — State Rep. Robert "Skip" Walsh, D-Coventry, now serving his third term in the Legislature, will seek his party's nomination for U.S. representative from the Second Congressional District. Walsh has scheduled an announcement this afternoon to announce his intentions. Walsh added, "Our leadership in Congress will need to be both positive and progressive. I believe that I can provide just that kind of leadership. Questions of energy, employment, transportation, human services, and of course, taxes, will all need to be addressed," Walsh said.

On the state level Walsh is chairman of the Human Services Committee which oversees matters relating to the elderly, youth, the handicapped, human resources, mental retardation, mental health, and welfare. Previously he served as vice chairman of the General Assembly's Education Committee and in conjunction with that he was chairman of the School Finance Committee in 1975 which produced the original school funding equalization bill. His endeavors in this area paid off to the amount of $60 million last year for local education. He has also served on the Public Health Committee where he was one of the early proponents for less expensive-high quality health services and as the chairman of the Subcommittee on Higher Education. Politically, Walsh, who has lived in Coventry for 20 years, has been involved in just about every rung of the elective ladder. He has been president of the Coventry Young Democrats, chairman of the Coventry Board of Education, campaign director for several area candidates, and currently is a member of the Coventry Democratic Town Committee. He received his bachelor of arts degree from the University of Connecticut and did his graduate studies at Trinity College. Presently he is executive director of the Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Greater Hartford. Formerly he served as director of a work experience program for the Capitol Region, as a social worker for the City of Hartford, and as a program director for the Connecticut Human Rights Commission. He is married to the former Deborah McLoughlin and the couple and their four children live on Nathan Hale Road.

Group Splits Study

MANCHESTER — The Citizens Advisory Committee on the Manchester High School Renovation have elected a chairman and have split their group into four sub-committees to study the various aspects of the proposed renovation in depth. Dr. Daniel Burns has been elected chairman. He had previously served as chairman of the long-range citizens advisory committee.

Dr. Daniel Burns has been elected chairman of the subcommittee in charge of studying the roof renovations. This committee will also study mechanical system renovations, the pool, and energy related matters. William Dion, superintendent of building and grounds, is the administration resource person. Emily MacKenzie has been elected chairwoman of the group studying the industrial arts, home economics, and butter building facets of the renovation. Neil Lawrence, director of vocational education at the high school, is the administration resource person.

Mr. Philip Sussag, former member of the Building and sites committee when he served on the Board of Education, has been elected chairman of the subcommittee on exterior proposals. Parking lots, walkways, and play areas will be part of his subcommittee's responsibility. Peter Boudo, high school vice principal, will be the administration resource person.

Jeannette Wignin has been elected chairwoman of the committee to study internal renovations, and play areas will be part of his subcommittee's responsibility. Peter Boudo, high school vice principal, will be the administration resource person. Both said, however, they personally support James Buckley, who is contending with Senate Minority Leader Richard Bozatto, R-Watertown, for the Republican senatorial nomination. Andrusik showed a taped political message he said the CCC plans to broadcast accusing Dodd of contributing to the rising inflation costs including the price of bologna. He said the 30-second message was paid for by the National Conservative Political Action Committee, which had produced similar messages attacking liberal lawmakers in other states.

Substitutes for Human Muscle

Editor's Note: This is a series of 15 articles exploring "Energy and the Way We Live." In this article, Lynn White Jr., author of "Medieval Religion and Technology," discusses two earlier shortages.

This series was written for Courses by Newspaper, a program of University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and was funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities and the National Science Foundation.

Manchester Community College offers a three-credit course based on the series. For information, call 646-2137. Copyright 1980 by the Regents of the University of California.

By Lynn White Jr.

The words "energy crisis" imply that what the world is now experiencing is an unpleasantness that will be fairly brief and will be solved by some sort of technological fix. Don't hold your breath until that happens. It may take centuries.

There have been past societies—the Periclean Age, for example—that had very limited, even dwindling, sources of energy but didn't worry greatly about the situation or do much to remedy it.

Rome was a magisterial civilization that got a lot of its energy from plain human muscle, especially the muscles of slaves. But the poor were scarcely better off than slaves. It seems never to have occurred to an educated Roman that slavery kept the wages of free labor at abysmal levels by its competition.

And since so high a proportion of the population lived in great poverty, it was doubtless politically rash to develop other sources of energy—labor-saving devices that would put people out of work. When, in the first century, an engineer offered Emperor Vespasian a novel machine that could boost the great columns of a new temple at reduced labor costs, the Emperor rewarded him but refused to use his device, saying, "I must feed the little people."

This attitude may account for Roman indifference toward the water-mill, which was invented in the first century before Christ. One early mention of it is in a lovely Greek poem that says the slave women to sleep late because the water nymphs have taken over their former task at sun-up of grinding by hand the flour for the meals of the day. No doubt it is bad social strategy to let slaves sleep late. The water-mill was not spread rapidly, or its uses diversified, until after the collapse of the Western Roman Empire and the general conversion of Europe to Christianity.

ENERGY COURSES BY NEWSPAPER

To make matters worse, Europe's climate began getting colder, so more wood was needed for domestic heating. By the late 13th century a wood famine was descending on Europe.

In England the poor, unable to buy wood, turned to coal, which was much more accessible than elsewhere and cheaper than wood. Consequently, by 1300 London had a severe smog problem.

Wood Famine

Thus the rapidly advancing technology of the Middle Ages, having first produced a higher standard of living than ever before, and a larger population, at last brought about an energy crisis, pollution, and much human misery.

The wood crisis was temporarily solved not by a technological fix but by a vast human tragedy that had little to do with the state of engineering: the Black Death of 1347-1350. In its first sweep the plague killed probably one-third of Europe's population. By 1400 Europe contained only about half as many people as in 1347. Production fell off because half of the market had vanished. Pressure on woodlands declined, and forests gradually restored themselves.

Population generally remained fairly static until the 16th century, when it rose again. By about 1575 England was once more suffering from a wood famine. People turned quickly to coal again, not only for domestic purposes but also for manufacturing bricks, glass, soap, sugar, salt and the like. But for a long time coal could not be used in many industrial processes, notably metallurgical. It was not until 1709—almost 200 years after the wood famine had once more become acute—that coke was first used to smelt iron.

From Coal to Steam

The prolonged effort to replace wood with coal led to a steady increase in coal production. Mines went deeper, and the risk of their flooding rose. This led English inventors to try new kinds of pumps to rid the mines of water. The breakthrough was Thomas Newcomen's steam pump of 1712. Late in the 1700s James Watt so greatly improved the steam engine that steam produced by coal became the typical energy used in the 18th-century industry.

It was the first new source of power discovered since the invention of the windmill 600 years earlier. It grew out of the effort to substitute coal for wood as the primary fuel and thus meet the energy problem that had begun to afflict Europe several centuries earlier, and which, after the catastrophic "solution" of the Black Death, had returned as a threat in the 16th century.

Perhaps the Romans—or at least their prosperous decision-makers—would not have been bothered by any of these developments, as they were not greatly bothered by the growing muscle famine of their own period. But people in the Middle Ages took the ideal of a power-based technology seriously, as we, their descendants, do today. Finding a fix for the present petroleum famine is becoming the chief goal of our society, because that is the way our minds work. But it may be found more slowly than we expect. The interim may call for social discipline on our part as well as for inventiveness.

The views expressed in Courses by Newspaper are those of the authors only and do not necessarily reflect those of the University of California, the National Endowment for the Humanities, the National Science Foundation, the distributing agency, or the participating newspapers and colleges.

Next week: John G. Burke, editor of "The New Technology and Human Values" traces the history of energy use in the United States.

Questions

1. Approximately when was waterpower in Europe applied to industrial tasks other than milling grain?
2. What circumstances caused a severe smog problem to develop in London around 1300?
3. What event temporarily eased the wood famine?
4. What new multiplying source of power was discovered in the 1700s?

- Answers:
1. In the year 800.
  2. The past were unable to buy wood because of its cost and scarcity, so they burned coal.
  3. Black Death of 1347-1350.
  4. Steam.

Two Sets of Footprints in the Sand

By CLIFF SIMPSON

Howard, a devoted and able member of the Congregational Church in Andover, where I am serving as interim minister, for one of the songs sang a poem expressing above ideas he had found and listed as "Anonymous."

She rewrote the words and composed the music, and accompanied herself on the guitar. It was a moving presentation. I do not know exactly where Reggie Jackson got his idea for the parable, but I really don't care. He says, "Those were the times I had to carry you."

He said, "Every time I look down I see two sets of footprints, stretching back for miles, side by side. And I am reminded that God has told us that He'll always be by our side. But every so often I look back and see stretches where there was only one set of footprints, and I'll ask Him why? He says, 'Those were the times I had to carry you.'" upheld; By very God was he—that God who stays All hero souls who will but trust Him.

And trusting, labor as if God were not. His eyes beheld the stars, clouds could not dim.

Their glory; but his task was not forgot: To keep his people one; to hold them true.

To their fair dream their fathers willed to them— Freedom for all; to spur them; to renew.

Their hopes in bitter days; strife to condemn. Such as his task, and well his work was done.

Help for the Hungry A man walking in the woods was caught in a torrential downpour of rain. He looked around for some sort of cover and spotted a hollow tree lying on its side. "Just what I need," he thought and crawled through a narrow opening to take shelter from the tempest. The rain pelted down for a long time.

Two hours went by before he realized that what had been his protection was now his prison—for the water caused the wood to swell in such a way that the opening through which he had squeezed originally was now closed. But worse than that he suddenly discovered it was only a matter of time before he would be crushed to death.

He became panicked—and like a drowning man his past life flashed before him in a panorama. As the years gone by unfolded on his memory's canvas, he saw himself seated in church where the pastor read stirring and impassioned plea to help the starving people of the North America.

"celebrate the moment" if we can learn to "dip down where you are."

The phrase comes from a true incident when sails were the vogue instead of steam for ocean travel. One such crew had run out of fresh water. You can easily imagine how desperate such a situation could be.

They followed the instructions and their amazement and joy that the water was completely free from salt. Unbeknownst to them they had sailed into the mouth of the mighty Amazon River.

We can find much to both brighten our days and save us from boredom if we will only dip down. How about the world of books? I asked this question of myself and went down to the coffee table in the living room. Here is what I found: "The Art of Andrew Wyeth," "Change in China," "In Rustling Grass," "Treasures of the Great National Galleries," "Birds of North America," "The New Yorker Album," and "Treasures of America and Where to Find Them." How exciting! In addition there's the books in my study as well as the fireplace bookcases.

I listed some incidents and words from the life of Christ that showed while his eye was on eternity he was also very much concerned with time. Here is another area where we might celebrate the moment if we can learn to "dip down where you are."

There are many kinds of prayers in addition to the petitions and intercessions that make up the bulk of too much of the praying in our society. Of course, pray those prayers, but experiment with prayers of adoration, confession, thanksgiving, communion, oblation. The words of the Bible and prayer can enrich your life.

Jesus said, "I have come that man may have life, and have it in all its fullness." (John 10:10 N.E.B.) If you can learn to celebrate the moment in this way, you will celebrate through all eternity.

Dip down where you are. What about forgotten hobbies? How long since you have played some of the old lullabies, tried singing or whistling? I haven't made a squawk with a grass blade between my thumbs for a long time.

Soviets Renew Activity' Afghan Unrest Growing

United Press International Soviet air and armored forces began a new round of intense activity around the Afghan capital of Kabul Friday and the United States said it had reports of "growing unrest in major Afghan cities" and of looting by Russian troops. Helicopter gunships flew ceaselessly around the Kabul area, with some heading across the mountains to the west amid rumors of renewed guerrilla activity. UPI correspondent Michael Keats reported from Kabul. Dozens of Soviet transport planes flew out of Kabul on apparent supply runs to troops stationed in outlying regions. On the ground, Russian troops kept up increased patrols which began Wednesday and, over the past 24 hours, have resumed guard over several major intersections in the city. Tanks, rocket launchers and armored personnel carriers moved in columns through the streets of the capital in renewed shows of force. In Washington, the State Department raised the estimate of the number of Soviet troops in Afghanistan to 92,000 — 7,000 more than previous estimates, and also reported widespread unrest across the country.

"We continue to receive reports of growing unrest in major Afghan cities. Travelers to Jalalabad and Herat report that these cities are tense. Attacks against Soviet personnel are increasing and nationalist force are continuing to operate even during the day," State Department spokesman Holding Carter said. "Herat continues to be buffeted by strikes and anti-government demonstrations, and the Soviets are increasing security precautions in Kabul. The deteriorating security situation evidently is hampering delivery of consumer goods to the cities," Carter said, terming such reports "accurate." "Sporadic food shortages are occurring in some areas and there are some reports that Soviets troops are stealing goods from local shops," he added. "Reports of such behavior by Soviet personnel and their attitude toward the Afghans are causing resentment among the Afghan population." He said the Soviets have been improving airports in the eastern part of the country, apparently to support a heavy air campaign against rebel positions in inaccessible mountains. Also in Washington, Defense Secretary Harold Brown said a Soviet attack against Pakistan or Iran, both more vulnerable because of the Kremlin occupation of Afghanistan, would not mean an automatic declaration of war by the United States. Brown was reacting to a comment Thursday by special presidential envoy Clark Clifford in New Delhi, India that if the Soviets move toward the Persian Gulf, "that means war." In the Pakistan capital of Islamabad, a high-powered U.S. delegation including President Carter's National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski arrived to consult with top Pakistani officials on "concrete ways" to counter the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. Brzezinski and Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher will spend two days in talks with President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq and his aides before flying on to Saudi Arabia. The visit of the American delegation will be the first opportunity U.S. officials have had to sit down with Zia to discuss a proposed $400 million economic and military package. Zia already has dismissed the sum as "peanuts."

Decision Delayed In Meadows Case

MANCHESTER—A Superior Court Judge delivered Thursday what Assistant State Attorney General Stanley Peck called a "final extension" on attempts to reach a compromise solution to the state's bid to place the Meadows Convalescent Home in receivership. Judge Thomas Corrigan ordered attorneys for the convalescent home and the state's attorney general's office to appear in court Tuesday, Feb. 5. The details of an earlier proposal to place a monitor in the home for a period of 60 days are expected to be finalized by that time. Friday Peck said he remained optimistic the two parties could reach a successful solution to the delayed compromise. Still undecided is whether the monitor, appointed by the Department of Health Services, will have binding authority over the facility's operations. Should the solution that the state claims would avoid a lengthy legal battle to place the state's convalescent home in receivership, pan out, the state has indicated it is prepared to press forward with its case.

Bids Received For Center Work

MANCHESTER—Bids were received this week for the final stage of completing the new Senior Citizen's Center. Renovating Green School will cost about $14,000, according to Maurice Pass, general services director. Four companies submitted bids for the carpeting and tiles, but only one bid to refinish the auditorium. A Raymond Zerio & Son, Inc., of Manchester, bid $2,700 to refinish the auditorium floor and stage. Epstein Brothers Carpet Inc., bid $10,944 for the carpeting and floor tiles. The Building Committee will examine the bids at its next meeting. It is estimated the center will be completed within the month. The refurbishing was scheduled for last August, but the town ran out of federal funds. Additional funds were to be provided by the Community Development Grant, from which the community withdrew in April. In November, a $17,725 federal Older Americans act grant was received to complete the project.

Grant Awarded Village Programs

GLASTONBURY—Town officials have announced that the Ensworth Foundation of Hartford has awarded a grant to the town that would provide funds for the purchasing of toys for the Welles Village Play School program and athletic equipment for youths in the village. According to officials, $250 will be appropriated for athletic equipment and $150 will be set aside for the Toys and Recreation Department. Director Bill Willett said the Parks and Recreation Department will decide how the money is spent for the toys and the Youth Services Bureau will write a list of priorities for the athletic equipment. Willett said he has contacted Youth Services Director Edmund Meinche and Recreation Supervisor Deborah Plimpton to draw up the list. The Parks and Recreation Department runs the play school program and the Teen Drop-in Center at Naubuc School. Meinche initiated a weightlifting program in Naubuc School with financial aid coming from the South Congregational Church's Challenge Fund and the Knights of Columbus. Willett and other officials have maintained that if better recreational opportunities were available to the youngsters of the village, problems such as vandalism, loitering and harassment would not be as serious.

Leaders Support Indian Arms Deal

NEW DELHI, India (UPI)—The United States has supplied Afghan rebels with communications equipment and is willing to sell India weapons more sophisticated than previously available, informed sources said Friday. The sources said the United States is "not doing much" to directly help Afghan rebels topple the Soviet-backed regime in Kabul, but is supplying them with radios. The offer of new arms to India appeared designed to soften Indian opposition to the plan to give $400 million in arms and economic aid to defend itself against potential Soviet aggression in the wake of the Soviet invasion of neighboring Afghanistan. Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, whose nation has fought two wars with Pakistan, objected to resumption of U.S. arms shipments to its traditional enemy during talks Thursday with Special U.S. Envoy Clark Clifford. Clifford left India Friday with the warning that if the Soviets moved into the Persian Gulf, "that means war." The former defense secretary, who failed to silence India's condemnation of American plans to re-arm Pakistan, also said Washington would send military advisers to Pakistan to assure U.S. weapons are not aimed at India. The sources said India has enough weapons already so as not to feel threatened by the U.S. arms supplied to Pakistan, and Mrs. Gandhi was more upset over the psychological boost Zia would derive. "When Zia gets the weapons, he'll be more cocky," they said, explaining the Indian view. The United States, which delivered $23.3 million worth of weapons to India from 1977 to mid-1978—is prepared to consider the sale of more sophisticated weapons not previously available in South Asia, they said. The weapons, which the United States has been "reluctant" to sell India in the past, include aircraft guidance systems "smart" bombs.

Students Study To Protest Cuts

STORRS, Conn. (UPI)—About 1,000 students hit the books at the University of Connecticut's library after closing time Friday night, protesting the building's limited weekend hours. A library assistant director of 1,000 students were in the library with special administrative approval to stay in the building four hours past the posted 6 p.m. closing time. It had been decided the library would close from 6 p.m. Friday until noon Sunday as one of several efforts to trim the university's budget. The special study session was planned through UConn's activities office. She said the extended hours for one night had been approved by university administrators and students were organizing a letter-writing campaign to have longer library hours restored. Ms. Gudnikas said along with the cutback of library hours, UConn has turned off heat in some buildings at night and cut overtime for some removal from the school's budget.

Thank you to our patrons who may have been inconvenienced by our recent robbery— We too, were inconvenienced.

We do appreciate your patience.

ACS Self Help Support Group

Cancer Patients Share Problems

By BETTY RYDER
 Family Editor

"It really helps to talk to other cancer patients and find out how they are dealing with their problem," said Wendy Lacey, a 20-year-old keypunch operator from Vernon. "Not talking about it doesn't make it any easier," she said. It was with a similar thought in mind, that the Manchester Unit of the American Cancer Society formed a free Self Help Support Group for cancer patients and their families in Manchester and surrounding towns.

"The purpose of the group, which first met on Dec. 4, 1978 at Manchester Memorial Hospital, is to provide an environment where communication can take place, provide mutual support, offer alternative methods of coping with various problems and ways of adjusting to individual circumstances," Muriel Werber, executive director of ACS in Manchester said. "The group meets every Monday evening from 7 to 8:30 in Conference Room C at Manchester Memorial Hospital and we've had as many as 50 people at one time. Not everyone who comes is ready to participate, sometimes they just listen. But they know the group is there for them and their families."

Looking at updated material about the American Cancer Society's Self Help Support Group, are from left, Linda Borgida, chairman of the group facilitators; Wendy Lacey, a cancer patient; and Muriel Werber, executive director of the Manchester Unit of ACS. Group meets every Monday night at 7 p.m. in Conference Room C at Manchester Memorial Hospital.

"Facilities do get tired of hearing about it," Mrs. Werber said. "Facilitators are not therapists, we do not offer psychotherapy." "All facilitators, however, do have a background in cancer either as professionals, nurses, or in patient relations," Mrs. Borgida added. "When I first found out I had cancer a year ago, I decided I'd just swing into having cancer, take the drugs necessary, get it over with and get on with my life," Wendy said. "But, after radiation treatments, chemotherapy and changing from one drug to another, I realized that this was to be my life and I might as well get used to it."

Wendy, whose bout with ovarian cancer is currently in remission, spends one week out of every month receiving treatment at the New England Deaconess Hospital in Boston.

"My girlfriend goes with me to Boston and it's terrible during the two-hour drive knowing that when I get there the medication is going to make me sick as a dog. I was on radiation when cancer was first detected, but now I'm in better shape. Of course, even with new drugs I'm mindful that I could go deaf or lose a kidney," she said.

Wendy joined the Self Help Support Group and has found it very rewarding. "I would discuss my illness with my doctor and with my family who are very supportive. But, I didn't feel it was fair to keep talking about it and make them (my family) feel any worse than they do. The group is very good and you don't have to impose on people—especially family. I just didn't want to upset them."

"There are many patients who have no family; no one to talk to, they just talk to themselves and go nuts," she said. At the hospital, Wendy found she preferred a room other than one in the Cancer Unit. "I found it depressing. The attitudes of the nurses was different, I understand that they are working in depressing surroundings with a lot of people they see every day then don't ever see again. I always go to a different floor. Anyone who feels the need to talk to someone tells the nurse and she sends someone in. Cancer patients seem to be drawn to each other. Sometimes I think the IV (intravenous) poles have magnets," she said with a grin.

"Many of us in the Self Help Support Group have had the same types of cancer and I'm younger than most, but we are all able to converse. I know that I can go to a meeting and feel better. You find that getting response from others, sharing your thoughts with some success, becomes most important in your life." Wendy works at the Hartford Insurance Group. "I used to be full time, but now I just work when I can. They have been wonderful to me," she said.

Another cancer patient, in her late 40's, who asked to remain anonymous (we'll call her Alice) also highly recommends the Self Help Group. "I asked my doctor if there was such a group. I was so depressed and felt so alone. I attended meetings and met other people who have the same problems. It really helped me get out of myself," she said.

"A lump in my breast was found in 1968 and one breast was removed. Then, in 1978 a lump was detected in the other breast. Now, I'm not really in remission because another lump has been found in my right breast. I guess physicians really shouldn't say 'if you go five years without a recurrence of cancer you're okay,' 'cause I'm not," Alice said.

My children are grown. Since I started going to the Self Help Support Group my family's attitude has changed as mine has. They are supportive and I guess I don't complain as much knowing others share the same problems. Some take good care of another. God give me love and care and strength, to help my ailing brother."

Colleagues Honor Dyer Recalls 42 Years of Service

By CHARLIE MAYNARD
 Herald Reporter

Joe Dyer had just quit a job at his home town radio station when the state's Office of Economic Opportunity, a Great Society-era program to combat poverty, Dyer took a leave of absence from the Labor Department to take the position. "It was kind of exciting back then," Dyer reminisced. "New ideas dropped in, such as the Head Start program. That was the best thing ever to come out of the poverty program. Not too many of the things they tried to do lasted. But this got the kids out of the home earlier start."

However, the Job Corps, he said, had his "up and downs" in trying to get the 16 to 20-year-olds off the streets. Today, the government is relying mainly on the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) program. "That's just a stop-gap measure," Dyer said. "It doesn't do the job. The training part is the best of it, not the employment part. You'll find in most cases it hasn't worked."

Joe Dyer had originally wanted to become a journalist. He had worked summers at the New London Day, filling in when the regulars were on vacation. He would have gladly pursued journalism as a major, but PC didn't offer such courses and Dyer settled for philosophy. "The logic was good," he said. "It helped me in a lot of things."

Even when he quit the media to join the state, Dyer didn't push his writing ability aside, authoring many feature articles for the Labor Department's magazine, "Bulletin," and other publications. He was a stringer for 10 years with the Hartford Courant and also wrote a "news rhythm" feature for the Herald briefly in 1954.

He would take a current event in the news and spoof it in rhyme form. One such parody was his Jan. 10 account of a Congressional pay raise subject to be lampooned then as it is now.

"Congress feels it needs a raise, it's members all entreat, at 15,000 each per year, they fail to make ends meet... a few object, but just a few, who say 'get down to earth, the sum we get is really fair, it's more than we are worth'... the few are right, we voters say... a raise right now's not cricket, for hasn't like just told us all, 'economy's the ticket'... if boost they must their yearly raise... be paid in surplus butter... we've several hundred million pounds that they have bought and sold... while we pay eighty cents a pound, to perpetrate the fraud, in June they'll all be heading home... then butter they could sell, at cut-rate prices we'd be glad, to have them ring our bell, in this day, then, all can be pleased, and joy will be widespread, for they would have a goodly raise, and we'd have buttered bread."

After 38 years in Manchester, Dyer has managed to give part of himself to the community. He has been active in the Cub Scouts and PTO, has chaired local Red Cross and Cancer fund drives, promoted construction of a public swimming pool, was a member of the Manchester Improvement Association and turned the first shovel of dirt for a new Knights of Columbus home, a KofC director. He received the distinguished service award in 1966 and 1971 from the state Board of Education and the Connecticut Disabled American Veterans.

The Supermarket Shopper

Tips for Organizing Your Own Coupon Club

By MARTIN SLOANE

What do you do with a refund form for Duncan Hines Cake Mix if you prefer Betty Crocker's?

What do you do with all those dog-food coupons if you have a cat?

You trade them, of course!

One of the best ways to trade cash-off coupons and refund forms is at coupon-club meetings.

A coupon club is a group of shoppers who meet regularly to trade coupons and refund forms. Their objective is to turn a lot of useless pieces of paper into new money-saving opportunities.

It's not unusual for a club member to arrive at a meeting with $20 worth of unwanted coupons and refund forms and to leave at the end of the evening with $20 worth of new ones that can be turned into big savings the very next morning.

A coupon club will not only multiply your savings. It will also provide you with many new friends and a lot of fun.

This is the first of several columns that will show you how easy it is to start a coupon club. I will also explain how typical meetings are conducted and how to make those meetings more enjoyable and worthwhile.

The first step in starting a coupon club is to pick a date about four weeks in advance for your first meeting.

This will give you sufficient time to get organized and spread word of the meeting. Many clubs have their first meeting on a weekday evening.

Finding members for your club should be easy with so many shoppers interested in coupons and refunds. Here are a few methods you can use:

- Put up signs on bulletin boards at nearby supermarkets. A simple notice is best. For example: "New coupon club being formed. Call Sally for information at 555-0000."
- Ask community newspapers to inform readers that a new coupon club is forming and that you can be contacted for information. You might also consider running a small classified ad containing the same information as the bulletin-board sign.
- Tell a dozen friends and neighbors about the meeting. Ask each of them to bring a friend.

I recommend having 15 to 20 persons at your first meeting. A group of this size is small enough to comfortably control yet large enough for a worthwhile and exciting trading session.

When people call for information, explain that the purpose of the meeting is to trade coupons and refund forms. Inform beginners that there will be a special class for them.

Be sure your directions for reaching the meeting place are easy to follow.

Clip 'n' File Refunds

MANPEX Award Medal Really Top-Drawer Item

By RUSS MacKENDRICK

This is another appearance of the award medal that is given by the Manchester Philatelic Society to winners at their annual springtime show—the MANPEX. This early look at the prized hexagon allows plenty of time for creativity in preparing your exhibit.

The medal is really a top-drawer item. It comes in gold or silver plate and solid bronze. It has a needle-sharp depiction of one of our most attractive scenes—the $5 value in the collector's issue 1922-23. This shows the bust of the "Liberty" figure that surmounts the dome of the Capitol in Washington.

As at most stamp shows nowadays, the awards are based on merit rather than chance competition (except for the Best of Show). That means the judges can give out as many prizes in gold, silver and bronze as they see fit.

The frames to be used are the international standard type and with spaces for 10 album pages. The club does not need a member of the MPS to enter. Also, for security reasons, the club does not divulge the names of the exhibitors.

Just to give an idea of what's flying, here are a few titles of previous winners: United States Stampless Covers, Civil War Revenue Stamps, A Historical Survey of Precincts (this one grew into a book), Connecticut County and Postmaster's Postmarks, U.S. Booklet Pages (more of these on Feb. 7, see below), Duck Stamps;

Heart Disease on Stamps and 19th Century Domestic Registered Mail. Some others were: The Postal History of Massachusetts, Pictorial Islands, Basketball; Zeppelin Mail; Lincolniana; History of Airport Covers; British Channel Islands; The U.S. C-24 Airmail in all its Phases; One collector took a prize for a display of telegraph stamps. Would you believe that there are ten pages of these in the Scott's Specialized?

Perhaps the oddest winning exhibit was a batch of missed letters showing some of the ways a correspondent might goof and so keep the mail from going through. MANPEX '90 will be at the High School on Saturday and Sunday, April 19 and 20.

Olympics Issue

The last of the U.S. 1990 Olympics issues came out at Lake Placid yesterday. It is a ten-ten foursome of 15-centers honoring the winter events. FDC's may be had through Feb. 16 from First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, Lake Placid, NY 12215.

Something nice for booklet pane collectors will be released on the 7th. It will be five stamps with pictures of old windmills. The recent talk of windmills has been with electric power in mind, but in former days they were used to turn heavy millstones for grinding grain. Later they pumped water into high tanks for railroads and for irrigation.

The windmills shown on the stamps run from "Virginia 1720" to "Texas 1860" in between there is Rhode Island 1790, Massachusetts 1790 and Illinois 1860.

The stamps will be sold in booklets of 20 of each picture, for 43. FDC's through Feb. 22 from the Postmaster at Lubbock, Texas 79408.

Regular Meeting The regular meeting of the Central Connecticut Coin Club will be held at Mott's Community Hall, 587 Middle Turnpike East, from 7:30 to 10 P.M. next Tuesday the 5th of February.

Please Note Gerry Gerath's "First Sunday Stamp Course" is getting off the routine and will be held on the second Sunday, the 10th, of this month. In March we will get it on the first and fifth Sundays.

On Wednesday morning it was pinocle time and we had 46 players with the following scores: Martin Custer, 611; Sam Schors, 610; Archie Houghtaling, 610; Olive Houghtaling, 588; Robert Schaubert, 587; Ed Scott, 578; Maude Custer, 571; Mary Hill, 557; Martha LaBate, 548; Mike DeSimone, 534; Glenn Gibbs, 531; Edna Farmer, 525.

During the morning we were told that Mary Rose is feeling much better after an operation and is still in the local hospital. On Wednesday afternoon we had our Bridge Games and the lucky prize winners were: Marie McLean, 6120; Tom Regan, 6100.

30 haltime deficit and took a 44-40 lead into the final eight minutes. Eight unanswered markers at the outset of the second half, 4 apiece by Carl McKenney and Jeff Fort, had given the Warriors a 38-31 advantage. The locals drew even at 44-44 with 6:38 remaining on two Rich Koepfel free throws. An offensive rebound hoop by Anderson gave the Indians back the upper hand but a Fort hoop reknotted it at 46-41. The lead went back in Hall's favor as McKenney dumped in a twin-pointer but Brian Sweeney's jumper from the left baseline, a 7-footer, brought the Indians back again at 46-41 with 3:35 remaining. Anderson, after a Hall missed shot, couldn't connect on the front end of one-and-one but the rebound was tapped back to him and he popped in a jumper in the lane. A big turnover gave McKenney possession and it elected to go into its four-quarter offense. It erased two-and-a-half minutes off the clock before Ed Kemnison drove the lane and banked a shot off the glass for a 52-40 lead. McKenney responds for Hall with a hoop with 20 seconds to go. After losing two straight games, East Catholic High's hoopslers got back on the winning trail last night, sparked by the return of point-guard Kyle Ayer, against South Catholic High by a 55-45 count. Out with a fractured finger in the two losses, Ayer returned to his starting duties and directed the Eagles to win 11 to 15 starts, and sixth in eight Hartford Country Conference outings. South, having an off-season, slipped to 6-9 and 4-3. "It was good to get back on the right track," winning Coach Jim Penders commented. "I was pleased with the overall play of the team, especially Ayer. He did a super job. He really took charge out there." Coming up next will be the toughest test of the campaign, a return battle with Northwest Catholic Tuesday night at the Eagles' Nest. The invaders are unbeaten in HCC warfare and hold an early season date over the locals. South grabbed a 12-10 first period lead at the University of Hartford. Ayer's defense took over and shut out the Rebels from the floor in the second canto and walked to the dressing room with a 19-14 halftime lead. After three periods, East upped the count to 33-27, built up an 11-point margin, saw it shriveled to 7 before finishing with a 10-point spread. The Beavers' defense was a 53-50 lead with a couple of minutes to go but Cable converted 7-for-9 from the charity stripe and Eaton added a pair. Stripes was 20-for-27 from the 15-foot line in one of its best outings from there for the season. "Down the stretch we didn't make mistakes and we hit our free throws to stretch it out," Coach stated. "Our young kids are coming along. We played well as a team. We found the open man and played very unselfishly. Whoever was open got the ball." Fleming added 14 points and Harrison 11 while Switzer in his best rebounding effort grabbed 10 caroms. Eaton and Harrison had 5 and 4 assists respectively as they consistently got the ball inside. Winkler and Beecher had 24 and 23 points respectively to lead Bolton. Whalers game on Jan. 17. But the building wasn't ready at that time and inspectors later discovered roof welds that passed city codes but could not measure up to more strict standards ordered for the building. City Public Works Director Jordan Rich said workers will be on the job around the clock this weekend to finish repairs and inspect other welds over the arena. "It's a good possibility" the work will be done by the weekend. Only city health and fire inspectors would then have to give approval before the coliseum's arena could be reopened. The Whalers are scheduled to host the Los Angeles Kings on Wednesday night and the Colorado Rockies on Friday night.

Wellesley, Mass. (UPI)—The Russian figure skating team, here to prepare for the Olympic Games later this month, is receiving a polite but cool reception. The 28-member team arrived here Thursday night for 10 days of training before moving to Lake Placid, N.Y., where the games will begin Feb. 12. The party, comprised of 18 skaters and 12 coaches and officials, is staying at a local motel and practices at the Babson College ice arena. A group of Babson students are already planning a peaceful, low-key protest prior to the skater's first workout on Saturday. As many as 200 of the school's 1,250 undergraduates are expected to attend the demonstration. "We don't hold anything against the skaters," said Glen Friedman, one of the demonstrators, "said Wellesley police Sgt. Jack Broyles. "We're going to have a few men on standby, that's all."

Board Domination Asset for Indians

Domination on the offensive backboards, particularly by 6-foot-3 junior pivotman Bill Anderson who latched onto 12 of his game-total 16 caroms off the offensive end, was his rebound while difference as Manchester High downed pesky Hall High, 55-50, in CCIL basketball play last night at Clarke Arena before a crowd of 313.

The victory improves the Silk Towners' league mark to 11-3 and overall standard to 11-4 while the loss drops the visiting Warriors to 5-9 in the CCIL and 7-9 overall. The victory was Manchester's fourth in a row while the setback ends a Hall four-game win streak.

"I don't think we had one of our better nights," stated Trivey Coach Doug Pearson. "We weren't shooting very well and didn't play very cool defensively. But we were getting the rebounds and that was the key. It wasn't a very good game but we won and that's what counts."

The triumph moves the Techmen to 3-9 in the conference, 5-9 overall while the reversal drops the Bulldogs into the COC cellar at 2-11, 3-11 overall. Coliseum Opening Still Day to Day

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI)—City officials hammered Friday to hash out final preparations for reopening the Hartford Civic Center coliseum, which may finally open its doors next week. City Manager Donald Peach, and municipal public works, fire and health officials, met with Hartford Whalers Management General Partner Howard Baldwin, whose team has three home games slated for the upcoming week. "We'll definitely play Sunday at Springfield, (Mass.)" said Robert Casey, spokesman for the National Hockey League team. "After that we'll be on a day-to-day basis. We're just waiting until the city makes an announcement for us to come back." Home games are also scheduled for Wednesday and Friday next week. The Whalers have played 106 "home" games at the Springfield Civic Center since the Hartford building's roof collapsed under tons of ice and snow Jan. 18, 1978. Tentative plans had been made to reopen the Civic Center with a

Whalers game on Jan. 17. But the building wasn't ready at that time and inspectors later discovered roof welds that passed city codes but could not measure up to more strict standards ordered for the building. City Public Works Director Jordan Rich said workers will be on the job around the clock this weekend to finish repairs and inspect other welds over the arena. Despite a record performance by Tyler Jones, Windham High's huge edge at the 15-foot charity stripe proved to be the difference as it took a 65-56 CCIL basketball decision last night over homesteading East Hartford High. Jones, 5-foot-11 senior captain for the Hornets, went over the 1,000-point mark with five minutes left in the second quarter when he converted both ends of a one-and-one from the foul line. Jones finished with 23 points to move his career total to 1,016 points. Windham had an 18-9 edge after one quarter and moved it to 34-27 at the half. The Whippets had a 48-39 lead going into the final eight minutes of play. The win improves the Whippets to 12-3 in the league and overall while the reversal drops the Hornets to 5-9 in the CCIL and 4-12 overall. "We had it down to three points in the third quarter but a couple of Hornets really hurt us," stated Hornet Coach Neil Gowan. The Hornets outscored Windham from the field, 24-21, but the Whippets converted 23 free throws while East Hartford made good on 9 points from the 15-foot charity line. Led by Jeff Wheeler's 11-point fourth quarter, Enfield High topped West Windsor High, 56-49, in CCIL basketball action last night in Enfield. The victory evened the Raiders' league mark at 7-7 and upped their overall standard to 7-7 while the loss for the luckless Black Knights drops their 4-10 in the CCIL and 4-11 overall. Enfield gained the upper hand after three periods, 58-35, and it became the Jeff Wheeler show at the outset of the fourth canto as he dumped in three consecutive hoops for a 44-35 Enfield lead. Penny reeled off six unanswered points to close the deficit to 44-41 but Wheeler tallied a free throw and the Raiders went into a delay game to keep Penny at bay. Wheeler finished with 23 points and 12 rebounds to pace Enfield while Mike Maier chipped in with 14 markers. Scott Kirkpatrick in his last outing of the season had 12 points and 9 rebounds to show the way for the Knights. Pete Cace was also in twin figures for the East Hartford-based five with 10 markers. Knocked Out of Lead Hall High Girls Outshoot Tribe

By TYLER JONES

Herald Sports-writer

There was a change at the top in the CCIL girls' basketball standings last night as Hall High downed Manchester High, 37-32, in West Hartford. That, coupled with Wethersfield High's 74-52 win over Fern High, moved the Eagles into first place in the league at 12-2. Manchester and Hall are tied for the second spot, each at 12-3. The Silk Towners are 12-4 overall. The homesteading Warriors had a 9-8 lead after one quarter with the Indians taking an 18-17 halftime advantage. Hall regained the upper hand after three periods, 25-22. "We played pretty good defense but we just couldn't get any hoops," stated Indian Coach Steve Armstrong. "And people were reluctant to shoot from the outside. We got stuffed (shots blocked) a couple of times early and we really didn't do a good job offensively." "They (Hall) had some big kids in the middle of their zone and the stuff we normally get wasn't working. If the stuff inside doesn't work you have to get it from the outside and we were reluctant to shoot," Armstrong added. "I thought we did a good job defensively but we weren't getting enough shots. We weren't taking shots," he continued. Jennifer Hedlund was practically all the offense Manchester had as she totaled 18 of the Indian points. Kathy

Notes Off the Cuff

Dan Morline of Manchester has been elected president of the Central Connecticut Chapter of Football Officials. The popular golfer who plays out of the Manchester Country Club has been a golf official for years. Death recently claimed Cal Lytes, of East Hartford, who was a fine righthanded pitcher with the British-Americans in the now defunct Twilight Baseball League. He was 55.

Gate Receipts

While National Basketball Association teams and National Hockey League entries keep all receipts for home games, National Football League teams split 50-50 with the major share to the home club. In baseball, gate receipts are divided 80-20 with the home club getting the larger percentage. Talking dollars, the Whalers lose a reported $75,000 on every home game played in Springfield. The latest scuttled is the rebuilt Hartford Coliseum which was scheduled for a reopening in Springfield. The Los Angeles Kings... Volleyball referees in the Manchester Rec Department are Dick Thorpe and Jim Morrison with the men and Jim Herdic with the women's loop. Thorpe and Herdic are both former top-flight volleyball players.

Kicking Notes

Before the New York Jets ran into placekicking troubles last season when Pat Leahy was injured, the NFLers employed just three kicking specialists in 15 years. Jim Turner, Bobby Howland and Leahy, when Leahy was sidelined, for different kickers tried their skill with Dave Jacobs finishing up. Seven extra points were missed, a league record. Leahy was tabbed to carry on the job. The Jets' coach Marvin Powell, the squad's most valuable player. Coach Walt Michaels claims the three-year veteran is the best offensive tackle in the NFL. Harlem Globetrotters are scheduled for two appearances in Hartford Feb. 13-14.

Scoring Drought

Gordie Howe has gone 21 games without scoring a goal, the longest in his 32-year NHL-WHA career. Howe also collected just four assists in January. His last goal was December 7 against the Rangers. Annual April Spring Sizzler will be staged April 13 at Stafford Speedway with $35,000 offered in prize money to the winners.

Jets Swind Deal For Quarterback

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Jets today traded disgruntled quarterback Matt Broome to Denver for quarterback Craig Kanipe and the Broncos' first and second round draft choices this year. Broome, a 10th-round draft choice from Georgia three years ago, took over for the injured Richard Todd early in the 1978 season and won six of his 11 starts to lead the Jets to a 10-6 record.

Touted by Courtney
NEW YORK (UPI) — The last time I'd seen the late Clint Courtney this excited was when he suddenly had knelt down behind an ordinary chewing gum wrapper and urged his buddy, Sachet Pache, to show how he could throw strikes across it from 60 feet, 6 inches away.

Page didn't all right, getting steady on the St. Louis Browns, which he hit to get to it. He was a number of years later, Courtney was a coach with Houston and he was excited again.

"C'mere," he said, pulling me by the arm. "I want you to meet a kid who's gonna be the best second baseman in baseball. He's only 21 and he ain't too big — about my size — but why I see him hit and play second."

With that, Clint Courtney introduced me to Joe Morgan, about to put in his first full season with the Astros. This was during spring training in 1965, the year after Morgan had hit .323 with San Antonio for the Texas League.

Right on Target
Courtney was right on target with Joe Morgan, who eventually went on to become the premier second baseman in baseball, winning the National League MVP award in 1975 and 1976, playing in three World Series with Cincinnati and eight All-Star games, and capturing five Golden Glove awards.

But Morgan is 36 now, and when he sought a multiple-year contract from the Reds after playing out his option, they told him to make the best deal he could for himself. Four clubs — the Padres, Giants, Dodgers and Rangers — drafted the former Cincinnati second baseman when he became a free agent, yet none of them signed him.

The Dodgers and Rangers both made Morgan offers he turned down, then when he came back to talk with the Rangers again, they told him they no longer were interested.

Morgan has one of the better agents around in Tom Beach. Finally after a series of negotiations between Astros' President Hal Smith and Beach, Morgan agreed Thursday to go back where he started — with Houston — because there wasn't too many other places he could go.

The Astros are giving Morgan what he wants — a $2 million contract for two years, with a $500,000 signing bonus and a $200,000 bonus for each additional year.

Morgan's career illustrates vividly how sharply a ballplayer's value can fluctuate in only a few years.

All Morgan asked for to begin with this time was $1.2 million over two years but he wasn't able to get it. He would've taken a half-million each year and a $200,000 bonus for signing, but no one came up with it.

When the Dodgers were negotiating with him, they tried to get their second baseman, Davey Lopes, to switch to the outfield so they could have room for Morgan, but when Lopes told the Dodgers the kind of bonus he wanted to make the switch, they told him to forget about it and they forgot about Morgan.

Rafael Landestoy was the closest thing the Astros had to a regular second baseman last season. He played in 114 games at second and hit .270, with 10 home runs and 45 RBIs.

Morgan hit .270 in 1979, with 10 home runs and 45 RBIs.

Broncos Seek New Faces

DENVER (UPI) — Since infecting their fans with a permanent case of Broncomania enroute to Super Bowl XII, the Denver Broncos have gone through the past two seasons with a relatively flat hand.

Craig Morton, despite an occasional retreat to the sidelines, has remained the offensive leader. And the defense, with the exception of Lyle Alzado's defection to Cleveland last season, has remained relatively the same unit as that which carried the Broncos to the Super Bowl in 1977.

But along with the rest of the NFL, Denver has come to the realization that it's tough to keep up with the Pittsburgh Steelers by standing still.

Although Coach Red Miller and the Broncos' management aren't ready to tip their hand, it is expected the Broncos will be more active during the offseason in both the trading market and the upcoming NFL draft.

"I ain't got a big trade," says Miller, "but we obviously have some priorities for next season."

The consensus in the Mike High Value Fluctuates

Morgan's case illustrates vividly how sharply a ballplayer's value can fluctuate in only a few years.

great deal to him."

The Broncos have the 20th pick in the college draft April 29-30, and the quarterback that could probably be the Broncos' prescription isn't likely to be around by then.

Miller, who is quick to point that Morton is still the Broncos' No. 1 quarterback, nevertheless agrees that Denver is going to be window shopping.

"It is one of our priorities, simply because of Craig's age and where he is in his career," Miller said.

"We are not deep in talent like Pittsburgh, Dallas or Los Angeles," says Miller. "We can't afford to rape the rest of our squad to go after one player."

In lieu of Wilson, the Broncos would likely trade for a current starting quarterback or backup quarterback. The names of Matt Robinson of the New York Jets, Tom Owen of New England and Gary Danielson of Detroit, who has played out his option, have been mentioned.

One commodity the Broncos do have an abundance of are backup quarterbacks. However, Norris Weese or Craig Penrose apparently don't figure in the Broncos' 1980 plans.

The Broncos' other needs are reflected by the team's offensive and defensive statistics in 1979. Out of 13 AFC teams, the Broncos ranked 11th in defense against the pass and eighth overall on offense.

"We're looking for a pass rusher and a defensive back," said Miller, aware of the fact the Broncos gave up 1,156 yards through the air this past season. "And, of course, we'd like to find an ace running back."

The latter need may be the toughest of all to fill, since, according to Miller, the crop of running backs thus out considerably after the Heisman Trophy par of Billy Sims and Charles White.

One thing seems certain, however. Miller is determined to rejuvenate the offense. He has relinquished the offensive coordinator post to former Stanford head coach Rod Dowhower, who coached a trio of NCAA passing champions at the Palo Alto.

The situation is tailor-made for him," says Miller. "He's the type of take charge guy we need to expand the offense."

When I stepped up to lose 8, the pressure was really on, because I had to break both of these to run 25 out of 25. My 24th came out of the house, and I powdered it, but was cautioned by Andy once more with "Hey, Joe, that was awfully close to the center stake again. If you break that target an inch past the stake, I'm calling it a lost bird."

To understand the picture, (this is for people not acquainted with the sport) Station 8 is in the center of the field, on a line in both houses. The birds come out at 65 mph, almost as fast as a bullet, and they must be broken before the center stake, adjacent to your shooting position.

With Russo's words ringing in my ears, I tried to regain my concentration, and thinking about breaking the bird closer to the house, than the center, I called for the target... fired... and missed... as I knew I would, I had lost my concentration, by thinking of shooting low 8 differently than I was used to. I had blown my shot.

As I started off the station, Russo called me back. "Hey, get back up there. That wasn't fair. Ipsyched you, by telling you I'd call a lost bird. I had lost my concentration, but I had target over again, the way you normally would."

So I did. I stepped up. Called for the target, and broke my 25th the way I usually do... close to the stake, but I just hit it.

I have to take my hat off to Russo, for being a real gentleman. I've seen matches lost by one bird, and although we won this match by one target, we were really given a lesson in real sportsmanship by Andy Russo.

Business Leaders Blast Bureaucracy

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Business leaders think federal and state governments burden them with too much paperwork, flooding them with too many complex forms and asking them to fill them out too often, a poll released Friday concluded.

The biggest gripe in the poll of 665 members of the Connecticut Business and Industry Association and the National Federation of Independent Businesses was that many forms ask for the same information.

But large numbers of respondents also felt forms were too complex or confusing and reporting was required too often.

"Our findings indicate that, in general, the paperwork burden borne by industry is primarily the result of federal, rather than state, reporting requirements," said John R. Anderson, CBIA assistant counsel.

"However, we also believe there are a number of steps which state government can undertake to improve its current methods of gathering information," he said.

The poll labeled the state departments of labor, tax and environmental protection as the biggest state offenders.

Anderson said the paperwork burden was "particularly onerous to the small businessperson, who just does not have the time or the resources to compile large amounts of information and complete numerous reports."

Fifty-four percent of the respondents said it was a problem keeping up-to-date with changes in reporting requirements and due dates, while 35 percent said it wasn't and 11 percent were undecided.

An overwhelming 73 percent said they had to obtain assistance from state agencies in completing forms, but 40 percent of them that said that aid was "poor."

The results of the poll and recommendations from both groups were submitted to Administrative Services Commissioner Elisha Freedman, who also chairs the State Paperwork Task Force.

Among the recommendations were: —Examine duplication between state and federal reporting requirements and standardize state forms with federal forms which require the same information.

—Continue on a permanent and on-going basis the interagency forms management work which has already been initiated.

—Identify within each state agency an individual who would be able to assist the public in preparing and filing any report required by that agency.

Rare Books Lost in Fire

BOSTON (UPI) — A fire fied by thousands of rare books and manuscripts destroyed the historic Brattle Book Shop early Friday, causing damage estimated by the owner of more than $1 million.

More than 600,000 books, irreplaceable letters, manuscripts and first editions were lost in the blaze at the store which was entering its 155th year of continuous operation.

Owner George Gloss, who said he would "never sell the store as long as I was alive," speculated that thieves — who have struck the shop before — may have been responsible for pre-dawn blaze in the city's downtown area.

The city's arson squad was investigating the two-alarm fire which was reported shortly before 4 a.m.

In the past, he said, thieves had broken into the brick building nine times in recent months. Once, because of poor lighting in the store, they burned newspapers to light their way to the cash box.

"Unless we raise the cultural level of the criminal element, the society is doomed," Gloss said following one of the store's incidents.

Gloss described the five floors as being "packed" with books. "Great Books," he says, emphasizing the capital letters, "were the books where we kept the letters of (Ralph Waldo) Emerson and (Henry David) Thoreau and Presidents (John F.) Kennedy and (Franklin D.) Roosevelt," he said, along with those of Charles Dickens and Henry Longfellow.

A list of Gloss's past clients reads like an American history text.

"We got books for President Kennedy, Admiral (Richard E.) Byrd, all the great artists and writers," he said. " (Author) James T. Farrell dedicated his last book to us before he died."

Norman Lear and Alex Haley: Two Innovators

By DAN LEWIS

HOLLYWOOD — The combination is prestigious, a pairing of two major figures who, in their own separate ways, altered the thrust of television during the 1970s. These men are Norman Lear and Alex Haley and they are collaborating on a project that will probably inspire a crop of similar projects.

Lear, the slight, baldish man who likes to wear canvas hats with turned-up brims even at work, brought "All In The Family" to television, and with it altered the course of comedy from the bland, inane, perfect-family types, to the acerbic, socially relevant comedy that won wide acceptance from an audience coming out of the turbulent '60s.

Norman Lear, Alex Haley

Haley authored "Roots," the saga of his own family going back to its ancestral origination in Africa. ABC boldly turned the story of this black family into a mini-series, which was aired on eight consecutive nights to record audiences. With "Roots," the mini-series came of age in the 1970s.

Now, these two have joined forces, for a television project that hardly fits the current attitude of television programming. They have proposed — and CBS has committed to buy — a series about two boys — one black, the other white, who grow up in the deep South during the depression. They are as close as 9-year-olds can get without concern over sociological differences.

Their project is titled "King of the Hill" and Lear and Haley serve as co-executive producers. CBS plans to launch it in the spring.

Lear explains the thrust of the show, "We follow these kids to the age of 14, as the social curtain slowly drops, until they reach the age of puberty — about 14 — and we watch their relationship develop, and then dissolve at 15 when the force of racial differences overtake their lives."

Alex Haley recalls his own youth in Hennings, Tenn.

"I had a relationship, as a kid, with a white boy who lived across the street — on the white side of the street. We grew up in and out of each other's home — eating, sleeping, going fishing together with older men. That lasted until our 11th year, then one day he said to me — unaware of its implication — that pretty soon I'll be old enough to be calling him 'mister.' I began to withdraw after that."

A clip of the series has been made available for early awareness. From this snippet, it is difficult to look at the project and imagine its whole cloth, other than to admire what it will attempt to achieve. Whether the young lives of a black and a white boy, integrated into the prejudices of the adult society can sustain on a weekly basis is a matter of speculation.

The Southern accent, to the unaccustomed ear, is at times difficult to distinguish. The story line of this preview deals with the young black's father, creating a problem in town when he disputes the monthly bill sent him by the proprietor of the general store, who is the father of the white boy. The amount in dispute is only $3.20, but the disruption in town emerges because the black man dared question a white man "in his own store in the middle of the day." The argument filters down to the two boys, who become estranged.

Lear and Haley insist these will not be "ugly" stories.

"The ugly ones have been done of the red neck whites and the indigent blacks," says Lear. "We're going to draw on the experience of Alex and his friends growing up."

"They experienced racism in all these little ways," Lear added.

Haley refers to the project as "untraditional ... you are looking at the two most untraditional guys in town."

"The viewing public lusts for something that will break tradition," Haley declares.

When this reporter observed that the outline for the story, which shows the friendship dissolving after they reach the age of 14, suggests that it has a maximum life on network television of only five years, Lear responded ed by saying he would like to see all television series only stay on the air for five years.

"The five-year life span for a series would be good for the industry and the viewers," he explains. "It would be good to have all of us — writers, directors and producers — competing again for those half hours. It would revive freshness and that would be a healthy situation."

Going into the 1980s Lear sees the new technology presenting enormous new opportunities in television. The proliferation of cable will draw new creative people. He thinks cable will inspire a tremendous amount of local origination in the production area.

Lear predicts a lot of "mom and pop" production operations, feeding software to the local cable channels, and he feels that is good. "It's like the days of the neighborhood grocery stores that mom and pop ran in this country. Then the markets became supermarkets and chain operations. Television — with the proliferation of channels that cable will induce — will create a terrific demand for product. I would like to see some manner of government encouragement for the small, independent producers and production companies."

A major problem that Lear foresees is that production costs, controlled by creative and crafts unions, have become prohibitively astronomical; they can only be handled by more established production companies, like his own T.A.T. or Lorimar, or MTM to mention some he named.

As production possibilities, he sees tapings of regional and community theater productions, and more reality programs.

"Somehow — and I don't have the format for it now — the government has to find a way to help the 'mom and pop' operations grow, and, in a sense, protect the viewer from the largeness of the medium."

SOLUTION

GOOD OL' THIEVES — I saw an episode of "The Dukes of Hazzard" a while ago that was a complete rip-off of "Smokey and the Bandit," with the runaway bride and the cops in hot pursuit. How do they do this kind of thing on TV? — Lucy Champlain, Bilexi, Miss.

Recycling scripts and storylines is what television is all about. They would have run out of ideas soon after Uncle Miltie went off the air, were it not for "creative" borrowing, not only from other media, but even the TV medium itself. In the late '60s, Warners used to take a "Maverick" script and turn it into a "77 Sunset Strip" episode with just a few changes of locale and plot. That's show biz. As for "The Dukes," its entire premise is a rip-off of "Smokey," so why not go all the way and lift the entire plot?

MAN OF STEEL — I watched the opening three hours of "Skag" and discovered a young actor who I think is terrific. He played the oldest son, but I don't know his name. Can you tell me where to write him? — Cindy Wells, Carrington, N.D.

Craig Wasson is the terrific young actor in question, whom you can write through the show's producers, Lorimar Productions, 10202 West Washington Blvd., Culver City, Ca. 90230.

NO LUCK — Could you please tell me if the shows "Family," "Kaz," and "Eddie Capra" will be back on? Also I'd like to get "Hollywood Squares" back on in our area. I've tried WOTV in Grand Rapids as well as the producers, but no answer. — Mrs. C. L. Burghuis, Muskegon Hts., Mich.

"Family" is back on now, temporarily. Unfortunately after this season's episodes run out, that's it for the ABC series. "Kaz" and "Eddie Capra" are also both out for the count. The only thing I can tell you regarding the Squares is to try your local station again. It's their decision to run the popular game show or not.

A.K.A. — On "A Man Called Sloane," an actor named Eric Braeden appeared. Is he also the same actor who played Captain Dietrich on "The Rat Patrol" under the name Hans Gudegast? If so, can you tell me his correct name and a little information concerning him, age, etc.? — R.J. Andrade, Seaside Heights, N.J.

Eric Braeden and Hans Gudegast are one and the same German-born actor. Hans Gudegast is his true name, but the actor changed it so as to avoid being totally typecast as nasty Nazis. There is no listing of his age available, but you can safely assume he's well into his 40s. He made his feature film debut in 1957 in "The Colossus of Rhodes," and has worked since then in both Hollywood and Europe. Oddly enough, one of his best efforts also featured Colossus. It was "Colossus: The Forbin Project," about a runaway computer.
