Merit 100's Victory!

Smokers Prefer MERIT 100's 3 To 1!
New taste-test results prove it.

Proof: A significant majority of 100's smokers rate MERIT 100's taste as good as—or better than—leading high tar 100's. Even cigarettes having 60% more tar!

Proof: Of the 95% stating a preference, 3 out of 4 smokers chose the MERIT low tar/good taste combination over high tar leaders when tar levels were revealed.

MERIT 100's: Proven Long Term Alternative To High Tar Brands.
New national smoker study results prove it.

Proof: The overwhelming majority of MERIT 100's smokers polled feel they didn't sacrifice taste in switching from high tar cigarettes.

Proof: 97% of MERIT 100's smokers don't miss former high tar brands.

Proof: 9 out of 10 enjoy smoking as much since switching to MERIT 100's, are glad they switched, and report MERIT 100's is the best tasting low tar they've ever tried.

You've read the results. The conclusion is clearer than ever: MERIT 100's delivers a winning combination of taste and low tar. A combination that's attracting more and more smokers every day and—more importantly—satisfying them long term.

Eva Hudak And MPOA Fight Plan

By LAUREN DAVIS SHEA
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — Representatives from the Manchester Property Owners Association teamed up with the outspoken Eva Hudak to put down the Comprehensive Five-Year Plan for Elementary and Secondary Education at a state Board of Education hearing Wednesday.

Betty Sadloski, association president, said the plan imposes greater controls than those generated by the Department of Housing and Urban Development. She also termed a phrase in the plan, "intergovernmental cooperation" as "The state's alias for busing."

Eva Hudak called the plan's goals ridiculous. She also said the current education system is failing to instill in children a love for America and that the plan won't do anything to remedy this deficiency.

She said the school system had taught history and geography, which was combined into a nebulous subject called "social studies." "Just the mention of a draft registration had sent people off in a tizzy. People must know the country before they'll love it. Then, they'll stand behind it," Mrs. Hudak declared.

After the public comment session, the state board agreed to table the vote on whether to accept the plan. Mrs. Julia Rankin, board member most intimately involved with the plan, said a board work session on the plan was necessary before a vote could be taken.

"As of now, because so many comments have been received and because a large amount of material on the plan was only received yesterday, as chairman I would like to propose a work session next week to go over those changes," Mrs. Rankin said.

She added that some changes had come in the same day the vote was scheduled to take place. "I have been in touch with this plan for nine months and I stayed up until 2 a.m. to try to understand these changes," Mrs. Rankin said. She declared the task made her "groggy."

The committee agreed to meet in a work session open to the public on Monday at 3 p.m. in Room 307 of the State Office Building, 165 Capital Ave., Hartford. They also rejected a suggestion by Roberto Fuentes, board member, to send the plan back to an advisory committee to study the comments and changes.

Local boards of education will have to meet the goals. While the state Legislature mandated that a plan be developed, the specifics of a plan were left to the state board. The board must submit a report on the plan to the Legislature by Feb. 15, but the Legislature only receives the report, it does not vote on the plan.

St. James Parishioners Oppose New Parish

By MARTIN KEARNS
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — Parishioners of St. James Church voted 10 to 1 against supporting Archbishop John Whealon's proposal for a new parish.

The parishioners' vote represents broad based opposition to the archbishop's plans. The parish council and the clergy have already indicated their opposition to the proposal.

The new parish would take about 350 families and $65,000 in annual revenues from St. James.

Edmund Gorman, a member of the council who is opposed to the plan, said any division of the parish would affect St. James School. He said the majority of the teachers receive salaries. Seventy families included in the proposed new parish have children enrolled in the school.

Gorman also said that certain counseling positions might be threatened. Among other duties, counselors visit area hospitals and help with marital problems.

Archbishop Whealon is scheduled to discuss his plans with parishioners this Saturday. The archbishop, representing the Archdiocese of Hartford, appears to have final word in the decision-making process.

Rev. William F. Carroll of St. James Church said, "We don't know all that much. Nothing is going to happen until Saturday. I hope we'll know more by then. It's up to the archbishop...we'll wait and see what happens from there."

The archdiocese owns land off Keeney St. and made its proposal to St. James last month. The new parish would take revenues and parishioners from both St. James and Assumption parishes.

Rev. Edward S. Pepin, Pastor at Assumption Church, said the loss of 300 families would not greatly affect his parish. He did mention that the Meadows Convalescent Home would be included in plans for the new parish. He pointed to the creation of Assumption parish from St. James as precedent for the archbishop's proposal.

The Assumption church was originally a chapel for St. James and later became a separate parish. Similarly, St. Bartholomew's parish was formed by a division of St. Bridget parish.

The new parish would have 1-84 as its northern boundary and extend to the East Hartford border; to Glastonbury in the south and Bolton to the west.

The St. James' poll, conducted at last Sunday's services, drew responses from 1,750 parishioners and will be presented to the archbishop at Saturday's meeting.

Solon Took Cash 'For Investigation'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Richard Kelly, R-Fla., implicated in the "Arab scam" bribery scandal, says he took $25,000 from under cover agents posing as representatives of a fictitious Arab sheik seeking help with immigration and business problems.

Kelly said in an interview with NBC-TV Wednesday night he locked the $25,000 in the glove compartment of his car and then used some of it for lunch money. On Sunday, the day after the FBI operation was revealed publicly, he turned over all but $174 of the money to the FBI.

Kelly, 55, said he was investigating what he believed to be shady characters when he went to a posh Washington house with a man named "Gino" to discuss his possible assistance in immigration matters. The man pulled the money out of a drawer and offered it to Kelly, he said.

"I would have preferred not to have taken the money but I also did not want the investigation to die there because I didn't know anything more then," Kelly said. "I put it in the pockets of my clothing."

Sources said hidden FBI cameras filmed that scene — and similar ones allegedly involving other congressmen — on videotape.

"I felt that I was simply being compromised at this time," Kelly said. "What was going on in that room about the immigration and all was just some sort of game."

"And I felt as though I had a unique opportunity because I was a congressman to get this information whatever it was. I was confident it was crooked."

Arena Is Star Again

HARTFORD (UPI) — Once again, the arena was the star.

The rebuilt $15 million Hartford Civic Center coliseum, which was destroyed when its roof collapsed under tons of ice and snow more than two years ago, opened amid much fanfare Wednesday night.

Gov. Ella Grasso, Mayor George Athanson and a host of National Hockey League officials stood on a red carpet at center ice for a 40-minute ceremony before the building reopened with a game between the Hartford Whalers and Los Angeles Kings.

Mrs. Grasso and Athanson hailed the event as the rebirth of the city.

"The time has come," the governor said cutting a ribbon to the enlarged arena. "The Whalers are home again. The coliseum is finished. The phoenix did rise from the ashes. Hartford will move on."

"We want to thank God almighty for the opportunity to be reborn again," Athanson said.

Civic Center Executive Director Frank Russo, who has promoted the new building as "safer, bigger and better" than the old arena, said, "If you look at the roof collapse as a fact in its history, it's really turned out for the best."

While government officials were thinking of the city's rebirth, many in the near sellout crowd of 14,448 had an eye on the new roof. A few wore hardhats, but most said they had no fears lightning would strike twice.

"I feel very safe. Hartford has too much at stake. If they didn't get it right this time nobody would ever step foot in the place," said Dave Dickinson of Wethersfield.

The rebuilding project centered on a new roof design — which is much higher than the old roof and allowed more than 4,000 additional seats to be installed. More than a dozen extra rows of seats were added to both sides of the coliseum above where the old roof stood.

The old roof was a 1,400-ton computer-designed steel webbed space frame that had been lauded as a construction marvel. The new roof is supported by four main corner pylon columns which bear the bulk of its weight.

The old coliseum, which was only three years old, collapsed with a roar at 4:19 a.m. on Jan. 18, 1978 — a few hours after 5,000 college basketball fans left the building. No one was injured.

While construction workers cleaned up the debris and then rebuilt the facility, the Whalers — the coliseum's prime tenant — were forced to play 107 "home" games 25 miles north in the Springfield, Mass., Civic Center.

Wednesday's game was the first NHL game the team ever played in Hartford. When they played their last real home game — four days before the roof collapsed — they were members of the now defunct World Hockey Association.

Compromise On Meadows Is Failure

By MARTIN KEARNS
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — A compromise solution to a Health Services Department suit against the Meadows Convalescent Home, appeared likely Wednesday, but failed to materialize.

Stanley Peck, assistant state's attorney general, representing the Health Department, was optimistic Wednesday's that appearance before Judge Thomas Corrigan would produce an agreement between the two parties.

However, that session ended as numerous others have in the last three weeks, with reports of progress but no solutions.

The state's suit against the Meadows is still pending in Superior Court. The state has hoped that the home would agree to conditions of a monitor, thus avoiding a lengthy court battle.

The attorney general's office proposed that a monitor, appointed by the Health Department, be placed in the facility to oversee its operations for 60 days. The monitor's authority is still to be outlined.

The monitor action would replace state efforts to put the home, the largest in Connecticut, in receivership. The Health Department began its suit after an investigation into the deaths of 17 patients resulted in charges of improper care. They did not directly link the deaths to the charges.

Both parties feel they have a strong case.

Attorneys for the state and the Meadows are scheduled to appear at a later date to report to Corrigan on the results of their discussions.

UConn Enrollment Down, Others Up

By United Press International
Decreasing numbers of freshmen and transfer students have cut college enrollments at the University of Connecticut, but colleges throughout New England have generally reported moderate enrollment increases.

A survey, released by the New England Regional Board of Higher Education Wednesday, found overall enrollment throughout the region "remains fairly bright" — especially at institutions with strong business programs, like Thomas College in Waterville, Maine. That school in 1979-1980 recorded its largest total enrollment since the school was founded in 1894.

The NEBHE report said business administration was the most popular choice of study among foreign students at American International College in Springfield, Mass.

But enrollment at the five-campus University of Connecticut this year dropped 15.5 percent, the report said, while other Connecticut institutions reported stable or increased enrollments.

The Connecticut Board of Higher Education explained the decrease by detailing a decline in the state's 18-year-old population, a stabilizing of the number of high school graduates, increasing numbers of students leaving the state for other colleges and a declining national birthrate.

University of Maine Chancellor Patrick E. McCarthy said "the problem as I see it (in Maine) is how do we best use our resources to serve our population which is so geographically dispersed."

He said his colleges have embarked on programs to bring the classrooms to the students, "eliminating some of the problems of distance."

Vermont Technical College recorded its highest enrollment a year ago, and this year has been "holding steady, while most other Vermont schools are reporting gains," the NEBHE reported.

It said several liberal arts colleges in New Hampshire have disappeared from the scene, but one small survivor, Magdalen College in Bedford, N.H., with only 70 students and no federal aid, attributed its success to "a rigorous, no-nonsense curriculum based on foundations of knowledge taught in the Socratic method."

Free Park Admission
MANCHESTER — Persons holding a senior citizen card issued by either the Senior Citizens Center in Manchester or East Hartford will be admitted to Wickham Park free once the park opens in the spring.

The announcement was made by Judge William E. Fitzgerald, who credited Jim McCauley and Robert Summa, Hartford National Bank trust officer, with the development.

The public is currently charged 50 cents to park.

Chief Kerrigan Retiring

SOUTH WINDSOR — John J. Kerrigan, South Windsor's first full-time police chief, announced Wednesday that he will be retiring on March 21, his 65th birthday.

He has been with the South Windsor department for 11 years. Before that, he had been on the Hartford Police force for 29 years and chief of the Hartford department for five years.

The announcement of his retirement was made in a letter to acting Town Manager Charles Enes.

His likely replacement will be William Ryan who was raised from captain to the position of assistant chief last July. However, it will be up to the Town Council to make the appointment.

In his letter to Enes, Kerrigan praised town officials for their cooperation and understanding. He also thanked town residents, law agencies on the local, state and federal level, and his "thoroughly trained and dedicated force."

He said he leaves with lasting thanks for the opportunity to serve a great town. The South Windsor department had a force of 12 members when Kerrigan became chief in 1968. It now has a force of 23 officers, four of whom have received FBI training in Virginia, Kerrigan said.

Kerrigan started his career in police work as a member of the 130-member Hartford Police Department's training class in 1939.

Enes, who is the town clerk, is acting as town manager until a new manager is hired. He said he will approach the Town Council as soon as possible to seek direction on hiring a replacement for Kerrigan.

Kerrigan's plans for the future are still a little sketchy. With all of his years in law enforcement, he has gathered enough material to write a book and he might do just that.

He may also return to teaching police work at Holyoke Community College.

Morale Low at MVD

HARTFORD (UPI) — Motor Vehicles Commissioner Benjamin Muzio says legislative hearings on the operations of his department have resulted in decreased morale and edginess among workers.

Muzio said Wednesday the department had prepared volumes of testimony for the Transportation Committee review but workers were still strapped with numerous calls from committee members and staff seeking information.

"This is a witch hunt but we're ready to respond," he said, adding that the hearings had put the department "on edge."

Rep. Thom Serrani, D-Stamford, chairman of the committee, related the charges saying the hearings were "a prime opportunity for the commissioner to look at his own department and make constructive changes."

Editorial Where are Spending Cuts?

The most disappointing part of Gov. Ella Grasso's budget message delivered to the legislature Wednesday is the noticeable lack of any spending reductions.

Perhaps the governor isn't telling us what areas of the budget were pared but at first glance it appears the word, "reduction," was not applied to the state's $2.67 billion spending plan.

On paper the governor's budget shows a slight reduction in the state bureaucracy. From the previously authorized 49,000 bureaucrats authorized for the state payroll the budget calls for a reduction of 264. At present there are almost 3,500 unfilled, and the state still functions without them.

Connecticut faces a proposed 7.5 percent sales tax, a new floating 1 percent gasoline tax, a new 1 percent tax on oil company gross revenues and a higher cut of betting revenues.

First the sales tax increase will encourage Connecticut residents to shop elsewhere, hurting the retailers who pay their taxes based on their business, and collect the sales tax.

The sales tax increase will not generate sales tax revenue, but will serve to curtail sales in the state and encourage state consumers to pay lower sales taxes in other states, supporting the governments of Massachusetts, New York, and Rhode Island.

The higher gasoline tax is the thanks we all get for driving less, conserving gasoline and helping the national effort to become more energy self-sufficient.

The tax on oil company revenues is another anti-business measure that could force industry from the state and certainly will discourage new investments in Connecticut.

The measure to get more for the state from gambling can be supported for its revenue generating ability, but its necessity should be questioned.

Obviously there are state programs that aren't accomplishing results but are costing money. We can sympathize with

Gov. Grasso when she notes that 88 percent of state expenditures are out of her control.

But the other 32 percent is well within her control and a better examination of cost-effectiveness of programs should bring out some areas where there is waste, abuse and potential for reductions.

A few years ago the people who were running the state government in California said there was nothing that could be pared from state spending.

Howard Jarvis and his Proposition 13 gave those in government a clear message. The message was cut taxes or else.

With a continued state spending spiral, Connecticut soon may find the people, who are the government, will take control away from elected and appointed officials and will tell the government how much will be spent.

Whether it's called Proposition 13 or something else, the result will be the same, the state will survive and taxes will be reduced.

Thrust of Budget Outlined

HARTFORD (UPI) - Here is a complete text of Gov. Ella Grasso's budget address today to the Legislature.

Mister President, Mister Speaker, my fellow state officers, members of the General Assembly, Reverend Clergy, my good friends.

It is a tight budget. New spending is restricted to $270 million, an increase of 1.2 percent. When debt service payments from last year's surplus are taken into account, the increase is 8.8 percent, despite an inflation rate of more than 13 percent.

This has been a most difficult and challenging budget to shape. Connecticut's fiscal position has been severely impacted by an inflationary spiral that is tied by a critical energy challenge and by the threat of a declining national economy.

These factors have been very much in evidence as we labored diligently to keep this year's budget in balance. During the past several months, every reasonable effort has been made to restrict state spending. Our goal has been to continue to provide essential services, meet our mandated obligations, and pay the higher costs of inflation which add to our burdens as they add to the travail of every household.

We have been confronted with additional expenditures to meet the energy-related and other needs of government and our people. Despite this, our state budget is in balance. It will be in balance on June 30, barring some unforeseen disaster.

and legislation. About 80 percent of the $270 million increase is in this category. More than $250 million of the increase is directed to:

Nearly $71 million for salary increases and fringe benefits for our state workers is contracted by our collective bargaining agreements.

More than $70 million to towns and cities for education grants.

More than $67 million for payment of debt service.

Medical payments to hospitals, nursing homes, medical services and medication for the elderly and the needy who are beneficiaries of Medicaid.

More than $10 million for welfare payments for anticipated increases in caseloads.

The remaining 32 percent of all the dollars, including the balance of the increase, is, in large measure, designed to maintain existing programs, hold the line against inflation, and provide for modest increases in those vital areas where the needs of our people are greatest.

The budget continues our program of financial support for local governments. In the past five years, these payments have increased from less than $338 million in fiscal year 1975 to more than $508 million in the current fiscal year, an average of about 10 percent per year.

The increase I propose for the next fiscal year is more than $75 million, an increase of 15 percent.

Every dollar the state gives to our towns and cities is a dollar that will not be taken from local property taxpayers.

The state's assistance is a major factor in the record of financial stability that has been achieved in the vast majority of our communities. Figures compiled by the Connecticut Public Expenditure Council show that 182 of our 189 towns and cities closed their books last year with surpluses ranging from a few thousand dollars to more than $7 million.

The total of all the municipal surpluses was approximately $85 million, an increase of more than $25 million from the previous year.

watchword. This budget carefully targets new dollars to essential programs.

Increased demands on the human services provided by the state will be met. Included are:

An increase of more than $11 million for the Department of Mental Retardation. Part of the added dollars will be used for additional group homes and the opening of new facilities at the Bridgeport Regional Center, the Waterbury Regional Center and the Central Connecticut Regional Center in Meriden.

An increase of $2 million for the Department of Health Services, including additional personnel for the inspection and review of nursing homes and other hospital and medical care facilities.

An additional $28 million for the Department of Children and Youth Services. The increase includes $1 million that will permit higher rates to be paid to foster homes and private institutions for the care of children. The availability of services will also be improved.

The state's educational system will be strengthened. Aside from the increase in educational grants cited earlier, more than $2 million in added funds will provide for an increase of 750 full-time equivalent students in new facilities in six regional vocational technical schools and two satellites.

The budget for higher education will increase by nearly $20 million.

Our commitment to the protection of our people will continue. An additional $4 million for the Department of Public Safety includes funds for 50 new State Trooper trunks and the purchase of 200 vehicles.

This year for the first time since fiscal year 1977, our estimated receipts from sales taxes will not be adequate to cover the state's needs. Normal growth of 6.5 percent in the current revenue structure will produce less than $156 million in added revenues. Appropriation requirements are $128.3 million more than these revenues will support.

Therefore, we must secure this difference from new revenues. The changes I propose are:

An increase of 5 of 1 percent in the sales and use tax to 7.5 percent, to raise an additional $61.3 million.

A change in the gasoline tax from the current 11 cents per gallon to 11 percent at the wholesale price level, with continuing exceptions for special fuels such as gasoline and diesel. The change will add $2.8 million.

A new one percent tax on the gross earnings from sales in Connecticut of those oil companies engaged primarily in the refining and distribution of petroleum products. The yield is estimated at $30 million.

An increase of 7 percent in the state share of the handle on exotic wagering authorized by the Division of Special Revenue. The change will add $13.2 million.

A relatively small increase in the sales tax produces substantial revenues, yet the built-in exemptions provide a measure of protection for consumers. The tremendous growth of oil company profits should absorb the proposed new tax without impact on consumers. And the increase in the state share of the exotic betting handle brings the rate into line with the share already taken at off-track betting establishments and in many other states.

In the weeks ahead, we will discuss with each other, with the people who are served by our programs, and with the people who pay the bills, the consequences of the new budget. In the tradition of cooperation which is inherent in our government process, I urge to work with us to resolve those budget differences which inevitably will develop.

Although this session is devoted largely to the budget, there are other areas of concern that we must address. Next week, I will share with you my views and recommendations on such matters as housing, condominium conversions, nursing homes, hazardous waste management and nuclear power regulation.

Although our state is small in size and numbers, it is large in its sense of history and its place of leadership in our country. Our people are not dismayed by adversity, nor do they shrink from challenge. The time has come for sacrifice and restraint in the fiscal policies of state government and in the demands of our people for state programs and services. Working together, we will provide leadership for our state in this new decade.

Few Minorities Seek Town Jobs, But Stats Unreliable

By MARTIN KEARNS
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER - Statistics released by the town's Personnel Department show that minorities accounted for 2 percent of the 277 applications considered for position vacancies in the final quarter of last year.

However, the statistics may be misleading because applicants are not required to indicate their race. Twenty percent either indicated or were classified as unknown, Stephen Werber, personnel supervisor said. "It is not required that applicants give that information and when it (the application) returns, some are unrecalled, others choose not to answer and the result is the unknown classification."

The number of minorities, coupled with the number of applications from persons of unknown racial origin, totaled 19 percent of all applications. Minority recruits could only come from these two categories.

About 50 percent of the whites, 1 percent of those classified as unknown took the tests. Statistics qualifying for written exams took the tests. Statistics were nearly identical for both male and female.

Werber said, "We would like to find out why (applicants are not taking the exams)." He further addressed the town's difficulty in recruiting minority candidates, saying, "Transportation, low turnover, we don't have a great number of vacancies, and very stiff competition between the town and private sector."

Private industry salaries are typically higher than those for municipal positions. "We had more never look an examination. We keep open our file on applications for one year. Everytime we have a position to fill we pull all the applications. When you notify people, a lot could happen in a year," said Werber, responding to the number of applicants who never take examinations.

MANCHESTER - The Committee on Cardiac a local emergency medical services system and a townwide paramedic service program, developed a steering committee for paramedic services.

The committee includes Ronald Kraatz, assistant director of health, Dr. Robert Butterfield of Manchester Memorial Hospital, William Abbott, assistant administrator at the hospital, and Arnold Kleinschmidt of the town's Board of Directors.

According to Kraatz, "The committee is a set of people representing a variety of different perspectives on paramedic services." He also said the committee's purpose is to draft up directions in which to go (with the development of paramedic services).

Kraatz said the steering committee will be responsible for developing an agenda and a program of work for the larger committee. He added that they had not established any deadline for completion of the paramedic study.

The paramedic services proposal worked out by Manchester Memorial Hospital is one component of an Emergency Medical Services system the town is considering. The health and safety officials of the CPR-EMT Committee are working on the development of the entire system.

Kraatz said the EMT system would require development of a service system and education of the public on how to react to emergencies and how to use the system. The public would be trained in CPR and first aid, among other procedures. Also included in the system is a communications network. The roles of the police, fire, and health departments, as well as the hospital remain to be outlined.

The proposal would require $668,000 over a three-year period.

U.S. Should Avoid Afghani Politics

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON - President Carter's schemers have lapsed into some delusive and dangerous dreaming about turning Afghanistan into a Soviet Vietnam. Those of escapism talk deliriously about ferocious Afghan mountain men charging down their craggy hideouts to disrupt and confound the mighty Red Army.

To turn this wishful reverie into reality, the Carter administration is actively searching for a man of destiny to play the role of Vietnam's late Ho Chi Minh. As Secretary of State Cyrus Vance recently confided to associates, United States is "seeking a leader of the Afghan people."

according to the scenario favored by the White House, would unite the diverse Afghan guerrilla groups, rally to the populace and start doing unto the Russians what the Viet Cong did unto us in Vietnam.

But unhappily, there are some serious flaws in the scheme. The remorseless Russians have already learned how difficult it is to impose a leader upon the Afghans. One ruler after another, each bearing the Moscow brand, failed to gain the support of the people. The Kremlin had to send tanks and troops to keep their man in power.

There's no reason to believe the Afghans would be any more eager to be ruled by a leader chosen for them by the United States. One exiled leader had this advice for President Carter: "The best course of action for the United States is to be patient and see who emerges as a natural leader."

dangerous." The creation of a government-in-exile, with U.S. blessings, would likely be interpreted as superpower meddling. Instead of uniting the Afghan people, it could splinter them.

Meanwhile, the fact that the meanest of its own allies has alarmed the Moslem world. This will cause other Moslem nations to view Soviet friendship with suspicion. In the opinion of some Afghan exiles, the United States would be better off letting this suspicion fester rather than stirring it up.

Such was the advice of a former high-ranking Afghan official who was driven out of his country by the Soviets and is now being courted by the Americans. Thoughtfully, he quoted an ancient Islamic axiom: "Let us wait and see who comes over the power."

Yet the advice probably will be disregarded by the Carter administration, which seems eager to form a Free Afghan government.

Policymakers believe a government-in-exile could unseat Afghanistan's puppet government at the United Nations and open the diplomatic door to U.N. inquiries into Soviet action in the conquered country. Here are some of the leaders, meanwhile, who the White House is considering to head a U.S.-backed government:

- One of the rival rebel leaders who recently formed a coalition of their guerrilla groups. They are Sebhghapallah Mojaddidi, Said Ahmed Gelani, Mawlawi Abdul Hai, Gold-buddin, Hekmat Yar and Mawlawi Rahban.
- Zahir Shah, the former Afghan king who abdicated his throne in 1973 after a bloodless coup. He ruled Afghanistan for 40 years before he fled to Italy where he lives modestly. It's unlikely he would agree to return to power.
- Hassan Durrani, I, who claims to be the son of King Amanullah Khan, an earlier monarch, who abdicated the throne in favor of his cousin. Hassan hasn't set foot in Afghanistan shows Howard Baker at 8 to 1, John Connally and Jerry Ford at 10 to 1, and, surprisingly, John Anderson at 25 to 1. Phil Crane rates as a 100-to-1 choice, and Bob Dole is the longest shot of all at 200 to 1.

The Greek figures the Democratic candidate as a 5-to-1 favorite over the Republican. Fee Fie Fo The giants of the American medical profession are going all out to fight the Federal Trade Commission. The FTC ruled that prohibition on advertising by physicians is an anti-trust violation that works to the consumer's disadvantage.

In addition to calling members of local medical societies to arms, the medical fraternity is lobbying hard for legislation proposed by Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho. It would keep the FTC from regulating any profession - doctors, dentists, lawyers - that's regulated by the states. It was drawn up under the guidance of William Owens, lobbyist for the American Dental Association.

Thoughts

Never Give Up! The late Dr. Charles Haddon Spurgeon, noted English clergyman, related an incident about Sir Francis Drake: "Being in a dangerous storm in the Thomas River, he was heard to say, 'Must I, who have escaped the rage of the ocean, be drowned into a ditch?'"

Dr. Spurgeon then went on to say and to make this application: "Will you, Christian, who have passed through a world of tribulation, lie down and die of despair, or give up your profession because you are at the moment passing through some light affliction?"

Let your past preservation inspire you with courage and constrain you to brave all the storms for Jesus' sake.

That's good advice for today! Perhaps someone reading these words today will be discouraged. The battle of life is going hard for you. You seem to be losing ground and you feel like giving up. There appears to be no end to your trials. But think back for a moment!

Remember how God has sustained you in the past - how He met your needs when you faced a really great crisis, how He delivered you when you could see no way out of your dilemma.

Then remind yourself that you have not escaped the rage of the ocean just by being drowned in a ditch! Take heart! Patiently endure! He conquers who endures! So keep on keeping on. Never give up!

Dental Health Week

This is the fourth in a series of six articles on dental health published by the Manchester Evening Herald, in cooperation with the Manchester Dental Society, in observance of National Children's Dental Health Week, Feb. 3-9.

"My nephew is just nine months old and his teeth are full of decay. He mainly consumes formula and juices and of course he does not eat candy. What could have caused this extensive decay?"

It sounds as if you nephew may be suffering from a condition known as "nursing bottle mouth." A baby who is given a bottle at bedtime can be a prime candidate for this condition of rampant dental decay.

As soon as a child's teeth appear, they are susceptible to decay. The teeth can be badly damaged if the baby is regularly put to bed for naps and at night with a bottle filled with sugary liquids. Formula, fruit juices, as well as sugary soft drinks are all very dangerous in a bedtime nursing bottle.

As the liquids containing sugar are consumed, they combine with the sticky, colorless bacterial plaque that constantly forms on everyone's teeth. By interacting with the bacteria in plaque, the sugars from the liquid form acids that eat away at the baby's tooth enamel. The teeth become so weakened by decay that they may break or become very difficult, if not impossible, to restore.

During the day, saliva can wash much of the sugar and acids from the mouth. But while sleeping, the child's saliva production decreases and that allows the acids to remain longer in contact with the teeth. It is the length of time that these acids are on the teeth that is the factor in decay.

To prevent this problem, a baby's mouth should be cleaned after each feeding with a clean washcloth or gauze pad. If a child must have a bedtime bottle, fill it with water.

Heavy Opposition Seen To Proposed Tax Hikes

HARTFORD (UPI)—It's clear the governor's $2.67 billion budget, especially the gasoline tax increase included in $128.3 million in added taxes, is going to run into more than partisan flack in the Legislature.

"The Democrats are dying!" Deputy Senate Minority Leader George Gunther, R-Stratford, chuckled after the governor Wednesday delivered her budget address to the Legislature. "This is their election year, no hers."

"It's just as awful as we thought it was," conceded Rep. Dorothy Goodwin, D-Mansfield. "Scotch tape and chewing gum is better than nothing, but that's what we're going to put it together with."

The Legislature is up for re-election at the end of the year. Many of the state senators and representatives have never had to worry about voting for a major tax increase—a liability on anyone's record.

Senate Majority Leader Joseph Lieberman, D-New Haven, a political veteran, noted in his comment about the budget that "public reaction" is to be expected, but a balanced budget "is our job and we will do it."

The consensus among Democrats interviewed by UPI was that at least one of the four tax changes the governor has proposed — the hike in the gas tax — will run into problems.

The gas tax would switch from a flat 11-cents per gallon to 11 percent, which would make the tax increase automatically every time the price of gas goes up. The tax would generate an estimated $21.8 million.

"It has a fatal flaw," said Rep. Irving Stulberg, D-New Haven, co-chairman of the Finance, Revenue and Bonding Committee and a long-time advocate of a state income tax. "The price of gas is so volatile upwards that it could be a windfall for the state. The public doesn't want a windfall for oil companies and they don't want one for the state."

Stulberg said a straight increase, such as 2-cents per gallon, would be more palatable to an inflation-burdened public. He also said he believed the Grasso administration had drastically under-estimated revenue from the new gas tax.

"I just think it's an absurd item to tax," said Rep. Joseph Harper, D-New Britain. "At $2.00-a-gallon, which isn't unlikely, you'll be paying 22-cents a gallon. Gas is in a price crisis already and we're compounding it."

Among other taxes the governor proposed was increasing the 7 percent sales tax to 7.5 percent, imposing a 1 percent tax on the gross revenues of oil companies doing business in Connecticut, and adding 7 percent to the state's share of the handle on exotic betting, such as high-wagering perfectas and trifectas at dog races and jai alai games.

Sen. Richard Scheller, D-Exeter, co-chairman of the Appropriations Committee, said the budget was "fair and balanced, considering the range of problems." But he said the Legislature might be able to make more reductions.

"We can look at a wide range of possible cuts in programs," said Scheller, whose committee decides how much money is spent where. Asked if further reductions could mean cutting some of the proposed tax increases, he said: "That's a possibility."

GOP, Dems Join Forces To Block Merit Selection

HARTFORD (UPI)—Democrats joined Republicans on the Judiciary Committee to put the controversial issue of merit selection of judges before the Legislature again this year.

The panel Wednesday voted 9-8 to hold public hearings on the proposal, over the opposition of committee chairmen Sen. Salvatore DePiano, D-Bridgeport, and Rep. Richard Tulisano, D-Rocky Hill.

The proposal would require a constitutional amendment. It would need three-quarters approval by both the House and Senate before it could go to a voter referendum next year.

A constitutional amendment does not go to the governor, who now nominates judges under a traditional political system, subject to approval of the Legislature.

The amendment was proposed by Rep. Richard Berman, R-New Haven, who was joined by five other Republicans and three Democrats, Sens. Clifford Leonard of Avon and William Curry Jr. of Farmington and Rep. Richard Lator of Hartford.

Eight Democrats voted against the proposal.

Tulisano said the amendment was "a perennial exercise" that had been given enough attention last session, when it was defeated after lengthy debate.

Tulisano said if approved, the merit selection of judges would become an "elitist" process conducted by a "closed club" of state lawyers.

Under the traditional political selection of judges, the governor has full legal discretion to nominate any lawyer for a judgeship. Nominations are almost always approved by the Judiciary Committee and the House and Senate.

The proposal would be similar to last session's bill that would establish a non-partisan panel of citizens and lawyers to screen persons who wish to be judges. The panel would then submit a list of five qualified lawyers from which the governor would be required to select one.

In other action, the committee voted to raise bills to equalize judges' salaries, increase the number of staff and law clerk positions, and raise appropriations for equipment for the judicial department.

EDC Approves Tomko Building

MANCHESTER — The Economic Development Commission approved today Tomko Electric's building plans for its parcel in Buckland Industrial Park.

The company plans an office and business building for a 2-acre parcel bordered by Chapel Road and Bolton Drive. The commission approved Tomko's plans with 16 modifications recommended by an EDC subcommittee.

The modifications include a 90 degree turn of building placement; the commission wanted to avoid having large doors face Chapel Road.

I-84 Connection May Hurt Wells

By PATRICK REILLY
Herald Reporter
EAST HARTFORD — A town official Wednesday using one of the town's four-wheel drive vehicles took state officials on a tour of the area to discuss a proposed Interstate 84 connector.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Department of the Interior has said it has other reservations about the connector and the proposed highway between Bolton and Providence, R.I.

The Interior Department already is operating the 1.4-mile connector on the grounds it will destroy a wetlands, is now arguing that the completion of the connector may contaminate wells that serve 15 percent of Manchester's population.

Frank Jodanis, Manchester water and sewer department administrator, said Wednesday Interior was referring to three wells adjacent to Interstate 84 near Main and South M. streets.

John J. Barry, town clerk and a town committee for fish and game protection, said he supports the building of the connector because he says it won't destroy the natural habitat of wildlife in the area.

Barry, who guided state Department of Transportation and environmental protection officials, said he showed them the proposed path of the connector from Silver Lane by Pratt and Whitney Aircraft to Manchester.

He said an environmental impact statement has been made but this was the first time state officials had seen the area firsthand.

Glass Bottles Still Collected
MANCHESTER — For the time being, Manchester will continue to collect bottles for recycling despite the new returnable bottle legislation which places a deposit on each bottle.

In East Hartford, the public works department has discontinued recycling the bottles because of the new law.

Alley Seeks Liquor OK
MANCHESTER — The Planning and Zoning Commission has been asked to change local liquor regulations so a bowling alley company can open a cocktail lounge in town.

Brunswick Corp., which owns the Brunswick Parkade Lane on West Middle Turnpike, has proposed that the bowling alleys be allowed to serve alcohol even if they are within 1,000 feet of another liquor outlet.

Zone Change Allows Land Sale by ECHS

MANCHESTER — A zone change by the Planning and Zoning Commission has apparently cleared the way for the sale of 20 additional acres by East Catholic High School.

Partners of Bezzini Brothers Realty have been interested in purchasing the property to build a low-income apartment complex. The partners delayed their purchase offer until the PZC granted a zone change at 3.5 acres of property they own on New State Road.

Whalers Triumph

It took better than two years for the Hartford Civic Center Coliseum to be rebuilt but in one night it was a red letter night all around. February 6, 1980, when National Hockey League made its official debut in Connecticut.

The Hartford Whalers made it a complete success with a 7-3 rout of the struggling Los Angeles Kings. The announced attendance was 14,448, falling 234 short of capacity, with a sprinkling of empty seats in just about every section, many of which were paid for but were labeled "no shows."

Ice Chips
Original Hartford Coliseum had a seating capacity of 10,547. Two Hall of Famers in the building, and on the ice for the pre-game ceremonies, were Gordie Howe and Bobby Orr.

Olympic Athletes Not 'Sacrificing'
BY MILTON RICHMAN
NEW YORK (UPI) — Everytime some of our athletes start talking about how much of a "sacrifice" they've made preparing themselves for the Olympics in Moscow and what it'll do to their careers if they fail to go because of a boycott, I get all choked up inside.

Politics at Olympic Games on Center Stage

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (UPI) — Politics, as common to an Olympics as the lighting of the torch, grabbed center stage at the Winter Games Wednesday.

With the opening of the Games less than a week away, the political turmoil which has surrounded both the Winter and Summer Games erupted again when the Taiwanese athletes were denied entrance to the village.

If that wasn't enough, International Olympic Committee President Lord Killanin fed some more fuel to the troubles surrounding the Summer Games when he reaffirmed his earlier position that the Games would be held in Moscow despite a threatened boycott by the United States.

"It would be very sad if the U.S. boycotted the Summer Games," said Killanin, "but moving or canceling the Moscow Games is unthinkable."

Killanin said the problem would be discussed fully at a session of the IOC here on Feb. 10-11. At the session, Killanin said the full views of the U.S. Olympic Committee would be presented.

"It is one of the most critical sessions of the IOC since the one in the Sorbonne in 1984, prior to the formation of the IOC," Killanin said. "It is critical because it could result in disunity."

Killanin said the IOC had a letter of agreement with the Moscow Organizing Committee.

"This has a moral, and to my mind, legal obligation," he said.

Taiwan also made it clear he felt government interference in sports was deplorable.

"I think it is very important, and I say this as a democrat with a little d, that we should not be dictated to by governments of where we should go to," he said.

The IOC's problems with Taiwan, which have been growing since the country split from mainland China in 1949 and began calling itself the Republic of China, reached a new height when an advance party of Taiwanese Olympic officials was denied entry to the Olympic village.

The officials could not get beyond the accreditation center. An IOC official, however, said two officials were offered accreditation marked

"Taipei" but refused it. Taipei, the capital of Taiwan, but the country refuses to be recognized by that name.

Taiwan has been barred from competing in the Winter Games at the IOC unless it changes its name, national anthem and flag.

The IOC voted by postal ballot in November to give the Taiwanese national Olympic Committee until Jan. 1 to agree to the changes of name and flag or else be suspended from the Olympic movement. At the same time, China was admitted as a member.

Taiwan took the IOC to court at its headquarters in Lausanne, Switzerland, in order to block the move. It lost the case and a subsequent appeal.

Taiwan also tried to have the entire Winter Olympics stopped in a suit filed in a local court in Pittsburgh, N.Y., but a judge ruled that he did not have jurisdiction to take such action. The case forces the Lake Placid organizers to accept Taiwanese athletes as competitors is still pending, however.

Michael Lee, secretary general of the Republic of China national Olympic Committee, said that neither is Olympic committee nor any other national Olympic committee had the power to change a country's name, flag or national emblem.

"The Republic of China Olympic Committee believes that these conditions violate the IOC's own charter and that they discriminate unfairly against Republic of China athletes in violation of U.S. law," Lee said.

"Accordingly, to guarantee participation for our athletes on an equal footing with athletes from other nations, lawsuits have been brought against the IOC in Switzerland and against the Lake Placid 1980 Olympic Games incorporated in New York State.

Listless Celts Come To Life

BOSTON (UPI) — Bill Fitch had just seen his Boston Celtics awaken after a listless first half and blow the Philadelphia 76ers out of Boston Garden with an 82-point second half.

What it was like, based on a scale of 1 to 10, the coach was asked.

"I gotta say it was a Bo Derek," Fitch said after the Celtics beat the Sixers 129-110 Wednesday night to move two games ahead of Philadelphia in the Atlantic Division.

"I'd like to see another 28 games like that," he said. "We did a fantastic job. It was the finest effort in any situation this season. Never in my wildest dreams did I expect the effort and execution to come the way it did. It was a pleasure to watch."

The Celtics had scored 16 points in the second quarter to fall behind 59-47 at halftime. The Sixers, led by the redoubtable Julius Erving, were running the fast break as if they had a patent on it.

But the Celtics, behind the playmaking of Nate Archibald, the shooting of Larry Bird, a full court press and what Fitch termed "nearly flawless defense," erased a 14-point Sixers lead to take an 82-69 lead after three quarters.

"It was like we're in our first gear and they were in fifth gear," said Fitch. "We didn't get going until we were the first time this season that we've been bothered by pressure in the back court."

The Sixers rallied to tie the game at 90-90 early in the fourth period, but then Archibald, who had all his 18 points in the second half, canned a 20-footer, added a second down the lane and set up Cedric Maxwell for a layup to give the Celtics a 96-92 lead. Larry Bird added eight of his 32 points in the next four minutes and another Archibald hoop gave the Celtics an insurmountable 116-94 lead with 3:15 to play.

"Our strategy in the second half was to press and try to cut down their running game," said Rick Robey, who had 22 points in another sterling effort replacing the injured Dave Cowens. "This was an excellent game for us, a good 19-man effort. That's what we need with Dave out and (Peter) Maravich hurt."

The Celtics are 6-1 without Cowens, who will miss at least the next four games. Maravich was activated Wednesday, but did not dress and will be out for another week.

Archibald, who had 11 assists in leading Boston's second-half surge, had 11 points in the third quarter to go with 11 of Maxwell's 19 and 10 from Bird. The tiny guards also found his shooting touch, hitting on 4-of-5 in the second half.

"I was just concentrating on running the plays and getting the guys involved in the offense. We had to apply pressure and that's what we did. It was a big win for us," Archibald said.

Erving finished with a game-high 36 points along with 10 rebounds and five assists. Maurice Cheeks added 20 for the losers and Steve Mix 14.

"I thought their court press would open up the floor but we tried to execute and it didn't pan out," Erving said. "We missed the open shot and didn't run during the game. They just played better than we did."

Sophomore Sparks Louisville Victory

By United Press International

Darrell Griffith may have become the first 2,000-point scorer in Louisville history Wednesday night, but the third-ranked Cardinals' 89-73 victory over Cincinnati belonged to sophomore overtime to give Kansas State, 17-4, its Big Eight win.

Griffith scored 20 points and started a game-breaking streak early in the second half to carry Texas A&M, 18-5, to its Southwest Conference victory over SMU.

Elsewhere, Charles "Hawkeye" Whitney scored 13 points to lead North Carolina State to a 60-49 ACC triumph over Georgia Tech. Reggie Johnson scored in 43 points to power Tennessee to a 100-76 SEC romp of Florida; Terry Lewis scored 18 points to help Mississippi State to a 62-56 SEC triumph over Georgia; and Larry Nance and Horace Wyatt combined for 41 points as Clemson took an 86-69 ACC victory over Wake Forest.

In other games it was Hofstra 50, Temple 49; Duquesne 49, West Virginia 38; Oklahoma State 76, Oklahoma 67; Georgetown 81, Seton Hall 67; Villanova 74, George Washington 74; LaSalle 84, Rhode Island 76; Texas 90, Texas Christian 62; Toledo 75, Ohio University 62; and Vanderbilt 17, Auburn 7.

Bob Gibson Has New Line

NEW YORK (UPI) — What's this, Bob Gibson waiting on tables and washing dishes?

Yep, that's right.

Before you begin running any kind of benefit for him, though, you should know he doesn't consider these jobs beneath him at all because the place he's doing them in is the flourishing restaurant he owns.

He also happens to be chairman of the Community Bank of Nebraska, one of the healthiest financial structures in Middle America.

But what is the boss supposed to do when some of the employees in his restaurant call in sick and he finds himself short-handed?

"Somebody's got to do it," says the St. Louis Cardinals' former pitching ace, who has 25 people dishing out all the salads, steaks, sandwiches and chili he sells at Bob Gibson's Sports and Sustenance located in downtown Omaha, Neb.

Nobody could ever accuse him of calling in sick during his 17 seasons with the Cardinals simply because he didn't feel like showing up for work. Gibson set a major-league record by pitching in 43 consecutive games from 1968 to 1975.

Next winter, Bob Gibson becomes eligible for Baseball's Hall of Fame and I can't conceive anybody who has ever seen him pitch not voting for him. Jan Marichal and Harmon Killebrew also come up for election and they should get in, too.

"I've never really thought about the Hall of Fame one way or another," Gibson says. "What did puzzle me is how some of the writers did not vote for Willie Mays. I can't understand that."

Next winter, Gibson couldn't understand that, either. Gibson says Marichal was the best pitcher he ever saw and Hank Aaron and Billy Williams were the best hitters he ever saw. "I saw Hank Aaron was the best right-handed hitter I ever saw years before he broke that home run record, and as for Billy Williams, he hurt me more than anyone else."

Seattle Has Honor Of Baseball Opener

The American League's 80th season will open on Wednesday night, April 9 when the Seattle Mariners host the Toronto Blue Jays. The early Kingdome opener marks the fourth consecutive season that Seattle has hosted the first A.L. game of the campaign, and the first time the league's two expansion clubs have played the inaugural.

The American League again is section at their expanded Anaheim Stadium home on Friday night, April 11th with the Cleveland Indians.

The second set of home openers get under way on Monday afternoon, April 14th when the Boston Red Sox host the Detroit Tigers and Toronto enters Milwaukee. The Orioles raise their pennant in opening ceremonies on Tuesday afternoon, the 15th when the K.C. Royals visit Baltimore. The Yankees and Detroit Tigers have their inaugurations on Friday afternoon, April 18th with the Blue Jays at Cleveland Stadium. The Minnesota Twins get things under way at home on Tuesday afternoon, April 22nd, with the Angels supplying the opposition.

A record 1,109 "openings" — two more than in 1979 — will be played, including 794 night games, also a record high. Baltimore, Boston, California and Kansas City have scheduled 81 openers with no doubleheaders. The Cleveland Indians, with the largest seating capacity in baseball, and the Oakland A's have scheduled five doubleheaders.

The All-Star Game break will occur July 7, 8 and 9 with this year's classic being held at Dodger Stadium in Kansas City. The Western Division Champ California Angels swing into action at their expanded Anaheim Stadium home on Friday night, April 11th with the Cleveland Indians.

Marathon Runs Said Healthful

CHICAGO (UPI) — Marathon runners may be getting extra protection from heart disease because of their running, researchers report in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Two Framingham, Mass., doctors studied 50 long-distance runners — 49 men and a woman — and found the ratio of high-density lipoprotein to cholesterol among the runners was significantly higher than that of the control group.

That means, basically, that the runners possessed more of the substance the body needs to break up and eliminate cholesterol, which, if unchecked, can cause hardening of the arteries and heart disease.

High density lipoproteins, previous research has indicated, removed cholesterol from body cells and carries it to the liver to be broken down and eliminated. So the amount of HDLs in proportion to cholesterol is a significant factor in reducing the risks of coronary artery disease.

The researchers — Dr. Marvin M. Adner of Framingham Union Hospital and Dr. William P. Castelli of the Framingham Heart Disease Epidemiology Study — also found runners had lower pulse rates and relative weights than non-runners.

Adner and Castelli said the running could be responsible for the heightened HDL-cholesterol ratios and the protection from heart disease. But, they added, they cannot be sure. Other factors, they said, also could heighten the ratio and provide protection.

The hypothesis that exercise elevates HDL-cholesterol levels, resulting in protection from coronary artery disease is an attractive, well-publicized theory, they said. "Undoubtedly, it is an important motivating factor for those millions of Americans who have taken up distance running."

But, they added, "Although reasonable, this hypothesis remains unproved."

This is the thrill-a-second event. It retains a rare mystique for most fans in this country because few get to see it in person. The bob-run built on Mt. Van Hoevenberg outside Lake Placid is the only one in the Western Hemisphere.

Americans produced dramatic results in the early days of the Olympic competition, winning gold medals in 1928, 1952, 1956 and 1968. But that was it.

In the ensuing Olympics, the Germans have taken over the dominating role in the sport. And the United States has not won a medal in 24 years.

There is an interesting entrant on the American team this year. Willie Davoren, one of the great hurdlers in history, has become a pusher on the four-man sled.

This follows the lead of East Germany in transforming Meinhard Hammer, a former hurdler, into one of the world's leading sleds to victory in '76.

Predictions

TWO-MAN SLED: 1. Switzerland (Eric Schaefer, Peter Benz); 2. East Germany (Meinhard Hammer); 3. West Germany (Stephan Gaiserler).

FOUR-MAN SLED: 1. East Germany (Meinhard Hammer); 2. Austria (Walter DelleKarth); 3. West Germany (Stephan Gaiserler).

Lanier Nervous In Bucks' Debut

By MARK FRIEDMAN

UPI Sports Writer

After all those years in the NBA, Bob Lanier felt just like a nervous rookie again.

"I've got to tell you how nervous I was," the big center said Wednesday night after scoring 14 points in his debut with Milwaukee. It was a 21-foot jumper by Brian Winters at the buzzer that lifted the Bucks to a 110-109 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

"I looked up and I swore that last shot by Winters did 10 points," Lanier said. "I thought it hit the bottom of the net but when I saw the official signal for two, I thought it must be a dream. I was glad because I fouled the guy at the other end and I thought, 'Oh no, now I'm going to be the goat in my first game here.'"

Lanier, who played for the Detroit Pistons Monday, never got to wear the horns. He obtained more than half the game after a six-week absence due to a broken finger.

"We're all psyched to make the playoffs now," said Winters. "We were hoping to make the playoffs before but with Bob here now, we're pretty confident."

In other games, Boston downed Philadelphia 129-110. Houston edged New Jersey 151-141. Phoenix ripped Kansas City 97-99. Denver outscored Chicago 122-111 and Golden State ripped San Diego 117-92.

Rockets 115, Nets 114.

Steal and Layup Spells MCC Loss

John Jones' steal and layup with five seconds remaining lifted Mattatuck Community College past Manchester Community College, 68-67, in CCCAA basketball action last night at East Catholic High.

Mattatuck goes to 9-4 in conference play, 14-4 overall while the setback drops the Cougars to 6-4 in CCCAA and 12-7 overall.

MCC hits the hardwood again Saturday night against Tunxis Community College at 8 o'clock in Farmington.

The visitors had a 36-30 lead at the half with Jones, former standout at St. Thomas Aquinas, swiped the rebound and went in for a game-winning bucket. Lindsay James' desperation halfcourt bomb bounced off the rim.

Gonzalez had a game-high 26 points and Brown added 17 for Mattatuck. Mattatuck led 16 points and 10 rebounds to lead MCC. Peter Murphy and Larry Hayden added 11 tallies apiece for the Cougars.

Mattatuck (68) — Brazzinski 1-2, Brown 1-17, Gonzalez 12-28, Jones 2-4, Perkins 1-2, Gleason 1-2, Moraes 1-2, Johnson 1-3, Shelton 1-2, White 3-2. Totals 61-68.

MCC (67) — Shealey 3-9, Frederik 4-16, Marino 3-6, Murphy 3-11, Lile 2-1, James 3-6, Hayden 5-11. Totals 27-67.

Reserve guard Willie Sims hit two free throws with four seconds left in overtime to give LSU its SEC triumph over Alabama. LSU built an 11-point halftime lead and then recovered after a second-half comeback by the Tide. Durand Macklin led LSU with 20 points.

Kelly Tripucka, returning from a four-game absence because of a back injury, and Orlando Waintride scored 15 points apiece to pace Notre Dame, 16-3.

Curtis Berry scored 20 points to give Missouri, 17-4, its Big Eight triumph over Iowa State. The Tigers bolted to a 43-30 halftime margin and held off a Cyclone rally in the second half.

Jari Willis hit a 10-foot jumper from the baseline with five seconds left for the Cougars.

Jeff Layman Scores 20 Points

Jeff Layman scored 20 points and Ralph Sampson added 20 — 16 in the second half — to lead Virginia, 17-4 overall and 6-4 in the conference. He fired five crucial free throws in the last two minutes to end a three-game losing streak. Mike Ginnelli led the Blue Devils, 17-5 and 5-5 in the league, with 24 points.

In other games involving Top 20 teams, No. 6 Kentucky defeated Mississippi State, 77-72. No. 1 Louisiana State got past Alabama 68-66 in overtime, ninth-ranked Notre Dame clobered Manhattan 93-49, No. 15 Missouri trimmed Iowa State 84-70, No. 19 Kansas State edged Colorado 62-61 in overtime, and No. 20 Texas A&M beat SMU 67-56.

Kyle Macy scored 28 points and Kentucky, 20-4, broke open a close game with 14 straight points shortly after halftime to post its Southeastern Conference victory. Ole Miss had closed the gap to 25-22 early in the second half when Macy started the Wildcats' run.

Reserve guard Willie Sims hit two free throws with four seconds left in overtime to give LSU its SEC triumph over Alabama. LSU built an 11-point halftime lead and then recovered after a second-half comeback by the Tide. Durand Macklin led LSU with 20 points.

SKI YOU CAN DO IT

SAVE YOUR ENERGY

Some skiers swing their upper bodies around a lot. When the swinging becomes excessive, it causes real problems. This excessive upper body motion is wasted energy. Besides interfering with your effectiveness in turns, it also makes you unnecessarily tired.

Most skiers who swing their upper bodies also ski with their feet tightly together. Therefore, the sooner you check your upper body swing is quite simple. Ski with your feet a comfortable distance apart about hip width. This wider stance will give your legs greater turning power so that you can change direction without thrashing your upper body around. Turn with your feet, quit your upper body — and conserve energy.

XIII OLYMPIC WINTER GAMES LAKE PLACID 1980

This is the thrill-a-second event. It retains a rare mystique for most fans in this country because few get to see it in person. The bob-run built on Mt. Van Hoevenberg outside Lake Placid is the only one in the Western Hemisphere.

Americans produced dramatic results in the early days of the Olympic competition, winning gold medals in 1928, 1952, 1956 and 1968. But that was it.

In the ensuing Olympics, the Germans have taken over the dominating role in the sport. And the United States has not won a medal in 24 years.

There is an interesting entrant on the American team this year. Willie Davoren, one of the great hurdlers in history, has become a pusher on the four-man sled.

This follows the lead of East Germany in transforming Meinhard Hammer, a former hurdler, into one of the world's leading sleds to victory in '76.

Predictions

TWO-MAN SLED: 1. Switzerland (Eric Schaefer, Peter Benz); 2. East Germany (Meinhard Hammer); 3. West Germany (Stephan Gaiserler).

FOUR-MAN SLED: 1. East Germany (Meinhard Hammer); 2. Austria (Walter DelleKarth); 3. West Germany (Stephan Gaiserler).

Gardening

Sprouts Pep Up Salads And Are Easy to Grow

By FRANK ATWOOD

The first seeds I saw that were meant for salad sprouts were displayed in a seed rack at a garden center. The packet was a large one, holding three and one-half ounces. It was made of metal foil, assurance to the buyer that these seeds had been protected from drying out.

The name across the packet, in bold, black letters, was "Salad Sprouts Mixture." The price of 89 cents I bought one to try.

I followed the directions, putting a tablespoonful of seed in a clean quart jar, filling the jar two-thirds full of warm water and adding a square of clean cheesecloth to cover the mouth of the jar, holding the cloth in place with a rubber band.

Then, as instructed, I shook the seeds and water in the jar for what I estimated to be one minute and let the water drain away. Then I filled the jar again two-thirds full of warm water, gave it another shaking and let the water drain away again.

I was instructed to repeat this exercise with more warm water each morning, and again in the evening, leaving the jar between shakings on its side.

The seeds sprouted, as promised, in about four days. I then took six days, for good measure, then divided the cupful of sprouts between two garden salads, chopped lettuce on the bottom and sprouts on top, with a little salad dressing, for my wife and myself.

Mostly Beans

The curly white sprouts and the water-soaked seeds from which they grew were an interesting addition to our salads, tender and crunchy at the same time.

What were we eating? Mostly beans. Listed on the packet were mung beans, soybeans and azuki beans, all on the small side, as beans go, and all of Oriental origin. There was one other seed, fenugreek, an herb, sometimes called Greek hay or Greek grass.

The seed company is Jonathan Green & Sons of Farmington, N.J., and Mr. Green's picture shows an elderly gentleman with white hair and white Santa Claus beard. He says his sprouts are loaded with vitamins, minerals and other good things. Obviously they are organic.

After I had made my experimental purchase, I received in my mail at The Herald a generous packet of mung bean seed from the W. Albee Burpee Company of Warminster, Pa. "A small bean used primarily for making nutritious sprouts," it said on the packet. "Grow indoors for year round use in sandwiches, salads and Oriental dishes."

The Burpee people know that I write a column on gardening in this newspaper, and they send me free seeds from time to time. These are the first I've had for sprouting and the gift packet makes me suppose that the Burpee people think they would like to encourage. I have started the mung beans in another quart jar and sprouts are showing.

The Burpees, as you might expect, tell me also that I can keep the beans until spring, plant them outdoors, and harvest a new crop in the fall. The bush-type beans will turn from green to black when they are ripe.

Mr. Green, along with his seeds and the picture of his whiskers, sent a leaflet containing recipes using sprouts. They are good, he says, with sandwiches, and soups, as well as salads.

On the trail of sprouts I also visited a health food store in Manchester and came away with packets of two other kinds of seeds. One is alfalfa, a very small seed when compared to any of the beans, said to make tasty and delicate sprouts. The other seed, which I am quite sure will yield a recognizable taste, is cabbage.

ABC Edges Out CBS

NEW YORK (UPI) — ABC was back in the lead in the weekly network ratings race, edging out CBS, with NBC improving but still in the cellar.

The season-to-date ratings remain an ABC-CBS dead heat, with the Winter Olympics that begin on ABC Feb. 12 expected to be the tie-breaker.

CBS lost the week to ABC by default — and by poor choice of movies. While CBS could boast six of the top 10 shows, it also was stuck with three movies that were ratings disasters — "Driver," "Marathon" and a repeat of the theatrical horror show, "Carrie."

ABC not only won first place, but its new "Teneped and Brown Shoe" tied for 14th on a list of 67 Nielsen-rated programs for the week ending Feb. 3, outrating CBS's usually winning combination of "Archie Bunker's Place" and "One Day At A Time."

The network's "Good Time Girls," in its snug spot between "Happy Days" and "Three's Company," continued to show well. So did CBS's "House Calls," which allows Wayne Rogers to follow his old "M-A-S-H" buddies on Monday nights. "House Calls" also followed "M-A-S-H" in the top 10 where the two shows placed 7th and 8th. CBS's new "Knots Landing" fared nicely, too.

But the bad news outweighed the good ratings for new shows, and among the bottom 10 regularly scheduled shows, reading from the cellar up, were "Prime Time Saturday" (NBC), "Stone" (ABC), "Skag" (NBC), "One In A Million" (ABC), "The Chisholms" (CBS), and "B.A.D. Cats" (ABC).

Also in the cellar were two former ABC high riders that apparently have been thrown by having their time slots switched — "Laverne & Shirley" and "The Ropers."

For NBC, the best news was seeing "Real People" rank in the top 10, along with its old favorite, "Little House on the Prairie," while "Different Strokes" and "CHiPs" were in the top 20.

The first half of NBC's Big Hope USO retrospective finished in the middle of the ratings chart — 37th place — but network research estimates at least some of the show was watched by 60 million viewers.

Episodes 2 and 3 of NBC's "Martin Chronicles" also fared respectably — the first segment, included in the previous week's Nielsen ratings, came in 39th and was watched by 27 percent of those with their sets on in that time period.

The second and best segment ranked 33rd in the week just past, with a 32 percent share of the audience, while the finale ranked 42nd, with a 28 percent share.

Council Awaiting Report On Proposed Land Swap

VERNON — Although the Town Council has updated information on the proposed three-way land swap between the town, Rockville General Hospital, and the Rockville Baptist Church, the council won't take any action until it receives a report from the Planning Commission.

The additional information was given to the council Monday night by Town Planner George Russell. The information had been requested by the council members who wanted to know what impact the land swap would have.

The land the town owns, on which the church wants to build a new building, is located to the rear of the Vernon Center Middle School. The land the hospital owns is adjacent to Henry Park, and the church land and building are near the hospital. The hospital would like it for additional parking facilities.

Church officials have indicated they would be willing to move and sell the property to Henry Park only if a desirable site for a new church can be found. In order to accomplish this, the hospital trustees would be willing to convey, to the town, a parcel of land of some 10 acres in the area of Henry Park. The parcel presently contains two Little League ball fields which the town uses. The town opens up its parcel in back of the school for use as community gardens during the summer months.

Russell said the gardens could be relocated to the rear of the Ecker farm property and the acquisition of the land adjacent to Henry Park would assure that the ball fields would be available for recreation as long as the town wished.

"The lack of off-street parking in Rockville is heard over and over again. The acquisition of the church property for this use would benefit the hospital only. However, I would like to see some arrangement worked out whereby some of the proposed parking could be utilized by non-hospital patrons," Russell said.

He said the town has applied for Community Development grant money to add some public off-street parking in this area.

Russell cautioned the council that if the land transfers were to take place that serious consideration should be given to the closing of the portion of Village Street which runs between the hospital and the church.

He said this suggestion was made by Attorney Robert DuBois, acting as the hospital's legal counsel. The hospital, to improve traffic circulation in the area, he said, this matter should be turned over to the Traffic Authority for consideration. However, Russell said if this is done then pedestrian access to Union Street should be maintained.

Again referring to the possible closing of a portion of the street, Russell said Community Development money will be used this coming summer to put sidewalks the entire length of Village Street. He said, "It would be somewhat ludicrous to put in new sidewalks on a street which will be closed, thus, an early decision on this matter should be reached."

Russell also said it should be determined if the church is of "historical significance," and if it is, the entire land swap may become academic, especially if the building is placed on or nominated to, the historic register.

Council Revises Vote On Agency Designation

VERNON — A resolution passed at the Jan. 7 meeting of the Town Council designating the Windham Area Community Action Program as the town's anti-poverty agency, had to be rescinded Monday night because federal attorneys for the Community Services Administration said it doesn't meet program requirements.

The resolution paved the way for the Rockham Valley Community Services Council and WACAP to sign a contract because of financial problems the Rockham Valley agency is experiencing.

The problems with money of the Rockham Valley agency, which has been handling all of the social service programs, made it no longer possible for the agency to obtain the resources to adequately operate the programs.

After rescinding the original motion which the federal attorneys didn't approve because it contained several conditions stipulated by the council, council members discussed the matter at length before finally passing a revised resolution that simply designates WACAP as the town's anti-poverty agency. This was done after the council was told by officials from both agencies that the town can get out of the contract, if it should wish to, by giving 30 days' notice.

If the resolution wasn't passed, the Rockham Valley agency would cease to exist or could continue but with substantially more funding from the towns it serves, Vernon, Ellington and Tolland.

The provisions the original resolution carried were — to approve the contract for one year, that either party could terminate the contract by giving the other party 90 days' notice, and that Vernon's social service agencies should be represented on the WACAP Board of Directors.

Attorney Jerome Levine acting for Rockham Valley cautioned the council that time was of the essence because of the precarious financial position of the agency.

The council received a communication from social services coordinator David Cayer reporting that the town will be reimbursed $4,338 for information and referral services. "The reimbursement will come from the state under a Title XX grant," Cayer also reported that some 50 volunteers had participated in a weatherization program for low-income homeowners. "To my knowledge," Cayer said, "Coventry is the only community to address this need through the use of volunteers."

Joining in the volunteer activities were members of the Jaycees, Lions Club, Knights of Columbus, Mothers Club, and residents and town employees. Of 25 homes on the list, 17 were worked on, Cayer said.

The council also received notice of a lawsuit filed against Coventry by Windham Community Memorial Hospital. The suit alleges the town has failed to pay almost $3,000 in hospital expenses for patients receiving town assistance. Board of Welfare Chairman Virginia Dehl submitted a letter to the council explaining the town's difficulties in settling the delinquent accounts.

HEBRON — Due to the skyrocketing cost of fuel, the Student-Faculty Senate at Falmouth High School has passed legislation on energy conservation. One of the conservation measures agreed on was the closing of the outdoor student smoking lounges during the winter months.

A recent all-school hearing allowed students and faculty members to present their views on conservation and following the hearing the senate was presented with a series of eight recommendations.

Besides the recommendation to close the outdoor student lounges, the hearing also recommended closing all entrances other than the main office entrance, until the end of the school day.

Connolly Blasts Feds For CETA Regulations

COVENTRY — Town Manager Frank Connolly told the Town Council that federal CETA (Comprehensive Employment and Training Act) program, has become very difficult to work with. "The new federal regulations," he charged, "as well as changing directives on filling out the applications, have made this program almost untenable."

Connolly said the original 14 positions provided by CETA funds have dwindled down to three full-time posts and one part-time job.

Presently a custodian is provided to the Board of Education for another 10 months, a library assistant will be available for 10 to 12 months, a drafting-engineering aide will work for 4 to 6 months, and a floating clerk will serve the town hall for 4 to 12 months.

The manager reported that $27,485 was available under a Title II grant, and another $7,147 would be given to the town under Title VI. "The bouncing up and down of the grant figures has required a complete change in the program each time," he said. Congress drastically cut the CETA budget last year after numerous instances of misappropriation of funds were uncovered across the country.

In another council business the group resolved to hold the mill rate down to the present 68.5 mills on the recommendation of Finance Committee Chairman Roy McLain. Democrat Joyce Carilli opposed the Republican-sponsored measure, arguing that it would hamstring the town manager, who is responsible for bringing an annual budget proposal before the council.

The council appointed Francis Martling to the Insurance Advisory Committee to replace resigning member Richard Cromie. Jane Coveil was reappointed to the Conservation Commission, and Robert La Wilmot and Robert Elwell were endorsed for the Parks and Recreation Commission.

'Hire-a-Kid' Needs Jobs

SOUTH WINDSOR — The "Hire-a-Kid" program sponsored by the South Windsor Youth Services Bureau, is in need of people in the community who can employ young people ages 13 through 18.

"Hire-a-Kid" is a job-matching service that helps match the young people to available jobs in town. There are more than 200 young people registered in the program each actively seeking employment for after-school hours, holidays and during school vacations.

They can be hired to do such things as shovel snow, rake leaves, do light housekeeping, baby-sitting, moving furniture, do typing, or most any other odd job.

Employees who have a job to offer a young person, or having questions about the program, should call the Youth Services Bureau on weekdays, 644-0875.

Young people wishing to fill out an application form to do odd jobs, may do so by coming to Room 12 at the Wapping Community Center.

Two Area Officers To Lead Law Group

HARTFORD — A Vernon police officer and a Glastonbury police officer have been elected to positions on the Connecticut Law Enforcement Crime Prevention Association. The association has played a leading role in advancing education and awareness in crime prevention in the state.

William E. Yeiz Jr. of the Vernon department was elected vice president and Howard Charbonneau of the Glastonbury department was elected to the Board of Directors.

Officers from other departments around the state were elected to other positions with Richard Rose of New Haven as president.

The association is presently planning an advanced alarm school for crime prevention officers and the Vernon department has been asked to participate in the upcoming National Convention for Community Relations Officers which will be held in May in Hartford.

Yeiz said the association feels that, as a unified body, it can effectively increase crime prevention awareness and education in the state.

That the Superdome, which claims the world's largest multi-purpose stadium and convention center, is in New Orleans.

COOKING TIP

Create Magnificent Dishes With Easy-To-Use Gravy

Even if a standing-rib of beef is not in the budget, rich and tasty French-American Beef Gravy can provide flavor and mincesters for your main dish. This recipe uses only a pound and a half of beef for six people.

BEef ROULADES

- 1 pound thin-sliced round steak (1 1/2" thick)
- 1 tablespoon mustard
- 1 small chili pickle, cut in 1/2" lengths
- 1 tablespoon shortening
- 1 can (10 1/2 oz) French-American Beef Gravy
- 3 medium carrots, cut in 1" pieces
- 1 cup chopped celery

Cut meat into 6 pieces (about 6" x 4") and spread each with 1/2 tsp mustard and place a pickle half on each piece of meat. Roll up; tuck in ends. Place with vegetables or
