They also paid depositors $6 million in interest - another record

A long series of innovations in three major areas, mortgages, savings and offices were responsible for Heritage's record assets. Last year alone. Heritage issued over $25 million in mortgages, more than any previous year. They were also the first savings and loan in the area to offer graduated payment mortgages. Since their introduction in October, 1978, they have helped many young people buy homes at payments they can afford. Heritage has enthusiastically supported the CHFA. Heritage's record $6 million interest paid to depositors, represents an increase of 21% over the previous year. This increase is the result of higher savings interest rates and the growing number of depositors at Heritage. The generally rising rates on 6 month certificates and the 4 year treasury certificates gave depositors greater returns last year. And in the current fiscal year, we re alread

Heritage completed planning for three new offices last year. The first just opened on January 21 this year inside the Highland Park Market on Highland Street in Manchester The second, an office in South Windsor, awaits approval by the Connecticut Banking Department. In recent years, Heritage has added other facilities, remodeled its Coventry office and completed a $1 million expansion

Long Range Plan
Last year. Heritage developed a Long Range Plan for the expansion of the association's capital base. With this additional capital, an increase in deposits loans and offices can be made to keep pace with the community's growth Also part of the Long Range Plan, the Board voted in July to apply for permission o convert Heritage Savings from a mutual form of ownership to one of stock ownership. That application is now before supervisory authorities at the Connecticut State Banking Department and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in Washington, D.C. The conversion procedure is described in a Manchester erald article reprinted on this page.

In the message to members, Hale looked to the future stating. As we embark upon the 1980s. Heritage Savings is in excellent financial health. We are fully prepared to continue our commitment of innovative banking for the communities of central and eastern Connecticut

Restored History

When the Manchester Historical Society affixed its dated home plaque "1830" at 404 North Main Street, it marked a home which is significant for two reasons First, because it is a community landmark that dates from 1830 or earlier, and second, because it is the first property in town approved under a new zoning provision for apartments on small land parcels he house, in advanced disrepair, was purchased earlier this year by Peterman Realty and Building Company of Manchester with financing by Heritage Savings and Loan Association. Peterman gutted the building and rebuilt it retaining much of the original structural and wood work. The result is a 7 unit apartment building

Until recently. Manchester's zoning laws made developing apartments on small arcels impossible because side line criteria had to be met Recently, the town set up a special category eliminating some of these requirements for parcels of ess than 2.5 acres. The Peterman property is the first to be developed under The restoration of the Buckland home is important for the community for two reasons. The home can now provide needed housing for the town. By rehabilitating the home into economical apartments, it can supply more residents with housing than keeping it as a family unit. Second, the Buckland home is a istorical landmark. It was built before the first recorded deeds. As a matter of fact, the first owner listed in town records was Aaron Buckland, whose name was given to the Buckland section of town. "If properties like the Buckland home are lost now, they'll never be recovered and one day we'll all regret it." stated William Hale President of Heritage Savings, which financed-the project. In the restoration process Peterman found many interesting features of the old home. An original two-sided fireplace with a wood burning stove on one side and an open fireplace on the other was 6:scovered and later stored. The home still ha the original stoop of redstone, the original oak door-step and 8 inch chestnut beam onstruction. It is believed that the redstone came from the Manchester quarr An arched fan window for ventilation in the attic adds to the character of the

While many original features were restored, the latest apartment convenies were provided. New radiant ceiling heating was installed providing more heat at lower thermostat settings. Each apartment has air conditioning and individual thermostats for further comfort. All the apartments have one bedroom, living room, kitchen, bath and walk-in closet. The rehabilitation of older buildings like the Buckland house help to restore our important past. Heritage Savings and Peterman Realty and Building made it

Third Moneymarket Opens With Free Shopping Spree

Heritage Savings gave two lucky people the chance to get back at inflation. To announce the grand opening of the Heritage Moneymarket branch inside Highland Park Market on Highland St., they gave away two five minute shopping sprees. Two winners were chosen from hundreds of entries in the drawing. Mrs. Stepanie Judenis of 65 Hickory Drive, Hebron, packed $379.01 into her foodbasket and Miss Deborah Reinhorn of Manchester stuffed food worth $519.86 into hers. The Highland Park Branch is the third Moneymarket Heritage Savings has opened. They pioneered the concept of supermarket banking in Connecticut with Aoneymarket I in Franks Supermarket (now Crispino's) on East Middle Turnpike in Manchester and in 1978, opened the second in the Food Mart also on East Middle Trunpike in the Manchester Parkade. These branches were designed to offer shoppers total banking convenience. The consumer can now bank and shop in the same place. These branches keep approximately the same hours as the supermarkets giving the shopper the best possible service and saving them valuable exploring "Energy and the Way We Live." In this article Norman Metzger, author of "Energy: The Continuing Crisis," discusses the social and political background of the petroleum crisis of the 70s. This series, written for Courses by Newspaper, a program of University Extension, University of California, San Diego, was funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, with supplemental funding from the National Science Foundation. By Norman Metzger

Prelude to a Petroleum Crisis

The energy crisis is really a crisis of oil and secondarily one of natural gas. These two fuels - which are cleanburning, easy to transport, and adaptable to many uses provide three-quarters of our energy needs today.

To understand our present predicament we must understand how we came to be so heavily dependent on oil and natural gas. Both are 20th century fuels. Oil rose from barely measurable use around 1900 to a quarter share of total U.S. energy consumption in 1930 and almost half in 1970. Natural gas consumption quadrupled between 1930 and

Their spectacular growth has technical, political, and social roots. Repeating the 19th century pattern for coal, we created new technologies that could take advantage of the unique properties of these fuels. The internal combustion engine is the most spectacular example.

We also found ways to move local fuels across the nation. Natural gas began to flow from the Southwest to the Midwest and East as the "Big Inch." "Little Inch" and other World War II pipelines built to transport petroleum across the country were turned over to the natural gas industry. Improved seamless welded pipelines made transporting gas under high pressure possible, creating new markets and greater demand.

Political and Social Changes

Technological changes moved in tandem with political and social transformations that assumed energy would be available everywhere, in the form needed, and cheaplyas indeed it was

New Energy Demands

Common to all these changes was a heightened demand for energy. In the postwar decades, the amount of energy sed by each person in the United States rose steadily in dicating the increasingly higher energy content of the goods and services produced

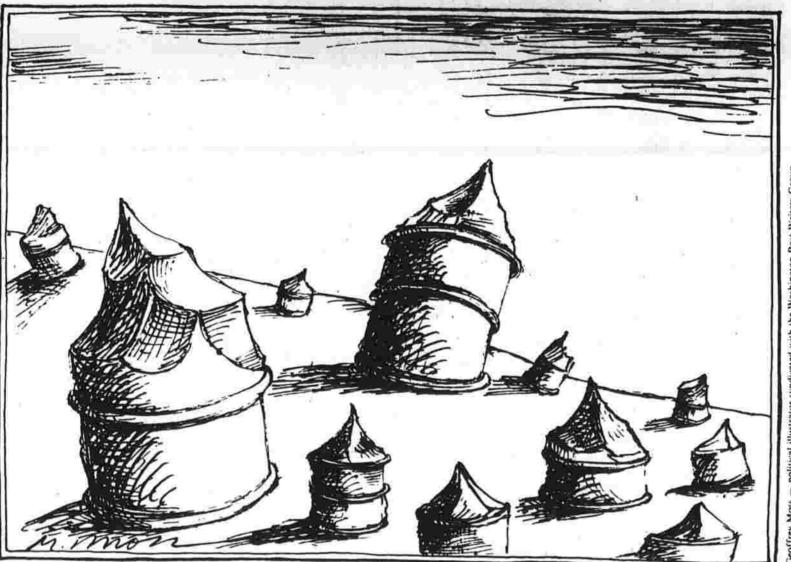

These exuberant needs for energy were met by oil and gas; indeed, these two fuels were vital to the growth of the American economy, where Gross National Product almost quintupled between 1930 and 1977. The enormous self-confidence that growth engendered, and vast discoveries in Texas, Louisiana, even Alaska, eased any anxieties about wedding ourselves almost exclusively to two finite fuels.

The internal combustion engine developed further, with horsepower a better sales lure than gas mileage; the Interstate Highway system was built on the premise of cheap, ubiquitous gasoline. Air traffic, prop to jet, grew spectacularly even though it is a fuel-wasting way to travel short to medium distances, compared to railroads, whose passenger role gradually eroded.

And there were all those appliances: refrigerators replaced the ice box; washing machines, the washboard; air conditioners, the fan. New industrial processes, such as the electric arc furnace of the steel industry, appeared. Production of plastics grew prodigiously, particularly after World War II, further raising the demand for petroleum.

Only the benighted would argue that these events, which formed the setting for the energy crisis of the 1970s, were a mistake. A home of one's own, a car and the American oil companies pressed for an oil import program, which by "protecting" the nation from cheaper foreign oil, accelerated the depletion of domestic

The environmental movement, which began in the 1960s, gained strength as the true price of energy became more apparent - air polluted by fossil-fueled power plants and automobiles; water heated as it coursed through nuclear power plants before spilling into rivers and lakes; oil slicks on Santa Barbara Bay and the English Channel

The attack was well justified, but the immediate response led to other problems. For example, believing that sulfur dioxide from smoke stacks caused air pollution, the government restricted the burning of high-sulfur coals. But the effects of suddenly depriving utilities of high-sulfur coals - for which they had built plants, structured their rates, arranged transportation, intensively sought customers - were not thought out. Many utilities switched to low-sulfur oil rather than compete in a seller's market for low-sulfur coal, raising the demand for petroleum and refinery capacity beyond anything anticipated by the petroleum industry.

Also, the problems of coal raised the already high and. in retrospect, deceptive, attractions of nuclear fission for producing electricity. The fortunes of oil and gas were thus deeply woven into transformations that occurred in American society beginning in the 1930s. These energy choices reflected what American society valued. It wanted oil and gas partly because of their convenience compared to coal. In turn, the changes that oil and gas made possible - from the automobile age to "clean heat" - entered our definition of a reasonable standard of life. And in time, the environmental movement signaled that clean rivers and air were sometimes of more value than an economy premised on ever more goods.

When the price of OPEC oil quintupled in the 1970s, the situation was ripe for an energy crisis.

The views expressed in Courses by Newspaper are those of the authors only and do not necessarily reflect those of the University of California, the National Endowment for the Humanities, the National Science Foundation, or the participating newspapers and colleges. Next week: Joel Darmstadter, author of "Middle Eastern Oil and the Western World," compares energy usage in the United States to that in other countries.

Hebron Dollmaker Enjoys Her Work

By BETTY RYDER

Family Editor A young Hebron woman, who loved dolls when she was a little girl, has continued her interest in them through the years and is now busy creating them.

Kathy Kutyla of 104 Daly Road started making dolls a year ago and has branched out to repairing antique dolls and making reproductions. "I do about 30 percent repairing antiques and 70 percent making new dolls," she said

A lot of research goes into dollmaking, Kathy says, and appropriate costumes in styles of the time must be made.

"Eleanor Schulz of Ellington, who is retired, works with me on the costumes and we try to use antique materials such as velvets, batiste muslins and lace. We both do a lot of reading to obtain the proper costume for each doll," she said, "We use antique buttons, and tatting also when we can."

Usually Kathy says she gives an estimate on repairing a doll, but "it's difficult until I really get into the work. Sometimes there is a crack in the head which must be filled and smoothed so it's not visible or the eyes need to be restored or replaced," she said.

Kathy's dolls vary in price. One Bru, a French fashion doll, runs about $125 and then there is a China doll with its original white porcelain body which would sell for $100.

Kathy also has a Crying Bye-lo doll which costs $90 and one outlet sells her doll house people for $25 each. All in all, she says she had approximately 100 dolls including the dollhouse

"Customers visit my studio in the basement of my home and view some of the dolls and look at pictures of various other dolls I make. Some have definite types in mind, others are open to suggestion." Kathy has participated in the Harvest Fair in Hebron and has talked to various groups, including the Friends of the Library in Hebron earlier this month. Her husband, Richard, a banker in New Britain, helps with the business completing tax forms and handling finances, she said. "I'm currently selling doll house dolls as fast as I can supply them. People buy them for their children but warn them that they are fragile. They can hold them and move them around in their doll house, but, at $25 each, they must be treated gently. Kathy has other dolls, newer dolls, including a Shasha doll, Chatty Kathy, a rag doll and others. "I often wonder if the craftsmen of yesteryear were as particular as we are today. Or, was it more assembly production? Today, we are concerned with making a perfect doll," she said And, a look at her collection will testify to that.

TVSPOTLIGHT

TV STARSCENE.

Months have flown since we printed word about a new syndicated talk show with Toni Tennille in the star spot. Though it will still be another six months before the key five NBC-owned and operated stations put her on the air, the deal is made.

Toni has no difficulty talk-ing. She told us once, as her husband Carmen "The Captain" Dragon sat silently by, "Of course he has things to say, maybe I just don't give him a chance. I do chatter a

It's HER show with the Captain dropping by only now and then as a guest, and then to accompany Toni in her singing. "Talk" isn't all there is to Toni's show ... lots of show biz entertainment features are planned. In other words, the ebullient Toni sure isn't aiming to out-Donahue Phil Donhaue. But maybe out-Dinah Dinah Shore.

What was good about the old Hollywood? Not much according to "The Gossip Columnist," the newest Oper-ation Prime Time attentiongetter. The all-star cast leans heavily on villainy. It's hard to pick your favorite baddie in advance ... but insiders say Bobby Vinton can take pride in being cast against type as a slimy publicist.

Valerie Harper said recent-ly in New York that not everybody says nice things about her 30-pound weight loss that's left her with a lean face as well as a lean frame. She's philosophical; she feels it's because they knew her so long as "Rhoda" and find it hard to like her as anything but "a chubbette." "Rhoda," for all her good looks, was of course basically a character part. Actresses going for glamour have no choice but to pare the pounds.

Two years ago every reporter who got to Cheryl Tiegs asked if it were true that she once weighed 160 pounds? Yes, yes, yes. But she feels much better slim. Also recently slimmed down - no poundage before or after stated — is Kim Cattrall, on view this week in a major role in CBS's "Scruples" miniseries. She acknowledges that as a child she was considered "cute" because she was chubby. She had to change her inner image of herself and she let her chopped-off wash-andwear hair grow long.

Donny Most has long said that being Ralph Malph on "Happy Days" was less than fulfilling ... but it helped that Ron Howard, while encouraging Donny to stick with the series, added that he understood and gave the advice that Donny could move into more artistically fulfilling projects in his free time. That appears to be what's happening. Donny now has his own production company and has optioned "Letters From Brucie." a not yet published novel by Law-rence B. Eisenberg. This is the second of Eisenberg's works, by the way, to be snapped up as movie material even before they get in print

"Professional Date" with a cast that includes Cyd Char-isse, Edie Adams, Susan Anspach and Kevin McCarthy is now before the cameras. The theme appears in the poor gigolo, poor gigolette vein with Miss Anspach's role, that of a meagerly paid clerk trying to earn extra money. It's not exactly like the real-life organization. "The Godmothers," which is the elite "introduction" service discussed on the television interview circuit by the head godmother, publicist Abby Hirsch. A point she makes repeatedly is that the "Godmothers" clients are affluent. Simply because they are such busy, successful peo-ple (doctors lawyers, finan-ciers) their social time is limited ... so they appreciate the pre-screening and hope it will lead to companionship within their own peer group. If the couple see each other three times, the agency feels it has account for feels (which are not earned its fees (which are not cheap), says Abby Hirsch.

Stars Cheer

Celebrities, who have appeared in or been inspired by "Hallmark's Hall of Fame," one of TV's classic series, cheered Hallmark Cards - and its founder. Joyce C. Hall, on its 70th anniversary.

Congratulatory notes were sent by stars Bette Davis George C. Scott, Henry Fonda and Helen Hayes; writers Arthur Miller and Allan Sloan; producers David Susskind and Henry Jaffe. From across the Atlantic, Lady Sarah Churchill Audley, Sir Lew Grade and Trevor Howard hailed the venerable firm. The letters recalled the quality of the pro-ductions sponsored by the "Hallmark Hall of Fame."

Nielsen Ratings Service

Nielsen Ratings Service recently pinned the pay cable market against the networks and concluded that pay cable is a growing market that should not be ignored. Its viewers are generally younger and are television's true aficionados.

In prime-time viewing, pay cable received a 19 share. That placed pay cable viewers only one or two points away from the average ratings of CBS and NBC during this time period. This study is valuable for producers who didn't have a means to measure the pay a means to measure the pay audience, said Sue Whiting, Nielsen Ratings marketing coordinator. They can now see how significant this mar-

TEEN-AGE CRUSH — I am 12 years old and have seen Melissa Michaelsen, a girl in a movie on T.V. Who is she? Where and when was she born? What other information can you give? The movies were "Goldie and the Boxer," in which she played "Goldie."

and "Orphan Train," in which she played "J.P." Please also tell me where I can write her. Thank you very much. — Newton, Kent City, Mich.

Newton, Kent City, Mich.
I can see what you like about Melissa. Dorothea Petrie, producer of "Orphan Train" spoke highly of her. She called Melissa a "natural," someone who doesn't need any schooling or training. Melissa has had little acting experience outside the two productions you mentioned. She was brought to Petrie's attention when she to Petrie's attention when she saw "Goldie and the Boxer" and was drawn to Melissa's warmth and sensitivity. You can tell her your thoughts by writing her through EMI-TV 4024 North Radford Studio City, Calif. 91604.
