Market's retreat was disorderly

By BILL BLANKENBURG

HARTFORD — The market's retreat became disorderly last week as the here-to-fare steady second tier stocks joined the slide on the lower end of the Dow Jones Industrial Average (DJIA) 840-850 support level was violated. I suspect the surge in interest rates is a powerful negative in a down market and that action triggered margin account selling.

In total, the DJIA lost 42 points or 4.93 percent. That percentage averaged the decline by the other major averages by a wide margin. Only 11 New York Stock Exchange common managed net gains of one full point or more for the week.

It was reminiscent of the October 78 and October 79 market activity. Apparently clumsy handling of the U.S. settlement issue and strataghemer prime rate reinforced the negative atmosphere. The week offers much business news including the reports of purchasing agents' February outlook, advance retail sales, major crop forecasts, manufacturers' export sales and orders for January and January one-family swelling inventories.

In addition manufacturing and trade inventories come due as well as that month's wholesale trade figures. Also this week, plant and equipment expenditures for 1979's final quarter should be released and we should learn about industrial production for February. It's not what investors know, but what they don't know that pressures stock prices. The last few weeks proved that point as we've had two solid weeks of Carter administration trial ballooning on the spring 1980 version of its anti-inflation program. The policy has left most very ambiguous and confused about the next move. Fear of the unknown is the problem, and it looks now like the last negatives in the stock market's pullback could be shaping up.

Considering the pending presidential election, the minuscule common stocks with one point net advances referred to above suggest to me that the pending downside penetration of last December's closing low of 819.62 would be the last phase of this retreat needed to end it. Upside action by the forward sectors, namely the gaming stocks and select Blue Chips on Friday, suggests that probing for a bottom is underway. The final waves of selling could come quickly or spread out over a few weeks. Excluding the energy-oriented stocks, it is likely that the overall market is presently well under DJIA anyway.

Mott's payout

EAST HARTFORD — The board of directors of Mott's Super Markets Inc., operators of ShopRite supermarkets in Connecticut and Western Massachusetts, has declared the regular 5-cent per share quarterly cash dividend, payable May 30 to shareholders of record May 19.

Stanford Cohen, president of Mott's, noted that while 1979 operating figures were not yet available, they will be reported shortly. He stated that based on preliminary indications, future year profits should be better than originally expected earlier in the year, and that they should approximate those achieved in 1978.

Restaurants are coming and going

By PATRICK REILLY

Herald Reporter

EAST HARTFORD — As one restaurant goes up another might be coming down. The Planning and Zoning Commission Wednesday approved, 5-1, the construction of a Denny's restaurant on Silver Lane. However, the commission was told another restaurant on Silver Lane may have to close due to planned Interstate I-84 construction.

In making an application to remove garbage from his Silver Lane property and replace it with a hill, Neary's owner Gregory C. Neary told the commission, that state officials have been surveying his property at 300 Silver Lane. Neary said the officials have told him that a proposed special priority ramp for Pratt and Whitney Aircraft traffic connecting with I-84 would run across part of the restaurant's land. Officials have told Neary he might have to relocate if the ramp is built too close to the restaurant. The ramp would connect at Mercer Street and ease the amount of traffic coming from the plant entering the I-84 at Roberts Street.

"They said if they buy the land it will be sometime in June and then I might have to relocate," Neary said. "They gave me a booklet on relocation, and they wouldn't do that unless they were going to relocate." If Neary's does close, Neary said he would have to relocate somewhere on Silver Lane or go out of business. "The relocation would put me out of business because most of my customers are Pratt and Whitney workers," Neary said. One thing is for sure, though, there will be another restaurant on Silver Lane. After three attempts in the past two years, Denny's Inc. of Mount Laurel, N.J. is given permission to construct a restaurant on an approximately one-acre site at the entrance to the Charter Oak Mall. The only commission member voting against the restaurant's application was John Grottole. He said the restaurant would promote the safety and health of the surrounding community. Grottole's criticism centered on the amount of traffic the restaurant might draw to the already heavily congested traffic area around the Charter Oak Mall. Robert Vannase, a Boston traffic engineer hired by Denny's, said the restaurant would draw on the average about 600 vehicles per day. He said customers would be attracted from the existing traffic and the restaurant wouldn't draw people from more than 15 miles away. Citing a study made in 1978 and updated in 1980, Vannase said about 20,000 cars travel past the mall entrance on Silver Lane every day. He said there had been no increase in the average daily traffic flow in the two-year period. Though commission members seem convinced the restaurant wouldn't add to the traffic problem, a Silver Lane resident wasn't so sure. Stanley Backus, of 65 Chester St., said if anything, the traffic situation on Silver Lane has worsened. "I have been living in that area since 1957 and there is an awful traffic problem here," Backus said. "We have got to think about the children walking along the road." Backus also questioned how many more restaurants are needed along Silver Lane. He said there are currently eight restaurants operating in a half-mile area on Silver Lane. He said he saw many new faces on the commission and wondered if they knew the problems that have been experienced with the heavy traffic on Silver Lane.

Due to mechanical problems, Wednesday's Evening Herald was delivered late to many home-delivery subscribers. A few subscribers may have received a different edition than usual and some papers were unable to be delivered.

Evening Herald Publisher Raymond F. Robinson today said every effort will be made to deliver copies of Wednesday's edition to those who may have been missed.

He thanked the many readers who called inquiring about the whereabouts of their Evening Herald for their understanding and patience.

Robinson said arrangements have been made that should help solve the problem while repairs are being made.

I-park effort ends

GLASTONBURY — During a meeting with the Economic Development Commission Wednesday night, the Town Council decided to discontinue its pursuit of $2.3 million in state grants to fund a 220-acre industrial park off Hebron Avenue. Only two members of the council, Soya Goggin and Janet Maher spoke in favor of pursuing the grant application.

Processing of the grant application has been stalled for more than a year because the Capitol Region Council of Governments gave the industrial park plan a negative vote. The regional agency cited the town's poor record of providing low-income housing.

Council Majority Leader Mrs. Maher said most everyone who was in attendance at the meeting said they were in favor of industrial development, but that the issue was how to bring it about.

"I want to see them (CROG), take a final vote on this application," she said. "They have never been clear on our application," Mrs. Maher said. During the summer, CROG officials met with town representatives to discuss the town's application.

The town had decided to appeal CROG's rejection of the plan with the attorney general's office. However, the members of the CROG investigating subcommittee requested that the appeal be withdrawn from the attorney general's office.

"They have never been able to tell us what is wrong with the plan," Mrs. Maher said. The town had indicated during the summer, it would have been willing to provide reverse commutation in exchange for the lack of local low-cost housing. However, CROG officials indicated they wanted the housing.

Several council members suggested the town allow the industrially zoned land to develop naturally as developers discuss building on the parcels with private landowners.

Another approach would be for the town to sell bonds to purchase the entire 220 acres. The cost of the bonds could then be reimbursed by the state grant if it was approved. The developers would then deal with the town.

"It is realistic to assume that the community would not be comfortable with a bond issue. Prices have changed since 1977 when the grant was applied for," Mrs. Maher said. Minority Leader Henry Kinn said under the circumstances, if the town does not do anything in housing it will not receive the grant from the state.

"We are headed more toward a corporate park and the original intent of the loan was to provide jobs for entry level people," Kinn said. "We can develop this project slowly," Kinn added.

Town Council Chairman Constantine said he would allow the regional planning agency to vote on the application, but he said he would not negotiate its approval. The council, after deciding not to pursue the state funding, then agreed not to withdraw the application from CROG.

Vance sees commission as best bet for hostages

By United Press International Secretary of State Cyrus Vance had said in a news exchange with the returned U.N. Commission and is still convinced it is the best avenue for negotiating the release of the 50 American hostages in Iran. At the same time, the health of Iran's religious strongman, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini — whose word so far has decided progress or setbacks for the hostages' release — was brought up by the 79-year-old leader himself.

In a nationwide broadcast on Tehran Radio Wednesday night, he said he was "weak and convalescing," referring to his hospitalization earlier for heart trouble. The Islamic leader said, in a broadcast monitored by the BBC in London, he would have "important things to talk about at the beginning of the New Year," (Iranian national New Year is March 21) "if I am still alive."

Khomeini exhorted Iranians to vote in Friday's first phase of an election for parliament, he has said will decide the fate of the hostages after it is seated in May. The second phase will be held some time in April.

The hostages, in their 131st day of captivity in the occupied U.S. Embassy in Tehran, showed some of the strain of their ordeal in a film taken by their militant captors, shown on NBC television Wednesday night. One of the 11 hostages shown, Barry Rosen of Brooklyn, complained of convulsions and heart problems since January.

At the United Nations, Vance Wednesday conferred with U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and the five members of the U.N. Commission, whose mission ended Monday. At the end of the meeting he will keep in touch with the secretary-general.

In Tehran, Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh expressed hope the commission would return to Iran in the near future to continue its work, saying only half its work was finished — that of investigating "the crimes of the ousted shah."

"The commission's other task was to visit the hostages, but the militants, backed by Khomeini, prevented them from doing so. Ghotbzadeh also demanded the "physical arrest" of the shah, who was reportedly about to undergo difficult surgery in a Panama City hospital for the removal of an enlarged spleen.

"I think we should continue to pursue this option (of negotiations through the U.N. commission)," Vance told reporters. "The door is still open and I will keep in touch with the secretary-general," he said. "I believe this is the best course to follow."

Mohammed Bedjaoui, the Algerian ambassador who is co-chairman of the commission, said he was still "optimistic" the hostage crisis could be solved. President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr also addressed the nation in a speech on Tehran Radio about the coming parliamentary elections.

GOP elects Von Deck

By MARY KITZMANN

Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — For Elsie Swenson, outgoing GOP town committee chairman, it was the last hurrah. For Robert Von Deck, newly elected chairman, it was the first. Von Deck won the position last night by one vote, a secretary's ballot. He was the only nominee for the chairmanship, filled temporarily by Mrs. Swenson after Richard Weinstein resigned.

Several others who were expected to run, Carl Zinsser, Ted LaBonne, and Robert Smith, decided not to seek the position.

Von Deck announced his candidacy early, and campaigned hard, mailing letters and contacting town committee members personally. Last week, a vote count showed Von Deck had a majority.

It was a reversal of last year when he was soundly beaten by Richard Weinstein. Besides his campaign, the victory was partially attributed to the 32 newly elected town committee members.

However, many town committee members were not satisfied with Von Deck's candidacy. In nominating Von Deck, Gloria Della Fera, Board of Directors members, noted that "not everybody likes Bob, but not everybody likes me, either."

Ms. Della Fera said although many believe that Von Deck is too conservative, "it is he is honest and believes in what he is doing. He will lead the party where it has to go."

"At least support him. You can't let personal feelings take over if you want to be successful. As I always say, if you don't like somebody, don't kill him until after the elections, until after we've won."

She has been active town committee for the past two years, she noted, but is leaving the leadership at a good time. "I've been here a long time," she said, "it's time for a change."

Mahoney has been ill for much of the past office term, forcing him to miss a majority of Assembly sessions. There had been speculation that Mayor Stephen Penny would bid for the seat. Penny so far, has not announced his intention.

Woman miner killed

WILLIAMSON, W.Va. (UPI) — In coal-rich West Virginia, the better-paying jobs are found underground and Eleanor Bowen was glad to get one of them. Especially since her husband was paralyzed in a recent accident and the couple had two growing boys to feed. She worked hard as a miner, taking all the overtime she could, and earned the respect of her male co-workers. Today those co-workers were mourning her death. Mrs. Bowen, 24, died late Tuesday night in the No. 4 mine of the P.M. Charles Co. at Raw. She was the second woman coal miner to die in a mine accident in the nation and the first in West Virginia.

No room for the shah

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) — A hospital spokesman says there is no room for Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi at Panama Medical Center, despite reports the deposed monarch would be admitted to the facility for an emergency operation. Reporters waited in the hospital for the shah to appear but hospital administrator Rodrigo Moreno Wednesday denied reports any space had been cleared for the shah in the fully occupied hospital. Reports from State Department officials and sources in the Central American nation said the deposed monarch would undergo surgery this weekend at the Panama City medical center for removal of a dangerously enlarged spleen. The administrator of Panama's private and most expensive hospital also said any doctor not holding a license to practice medicine in Panama would be prohibited from operating on the shah.

Slaying probe continues

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (UPI) — The woman accused of shooting "Scarface" Dietrich author Dr. Herman Tarnower to death was romantically involved with him for 14 years, but he had been seen lately in the company of his nurse, some 40 years his junior. Harrison town police said they were exploring "a number of possibilities" in their investigation of Tarnower's murder Monday night, among them the relationship between the 69-year-old cardiologist and nurse Lynn Trifiro.

She had been seen in his company at a number of social occasions. Mrs. Harris, 57, a longtime friend of the doctor's whom he credited with help in writing his best seller, was released Wednesday on $40,000 bail from the Westchester County Jail in Valhalla.

House rejects GOP plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House has rejected a Republican effort to send the $22.7 billion oil windfall profits tax back to a House-Senate conference where it would most likely have died. The House, by a 232-180 vote, rejected the GOP plan to recommit the oil tax to a House-Senate conference. The plan would have asked for a 75 percent tax credit on windfall profits for oil companies to reinvest in more crude production. The House then passed rules to put the bill to a vote today.

Afghan positions filled

Afghanistan President Babrak Karmal, in an effort to draw popular support for his Soviet-installed regime, has appointed 100 new officials to key government posts, including officials jailed or exiled under previous Marxist regimes, the Press Trust of India reported Wednesday. Karmal's move followed an announcement last week he would seek to form a "wider national front" to run the Moslem nation. Sources said most of the appointees were members of the previous Moscow-backed regimes of Nur Mohammad Taraki and Hafizullah Amin, both killed after they fell out of favor with the Kremlin.

Chicy may face death

CHICAGO (UPI) — John Wayne Gacy, convicted of the sex-slayings of 33 young men and boys, may face the death penalty for the murders, the most with which a person has ever been charged in U.S. history.

The jury of seven men and five women convicted Gacy Wednesday after one hour and 55 minutes of deliberations. His death penalty hearing was scheduled to begin today. Either Cook County Circuit Judge Louis B. Garippo or the jury will decide his sentence.

Look-down on the ground

The Man of Steel soared over the English countryside, ran out of air, crashed in the middle of a top secret defense base and found himself under arrest. Said Christopher Reeve — who's just finished starring in "Superman II" outside London — "What a thing to happen to Superman." Reeve, an avid glider pilot, ran out of updrafts and made the forced landing Wednesday. "These two uniformed gentlemen asked me, 'Are you aware you are in a high security area?' And I said, 'Oops, I'm sorry. I can explain everything.' I told them who I was and luckily they recognized me." A Defense Ministry spokesman was affable about it — said, "It's not every day Superman drops in on us."

Getting the picture

An old Chinese proverb says "one picture is worth more than 10,000 words." By that measure, the exhibit New York art photographer J.W. Canty is taking to China is worth about 1.4 million words. The exhibit — funded by several private businesses — opens Saturday in Peking. It will consist of 140 photographs of Americans by such lens as Gordon Parks, Co. Rentmeister, Arnold Newman, Charles Bernier, Langdon Clay and Canty himself. Says Canty, "I feel like the American missionaries must have felt when they went to China years ago. For those Chinese under 30, the exhibit will provide their first visual look at America and our people."

Eyeball to eyeball

Wayne Frazen got bored with teaching high school math, so he bought an elephant and took up lion taming. That was seven years ago, and now Franzen Brothers Circus is a regular on the midwestern and southeastern small town circuit. Franzen — playing Montevideo, Fla., this week — says he quit academe for the ring because, "I've always loved a circus. It's fascinated me since I was a small child in a way that I can't really explain." But it's the lion taming he likes best. Says he, "It raises the hair on the back of your neck when one of them threatens to come after you." Just like back in the classroom.

Up for doves

Five groups are up for Dove Awards given annually by the Gospel Music Association in Nashville. Competing in the male gospel group category are the Cathedral Quartet, Dallas, Holm and Fraise, The Imperials, The Kingsmen and the Mercy River Boys. Winners in 16 categories will be announced March 26 following the association's 11th annual awards banquet.

Quote of the day

Gladstone, Mich., police officer Mark Hager, describing the bizarre unidentified flying object he helped track for half an hour Wednesday: "It kind of gave you the chills, you know, but as far as being scared or anything, we weren't scared — just interested. We've had reports of UFOs and stuff like that before, but we've never seen anything like this. This normally turns out to be airplanes or planets or something... I didn't believe in 'em before, but I do now."

Solon stands on label of workfare as 'racist'

HARTFORD (UPI) — A black lawmaker says his statement labeling proposed workfare legislation as "racist" was well thought out and he won't yield to a fellow senator's call for an apology. "I do not intend to make an apology," Sen. Sanford Cloud, D-Hartford, said Wednesday. "Since most of the people who are targeted in this program are black and Hispanic, the conclusion to me is obvious."

Sen. Richard Cunningham, R-Fairfield, unsuccessfully sought to force an apology from Cloud through an unexpected parliamentary move on the Senate floor Wednesday. Cunningham, a chief proponent of the workfare concept, said Cloud cast a negative shadow over the Legislature when he said last week that workfare was "racist" and should be rejected as a degrading form of servitude. "I'm rather upset," the Fairfield senator said. "As I see it he has impugned the character of the Legislature. I think he owes us an explanation." Cunningham said he was considering filing a formal resolution demanding an apology from Cloud, denying that backers of workfare were in any way racially motivated. "Most of the people who would be required to work under it are white," Cunningham said of the proposal to require able-bodied welfare recipients to work for their benefits. Cloud, however, disagreed and said he stood by the statement he made at a meeting of the Legislature's Black Caucus last week. "It's a proposal that keeps coming up despite the fact the General Assembly passed a fine training program (for welfare recipients) last year. I must question their (workfare supporters') motives," he said. Cunningham's call for an apology from Cloud marked the second time this year the question of racial motivation among lawmakers has come up in the Legislature.

Choir invited

ANDOVER — The junior choir of Andover Congregational Church has been invited to participate in a Junior Choir Festival scheduled for March 22 at Storr's Congregational Church. Participants will leave to go to Storr's from the Andover Church at 1:30 p.m. The day-long program will include a potluck supper and will end with the concert from 7 to 9 p.m.

Strip search proposal jumps legislative hurdle

HARTFORD (UPI) — Proposals which would limit strip searches by police and make cross burning and similar acts punishable by up to a year in jail have cleared the Legislature's Judiciary Committee.

The strip search bill would prohibit police from requiring people charged with a misdemeanor or a motor vehicle violation to undress unless they had probable cause to believe the arrested person was carrying a weapon or contraband. "It's offensive. It's used for the purpose of degrading people," committee co-chairman Rep. Richard Tullisano, D-Rocky Hill, said Wednesday.

The measure which would make cross burning and the desecration of property a deprivation of rights was passed and sent to the House on a 12-6 terfering with a police officer and under a strip search in the jail cell. The Connecticut Civil Liberties Union supports the proposal. A spokesman for the state's police chiefs has charged the restrictions could pose dangers to the incarcerated person and the arresting officer. Some members of the Judiciary Committee also battled the bill, which got through on an 86 vote and was sent to the House. "It's offensive. It's used for the purpose of degrading people," committee co-chairman Rep. Richard Tullisano, D-Rocky Hill, said Wednesday. The measure which would make cross burning and the desecration of property a deprivation of rights was passed and sent to the House on a 12-6

Soviet retreat is seen

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — A Yale University Middle East specialist predicts the Soviet Union will pull out of Afghanistan with plans to return and dominate the country.

"Wait 30 years and people in the west will think the Afghans are Russian," Firuz Kazemzadeh said Wednesday. "If the opposition gets tough, they just back off. In some areas it took them 300 years but they got what they wanted."

The history professor and chairman of Middle East studies at Yale told a day-long League of Women Voters seminar that Russia was not poised to carve out a piece of geography in the Persian Gulf because it didn't want to exacerbate the situation.

"Russia's interference in Afghanistan is nothing new. These are traditional policies. This is something Russia has been doing always, long before the United States has been in existence as a nation," said Kazemzadeh, who was born and raised in Moscow. Karl E. Meyer, a member of the editorial board of the New York Times, spoke of the spirit of compromise to reduce tension between the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

Preservation through renovation urged

By MARTIN KEARNS Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — The 84-page draft report on development of the Cheney Mill area, urges the town to preserve the historic district through redevelopment.

The report was drafted by the consulting firm of Anderson Notter Fingold, which is expected to complete its six-month-$46,000 study of the mill area later this month. In the report, the consultants appear to call for reactivation of the Redevelopment Commission which coordinated the rehabilitation of Depot Square in the mid-1970s. The commission would conduct all negotiations with developers, property owners and banks. In addition, all grants, bondings and tax adjustments would be channeled through it. The Redevelopment Commission would be placed under the authority of the Cheney Mill Historic District Commission, according to the draft. The consultants have already said the area would attract private developers. The district is designated a national historic landmark. As a result, its redevelopment would be encouraged by tax incentives not available to other developers. The report asks the town to again consider federal grants. "After years of inertia, it would be difficult for developers to raise capital for redevelopment in an area with no proven track-record (for redevelopment)," the report says. The consultants add, "(federal grants)...should not be rejected out-of-hand for the first projects."

The first projects would be redevelopment of Cheney Hall, the Clocktower Mill and the Yarn Mill, an area totaling about 350,000 square feet or one quarter of the entire mill complex. The report says developers have already expressed interest in redeveloping these structures. They were not, however, identified.

The redevelopment plan calls for renovation of the mills for residential, commercial and office space. The development of office space had been termed unlikely. The report, however, estimated a potential demand for corporate use. Development of this option, the plan says, is dependent on completion of the entire mills complex, adequate landscaping and parking facilities.

Federal funding for the construction of an enclosed parking facility was also mentioned as a possibility. Another assumption is the completion of I-84, into East Hartford, by 1982. Development of office space would not be on the scale of residential development but it would generate the greatest amount of tax revenue per square foot (72 cents).

The report estimates Manchester office space absorption at a rate between 30,000 to 50,000 square feet annually. More interesting are Chamber of Commerce statistics, cited by the consultants, which show last year's demand for class A office space in Hartford alone was 1.1 million square feet. Class A offices are those built after 1960. "Discussions should be commenced with developers and owners without delay," the report says. The draft plan will be presented to the Cheney National Historic District Commission Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Bennett Junior High School cafeteria.

"Ask any CBT Personal Banker about our IRA and they'll explain how you can set aside tax-deductible money for your retirement, today. You benefit two ways. First, you can deduct the amount of your IRA contribution from your 1979 taxable income (up to $1500 or 15% of your annual compensation, whichever is less). You won't pay taxes on the contribution, or on the interest earned in your IRA, until you withdraw it for retirement (when you're at least age 59½); but by then you'll probably be in a lower tax bracket. This gives you an immediate tax break this year.

Your second benefit is a long term one: a retirement nest egg you can add to every year, insured by the F.D.I.C. for up to $100,000.00.

Is a CBT IRA right for you?

"Yes... if you're a wage earner who is not an active participant in a company or governmental retirement or pension plan. If you aren't sure whether you qualify, any CBT Personal Banker can help you find out.

How much can a CBT IRA add up to?

"The money you deposit in your CBT IRA grows rapidly. You'll earn 8% per year interest (compounded daily for an 8.45% annual yield), guaranteed for 3 years. This chart shows you what can happen to a $1,000 contribution (a one-time deposit) and to an annual contribution of $1,000.

Number of Years	Annual Contribution of $1,000	Growth of Single $1,000 Contribution
1	$ 1,085	$ 1,085
10	16,051	2,253
20	52,175	5,070
30	133,475	11,411
40	316,447	25,682

Figures are based on an annual rate of 8%, compounded daily for an effective annual yield of 8.45%.

Reaction is real

The energy crunch is real. This judgment is made, not arbitrarily, but based on information concerning the mandate of Town Manager Robert Weiss concerning police cruisers.

In a move which should be congratulated, Weiss has explained to town officials, money will probably be made available in next year's budget for new police cruisers. He has said he wants six-cylinder engines in the cruisers.

In our opinion a wise move, but apparently others, including police officials, consider it a bad one.

In the eyes of law enforcement, a bad move because of the decreased pursuit ability as compared to a cruiser powered by a V-8 engine.

Weiss's suggestion has been made in an effort to reduce gasoline consumption.

With the energy crisis a real thing, gasoline consumption should be on everyone's mind and every method should be considered to save the precious fuel.

The idea of casting a shadow on the use of a six-cylinder engine has enough power to propel an auto at a speed considerably greater than the recommended 55-miles-an-hour.

While pursuit is at times, part of law enforcement, we believe some officials have placed too much emphasis on this particular item.

At times it is necessary, but safety should be the guiding word.

High-speed pursuit, in our opinion, endangers the safety of police officers and the public.

Manchester is not like communities depicted in television police dramas. The police are not always jumping into their cars and racing through city streets at breakneck speeds and endangering themselves as well as the public they have a duty to protect.

Several communities throughout the nation in the past few years have not only switched to six-cylinder and four-cylinder autos, but also to compact autos.

Not only is the V-8 engine becoming a thing of the past, but the full-sized car, as we once knew, is rapidly disappearing.

The six-cylinder engine is the answer for police vehicles.

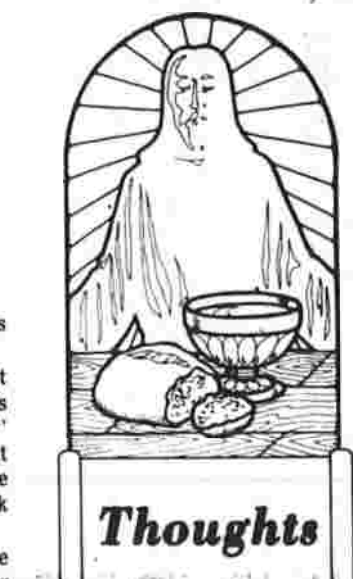

It is now the day and age where we must consider several factors, including energy, when making certain decisions.

The need for a V-8 engine in a police cruiser is an idea as antiquated as a dinosaur.

Six-cylinder engines will save gas, and that is one factor well-worth considering.

Educators begin search for new principal at Bennet

By LAUREN DAVIS SHEA
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER—Stressing Manchester's appeal as a "City of Village Charm," the school administration has begun its effort to find a replacement for Allan Cone, retiring principal of Bennet Junior High School.

At its meeting Monday night, the Board of Education appointed two members, Barbara Higley and Joseph Campese, to be part of a committee of administrators, teachers, and citizens who will review applicants.

The board also reviewed an administration-produced package that could be billed as the "selling of the Principality." Citing Manchester's proximity to Allan Cone, Boston and New York, the sales pitch says the town is close enough to the city, but also provides "quiet livability."

The package goes on to name some of the vacation spots of New England. "The town lies approximately equidistant from the preferred playlands of the East: The White Mountains, the Green Mountains, the Berkshires to the north and west; Cape Cod and Long Island Sound to the east and south."

The prospective candidates don't get a chance at this golden land unless they meet several pages of the list of requirements. Others include: willingness and courage to initiate change when needed, and an ability to keep "instructional programs alive, interesting and motivating to students and teachers."

This tall order is coupled with a demand that the applicant belong to civic and professional associations and be able to speak before groups on the school and its purposes.

Particularly mentioned duties include developing an attendance system, discipline, social activities, and

Witnesses planning memorial services
MANCHESTER—Just back from a two-day convention in Massachusetts, the members of the Manchester congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses are making final plans for their most important meeting of the year: the commemoration of the death of Jesus Christ.

The memorial observance will be held at the local Kingdom Hall, 647 Tolland Turnpike, March 31, at 7:30 p.m., according to Robert Wright, a local spokesman.

The program will consist of an hour talk centered around the meaning and purpose of the last supper Jesus had with his apostles, how and why he died, and how we benefit, says Wright.

The more than 100 local Witnesses were at the Natick, Mass., convention hall last weekend along with more than 1,000 Witnesses from six other area congregations.

Open house scheduled
MANCHESTER—Big Brother Big Sister of Greater Hartford will hold an open house March 20 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Board of Education offices, 45 N. School St.

The organization says that in the Manchester and Vernon area there are more than 80 boys and girls waiting for big brothers and sisters for more than two years.

Reservations for the open house should be made before March 18 with Kevin Howard at 646-4487.

educational philosophy. Emphasis is also placed on being a team worker, as the job description seeks a person who can work with both the superintendent and teachers, along with parents.

The position is being advertised in the New York Sun and the Boston Globe. Most of the preparatory schools in New England and the Middle Atlantic states and private personnel agencies have been notified of the vacancy, with the result that at least 150 applications are expected.

Timetables for filling the position include an April 30 deadline for applying, a May deadline for screening the candidate list from 10 to five, a June 2 deadline for interviewing the top five candidates, and a July 1 starting date for the qualified person.

Mixed feelings

To the editor: I felt mixed emotions when David Barry informed me he would not seek re-nomination for another term as state Senator from the Fourth Senatorial District.

I felt sad because a person such as Dave Barry does not come around that frequently. He is a man of high principle, along with a deep understanding and compassion for people.

After all, isn't this what it's all about—people? His lifestyle and his service at the State Capitol certainly bear out these facts. His colleagues gave him the unofficial title of "conscience of the Senate," which further indicates the high esteem and respect in which he was held.

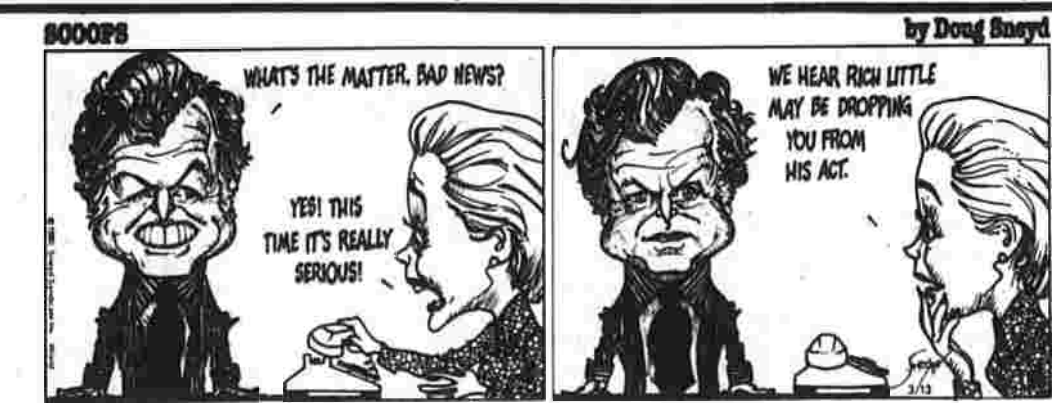

On the other hand, I fully understand that by not running again, it will afford him more time with his large family and his busy legal practice. This writer had the rare privilege and honor to serve Dave as his campaign chairman from Glastonbury about five times.

As a result, we have developed a warm friendship which I cherish very much. I feel that Dave Barry is a true humanist, one who has served his constituents in a statesman-like manner.

From one who knows him well, I just want to say simply—thank you very much—friend.

Incompetence unlimited

By LEE RODERICK

WASHINGTON—He sends boxer Muhammad Ali to Africa to plead America's Olympic boycott cause, and Ali ends up telling reporters that the Americans and the Russians are the two "baddest" white men in history. Later, he fetes Ali at the White House and praises his mission.

He takes office with the economy growing well and inflation at less than 5 percent. Three years later the economy has almost stopped growing, inflation has nearly tripled, and 1980's inflation is headed toward an incredible 18.2 percent. Yet, to a group of visiting editors, while conceding a crisis state, he adds that his economic policies "suit me fine."

His foreign policy team gets its signals crossed on a matter of extreme sensitivity—Israeli settlements on occupied Arab land—and his U.N. Ambassador proceeds to vote for a resolution condemning Israel. There is an immediate outcry from angry Jews—not to speak of his election opponents—and he tries to renege on the vote, saying it was all a mistake.

Such consistent incompetence would spell curtains for almost any leader in the private sector. But because the leader happens to be the president of the United States, he has a lease on his job at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. at least through 1980.

That much is understandable.

What is difficult to understand, however, is how Carter, one of the most inept presidents in modern history, at this moment can be walking away with his party's nomination for four more years of the same.

Great men seize challenges and mold them to their vision. Carter instead has been seized, shaken, and buffeted by challenges—taking America with him—and invariably has ended up reacting in a haphazard rather than acting prudently when the time was ripe.

A recent Gallup Poll indicated 53 percent of Americans approve of Carter's handling of foreign policy. He was clearly warned by his own advisors of the hell we'd pay for letting the shah into the United States—yet he let him in. He was warned over and over of the true nature of the Soviet beast, yet proceeded to kill or delay some of America's most promising weapons systems to appease the Kremlin, waking up only emboldened by Carter's weakness—in-validated Afghanistan.

And now, after 50 Americans have been held for well over 100 days in Iran, is it any wonder that it has dawned on terrorists in Bogota—and no doubt elsewhere—they can seize Americans with impunity. Seldom in the nation's 200-year history have we been regarded with such contempt abroad.

George Harvey, American ambassador to London a half century ago, was quoted as saying "the national American foreign policy is to have no foreign policy." Seldom has Harvey's cynical observations been more apt than it is today.

"A great power cannot long retreat before both its greatness and its power are called into question," writes David Gergen, a resident fellow at the American Enterprise Institute, a Washington-based think tank.

"And that is precisely where we find ourselves today: our remaining capacity to react in a better choice than during times of prosperity people tend to feel secure and confident. Often however, during hardship and troubled times people sense a greater need for help from God. He is always there, whether we are 'on top of the world' or in a difficult situation.

We should know that He loves us during the good times as well as the bad. He is always ready to listen to us as we approach Him in prayer.

Crimelords in Florida: the Canadian connection

By JACK ANDERSON
WASHINGTON—South Florida and its Latino-flavored capital, Capone, a new element of organized crime, have long been a mecca for tourists and pensioners seeking escape from the winter cold of the Northeast and Midwest.

But beneath the tropical sun, the swaying palm trees and roccoco glitter of boomtown Miami, there's an ugly, cold-eyed underworld that skims its multibillion-dollar profits from the city's prosperity. Narcotics, prostitution, currency laundering and smuggling are the principal sources of this illicit wealth. For a price, you can get just about anything you might want in Miami—from the acquisition of a desirable vacation spot to the elimination of an unwanted one.

While Chicago and New York mobsters have been baking in South

Florida's sunshine—and raking in illegal cash—since the days of Al Capone, a new element of organized crime has been quietly moving into the area in recent years from farther north. Canadian syndicate members have found a happy hunting ground in Miami and other South Florida communities.

A confidential intelligence report prepared by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement a little over a year ago offered this ominous picture of the Canadian Connection:

"Based on economic conditions in Canada, Florida can expect a tremendous increase in Canadian crime activities." Though most of the organized-crime activity is still concentrated in northern Dade County and southern Broward County, the report predicted that "it is likely that the Canadian criminal influence will expand to St. Petersburg, which is also a favorite vacation spot of legitimate Canadians."

And while state and federal lawmen have been expending most of their efforts in the fight against South Florida's huge drug traffic—which the Canadian mobsters have not concentrated on so far—the report states that "random intelligence gathering has been sufficient to indicate that Canadian organized-crime activity in Florida is a major problem."

Here are some of the major figures mentioned in the report:

The Vincent Cotroni "family." Cotroni is "completely independent of U.S. La Cosa Nostra families when it comes to decision making regarding criminal endeavors," the report notes, adding: "They do, however, maintain close contact with the U.S. Bonanno family, whose (late) boss, Carmine Galante is credited with having established the group."

The Cotroni influence extends from Toronto and Ottawa to New York, New Jersey, Detroit and Miami, experts told my associate Tony Capaccio.

William O'Bront, often called the Meyer Lansky of the Canadian mob.

He's an expert at financial finagling and establishing respectable business fronts for money-laundering operations.

"Giuseppe Napolitano's group. His operations are believed to be backed by U.S. La Cosa Nostra interests," the report states, explaining that this gives him "special status."

The Dubois brothers, Jean-Guy and Claude; Marcel Salvai, and Eugene LaFort— all involved in prostitution, gambling, gun smuggling and other sundry activities. Salvai, the report says, "is the subject of a Quebec Police Commission inquiry which he is trying to avoid by staying in Miami."

Most members of this group lean toward violence.

Distinguishing features of the Canadian mobs are their diversification—from smuggling of currency, guns and aliens to prostitution and gambling—and the comparative youth of their members. Most are in their 30s and 40s.

The confidential report concludes that "with the intensity of present activity it can be predicted that Canadian groups may soon rival the degree of influence (exerted) by the U.S. La Cosa Nostra families operating in Florida."

Footnote: One interesting jacket the Canadians are mixed up in is the smuggling of Italian aliens from Canada to work in pizza parlors throughout Florida. The Italians then marry U.S. citizens to stay in this country.

Olympic outpouring Although Jimmy Carter serenely insists he has the full support of the American people for a boycott of the summer Olympics in Moscow, U.S. Olympic Committee reports that its mail shows a decided tilt in favor of U.S. participation.

The upset victory of the U.S. hockey team over the Russians at Lake Placid seems to have inspired many of the letter writers. They regard that the best way to punish the Soviets for their aggression in Afghanistan would be to send the

Galati sentence delayed

NEW BRITAIN (UPI) — Sentencing for former Fire Chief Raymond A. Galati, one of 19 men arrested in the city's municipal corruption scandal, has been postponed until March 25.

Superior Court Judge Eugene T. Kelly said Wednesday the sentencing, which originally had been scheduled for Monday, was postponed due to an illness in Galati's family. Galati pleaded guilty to six counts of bribery, conspiracy and extortion Feb. 19. He faces up to 60 years in prison. He was originally charged last August with 21 counts. That number was reduced to 15 later when it was discovered the statute of limitations on several had expired. The number was again reduced in February when he pleaded guilty. Galati is one of six persons arrested in the scandal to plead guilty.

Directors have proposals to ease housing problem

By MARY KITZMANN Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — Both Republican and Democratic Board of Directors members have unveiled proposals to ease Manchester's housing shortage. The plans, along with various other suggestions, will be given to the mayor's commission on housing.

The Board of Directors voted to establish a housing committee to study the effects of condominium conversions. The committee's report is due in 60 days, the moratorium on conversions that the board imposed lasts 90 days. Manchester Republican Director Peter DiRosa told the GOP Town Committee last night his plan would "get the town into the purchase of two such dwellings without being a tax burden." DiRosa explained the proposal, of which the details are not yet formulated as a stock-funded house. The town would buy multi-family homes, and the tenants would buy stock in the homes. "The town would be like a holding company," DiRosa said. "Several other states have tried similar programs." DiRosa noted the plan includes all tenants, not just the elderly and low-income families that many persons expressed concern for in recent weeks. He said that there were two such dwellings presently on the market. Mayor Stephen Penny announced yesterday that the Democrats were working on a plan to help the elderly. The plan would finance construction housing. Democratic leaders have been working on the plan, but the details were not available at press time he said.

Child care credit helps save taxes

Editor's note: This is the 10th in a series of 11 articles designed to help income tax return filers deal with changes in federal income tax law effective for 1979. The series is prepared by the Commerce Clearing House of Chicago, a foremost reporting authority on tax and business law.

By United Press International With more and more mothers entering or returning to the work and more households being headed by one parent, the tax credit for child and dependent care expenses can prove a real tax-saver, for many of the 1979 filing season. Basically, the credit is equal to 20 percent of expenses paid by a taxpayer, who maintains a household, for the care of a child under 15 years of age or for an incapacitated dependent or spouse. Such expenses must be incurred to enable the taxpayer to seek and hold gainful employment, according to the Commerce Clearing House, a tax reporting authority.

The employment-related expenses upon which the credit is based are limited to $2,000 for the care of one qualifying individual and $4,000 for the care of two or more qualifying individuals.

The taxpayer's share (as employer) of the social security tax paid in connection with wages that are includable as amounts paid for household and dependent care services are part of such wages and thus qualify as an amount paid for household and dependent care.

The amount of the expenses that qualify for the credit is limited by the earned income of the taxpayer.

Earned income is wages, salaries, tips and other employee compensation, professional fees or other amounts received for personal services, and net earnings from self-employment.

For married couples, the earned income limitation is based on the earned income of the spouse who earns the lesser amount. Thus, in most cases, if a married taxpayer has a nonworking spouse, no credit is available because the nonworking spouse has no earned income.

However, in those situations in which the nonworking spouse is physically or mentally disabled or is a full-time student at an educational institution for at least five calendar months during the year, the law assumes an earned income of $100 per month for each month that the spouse is disabled or is a student if there is one qualifying individual in the household. This amount increases to $333 per month if there is more than one qualifying individual in the household.

An important aspect of the credit for the 1979 tax year is that credit is now available for payments to a relative, including a grandparent, unless the relative is a dependent or a child under 19 years of age for whom the taxpayer claims a dependency exemption. It is no longer required that child care services be performed by certain relatives constitute employment for social security purposes.

Panel disappointed: no quorum and little interest

By LAUREN SHEA Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — The Commission on the Accessibility of Protection and Advocacy, which is offering assistance to state residents who are severely handicapped.

Under a $50,000 program, 10-12 residents in the state who meet certain requirements will be a camp for handicapped provided with caregivers and their families in Hebron. The Easter Seal affiliated center is seeking residents for their summer program, which is similar to a regular camp, but geared to the needs of the handicapped.

Other mailings included a Winter Energy Booklet from the state, outlining the specific agency to be contacted in each town in the event of financial problems with obtaining heat. The booklet can be obtained by writing the commission in care of the Manchester Municipal Building.

The commission also discussed several communications from town officials. Like the Commission on Children and Youth, the Handicapped Commission is lacking a town staff person to act as its secretary. The commission reviewed a letter from General Manager Robert Weiss, outlining the Board of Director's recent decision to freeze the budget. Its effect on the commission is to jeopardize the funds it had expected to use to award plaques to landowners whose buildings surpass the requirements of their accessibility survey. While the plaques had been slated to cost $25 apiece, the commission now hopes to award citations, on parchment paper at one-third the cost. Buildings under consideration include the Faith Baptist Church in Manchester, the Pampernickel Pub, and a racquet club in Vernon.

Since the Youth Commission was granted a flat fee of $10 per meeting, it allocated this money to hiring a student to take the town staff person's role. The Handicapped Commission agreed last night to ask for a similar fee and to investigate hiring a handicapped individual to act as its secretary. The commission reviewed a letter from General Manager Robert Weiss, outlining the Board of Director's recent decision to freeze the budget. Its effect on the commission is to jeopardize the funds it had expected to use to award plaques to landowners whose buildings surpass the Buildings under consideration include the Faith Baptist Church in Manchester, the Pampernickel Pub, and a racquet club in Vernon.

Since the Youth Commission was granted a flat fee of $10 per meeting, it allocated this money to hiring a student to take the town staff person's role. The Handicapped Commission agreed last night to ask for a similar fee and to investigate hiring a handicapped individual to act as its secretary. The commission reviewed a letter from General Manager Robert Weiss, outlining the Board of Director's recent decision to freeze the budget. Its effect on the commission is to jeopardize the funds it had expected to use to award plaques to landowners whose buildings surpass the requirements of their accessibility survey. While the plaques had been slated to cost $25 apiece, the commission now hopes to award citations, on parchment paper at one-third the cost. ### TownTalk

Perhaps as practice for the upcoming election year the Republicans were in the mood for voting Wednesday night. First, Robert Von Deck was voted in as the GOP Town Committee chairman. After four more votes the other officers were installed. Then Von Deck invited the committee to a "victory party." "I'll vote for that," one member quipped. "If you're having trouble getting Affirmative Action programs started in East Hartford, a public hearing would be the best way to collect the raw data." — Barbara DiBattista of Mattatuck Community College speaking recently on affirmative action to the Human Rights Commission.

Overheard at a Vernon meeting recently — "Lately it seems to me that for every problem, there's another problem — whatever happened to solutions?" — Could it be someone was frustrated over escalating town budgets?

Today is the day. About 490 students arrived early this afternoon to begin rehearsing for one of the largest musical events of the season in Glastonbury, the All New England Music Festival. Two concerts, one at 2 p.m. today and the other at 7:30 p.m. will be Saturday at Glastonbury High School. Senior Citizens Director Wally Fortin says the open house for the new senior center will be either the first or second Sunday in May.

New vote suggested on HUD program

MANCHESTER — Last April, voters elected to withdraw from a Department of Housing and Urban Development's Community Development Program until January 1981. In November, they may be asked if the town should re-enter the program.

Mayor Stephen T. Penny made the suggestion Wednesday in the face of the controversy which is bound to be whipped up by residents who object to the HUD program. It promotes low cost housing but also appropriates $500,000 a year toward that goal.

Penny believes voters may want to reconsider the program as Manchester faces a housing shortage, which some have said is aggravated by condominium conversions. The past two weeks many persons appeared before the board asking for protection from conversions for the poor and elderly.

His suggestion was not solely made to cope with Manchester's housing shortage, Penny noted this morning. "The moratorium ends next January," he said. "The board should have some direction about which way the community wants to go."

"If we don't have input from the community on a referendum, the board will decide itself two months later." The November referendum question will be on the board's agenda in the summer, Penny said.

The mention of reviving the program met with strong opposition from the man who was behind the original moratorium referendum. Robert Von Deck, newly elected GOP Town Committee chairman, is strongly urging voters not to consider re-entering the program.

Penny's view is that the community should provide direction in the referendum, not consider the program per se. "Bob Von Deck was the man who went into the streets and said the people should decide," Penny said. "He said the referendum would consider not only re-entering the program but the step beyond."

Republicans Peter Difora and William Diana support the suggestion. But Democratic Director Arnold Kleinschmidt says Penny would be well-advised not to pursue the referendum.

Land trust plans fete

MANCHESTER—Richard C. Kern, biologist and wildlife film maker, will be honored by members and guests of the Manchester Land Conservation Trust at a dinner at Willie's Steak House tomorrow at 6 p.m. The affair will precede a showing of his first film, "Florida Cypress Sanctuary" at 8 p.m. at East Catholic High School.

Kern and nine other Florida conservationists hold title to 400 acres of Florida cypress swamp on either side of Fishing Creek which flows to the western shore of Lake Okechobee. The color film depicts the insect, bird and animal life along the creek with scenes of hawks, vultures, otters and alligators.

D. Douglas Smith, MLCT program chairman, is being assisted with this program by Mr. and Mrs. Horace Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Getwiler, Mr. and Mrs. George Potterton, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Stackpole, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Morasco. Also the mesdames Beverly and Edna Smith, Edna Malmgren, Florence Field, Louis Herring, Shirley Fitzgerald and Althea Potter.

Tickets for the dinner, preceded by a social hour at 5:30 p.m., may be obtained at the MLCT Office 257 East Central St. or by contacting Mrs. Field, 211 Boulder Rd., Manchester. Tickets for the film are $3 for non-member families, $1.50 for individuals and $1 seniors and students. They may be purchased at the Trust office, Regal's Main Street store, Nassiff Camera Shop or the Latt Junior Museum. Complimentary refreshments will be served during the film's intermission. MLCT members are admitted free.

Friends may call at the funeral home today from 7 to 9 p.m.

I., and Mrs. Margaret Hicks of Monroeville, Pa.; and four grandchildren.

Police probe armed holdup
MANCHESTER — Police say they were called Wednesday evening at 9:30 to investigate an armed holdup at an apartment complex on New State Road.

When they arrived, the unidentified victim told them two black males rang his doorbell and then forced their way in, one of them brandishing a revolver.

The two men then allegedly took $400 and fled. Police have the incident under investigation and have no suspects.

Henry Dessert, 41, of 194 Hamilton St., Hartford, was arrested Wednesday night after he allegedly violated his parole.

Dessert was held overnight at Manchester police headquarters and presented this morning at East Hartford Superior Court.

Stolen silver worth $10,000
MANCHESTER — Solid sterling silverware, valued at $10,000, was reportedly taken from a home Wednesday, according to police.

The theft was reported at 8:11 p.m. when they arrived, she told them the 71-piece set was missing. Police say the thieves probably entered the home through a basement window and used a crowbar to force a locked basement door.

overall sewer plan would cost more than $14 million, but most of it would be subsidized by the government. The council estimated Coventry's share of the sewer cost combined with the drainage work would result in a total of $10 million for the town over the next 20 years.

Late signups favor GOP

Last minute registration for the March 25 presidential primary favored the Republican Party at area towns.

Many of those who joined the Republican apparently support U.S. Rep. John Anderson.

Tuesday was the last day which unaffiliated voters could join a party to vote in the primary. Glastonbury, Manchester and East Hartford apparently follow a statewide trend which shows Republican registrations outnumbering Democratic by a 2 to 1 margin.

"Most of those who registered were in their early twenties," Fred Peck, Manchester Republican registrar, said.

They mainly supported Anderson, he noted. Glastonbury registrars, Lynn Larsen, Republican registrar, and John Kember, Democrat, say they registered 46 new GOP members Tuesday.

The Democratic Party tallied 11 new members in the town.

However, no clear trend was evident about the new members reported for president.

In East Hartford, the registrar reported the final outcome between new Republican and Democrat voters was "about evened out."

"It was all ages," Anne Trabucco said. "The tally evened out among unaffiliated voters, but I never saw so many Democrats mad that they couldn't switch to Republican to vote in the primary."

To change parties one must register six months in advance of an election.

Trabucco said about 100 voters registered Tuesday. Some were saying "Anderson" she noted.

However, across the state, registrars reported Anderson, who had a surprising show of support in the Massachusetts and Vermont primaries, was the clear favorite among new party members.

Bristol, New Haven, Hartford and Mansfield reported Republican registration ran about 2 and 3 to 1 over Democratic. The majority of these were saying "Anderson."

Not too long ago Mike Bossy of the New York Islanders stated that at the end of his present contract, which terminates in two years, he may hang up his skates.

That would be an unfortunate loss for the National Hockey League.

But the question remains—why is the high-scoring forward ready to pack it all in at an early age?

Bossy wasn't complaining as much about the violence in the game as he was about the holding, grabbing, high sticking, etc. which goes on. These violations way too often are ignored by the referees.

Maybe Bossy's scope is too narrow. There remain a large number of hockey players—or so that's what they're called—who are nothing more than butchers. Their primary goal is to wreck havoc on the other club's stars, the ones who put people in the stands. These players need to be controlled.

What's the attraction in NHL hockey? Is it the artistry of the skaters and goal-makings like Bossy and Guy Lafleur? Or is it the fighting, which some old-timers feel has a place in the game?

If anything, the Winter Olympics and the U.S.A. hockey team in particular, should prove hockey can be attractive to the masses without the fighting and mayhem which exists in the NHL. Then again, maybe it was just a phenomenon, caused by the emotional swelling of seeing the American youngsters do so well, and was a one-shot deal.

Hockey is skating and passing and shooting. It is poetry in motion—not fighting. If you want to see fighting, go to a boxing match.

A sad commentary, however, is fans do go to see the fights. One production member of The Herald saw a recent Whaler game and called it boring because "there weren't any fights."

Hull, Howe team in Whalers' tie
DETROIT (UPI) — Time still hasn't caught up to hockey legends Gordie Howe and Bobby Hull.

Howe and Hull, who for years dominated the National Hockey League with Detroit and Chicago respectively, combined Wednesday night to play key roles in three of Hartford's four goals as the Whalers and Detroit battled to a 4-4 tie.

Howe, who started the game in Joe Louis Arena before 19,041 fans with his son Marty on left wing and his other son Mark on right wing, assisted on Hartford's first goal by veteran Dave Keon.

Hull scored his sixth goal of the season and assisted on the tying goal by Larry Groulx at 15:59 of the third period. Blaine Stoughton scored Hartford's one goal. Detroit got two goals from John Ogrodnick and one each from Willie Huber and Dale McCourt.

Howe, a grandfather who began his career in the 1940s and is in his fifth decade in professional hockey, was elected after the contest for having realized his dream of playing alongside two of his sons before Detroit fans.

"First, I want to say thanks for the wonderful way the fans of Detroit have accepted me and my two sons," Howe said of the ovation the Howes received.

"I felt so good making this appearance on Detroit ice with Mark on one wing and Marty on the other," he said. "I also must thank our coach, Don Blackburn, for letting us start the game this way."

Howe said "unless they (Red Wings) make the playoffs, this will be the final appearance this year."

He added, however, he has not decided to retire. "Retirement has not entered my mind. I've got a positive attitude and like in other years, I'll weigh it out during the summer."

Hull said he was lucky to get the puck and pass it to Groulx for the tying goal.

I'd rather not have them than Mike Bossy. That day will truly be a sad one.

Bits and pieces
U.S. Olympic goalie Jim Craig was dubbed the "savior of the south" when he joined the Atlanta Flames. That's an awful lot of needless, foolish pressure to put on a young man, you say?

Former East Catholic standout Craig Crutcher pitched five innings for UConn against North Carolina State Tuesday in Raleigh, N.C. The bespectacled southpaw gave up three earned runs but wasn't involved in the decision. The Huskies, under first-year Coach Andy Baylock, dropped their first six straight.

If the major league baseball players go out on strike, may they stay out all year and learn what it's like to work. How can anyone possibly feel sorry for someone who had to accept a $700,000 a year salary and wound up crying about it.

Three-year starters Bob Venora and Pete Kiro tallied together 1,013 hits for the U.S. hockey captain. That represents 57.8 percent of the Eagles' offense. That's quite a bit to replace, but that's going to be the last year for each.

Manchester High has already had 15 applications, from four states, for the vacant U.S. Olympic position. Several other applications have been forwarded directly to Director of Athletics Dick Cobb.

Tiger defense develops holes
NEW YORK (UPI) — The Detroit Tigers had better start to be concerned about their defense if they plan to be contenders in the tough American League East.

On Wednesday, the Tigers committed four errors in a 7-4 loss to the Montreal Expos, raising their pre-season error total to 13 in five games. Not surprisingly, Detroit has lost all five. Two of the errors led to a pair of first-inning runs for Montreal, and the Expos never trailed after that.

Right-hander Steve Rogers was the starter and winner. He allowed one run in three innings as the Expos got their second with two hits each for the Tigers, including a triple each. It was the first exhibition game for Gibson, the former Michigan State football star.

Braves 2, Rangers 1
Rookie outfielder Ken Smith drove in the winning run in the 11th inning with a two-out, bases-loaded, pinch hit single off Steve Finch to give Atlanta a victory in its Grapefruit League season opener. Ed Miller led the inning with an infield single. He stole second and moved to third when Glenn Hubbard reached on a throwing error. An intentional walk on Larry Biakos loaded the bases for New York while John Davidson recorded his second shutout of the year.

Phyllis 6, Black Hawks 6

Ken Linsman and Bill Barber scored two goals each for the Flyers. Blues 3, Maple Leafs 2
Wayne Babych scored twice in the third period.

Easy victory
DORTMUND, West Germany (UPI) — The Soviet Union's new generation of skaters, Marina Cherkasova and Sergei Shakhrai, won the 1980 World Championships in the Wednesday, sliding and spinning, an easy victory in the absence of the Soviet Olympic medalist, Irina Rodnina, and the defending U.S. world champion.

In the men's competition, British Olympic gold medal winner Robin Cousins fell during a running pace shift pattern, leaving East German's precision specialist Jan Hoffmann as the favorite.

Shrine door open to Klein, Yawkey

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — It took a long time but one of baseball's greatest sluggers has finally battered down the doors of Cooperstown.

Chuck Klein, once almost as big an attraction in Philadelphia as the Liberty Bell, was elected Wednesday to the Hall of Fame, along with former Boston Red Sox owner Tom Yawkey, by the Veterans Committee from a list of 50 nominations.

The two men, both deceased, will be officially inducted into the Cooperstown, N.Y., shrine at special ceremonies Aug. 3 along with outfielders Duke Snider and Al Kaline.

Klein's election comes nearly 22 years after he passed away and 30 years after he retired from baseball. Many believe the wait was far too long for a man who compiled a .320 lifetime average and hit 300 home runs.

"His average reflects the kind of ballplayer he was," said Hall of Famer Burt Hooten, a member of the Veterans Committee. "To me he was as big a name as Babe Ruth."

Klein's election comes nearly 22 years after he passed away and 30 years after he retired from baseball. Many believe the wait was far too long for a man who compiled a .320 lifetime average and hit 300 home runs.

"His average reflects the kind of ballplayer he was," said Hall of Famer Burt Hooten, a member of the Veterans Committee. "To me he was as big a name as Babe Ruth."

Yawkey's election comes four years after his death and serves as a lasting tribute to a man recognized as one of baseball's greatest benefactors and sportsmen.

During his 44 years (1933-76) as owner of the Red Sox, he commanded respect as a man who thought first of the good of baseball and then his own club.

"I think Tom Yawkey was one of the finest sportsmen ever to come into baseball," said Hall of Famer Joe Judge, a member of the Veterans Committee and a former Red Sox star. "His every thought was for the betterment of the game and his overall thinking was for the best interests of the game."

"He didn't ask for any quarters. He was giving all the time. He didn't have a selfish bone in his body."

Klein and Yawkey were selected by the Veterans Committee from a list of eight finalists. The others considered were first baseman Johnny Mize and Charley Grimm, pitcher Vic Willis, shortstop Glenn Wright, third baseman Jimmy Dykes and former Dodger Manager Walter Alton.

The Veterans Committee consists of 18 members, including Hall of Famers Cronin, Grimes, Stan Musial, Roy Campanella, Charley Gehringer and Al Lopez. Seventeen members attended Wednesday's meeting.

Only players who have been retired at least 25 years, played at least 10 seasons and received at least 100 votes in previous BBWAA elections are eligible for consideration by the Veterans Committee. Other candidates include executives, managers and umpires and players from the Negro Baseball League.

Under the rules, the Veterans Committee can elect no more than two, including no more than one from the non-player category. An affirmative vote of 75 percent of the members present is necessary to elect a candidate.

Capitalists on win skein
NEW YORK (UPI) — When 25-year-old Gary Green took over the coaching reigns of the Washington Capitals back in November, his task was simple — turn an injury riddled hockey team into a playoff contender.

Obviously, winning a few games right off would make things easier for the coach. Green did just that. All things really couldn't get any worse than the 4-10-2 record the Caps had when Green arrived from the University of Washington.

But things did get worse. The injuries multiplied and the club failed to win in its first eight games under the new coach. On Nov. 28, the Capitals had a 4-18-4 record.

That was a long time — an eternity — ago. Since that fateful day near the end of November, Washington has posted a 19-18-2 record — including victories in the last four games — to move to within a point of its first-ever playoff berth.

Making the playoffs wouldn't be the only thing the Caps would be doing for the first time. Less than a month ago, Washington beat Montreal for the first time ever. And Wednesday night, the Caps actually knocked off the Boston Bruins, another first.

The loss dropped the Bruins behind Montreal into fourth place in the overall league standings. Canadiens' New Stars 3
Rod Langway and Mario Tremblay scored 65 seconds apart late in the third period as Montreal extended its unbeaten streak to 10 games. Pierre Larouche scored his 47th goal and Steve Stunt his 39th for Montreal. U.S. Olympian Steve Christoff had his second goal for Minnesota.

Rangers 6, Rockies 0
Ulf Nilsson, playing his third game since returning from a two-month layoff because of a neck injury, set up three goals and Phil Esposito tied Bobby Hull's record by notching his 13th straight 30-goal season. Don Maloney had two goals and an assist for New York while John Davidson recorded his second shutout of the year.

Phyllis 6, Black Hawks 6
Rich Preston's second goal of the game with 4:43 left lifted Chicago. Preston's game-tying goal capped a wild third period in which both teams scored four goals. Preston has scored 11 goals in his last 11 games.

Ken Linsman and Bill Barber scored two goals each for the Flyers. Blues 3, Maple Leafs 2
Wayne Babych scored twice in the third period.

Tiger defense develops holes
NEW YORK (UPI) — The Detroit Tigers had better start to be concerned about their defense if they plan to be contenders in the tough American League East.

On Wednesday, the Tigers committed four errors in a 7-4 loss to the Montreal Expos, raising their pre-season error total to 13 in five games. Not surprisingly, Detroit has lost all five. Two of the errors led to a pair of first-inning runs for Montreal, and the Expos never trailed after that.

Right-hander Steve Rogers was the starter and winner. He allowed one run in three innings as the Expos got their second with two hits each for the Tigers, including a triple each. It was the first exhibition game for Gibson, the former Michigan State football star.

Braves 2, Rangers 1
Rookie outfielder Ken Smith drove in the winning run in the 11th inning with a two-out, bases-loaded, pinch hit single off Steve Finch to give Atlanta a victory in its Grapefruit League season opener. Ed Miller led the inning with an infield single. He stole second and moved to third

Dr. J big factor for ailing 76ers

NEW YORK (UPI) — It looked more like a hospital emergency room than a locker room. Doug Collins, after severely straining his left knee in the second quarter, was on crutches. Maurice Cheeks suffered a wrist injury in the fourth period and was being taped. Caldwell Jones, fighting the flu, looked ready to pass out.

Thank goodness a doctor was available. The doctor, of course, was Julius Erving, who scored 40 points Wednesday night to power Philadelphia to a 105-98 triumph over the Washington Bullets. It was the ninth victory in the last 10 games for the 76ers, who find their troops seriously thinning as playoff time draws near.

Erving scored 12 points in the third quarter to help the 76ers recover from a 52-48 halftime deficit. His layup with 6:55 remaining gave Philadelphia the lead for good at 80-58 and he later aided an 11-12 spurt with a three-point field goal as the 76ers led 80-69 entering the last quarter.

"I was tired," Erving said. "That was just my false look out there showing you that I wasn't tired. How do I do it? I don't know, I guess I just got with my instincts."

While the Sixers have been assured of a playoff berth, the Bullets watched a good chance at securing a berth go down the drain. Dick Motta, whose days as coach of the Bullets appear numbered, was gloomy about his team's chances.

"We were tired tonight," Motta said. "We're just not deep enough. We're a little shallow on the bench. I'm sure with tonight's loss, our (playoff) prospects are somewhat dim."

Erving's basket with 10:26 to play the Celtics snap a two-game losing streak and maintain their one-game lead over Philadelphia. And when the Rockets staged a mild threat late in the game, Bird scored seven straight points to seal the victory.

"I can only remember once since maybe New Year's when Larry Bird hasn't been sensational," remarked forward M.L. Carr, who had 16 points. "He is doing what he has to do, he's playing the complete game."

The undermanned Celtics were without the services of starting guards Nate Archibald (eye) and Chris Ford (ill and family). But Houston Coach Del Harris thought the replacements, Carl and Gerald Henderson, filled in admirably.

"They're a much better tandem on defense, especially Henderson. They're a dynamic duo. They forced us to play a little carelessly in the first half with their good defense. And we just couldn't get back in," Harris said.

The Hawks downed the 76ers, 30-14, and the Nets overwhelmed the Knicks, 41-26, last night at the West Side. Mark Vogeleson, center, scored 14 points and had 8 rebounds for the Nets while Mike Hassett had 8 and Billy and Joe Prignano 4 apiece for the 76ers. Yari Wesley had 10 points and Jim Cronin had 8. "Nets while Rick Longo netted 10 and Jeff Matson 6 for the Knicks."

Over at the V. American Legion nine-man Wyoming Oil, 34-33, and Manchester Cycle Shop drove past Pizza House, 34-21. Ed Jarvis had 17 points and Mike Patis for Legion and Steve Taylor had 8 and Steve Gay 6 for Wyman. Albie Harris had 15 tallies and Robbie Eubank 5 and Brian Milose 6 for Pizza.

Irish Agency outgunned Moriarty Bros, 34-85, in the first round. Dennis Cole pumped in 29 points, Joe Montz 23 and Percy Davis 22 for Irish. Joe Depina had 34 points and Carl Olson 16. Bob Beckwith 13 and Tom Foran 12 for Moriarty's.

NEW YORK (UPI) — They are merely the most improved team in the nation and while nobody has given them a great deal of attention, tiny Murray State may just slip quietly into the semifinals of the National Invitation Tournament.

One year ago, the Racers finished last in the Ohio Valley Conference and posted a dismal 4-22 record. This year's 23-7 mark represents a miraculous turnaround and co-champion status in the league as well as the best record of any of the remaining eight teams in the tournament.

Late-starting Sweeney keyed Indians' quintet

Three years ago he rode the bench in the Junior High because he wasn't good enough.

Two years ago he didn't go out for the basketball team at Manchester High because he didn't feel he could make it. A year ago, after the urging of Joe Erardi and others who saw him play at one of the town's recreational centers, he finally went out for the scholastic squad.

"Every day he gets better," Pearson assesses Sweeney, who was elected co-captain despite his lack of varsity time a year ago. "It's amazing how he improves steadily. He's gotten better for two years and it's almost a daily occurrence. I wish he was back. He's going to get better, a lot better."

Bird sparkplug in Celtics' attack

BOSTON (UPI) — He doesn't really care to talk about his individual achievements and it's probably just as well. For he did, Larry Bird would need several light years to explain how he is a Celtics singlehandedly been the Boston Celtics' sparkplug the past few months.

Others, however, have no such compunctions. "We're at a point where we probably do depend on him too much, but he has been helping us maintain momentum," Celtics Coach Bill Fitch said after Wednesday night's 121-105 victory over the Houston Rockets. "Having a Bird makes things a lot easier. And we're certainly asking enough of him."

Bird poured in 29 points, grabbed 13 rebounds and dished out eight assists, seven in the first half, to help the Celtics snap a two-game losing streak and maintain their one-game lead over Philadelphia. And when the Rockets staged a mild threat late in the game, Bird scored seven straight points to seal the victory.

"I can only remember once since maybe New Year's when Larry Bird hasn't been sensational," remarked forward M.L. Carr, who had 16 points. "He is doing what he has to do, he's playing the complete game."

Sophomore Aguirre Player of year DePaul's star

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mark Aguirre, a burly sophomore forward who helped make DePaul University the kingpin of college basketball, was the runaway choice today for UP's Player of the Year.

Aguirre, whose soft shot carried the Blue Demons to a No. 1 national ranking before being upset in the NCAA West Regional, is the first non-senior to win the award since Bill Walton of UCLA in 1973.

"Mark was tickled to death to be named Player of the Year," Meyer added. "He deserved it, he played well all year, played one bad halfgame and that doesn't make him a bad basketball player."

Aguirre was exceptional virtually all season. With an uncommonly gifted outside shot, powerful inside moves and a strong passing game, Aguirre did not escape the attention of pro scouts.

Midway through the year, there was talk of him turning pro as a hardship case after his sophomore year — a move similar to that made by Michigan State's Bill Walton. At the time, Meyer said he thought his prize forward lacked the "mental maturity" for the pro game.

"The last team from the state of Virginia to win a NIT was Virginia Tech in 1973. The University of Virginia's narrow 77-55 victory over Boston College seems to indicate that Michigan will shatter the Cavaliers' dream of another title.

Upset-minded Southwestern Louisiana boasts Andrew Toney, who ranks No. 9 among major college scorers with a 28.5 average. The Ragin' Cajuns hope to lack on another upset over Louisiana after beating favored Texas, 77-76, in an earlier round game.

Improved Murray State may slip into NIT semis

NEW YORK (UPI) — They are merely the most improved team in the nation and while nobody has given them a great deal of attention, tiny Murray State may just slip quietly into the semifinals of the National Invitation Tournament.

One year ago, the Racers finished last in the Ohio Valley Conference and posted a dismal 4-22 record. This year's 23-7 mark represents a miraculous turnaround and co-champion status in the league as well as the best record of any of the remaining eight teams in the tournament.

"We live in a shadow in Kentucky," he said. "Murray State Coach Greene. 'Our people think we're within one game of elimination before rallying to overtake Yvonne Vermaak of South Africa, 44, 75, 6-3; sixth-seeded Kathy Jordan of King of Prussia, Pa., ousted Rosemary Casals of San Jose, Calif., 4-6, 6-3, 6-2; seventh-seeded Virginia Ruzici of Romania beat Roberta McCullum of Lebanon, Pa., 6-4, 6-2; and Stacy Margolin of Beverly Hills, Calif., whipped Miami's Kim Sands 6-1, 6-2."

Drollinger said he has fulfilled his "covenant with God," and will begin negotiations with NBA teams. He earned $7,500 per year with AIA.

Player of year DePaul's star

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mark Aguirre, a burly sophomore forward who helped make DePaul University the kingpin of college basketball, was the runaway choice today for UP's Player of the Year.

Aguirre, whose soft shot carried the Blue Demons to a No. 1 national ranking before being upset in the NCAA West Regional, is the first non-senior to win the award since Bill Walton of UCLA in 1973.

"Mark was tickled to death to be named Player of the Year," Meyer added. "He deserved it, he played well all year, played one bad halfgame and that doesn't make him a bad basketball player."

GOP chairman hits Democrats

VERNON — Michael Catarino, newly elected chairman of the Vernon Republican Town Committee, former member of the Town Council, has charged the Democrats on the national, state and local levels with having one thing in common, "The willingness to spend your tax dollars."

"Taking over when President Ford left office with a 4.5 percent inflation rate, they have used the old Democratic axiom that spending someone else's money can be fun, and have managed to trigger an inflationary spiral that can be likened to a runaway freight train," Catarino said.

Catarino has just been elected chairman of the town committee, replacing John Daigle who didn't choose to seek re-election.

Catarino cited various specific areas of waste in tax dollars such as a federally financed cable TV show depicting the shooting of a dog. "I guess this group of bureaucrats survived, as have all of the others despite the campaign promise to give this group the heave-ho," Catarino said.

He drew a parallel by comparing Vernon Mayor Marie Hertel's creation of various study commissions as a lesson on how to start a mini-bureaucracy. "Next year they will be back with their hands out," Catarino said.

Mrs. Hertel, a Democrat, has a Republican-dominated council working under her. Republicans on the council have strongly opposed her appointments of various sub-committees.

Catarino also criticized the mayor for turning to state representatives for advice "rather than having our own elected officials solve our problems."

He added, "This attitude of running to others whose track record is questionable shows a weak lack of leadership," Catarino charged.

Turning to the government on the state level, Catarino said, "What the Democratic-controlled Legislature needs is a simple lesson in economics. The key to sound budgeting is to first establish available income and then do appropriate within that amount." He suggested that perhaps a few homemakers should visit with the legislators to show them how this is done.

"The arrogant attitude displayed by the mayor (Hertel) in deeming someone unqualified to serve on a board and then refusing to state those qualifications is politics at its lowest level," the chairman said.

He also criticized the town attorney for taking months to render a legal opinion on what he termed a legitimate question posed by Deputy Mayor Morgan Campbell, a Republican.

"It's no secret that the Republican council won a clear mandate and was a hubcap away from the mayor's slot. The make-up of the charter dictates a strong council form of government. I suppose it's safe to say the honeymoon is over," Catarino said.

The new town chairman said he is committed to working with each and every Town Committee member for the good of the Republican Party and the Town of Vernon. "Our goals can be whatever we set our minds to achieve," Catarino concluded.

Panel opposes land exchange

VERNON — The Planning Commission is recommending against a three-way land swap proposed by the Rockville General Hospital as because it thinks that one of the parcels, owned by the town, should be preserved for open space.

Hospital officials had asked the town to trade a parcel of land it owns on Route 30. This parcel would be turned over to the Rockville Baptist Church for the site of a new church, the hospital would give the town a parcel it owns in Henry Park, and the hospital would acquire the church property adjacent to the hospital.

The Town Council last week approved the concept of the swap. While the council usually goes along with recommendations of the Planning Commission, it can, by a two-thirds vote, override the recommendation.

The hospital wants the church land to expand its parking facilities and the town now uses the land in Henry Park for its Little League ballfields. Hospital officials have indicated the town might lose this privilege if the land is sold to someone else.

They said the hospital is being pressured by the state Commission on Hospitals and Health Care to use their extra capital resources and endowments to offset the rising costs of their operating budgets.

Previously the council offered to come up with some other town-owned parcel to exchange with the church but hospital officials indicated the church was particularly interested in the Route 30 parcel.

No agreement can be reached until all three parties are in accord about the exchange. Meanwhile, the Planning Commission is still waiting for a report from the Recreation Commission concerning the Henry Park land.

It is expected that the Planning Commission's recommendation will go to the council at its meeting scheduled for Monday.

House numbers to be required

GLASTONBURY — Local property owners will now be required to affix three-inch high street numbers to their homes and businesses under a new ordinance passed unanimously by the Town Council.

With recommendations from the Safety Commission, the Fire Department, the Police Department and the Auxiliary Ambulance Association, the council approved the ordinance Tuesday night.

Safety Commission Chairman Frank Cavanaugh said the commission worked with other town boards and agencies to develop the ordinance.

"The more we worked on this item, the more we realized that it was more and more critical," Cavanaugh said.

Cavanaugh said it took a rescue squad 15 minutes to find a residence last week.

"This is a critical ordinance because a matter of minutes can save lives," Cavanaugh said.

Fire Commissioner Peter Sterling said the commission unanimously recommended that the council approve the ordinance.

Police Agent Howard Charbonneau and Sharon Fortier, a member of the ambulance corps, both agreed the ordinance was of great importance.

The numbers will be located on the exterior front of the buildings and they should contrast with the color of the building, according to the ordinance.

If a building is set back more than 100 feet from the street, numerals may be attached to a post, sign, mailbox or other device which would be located within 10 feet of the driveway entrance.

If persons fail to comply with it, they will be fined $10.

James McIntosh, the chairman of the subcommittee which sponsored the ordinance, said the ordinance should not be a real burden to the homeowners.

PZC eyes park funding

By MARTIN KEARNS

MANCHESTER — The town Planning and Zoning Commission is considering a federal Urban Parks Program grant to establish a park in the historic Cheney Mill district.

The park would probably be located at the corner of Elm Street and Hartford Road, the area incorporating Cheney Hall, which has been called the gateway to a redeveloped mill complex.

Allan Lamson, town planner, said Wednesday that he would attend a Friday meeting with state Department of Environmental Protection officials. The state DEP administers the federal program.

The Urban Parks Program makes available $725 million over a five-year period (beginning in 1979) for the development of neighborhood parks. Eligible projects include the rehabilitation of existing parks and the development of new parks.

According to the program, Manchester is one of 103 secondary cities in the state. The town could apply for as much as $250,000. A total of $2,500,000 is available each year to 1,400 secondary cities across the country.

First-year funding was restricted to the town's 400 primary cities. Connecticut has nine such cities including Bridgeport and New Britain, which were awarded $600,000 and $500,000 respectively.

Deadline for the next funding cycle is sometime this May. The town could receive final word on an application by September.

Lamson indicated that details of the town's plan were not yet firm.

Consultants studying the mill's redevelopment have called for a combination of private and federal funding.

Earlier this month the town applied for a $15,000 Urban Action grant for traffic and bus improvements in the district.

State oil tax said dangerous

HARTFORD (UPI) — Any state's attempt to tax oil companies would be dangerous and in the long run would force consumers to dig deeper into their pockets, the chairman of the Mobil Oil Corp. says.

"We don't absorb losses," Rawleigh Warner Jr. told a Wednesday luncheon meeting. "We pass them on to the consumer. All that's going to happen if they do pass further levies is that hospital officials indicated the church was particularly interested in the Route 30 parcel."

Connecticut lawmakers are considering a 1.5 percent tax on the gross receipts of oil companies doing business in the state.

Panel kills asbestos bill

HARTFORD (UPI) — A legislative committee has killed a bill that would ban the use of asbestos cement pipes in Connecticut water systems.

The Environment Committee rejected the pipe bill by a 11-6 vote Wednesday, with opponents saying there wasn't enough proof that asbestos in drinking water supplies was a health hazard.

Asbestos is a suspected cancer causing substance.

Sex assault reported in area

VERNON — Police are investigating the report of a sexual assault of a 29-year-old female in the vicinity of the Seven-Eleven store on Route 83.

Police said the alleged assault took place March 2 about 8:30 p.m. but the incident wasn't reported until the victim's friends convinced her to do so.

The victim told police she was walking in the area of the food store when she was pulled into a vacant area and raped. The assailant was described as being a white male in his 20s.

The victim said no vehicle was seen at the time.

Police said the victim suffered minor injuries as a result of the assault but didn't require hospitalization.

Police said although no similarities are apparent in this case to other criminal investigations originating in the area, State Police have been advised.

Lloyd L. Estey Jr., 49, of 10 Bell Court, East Hartford, was charged Wednesday with driving while under the influence of liquor or drugs or both. Police said he was observed driving erratically on Route 291.

He was released on a $250 nonreturnable bond for appearance in court in East Hartford on March 25.

Scott B. Landrie, 19, of 101 Glenstone Drive, Vernon, was arrested Wednesday on a warrant charging him with threatening and breaching of peace.

Police said the arrest was made in connection with the investigation of an incident at the Seven-Eleven Store on Ellington Avenue, in February.

He was released on a $500 nonreturnable bond for appearance in court March 24.

Annual care adds life to gutters, downspouts

Thorough annual care of your home's gutters and downspouts can add from 5 to 10 years to their service life — the kind of do-it-yourself work that keeps cash in your pocket.

Basically, according to Popular Mechanics Encyclopedia, gutter upkeep includes: 1. cleaning; 2. repairing damaged and leaky areas; and 3. preventive maintenance.

If drains clog, water can back up under roof shingles or cause a damp basement and unsightly stains on house siding. You should also know whether your house is adequately guttered — for an average rainfall, a gutter will perform well with approximately 1 sq. ft. of surface for each 150 sq. ft. of roof to be drained.

Gutter and downspout parts are available in both metal and plastic.

Gutter sections come in 8-, 10-, and 12-foot lengths — the 10 footers are perhaps the most popular length and are easy to handle. The various fittings, connectors, etc., must be ordered separately; make sure to include enough hangers. Assemble the sections on the ground; then, with help, hoist and fasten them in position.

When to clean gutters

The logical time for an annual cleaning is in autumn after all leaves have fallen. You'll find minerals and grit from your shingles in gutters as well. A whisk broom is a perfect "tool". After all leaves and debris have been scooped out, flush out the gutter, using a garden hose. During this cleaning stage you can check for leaks and drainage pitch and make necessary corrections. Keeping gutters clean is extremely important; rotting leaves combined with soot and the like to form an acid that hastens rusting and corrosion.

Consider installing gutter guard

Plastic gutter guards don't completely eliminate the leaf-cleaning task, but they do minimize it. Most types of gutter screening come in rolls 6 in. wide by 25 ft. long. It can be installed either by bowing it

"outward" in place, or inserting one side up under the bottom shingle course and tucking the other side into the gutter lip. Overlap end joints by at least 4 in. The only tool you'll need for this job is a pair of scissors for cutting the guard. In any event, the guard does not eliminate annual hosing down of gutters.

Gutter hangers

Check for sagging gutters where water will collect instead of run off. If you have water spills during a cloudburst and there are no clogs, you can assume the gutter is sagging because of a hanger problem.

A sag can be caused by a loosened hanger — usually created by an excessive weight of ice formed in an improperly pitched gutter. Other possible causes: a ladder placed against the gutter, a blow by a basketball or tree limb.

If the gutter is fastened with straps, carefully lift the shingle to avoid cracking it and check the nail. If necessary, take up the slack and replace the nail with a longer one. Then, cover nail head and surrounding area with roof cement and lower the shingle into place.

If the gutter is supported by a hidden-type hanger, the gutter section may have to be removed. If the hanger is loose, chances are the nails have backed out or too few were used originally. Add longer nails and make sure all nails are driven home so the bracket is fully seated on the fascia board.

The third type of hanger is the spike and ferrule. Carefully remove the old spike and drill a hole in the gutter as least 2 in. away from where the old spike was. Insert the spacer and drive home the spike. Patch both sides of gutter where it was pierced by the original spike.

Patching small holes and breaks

Small holes in the metal can be closed by a fabric patch and roofing compound. First clean the area, wire brush, and apply roof mastic. Then press in a patch of either fiberglass, canvas or burlap. Use a wood spatula to smooth out all wrinkles and apply a top coat of the roof mastic compound. Do not build up the area too high or you may restrict the flow of water.

If corrosive damage is extensive, an external patch may also be required. Your best bet is one of the fiberglass repair kits that are available at auto supply stores. However, in the final analysis, replacing the section may be cheaper and accomplished with less time and effort.

Annual preventive maintenance

Clean and spot-patch, and then:

—Wood gutters: keep inside surfaces thoroughly coated with brush-on asphaltic cement.

—Metal gutters: Galvanized iron may show rust spots. Wire brush, dust, apply a quality rust-preventing prime coat of paint. Consider painting the entire gutter lining, but make certain the surfaces are clean or the primer will peel off.

—Aluminum gutters: Require minimal maintenance because they do not rust. Not as strong as steel, however, and more prone to damage from blows.

—Polyvinyl chloride (PVC) plastic gutters: Practically no upkeep other than annual cleaning. Not as strong as metal when used as a ladder support and has great expansion and contraction in heat and cold. When installing, be sure to use the prescribed connectors allowing for expansion at the joints.

Build a birdhouse

Once common throughout Connecticut, the Eastern Bluebird, one of the most loved and beneficial birds, is now disappearing.

One of the most significant contributing factors in this decline has been the lack of suitable nesting cavities resulting from changing land use patterns and increasing urbanization.

By constructing nest boxes and putting them in appropriate places in your yard, you can help the bluebird make a comeback.

The proper kind of nest box, like the one illustrated at left, will keep house sparrows and starlings out.

This house was designed and approved by the North American Bluebird Society. The box will meet the needs of the bluebird and will last a long time. It can be constructed easily with hand tools and a minimum of materials.

There is no need to paint or stain the boxes. The outside may be painted with a light shade exterior latex paint. Do not paint the inside.

The Public Interest Satellite Assn., formed in 1975, tries to help nonprofit public interest, consumer, voluntary and socially active citizen groups obtain the benefits of satellite telecommunications.

Valuables need insurance

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sales of insurance covering jewelry, antiques, sterling silver, gold articles and similar valuables have tripled in the past six months, says insurance executive Vincent A. Wick.

Understandably, burglars now bypass such cumbersome items as television and stereo sets in favor of more easily portable — and often more valuable — sterling silver flatware and holloware, jewelry and other gold and silver articles.

"A six-piece place setting of sterling flatware that cost $500 a year ago is now worth more than $1,500," says Charles R. Rinehart, a San Francisco insurance executive.

Both men agree that many Americans today are underinsured.

They recommend personal property floaters because homeowners' and tenants' insurance policies in many states have built-in limits.

Typically, it is $1,000 on theft claims, Rinehart said in a telephone interview.

"A single silver bowl can easily exceed that limit," he added.

Some policies provide even smaller maximums for loss in any one incident, Wick said. For example, $100 on currently circulated coins, currency and rare coin collections, or $500 on theft of jewelry, watches, gems and furs.

Unlike many other policies, floaters carry no deductibles. They pay for all causes of loss, with some specific exclusions such as wear and tear, deliberate damage and mysterious disappearance.

In most states the premium charge per $100 of value is about $142 for jewelry, 22 cents for silverware, 35 cents for furs and $1.50 for cameras, according to the Insurance Information Institute, a New York-based trade group.

Because of the volatile situation, Wick now recommends appraisals for insurance purposes at least once a year instead of every three years, as in the past. Wick is chairman of the Inland Marine Underwriters Association, representing 200 companies nationwide, and vice chairman of Talbot, Bird & Co., of New York City.

If your sterling pattern is a discontinued one, make sure the appraiser takes that into account. Its replacement value may include a die charge on top of the price per item.

For example, my Gorham Lily of the Valley pattern now retails for $1,088 per six-piece place setting. To replace all eight settings at today's prices would cost $8,074 — plus a die charge of about $360 ($60 per piece for putting each of six dies back on the production line) and New York City and state sales taxes — at 8 percent, they would total $725.12.

The alternatives to more insurance are few:

You can sell the valuables and bank the money — and pay capital gains taxes on any profit you make over the original purchase price or the value at the time you received the articles as a gift or inheritance.

Rinehart recommends storage in a bank safe-deposit box for any valuables you use infrequently.

Those used more often should be stored in a locked cabinet, he said, or — if possible — in a safe-deposit box hidden in your home or apartment.

If you insist on displaying valuables in curio cabinets or on tables or open shelves, Rinehart said, there's nothing much you can do for protection except "install a security system, if you can afford it, or let the police know when you're going away for a while."

Rinehart said photographs of your entire home or apartment are a good idea, not so much to prove ownership if a loss should occur, but to trigger your memory. Black-and-white photos are usually adequate, he said, to supplement your written or typed records of valuables. Ideally the list should include the year each item was bought or acquired and its actual or appraised worth at that time.

Keep the inventory and photos in a fireproof cabinet or safe-deposit box or with your insurance agent, Rinehart said, and keep it up to date.

Ancient Organ

The 17th and 18th centuries were the golden age of organ music, but music for the organ was being written and played even in the days of Rome. Ktesibios, a Greek engineer, described a "hydraulis" or water-powered organ around 250 B.C. Saint Hieronymus, who died in A.D. 420, told of an organ in Jerusalem whose notes could be heard at the Mount of Olives almost a mile away.

Bed molding

Q. Will you explain "bed molding"? I've seen this term but don't know what it means. V.R., Ariz.

A. This can be defined as any strip molding used to enclose a corner such as that where the wall joins the ceiling, the purpose being that of ornamentation. Cove molding is perhaps most commonly used in this location; it may be combined with other shapes cut on the same strip.

AGELESS, NOT ANCIENT. From the earliest times, man has associated shelter with having a roof over his head. However, whereas our primitive ancestors used whatever was available, modern man can choose the type of roof he wants, and one of the most popular choices today is Hallmark, from CertainTeed Corporation. Hallmark shingles feature a three-dimensional, overlay design and textured surface that captures the rustic look of less durable wood shakes. The heavyweight shingles are so long-lasting, in fact, that they carry a 25-year limited warranty.

A KITCHEN SHOULD BE CONVENIENT, attractive and efficient. This one has lots of storage and counter space, good looks and cabinets certified by the National Kitchen Cabinet Association for long-lasting service.

Up-to-date appraisal urged

NEW YORK (UPI) — An up-to-date appraisal of personal property for insurance purposes can often pay for itself if you have to make a claim for theft or other loss.

The costs vary regionally.

Members of the Washington-based American Society of Appraisers quote either an hourly rate or a flat fee, says Shirley Belz.

"Our society considers it unethical to ask a percentage fee or a contingency fee," Ms. Belz said in a telephone interview. A percentage fee would be based on the total value of the items appraised. A contingency fee, on a sale being completed, for example,

Ms. Belz said the ASA is the only one of five major testing and certifying societies in the United States that covers several fields, including real estate, personal property, machinery and equipment and intangibles such as stocks and bonds. The other four appraise real estate only.

"You don't have to be licensed to appraise personal property," Ms. Belz said, but there are ways of checking appraisers' credentials. The society publishes a free directory of its members, about 350 nationwide, who must pass recertification tests every five years.

With every copy of the directory the society encloses a free booklet telling consumers what questions to ask appraisers before using their services.

Such as: "What's your job history and educational background? Do you belong to a professional society? Do you have any professional certificates? How do you keep up-to-date? Are your appraisals accepted by insurance companies, local banks, the Internal Revenue Service?"

You can double check answers to the last question at the institutions or businesses in question, she said.

If you are new in a community, Ms. Belz suggested looking in the Yellow Pages. An appraiser whose name is followed by ASA is a member of the professional society she speaks for.

If there's no member locally, ask your insurance agent or banker or the curator of the local museum or gallery (in the case of fine arts appraisals) for their evaluation of the persons listed locally.

"The Smithsonian (Institution) gets lots of requests," Ms. Belz said. "They refer them to our society."

For a copy of the free directory of appraisers and the appraisal booklet, write American Society of Appraisers, Dulles International Airport, P.O. Box 17265, Washington, D.C. 20041.

Renovated Manchester home

MANCHESTER — Homesteading came to Hamlin Street recently.

A renovated house, transformed from a single-family to two-family to group house and back again, was displayed at an open house.

The house, located at 52-54 Hamlin St. was built in 1916 and six weeks of rehabilitating changed an eyesore back to a dream home.

"You've got to like renovating," said Tony Salerno of Tosa Building Enterprises. "A home like this has got to be saved through renovating rather than remodeling. Remodeling is just tearing out and making new."

The home is being rented by Strano Realty Network of Homes of Manchester. Frank Strano said he has received praise and thanks from the neighbors ever since the project was completed.

The chore involved re-plastering ceilings, taking out doors or putting new ones in, installing new ballasts for most of the windows and re-finishing door and window frames.

For energy conservation measures, Strano said storm windows were installed and insulation with a foam core backing was placed underneath the vinyl siding.

An oil furnace was converted to gas to complement the gas water heaters in the basement. However, the original radiators were retained.

As an added conservation ploy, the ropes and counterweights were taken out of the windows and numerous air cavities which robbed the home of heat were tightened.

Salerno estimated it took 4,300 man-hours to complete the project, including three weeks of simply re-plastering the water-stained ceilings and walls.

A door on the northwest side of the home was removed and replaced by another window. Salerno said the woodwork had to be made to match the existing windows because it would be impossible to buy new ones.

Other improvements included re-installing french doors in the downstairs living room, removing a creaky spiral staircase and covering exposed pipes.

Salerno also said a renovated older home is better built than the newer ones of the past decade. The craftsmen took pride in their work, he said, and there was less emphasis on quick development as in modern times.

UPDATE HOME TO INCREASE ITS VALUE

"To move or not to move?" seems to be the question facing many of today's homeowners.

With increased interest rates on new home mortgages, the high cost of new homes and the expense of moving, a growing number of homeowners have realized that the smartest move right now is staying put.

The National Home Improvement Council notes that a home represents the largest investment an individual or family is likely to make. To protect that investment and increase its value, updating may be necessary.

Matter of priorities

Repairs that are imperative should be tackled first. Other less pressing cosmetic improvements or convenience features can be left for later.

All home improvements, however, require careful planning. NHIC points out. Room layouts, for example, should be planned with open traffic areas, adequate storage space and sufficient lighting.

Energy use labeling due for appliances

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Few consumers even think about energy conservation when buying some home appliances, according to a new survey.

That situation could change later this year when energy use labeling becomes mandatory on some appliances and sales literature.

The preliminary study was done for the Federal Trade Commission, which is administering the labeling program. It showed only a little more than one out of every 10 buyers of a refrigerator or washer-dryer mentioned (without prompting) energy efficiency as a factor in their purchase decision.

The 725 persons questioned were selected from a pool of 35,000 households.

"When confronted directly with the issue by an interviewer, consumers rated energy efficiency as a moderately important factor in their purchase decisions," the study concluded.

"However, other factors, such as size, warranty, price and brand were given higher ratings."

The study also showed only 10 percent of those interviewed has ever seen or heard energy efficiency information in appliance advertising, and only 5 to 15 percent were aware of how much they were paying for electricity or natural gas, or what annual operating costs might be on new, energy-labeled appliances.

The FTC authorized the survey to provide a base for comparing consumer attitudes in a second survey, after energy labeling and sales information are widespread.

The energy information program was ordered by Congress in a 1975 law. The makers of refrigerators, refrigerator-freezers, freezers, dishwashers, water heaters, clothes washers, room air conditioners and furnaces were given six months, starting from November 1979, to prepare the information.

The new labels and sales information will give consumers the estimated cost of running each make and model for one year, based on average utility rates. They will also compare the high and low energy costs with other brands of the same model.

Figures recently published by the FTC reflect some dramatic differences.

It can cost $79 to $109 per year to run a refrigerator-freezer in the 24.5 to 26.4 cubic inch size, according to information supplied by manufacturers.

For a 14.5 to 16.4 cubic inch refrigerator-freezer, the range is $33 to $92. A standard-sized electric dishwasher, $41 to $80.

Decorative carpet squares are a springtime "panacea"

In most cases, you can't have your cake and eat it, too. For example . . . when it comes to flooring, you sometimes have to choose between a "look" and a "feel."

With a new product on the market, however—there is a cure-all. Although it looks like a handsome parquet wood floor, it is, in fact, a soft cushiony carpet.

And the neat thing about it is that the project is neat—one that you can handle entirely yourself in a few hours—with the finished installation hard to detect from one done by a pro!

The high-style pattern developed by Armstrong Cork Company is called "Random Parquet" and is available nationally at most home centers. The cost: only 79¢ per 12" x 12" square, packaged 10 to a carton.

Extremely durable bonded fiber—polypropylene (sometimes called olefin)—makes up the carpet pile; this material withstands a lot of kiddie and pet traffic.

The Honey Teak color is an easy-to-live-with wood tone compatible with whatever other woods there may be in a room.

These squares solve the decorating dilemma for those who like wood's natural look but also want the comfort of carpeting.

There is no question about it—a carpeted floor is easier for young children to play on and Mother will find herself considerably less foot-sore at the end of a busy day.

Resistant to moisture, mildew and rot, carpet squares come with their own high-density foam back that is approved for installation above or below grade.

Installation is as simple as it looks in the photograph. You just press into place after establishing room-center guide lines. Detailed instructions, e.g., how to handle room perimeters, are included with clear diagrams in every package.

For a quick pick-me-up this spring—a remedy for winter blues—carpet squares are better than sulphur 'n molasses!

NO EASIER SPRING PICK-UP is there than a carpet-square put-me-down! "Random Parquet" squares from Armstrong offer a decorator styled parquet wood-floor look with the softness underfoot that only carpet has. Available 10/pack at 79¢/square, these 12" x 12" carpet squares are simple to install, with no messy adhesive or clean up. Full illustrated instructions come in every pack. Available at local home center stores.

As for satisfaction—probably no other project can compete with carpet-square installation for instant and long-term gratification.

Help Yourself Save Money Help America Save Energy

Check the Big Ten Checklist to Save More Energy in Your Home

- Home Energy Checklist
- You are probably using more electricity, gas, and oil than necessary. By using the Big Ten Checklist, you can identify ways of reducing energy use and costs, and help the nation conserve energy. The first six items include actions which you can undertake with little or no expense. Other measures involving expenditures also may result in long-term savings of money and energy.
- 1 Weather-stripping/caulking—look for air cracks around doors, windows, and other openings, such as around pipes and ducts. Seal them by caulking or weather-stripping. Heat and air conditioning escape through cracks.
  - 2 Thermostat—set at 65 degrees in winter and at least 5 degrees lower when sleeping or away. (Higher heating temperatures are recommended for homes with sick, elderly, or infants.) Set at 78 degrees in summer. Consider a clock thermostat.
  - 3 Water heaters—this is a major energy user in the home. Try a lower thermostat setting. Consider an insulation wrap. Install water-flow restrictors in showers and faucets. They cut hot water use without affecting family comfort. When replacing water heater, choose an energy-efficient model.
  - 4 Heating/cooling system—clean or replace filters as needed. Close vents in unused rooms. Insulate ducts and pipes in unheated spaces. Consider "ductless" which can increase the efficiency of your existing system. When replacing, choose an energy-efficient model.
  - 5 Sunlight—keep direct sunlight out in summer; let it in during winter. Drapes, shutters, awnings, shade trees, glass with reflective film, and solar screens help.
  - 6 Appliances/lighting—fully load dryers and clothes and dish washers. Turn off unnecessary lights. If replacing, buy energy-efficient appliances and lighting.
  - 7 Attic insulation—check to see if your attic has the recommended level of insulation, including the attic door.
  - 8 Floors and foundation walls—check for adequate insulation under floors, around basement, crawl space, and foundation walls.
  - 9 Windows and doors—consider storm windows, doors, or double-paneled glass to keep in heat and air conditioning.
  - 10 Exterior walls—consider adding insulation, particularly when remodeling or re-siding your house.
- After completing this checklist, you may want to call your utility, state energy office, or Agricultural Extension Service to obtain general advice on doing the job safely and correctly. For information about energy-efficient products, contact building material retailers, contractors, fuel dealers, manufacturers, or distributors. Shop for best prices and values.
- * You may qualify for federal income tax credits of 10 percent of the first $2,000 spent on the items marked above. You may also qualify for tax credits up to $2,000 for approved solar devices.
- These recommendations are presented as a service of the National Institute of Building Sciences and the United States Department of Energy to encourage you to save energy and money.

Tax credit is incentive to conserve home energy

If a home improvement project related to energy conservation is included in your list of things to do this spring, don't forget to take a tax credit for it next spring, advises the National Home Improvement Council.

The Energy Act of 1978, scheduled to remain in effect until January 1, 1986, provides a tax credit of up to $300 for home remodeling designed to conserve energy.

NHIC points out that this is a tax credit, not a deduction. In other words, if your completed tax form shows you owe the Federal government $305 in taxes and you are eligible for the $300 credit, you wind up owing Uncle Sam $5.

The tax credit applies to such energy conservation items as insulation, caulking, weather-stripping, and storm windows and doors, as well as a variety of other items. Even the cost of labor for installation is included.

How does it work? At the end of the calendar year, add up all the energy-saving purchases that qualify and take as a tax credit 15 percent of the total, up to $300.

Although the initial cost of the energy-saving items qualifies under the tax credit, the subsequent cost of installing them the following winter does not: re-installing storm windows, for example.

Nor does the tax credit apply to any energy-saving items the Internal Revenue Service regards as decorative, such as drapes, siding or carpets.

NHIC suggests the best way to determine whether the home improvement project you have in mind qualifies for the tax credit is to contact your local IRS office or consult your accountant.

In any case, remember that to qualify for the tax credit in April, the installation of the energy-saving items must be completed prior to the end of the previous calendar year.

The finished result is a beautiful new patio with a hard finish.

Solid vinyl siding can take the sting out of spring

Now that winter has run its course and we've seen the last of the white stuff for a while, it's time to get out-of-doors where everything's fresh—the air, the flowers but, alas, not the paint.

It may have been comfy inside the house, looking at snowflakes gathering on the lawn, but the exterior of your home had to stand right up to the cold north wind and several months of outright abuse.

Now's the time to pay your dues, with the scrapin', chip-pin' and repainting' blues.

Springtime coat

That siding of yours which was at the mercy of the elements all winter probably needs a new coat or two—and that's going to take a lot of your time and/or money.

But, it doesn't have to be that way every spring. You can declare your homeowner's rights by adding solid vinyl siding to the outside of your home. It makes painting passé.

The reason is that solid vinyl siding is made with the color molded clear through the product, in contrast to other types of home siding such as wood or aluminum, which are only coated.

Maintenance-free

As a result, vinyl siding will not peel, blister or show scratches. In a word, it's virtually maintenance-free so, once it's installed, you can put away your paintbrush forever.

One of the leading manufacturers of solid vinyl siding, CertainTeed Corporation, is so sure that its vinyl siding will take on the rigors of your local environment, that it offers a 40-year pro-rated warranty on its product. (In Cal., only a 15-year pro-rated warranty is available.) And their siding carries the Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval as well.

But, the durability and virtual freedom from maintenance of solid vinyl siding are only half the story.

One of the most exciting things about the product is its beauty. Solid vinyl siding is available in a glorious range of decorator colors; CertainTeed, for example, offers nine.

In addition, there are a number of special effects that can be created. Horizontal and vertical panels are available in various sizes.

And, you can also get vinyl soffit and fascia systems, various types of trim, shutters, etc.—all perfectly color-coordinated. If desired, you can even purchase replacement window profiles to complete the ensemble of the well-dressed house.

Beautify neighborhood

So, when you come out of your winter cocoon, be a butterfly! Brighten up your neighborhood with the good looks of solid vinyl siding. It takes the sting out of spring and the hate out of paint.

For more information on virtually maintenance-free building products, write to the CertainTeed Home Institute, P.O. Box 860, Valley Forge, PA 19482.

Stylize your dishwasher and discover an exciting new look

One of the most welcome home improvements is the installation of a built-in dishwasher in the kitchen. Currently, two of every five homes in America have this workhorse appliance.

When adding the appliance, Maytag suggests that instead of hiding it among the cabinetry, the dishwasher can be stylized to make it a decorating focal point.

Here's how-to

A new do-it-yourself booklet, "Quick-Change Dishwasher Decorating," provides ideas and guidelines for personalizing the dishwasher front with everything from poster art, to wallcovering, to hobby crafts such as needlepoint.

Providing the dishwasher with a distinctive front begins with a custom trim kit that is available from most dishwasher manufacturers.

Kitchen showcase

This trim kit is the frame that is used to showcase fabrics, photographs—almost any kind of material on the front of the dishwasher.

Clear acrylic can protect items from moisture and stains. Step-by-step instructions are included in the guidebook.

A FLAIR FOR STYLE is evident in this kitchen home improvement project, where the front of the built-in Maytag dishwasher is personalized with a quilt pattern, protected under plexiglass. This "country look" is just one of several ideas Maytag has compiled into a new do-it-yourself booklet on decorating the dishwasher front.

The booklet also offers helpful hints on selecting wall and window coverings and accessories to establish a total decorating scheme in the kitchen.

Conduct home energy audit in the name of conservation

Five years ago, the average homeowner spent about $1,000 a year for electricity, gas and fuel oil, according to Business Week magazine. In many parts of the country last year, notes the publication, that bill rose to $3,000.

The staggering high cost of energy is forcing many homeowners into a sober appraisal of energy conservation.

Sometimes, modest alterations that pay for themselves in two or three years can trim heating and cooling costs by as much as 25 to 30 percent, says the National Home Improvement Council (NHIC).

The first step NHIC recommends is to conduct an attic to basement search to determine those areas subject to higher than average energy loss.

Check the walls, attic floor and basement for adequate insulation. Inspect the windows and doors for excessive air infiltration—a cold draft whenever you come close to a window or door. This is caused by inadequate or poorly applied weatherstripping.

It's also a good idea to check the heating and cooling system to make sure it is operating at the peak of efficiency.

Since most heat escapes through the roof and exterior walls, or through the glass in windows, well-insulated attics and walls together with tightly weatherstripped windows, are energy-saving essentials.

Floors over unheated spaces such as basements or crawl spaces should also be insulated to proper levels, according to NHIC.

Generally accepted standards call for R-30 insulation in the attic, R-19 for floors and R-13 for walls.

When shopping for insulation, advises the Council, be wary of those who talk in terms of inches.

Ask about "R-values," which are a measure of a material's ability to retard heat flow. The higher the R-value, the more efficient the insulation.

If it turns out that you need work done to bring your home up to modern energy conservation standards, hire a qualified contractor you can depend on.

NHIC suggests that you select a professional with an established place of business, one who is financially stable and is willing to supply a list of references. Check with your local NHIC chapter or contact the Better Business Bureau.

How to do it: Qs and As

Antique screws

Q. I'm finishing an antique on which several exposed screws must be replaced. How can I make new screws look old? W.S., Nashville, Tenn.

A. You don't mention whether the antique will be painted or stained. But either way, your best bet is to "antique" the screws by aging. If the piece is painted, use a thinned paint of the desired color for a natural piece; offhand, I would recommend that you use a black enamel. Apply the paint to the screwheads and wait until it is tacky; then rub it lightly until some of the metal shows through. For a longer lasting finish, you could cover the paint with a semi-gloss varnish. This method can be used on both steel and brass screws.

Copper boiler

Q. I've seen old copper wash boilers prettied up to look like new. How do they do it? I have an old copper boiler, with what I think is a steel cover, that I want to look like those I've seen. L.D., Kansas City, Kans.

A. Restoration shops that specialize in this sort of thing use power scratch-brushing and polishing equipment. But if you are willing to supply the arm-power, there are commercial polishes that will let you do almost as well by hand. Follow the directions on the can, then protect then cleaned copper by applying a coat or two of clear lacquer.

To refurbish the cover, rub off all rust and dirt using steel wool. Follow this cleaning with a spray-coat of metal primer and finally supply a spray-coat in a "brass" color. This should be acceptably close to the tub's color.

Problem wall

Q. My old-style kitchen sink is located about midway on an inner, windowless wall, but exactly opposite a double window. I can't move it to the outside wall unless I install new plumbing and new windows because the present windows are too low. What can I do to make the kitchen more attractive? W.G., Canada.

A. Your sparse description of the layout leaves little on which to base a suggestion. If the dining room is on the other side of the wall where the sink is located, you could cut an opening in the wall over the sink. Frame it in and have a wide, pass-through serving shelf. Then you could hang planters filled with artificial plants at each end of the opening to add a touch of color. A scalloped board across the top would also add an eye-catching detail to what otherwise would be a plain rectangular opening.

If an opening isn't practical, look for a large mirror as long as the sink is wide and as high as it is deep. Mounted above the sink, it would "picture" the window opposite and also include the view outside. In effect, the overall illusion would be akin to that from a window directly above the sink.

Mounting a wall mural over the sink might solve the problem. In this case, the view should strike your fancy, yet be something you would be content to live with for a time.

Plastic bags

Q. Isn't there some way to dry the interior of plastic food bags quickly? I wash 'em, turn 'em inside out and back again, but still there's the problem of getting them really dry, inside and out. Can you enlighten me? W.D., Mass.

A. I suppose there are a baker's dozen ways of drying food bags, but the method that seems most effective to me is to stuff 'em with power toweling after washing. This "balloons" them, allows air to circulate, and the paper toweling quickly absorbs any beads of moisture remaining, you can dry the toweling and reuse it.

Choosing paint colors to showcase fabrics

This year, home furnishings are more imaginative and exciting than we've seen in recent memory.

Found abundantly on upholstered pieces and in drapery fabrics, they're the perfect focal point around which to plan a new decorating scheme.

Designers have created materials that stir the senses and excite the mind: finely drawn florals in sumptuous color combinations; opulent Oriental shades in exotic florals, many elegantly outline-quilted; dramatic abstracts and geometrics in vibrant, uplifting colors; and lush velvets and corduroys, often in two-color patterns.

To create the right setting for these scene-stealing designs, wall paint colors should be carefully selected so that they enhance rather than compete with the patterns.

Here are a few suggestions from the National Paint and Coatings Association:

- With a print that has two rather dominant colors, use a very pale version of one of the colors for walls and ceiling, and a darker shade of the other for woodwork.

- Vibrantly colored plushy fabrics can be displayed beautifully against walls treated to deep-toned, neutral textured paint.

- Heighten the stimulating effect of an abstract or geometric pattern by continuing it onto the wall with a color-cued super-graphic.

- For an Oriental-inspired design, set off the jewel-like colors by painting an accent wall deep turquoise, emerald or ruby enamel.
