Shiff convicted on tax charges

HARTFORD (UPI) — A U.S. District Court jury Friday found tax rebel Irwin A. Schiff guilty of willful failure to file federal income tax returns in 1974 and 1975. Foreman Joseph A. Civitolo rose and said the "jury has found the defendant guilty on both counts of the information" after its second day and more than nine hours of deliberation. The prosecution in the federal retrial had said Schiff, a maverick tax protester, used his non-payment of taxes to promote his book and ideas.

Gas fee veto is overridden

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress Friday killed the dime-a-gallon gasoline fee President Carter tried to impose, overriding a Democratic president's veto for the first time in 28 years. The election-year vote, assuring that Americans will not have to pay the fee for the time being, was lopsided against Carter in both chambers. By a 68-10 vote Friday, the Senate overrode Carter's veto of legislation killing the fee. The House, in a carnival atmosphere of cheers and laughter, voted 335-34 late Thursday for the override.

In both instances, the totals surpassed the two-thirds vote needed to overcome the president's veto. It was the first time since 1982, when Congress rejected Harry Truman's veto of the McCarran-Walter Immigration and Nationality Act, that Democratic lawmakers in control of Congress overrode a president of their own party. Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd, who voted to sustain Carter's veto, called the outcome "an unhappy vote," and warned that America's "energy problem is not going to go away."

East Hartford vandalism termed 'unexplainable'

By PATRICK REILLY Herald Reporter
EAST HARTFORD — Director of Parks and Recreation Fred Balet calls the latest work of vandals in Gorman Park unexplainable. Monday and Wednesday night vandals broke into a concession stand adjacent to the baseball field at Gorman Park on the town's southeast side. The vandals did the greatest amount of damage Wednesday night taking more than $300 worth of candy, destroying a $200 hot dog steamer, stealing 20 Little League T-shirts and damaging a soda machine. Judy Terlizzi, president of the Woman's Auxiliary of the East Hartford Little League, the organization that operates the concession stands in three town parks, said the vandals also took ice cream from a freezer in the locked concession stand and "threw it around" along with condiment packages full of mustard, ketchup and relish. Like Balet, Ms. Terlizzi was outraged by the vandalism and after seeing the destruction done to the stand called it "horrendous and unbelievable."

The verdict came late Friday after the jury sent Chief U.S. District Judge T. Emmet Clarke a note which said "we are in agreement on one count but appear to have a locked jury on the other count." Clarke read the jury a supplemental charge which asked that they re-examine and reconsider all the evidence before them and they resumed deliberations. Earlier Clarke, over the strenuous objections of Schiffs court appointed counsel, instructed the jury on two questions it raised. Schiffs defense counsel argued against answering the questions, saying the only issue was the defendant's understanding of the law. Attorney Douglas Gilmore argued to answer the questions would be "devastatingly prejudicial."

Schiff, a 51-year-old financial consultant, was charged with willfully failing to file tax returns. Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael Hartner had told the jurors that Schiffs documents did not constitute returns and the defendant was aware he was acting illegally at the time. Throughout the trial, which began May 27, Schiff claimed filing 1949 forms was voluntary under the U.S. Internal Revenue Service Code. In answering the voluntary compliance question, Clarke told the jury the primary responsibility for filing an income tax return rests with an individual who has appropriate gross income. He said that under law Schiff was a person required to file because he earned more than the minimums of $2,050 in 1974 and $2,350 in 1975.

Alcohol center director resigning as of July 1

By LAUREN DAVIS SHEA

MANCHESTER — Stephen O'Donnell, director of the town drug and alcohol counseling center and president of the Manchester Community Services Council, Friday announced his intention to resign. The resignation will be effective July 1, with O'Donnell accepting a position as director of social services for Natchaug Hospital in Willimantic. O'Donnell traced his decision to resign to a need for professional growth. He has served as director of the 10-year-old Crossroads for the past four years. O'Donnell was the third director of the center. As it is a non-profit community agency, his successor will be chosen by a local board, the Drug Advisory Council. William Johnson, president of the council and of the Savings Bank of Manchester, could not be reached for comment on the council's plans to replace O'Donnell. O'Donnell said Elizabeth Peterson, second in command at the center, is interested in the position. "I have very much enjoyed working in Manchester. For a town of its size (50,000) Manchester is a

His new position will involve spending half of his time conducting groups and working on patient therapy for the 90-bed private psychiatric hospital. O'Donnell considered upgrading the standards for employment with Crossroads his major accomplishment while director, with the result that the community's image of the center has increased proportionately. "When I came, only one employee had a masters degree. Now, all the full time employees have masters degrees. Related to that, is the elevated community respect for Crossroads as a professional community agency," O'Donnell said. "We have improved the quality of our counseling, the handling of our hotline, and the drug education in the community as a result of the increasing credibility from having upgraded the staff," O'Donnell added. The New York City native lives with his wife, Rachel, in Coventry. The couple is expecting their first child.

The vandals did the greatest amount of damage Wednesday night taking more than $300 worth of candy, destroying a $200 hot dog steamer, stealing 20 Little League T-shirts and damaging a soda machine. She said vandals had broken into the stand at Gorman Park on Monday night but only stole candy and three things, she said. On Wednesday the damage was far more extensive. Ms. Terlizzi said, with the vandals even stealing the locks to the doors. She said what wasn't stolen, such as paper cups, had to be thrown out because it had been splattered with various foods and eggshells. Because of the vandalism to the stand, Ms. Terlizzi said she is considering closing the stand during the Little League jamboree scheduled this weekend at the park. The Woman's Auxiliary of the Little League also operates the concession stands at Labor Field and McCalliffe Park. Ms. Terlizzi said 90 percent of the revenue from the concession stands is given to the Little League. She said the Gorman Park stand was also vandalized earlier this spring. "Though Balet said the vandalism at Gorman Park is the worst of all town parks, vandalism occurs in all town parks regardless of the time of year. Residents have requested in the past that park equipment such as swings be put out earlier in the

If the vandalism continues in the parks, he said the parks may have to be controlled which would mean fencing them in. Truck purchase opposed

By MARY KITZMANN
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — Purchasing new dump trucks may cause some controversy among town directors again.

The Republican directors are showing some opposition to the purchase of two new dump trucks for general use in the Public Works Department. Letting contracts for the trucks was approved in March by the directors, but the final purchase approval is on the board's agenda for next Tuesday.

The board is asked to approve spending $87,600 for the trucks. This money is a surplus in the Highway Department account, according to Thomas Moore, controller.

Chamber tours Meadows

MANCHESTER — Members of the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce had an opportunity to see the facilities of Meadows Convalescent Center Friday.

As part of the chamber's on-going First Friday Forum series, the history, philosophy and scope of the center was outlined by William Fiochetti, administrator of the three-building complex.

Fiochetti said the 518-bed facility offers two care levels. He said there is an intermediate care, or rest home portion devoted to care of patients who are largely self-reliant and a larger skilled care portion devoted to bed patients or ambulatory patients with more critical needs.

The surplus stems from the unusually mild winter, which did not require the average amount of snow removal and equipment usage. Moore said. Besides the saving in labor, and gasoline, there were also the savings in equipment repairs.

The surplus was expected near winter's end, when it became apparent the fund would not be used. The surplus, in accounting procedure, goes back into the General Fund, and could be used for another expenditure besides the dump trucks.

Using the money for the trucks was criticized today by Republican Director Pete DiRosa, and two other party members also indicated they do not view the purchase favorably.

DiRosa said he would oppose the purchase if the money was not allotted under the present fiscal year which expires June 30.

Peter Sylvester, GOP director, said the purchase had been brought to his attention, and that he planned to check it this weekend.

Gloria Della Fera said that her stand on purchasing dump trucks was well-known, and that she "probably" would not be in favor of the new trucks.

"I believe the departments should make do with what they have right now," she said today.

However, Miss Della Fera will be absent from the next board meeting, leaving the Republican minority with three members.

Rivera's past revealed at sentencing hearing

By KEVIN FOLEY
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — Ever since the March 28 accident which took the life of 11-year-old Deborah L. Bushnell, the man charged in the accident has been all but a ghost, his past shrouded in official silence, both prosecutors and police investigators unwilling and perhaps unable to tell the public about Angel A. Rivera.

On the balmy early spring day, at about 3 p.m., Rivera, under the influence of a combination of drugs and alcohol, lost control of a wheelchair van he'd stolen just two hours before, crashed through a fence and struck the Bushnell girl and her friend Marina Campos also 11 as they walked along Adams Street.

Twenty minutes later, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter M. Bushnell of 31 Jarvis Road was dead at Manchester Memorial Hospital. The daughter of Norma Campos of New State Road, was in critical condition with head injuries. Angel Rivera was under arrest, charged with misconduct with a motor vehicle and second-degree larceny.

On May 5, Rivera pleaded no contest to his charges and Friday, he received two-and-a-half to five-year sentences for the crimes plus another five months to be served as part of a parole violation. Since Superior Court Judge Sabino Tamborra ordered to serve the sentences concurrently, the 23-year-old Rivera could be paroled in 20 months, according to police sources.

But it was Rivera's mysterious past read into the record by Assistant State's Attorney Cornelius Shea which shed light on a man Shea said must "be isolated from the rest of the decent law abiding citizens for a long, long time."

Rivera, according to a presentencing investigation conducted by probation authorities, grew up a troublemaker. He was expelled from a Wallingford School, Shea said, while in the seventh grade where teachers there remember him as a

"crude, volatile boy."
"His own grandparents couldn't stand him," Shea declared.

"I won't stand here and say what happened wasn't tragic, but Mr. Rivera is coming up to his responsibility and he has been consistently candid with the police," Handler said.

"It's unfair to blame only Mr. Rivera," Handler added referring to the arrest and not guilty plea of Daniel Martin, the 19-year-old taxi driver who allegedly chased Rivera at speeds of up to 80 mph. He was charged with reckless endangerment and reckless driving.

"He's deeply distraught about the tragedy he's caused and he'll bear the scars of it for the rest of his life," Handler concluded.

After reading a psychological report on Rivera, Tamborra imposed the sentence and noted that Rivera "is a typical product of child abuse."
