Tests show problems in big cities

HARTFORD (UPI)—Proficiency tests taken by Connecticut's ninth graders showed that students in big cities have a problem with basic skills, especially mathematics, Education Commissioner Mark Shedd said today.

Shedd said pumping more money into urban school areas for remedial assistance would help, but he said the solution lies with local school boards channeling their resources to problem areas.

"Regardless how a district did in the overall picture, the test is only as useful as the remedial efforts which follow as a result," he said at a news conference.

The proficiency tests, the first conducted statewide in Connecticut, were given to 44,830 ninth grade students and covered language arts, writing, reading and math. The tests were mandated by the Legislature in 1978.

Shedd said 83.4 percent of Connecticut's students surpassed the level of expected performance in reading; 92 percent made the grade in language arts; 89 percent performed acceptably on the writing sample, and 78 percent of the students were considered proficient in mathematics.

"The percentages do not relate to an average, but rather to a minimum standard below which a student may not be able to function effectively in school subjects," he said.

Shedd said the purpose of the proficiency tests, which were conducted in March, was to determine which students need remedial assistance in one or more areas.

He said the tests showed that about one quarter of the students may need further diagnosis in at least one basic skill. One in nine students, he said, may need help in more than one area.

When broken down by community, Shedd said that three out of five students in Connecticut's major cities may need further diagnosis in at least one skill, and one of three urban students may need help in more than one area.

Shedd said that the lower scores in mathematics didn't mean that the math test was more difficult, but highlighted the increasing emphasis on reading and language arts in recent years.

"There is also a tendency for students to integrate writing skills and reading into every facet of their daily lives while mathematics often remains an isolated discipline," he said.

Tests of future may be tougher

MANCHESTER — While today marks the graduation of the first class in Manchester High School's history that had to take a proficiency test to graduate, a Board of Education member said she wouldn't be surprised if future graduating classes are required to take a more difficult test.

The MHS class of 1980 had to pass a test of basic skills, such as reading and writing, before being allowed to graduate. This test was given in the students' sophomore year, but tested their proficiency in ninth grade level skills.

Mrs. Eleanor Colman, board member, said today because such an enormous proportion of students have passed the test, she wouldn't be surprised if the board discussed making the test more difficult.

"Instead of testing them on a ninth grade level of skills, maybe we'll test them on a tenth grade level," Mrs. Colman suggested. She said she has no immediate plans to place the issue on the Board of Education's agenda "but somewhere down the line we might discuss it."

The initial problem Mrs. Colman mentioned would be finding a common ground on which to test students at the advanced level.

By tenth grade, students are beginning to become involved in their majors, he it business or college bound.

But Mrs. Colman expressed confidence that there would still be enough in the area of basic skills on which students all could be tested to show a proficiency.

When the current test was given to students, 9 percent failed. Through special remedial classes, and an opportunity to take the test as many as nine times, all but six of the 598 seniors have now passed.

Five of those students are in special education program and wouldn't have received diplomas anyway.

Lawmakers considering Ella's vetoes

HARTFORD (UPI)—Only three of the 21 measures vetoed by Gov. Ella Grasso have been given a shot to be overridden by the lawmakers due back at the Capitol for the annual trailer session.

The special session scheduled for today is required to deal with bills approved by the 1980 Legislature and a two-thirds majority vote in the Senate and House of Representatives is needed to override a veto.

Of the 21 vetoes which the so-called trailer session can deal with only one measure stands a chance to be overridden and two others have only a slim possibility of approval.

Legislative leaders have indicated the special session may last only about five hours and only about eight vetoed bills will even be reconsidered.

The veto given the best chance at being overridden was one exempting gifts to hospitals from being regulated by the state Commission on Hospitals and Health Care.

Governor Grasso said she vetoed the bill because some hospitals might use the request for reasons other than reducing patient rates unless the state had supervision over the way the money was used.

The bill passed both chambers without opposition as part of a package of bills supported by the commission and the Connecticut Hospital Association. But the commission later called for a veto after another of its favored bills was killed in the Legislature through lobbying by the CHA.

Two other bills given a lesser chance of survival would establish one-way tolls on the Merritt Parkway and the Wilbur Cross Parkway and require contractors to hire only licensed tradesmen in order to obtain local building permits.

Mrs. Grasso said one-way tolls would cost the state revenue and cause congestion on local roads by motorists seeking to avoid paying a 9-cent toll.

She said she killed the contractors bill because it wouldn't do much to help those in construction trades, especially apprentices, although she was in favor of barring unlicensed tradesmen from certain construction jobs.

Other art division awards included: Second, "General Store," an oil painting by Bruce Pease; Third, "Dilly Flowers," a watercolor by Rita Betko; Fourth, "Portrait of Michael," a pastel by Joan S. Rivlin and honorable mentions, "Mums," a watercolor by Layne; "On Point," gouache by William Lambert and "Summer Day," a watercolor by John Hrabushki.

Iran loses support of Socialists

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI)—Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said today the world's Socialist leaders—"without any exception"—told him they could not support Iran unless the 53 American hostages were freed.

Speaking to reporters on his talks with Socialist leaders in Oslo and Stockholm last week, Ghotbzadeh said all the Socialist leaders he talked to "were unanimous in their view that this problem of the hostages must be solved somehow."

Ghotbzadeh spoke as U.N. envoy Atefeh Daoudy left Tehran after a 27-day mission aimed at breaking the hostage stalemate.

Daoudy left Iran a few hours after former Attorney General Ramsey Clark returned to the United States.

Clark said the hostage crisis will go on as long as the United States remains concerned only about "53 of its own" while "totally indifferent to crimes committed under the regime of the shah.

Ghotbzadeh said Daoudy "has no more reason, as far as we are concerned, to return to Iran. Neither does his commission."

Daoudy, a Syrian jurist, was one of the five members of the U.N. inquiry commission on Iran which visited the capital in February and March.

"I talked to all Socialist leaders collectively and individually," Ghotbzadeh said. "All of them without any exception — both the Socialists from the Third World and Socialists from Europe — were unanimous in their view that this problem of the hostages must be solved somehow."

"All of them believed that continuation of this condition will rule out their defense of the Islamic revolution of Iran," Ghotbzadeh said.

He said he believed the Socialists were "forthright and sincere" in expressing their views.

Other art division awards were: Second, covered jar, pottery by Susan Gerr; Third, Opal necklace, silver by Sara J. Clark; Fourth, pitchfork in wood by Cliff Giannu and honorable mentions, "Bryant Point," woodburning by Ernest Malley, 18-wheel wooden truck, by Harriet and Richard Ellsworth and pendant and ring, silver, by Anna and Robert Caron. Special awards given to members of the Manchester Art Association went to Grace Tedford for "Figure Eight," a water color and "Meditation," by Viola Sobol, acrylic.

Mrs. Eleanor Colman, board member, said today because such an enormous proportion of students have passed the test, she wouldn't be surprised if the board discussed making the test more difficult.

State won't let us keep that extra license plate

HARTFORD (UPI)—Connecticut switchers to a single motor vehicle license plate July 1 — but don't get any ideas about that extra plate on your car.

It belongs to the state, even though you paid for it, even though you own the plate and told to turn it in to the MVD.

MVD Commissioner Benjamin Muzio has pointed out that on all registration renewals after July 1 the new law applies to all only one sticker will be provided for placement on the rear marker plate.

He suggested that motorists turn in or mail the plates to any MVD office to avoid potential headaches.

Also, the new single reflectorized plate that will be issued for new registrations beginning July 1 will contain a new sequence of numbers and letters.

The department suggests motorists may get themselves into problems if they decide to give the front plate to the kids for their bikes or wagons, or decorate the garage or den, or just keep it on the front of their car.

It could be an invitation to thieves to steal the plate and use it on a stolen car, for one thing.

A car using a lost or stolen plate could be used in some kind of criminal activity that could cause us necessary aggravation for you with law enforcement personnel.

Technically, you can also be stepped for driving with the front plate and told to turn it in to the MVD.

One last thing, beginning July 1 registration renewals will cost $40 instead of $20 but will be good for two years.

The double dip was contrived by state lawmakers as a way to raise another $10 million needed to balance the governor's budget. The lawmakers claim the money the MVD won't be getting in the second year will be made up by "anticipated increases in state revenues."

The new sequence, recommended by the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators, will allow 30 million combinations compared to 12 million combinations under the current series.

A spokesman said since about 350,000 registrations are issued each year, the single plates, to be produced by inmates at the Cheshire Correction Institution, can be used in sequence for the next 10 years.

Sixty jobs lost for town youths

MANCHESTER — A spokesman for the federally funded summer jobs program said Manchester's allocation is being cut by 60 percent, which translates into a loss of about 60 jobs for low income youths.

Allan Bennett, team leader of the Youth Work Experience Program, said today that the Summer Youth Employment Program will only fund 60 percent of the jobs it had funded last year.

Last year, 150 youths found work through the program. This year, 90 youths will be able to work.

Bennett said Hartford is getting the lion's share of the funds Manchester is losing, because there are more low income people in Hartford. Bennett said the cut is not necessarily a reflection of the worsening economy.

Bennett added the number of young people who will be allowed to work also depends on a somewhat scrambled deadline for applying to the program. He said the office that controls the funds said his office could continue accepting youth job applications after the deadline of May 23.

Bennett's office did continue to take applications after the deadline, following the head office's advice. This meant 90 young people were eligible.

Now, the head office is saying any applications received after the May 23 deadline came too late.

Bennett said he would suggest that local youth services bureaus and affected parties contact the Hartford office of the Employment and Training Administration if they have any concerns about the cutback.

Words for graduates

While in the midst of graduation ceremonies for Manchester area schools, those who have worked and achieved their high school diploma seem appropriate. The Class of 1980 faces many new challenges as the graduates decide what course their adult lives will take.

easy, for others it may have been more of a struggle. The important thing is the perseverance and hard work that has paid the dividend of a quality education helping prepare them for life. They enter their chosen paths at a time of high pressure. The nation is in the midst of an economic downturn, the international situation is extremely volatile and it may be difficult to be encouraged about leaving the relatively secure environment of the high school classrooms.

Quebec: looking back

By DON GRAFF
So much for the undecided vote. In the recent Quebec referendum it turned out to be, from all evidence, decisive. The vote on whether the province should commence negotiation of a new relationship with the rest of Canada had been billed right up to polling day, May 20, as a cliffhanger.

Old West marshals back

By Cathy and Al Palmer
Scripps League Newspapers EGLIN AFB, Fla. - In the days of the Old West, the United States marshal was always painted as a strong silent type who possessed a quiet strength and a quick draw. Sen. Stewart of Alabama: Did money conquer good intentions

By JACK ANDERSON
WASHINGTON - The road to Capitol Hill is paved with good intentions. Once a newcomer arrives, though, the good intentions have a way of dissipating. I've caught a freshman senator, Donald Stewart, D-Ala., in a classic case of good intentions gone bad - with a lot less publicity than attended the announcements.

Banking Committee activities have given Stewart $85,300. -Stewart has received $23,500 from insurance industry PACs (including $11,500 from American Family Life Insurance Co., a leading purveyor of controversial cancer policies). Stewart is chairman of the Banking subcommittee on insurance.

ALIENS ABOUND: The lowest estimate is 10 million, the highest, 20 million. Contrary to the popular notion, the illegals don't come here to tap the public till. Indeed, they are more willing to work, more eager to improve their lot than are many complacent Americans.

Kravet stays, gets raise

ANDOVER - Two actions taken by the Board of Education earlier this year remained unchanged after board members met in executive session Friday to reconsider both. The special meeting was called because of concerns expressed by residents about the school principal and a school bus driver.

David Kravet, Andover Elementary School principal, will remain in his position at least through the 1980-1981 school year and he will be given a 9 percent pay increase. Beatrice Kowalski, school board chairman, said, "We bargained in good faith and Mr. Kravet will be given his raise. The board feels he deserves the 9 percent increase that we agreed upon."

Concerns about the principal were expressed at recent meetings beginning with eliminating the proposed pay increase at the annual budget meeting. At the school board meeting last week, the majority of residents speaking spoke in favor of Kravet although a few people still expressed concern with the alleged manner in which Kravet and other administrators handle things. Mrs. Kowalski said, "The board feels that issues concerning teachers and administrators will be resolved more easily if the board's policy is followed."

The policy calls for complaints to go to the teacher first, if not resolved they should go to the principal, then to the superintendent and finally to the school board. Letters are being sent to all people who voiced concern at the school board meeting asking them to discuss their concerns with the appropriate people, according to Mrs. Kowalski.

A second controversial matter that brought residents to the school board meeting last week also remains unchanged. William Kowalski, school bus driver, had been fired for disobeying a board regulation by driving over the Hendee Bridge.

The bridge had been declared unsafe for school buses, by the State Department of Transportation. Even though improvements to the bridge have been made, the original statement stands because state officials have not yet respected the bridge.

Kowalski admitted he disobeyed an order and said, "I'm not perfect. I made a mistake. I apologize. What more does the board want?"

Kowalski, who maintains he would not do anything to endanger anyone's life, was praised by some parents for maintaining discipline on the bus.

Students and parents spoke in favor of reinstating him although some parents expressed concern because he disobeyed an order.

Group backing rails makes point in area

ANDOVER - A consumer coalition determined to dramatize their call for the "rebirth of the rail age in eastern Connecticut" this weekend drove in their point - in the shape of a make-believe "golden spike."

The "Rally for Rails" drew dozens of walkers Saturday, including some politicians, on unused tracks on the old Penn Central line between Manchester and Willimantic.

At the midpoint, in Andover, they drove into the ground a three foot iridescent pipe to simulate the golden spike used in the joining of the nation by intercontinental rail in the 19th century.

The walk was sponsored by three chapters of the Connecticut Citizen Action Group to raise money for lobbying to restore passenger and rail service on the abandoned line and also to oppose completion of Interstate 84 between Hartford and Providence, R.I.

Rep. Aloysius J. Ahearn, D-Bolton, said if citizens "keep putting the pressure on" the line could be back in use within three years. He described it as "a crime" when the state did nothing to prevent the line's track's being sold for scrap five years ago.

Board hears pay testimony

MANCHESTER - Representatives of the Manchester Board of Education and the Manchester Education Association met Friday before a state labor board to present testimony concerning the wage scale for instructors at the Regional Occupational Training Center.

The board contends that the instructors should have a separate salary scale because they are not required to have teaching degrees, according to MEA President Lee Hay. An administration official could not be contacted Friday night to explain the administration position.

Hay said his organization, the teachers union, contends that the instructors should be placed on the same salary scale as teachers. Hay said the MEA is attempting to prove that there is no precedent for having a separate salary schedule for teachers and instructors, when they are all part of the same bargaining group.

Following today's hearing, a transcript of the testimony will be sent to each group's attorney within several weeks. After that, each attorney has several weeks to file a brief on the matter, and the hearing board then has several more weeks to render a decision.

The MEA has retained Attorney Ron Cordillo of Glastonbury. The board has retained Rusty Post of Avon.

No gripes received on wells near road

MANCHESTER - The federal Department of Transportation informed the town Conservation Commission that it has not received any complaints regarding water contamination from construction of I-84.

The commission had written the DOT concerning possible water well pollution in the Charter Oak Street area from the road construction.

In a letter to the commission, the DOT asserted there were no complaints, and if some were received, appropriate action would be taken, according to Theresa Parla, commission chairman.

In other business at the commission's meeting Mrs. Parla reminded homeowners about the problem of gypsy moths. The moths can seriously damage trees by defoliating the branches. Mrs. Parla noted the best way to deal with the moths is by wrapping burlap around the trunk.

The moths become trapped in the cloth and then can be killed. Mrs. Parla noted this method is the most effective, and that another technique, putting grease around the trunk could seriously damage the tree.

MACC News

Complications alter service center plans

By NANCY CARR, Executive Director

Ouch! That was a rude awakening to be sure. It seems my calendar was not as accurate as I thought. Last week's rejoicing was premature and we do not (do not) have a service center in the old Senior Citizen Center.

On the other hand we don't have a place either. Explanation: For the past three years we have been looking for a downtown site large enough to consolidate our direct service programs (Pantry, Clothing Bank, Fuel Bank, Reentry, etc.). When it became apparent that the Senior Citizen Center was going to move to Manchester Green, leaving the Linden Street building vacant, we began to explore the feasibility of using some of that space.

For some months we simply researched the downtown area, needs of clients, space availability and accessibility. We then engaged in the lengthy process of talking to the town about their needs and future plans and to other town agencies who might wish to propose use of the building.

On June 26, 1979, MACC presented to the Board of Directors of Manchester a 12-page proposal for the joint use of the old Senior Citizen Center by MACC and Crossroads. Crossroads soon dropped out of the proposal and on Dec. 26, 1979 we entered a proposal that MACC utilize the entire building.

For the next 11 months this proposal remained on the Board of Directors agenda and, during those months, was often discussed. A subcommittee, appointed by the Board, studied alternate uses of the building.

Together with the subcommittee and the Town Housing Authority we explored the possibility of utilizing the building for congregated housing (for the elderly) something we have long been interested in. The state inspected the building and found it unsuitable for such use. We, on our own, explored the possibility of using the building for adult day care - rehab costs were prohibitive.

The town tried putting the building up for sale (you will remember several ads and articles) with no reasonable bids received.

All manner of possibilities were conceived, explored and discarded over a 18-month period. Most of these, I believe, public knowledge. Certainly our programs and proposed use of the building received extensive coverage in the press and at Board meetings and the public hearing.

In the end intolerable overcrowding in the building across from the Town Hall where the Department of Health and Human Services are housed and moving those Departments across the park to the building on Linden Street. We then asked permission to use whatever space might be left over, and signed a bid to this effect. After much discussion the Board of Directors, with one abstaining vote, voted approval of such joint use of the building in April 1980.

The town then filed an appeal with the Zoning Board of Appeals for a variance on the use of the building. Note: Variances had previously been granted on the use of this building in 1964 and 1965. After hearing both sides of the argument the Zoning Board of Appeals granted the variance.

The neighbors who objected to the proposed use of the building at that hearing have, of course, the right to appeal within 15 days to the State Superior Court of Hartford. Unfortunately, the public notice was not issued when I thought and the 15 days were not up until Wednesday. The appeal was filed on Tuesday and, of course, all plans on our part must wait for the state determination on the appeal.

Hence my red face and embarrassment over last week's article and a rapid walk to our plans to move.

Right to Appeal

The neighbors who have formed the Linden Street Citizens Action Group have every right to appeal and are using proper methods to protest the proposed use of the building.

The spoken and unspoken concern of some neighbors has been with some of the people MACC helps, particularly with the men and women assisted by Project Reentry and Project Genesis. Certainly we understand the concern of these neighbors. Though we obviously do not share their feelings since we work with these men and women every day providing not only services and support but sharing coffee, conversation, and friendship, we understand the spoken and unspoken anxiety and concern of those to whom these programs are unknown, not understood and are unwelcome.

I deeply regret having "hit the back page" prematurely last week. We had not mentioned our hopes for the senior citizen building in this column since we intentionally never "lobbied" for the use of the building.

We have never "packed" Board meetings with church people nor appealed for public support. Only our officers and staff were involved in conversations with the Board. It was our intent and remains our intent to present only the facts and allow the due process of town government to make decisions based on their good judgment without pressure either from us or from those who might sympathize with our needs.

May it be noted now that we support and encourage this proper action on the part of the Linden Street Citizens Action Group as Interfaith Day Camp: Aetna Life and Casualty - (Helen Wittkofski), Raymond and Mary Gelling Ethel Robb, David and Elaine Stacy, Margaret Schleminger, Susan Scott, Henry and Grace Agnew, Ronald and Nancy Gochl, Marion Jessemann, Lea and Geno Andriani, Cannel Lutheran Church Women, Ladies of St. James.

Further thank you's for donations to the Furniture Bank to Mrs. J. H. Kennelly and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gaines.

THE COST OF LIVING VS. THE COST OF LIGHTING.

Electricity is one of the most important things you buy. And today, it's still one of the best values you can get. In the last five years, for example, while the cost of living has gone up over 47%, the cost of our electricity to you has risen only about 25%. And that's in a world where milk is 31% higher, hamburger is up 69%, and the price of oil has skyrocketed 104%. Even bananas have gone bananas with an increase of 105% over the 1975 price.

Through the years, we have fought to hold the line on rising costs. We've even managed to use less oil in 1979 than we did in 1973—and that translates into money saved for you.

But keeping electricity a good value is getting harder and harder. If we are to keep our service to you first rate, our revenues just have to match the ever-escalating cost of doing business in today's economy.

That's the reason The Connecticut Light and Power Company and The Hartford Electric Light Company have been forced to request an increase in their rates.

Electricity is more than just a convenience—sufficient, reliable, affordable energy underpins the economy. It means jobs: it keeps existing industries going and helps attract new ones. That's why a strong, healthy electric utility is vital to everyone.
