Fewer unemployed despite recession

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's unemployment rate edged down from 7.8 percent in May to 7.7 percent in June even though the recession wiped out a half-million jobs, the Labor Department reported today.

Officials said the apparent contradiction was explained by the fact that the total labor force shrank by 600,000 persons in June.

The unemployment rate is based on the number of persons who tell Labor Department surveyors they are seeking work but are unable to find it. When fewer people are seeking jobs, this reduces the unemployment rate.

Officials said the labor force decline followed a very sharp increase of 725,000 in the labor force for May. That, in turn, was caused by the fact that many high school and college youngsters began looking for jobs earlier in the year than they usually do.

This influx of college students helped push up the unemployment rate from 7 percent in April to 7.8 percent in May, according to John Bregger, chief of the Division of Employment Analysis in the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

As a result, he said, "We got in May some of the unemployment increase we would have seen in June."

He indicated the June dip may not indicate that unemployment has stopped rising.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall has said the jobs rate could reach 8.5 percent early next year, and some private economists have predicted it will go to 9 percent.

The employment side of today's report was not encouraging. The number of employed persons declined by 450,000 to 96.5 million, according to the department's survey of households, and dropped by more than half a million, according to a second Labor Department of employer records.

The Labor Department also issued its quarterly report on the number of "discouraged" workers — unemployed individuals who have given up looking for work and therefore are not counted in the unemployment rate.

These numbered 920,000 during the April-June quarter of this year, the Labor Department said, 75,000 fewer than the previous quarter but considerably higher than last year.

Since March, employment has fallen by more than 1 million. This amount wiped out the big employment gains made in the second half of 1979, so that the number of jobs in June — 96.5 million — was about the same as last June.

Thousands hit roads for holiday

By United Press International

Thousands of Americans are expected to hit the highways for the long Independence Day weekend.

For instance, an estimated quarter-million people will travel to the banks of the Charles River to hear the annual Boston Pops Esplanade Concert, capped off with the 1812 overture, cannon fire and fireworks.

Another 50,000 or more music lovers are expected to brave the killer heat wave in Texas to attend Willie Nelson's annual July 4 picnic on the shores of Lake Travis in Austin.

Others will visit beaches, hold family reunions and picnics, or just get together with other members of their families.

For whatever the reasons, the National Safety Council expects holiday travelers to drive 18.8 billion miles during the long weekend, about a billion miles more than would be traveled on a normal Thursday night through Sunday period.

The council Wednesday estimated between 500 and 600 people will die and another 23,000 to 28,000 will suffer disabling injuries on the nation's highways during the three-day holiday.

Connecticut's celebration of the nation's official birthday will highlight the old and the new, as a volunteer infantry unit will re-enact the activities of a Civil War Union Army camp and the U.S. Marine Corps Band will play on the historic New Haven Green.

Roman Sawka, a naturalized American who fled his native Russia after World War II, plans to express his gratitude for being a citizen by unveiling a 7,778-square-foot map of the United States.

Sawka, of Rohnert Park, Calif., says the map, which stretches 106 feet by 72 feet, is the largest ever made.

"The idea just came as something to do to show my appreciation to the country," Sawka said. "I get tired of people knocking this country all the time."

Annual celebration
 There probably isn't a city or town in New England that doesn't do something special for the Fourth of July. Easily one of the region's most popular if not the favorite July 4 tradition of all, is the Boston Pops Esplanade Concert, capped off with the 1812 overture accompanied by cannon fire and followed by a fireworks display. This year will be the first year the concert will not be conducted by Arthur Fiedler. John Williams, Fiedler's successor, will make his first esplanade concert appearance. The photo is of a previous July 4 concert. (UPI photo)

Town files tax liens

MANCHESTER — The town has filed liens, totaling about $300,000 against property owners whose taxes are not paid for 1979.

James Turek, tax collector, teamed the $300,000 worth of delinquent taxes, as an average yearly amount. "We are quite close to other years," he said.

In early June, Turek predicated a higher than usual amount of delinquent taxes. He had said then that there were a number of small accounts, less than $1,000, that accounted for the rise.

However, when the fiscal year ended the delinquencies had narrowed. The lien list was compiled based on the October 1, 1978 Grand List with taxes payable in 1979.

Turek said the collection rate of unpaid taxes was 102 percent at the end of May, and rose to 103 percent by the end of June.

Notices of delinquent taxes were mailed about the middle of June. Taxpayers were then informed that it has become more expensive to remain delinquent on taxes.

The state General Assembly recently hiked the interest rates on delinquent taxes. Previously a 12 percent interest per year was charged. The new law allows towns to charge 18 percent interest per year if an account is delinquent for more than two years, and more than $2,000 is owed. Accounts delinquent for less than two years but with more than $2,000 owed can be charged 15 percent interest a year.

However, most of the properties that were liened have tax assessments under appeal. This means that the owners are aware of the unpaid taxes, but are waiting for a court ruling on their appeal to pay the taxes.

The appeals were filed after the tax re-evaluations, and the subsequent phase-in began. Thomas Prior, assistant town attorney, said that the appeals are pending. He said however, he expected them to be settled during the next few months.

Prior said all of the properties under appeal are commercial. Although the town officials are aware of the appeals, the liens were filed "to secure the town's interest" according to Prior.

The liens encumber a property passing on the amount owed if the property is sold.

Andrew Ansalidi, and Andrew Ansalidi Jr., own about 50 properties that have been liened. All of the tax assessments are under appeal. While the appeals are pending, 75 percent of the owed amount has been paid on the properties. The remainder will not be paid until the court case is settled.

About $10,000 is owed on the Ansalidi properties. Other names appearing frequently are Henry Botteolico with 13 property listings. The amount owed on each of the properties range from $12.50 to $28,56.

Industrial Park Corp., an offshoot of Neil Ellis' First Hartford Realty Corp., owes taxes on seven properties. The amount owed ranges from $115 to about $700.

Fire union, town reach agreement

MANCHESTER — Town officials and the fire fighters' union agreed this morning to a new two-year contract.

Steven Werber, personnel director, and Robert Martin, president of the Firefighters' Local 1572 said an agreement was reached, but neither would comment on further details.

Both said the contract would be brought to a vote of the fire fighters before releasing any details. Martin said a Monday night meeting of the 63 fire fighters was called for a vote on the new contract.

Yesterday the town and the union were close to reaching an agreement, after a three-hour meeting. However, because of several obstacles there was speculation that negotiations would have to be brought to a state-appointed fact finder. Both sides hoped to reach a settlement before that point.

The major obstacle in the negotiations apparently was the residency requirement that the union would like to see terminated.

Neither Martin or Werber would comment on what agreement was reached on the requirement fire fighters live within the town.

The union's present contract expired July 1, but under state law the contract is extended until a new agreement was reached.

Martin said that he wanted to explain the contract to the union members, and was recommending approval.

Arbitration slated

Trash collectors end strike

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — Striking trash collectors, facing a back-to-work order loaded with fines of $2,000 a day for each who defied it, today agreed to end their wildcat walkout and submit the dispute to binding arbitration.

The key point of the agreement announced by Mayor Biagio DiLieto was basically the same as that proposed by the city on the eve of the walkout which began Monday and has left trash accumulating on city streets.

An aide to the mayor said the workers had accepted the agreement by a divided vote, but all were back on the job by 6 a. m. averting the fines threatened in the court order issued Wednesday.

"We have a settlement," said mayoral aide William O'Sullivan. "They're on the job now."

Under the agreement, the collectors agreed to return to work on a disputed five-day workweek with once instead of twice weekly pickups. Their other major complaint, the elimination of Saturday pickups, will be submitted to expedited arbitration.

DiLieto said arbitration — which the workers had rejected in last-ditch talks held Sunday before the walkout — would be handled on a priority basis by Joseph Emerson, chairman of the state Board of Mediation and Arbitration.

The workers contended the cutbacks in collections, imposed to save the city money, would cost each of them an average of $60 a week in overtime they had been paid for 20 years and also bring the layoffs of six collectors.

But city officials said the reduction would only mean about $20 less a week in overtime for the workers, who just last week approved a new contract with the city which included once-a-week collections.

Today's agreement also spelled out the schedule for trash pickups this weekend and will give the workers Friday's holiday off while allowing for the collection of trash in situation posing a potential health hazard.

It was the fear of a health hazard and possibility of trash bonfires over the Fourth of July weekend which had prompted DiLieto to press for the court order and threaten to fire any collector who defied it.

But the mayor set no deadline for the dismissals and late Wednesday called representatives of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees local, which hadn't sanctioned the walkout, back to his office for the talks that led to the agreement.

The mayor also had said earlier he was considering calling in a private contractor to collect the trash after he had been rebuffed indirectly in a bid to have the National Guard collect trash.

"This will commence Thursday if the situation warrants it," he said, adding a police officer and public works employee would accompany each private truck because of the health hazard and concerns that trash bonfires would be set.

Motorists must reduce driving

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The average American motorist will have to cut his driving by about 5 percent compared to last year to meet the Energy Department's new voluntary state gasoline consumption targets for the last half of 1980.

The agency's new six-month conservation targets, announced Wednesday, call for less driving in 47 states, ranging from a 7.9 percent cutback in Pennsylvania and 7.4 percent in Alaska to almost negligible changes.

But motorists in three Western states actually could increase their driving somewhat under the new state-by-state goals.

Wyoming's target for the next six months is 1.6 percent higher than the comparable period of 1979. Nevada's target is up 1.4 percent and Utah's 0.6 percent.

Measured against consumption in the latter half of 1979, the overall national target for the second half of this year calls for a 4.85-percent cutback in gasoline use.

Although gasoline consumption is running well below 1979 levels so far, an agency spokesman cautioned motorists will still have to conserve because the summer and fall months are the traditional driving season.

Federal Highway Administration statistics for the first quarter of 1980 show daily gas consumption averaging 6.7 million barrels, down 8.2 percent from the first quarter of 1979.

Average 1980 gasoline use is not supposed to rise above 7 million barrels a day, 5.5 percent below the 1979 level, according to national goal set at the start of the year.

Philip Garon, an agency spokesman, said statistics might be available next week to show how well the individual states conformed to first-quarter targets assigned by the Energy Department.

"In a sense it's a drill or a dry run for the eventuality that we are in a situation where targets would become mandatory," said Garon. "They are now voluntary targets and it's sort of a goal to shoot for."

The president can make the targets mandatory and require state gas conservation plans simply by declaring a severe shortage is imminent or under way.

Mandatory federal conservation measures could then be invoked in states that fail to produce acceptable plans or fail to achieve targeted savings during a 90-day test period.

The voluntary targets, which are supposed to help states develop their own gasoline conservation plans before an emergency develops, are based on gasoline tax data supplied by the states to the Federal Highway Administration. They are derived from a formula that takes into account weather, seasonal variations, shortages and reporting discrepancies and historic use trends.

Update

Sun Belt still simmering

Today is the 11th day of the Sun Belt's blistering heat wave, blamed so far for 119 deaths. The heat wave prompted emergency water rationing in several cities, threatened disastrous long-term losses of poultry and cattle and exploded highways "like a stick of dynamite." Water became the most precious commodity for farmers and ranchers in a five-state region — Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Kansas and Missouri — that produces much of the nation's food.

Big storms hit five states

Violent thunderstorms packing winds up to 80 mph struck five states, killing at least two people. The storms Wednesday stripped off roofs, overturned mobile homes and knocked out power. Looting was reported in Missouri and Illinois. State disaster officials estimated Wednesday's storm damage in Illinois to be between $15 million and $20 million.

UPPER WEATHER FORECAST: For period ending 7 a.m. EST 7/4/80. During Thursday night, showers will fall over the Dakotas, the Ohio Tennessee valley and the mid Atlantic states. Clear to partly cloudy elsewhere.

Weather forecast

Partly sunny today and again Friday. Highs in the mid-80s, 30 C. Partly cloudy tonight with the lows 60 to 65. Probability of precipitation 10 percent today and Friday, 20 percent tonight. Winds light and variable through Friday.

Long Island Sound

Long Island Sound to Watch Hill, R.I., and Montauk Point, N.Y., southerly winds 10 to 15 knots during afternoon and evening hours and variable less than 10 knots at other times through Friday. Partly cloudy today with a chance of showers and thunderstorms. Partly cloudy tonight and Friday. Visibility 3 to 5 miles in haze except 1 to 3 miles in showers today and locally 1 mile or less in patchy fog early Friday. Average wave heights 1 to 2 feet during the afternoon and evening hours and 1 foot or less at other times through Friday.

The Spirit of America

The spirit of America is the rag-tag revolution marching against the powerful army of the king in a war for independence as the world scoffed and the torries retreated. It is that venter of Americanism, firmly glued to the ethnic backgrounds of the diverse population, making a single cohesive society work.

Letters

Sincere thanks

To the editor: I would like to extend my most sincere thanks and appreciation to all who made June 24, my testimonial, such a memorable event. My special thanks to the committee members: Irene Bissett, James McAuley Sr., Al Reale, Pauline Maynard, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Haberman, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Bowler and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cormier.

Washington-Merry-Go-Round

Wage and price stability: are Carter, Congress committed?

By JACK ANDERSON - WASHINGTON - If Jimmy Carter and the Congress seriously believe that voluntary wage-price guidelines are the way to limit inflation, they have a strange way of showing their faith. The Council on Wage and Price Stability was saddled with a staggering increase in its workload, and then given virtually no increase in staff to handle the job.

changing alloy that is consensus. It is we, the people, the power at the source of a government that sometimes forgets it serves at the will of the governed. It is John Quincy Adams, Rutherford B. Hayes and Benjamin Harrison, who lost the elections but became president by rule of electoral college.

Labor fears losing rank-and-file to Reagan

By LAURA B. WEISS - WASHINGTON - Union leaders are concerned that Republican Ronald Reagan will win a stable share of blue-collar votes in November, taking advantage of a divisive Democratic campaign that has split labor's ranks.

The spirit of America is the uniquely gathering of 200 million people on a foreign shore to forge a nation based on freedom, equality and limitless opportunity. It's what we celebrate Friday, July 4.

Thoughts

Perhaps you remember the "Peanuts" cartoon in which Linus says, "I guess it's wrong to always worry about the future. Maybe we should only think about today."

Honor America

I think the true discovery of America is before us. I think the true fulfillment of our spirit, of our people, of our mighty and immortal land, is yet to come. I think the true discovery of our own democracy is still before us.

Emphasis on academics among MCC prexy's goals

SAM NEWS Event to challenge many

First summer concert set

This Saturday night, July 5, SAM presents its first rock concert of the season. As always, there is no admission charge and the public is invited. The concert will begin at 8 p.m. at Nebo in Manchester.

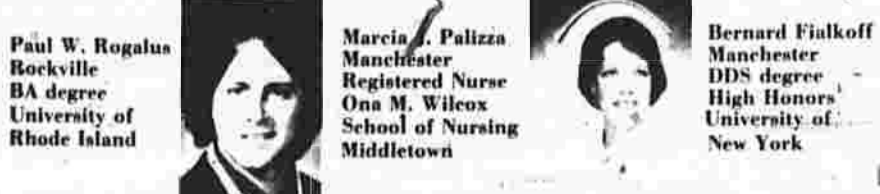

By all reports from our auditing crew it looks as though Saturday's concert is not going to be one to miss. A popular rock group from Northwestern Connecticut, "The Brown's Mountain Band" will be performing.

The talented line-up of "The

Those whose competitive drive drives them into attempting impossible feats may find SAM's upcoming triathlon challenge. Two miles of running and 1/2 mile of swimming will be the toughest from the tough, again for another summer of MCC road races. Anyone is welcome to participate in this 5 route non-competitive race. Times will be recorded for runners who wish to chart their improvement throughout the season. SAM and MCC are the sponsors of this event.

Tennis Tournament registration continues until July 9. Youth interested in participation in this week-long competition slated for July 14 to 18 should contact the SAM office.

New device controls beetles

Japanese beetles, serious garden pests, are expected to appear in New England soon, according to Dr. Michael Klein of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. He warns that the voracious insects "have been extending their range annually for the past 10 years."

Dr. Klein, a research entomologist, was part of the USDA team that isolated and synthesized the Japanese beetle sex attractant, called a pheromone. This attractant is now being used in a new trap called Bag-A-Bug that traps beetles infestations without pesticides.

The beetles' emergence is of major concern to home gardeners, since it causes extensive damage to roses and many other flowers, fruits, vegetables, and to some trees and ivies. In fact, Japanese beetles will eat almost any plant.

The Mississippi river is the westernmost boundary of the beetle at present, according to Dr. Klein. But he says USDA experts fear that the beetle ever becomes widespread in California, it could cause an estimated $25 million damage to crops in that state, some.

The coppery-green beetles are highly active from July to September in most of New England. "There'll be a lot of them starting in July," says Connecticut's extension entomologist, Milton Savois. "Their numbers seemed to be going down a few years ago, but it's been heavy recently, and they seem now to be on the rise."

Unchecked they can do a lot of damage.

Ralph Mankowsky, extension entomologist for Massachusetts, reports there was a serious Japanese beetle problem in that state two years ago that it was moderate last year, "and we don't know what to expect this year."

Japanese beetle infestations will eat almost any plant.

Extras make house a home

What's the difference between a house and a home? Well, there are several. The difference usually begins with those distinctive extras that add comfort and charm to the basic structure. One such extra is brick—perhaps in a fireplace chimney, retaining wall or backyard barbecue.

Many of the distinctive extra touches can be created by the do-it-yourselfer, although obviously some are too challenging for the beginning handyman.

For all but the simplest projects, it's best to check local building codes. It's no fun to find out that the concrete base for your wall should have been deeper—after you've already finished it.

In most areas, the country SW (Severe Weather) brick is recommended for outdoor projects. Your building supply dealer or brick distributor can guide you in your choice of an appropriate, appealing brick. There are over 10,000 different color texture-size combinations.

For most projects, premium mortar is a practical choice. It's a bit more expensive, but saves time and trouble. Allow at least 15 percent for waste.

You will probably need the following for vertical work such as laying up a wall, a bricklayer's trowel, mason's string, mason's hand level, 2 by 4 foot hand level, rubber mallet, framing square, and broad-bladed brick chisel. These should do most of the projects. For patios, walkways, and other flat areas, you can make your own screen board and wooden tamping. For the screen board, buy an 8-foot long 2 by 4 and make a 2-inch or 3-inch notch in the end so that it will ride on guide boards to control the thickness or depth of a sand cushion. A wooden tamping may be made from 2 by 6 or 2 by 8 piece of 2-inch lumber, cut to 1-foot length, with a 2-by-2 nailed on as a handle.

Most projects work best over a level concrete base. Excavate to the depth required by local building regulations and prepare the quantity for concrete called for. Concrete is most easily handled from a wheelbarrow if the site is particularly important for mortarless projects. Many of these projects need over sand and gravel instead of concrete. A booklet called "10 Outdoor Brick Projects You Can Build" is available from the Brick People of New England, 100 Sycamore St., Box 338, Glastonbury. The booklet gives tips and specifications for constructing patios, barbecues, retaining walls, walkways, steps, brick screens, sandboxes, mailboxes, planters, and decorative edging and stepping stones to complement your lawn.

Jaycees offer energy help

By United Press International

There's an easy way to find out what measures you can take to conserve energy in your home. The U.S. Jaycees are providing free what they call "home energy awareness audits." The audits are given by some of the nation's best contractors for more elaborate work.

The audits, which are sponsored by the John-Manville Corp., are conducted by specially-trained members of the Jaycees and are based on procedures published by the Federal Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The Jaycees say that homeowners may contact their local Jaycees chapter to set up an appointment for their representative to visit your home at a time convenient to you.

"You should plan to accompany the Jaycees member as he inspects your home," a spokesman said. "He will point out specific improvements that may be necessary and make recommendations as to how to accomplish them."

Specifically, the Jaycees will inspect 10 things, attic insulation, windows and doors, caulking, weatherstripping, heating and cooling distribution system, thermostat, fireplace, passive solar heating opportunities, water heater and insulation in floor, foundation and around crawl spaces.

The Jaycees say wall insulation also is important but must be checked by a professional.

Farmers market set

VERNON - The Tolland County Farmer's Market will open on July 19 at the Tolland County Agricultural Center, Route 30, from 9 a.m. to noon. The market will also be open July 19 and 20, the same hours and place.

Residents are asked to support the small farmers, backyard gardeners and home bakers and attend opening day.

MINIT-MAN PRINTING

Low Cost Printing Is Only MINITS
away at Your MINIT-MAN Printing

We started our business in 1970 as the first quick print and copy center in Manchester. Because of our specialized high speed equipment, we are able to print with our photo ready platemaker in just a matter of minutes. We also have a valuable new 3-M Bond Copier which makes beautiful copies on bond paper. We can also do flyers, letters, business cards, index cards, envelopes, postcards, stag tickets, rubber stamps and engraved name plates and pins of all sizes within a reasonable time, at very economical prices. We are open 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday, Saturdays 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Our facilities also include punching, padding, stitching, cutting, collating and folding. We are located in Downtown Manchester at 811 Main Street, in the new Manchester Mall, for any information, please phone 646-1777, and 423 Center Street Manchester. Shown in the above photo, left to right is Mary Farham-Printer, Thomas F. Barry-Owner and Linda Thatcher, Secretary.
