

CCAG says power plant unnecessary

HARTFORD (UPI) — The Connecticut Citizen Action Group says Millstone III, now under construction as the state's fourth nuclear power plant, is unnecessary and too expensive.

Driscoll, chairman of the CCAG's Energy Committee, said Thursday the latest estimates are that Millstone III will cost Northeast Utilities and ultimately consumers between $2.3 billion and $2.5 billion.

The state's consumer group, in a study, claimed NU's projections of power demand in justifying construction of the atomic power plant are consistently high and do not take into consideration alternatives such as conservation, solar and wind power.

"Each of these alternatives cost less per kilowatt hour than will electricity from Millstone III," Driscoll said.

He said the CCAG study will be presented to the Division of Public Utility Control in opposition to NU's request for a $177 million rate hike.

Emmanuel Forde, spokesman for the utility, said Millstone III is not needed so much to meet power demands but to reduce NU's dependence on costly foreign oil to generate electricity.

Forde said NU last year burned 16 million barrels of oil, most of it from overseas. He said the power generated by Millstone III would cut the amount of oil used by NU in half.

Assistant town clerk plans early retirement

MANCHESTER — "All types of people made the days interesting and different," So saying, Miss A. Esther Matchett, an assistant town clerk since 1948, said she will end her career early in order to retire quietly here in Manchester, the town she's lived in all her life.

Saying she never expected to stay as long as she had, Miss Matchett will be 62-years-old Sunday. With 32 years of service to her credit, she cites health reasons for leaving early. But she adds she liked working with the public, and that made the years at the clerk's office "fly by."

Hired by the former town clerk, the late Samuel J. Turkington on Aug. 16, 1948, Miss Matchett has worked under the current town clerk, Edward Tomkell, for 24 years. She notes that both were "fine men to work for."

"I've issued thousands of marriage licenses, dog licenses, hunting and fishing licenses, and have enjoyed conversing and joking with the public over the years," she said. "Sometimes I got a customer who got up on the wrong side of the bed, and who was cranky, but since I am a public servant, I put my best foot forward when I waited on him or her."

Miss Matchett went on to say her many years taught her much, adding, "It seems that this office is like the Bureau of Information. We get asked thousands of different questions, and we have the answers on the tips of our tongues."

Although the town hall employees wanted to have Miss Matchett as their guest of honor for a retirement luncheon, she asked them not to, once again saying she hasn't felt well since Christmas. "Though I thoroughly appreciate their kindness," she noted.

Miss Matchett said she will not leave Manchester for warmer climates, and plans to go on doing the things she likes to do now, only more often: reading Agatha Christie mystery novels, writing poetry and watching her favorite sports on television.

"Manchester is my birthplace and I love the New England seasons," she said.

Zinsser favors removal of machine party lever
MANCHESTER — Carl Zinsser, Republican candidate for the state senate has called for removal of the party lever in elections.

Zinsser charged the Democratic-controlled legislature blocked the lever's removal, and refused Connecticut voters an "open election."

"It is ironic that many of the Democratic leaders who are pushing for an open convention in New York are denying the voters of Connecticut an open election," he said in a released statement.

Zinsser said the party lever, which enables voters to choose all the candidates of a single party by pushing one lever on the voting machine, serves "only the wishes and aspirations of the political bosses."

Update

New candidate

DETROIT (UPI) — Republicans saddled with a former Nazi as their congressional nominee in one suburban Detroit district were shocked Friday to learn the party candidate in another suburban congressional race is a mental patient.

Neither is given the slightest chance to win in November but state GOP leaders aren't happy with the results of Tuesday's primary.

Alfred Lawrence Patterson, a patient in a state mental hospital, said he spent $20 to $40 on his winning GOP congressional campaign in the 17th District. He made no public appearances and didn't even vote — because he couldn't get out of the hospital. But he outpolled two other candidates.

"I'm very happy I won. I've always been interested in politics," Patterson told The Detroit News in an interview at the Northville Regional Psychiatric Hospital.

Patterson, 25, told the newspaper he was committed to the hospital by his father July 14 at the request of the Secret Service. He said he was committed because he wrote a letter threatening to have Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., prosecuted for losing a prison reform proposal he had sent Kennedy.

"They (the Secret Service) talked to my father, who is afraid of the federal government and will do anything they say," Patterson said. "There's nothing wrong with me."

Patterson was listed on Tuesday's ballot as "L. Patterson" and election officials said voters may have confused him with well-known Oakland County Prosecutor L. Brooks Patterson.

He said he did not deliberately try to deceive voters but that voter confusion "probably helped."

Patterson faces incumbent Democratic Rep. William Brodhead in November and Brodhead is expected to chalk up the customary Democratic landslide.

State GOP Chairman Melvin Larson said he is investigating Patterson's status at the hospital.

Shares cleared

MANCHESTER, N.H. (UPI) — Public Service Co. of New Hampshire said Friday nine New England power companies have received permission from the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission to purchase additional shares in the $1 billion Seabrook nuclear power plant.

The purchase now must be approved by utility regulatory boards in Maine and Massachusetts.

If the purchase is approved at the state level, it would reduce PSC's share in the uncompleted plant from 50 to 35 percent and greatly ease financial problems the utility has had in trying to finance half the Seabrook project.

PSC spokesman Gordon McKenney said the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission approved the purchase Thursday.

The electric companies involved include two Maine firms, Bangor Hydroelectric Co. and Central Maine Power Co.

Traffic unsnarled

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two cops who once were plumbers and a trucking safety expert were the talk of New York Friday for their ingenuity in unlocking a 30-mile traffic jam with a simple $4 gadget.

The cops, Donald Thacke and Christopher Drauer, watched firemen vainly trying to stop a leak in a 9,000-gallon propane tanker rig on the George Washington Bridge Thursday that snarled traffic in and out of Manhattan and forced thousands from their homes.

Thacke and Drauer came to the rescue by speeding to a Bronx hardware store with a motorcycle escort to borrow the $4 rubber plumber's plug.

The hissing, highly flammable gas had caused one of the worst traffic jams in New York City's history — a 30-mile lock of highway and 31,000 cars that stretched from Staten Island to the Tappan Zee Bridge north up the Hudson River.

Suit filed

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — Harvey Ziskis Friday filed a $5 million damage suit against gaming officials and World Jai Alai claiming they violated his civil rights by barring him from pari-mutuel gaming facilities in Connecticut.

Sue Wise, a New Haven attorney representing Ziskis, said the suit was filed in U.S. District Court in New Haven.

The Florida pari-mutuel division Thursday upheld its earlier ruling that a 1977 ejection from jai alai in Connecticut automatically barred Ziskis from pari-mutuel activities in Florida.

Ziskis took his gripes to the now-defunct Division of Special Revenue after he was kicked out of Hartford Jai Alai in August 1977.

Allen sets sights on Texas coast

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (UPI) — Hurricane Allen boiled through the Gulf of Mexico Friday on an erratic track toward the coast of Texas and Mexico. Thousands of residents boarded up their beach homes and fled inland.

Forecasters said Allen should regain its fury over the abnormally warm open Gulf as the second largest Atlantic hurricane ever struck the Yucatan, claiming 92 lives and causing millions of dollars in damage. But the relatively unpopulated northeastern Mexican coast.

"It's not chugging along on a direct path, but it is still wobbling back and forth," said forecaster Paul Herbott in Miami.

At noon EDT, the eye was located 405 miles east southeast of Brownsville, or at latitude 21.4 north, longitude 23.8 west, moving west northwest at 18 mph, and expected to remain on the general course for the next 24 hours.

A Hurricane Center forecaster said if Allen did intensify, "we would expect it to slow down and turn right," endangering the central and north Texas coasts.

Adding to the woes of the Texas shore was the grounding of a barge loaded with explosive chemicals in the Houston Ship channel. Officials, fearing the shifting winds of Allen could fan the fire and explode the tire cargo, ordered an estimated 1,200 residents evacuated from the communities of Shore Acres, Pasadena and Seabrook.

Allen formed in the Atlantic a week ago and then smashed across the Windward Island into the Caribbean. Thirteen deaths occurred in the crash of a helicopter evacuating oil rigs off Louisiana.

"Hurricane conditions were spreading into the Texas coast and the National Hurricane Center in Miami warned.

Iranian is charged in couple's murder

URBANA, Ill. (UPI) — An Iranian who said his next-door neighbor had murdered his wife was charged Friday with murdering the couple.

Mohammad Belazadeh, 31, was arraigned in Champaign County Circuit Court on four counts of murder — two each for the slayings of Scott and Cathy Santy of Savoy. Prosecutors said they would seek the death penalty.

The Santys were shot to death Thursday in front of their two-story home. A truck driver who drove Belazadeh to the police station to surrender shortly after the slayings said the suspect told him, "I was in Iran I'd get a medal."

Belazadeh, a native of Iran, appeared Friday before Circuit Judge Robert Steigmann — the same judge who released him Thursday on reduced bond on charges of intimidation and battery arising from an ongoing feud with the Santys.

The Santys were slain just hours after Belazadeh was released.

Mrs. Santy was shot while sitting in her car and Santy was gunned down next to the couple's garage. Mrs. Santy, 25, was hit twice in the chest and once in the stomach. Santy, 24, a law student at the University of Illinois, was shot twice in the back and once in the chest.

Before surrendering, Belazadeh told police the trucker who gave him a ride to the police station.

Dodd fire called work of burglars

HARTFORD (UPI) — The fire and ransacking of finance records at Rep. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., Hartford campaign headquarters probably was the work of burglars, aides to the congressman said Friday.

Dodd, the Democratic U.S. Senate nominee, was meeting with staff members at the Washington Street office Thursday night when flames shot out of a rear building containing files and campaign literature.

Spokeswoman Marla Romash said $10,000 to $20,000 in brochures, posters, envelopes and bumper stickers were destroyed in the blaze, a calculator and clock were taken, and finance records had been rifled through.

"No one here believes that it could have been politically motivated," she said.

Romash, who was at the meeting Thursday night, "We think it might have been kids looking for money."

The plant came back to life after glass breaking and thought there was a light break there. Two or three minutes later we saw flames shooting out of the area. When that was put out it started on the other side too."

Mrs. Romash said no files were missing.

Hartford Fire Marshal Ralph Marone said the fire was being considered as arson because a crime was committed at the time of the blaze. He said investigators still didn't know how the fire started.

"We don't know whether the fire was ignited intentionally or unintentionally," Marone said.

Lt. Donald Perrault of the Fire Marshal's office said the reason the blaze broke out on one side of the room and then seemed to jump to the other side was because the flames reached the concrete ceiling and then shot down again.

"You had a tremendous build up of heat. When it gets to the concrete ceiling, it has no place to go but sideways," he said.

Dodd is a candidate for the seat now held by retiring Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn. The two Republicans vying to succeed Dodd are Sen. James Buckley and Sen. Minority Leader Richard Rozuto, R-Waterbury.

Muskie seeks help of allies

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Secretary of State Edmund Muskie Friday called on America's allies to share the burden of defense and sanctions against the Soviet Union.

In a major foreign policy speech to the Commonwealth Club in San Francisco, Muskie said, "A common strategy requires a concerted political response to Soviet actions around the world."

Muskie, before flying back to Washington in late afternoon, arranged to meet with about 90 relatives of U.S. hostages in Iran. He said the purpose of the meeting was to report any breakthroughs but to keep the families posted and "reassure them that the crisis is still our top priority."

Muskie thought the presence at the meeting of released hostage Richard Queen would be especially reassuring because of the good state of Queen's mental condition after more than eight months of captivity.

In his San Francisco speech, the secretary of state said the industrial democracies "must make such an unmistakably clear to Soviet leaders that adventures such as that in Afghanistan carry genuine costs."

He said the West must be prepared to maintain its unified front as long as the Soviets remain in Afghanistan. Muskie also told the audience there is no substitute for a SALT II treaty.

In reference to Republican opposition to the strategic arms pact, he said, "Anyone who claims we can negotiate a better agreement without first nailing down SALT II is selling a bill of goods."

Muskie told reporters aboard his plane from Los Angeles he believes the votes for ratification of SALT II still are not available in the Senate and, "We might have to wait for the first few months of the new Congress."

He also told reporters he expects to meet Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in New York in late September when both will attend the U.N. General Assembly session.

Muskie said the Soviets had indicated they want to discuss the current state of the arms control agreement, now that it is stalled in the Senate.

Muskie said his speeches on the West Coast, a pattern he will repeat through the rest of the country in the coming months, are "designed to build a constituency for passage of the SALT II treaty and support for the administration's foreign aid bill."

The foreign aid appropriations bill also is stalled in Congress, despite pleas by the president and Muskie to seize the opportunity for making an American influence felt in the developing world.

Kennedy in New York to make his last stand

NEW YORK (UPI) — Showing no inclination toward compromise or party unity, Sen. Edward Kennedy arrived Friday for his last stand against President Carter as the first Democratic nominee who can defeat Ronald Reagan in November.

His every step recorded by television cameras, Kennedy was the picture of defiance as he journeyed from editorial board meetings with the New York newspapers to a large nighttime rally outside his campaign headquarters at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

As the loudspeakers blared Aaron Copeland's "Fanfare for the Common Man," Kennedy and his wife strode the podium where he greeted several state officials who support his candidacy, including Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y., who called him "a lonely voice crying across the country."

Kennedy clearly enjoyed the spectacle and took quickly to the attack.

"Do you want four more years of double-digit inflation?" Kennedy roared. "No," the crowd roared back.

"Do you want four more years of double-digit interest rates?"

"No."

"Do you want four more years of failure in American foreign policy?"

"No."

"I say the four years we've had already are four years too many!" Kennedy said he came to New York with three goals in mind. The first is to seek an open convention — the defeat of a proposed rule that would bind delegates to the candidate they were selected to support, and thus foreclose any chance he would have for the nomination. Debate on the rule will come Monday night.

The second is to seek "a fair Democratic platform." And the third is to win the nomination, even though he has about 700 fewer delegates than Carter.

Kennedy, who will address the convention on Tuesday during the debate over the party platform, said he will use his microphone toward the cause of "the poor and the minorities who suffer most when times are bad."

But his overriding concern, Kennedy said, was to insure that the party chooses "a Democratic nominee who can defeat (Republican) Ronald Reagan in the fall."

"And I think I know which candidate can do the job."

As the crowd cheered, Kennedy said with a laugh, "I accept your nomination."

The Massachusetts Democrat accused Carter of losing the economic issue to Reagan. He noted that the former California governor quelled Democratic President Franklin Roosevelt during his acceptance speech last month in Detroit.

"I say we cannot afford to nominate a Democratic candidate who is quoting Herbert Hoover in the fall."

Anderson says Dem split helps

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Independent presidential candidate John Anderson, flatly denying a political deal with Sen. Edward Kennedy, said Friday a deep split among Democrats at next week's convention would boost his chances.

Asked if he is hoping for a "bloodbath" in New York nominating convention, Anderson replied, "I think that makes me sound like a rather unpleasant sort of fellow, but I am rather gleefully standing by in almost vaudeville-like fashion, looking on the carcass of the Democratic Party."

But he acknowledged that "a certain amount of friction among the delegates at the convention might pose interesting possibilities."

He denied any arrangement with Kennedy and predicted President Carter would be re-nominated.

"There has been no deal, nor would I consider a deal," he said. "He (Kennedy) called me, we got together, we had a friendly discussion and that was that."

Anderson said he has not talked with Kennedy since their meeting last week in Washington, when Anderson announced he would reassess his candidacy if Carter failed to win the Democratic nomination.

Ella short, Mo tall

NEW YORK (UPI) — What do Ella Grasso and Mo Udall have in common? The governor of Connecticut is 14 inches shorter than the congressman from Arizona, but both will be the same height Monday night — thanks to a remote control elevator switch.

Mrs. Grasso is 5-foot-3, and will address the Democratic National Convention Monday as head of the Finance Committee. Udall is 6-foot-5 and will be the keynote.

Gordon Wynne, the convention's producer, has taken care of the problem. Behind the microphones on the podium he has installed an electric platform that can be raised or lowered by remote a switch — so everyone looks equally tall to the more than 5,000 convention delegates and alternates and 15,000 other visitors to Madison Square Garden.

Wynne, a lawyer from Willis Point, Texas, who has been in charge of every Democratic presidential and off-year convention since 1972, believes that if you take care of the little problems, the big problems will take care of themselves.

Wynne, who will sit to the right of the podium next to the convention chairman, has a list of each speaker — by height. Simply by touching a button before the speaker steps to the podium and watching the platform, he can adjust the height precisely.

And nobody on the other side can see it.

Furthermore, Wynne had a vent installed below the microphones to fan each speaker with a gentle stream of cool air under the hot television lights.

"That ought to get rid of the sweaty faces on TV," he said.

While attention focuses on the podium, Wynne will monitor the rest of the convention from the rostrum. He can pick up a hotline and talk simultaneously to spotlight crews, projectionists, curtain operators and the orchestra leader.

He can check a large lighted board and see which state delegations have switched their floor microphones on. That could avert the broadcast of delicate comments by unwary delegates.

He can set a digital stopwatch at his seat to time each speech. Minutes and seconds will flash to the podium automatically, signaling the speaker when time is up. Supposedly, the speech will end when all numbers hit zero — unique for a political convention.

Wynne also can set the timer during floor debate. When 80 percent of the time allotted for the debate expires, amber lights will flash on the podium and at each end of the rostrum.

When all the time is gone, the lights will turn red.

No nominating session would be complete without "spontaneous floor demonstrations" for the candidates.

During those and other special celebrations, Wynne can flip on a bank of klieg lights that will twirl and flash on the walls and ceiling — a touch of Broadway in the Big Apple.

"After all, this is New York," Wynne said.

Rumblings continue

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — Volatile Mount St. Helens trembled with small earthquakes and burst plumes of steam and ash skyward Friday following its fifth big eruption.

But U.S. Geological Survey scientists and seismologists, who have monitored the ravaged volcano since it first began acting in March, issued a warning in time to safely evacuate several hundred geologists, Forest Service firefighters and loggers.

The volcano boomed with two distinctive blasts Thursday that sent ash clouds miles into the sky and spilled super-hot gas and pumice over the rim of its huge crater.

But U.S. Geological Survey scientists and seismologists, who have monitored the ravaged volcano since it first began acting in March, issued a warning in time to safely evacuate several hundred geologists, Forest Service firefighters and loggers.

Shutdown adds new costs

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — Maine electricity ratepayers and not power companies must pay the $20 million in added costs caused by last year's 79-day shutdown of the Maine Yankee nuclear power plant.

All three PUC members expressed doubts the utilities "made every effort possible" to minimize replacement power costs. But the panel members could not find "improvements" on the part of the power companies.

The case stems from the shutdown of Maine's only nuclear facility ordered by the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission on March 12, 1979, to test whether cooling system pipes could withstand earthquake shocks.

The plant came back to full production June 9, 1979, after tests confirmed the pipes met federal standards.

The citizens group, Maine Committee for Utility Rate Reform, argued the utilities should bear the $20 million, because the plant's designer — Stone and Webster Engineering Corp. — was responsible for the shutdown.

Actually, only $2.8 million in replacement

Carter's forces claim rule fight 'wrapped up'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Carter forces said Friday they have victory in the crucial convention rules fight "wrapped up" and they have no intention of releasing their delegates as a conciliatory gesture to Sen. Edward Kennedy.

"There would be no purpose. It would be counter-productive," said Dick Moe, key Carter delegate watcher, when asked if the president would release his delegates to vote as they please if he wins the rule fight.

Moe, a top staff aide to Vice President Walter Mondale, said the Carter delegates "are so revved up that they would turn on us" if having placed heavy emphasis on the rules fight. President Carter won the battle then voluntarily yielded the issue.

"The squabble involves a proposed rule that would bind Democratic delegates on the first ballot to the candidate they were pledged to support during the delegate selection process. Kennedy forces want to

A thought for today

By CLIFF SIMPSON
A little card fell out of my files the other day. I have no idea how it came to be there but the idea I feel is worth sharing. There is no author or other credit.

This is the beginning of a new day. God has given me this day to use as I will. I can waste it or use it for good. What I do today is important because I am exchanging a day of my life for it. When tomorrow comes, this day will be gone forever, leaving behind nothing in its place. I welcome comments and quotes.

of a lane and killed the brother before the sister's eyes. She managed to escape by leaping over the wall and fleeing into the country. Later she became a nurse.

What Whitney Young, executive director of the National Urban League, has written about the Negro's rise in income. "The best answer to the fable that 'Negroes don't do anything to help themselves' is the significant rise in the Negro middle class in virtually one generation, four of every ten Negro families have pulled themselves out of poverty and ignorance - peacefully, and not through force."

Super Market Shopper

By MARTIN SLOANE
Because of tremendous demand, some manufacturers have fallen behind in sending refund forms to consumers who have requested them by mail.

As a papermarket shopper, I would rather be able to hold the 20-cent discount in my hand in the form of a coupon than have to depend on these savings being passed along to me by middlemen and retailers. I am convinced that this is one of the most important reasons why manufacturers will issue you a new check if you write to their customer service department. Be sure to return the expired check with your request.

Former Manchesterite enjoys family life in Ireland

By BETTY RYDER
Family Editor
Although the distance from the United States to Ireland is about the same as from the East Coast to the West Coast, the everyday pace and lifestyle differ and one Manchester-raised young mother is happy.

Meanwhile, Jens is having his share of excitement, too. "We visited the Rhode Island and Connecticut beaches," he said. "We saw starfish and looked for crabs."

Rockingham delays decision on future

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) - The owners of the fire-damaged Rockingham Hotel are delaying a decision on the future of the 100-room building. The Rock's 74-year-old, 13-thousand-seat grandstand and $3 million worth of computer equipment were destroyed in a July 29 fire. The damage ended racing for this year and left up to 500 people out of work and the state short $4 million in revenue. Concerned about the possible permanent loss of income from the track and growing speculation the 280-acre facility in Salem might be sold to private developers, Gailien called in track officials to "encourage" them to rebuild with assurances of some kind of state help. Beyond the promise to keep the state involved, however, the meetings produced nothing definitive. "We've got to have the facts before we can talk dollars and make any decisions," Gailien said. "We have no choice but to wait until they gather all the facts," on rebuilding, Gailien said.

Printer of posters betting on Kennedy

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) - Frank Jervis, 67, of Cambridge, is sure Sen. Edward J. Kennedy will win the Democratic presidential nomination next week in New York. Jervis, the owner of a rickety wood building edging on Cambridge's Kendall Square, is a printer by trade. About $3,000 worth of white lettered signs on a brilliant blue background, all printed by Jervis, were sitting at his print shop Thursday ready for shipment to New York and the Democratic National Convention. "Kennedy's people got me out of bed last Saturday to arrange for this printing," said Jervis, who has been printing political posters for 32 years. "I usually don't do business with politicians on weekends."

Who should bear cost of regulatory damage?

NEW YORK (UPI) - Mushrooming government regulation poses a question of compensation: under what circumstances should an injured firm or industry be recompensed and who should foot the bill? This was a comparatively minor issue in the past. Congress or government agencies usually acted to compensate firms if it was clear the government had made a regulatory mistake - a 1959 contamination scare that hit the cranberry growers, for example. But the proliferation of government safety, health and other regulations since has produced an entirely new issue: who should bear the cost of harm caused to taxpayers by government regulation that is not the result of regulatory mistakes? This issue came to a head in 1977 when the Consumer Product Safety Commission banned the use of the fire retardant chemical TBI in the children's sleepwear industry because it posed a cancer peril. The threatened loss to small companies in the industry was $200 million. Congress voted to compensate the companies but President Carter vetoed the bill on the grounds it would be a dangerous precedent. Debate over the issue has been building ever since. Now, the Institute for Socioeconomic Studies in White Plains, N.Y. has published a monograph on the subject by Prof. John A. Walgreen of Wheaton College in Illinois and three lawyers with experience in the field. They cite the reasons for and against the compensation, out of tax funds, of firms severely hurt by proper government regulation. They say the most common argument of those who oppose compensation is that proper government regulation is an ordinary hazard of doing business. If a general compensation policy were adopted, these opponents say, companies no longer would have much incentive to run for public office. Visting Common Pleas Judge George McMonagle of Cuyahoga County was sentenced Barbuto, 57, to 10 to 15 years in prison on one count of gross sexual imposition and one count of intimidation. McMonagle sentenced Barbuto to 1-to-10 years in prison on the intimidation charge and 1-to-5 years in prison for gross sexual imposition, with the terms to be served concurrently. Barbuto also pleaded guilty to two counts of dereliction of duty and to the manslaughter of a woman who was killed within the court system. For that he was sentenced to 90-day terms on each count. Barbuto's attorney, James Burdon, said he was disappointed by McMonagle's decision to run for public office.
