Dems renominate president tonight

NEW YORK (UPI) — The 1980 Democratic convention, still pulsating for the battle cry of Sen. Edward Kennedy, renominates President Carter tonight and launches him into the campaign against Ronald Reagan.

The president flew into New York today to a rousing reception from supporters at the Sheraton Centre in downtown Manhattan, where he will remain until Thursday night when he goes to Madison Square Garden — scene of his 1976 triumph — to accept the convention's re-endorsement. Asked whether he plans to meet with Kennedy — the erstwhile rival who put his imprint on the platform — he said he would not.

So electrified were the delegates by the speech and by the wild, 38-minute demonstration it generated, the Carter forces hastily cut a deal: they would call for mandatory wage and price controls. He gave that up in what Carter aides called a "significant concession."

Carter earlier agreed to one Kennedy plank that social programs should not be cut to balance the budget, but violently opposed two others — the job program and giving jobs priority over inflation control. The mood of the house here, it's Kennedy's night," said Democratic National Chairman John White in explaining the steamroller effect of Kennedy's words. "Everyone wants to show the senator, 'We love you.'"

There was no immediate reaction to the convention action from Carter, who was lying in from Washington today. Campaign chairman Robert Strauss hinted Carter simply may ignore the economic planks.

NEW YORK (UPI) — A triumphant President Carter returned to Manhattan today to accept the Democratic nomination for the White House and make peace with the well-wishers chanting "Four more years. Four more years." "I don't know when, but I definitely will," he said. "Last night, after one of the greatest speeches I have ever heard, I called Senator Kennedy and told him how much I appreciated it."

On hand at the hotel to greet the president and wife Rosalynn were Vice President Walter Mondale and a crowd of well-wishers chanting "Four more years. Four more years."

"I agree with you," the president said, smiling broadly. In pep rally style, Carter said of the upcoming campaign against Ronald Reagan, "I am confident that we will be victorious, not only for ourselves but for our country."

The president will remain at his hotel suite until Thursday evening, when he goes to Madison Square Garden to accept the renomination. Kennedy's old-fashioned, emotional stem-winder Tuesday night brought delegates jammed into Madison Square Garden to their feet and tears to the eyes of his supporters when he blasted Ronald Reagan and ticked off the things that make Democrats different from Republicans.

NEW YORK (UPI) — A throng of Democratic Party supporters returned to Manhattan today to accept the Democratic nomination for the White House and make peace with the well-wishers chanting "Four more years. Four more years."

"I don't know when, but I definitely will," Carter told reporters when asked if he would meet with his beaten political rival to heal party wounds that have further bolstered Republican presidential nominee Ronald Reagan.

Top Carter aide Hamilton Jordan earlier told reporters of such a meeting: "Nothing is planned." Carter will be notified by the Democratic National Convention tonight in Madison Square Garden and receive the banner Thursday night in a replay of 1976.

"Four more years. Four more years," shouted Carter supporters, who got personal thanks from the president at a packed and happy reception at a downtown hotel.

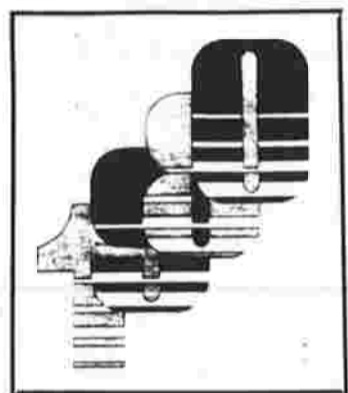

"Right on," Carter replied, flashing a big grin. "I have no doubt we will be victorious, not only for ourselves but for our country. Don't forget how you're going to vote."

The president will hold strategy sessions in his downtown Manhattan Sheraton Centre suite and seek a quick peace with Kennedy to improve his dismal showing behind Reagan in national political polls.

"Our people are talking," Carter said when asked by reporters on his arrival at nearby Newark airport whether he would meet with Kennedy.

"I spoke to him (Carter) last night after his speech and congratulated him on a wonderful speech," Carter flew to nearby Newark airport, where he was greeted with a big embrace by New Jersey Gov. Bicadded on the floor. "President Carter feels very strongly that this is a mistake and there's no point in glossing it over," he said. "We think this plank is wrong — you can't write an economic program on the floor of a convention."

Eight minority planks remained for action today, but only three were controversial. Two dealt with the MX missile — Kennedy's demands a search for alternatives to the costly system, and another would ban if the third plank opposes import fees on oil and gas.

Kennedy won the hearts of most of the 5,436 delegates and alternates, reciting the liberal principles he called "the heart of our traditions — the soul of our party across the generations."

He sharply attacked Reagan as an apostle of bygone times, saying the GOP nominee is "no friend of labor — no friend of our great urban centers — no friend of the senior citizen — no friend of the environment."

Women comprise 50 percent of the Democratic delegates, and they demonstrated their clout by adding two feminist planks to the platform. One would require the party to withhold endorsement and assistance from any Democratic office-seeker who opposes the Equal Rights Amendment. The other would renounce federal funding of abortions for the poor.

The roll call for the president's renomination highlights tonight's session. Kennedy has asked his name not be placed in nomination, but Rep. Ron Dellums of California, a leader of the blacks at the convention, is attempting to acquire the needed 232 signatures to have his name proposed.

Vice President Walter Mondale will be renominated Thursday, and the 38th Democratic convention will end that night with both his and Carter's acceptance speeches.

lan Byrne, a longtime supporter. Absent was New York Gov. Hugh Carey, who led a bitter losing battle to set free Carter's Democratic National Convention delegates.

Byrne joined the president on a helicopter ride to downtown Manhattan, where Carey was among officials shaking hands with the president.

At Newark airport, the happy president kissed some former greeters and broke into laughter when a special point was made to introduce him to a New Jersey Carter-Mondale delegate named Gerald Ford.

A call for unity

Brindamour walks out

By STEVEN M. HARRY

NEW YORK — Hopes for a united Connecticut delegation at the Democratic convention, running high after Sen. Edward M. Kennedy delivered his speech on the principles of the Democratic party, were grounded for Manchester delegates with the realization that Kennedy delegate Dorothy Brindamour had returned to Manchester earlier Tuesday in protest.

Mrs. Brindamour, Democratic Town Committee vice chairman and an avid Kennedy supporter, apparently did not inform other members of the delegation she was leaving New York.

Contacted late Tuesday night at her home, Mrs. Brindamour confirmed she had boycotted the remainder of the convention in protest of the Carter administration victory on the binding delegate rule. Mrs. Brindamour said there had been major concessions in the Carter platform with the approval of three out of four economic planks presented as minority reports by the Kennedy forces.

She said the platform concession, which came on a voice vote under the rule of convention Chairman Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill would make no difference with a Carter candidacy. O'Neill ruled Kennedy forces victorious on a voice vote of the convention delegates on three of four minority planks in the Democratic platform.

Delegates questioned the vote, but several conceded the issues were given to Kennedy in an effort to unify the divided party and bring Kennedy delegates behind the Carter-Mondale ticket.

Mrs. Brindamour said Kennedy's speech to the delegates Tuesday was great. She had watched the speech and the lengthy demonstration that followed on television from her Manchester home.

She said the minority planks being adopted by the party made no difference to her. "It doesn't mean anything unless you have the right man," she said. "Carter hasn't done anything in four years. What makes you think he will be able to accomplish anything in a second term, especially if he loses in November?"

She said she was firm in her previously reported resolve not to work actively for the Carter-Mondale ticket. She said she would concentrate her campaign efforts on state and area races, letting others campaign for the national ticket.

She said being vice chairman of the Manchester Democratic Town Committee means she must support the ticket, but indicated that support would be tacit.

NEW YORK — Democratic National Convention delegates from the Manchester area said they were generally pleased with the speech of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

Barbara Weinberg, first district coordinator of the Carter-Mondale campaign, said she had not been informed Mrs. Brindamour had left the convention in protest of the Carter victory in the binding delegate rule fight.

"I'm sorry she feels that way," Mrs. Weinberg said this morning. "I happen to feel the president is doing a good job, but individual Democrats react as individuals."

Mrs. Weinberg said she understands how Kennedy delegates could have very strong feelings about the campaign, but said it is important that Democrats hand together to elect a Democratic president for several reasons.

First, she said, in the next four years there could be four or more vacancies on the U.S. Supreme Court.

"Governors, senators, congressmen, state legislators all come and go," she said, but Supreme Court justices are able to influence the law for 30, 40, 50 years by their decisions. "She said it is important that Democrats work together to insure a Democrat in the White House to make appointments consistent with Democratic ideals."

She said another reason it is important for Democrats to work together to elect Democrats is that restricting will be an issue.

Speech pleases most right handles and mentioned the right issues in his oration to the convention on the minority platform. She said Kennedy was milder than she would have liked to see him in his call to back the Carter-Mondale ticket.

"Let's just say I would have liked to have seen him make a stronger statement," she said. Kennedy had hedged on his plans for Thursday night, saying he was weighing the appropriate action. A staff member said that left open the matter of an appearance on the platform with Carter and Mondale.

Mrs. Weinberg, when asked what an appropriate role for Kennedy would be, responded, "I would assume that the senator, being a Democrat wanting a political future, would be at the podium."

State Sen. Marcella Fahay of East Hartford, said the Kennedy speech told the nation exactly what Reagan stands for. She said those things Reagan stands for are not the things that will help the country.

Mrs. Fahay said Kennedy's endorsement of the Carter-Mondale ticket was more of an endorsement of the Democratic Party's principles.

She said she thought the speech would help unify the factions of the party. She said Kennedy's supporters are intelligent, hardworking Democrats and she is certain they would not want to give the country to the Republicans for the next four years.

Area delegates agreed the Kennedy speech focused the attention of the delegates on the Republican Party and its stands.

They said it seemed to put an end to the family fight among Democrats and put the campaign's hostilities on the Republicans rather than on fellow Democrats.

Weinberg surprised

NEW YORK — The boycott of the Democratic National Convention by Delegate Dorothy Brindamour was met with surprise by another Manchester delegate.

MARCH clears hurdle to establish group home

By LAUREN DAVIS SHEA

MANCHESTER — MARCH Inc., the interfaith agency for the mentally retarded, Tuesday night cleared one of the last hurdles blocking its efforts to establish a group home at 573 Woodbridge St., Executive Director Melanice Hester said.

The Commission on Hospitals and Health Care approved an earlier report by its fact-finding subcommittee. The action is the state's seal of approval, certifying the necessity and budget of the group home.

Mrs. Haber said the federal government approved the group home July 24, when the Health Systems Agency of North Central Connecticut formally recognized the merits of having a care facility for seven mentally retarded persons within the Manchester community.

The local government is also involved with the MARCH Inc. application, with the Planning and Zoning Commission approving a special exception ordinance allowing a supervised group home for mentally retarded citizens. This step was taken despite the vocal opposition of some residents.

Mrs. Haber said the state and federal agencies must approve MARCH Inc.'s proposal for funding purpose. Residents of the home may not be able to fully support themselves. The funds to subsidize them come through both the federal and state government, Mrs. Haber said, which automatically gives both factions approval power.

Eligible residents of the group home will be subsidized through Title XIX. These federal funds are disbursed to approved care facilities through the state Department of Income Maintenance.

"I don't think people realize how difficult it is to start a group home. I certainly didn't know how complex the procedure was," Ms. Haber commented.

Although the bureaucratic obstacles were many, Ms. Haber added, "All the agencies have been great. They have all recognized the merit of the project." She has particular praise for the Department of Mental Retardation, which guided MARCH Inc. through the regulatory maze.

Ms. Haber said the group home still won't be realized until the closing is completed, and such licensing as that given by a fire marshal is received. She said she expects all steps to be completed sometime in September.

The churches belonging to MARCH Inc. are St. James Roman Catholic Parish, St. Mary's Episcopal Parish, and Emanuel Lutheran Parish, along with the Manchester Association for Retarded Citizens.

Cheney is unique

Efforts to develop a special zoning category for the Cheney Historic District prove the unique shared use of the area established under the paternalistic system of the Cheney family.

The Cheney District is a special place and deserves a special zone to help preserve those characteristics of industrial, residential and community land use that made it itself.

The zone being devised by the town planning office would encourage the mixed land uses in a manner consistent with the atmosphere the town is seeking to preserve.

In September the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce will move into one of the buildings in the district.

We think the move is admirable and in keeping with the far-sighted approach to community promotion expected of the chamber of commerce.

As the preservation and development of the district as an old place with a new usefulness unfolds, there is potential for the district to be one of the most attractive and sought after areas of Manchester.

Battle lines drawn

To the Editor:

The opening salvo in the campaign on the CD referendum has now been fired, and the summer soldiers, allowing themselves to become mired in HUD, are organizing for a defiant march to the rear. The old clichés, the slogans and the platitudes are being trotted out again. We have the familiar, "No federal grants with strings attached."

We are not racists, we are told, it just happens that most of our voters have racist implications. Anyone who can afford to buy a house in Manchester is welcome to live here. Of course, we don't intend to go out of our way to make housing affordable for anyone who qualifies as low or moderate income. That position took a new expression when one of our leading "concerned" citizens called for a moratorium on the building of new rental housing, applauding the trend in condominium conversion and, in effect, saying that this city of village charm doesn't want any more renters. As a matter of fact, he would like some of them to go away.

Paradoxically, ever mindful of tax dollars, we look for new tax bases without people, new industries without workers and new businesses without employees. Presumably, these new tax-gushing structures will be staffed by workers from across the Connecticut River who don't mind working here, but who wouldn't want to live here. As for the patrons of the new shopping centers, we don't mind the color of their money so long as it is green.

The local politicians, looking forward to the municipal elections in 1981, tell us that the CD program is a non-issue. Never mind that the town needs funds to develop a housing rehabilitation program, that it needs funds for an overall housing plan, that it needs funds for downtown revitalization, that it needs funds for housing code enforcement, that it needs funds for sewer improvement or that it needs funds to rebuild the Cheney Mills area. As delegates to the national conventions, they will applaud while their favorite candidates, seeking the necessary votes to win national office, discover four years the needs of the poor, the elderly and the other disenfranchised, with escalating promises to relieve the needs for jobs, health care and housing. We'll support these federal programs anywhere but in Manchester. If there are any kinds of strings attached, we're just not going to stand in the way of our political principles no matter how many of our local residents are in need of federal assistance. At the same time, we're not going to defend any social principles if it means political losses.

The would-be politicians who would solve the housing shortage by curbing the rash of condominium conversions, or who would encourage the development of rental housing by fighting a fair rent commission, have me re-reading Lewis Carroll to put me on the right side of the looking-glass. How these are greater issues than the CD program is even less clear. What is clear is that there is a severe national housing shortage shared by Manchester, that affordable housing, either for rent or purchase, is not available for a major segment of the local population, that condominium conversion, which neither adds nor subtracts from the total housing stock, does reduce the number of rental units and exacerbate the skyrocketing of rents in the area and that the CD program can make a small, but significant, contribution toward dealing with the housing crisis.

We have been told that the opposition to the CD program is not racist but is based primarily on economic considerations. Fine! Let's put the innuendo and rhetoric aside and discuss the impact of the CD program on Manchester's economic well-being. Let's talk about the effect on our rising household population, on our declining school population, on our shortage of affordable housing, on our declining business district, on our empty mill area, on our transportation needs and all the other needs of that segment of the population that the CD program was designed to serve.

The politicians who are concerned about their election success in 1981 should be reminded that the leading vote-getter in 1979 was the staunchest defender of the CD program. I hope he will continue to be both.

To lift at windmills may be Quixotic, but to deflect the hot air generators is not. That there exists principle among Manchester's leaders we know from simple fact that no one will admit openly to being a racist. I call upon all people of principle to speak to the real issues of the CD referendum, to explain again what the program is and what it offers. If there are indeed "strings," to explain what these strings are, if there is indeed federal intervention, to explain what kind and how it affects us. At the same time it would be only fair to ask the town officials to identify all the federal grants received by the town, the kinds of strings attached and the kinds of federal intervention suffered and tell us what kinds of strings and what kinds of federal intervention are acceptable and which are not.

One may be a political fool to support a principle in which he believes, but one would be a knave to do otherwise. On the other hand, one is also a fool who does not recognize that "politics is the gentle art of getting votes from the poor and campaign funds from the rich, by promising to protect each from the other" (Oscar Ameringer). I plead to being a fool on both counts. I hope that the campaign around the CD referendum will be open, honest and speak directly to the issues involved.

Bandshell lauded

Congratulations to the Manchester Band Shell Committee! The programs this summer at the band shell (the "cool" place in town) have been entertaining, varied and a most delightful way to spend a summer evening.

We have seen only seven of the concerts so far, all of which were memorable, and are looking forward to the remaining events. Once again, a vote of thanks to Ralph Macaroni and the committee, plus all the entertainers and sponsors.

zone is to be consistent with its history and to again set it apart as a special place in Manchester.

We know the planning department faces a challenge in developing an acceptable multi-use zone. We are certain the town will meet the challenge and come up with an appropriate ordinance.

There will be a lot of work required to make the district an old place with a new usefulness unfolds, there is potential for the district to be one of the most attractive and sought after areas of Manchester.

Carter story doesn't add up

By LEE RODERICK
WASHINGTON — President Carter was effective, even poignant at times, in his televised defense of his brother Billy. But on one highly significant point the president simply didn't tell the truth.

The point: Carter said the use of Billy to intercede with Libya on behalf of the American hostages in Iran came when "my major preoccupation was the release of the hostages, and I was ready to try any channel that could help us reach this goal."

That is false. The White House, for whatever reasons, refused to try several of the most promising channels in those early weeks of the hostage crisis.

I personally know this was so because, as fate would have it, I was an eyewitness in Tehran to one such channel that was flowering splendidly precisely at that time — but then was crushed by Carter administration jealousy of its political prerogatives.

That channel was in the unlikely form of U.S. Rep. George Hansen, Republican maverick from Idaho who had been a thorn in the administration's side more than once before.

Hansen will be remembered for his unofficial visit to Iran in November where he became the first American to both visit the hostages and talk to them with Iranian President Abol-Hassan Bani Sadr, who was foreign minister at that time.

As the only reporter to cover Hansen's visit from inside the White House, I made detailed notes of his progress.

will serve the purposes of having a unique historic district without creating an empty monument to the past. It will take years, perhaps even decades for the district to evolve.

But the hard work and the many hours spent in planning and frustration for the area will all be worthwhile when the plans and dreams become a reality and the district again becomes a bustling showplace of the community.

It is interesting to compare that chronology with the administration's use of Billy Carter meanwhile back in 1979.

On Nov. 20 — some two weeks after the American hostages had been seized — Hansen was in Paris, awaiting a flight into Tehran.

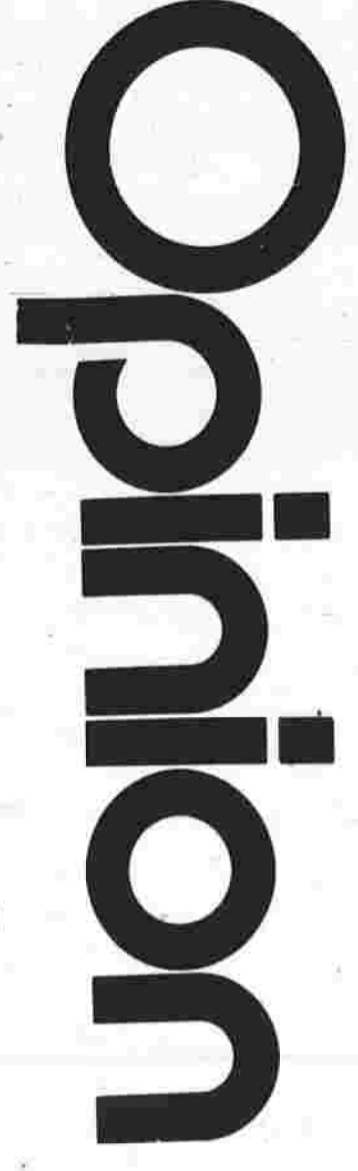

That is false. The White House, for whatever reasons, refused to try several of the most promising channels in those early weeks of the hostage crisis.

Over the next week, Hansen met twice more with Bani Sadr, each time with the Iranian spokesman assuring Hansen he sought an early end to the impasse.

More than eight months later some 50 Americans continue to languish in captivity. The Billy approach failed to free their release.

One promising avenue, said Bani Sadr, would be for Congress to begin holding hearings into the history of U.S.-Iranian relations. In return, he said, the hostages would start to be released.

As a further gesture of goodwill, Bani Sadr arranged for Hansen to see

Thoughts

The 18th century philosopher, Ralph Waldo Emerson, was at one time overcome with the death of his young son, Waldo. For weeks Dr. Emerson was immobilized by his loss. One day he walked in the woods near his Concord, Mass. home. He began to regain himself with the beauty of trees, the variety of forest life. He came to feel the healing power of the universe engulf him. Later he wrote in his journal of how he came through his grief with the assurance that his son was cared for and that his own life could go on.

He wrote: "What I have not seen teaches me to trust the Creator for all that I have not seen." Have we not seen the grace of God at work in our lives through friends and family, in the joys of music and art, in the splendor and power of nature?

We can trust that behind the questions the despair, and the shadows there is an eternal source of life that surrounds us with steadfast love. The final word is not disease, or depression, or death. It is God.

Officials probe plane crash

ANDOVER, Mass. (UPI) — Federal officials are investigating the fiery crash of a twin-engine plane at the intersection of two busy highways in which two Connecticut men died.

Police identified the victims of Tuesday's crash as Wayne Ritchie, 32, of New Haven, the pilot, and Frank J. Corne, 47, of Wethersfield. Federal Aviation Administration officials said the Cessna 401 was owned by the Sussex Corp. of North Haven, Conn., and was on a flight from Meriden, Conn.

It was making a routine runway approach shortly before 10 a.m. to land at Tuxedo Airport in nearby Tewksbury when it slammed into the ground near the intersection of Interstate 495 and Route 133, narrowly missing a bus.

The plane exploded on impact and the wreckage was totally engulfed in flames by the time police and firefighters arrived at the scene. One witness, Dennis Coreoran of Lowell, said the plane crashed about 100 yards in front of him as he was driving westbound on I-495.

"I saw a blur coming down then everything seemed to spread apart— dust, debris, everything," Coreoran said. "About two seconds later it exploded— there were flames everywhere."

Paul Herist of Brandy Hill Road, speaking for other residents who signed a petition concerning a retention basin, asked the commission to reconsider action.

Developers of housing in the area, Dolly and Donald Cummings, had been given permission to put shrubs around the retention basin rather than a fence.

The petitioners said the basin would be eight-feet deep at one point.

Residents said construction of the system had been in the works for about a year but there is very little going on. They also said the contractor knocked down power lines at one time and one driveway was washed out.

William Houle, chairman of the Planning Commission, asked Herist if residents appeared at the public hearing when the development plan was being discussed. Herist said his wife, now mayor of Vernon, had appeared and cautioned them about problems with drainage.

Hearing due on eatery

By BARBARA RICHMOND Herald Reporter

VERNON — A request to subdivide an 11-acre parcel of land on the south side of Route 30 for the proposed site of a Burger King restaurant, has been referred to the town engineer and will be slated for a public hearing.

Tuesday night the matter was discussed at the meeting of the Planning Commission. Attorney William Breslau, spoke for George Risley of Vernon, owner of the 11-acre site and commercial zone that sits between Route 30 and Interstate 86.

Breslau explained that the site was originally to be used for a Ramada Inn and Restaurant and all the necessary town approval was given but the plans never went through.

He said the area to be used for the Burger King would be 39,000 square feet. He said the requirements for that general commercial zone is 20,000 square feet. He said no variances will be required in connection with the proposal adding that the larger parcel is entirely surrounded by roads and rights of way.

The developer has already received a special permit from the Conservation Commission.

The area in question is all commercial. There is a small shopping plaza nearby, plus a Howard Johnson restaurant and motel, a gasoline station and a vacant lot.

Breslau said the lot is flat and barren, the visibility is excellent and the highway expansion project has already been completed beyond the site.

Breslau said he had been asked what the developer intends to do with the rest of the parcel and said right now there are no plans. He assured the commission that any plans for the other 10 acres would have to come back to the various commissions for approval.

A traffic engineer, testifying for the developer, said an average of 13,000 vehicles a day passes that area until recently when traffic has been rerouted due to the highway construction, so the count has been less.

Houle commented that the volume itself doesn't necessarily relate to the number of accidents at any given site. The engineer said he didn't check with police as to the number of accidents in that area and Houle said there have been a lot. Houle said Police Chief Herman Fritz will be asked to give the commission a report on the number of accidents at that spot which is at the intersection of Route 30 and Melrose Drive.

Houle said because of the amount of public comment received concerning the building of the Burger King in that location, a public hearing will be held on Sept. 9.

Residents said construction of the system had been in the works for about a year but there is very little going on. They also said the contractor knocked down power lines at one time and one driveway was washed out.

School roof bids opened in Bolton

BOLTON — Nine bids were received for the roof at Bolton Elementary School. The bids, opened Monday by the Public Building Commission, ranged from $90,000 for a T-roof type roof and $107,382 for a conventional coal tar roof to $123,000 for the T-roof and $167,000 for the conventional type.

A bid was not awarded pending a more complete structural analysis of the roof and Town Meeting approval of the necessary funds.

The current town budget includes $80,000 for the roof. The engineering firm of Bounds and Griffes said, "It appears that additional bracing will be necessary near the supports— returns of the corridor beams to permit reliance on the plastic design."

The firm was not specific with its comments and the Public Building Commission wants "more definitive answers."

Roger Galliber, architect, was instructed to proceed with a more complete analysis.

The Board of Education said it appears either type of roof would be OK but it has slight reservations on the plastic design that indicated additional bracing would be needed.

The school board said it questions the service life of a T-roof type plastic roof, has concern about wear resistance due to students climbing on the roof and maintenance staff working on the roof.

Abby

By Abigail van Buren

DEAR ABHY: Shortly after I married Mark I discovered that he snored. When I told him he snored, he denied it. Abhy, his snoring sounded like a chicken bone in a garbage disposal.

Finally I decided I had had enough of his denials, so two weeks ago I bought a tape recorder and learned how to use it. The night after Mark fell asleep, I held the microphone under his nose and got about 10 minutes of snoring. Then I reversed the tape, turned up the volume and nearly blasted him out of bed. (Thank heavens he didn't hit me.)

Only after I threatened him with a nightly re-run did he agree to see a car, nose and throat specialist for an examination. The doctor discovered several polyps (small growths) in Mark's nose, which he said could be the cause of his snoring. The polyps were removed in a simple surgical procedure, and now my darling snores no more! Praise this on.

PEACE AT LAST

DEAR PEACE: Not all snoring is due to growths in the nose, but it's well worth a trip to a doctor to find out. Now a word in praise of the tape recorder: If we could hear ourselves as others hear us, many of the world's ills could be cured. So, if you're living with a whiny child, a screaming or nagging mate, or someone who says, "Ya know," a lot, get it on tape! It will be worth its weight in gold, and we all know how much gold is worth these days.

DEAR ABHY: I am 62 and in good health, but my 78-year-old sister keeps administering certain things in my home. "Will you please leave this to me when you die?"

RUTHIE

DEAR RUTHIE: Tell her you will consider it — if she doesn't die first.

DEAR ABHY: I've been married for a year to a man I'll call Nick. He's my first marriage and his second. Nick has two children, 12 and 8. He's a He and I'm an I. I should mention that I had nothing to do with Nick's divorce.

My problem is Nick's mother. She is still very close to her first wife, which I do not resent. She has never accepted me and refuses to give me a chance. She has never been verbally rude to me. She just ignores me.

When Nick brought me to her home and told her we planned to marry, she glared at me, then turned to Nick and said, "I thought you said you'd never get married. No congratulations, best wishes or anything else."

I'm not sick, but one thing sports me terribly. She used to have pictures of her children and grandchildren displayed on the piano in her living room. Among them was a large wedding picture of Nick and his first wife. She rearranged her living room, and moved all the pictures into her bedroom — leaving the one of Nick and his "ex" on the piano. Now every time I go there I have to look at that picture the entire time, which makes me very uncomfortable.

Please don't suggest that I give her a picture of Nick and me. I do, but she never put it out. What should I do? NO. 2

Brilliant defensive play

Today's hand comes from Australia. The bidding is designed to get South to a rather poor heart slam. Then we have West select a diamond lead, rather than a club.

South ruffs in dummy and leads the queen of trumps. East covers with the king and South lets it hold.

If East makes the rather normal play of a second trump, South draws trumps, leads a spade to the ace and continues with spades until East plays his king. After this, South wins up with a total of 12 tricks made up of five spades, one diamond ruff, two clubs and four trumps from his hand.

However, the Australian group with East declares that South was dealt just one spade so he leads a spade right back. Declarer wins in right hand. Now South can't ever bring in the spade suit since West holds the nine of trumps.

A really brilliant defensive play, after that, just would not be made at the table because it would check the contract if South held two spades instead of just one.

Road repair plan to face citizens
MANCHESTER — A public hearing on the reconstruction of Adams Street will be Aug. 28. The hearing, on Manchester's recommended plan for the construction of Adams Street, will be at 7:30 p.m. at the Senior Citizens Center auditorium, 549 East Middle Turnpike. The project was approved during a referendum in 1977. The state was expected to fund about 85 percent of the project, but recently the Department of Transportation announced the funding had been withdrawn. Jay Giles, director of public works, has said the project may be completed using the town's contingency funds. The state was expected to fund about $135,000 for four projects. For the Adams Street reconstruction, town officials plan reconstructing a 2,945-foot section to improve the existing alignment and to complete the connection of roadway between the recently reconstructed portion of Adams Street to the south and the newly constructed intersection of Adams and New State Road. Included as part of this project is the proposed replacement of the existing bridge over the Hockanum River. The present three-span structure will be replaced with a two-span bridge slightly higher than the existing one. The new width of the roadway and the bridge will be 30 feet. Sidewalks will be installed on the south side of Adams Street for the entire length of the project. At the public hearing the effect of the proposal on the adjacent properties will be discussed. The proposal is recommended under the Urban Systems Program. The plan is on file at the Town Clerk's Office, 41 Center St., Mopday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Written statements may be mailed in place of appearing at the hearing to the Town Clerk, or to Mr. William Ginter, acting supervisor of municipal systems, Connecticut Department of Transportation, P.O. Drawer A, Wethersfield, Conn. 06109.

Gun stolen in Manchester used in shooting of cop
By KEVIN FOLEY
Herald Reporter
MANCHESTER — A gun used to shoot a Farmington police officer this morning has been positively identified as one of at least 12 pistols stolen from a Barry Road Home last week, according to Detective Capt. Joseph Brooks of the Manchester police department. The officer, Roger Bogdan, a 12-year-veteran of the Farmington force, was admitted to New Britain Hospital this morning with a bullet wound in his leg. He was reported in good condition. Apparently, Bogdan was wounded this morning while pursuing a stolen vehicle suspect after his life and that of Sgt. Flynn were in danger. During the ensuing scuffle, Lapenna allegedly discharged the gun, hitting Bogdan in the leg. Lapenna then leaped into a police cruiser and drove eastbound on I-84 where he stopped a private car. Lohrert, the car's occupants were able to identify their vehicle to police who chased it to the Hartford street crash site. Lapenna was treated at St. Francis Hospital and released to authorities. In a published interview with The Herald's Peter Flynn, Brooks warned of just such a situation while discussing gun control. "More often than not a burglar finds (a stored handgun) and only knows what use it will be put to," he said. "This is exactly the kind of thing I was talking about." Brooks remarked this morning.

MANCHESTER — Special education experts responsible for a critical evaluation of the Regional Occupational Training Center said Tuesday, there are positive items they could have placed in their report but didn't, because their task was to emphasize the problems, not cite the successes. Dr. Glenn McGrath, assistant director of the Gregas Center in West Hartford, and Richard Maino, director of a regional special education facility in Goshen, said the ROTC's strength is its concept of training the handicapped for employment. The chairman of the three-man committee, Dr. Jesse Goldbaum, could not be reached for comment. The experts' report was commissioned by the Board of Education in December. The board was concerned about the center's direction, because its enrollment has changed from the minimally to the severely handicapped since it opened four years ago. After interviewing parents, staff members, and local education officials, the experts issued a report critical of the ROTC's administration, student placement, and curriculum. The experts also made scheduled and unscheduled visits to the center, to observe firsthand the concerns of those they interviewed. Dr. McGrath classified the report as "critical of the ROTC as a whole, but not of the individuals who are doing the best they can under the circumstances."

Report missing positive aspects
The experts said they were familiar with a list of grievances about the center signed by 19 staff members in May of 1979, but both said they did not use the grievances as a basis for their report. McGrath said, "It was not our intent to deal with the grievances. The grievances dealt with items directed toward Center Director Norman Fendell. Our intent was to go into program content." McGrath added, "There are a number of points between our report and the grievances that are similar. If there are, there are. We didn't look at it (the grievances) purposely."

Report missing positive aspects
The report states, "The lack of a systematic procedure for reviewing referrals and determining placement in program was a factor contributing to inappropriate placement and heterogeneous grouping." The grievances state, "There exists a lack of homogeneous grouping in age and functioning levels of intelligence." McGrath said, "What I can state is the class groupings reflected heterogeneous groupings. If the grievance says something of the same nature, you'll have to draw your own conclusions." McGrath added in the area of administration "What we found was a number of people doing tasks other than their job descriptions. That would be a similarity (between the grievances and the experts' report)."

step ahead of sticking your head into the corridor and yelling to the guy down the hall." At a recent meeting of the Hockanum River League Park advisory committee, Mary Dowden of East Hartford, Manchester, Vernon and Ellington consultants how to keep dirtbikes from using bicycle trails proposed for the park. The consultants said barriers and obstacles won't stop the bikers, rather it is a matter of police enforcement in the town's park area.

How is merchandise arranged on supermarket's shelves?

By MARTIN SLOANE

When I recently visited a new warehouse-type food store, something in its promotional flyer caught my attention:

"Another reason for the difference in price between our store and conventional supermarkets is the philosophy of our buyers. Our buyers view themselves as purchasing agents for the consumer. They make their buying decisions as to brands and sizes with the objective of obtaining savings that we can pass along to our customers."

I asked the store manager, "Why do you feel your food buyers represent the consumer while those of the supermarkets don't?"

"You can see for yourself right here in this store," he replied. "What you see on our shelves are the best bargains that our buyers can obtain. We have a variety of labels and they often change from week to week. We look for the merchandise on which manufacturers are offering substantial promotional discounts."

"You won't see a manufacturer's full line because we pick and choose the best buys. In the average supermarket sees itself as representing the manufacturers whose products it carries, and it tries to display all of the products and all the sizes in each manufacturer's line."

"What's wrong with that?" I asked.

"It's not efficient," explained the store manager. "In the end, it is the supermarket shopper who pays for each manufacturer's slower moving items—the ones that collect dust on the shelves and in the stores that are 40 percent larger than they have to be in order to display them."

"When a supermarket considers itself the agent for its big manufacturers, it may be reluctant to pick up a terrific buy on a product like canned carrots, because it feels obligated to buy the carrots of the manufacturers it represents. So the shopper loses out on a bargain."

"But there is nothing that forces them to buy the whole line," I said.

"That's right," he agreed. "But just walk into any supermarket and see if the merchandise displayed on the shelves isn't arranged by manufacturers rather than by product. The supermarkets don't care if this makes it harder for the shopper to compare price and quality. It just shows who the supermarkets really represent."

"Was he right? Do traditional supermarkets represent manufacturers at the expense of shoppers like you and me?"

"That same day, I visited one of the supermarkets where I usually shop. As I walked down the frozen-food aisle, I noticed that all of the Birds Eye vegetables were lined up together, as were the Van de Kamp's seafood products and the Sara Lee deserts. I got the distinct feeling that I was looking at a catalog of each manufacturer's products. I began to wonder if the manager of the discount store was right."

"Then I walked into the canned-food aisle and saw that the merchandise was grouped differently. The various brands of corn were arranged together, as were the various brands of peas, carrots and so on."

"By this time, I was a little confused. So I went looking for my friend Al, the store manager."

"Do you feel that you have to carry a manufacturer's whole product line and display it all together?" I asked him.

"We tried to do that in the past," he said, "but our buyers are getting a lot more choosy. As you can see in the canned-food section, we have started to group the various brands of a product together."

"Shoppers seem to want them that way, and we have to please the shopper. I guess it's a sign of the times."

How are products grouped at your supermarkets? Perhaps it's time to start suggesting to store managers that they take a tip from the discount stores and rearrange all of their shelves to facilitate super-smart shopping.

Canning tomatoes — which ones are low acid?

Are you worried about the possible danger of botulism when you can tomatoes because they might be low acid?

According to Dr. Kenneth Hall, associate professor of nutritional sciences and Cooperative Extension food preservation specialist, The University of Connecticut, varieties of tomatoes grown in Connecticut gardens should be safe for water bath canning following up-to-date instructions.

Low acid vs. high acid. The general rule in home canning is that high acid foods (fruits, tomatoes, and pickles) are safe to process in a water bath canner at 212 degrees F. Low acid foods (all other vegetables and meats) must be processed in a steam pressure canner at ten pounds pressure (240 degrees F.) for a specific amount of time. These are

Social Security

Q. When I try to call the Social Security office, I often get a busy signal. Why don't you have more phone lines?

A. If you get a busy signal often, it is probably because you are calling during peak telephone traffic hours — at the beginning of the month, early in the week, and in the morning. During the middle of the month, or during most afternoons, phones are also less likely to be busy.

Q. I was in the hospital three weeks ago. Now, I have to go back for additional treatment. Will I have to pay the $180 hospital insurance deductible again?

A. No. The hospital insurance deductible is charged only for your first admission to a hospital in each benefit period. If you are discharged from a hospital and then readmitted before the benefit period ends, you do not have to pay the deductible again. A benefit period ends when you have been out of a hospital (or skilled nursing facility) for 60 days in a row.

Q. I am a widow with a 10-year-old son. My son has been blind since birth. We get payments under the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program. Can my son get SSI payments and take part in the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program. But, if a child is eligible under both programs, the parent or parents can choose whichever one best suits the family.

Q. A few months ago, I started getting SSI payments. A lady at the Social Security office told me I'd have to have a periodic redetermination. Does that mean I'm supposed to go back to the Social Security office every so often?

A. The local Social Security office will notify you when it is time for your redetermination. A redetermination is simply a review of your case to make sure you are still eligible for SSI and that your payment amount is correct. You may have to visit the office for an interview, but in some instances, the redetermination can be conducted by phone or mail. It's a good idea to keep any checking or savings account statements you get from your bank because you may need them for the redetermination.

When it's too hot to eat, drink smooth blender soups

A delightful lunch on a summer day begins with a blended soup, Spinach Royale, which is followed by Chicken Waikiki, a quick salad using canned chunk chicken.

It's too hot to eat. Let's skip lunch.

How many times we hear that, or think it ourselves when summer has dulled appetites or passing hunger is easily satisfied by an ice cream cone. During the summer, lunch becomes the most abused meal of the day.

It needn't happen if the midday break is a delightful lunch featuring a dazzling soup that's blended smooth, heated and served immediately or chilled to frosty goodness.

The secret to fast and fabulous summer soups (and winter soups, too) is in a can of condensed soup which does most of the work because it provides the base for flavor.

Here are three soups that with a can of soup and a few other ingredients whizzed velvety smooth in an electric blender:

Potage Pomme De Terre is a green pepper version of a soup using condensed cream of potato soup, onion and basil. The vegetables and seasonings are cooked in butter or margarine, then the soup is added and the mixture is poured into an electric blender and whirled until smooth. The soup is heated and served hot.

Spinach Royale has fresh spinach leaves to deepen the delicate shade of condensed cream of asparagus soup which is used as the base. Green onion, toasted sesame seed and light cream give it a royal touch.

Cool Orchard Cup combines condensed cream of chicken soup with sliced pears in syrup. Onion, cinnamon and tangy yogurt thinned with milk create the finished soup that is served chilled.

Chicken Waikiki is a quick and easy salad using canned chunk chicken, crushed pineapple, sliced radishes, sour cream and soy sauce. The salad may be made ahead of time and refrigerated so that it can be served as a refreshing break with an elegant soup.

The Remarkable Electric Heat Pump

In the face of rising energy costs and diminishing energy supplies, consumers have been attempting to stretch their energy dollars by taking such actions as turning down their thermostats and adding insulation to their homes. To help consumers achieve energy saving, architects, builders, and manufacturers have been working to develop energy-efficient heating and cooling equipment that offers long-term energy savings. One device that has been attracting more and more attention as an efficient, economical alternative to conventional heating and cooling systems is the heat pump.

Heat pumps are not new; electric heat pumps were originally developed and marketed in the 1930s. When heat pumps first became available, however, they had a reputation for poor reliability. Compressors failed, valves leaked, and wires frayed. Today, most of these technical problems have been solved, and installation and maintenance techniques have improved. The heat pumps being marketed are reliable, and offer substantial energy and dollar savings as well.

What is a heat pump? Basically, a heat pump is a device that pumps heat from a relatively cool area to another, warmer area. In its cooling mode, an air-to-air heat pump works like an ordinary air conditioner, by extracting heat from inside a building and pumping it outdoors. But unlike an air conditioner, the heat pump can reverse itself. During cold weather, a heat pump absorbs heat from the air outdoors and transfers it inside to heat the air indoors.

Even very cold air contains heat — "cold" simply means that some, but not all, of the heat has been removed. For example, at 0°F, air contains 89 percent of the heat available at 100°F. Heat is totally absent from the air only at a temperature of absolute zero, or 460° below 0°F. Thus, even on a cold day, a heat pump can extract some heat from the outdoor air and pump it into a building to maintain a comfortable temperature.

How does a heat pump work? Heat energy will flow naturally from a warmer area to a cooler one, as from a warm house to the cooler outdoors. A heat pump works against this natural flow by using a refrigerant to move heat from a cooler area to a warmer one. To do this, the heat pump uses an outdoor coil containing a low-pressure liquid refrigerant that is even cooler than the air. When a fan blows outdoor air across this coil, the cooler refrigerant absorbs the heat from the air, "boils," and turns to a vapor. The refrigerant vapor is then pumped through a compressor, where it becomes "superheated."

Once superheated, the refrigerant vapor is pumped through an indoor coil. Because the vapor is now hotter than room temperature, it condenses — that is, turns to a liquid. The change from vapor to liquid releases the heat, which is then blown through the duct system to heat the house.

The cycle begins again as the liquid refrigerant, cooled by releasing its heat to the house, is pumped back outside. On the way, it passes through an expansion valve, which lowers the refrigerant's pressure again so that it can boil more easily in the outdoor coil.

Heat pumps can cool as well as heat simply by reversing the heating operation. When cooling, they absorb heat from the indoor air, pumping it outside, just as air conditioners do.

How efficient is a heat pump? The efficiency of a home heating system is measured by the number of units of heat energy output obtained for each unit of energy input. Of all the conventional heating systems available today, heat pumps alone can return more heat than they consume.

How can heat pumps multiply their energy input? In simplest terms, while conventional systems use energy to create heat, heat pumps use energy to transfer and intensify heat that is already available in the surrounding environment. A heat pump uses energy only to run the fan and the compressor.

Using available heat gives the heat pump a head start compared to conventional electric resistance heaters and oil or gas furnaces, enabling it to deliver as much as three times the heat energy it consumes.

A simple analogy will make this clearer. Suppose you need the force of water dropping 200 feet to power a paddlewheel, and the present source of water drops only 100 feet before reaching the paddlewheel. By investing only enough energy to pump that available water up an additional 100 feet, you can capture the force of water dropping 200 feet. You've multiplied your energy input, producing more energy than you consumed. Similarly, a heat pump produces more energy than it consumes, making it much more effective than conventional heating systems.

How should a heat pump be selected? Heat pumps come in different types and sizes, ranging from window units to large commercial and industrial units. Climate, and the building size and design, are the most important factors to be considered in determining the type and size of heat pump that will operate most efficiently and economically to meet particular heating and cooling needs.

A local distributor, or electric utility, can help determine the type and size of heat pump needed to heat and cool a house or building efficiently, and can estimate its operating cost.

Contractors need not be relied upon completely, however, the efficiency of different brands of heat pumps can be compared. The manufacturer's label should list the efficiency rating of a heat pump in terms of a coefficient of performance (COP) or its cooling efficiency rating in terms of an energy efficiency ratio (EER). In simplest terms, these are the ratios of energy produced by the system to the energy it requires to operate, regardless of the standard used, however, the higher the rating, the more efficient the heat pump. Other features that distinguish the most reliable heat pumps include:

- + Filter drier, which keeps the system clean and moisture-free.
- + Accumulator, which improves reliability by taking the strain off the compressor.
- + Crankcase heater, which boils off liquid refrigerant in the compressor, thus providing better lubrication and faster compressor starts.
- + Positive defrost system, which prevents excessive frost buildup on the outdoor coil, thereby maintaining maximum heating efficiency.
- + Outdoor thermostat, which insures that the backup heating system, whether a gas or oil furnace or an electric resistance heater, is not used unless the temperature outdoors drops below a certain point.

Spending Spree

Consumer spending will change dramatically in the years ahead, according to a Conference Board analysis. The millions of Americans born in the 1950's are already starting families, spurring demand for homes and furnishings. In addition, households making over $20,000 a year will increase from 28 million to more than 43 million during the 1980's.
