Girl drops football suit

MANCHESTER, N.H. (UPI) - Fourteen year Karen Martin cried after her lawyer announced she was dropping a suit charging Nashua school officials with sex discrimination for cutting her from the junior high school

Karen tried out for the team this year but was cut along with 12 boys before the season began. Karen and her mother went to court, claiming she was dropped because of her sex and not her ability Before the brief court hearing began Friday, Karen sat with her mother and attorney on a bench, head down, her face obscured by long black hair.

Just after she sat behind a slickly polished wooden desk in the court room, she looked behind her to see five reporters and laughed, apparently amazed that so many people were interested in her story.

It was the only time she smiled during the entire morning.

Lawyer Robert Bowers told Judge David Souter that Karen and her mother were no longer seeking a diving club and written about in a newsletter published by

Shutdown slated for Millstone

WATERFORD (UPI) - The Millstone I nuclear power plant will be taken off line this weekend for a routine tenweek refueling, Northeast Utilities announced Friday. The 660,000-kilowatt plant will be shut down Saturday for the seventh refueling and maintenance outage since it began commercial operation in December 1970. It will join its sister plant, Millstone II, off line. The larger 870,000-kilowatt Millstone II was shut down Aug. 16

The psychological revolution

Editor's Note: This is the fifth in a series of 15 articles exploring "American Families in Transition." In this article, popular author Philip Slater argues that our high divorce rates and new roles for women are unintended results of a retreat into family privacy following World War II. This series, written for Courses by Newspaper, a program of University Extension, University of California. San Diego, was funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities Copyright (c) 1980 by the Regents of the University of

By Philip Slater

A current popular myth asserts that American parents after World War II became more "permissive," and that this lack of discipline produced the student protests of the 1960s and the "me decade" of the 1970s.

In fact, "permissiveness" is not new. Foreign visitors to America have been complaining about permissive parents and dictatorial children for 300 years. Each generation of Americans seems to believe that in the recent past the prevailing family type was authoritarian, with stern religious patriarchs, woodshed beatings, and hard working, obedient children.

There have always been families like this, of course, but when we try to track down this "classical family of western nostalgia," it recedes ever further into the past. Today, for example, we blame parental "pernissiveness" on the writings of Benjamin Spock. In the 1920s and 1930s, it was blamed on Sigmund Freud, who was thought to have undermined the severity of the Edwardian era. Yet an Edwardian historian saw that era as one in which children dominated the home because parents were afraid to hinder self-expression.

The same complaints about the "cult of childhood" and lack of parental discipline were heard in the Civil War period, during the 1830s and 1840s, and even in Puritan

The fact is, children are much less influenced by our theories and techniques of child rearing than by the kind of people we are and the way we behave in the world. Americans have never been able to offer their children the unchanging environment that authoritarianism requires. From the first landings to the present day, Americans have lived amid chronic change and mobility, hoping always that their children would be better adapted to the environment than they themselves. This has lent a entativeness and selfdoubt to their child-rearing efforts.

American selfishness

American "narcissism," or self-centeredness, is also a enerable tradition. Our country was settled mostly by people who valued their own economic welfare more than

As a society, we encourage selfishness. We expect people to be interested primarily in their private or family welfare, with little concern for community needs. The care of the sick, old, disturbed, or poor, for example - a task that most societies take for granted - is carried out grudgingly, carelessly, or not at all.

narcissism of the 1970s differed from the narcissism of the 1920s or 1950s only in style: our obsession with personal wealth, personal possessions, personal power, and personal fame was broadened to embrace personal pleasures, personal psychological or spiritual evelopment, and personal relationships. Both sets of goals are private, "selfish." We are simply more used to

Pepperoni AVAILABLE WED. - SAT. Bolton teachers to have program

BOLTON — Several in-service programs have been planned for the Bolton teaching staff including two regional cooperative programs on Oct. 22 and March 25. Developed by the schools' Inservice Professional Staff Development Committee, they include a Kindergarten through Grade 6 nature trail workshop and Grade 7 and 8 articulation on Nov. 4; Kindergarten through Grade 8 basic skills and Grade 7 through 12 articulation on Jan. 6

Also special education for all grade levels on Feb. 2 and high school and elementary school departmental and or curriculum committee work on May 7. Raymond Allen, superintendent of schools, said staff members are encouraged, within reasonable budget school systems, to attend in-service programs in neighboring communities and to attend professional meetings pertinent to their teaching area.

He said an attempt will be made to provide for one or two special indepth programs for interested staff members. Suggestions in areas of greatest need are en--couraged. The programs will be on an experimental basis to see how successful they are. Schools are dismissed early on in-service days -

BHS Spanish Club sells gifts for trip

BOLTON - The Bolton High School Spanish Club is currently selling a variety of gift items to "bolster the club's treasury so it can take its traditional spring trip.' Helen Winkler, club advisor, said, "Our destination is unknown." In the past the club has gone to New York. The items being sold include key hanger wall plaques with decorative stone figures, snuggable plush animals, Christmas gift wrap, Adoradoll, seagull pad and pen, yule tots hanging ornaments and kitchen memo pads. Club members will be canvassing their neighborhoods and other areas to sell the items.

The club is open to all students taking Spanish and meets throughout the year. Club members have several social functions including the traditional Three King's Night. The group also operates a concession stand at all home basketball

Inspector is busy with stove permits

BOLTON- The building inspector's office at the Community Hall has been busy issuing stove permits recently, according to Calvin Hutchinson, inspector. Hutchinson said there's been quite a lot of activity with people installing wood and coal stoves. le said, "The number is ever-increasing and seems to be for half wood stove and half coal stove permits. Many people are also asking about wood or coal furnaces to augment their existing heating system."

Hutchinson feels this is a good time to remind people that a heating permit is required by the Connecticut State Basic Building Code for any type of heating system. The building inspector's office is open daily from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and each Monday from 7 to 9 p.m.

HARTFORD- The Rt. Rev. Morgan Porteus, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Connecticut, nnounced to the Diocesan Executive Council, that he intends to retire at the end of August 1981, following his 64th birthday. By the time of his etirement he will have served as ishop in Connecticut for 10 years. In writing to the clergy and people of Connecticut to tell them of his plan, Bishop Porteus said, "The Church here has been my life, as my life has been an attempt to serve through her. I carry away with me from my ministry here among you more than I can have given in Parish or Diocese.

Recognized as one of the outstanding preachers in the Episcopal irch, Bishop Porteus is also widely respected for his liturgical knowledge and skill, and his warmth as a pastor.

During his episcopate he was a member of the Standing Liturgical Commission of the Episcopal Church, taking a leading role in the preparation of the new Book of Comnon Prayer which was officially adopted in 1979.

Opposing negative doubles

2. S-QxxxH-JxxxxD-AxxC-x. Bid either three or four spades right away, depending on what sort of overcalls your partner makes. Change the ace of diamonds to the king and you should jump to three spades with any partner. If you play in bridge tour-naments you will find that many of your opponents use the double of your overcalls C- A x x x. Bid two spader will be made with a fairly weak hand, as little as six or seven HCP at the low levels. If used against jump overcalls the minimum will be greater. In general the fourth hand is likely to have support for his partner's suit and he should take immediate action to compete. The general rule here should be to give weak single raises, preemptive jump raises and to use the redouble with need hands

A x x C x x. Redouble. You will bid four spades next and then will double any adverse five bid. There is no point bidding your nice heart suit. The negative doubler surely has four hearts and not much of a hand.

es and to use the redouble with good hands.

We will show some illustrations after the bidding goes: one club-one spade-double.

1. You hold: S-xxH-Az Bid two diamonds to get a lead later on.

To finish with negative double. The probably has the balance of power. You plan to compete to three spades on your own and if your partner shows signs of life you want to try the spade hand.

5. S-xxH-xzD-AK98x

To finish with negative double of a major suit almost always shows four cards of the other major — a spadie of a minor suit shows at least / 3 in the two majors.

HOW WOULD YOU'RE NOT TRY OUT THIS GETTING NEW BANK? MY MONEY, STUART!

AND THEN, GUESS WHAT, CHUCK .. THIS KID CALLED ME "GOLF BALL NOSE"

DEAR ABBY: Six months ago I met a lovely gentleman while traveling with a tour group through Europe. He is 65 and I am 63. I've been a widow for a number of years, and he ost his wife a year ago.

Neither of us believes in a "apend-the-night" relationship, yet the chemistry between us is unmistakably electric. So what do I do with a man who save he loves me, but prefer every remark about marriage with a "maybe, someday, yet here we are, two lonely people with so much to give each ther, while I'm in my house, and he's in his. His concern with the calendar and making sure a proper day" man, and I should try to make a new life for myself while I'm still attractive enough to find someone who could LIVING ON PROMISES

DEAR LIVING: Come Thanksgiving, talk turkey and let him know that all you want for Christmas is a little gold ring. And if this man who says he "loves" Captain Easy — Crooks & Lawrence you isn't ready to make a commitment, tell him it was nice knowing him — then book another tour.

OK, so there is a rather "ugly" (to some people) story behind this. I went to work for him two years ago. We fell in love. He was married, but I did not break up his marriage. It was a marriage in name only for several years, but he saw no reason to get a divorce until after he met me. I will give him credit for being honest. He didn't ask me to sneak around and see him for an hour in hotel rooms. He simply told his wife he wanted his freedom, paid her off, and that was it. The day his divorce was final we were married.

So what's my problem? He has a 24-year-old daughter who hates my guts. This little anip calls me "Mom" every chance she gets when others are present. Abby, I am only four years older than she, and she calls me "Mom" just to nake me seem older. I find this very irritating.

DEAR ABBY: A young couple, who became my neighbors ast year, have asked me to be the godmother of the child they expect in three months. (I am a childless widow in slightly better than moderate circumstances.) At first I was flattered, then I asked them exactly what a godmother was godchild and keepe adding to it until the child is ready for college. Also, she remembers the godchild with gifts on his birthday, confirmation, Christmas, Easter and all gift-giving occasions. All the emphasis was placed on money and gifts, but what irked me was a reminder to remember I may have done this on my own, but to be told that it was munity by these firms and Churches who want to see more folks going to their Church and Synagogue... EXCESS BAGGAGE Before you go on a trip, you must plan carefully in order to take as few pieces of luggage as possible. The most carefree travelers as those who travel lightly. There is nothing more miserable than to take excess baggage from one place to another. Excess baggage can hinder you in life as well. The happy traveler through life is one who finds a set of values that serves him well in every situation Then he sheds himself of wornout prejudices and misconceptions that prevent him from experiencing all that life has to offer. Re-examine your life-is excess baggage preventing you from being open to all the joy there is in life?
