Carter, Reagan applying whip

On the campaign trail

By United Press International
 Both President Carter and Ronald Reagan are pursuing a frenzied campaign pace with four days to go, and their rhetoric is applying the whip in the home stretch.

Reagan told an enthusiastic crowd in Bayonne, N.J., "I'll be damned if we're going to let him (Carter) get re-elected."

And Carter said Reagan has performed "political plastic surgery" to disguise his record on war and peace.

Thursday, Carter went from Philadelphia to New York to Saginaw, Mich., to St. Louis to Springfield and Columbia, S.C. Today he flies to Lakeland, Fla., then Memphis, Tenn., Jackson, Miss., and Houston.

Reagan started Thursday in Dallas and went from there to Memphis, Tenn.; Newark, N.J.; Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. Today he hits four Michigan cities — Grand Rapids, Battle Creek, Saginaw and Pontiac, and winds up in Columbus, Ohio.

Exhaustion should be a matter of course with schedules like that. Actually, both men apparently are holding up quite well so far. By late Thursday, Reagan was beginning to show signs of weariness, and Carter's voice grew husky, but neither was slowing down appreciably.

Reagan concentrated on Carter's economic record. He said Carter "has no right to seek re-election," because the economy is in far worse shape today than when he took office.

That criticism escalated at each stop until the former California governor roared to a crowd in heavily Democratic Bergen County, N.J.

"He's seeking re-election — but I'll be damned if we're going to let him get re-elected."

Reagan raised three main themes in his daylong oratory: the Democratic Party is the party of the people "and don't you forget it," Reagan's attitude on the use of military power and on controlling nuclear arms is dangerous; and Reagan's change of position on issues.

"Governor Reagan has become an expert in rewriting his own record," Carter said. "This campaign scheme, as a last-minute operation, is political plastic surgery and it's not going to work."

The president had big, friendly crowds throughout the day, but two were notable. The traditional garment district rally in New York drew thousands, clogging Seventh Avenue for four blocks and pushing in on the barricades so enthusiastically the Secret Service moved in to protect the president with a cloth-covered metal shield.

And in St. Louis, a rally at a packed suburban shopping center was marked by fireworks, balloons and music as well as speeches. Observers said it was much larger than the one that turned out for Reagan several days ago at the Gateway Arch downtown.

Each campaign was marred Thursday by a peripheral issue:

—Richard Allen, Reagan's top foreign policy adviser, resigned because of news reports indicating he used his power during the Nixon administration to make money for himself. A top campaign aide, said Allen continues to have the confidence of Reagan and the campaign but withdrew "to remove this matter as a possible issue in the campaign."

—Sources reported a Justice Department interim report to the Senate on the Billy Carter investigation said the president has canceled three interviews with investigators trying to wrap up the case, and said official Michael Shaheen is threatening to resort to a "compulsory process" — presumably a subpoena — to force his testimony.

Seals have a friend

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Canada's cuddly, snow-white baby seals will have a friend in the U.S. House no matter who wins Tuesday's presidential election, thanks to a campaign coup by aroused animal lovers.

A harried Ronald Reagan campaign official said Thursday his candidate is firmly committed to the U.S. ban on imported skins of harp seals killed in Canada's grisly annual hunt. The Carter administration halted harp seal imports under the 1972 Marine Mammals Protection Act.

The Reagan camp quickly rallied to the highly emotional harp-seal cause after thousands of members of the International Fund for Animal Welfare began telephoning to complain about a newly uncovered syndicated broadcast Reagan made in 1978.

"You would have thought from all the telephone calls we got in here that he led the damn clubbing process up there," said Ken Towery, deputy press secretary of the Reagan-Bush Committee. "He didn't endorse the hunt."

But Brian Davies, the group executive director who alerted his membership to the broadcast, disagreed.

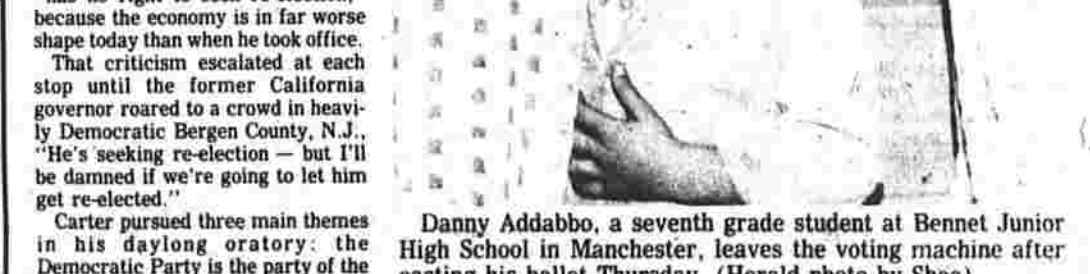

"Any reasonable person reading the text of that program would come away with the impression that Governor Reagan supports the seal hunt," he said. "His public statement on the seal hunt was pro-seal hunt. There's no question."

Towery accused Davies of irresponsibility for failing to ask the Reagan camp about the candidate's position before issuing an alert to its membership.

"We do not advocate killing baby seals; we do not advocate any change in that particular act," said Towery. "Reagan never had a pro-seal hunt position. He was commenting on the inhumanity of it."

Davies said, "Fine. We're very, very grateful that that's the case."

He said he issued his call to arms to get Reagan's position on the record because he said it would have been futile to ask the campaign first.

School elections not an indication

By LAUREN DAVIS SHEA
 Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — Students in the town's secondary schools split on who will become the next president of the United States in straw votes taken this week, thus providing little prediction on how the local adults will vote.

At Manchester High School, with one third of the students voting, President Jimmy Carter won reelection by a 13-vote plurality. Republican Ronald Reagan came in with 191 votes, and Independent John Anderson trailed in with 150 votes.

At Bennet Junior High School, where for the first time since 1972 voting was accomplished with machines instead of paper ballots, Reagan won election by the same 13-vote plurality as Carter had at MHS.

Bennet began its polling of students in 1972, and since then school administrators say the students have been accurate predictors of how the local adults will vote. But MHS officials say their students have been good predictors too.

At Iling Junior High School, with 53 percent voter turnout, Reagan again captured the presidency. Iling's low turnout was attributed to the two machines which were available for hundreds of students, and the students' unfamiliarity with the machines, which caused them to vote slowly.

All the secondary schools gave the U.S. senate race to Democrat Christopher Dodd, by two to one votes over Republican William Buckley.

In the race for the U.S. House of Representatives, Democratic incumbent William Cotter won twice as many votes as his Republican challenger, Marge Anderson.

The high school did not hold state senate or representative votes, but the junior highs did. At Iling the senate race between Republican Carl Zinsner and Democrat Abe Glassman was too close to call. At Bennet, Zinsner received 100 votes more than Glassman.

"On the referendum questions, the students also split. MHS students approved the renovations to their school by a resounding majority, but they turned down the town's re-entry into the federal Community Development block grant program by 219 to 181.

At the junior highs, both the referendum questions won support.

School officials said besides the interest of taking a straw vote, the process of voting also allows students to familiarize themselves with the voting machines and their responsibilities as citizens of the United States.

Police beef up patrols

By United Press International
 Police all over the country are increasing Halloween patrols this year to make tonight's traditional trick-or-treating safer for children and to prevent vandalism.

In Atlanta, where 10 black children have been abducted and killed and four others are missing, Mayor Maynard Jackson, the City Council and police urged parents to keep their children home and to celebrate with parties Saturday — during daylight hours.

Community Hospital in St. Peters, Mo., offered to X-ray trick-or-treat bags to make sure no razor blades or other harmful objects had been given out along with the treats.

The New York Police Department said Thursday it would assign 125 additional officers on overtime to a special "Halloween patrol."

"You might get a 'trick or treat' on Halloween instead of just a 'Give me your money,'" a police spokesman said.

New York's Halloween detail will pay particular attention to churches, synagogues and cemeteries — traditional targets of Halloween vandals.

Atlanta police reissued their warning for parents — especially in the city's black, low-income neighborhoods — not to allow their children to go out trick-or-treating.

In Dade County, Fla., Juvenile Judge Adele Fiske also urged parents to forego Halloween tradition and keep their children home.

The judge said Halloween offers criminals a "license to do what they want," wearing masks and going door-to-door. She said no one should open their doors to trick-or-treaters.

Nevada had its Halloween a day early — so it doesn't conflict with the state's Admission Day.

Moore to leave campaign

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Frank Moore, President Carter's assistant on congressional relations, has been removed from the presidential campaign "indefinitely" because of remarks he made about the Ayatollah Khomeini, a Carter campaign official said today.

Moore was quoted in an interview with the Shreveport Times Wednesday as saying the Iranian leader "has cancer of the color." He's not going to last long."

In the interview, which apparently stunned White House and State Department officials, Moore was also quoted as saying the Iranian military is expected to take control in the country in the event of Khomeini's death.

Iraqis dodge sniper fire

KHURRAMSHAHR, Iran (UPI) — Entrenched Iraqi forces dodged stubborn sniper fire in Iran's "City of Blood," which six weeks of war has turned into a ghost town of devastation with almost every house battered by artillery.

In Tehran Thursday, a spokesman said Iran's Supreme Defense Council discussed sending reinforcements to Khurramshahr and the refinery city of Abadan and setting up a unified command to defend the two cities, the focus of Iraqi attacks for several weeks.

"This is all Iraqi fire, all Iraqi," an Iraqi trooper said Thursday, pointing to rubble where the city of Khurramshahr — now emptied of its 100,000 residents — stood, but from which sporadic sniper bullets peppered the Iraqi forces who appeared in control.

Manley loses in Jamaica

KINGSTON, Jamaica (UPI) — American-born Edward Seaga trounced socialist Prime Minister Michael Manley, a Fidel Castro admirer, in a general election and declared his first act will be to expel the Cuban ambassador from Jamaica.

With more than half the votes counted from Thursday's poll at the end of a violence-ridden election campaign, Seaga's Jamaica Labor Party won more than 51 percent of the popular vote giving him more than 40 of Jamaica's 60 parliamentary seats.

The RJR radio network predicted the Labor Party, which held 13 seats before the election, might have won as many as 52 seats in the Kingston Parliament, which is based on the British parliamentary model. The final results may not be complete until Saturday.

Uranium release higher

ERWIN, Tenn. (UPI) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission says the amount of uranium released at a top secret nuclear fuel plant was 10 times higher than the NRC said it was originally and was the highest ever reported to the agency.

In addition, the NRC said as many as 1,000 people might have been exposed to the dustlike uranium material during the Aug. 7, 1979 venting.

Some local residents, however, did not appear worried. "I'm not concerned," said banker Gerald Powers, who lives next to the plant. "What good would it do for me to be? I can't see it, taste it or smell it. I have to take somebody's word that it is not harming me."

Carter picks bank chief

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A.W. Tom Clausen, head man of the giant Bank of America, is President Carter's choice to become president of the World Bank during the current period of international recession and rising energy costs.

Pending the almost certain approval of the World Bank's board of executive directors, Clausen will succeed Robert McNamara as head of the institution that has 138 member countries and channels funds, financial ideas and technical assistance to the lesser developed nations.

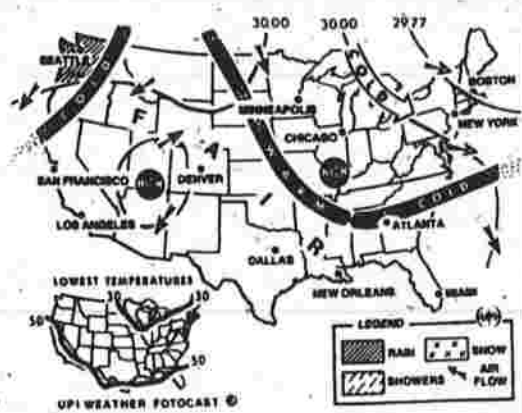

Clausen, 57, is president and chief executive officer of the San Francisco-based Bank of America, the largest U.S. bank, and its parent company, Bank America Corp.

Khomeini's terms 'just'

Tehran radio said today Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's terms for freeing the American hostages are "just" and releasing them would not be a "cowardly" act in a broadcast that appeared designed to prepare the Iranian people for an end to the year-long drama.

Another hint that freedom may be coming closer for the hostages came when Sweden's foreign ministry said an airline in neutral Sweden has been asked to ready a plane to fly the hostages out of Iran.

The foreign ministry said the Swedish charter airline Scanair had "received a request to have a plane standing by."

Fear brakes career

Stirring Moss, the crack British race car driver who died after a disastrous wreck in the 1982 Grand Prix, will make a strictly limited comeback.

He says in the Nov. 3 issue of Newsweek magazine that while racing once was his whole life, now "it's a hobby." He candidly admits to fear — or what the rest of the world might think of as common sense.

"My threshold of fear is much closer now," he says. "You ease up on the throttle when you approach a hazard. I think twice, and when you realize you want to win you just do it, you don't think at all."

St. Francis of Assisi has joined Spider-Man, the Incredible Hulk and Captain America as a comic-book superhero.

"Francis, Brother of the Universe" will appear in a 48-page special issue comic book depicting the life of the patron saint of animals.

James E. Galton, president of the Marvel Comics Group, said when the idea was first suggested to him "it sounded a bit far fetched, but the more I considered it, the more intrigued I became."

After all, he said, St. Francis' life, like those of other comic book superheroes, "was packed with elements conducive to an exciting, fast-paced comic book — drama, suspense, action."

Anderson protests lost ad

STAMFORD (UPI) — Independent John Anderson, who for many voters is a vehicle for their protest, is doing some protesting of his own.

Anderson's lawyer, Mitchell Rogovin, has asked the Federal Communications Commission to act today to force NBC into negotiations to make good on a 4-minute 20-second commercial the network failed to run as scheduled before last Tuesday's debate between President Carter and Ronald Reagan.

"NBC said 'sue us,' but that's no remedy," said spokesman Tom Mathews, traveling with Anderson in Connecticut.

NBC ran the $30,000 ad after the debate but the Anderson campaign demanded ten 30-second spots to be run this weekend as compensation.

Anderson's final $1 million plus ad blitz will become apparent this weekend, with a 30 minute ad prepared for Sunday and prime time commercials Monday night, including one preceeding ABC's Monday Night football.

In another development, the Anderson campaign told its leaders around the country to demand that radio stations withdraw a Carter commercial that claims the Illinois congressman voted against the 1964 Civil Rights Act and the 1965 Voter Rights Act.

"The ads are in error and they are false," Mathews said. He said they had been aired in Detroit, Erie, Pa., and Albany, N.Y., and had subsequently been removed from use in Detroit.

Finally, Rogovin sent a telegram to Carter campaign manager Robert Strauss stating, with some sarcasm,

Defense still key issue

HARTFORD (UPI) — James Buckley, continuing to ride the defense issue in the final days of the U.S. Senate race, says his Democratic opponent is misinformed about something in his own backyard — submarines.

Buckley, the Republican challenger to Christopher Dodd for Sen. Abraham Ribicoff's seat, said Thursday Dodd is either misinformed or "deliberately deceiving" voters when he talked about the deactivation of the Polaris subs and deployment of the Trident submarine.

"This is flatly false," Buckley said. He said Navy officials have said all of the Polaris subs will be put out of commission as missile launchers before the second Trident becomes operational.

He also said Dodd "misses the entire point" when he says the Democratic Party will carry a greater number of warheads than Soviet subs.

"Their warheads are roughly twice the size of ours and most of theirs have a longer range than ours," Buckley said.

"In sum, Mr. Dodd is either grossly misinformed about a subject he ought to know by heart or he is deliberately concealing the facts that are vital to our safety," he said.

McKinney attacks foe

DARIEN (UPI) — In a stinging tirade, five-term Republican Rep. Stewart McKinney has painted his Democratic challenger for Fairfield's County's U.S. House seat as misguided and misinformed.

McKinney blasted John Aristotle Phillips at a Darien news conference Thursday as "a desperate and unprincipled candidate who is now bereft of any issues."

He described Phillips as "terribly misled and ill-informed."

The lashing apparently was prompted by a campaign newsletter distributed by Phillips, which McKinney termed "garbage" and "scurrilous."

Press outnumberers public at senatorial debate

By LAUREN DAVIS SHEA Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — With five members of the area press corps present at a Thursday night debate between candidates for the Fourth District senatorial seat the public was outnumbered by the press two to one.

Republican Carl Zinsner and Democrat Abe Glassman answered questions from reporters on such topics as abortion, taxes, and housing. Their listeners consisted of empty chairs, their wives, and campaign aides, along with three Democratic activists.

Despite the low turnout, which aides attributed to a lack of publicity and the nightly appearances of the candidates, the two men gamely debated.

Zinsner continued to paint Glassman as a spendthrift, and Glassman continued his charge that Zinsner is running a negative campaign which fails to incorporate a range of issues a state senator must face.

Zinsner called for "consideration of the taxpayer," saying the Legislature failed to do this when it passed a 7 percent raise in welfare benefits, despite being ranked second in the nation in welfare benefits.

Glassman countered that Connecticut has one of the highest cost of living rates in the country.

When Glassman said he was "firmly pro-choice" on the abortion issue, he said in order to offer a true pro-life medical decision to a poor woman the state should fund abortion.

Plaintiff in CD suit evicted from apartment

MANCHESTER — One of three women suing the town for its withdrawal in 1979 from a federal program to promote housing and racial integration was evicted today from her Manchester apartment.

Lucy Demirgian said Thursday she expected to leave town along with her two children — because she could not find another apartment. The state Department of Human Resources tentatively found room for the family in a motel on the Berlin Turnpike, she said.

Ms. Demirgian, along with two other low-income women, is a plaintiff in a class action suit brought against Manchester for its decision to leave the HUD Community Development Grant Program for a two-year period. In the suit, the three women charged the town with discriminating against them, and minorities, through the withdrawal.

Ms. Demirgian was notified in August that she had been evicted from the Manchester Garden Apartments, her home for about two years, she said. Attempts to locate another apartment in Manchester proved unsuccessful, she said.

Ms. Demirgian said her stay at the Manchester Gardens had been evicted from the standard 60-day term. But the certificate expired before she could find another home.

Under Section 8 regulations low income persons pay no more than a third of their income toward housing. Ms. Demirgian's certificate could have been extended for an additional 30-day period, but the town Housing Authority found no evidence that she was making a good faith effort to find another apartment, Dennis Phelan, housing director, said.

The authority had never received confirmation from Ms. Demirgian that she received the extension, Phelan said, even though she admitted receiving it.

The town has 142 Section 8 certificates. Phelan estimated that almost 100 percent of those persons seeking one or two-bedroom units have been successful. Those seeking three and four bedroom apartments have had greater difficulty, he said.

Ms. Demirgian charged she could not locate another apartment "because my name is mud" in Manchester because of the CD lawsuit.

Swensson backs mill area plans

MANCHESTER — Republican candidate for the 13th Assembly District, Elsie "Bibi" Swensson has pledged today her support for the revitalization of the Cheney Historical District.

She acknowledged the economic and physical restoration will require support and cooperation from both the public and private sectors.

Mrs. Swensson cited two areas where the state government can be of help. The first, according to Mrs. Swensson is to provide financial assistance through the Urban Action Fund. The town has requested $155,000 for the revamping of traffic flow in the Hartford Road area, and the request has been approved but not funded. Mrs. Swensson said she would concentrate on obtaining the funding which would provide for traffic signs, bus shelters, and widening Hartford Road.

A second area would be completion of the 194-86 connector. Mrs. Swensson said "Part of the proposed development is to helpfully include commercial office space," Mrs. Swensson said. "The completion of the highway will provide an important geographic and economic link to the rest of the Greater Hartford area."

Mrs. Swensson believes "Manchester and the State of Connecticut have a great opportunity to set an example of positive, successful rehabilitation in the Cheney District."

Drive tops goal for United Way

HARTFORD — More than 1,000 volunteer campaign workers cheered as 1980 United Way campaign chairman, Denis Mullane, announced that $9,105,742 had been raised in this year's United Way of the Capital Area's fund drive.

The dollars raised represent an increase of $1,088,407 over that raised last year and is the first $1 million increase in the local organization's history.

The announcement was made at a victory luncheon, held at the Hartford Civic Center.

The total is 101 percent of the $9 million goal set for this year's campaign.

More than 175 local companies and organizations were honored as leaders in the campaign because of the level of employee giving.

The United Way of the Capital Area covers a 21-town region and provides funding for 65 agencies.

All lectures will be held Sunday evenings at St. Bridget School, 74 Main St., at 7 p.m. The public is invited.

This whole week I reflected on money, and our relationship to it. There is some unwritten understanding that preachers are supposed to talk about love and caring and morality, but not about money.

The projects could be done as they are needed. We also would hope the need for these improvements will alert officials to the need to perform preventive maintenance in hopes of minimizing the future need for massive bond issues.

Hartford Stage casts world premiere drama

HARTFORD — Rehearsals have begun for the world premiere production of "Einstein and the Polar Bear" by Tom Griffin, which opens at the Hartford Stage Company Nov. 14. This whimsical comedy about "two people who are destined to be together" takes place during a snowbound weekend in a small New Hampshire town. The main character, Bill, is a reclusive, once famous writer who now lives in a rundown cottage which doubles as a second-hand bookstore, with his aged father who insists that he "met Einstein once." Bill is surprised by Diane Ashe, a beautiful and spunky young woman who arrives mysteriously at his doorstep, claiming trouble and seemingly game for anything. The play's author, Tom Griffin, is an actor with the Trinity Square Repertory Company in Providence, R.I., where he has lived all his life. He is the recipient of a Playboy Editorial Award for his fiction and was nominated by the Los Angeles Drama Critics Circle for "outstanding achievement in playwrighting" for his play, "The Taking Away of Little Willie," produced at the Mark Taper Forum. "Einstein and the Polar Bear" was one of 16 scripts chosen from over 1800 submissions to the 1980 O'Neill Playwrights Festival in Waterford. Mark Lamos, artistic director of the Stage Company, first saw the play at the O'Neill festival and says that he "knew immediately that I wanted it for Hartford."

"Einstein and the Polar Bear" is directed by J. Ranelli, who recently directed "Crimes of the Heart" at Baltimore's Center Stage, and who is on the faculty at New York's Juilliard School. The world premiere of "Einstein and the Polar Bear" previews at Hartford Stage Nov. 12 and 13 and opens Nov. 14 with a six-week run to December 21. For further information and tickets call the box office at 527-5151.

"The author's New Hampshire neighbors are Helen and Bobby Bullins, whose passionate marriage is transformed in the snowstorm. Helen Bullins is played by Marjorie Lovett. Ms. Lovett recently toured with Ted Knight in "The Impossible Years," and with Patrice Munnell in "Mame." She has numerous stock and dinner theater credits, and is seen on television on "The Doctors." Bobby Bullins is played by David Strathairn, whose varied theatrical career includes summer stock roles in "Uncle Vanya," "Scapino," and "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," as well as regional stage appearances and tours with Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey Circus.

Theater World Singers salvage a museum piece

By GLENNE CURRIE
NEW YORK (UPI) — The new production of "Brigadoon" has the two finest singing leads currently on Broadway: Meg Bussert as Fiona and Martin Vidnovic as Tommy. "Brigadoon," book and lyrics by Alan Jay Lerner and music by Frederick Loewe, was first seen 53 years ago. The new production opened Oct. 16 at the Majestic Theater.

Agony from its beautiful songs, it really is a museum piece. And it has been treated as such, wisely. One or two contemporary jokes which have been added are not particularly funny and jar.

Director Vivian Malton has directed it as if it still were 1947, and Agnes de Mille's choreography has been carefully recreated by James Jamieson. There really is no other sensible way to do it. But the sentimental story, the cliché characters, the obligatory but unamusing over-sexed woman comic, and even the acclaimed choreography seem severely outdated. The story is the one about two Americans who stumble onto a village in the Scottish Highlands which comes to life only once every hundred years, to avoid the corruption of the outer world. In the end love conquers all.

It is the score which matters: "Down on MacConnachy Square," "Waiting for My Dearie," "I'll Go Home With Bonnie Jean," "Heather on the Hill," "Come to Me, Bend to Me," "Almost Like Being in Love," and "There But For You Go." Bussert and Vidnovic are matched by an excellent singing chorus, and as long as they are singing as well. The talk, the dancing, the chase through the forest, make for a long evening. The too-clever and the too-colorful costumes never let you forget you're on Broadway. John Curry, world champion ice skater by profession and dancer by choice, shares top billing with Bussert and Vidnovic in the marginally villainous role of Harry Beaton, the discarded lover. His dancing is only OK, and he speaks his lines like a peevish little boy, but he runs and dies beautifully in the chase scene.

One-person shows
One-person shows depend on the material and on the personality and talent of the performer. Stephen Wade has all the talent and charisma in the world, but his material varies widely in "Banjo Dancing," which opened on Broadway Oct. 21 at the Century Theater.

The title of the show is: "Banjo Dancing." The 48th Annual Squatters Mountain Song Dance Folklore Convention and Banjo Contest, and Why I Lost Robert Nichols, plays Charles, the local mailman and self-appointed gossip columnist. Nichols was seen in "The Little Foxes" at Stage West and in "Hit the Deck" for the Goodspeed Opera House. On the Los Angeles stage he performed in "The Odd Couple," "The Music Man," and, with Ethel Merman, in "Call Me Madam." He was a familiar face on the now classic TV series: "My Little Margie," "The Ray Milland Show," "Bachelor Father," and "The Real McCoys," among others. The author's New Hampshire neighbors are Helen and Bobby Bullins, whose passionate marriage is transformed in the snowstorm.

Helen Bullins is played by Marjorie Lovett. Ms. Lovett recently toured with Ted Knight in "The Impossible Years," and with Patrice Munnell in "Mame." Officers elected

Last week, the votes were counted and the new president has been announced. "Wait a minute," you say. "Elections aren't supposed to take place until November 4th." Although the national presidential elections have not yet been held, a very important election has taken place at MHS this week: the election of the senior class officers.

After polling seniors in homeroom period last week, the votes were tabulated and the results are as follows: President, Danny Kibbie; vice president, Paul Yavis; secretary, Sara Elman; treasurer, Mike Flanagan. All four officers are extremely active in the affairs of MHS. Dan is also the treasurer of the Student Assembly. Paul is a Board of Education representative and a member of the football team. Both Sara and Mike have been active members of the student government through their high school years. These are only a few of the activities in which these students are active.

These students have all shown their leadership qualities in various ways. They are good students academically and are involved in many sports, clubs, and community groups.

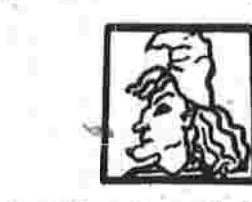

Mr. Ron Macadio, the advisor of the Student Assembly, is pleased with the results of the election. "These are four of the most active students in the entire high school," he has said, "the main factor in their personalities being complete involvement in MHS. He added that, "As a group, you could not ask for four more accomplished students. I personally feel a parental type of pride for each of these kids."

The seniors at MHS are all looking forward to an exciting and rewarding year. The senior class officers are all experienced, well-rounded students, and we are sure that they will do an excellent job. Congratulations and good luck.

Halloween origin forgotten today?

For children, the month of October is marked by a growing anticipation for the most enjoyable holiday other than Christmas, that of Halloween. Halloween is purely a children's holiday. Ghosts and goblins and lots of candy are thousands of years old. They developed from the ancient Druid festival of Samhain (summer's end), celebrated in the British Isles. During this festival, the spirits of the dead were thought to walk the night, returning to the homes of their kinsmen. Huge bonfires were lit throughout the countryside to ward off these evil spirits.

With the establishment of the Roman Catholic Church in the Middle Ages, Christian customs became intermingled with the pagan ones. Bonfires were still lit as a protection against the spirits. Witches were said to ride through the sky on broomsticks, on their way to their witches' Sabbaths. The term "jack-o-lantern" was derived from Irish folklore, telling of a man named Jack who was condemned to walk the earth with a lantern for all eternity.

Today's "Trick or Treat" tradition also has its foundations in Irish tradition. In the 17th century, poor children went from door to door begging for money and small cakes. This begging was called "a soulin'". If the children were denied their "treat," they were apt to play an evil "trick" upon the household.

Halloween is no longer a religious observance, and most of our population is completely content to have dropped the superstitions and traditions that were once connected with this holiday. But this Halloween, as youngsters in our family don their scary costumes, and we repeatedly open the front door to choruses of "Trick or Treat," perhaps you will be reminded of the meanings that were once a part of the celebration of All Hallows Eve.

An Editorial: Maybe it's the historian in me

Maybe it's the historian in me, but I like Manchester High School at a crossroads in its history. We may be two blocks east of the intersection at Main Street and Middle Turnpike, but Manchester High School is clearly at a crossroads in its history.

I have witnessed two good years here. During that time students and faculty have distinguished themselves in extraordinary ways. We have examined, cross-examined, dissected, and analyzed every aspect of our program, personnel, and facilities. We're ready to move into the 1980s with a new confidence, a new program of studies, a new discipline.

Senior Larry Krupp began by introducing the three other officers: Beth Adams, secretary; Mary Holt, treasurer; and Barbara Rennett, vice-president. Each officer lit a candle and then delivered a speech on one of the four principles of the National Honor Society.

Secretary Beth Apter spoke on the principle of service. She stressed the importance of volunteer work in hospitals, schools or local organizations. Miss Apter eloquently concluded with the thought that service is working not for monetary compensation, but to attain self-satisfaction, and most of all, to help others.

MHS librarians cope with students

Where in MHS can you find mad sound? After reproaching these students anywhere from ten to twenty times, the librarians then insist that they leave the library and go into the independent study room. A room off from the library, this is where students go when they have homework to do, but instead of strict silence they are able to talk freely.

Well, talking freely is not all that goes on here. This is the perfect place to smuggle in munchies if you are entirely grossed out by the cafeteria.

I must admit, this place does occasionally get out of hand. Lightweight wrestling, heated screaming debates and wood carving (in the desks) are among the various unorthodox practices in this room.

Although the library can be a very comical place, it does have a lot to offer. Fortunately for us, each librarian is equipped with a great deal of patience and a wonderful sense of humor. I often catch them chuckling over some of the strange antics displayed by the students.

And I'm afraid it will only get worse. Soon to come is senioritis, junior thesis time and open campus for sophomores. Kingly seniors will be hounding around the library without an ambition in the world, juniors will be constantly pestering the librarians for help with their thesis and sophomores, fresh out of their assigned study halls will be testing by Sherry Tuttle new-found freedom.

Indians No. 1 Athletes

In 1983, on January 27 one of our Athletes-of-the-Week was born. Andrew O. Wickwire, an ace runner for the past three years, has been fighting the challenges that await him at every mile. Many times I have seen him running hard, training daily in any kind of weather, for himself and also for the team. During the last race which clinched the OCLL championship, Andy dug in to pull out a key position and scored a victory.

He, along with the rest of the Cross Country Team, simply won, for a second year in a row, the OCLL championship. Their record is a very impressive 15-0, proving that they are the state's very best. Doug Potter, Dave Parrott, Peter Murphy, Dave DeValve, Tony Barbagallo, Tom Danahy, Harry Veal, and Dan D'Amato are the other top runners who have added significantly to

How should I know what INVOLANT means?

Involution is a mathematical term. It is the opposite of evolution. In mathematics, an involutory function is a function that is its own inverse. For example, the function f(x) = 1/x is an involutory function because f(f(x)) = x.

Involution is also a term used in biology. It refers to the process of returning to a primitive or ancestral state. For example, the evolution of a snake from a lizard-like ancestor is an example of involution.

Involution is also a term used in psychology. It refers to the process of returning to a primitive or ancestral state of mind. For example, the process of deconditioning is an example of involution.

Involution is also a term used in linguistics. It refers to the process of returning to a primitive or ancestral state of language. For example, the process of language reconstruction is an example of involution.

Involution is also a term used in philosophy. It refers to the process of returning to a primitive or ancestral state of thought. For example, the process of deconstruction is an example of involution.

Involution is also a term used in art. It refers to the process of returning to a primitive or ancestral state of artistic expression. For example, the process of abstraction is an example of involution.

Involution is also a term used in science. It refers to the process of returning to a primitive or ancestral state of scientific knowledge. For example, the process of falsification is an example of involution.

Voyager to explore Saturn

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Voyager 1 made one discovery after another when it explored Jupiter 20 months ago and scientists expect a world of surprises from its upcoming exploration of Saturn, its rings and particularly its moons.

Virtually everything the twin telescopic television cameras aboard the robot explorer are seeing is new because the spacecraft's photo resolution is already better than the best pictures taken by Pioneer 11 last year.

The spacecraft made its first discoveries Oct. 26 when its cameras recorded two previously unknown moons just inside and just outside one of the planet's debris rings.

Voyager 1 is due to swing within 77,000 miles of Saturn's cloud tops Nov. 12, but first it will get a look at the moon Titan from less than 2,500 miles away. And Titan is one of the most intriguing objects in the solar system.

Titan, with a diameter somewhere between 2,700 and 3,600 miles, is the largest moon in the solar system. But it is the satellite's atmosphere, and the frigid surface hidden behind its reddish clouds, that most interest scientists.

Project scientist Edward C. Stone said Titan apparently has an atmosphere composed largely of methane - natural gas. He said it may have liquid methane on its surface along with other hydrocarbons.

"It may be kind of a gooey mess," he said at a National Aeronautics and Space Administration news conference.

Stone said the Pioneer 11 mission last year found that Titan's atmosphere is deep, on the order of 120 miles or so thick. The surface density of the atmosphere will be determined by Voyager, but estimates range up to a density twice as thick as Earth's air at sea level.

The presence of organic molecules in Titan's atmosphere has prompted speculation for years that Titan may be one place in the solar system beyond Earth which could harbor some kind of life.

Cornell University astronomer Carl Sagan, one of the scientists who will analyze Voyager's pictures, suggested in 1972 that Titan might have areas warm enough to support some living things.

"Our research has shown that at the very least, Titan should be littered with the kind of organic molecules which, in the early history of the Earth, led to the origin of life," Sagan said eight years ago.

Recent ground based measurements indicate that the temperature at Titan's surface may be around minus 300 degrees Fahrenheit. If so, that it would make it much too cold to support life as it is known on Earth.

The ten areas in Bolton which may experience septic system failures are identified on the above map. The areas were chosen after more than a year of study by the Water Pollution Control Study Committee.

Committee adopts pollution program

By DONNA HOLLAND
Herald Correspondent
BOLTON — The Water Pollution Control Study Committee approved and adopted a Water Pollution Control Program for the town as its first effort to control water pollution. The program will include a public awareness program and continuous septic system monitoring. After more than a year of study the committee said, "Right now Bolton does not have a major water quality problem due to septic system failures." The adoption of the plan Thursday followed a public meeting attended by one college student and two town officials. Committee members were obviously disappointed in the turnout. The committee felt strongly that even though the town does not have a problem now, action should be taken to make sure it doesn't have a problem in the future. The committee's report said if the town wishes to avoid sewer construction, it must encourage proper maintenance of all systems and develop public awareness of the special problems associated with septic systems. The report, which outlines a

Program contains two parts

BOLTON — The Water Pollution Control Program, recommended for the town by the Water Pollution Control Study Committee, contains two parts. The first part is for a public awareness program and the second part is for continuous septic system monitoring. The program will be an effort by the town to avoid sewer construction. The committee feels if septic systems are maintained and constructed properly, sewers can be avoided. The public awareness program would "educate residents in the proper use and maintenance of septic systems." Also, the relationship between water conservation and the overall operating efficiency of septic systems; the relationship between the disposal of wastewater from water softening systems and ground water pollution. Through the program, a one-page flyer would be mailed to all households explaining proper septic system maintenance. The flyer would include information on how to recognize septic system failures, costs and health hazards associated with system failure; potential high costs of septic system repairs or replacements; how septic systems work; the need to pump out septic systems and inspect baffles every three years; special problems associated with steel tanks; importance of water conservation; the hazards of onsite, salt flushing water softening systems. The program would include special additional literature being mailed to households in the areas of concern. The committee identified 10 such areas in town. The literature would include a map showing areas of concern with a description of current and potential problems and actions which may be taken to address the problems; more detailed information concerning the need for close monitoring; a letter from a town official stating the reason for the mailing; and alternative systems which might be used to address septic system problems. The committee recommends having informational meetings for interested residents. The pamphlet would be available at the Community Hall. The committee also recommends that the town sanitation implement a continuous monitoring system. The project would include record keeping on location and probable cause of failures, using records to reassess areas of the community where greater emphasis on preventative measures should be undertaken, and using records to evaluate effects of the educational programs. It would also address future water quality concerns as they arise. The committee expressed concern with problems with water softeners that should be studied as well as other hazardous wastes. At its next meeting (date not yet set) the committee will adopt its final report for submission to the selectmen and also an operating budget. The report must also be approved by a Town Meeting.

Vernon union signs contract

VERNON — The town and officials of the Public Works Department union signed a three-year contract Thursday that gives the union workers an 8.5 percent wage increase over the next three years.

The hourly wage for mechanics will go to $7.10 the first year, $7.70 the second, and $8.36 the third; Rubbish mechanic, $7.34, $7.96, and $8.64; welder, $6.55, $7.11, $7.71; equipment operator, $7.10, $7.70, $8.36; truck driver, $6.72, $7.29, $7.91.

Also: Public works laborer, $6.30, $6.84, $7.42; sewage treatment plant laborer, $6.30, $7, and $7.65; custodian, $6.18, $6.71, and $7.28; mason, $7.07, $7.67, and $8.32 and carpenter, $7.07, $7.67, and $8.32.

Also: Caretaker, $6.18, $6.71, $7.28; treatment plant operator I, $6.77, $7.51, $8.20; Treatment plant operator II, $7.10, $7.87, $8.59; sanitation laborer, $6.49, $7.04, $7.64, and sanitation driver, $7.01, $7.61, and $8.26.

Employees at the treatment plant are receiving additional individual adjustments. Effective retroactive to last July 1 they receive an additional 15 cents per hour to be applied after the percentage increase and effective July 1, 1981, an additional five cents per hour to be applied after the percentage increase. These adjustments are one-time only adjustments and will lapse after July 1, 1981.

The wage increases in general are all retroactive to July 1, the start of the town's fiscal year.

The contract gives the employees 13 paid holidays and one floating holiday to be mutually agreed upon by the employer and employees in advance of the holiday, and holidays falling on Saturday will be celebrated on the preceding day and those falling on Sunday will be celebrated Monday.

Under the contract an employee who has given continued service to the town for 10 years will receive an annual bonus of $100; for 15 years, $150, and for 20 years, $200 annually.

The employee pension plan is also made part of the contract agreement and the parties involved agreed that the union may request to reopen concerning pensions only.

Lower roadway seen as concern

VERNON — The roadway on Route 83 in Talcottville has been lowered several feet in connection with the construction going on on Interstate 86 and Mayor Marie Herbst received some calls from concerned residents.

She said the concern was expressed because that area has had flooding problems in the past and residents fear that lowering the road will compound them.

Mrs. Herbst contacted the state Department of Transportation and received a reply from Edwin J. Fijol, manager of design for the Bureau of Highway.

Fijol said the roadway design in this area was predicted primarily on two factors, the first being the flood plan of the Tankerhoosen River and the second, the provision for conveyance of normal rainfall run off.

He said that without dwelling on the technical aspects of the design, he would "simply point out that the roadway facility was tested in design utilizing the criteria of a 100-year flood of the Tankerhoosen River to assure proper passage through the flood plain."

"The anticipated flood elevation of the Tankerhoosen River at the Hartford Turnpike crossing is 186.0 feet, the new roadway, even though it is somewhat lower than that at present, will be constructed above elevation 186.0 feet," Fijol said.

He said the department is confident that the design of Hartford Turnpike adequately satisfies those aspects relative to concerns expressed.

VERNON — Speaking to campaign workers at Republican headquarters, Jane Lamb, Republican candidate for the 56th Assembly District, listed several proposals made by Republican legislators in the last session and rejected by the Democrats.

She said those rejecting the proposals included her opponent, Chester Morgan who is seeking a third-term.

She said Republicans called for a cap on the number of permanent full-time state employees; a one-third cut in the hiring of consultants, some of whom are retired state employees who are drawing double pay from the state; a limit in the increases in state welfare payments and the hiring of more welfare fraud investigators; and elimination of unnecessary executive assistants many of whose positions are political patronage jobs.

She also said the Republicans pushed for a limit on the rate of growth of state expenditures asking that the growth not exceed the average growth rate of state personal income over the three preceding years. She said this plan would tie state spending to the people's ability to pay but provision could be made to exceed the ceiling in case of an emergency by a three-fourths vote of the General Assembly.

"There are other areas where there are potential savings. For example, the rent for state-owned housing, some 1,200 units, must be brought up to date. Instead of costing taxpayers' dollars, these units must have (at least) a break-even factor," Mrs. Lamb said.

She said she feels it's imperative that the next session of the Legislature go through expenditures with a fine tooth comb so that it can then determine as fairly as possible where revenues will come from and how much they will be. The taxpayers, who have been forced to tighten their own belts, should expect their state government to do the same," she said.
