Jim Burrell, of Los Angeles, is comforted by one of his sons after identifying another son as a victim of a mass shooting in a restaurant cooler. Police are in a quandry about a motive for the execution-style murder.

11 herded into cooler where three die

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An all-points bulletin was out today for two shotgun-wielding bandits who police said robbed a restaurant, herded 11 people into a walk-in refrigerator and shot nine of them execution-style. Three were killed.

"We don't know what motivated them to shoot," said Lt. Ron Lewis. "We have no indication of resistance (by the victims)."

Detectives said the bandits forced their way into the back door of Bob's Big Boy restaurant on La Cienega Boulevard as patrons were being let out of the building for the closing about 2:30 a.m. Sunday.

An unknown amount of money was taken from the cash register during the holdup and the victims were robbed of their money and valuables.

An all-points bulletin was issued for two black males about 25 years old.

The suspects herded the customers and employees out of the dining area and into the rear where they were held at gunpoint," said Commander William Booth. "After completing the robbery, the suspects fired shotgun blasts at the people."

One officer at the scene said the 11 victims were forced into a walk-in refrigerator and gunned down execution-style. Two people somehow escaped being hit by the fusillade from the pair of sawed-off shotguns.

Asked why some of those fired at were not killed, one officer said, "We can't read their minds but they might have thought everyone was dead."

Dead at the scene were David Burrell, 30, a customer and Dita Agtani, 23, a waitress. Ahmad Masheuk, 20, another employee, died a few hours later at a hospital.

Seasonal sharing drive lags

MANCHESTER — The Manchester Area Conference of Churches Seasonal Sharing appeal is lagging behind, with the money donations some local residents desperately need falling to materialize.

Among those needy residents are two little girls, who are seeing a changed daddy this Christmas from the one they remember last year at this time.

Before, their bearded daddy was working, and their mommy stayed home to care for them. This year, they're eating cereal for a lot of meals because their dad is injured and out of work. Meanwhile, they're seeing their mommy less because

Iraq, Iran fight in OPEC talks

BALI, Indonesia (UPI) — Indonesia President Suharto, leader of the world's largest Muslim nation, opened the OPEC summit meeting today with a plea to Iran and Iraq to end the first war ever between members of the powerful oil group in the interests of Islamic unity.

But delegates from the two Middle East oil-producing nations nearly came to blows shortly before start of the oil ministers' meeting — the first high-level OPEC gathering since the Iran-Iraq war began nearly three months ago on Sept. 22.

In a glaring reminder of the war, Iran left an empty chair at its table, graced by a large picture of its oil minister, Mohammed Tadjuddin, who is being held by Iraq as a prisoner of war.

To ease the prospect of verbal conflict, conference organizers changed the alphabetical order of seating, inserting Indonesian delegates between those from Iran and Iraq.

In a speech opening the session on the lush island holiday resort of Bali, Suharto, head of the world's largest Muslim nation, said the unity of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Nations and the interests of the Third World were jeopardized by the conflict.

"I would like to make an honest appeal to our beloved brothers who are now in dispute, Iran and Iraq, to seek the best conceivable solution to their conflict as soon as possible," he said.

Judge fines FBI big wigs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge today sentenced former top FBI officials W. Mark Felt and Edward S. Miller to pay fines of $5,000 and $3,500 respectively — but imposed no jail time — for their convictions for approving illegal break-ins in the early 1970s.

Felt, 67, and Miller, 57, the bureau's former No. 2 and No. 3 men, came to the Federal Court House in Washington prepared for the possibility they would be ordered to jail.

But U.S. District Judge William Bryant apparently heeded defense lawyers' pleas for leniency on the grounds the two men had been under investigation and prosecution since 1976 and because neither profited from the crime.

The judge made no comments in imposing the sentence — on a civil rights conspiracy conviction carrying a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison — except to give Felt and Miller 10 days to file a notice of appeal.

In an unprecedented case in which Richard Nixon testified, Felt and Miller were found guilty by a jury Nov. 6 of approving secret break-ins — code named "black bag jobs" in the FBI — in a hunt for fugitive members of the militant Weather underground in 1972-73.

The "bag jobs" were conducted, without court warrants, at the New York and Jersey homes of friends and relatives of the fugitives.

Felt and Miller contended they had approval for the break-ins from Acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray, but the government last week dropped a 32-month-old indictment accusing Gray of the same charge.

He asserted the break-ins, even under today's reforms, still would have been permitted with proper approval from the White House or the attorney general.

Citing Miller's "personal anguish," he said his client has been "a prisoner of this case" since 1976.

Chief prosecutor John W. Nielsen, Jr. made no comment at the sentencing.

In perhaps the only comparable case, former Nixon White House aide John Ehrlichman was sentenced in 1974 to 20 months to five years in prison for ordering a break-in in the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Bani-Sadr: 'Carter stalling'

Sadr, broadcast on the CBS "60 Minutes" program Sunday night, said, "We won't dignify it with a comment," the spokesman said.

In an interview conducted by Mike Wallace Dec. 4, Bani-Sadr said in a cryptic statement he did not know where the Americans, now in their 60th day of captivity, were being held. "When I say I don't know, it doesn't mean that I'm completely ignorant of the situation," Bani-Sadr said.

"I know that they have been taken to various cities throughout Iran. And I have asked questions and investigated the treatment they're receiving and their health."

"When I say I don't know," he said, "I'm referring to the question of responsibility. I am not at all responsible for their situation."

Editorial Help needy

The seasonal sharing campaign of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches is lagging behind in collections for the needy this holiday season.

There are many heart-warming stories that have come as a result of the help and hope provided by the seasonal sharing campaign over the years.

There are many who face the holidays without hope. Despair and depression replace what should be the holiday spirit of joy and brotherhood.

Each year the seasonal sharing campaign helps many who would face a Christmas of poverty, loneliness and dejection.

Case history after case history tells of those who are less advantaged than most of us.

Their need is great and authentic.

Families that have been broken apart by tragedy, trying their best to make ends meet, sometimes find it is impossible to do even a little extra during the holidays.

Without help, Christmas to them would be just another day filled with depression and hopelessness.

The seasonal sharing campaign can change all that. It provides a merry Christmas for those who otherwise would have little cause to celebrate.

It brings a small amount of joy to the elderly, the children and handicapped persons who otherwise would go forgotten during this joyous time of the year.

Opinion

Thoughts

"YOU MUST BE PREPARED ... THE SON OF MAN IS COMING AT THE TIME YOU LEAST EXPECT" Matthew 24:44

The early Christian communities expected the return of Christ almost momentarily. But as the years passed into decades, our Christian ancestors took on a stance of patient expectation.

This year many are making sacrifices during the holidays because inflation is taking a bigger and bigger bite out of personal income.

But part of the joy of the holiday season is sharing with those who may know very little happiness.

Contributions to the seasonal sharing campaign help. There have been many who have contributed to help their fellow man enjoy the holiday season.

But the campaign is falling far short of its goal.

If everyone could consider the good a contribution to the seasonal sharing appeal would do, and give what they can to bring joy to the joyless, the Manchester area would celebrate a more joyous Christmas.

When the time for helping comes, as it now has, we are confident in the goodness of the people of Manchester.

We are certain the people of our community care about their fellow human beings.

We urge everyone to consider a gift to the seasonal sharing appeal.

Small and large contributions add up to bring smiles to the faces of those with very little, indeed, to smile about.

Send a contribution to the appeal is easy.

Checks or money orders may be sent to Seasonal Sharing, P. O. Box 773, Manchester, 06040.

We urge everyone to consider the seasonal sharing appeal as an appropriate way to remember those less fortunate at this time of the year.

It is a decision we hope is not delayed.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Will Reagan succeed in pruning bureaucracy?

Editor's note - The following is a special column written by Washington Columnist Jack Anderson. The special report appears in addition to the column regularly scheduled for today.

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON - For the second time in a row the American voters have elected an "outsider" as president. And for the second time in a row, the voters are probably going to be disappointed.

In 1976, Jimmy Carter was elected not despite the fact that he had been only a one-term governor of Georgia but apparently because of it. He handed his voters a message of small-town, common-sense, and primary trust, persuading the voters that he was just plain folks - and could be counted on to speak the truth.

He was elected to sweep the Augean stables of Washington clean of the bureaucrats who had been squandering their hard-earned tax money.

Ronald Reagan, with his staff of 100 - a far cry from the 1000 staff of Carter's 1976 political campaign - promised us he would get the government off our backs.

It was a beautiful concept and they inspired among the interest groups theyerve.

Here are just a few examples dug up by my reporters Peter Grant and Eric Yoder of the political facts of life that Carter learned when he moved into the White House.

Of the 1,900 agencies that made up the incoming administration's overall target area, 1,159 were "advisory committees." Carter ordered the Office of Management and Budget to wipe out as many of them as possible.

When the dust settled, however, the OMB had managed to budget only 339 of the committees out of existence, leaving 820 still around.

What the president's hatchmen discovered was that most of the advisory committees were, if not necessarily valuable to the governing of the country, indisputably valuable to the political fortunes of the administration.

For example, one of the likeliest targets for extinction, the OMB had teams devoted, was the Committee for Preservation of the White House. This august body was formed in 1964 to recommend design changes, furnishings and landscaping for the Executive Mansion. The committee rather obviously does little, and membership on it seems only to reaffirm the prestige of those prestigious people who are named to it, an internal OMB memo noted dryly.

"There is no doubt that this committee does not meet the requirements for continuation."

As it happens, however, one of the "prestigious people" on the Committee for the Preservation of the White House is none other than the incumbent first lady, an ex officio chairman. And who knows when, on a slow news day, the committee might be able to get a little media coverage for the acquisition of a historic desk for the Blue Room, or the pruning of a tree on the White House lawn? Quotes

"Assailed by these messages, a mother on her way to work may be persuaded that the only thing to do would be to turn around, chuck her job, pick up her child and bring the baby home - to stay. But since that would plunge her family into poverty, she would be more likely to go to work, miserable, filled with anxiety and guilt and certain that she is a bad mother."

U. S. could give little help if war occurred in Europe

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON - Throughout the matter of days or weeks - like the invasion of Hungary in 1956 and of Czechoslovakia 12 years later - or it will have escalated into a nuclear exchange. This means that any non-nuclear help from U.S. forces - historically the backbone of NATO - would have to depend on the military supplies already on hand in Europe.

But there's not much there.

The Pentagon report, which was shown to my associate Dale Van Atta, stated bluntly: "At present, war reserves in Europe are inadequate to support a strong initial defense. This raises a serious problem, because war reserves are intended to support the deployed forces until the supply pipeline (from the United States) has been established."

The shortage of pre-positioned stocks is low, the report explains, because there is no separate authorization for such supplies - anything stored up in Europe "must be taken from units based in the United States."

A chart in the secret report lists a number of the most serious equipment shortages, comparing what is needed for a 60-day period (let alone six months) to what is actually on hand in Europe. It makes hair-raising reading.

The Army estimates that 3,673 105-millimeter tank guns would be needed. As of July 1979, the most recent survey covered in the report, there were only 497 of these guns available - less than one-seventh of the requirement.

Of the 2,865 5-ton trucks considered necessary for the 60-day period, there were exactly five on hand.

Required: 2,000 armored personnel carriers. On hand: None.

Required: 205 8-inch howitzers. On hand: None.

Required: 335 155-millimeter howitzers. On hand: None.

A second chart illustrated the shortage of ammunition, noting that "all services have inadequate pre-positioned stocks," and are "seriously hampered by a lack of forward storage facilities."

The Army had 650 tons of ammo, exactly half of what it needed; the Navy had 88 of the 173 tons it needed, and the Air Force had 156 of its required 241 tons.

Short of ammunition, stripped of replacement weapons, American troops in Europe would also run out of gas before very long. "Petroleum is another critical commodity in short supply, both for current peacetime operations and war reserve stocks," the secret report notes. In fact, the reserve stocks of fuel have been raided "to provide continued support of daily readiness operations and training."

Fuel storage facilities are also in short supply, the report notes, though efforts are under way to overcome this deficiency.

A final piece of bad news: "Present maintenance capabilities (in Europe) are deficient, even for a short war," the Pentagon report states. And the meager stock of spare parts on hand would cripple Air Force and Navy tactical aircraft in 30 days or less.

In short, any conventional Western military response to a Soviet-bloc invasion of Poland would have to depend on our European allies. Except for his nuclear claws, Uncle Sam is a paper tiger in Europe.

INTERESTING CONFLICT: William Timmons, the one-time Nixon Congressional liaison who is deputy director of the Reagan transition team, has been collecting conflict-of-interest forms from his teammates. But his own position has been described by one Reagan aide as "the ultimate conflict."

After fighting against Richard

Timmons' impeachment, Timmons became an extremely successful Washington lobbyist. His clients numbered gas and utility companies, the National Rifle Association, Lockheed, Northrop, Standard Oil and the American Petroleum Institute.

Timmons' greatest coup on Capitol Hill, though, was getting a federal bailout for Chrysler Corp. This earned him the nickname of "Rain-maker" - a man who could produce showers of government dollars for his clients.

Timmons is now in a position to provide influential government jobs for hundreds of individuals. Here's the rub: Timmons plans to rejoin his lobbying firm after the inauguration.

It is unneveable that so many people may owe their jobs to a man who may later come to them as a lobbyist looking for help for a client," said a Reagan aide. "He should be worth millions as a lobbyist."

One man Timmons has been trying hard to place as Reagan's congressional liaison is Tom Korologos. Korologos is bright, able - and Timmons' business partner.

HELL ON WHEELS: Motorcycle gangs are believed to be up to their bell buckles in the illicit drug traffic, particularly the manufacturing and sale of methamphetamines and PCP. Oddly, the Hell's Angels gangs from California and Minneapolis are suspected of being the main suppliers of illegal amphetamines in the Omaha, Neb., area.

LTM holds audition for next play

MANCHESTER - The Little Theater of Manchester will have open tryouts for their next comedy "My Three Angels" Tuesday night at 7:30 at the workshop, 22 Oak Street.

Rehearsals will begin in January and will continue till performance, which will be the end of February.

Parts are still available for men or women ranging in age from early 20s to mid 50s, and casting is open to the public. It is not necessary for anyone to be a member of Little Theater. For additional information call Annie Miller 643-9505 or 646-1180.

But as those decades have turned to centuries, we find few people actually living in this prepared state. If the call rang out today, very few of us would have our own house in order so that we could go out and meet the bridegroom with any sort of confidence. Oh, we believe and confess that Christ will return to earth again, but we don't think we'll be here to witness it.

But actually we live in the presence of Christ each day. For He invades our present, redeems our past, and gives us hope for the future. To live out our days in this faith statement makes our Advent preparation more of a daily life style, for then we are living prepared and not running scared.

What we must do is to prepare the way of the Lord each day, repent daily and stop our tendency to separate ourselves from God. We must not crowd God out of our lives by worrying about all we have to do for ourselves. Instead, we must put God into our lives and live for Him and our fellow men.

A recent response to our living prepared is to live a life full of hope and joy. The hymn writer captures this preparation with these words: "Come Thou Long Expected Jesus, Born To Set Thy People Free." We are free people under God. Free to love and free to serve. Let us live our freedom daily and rejoice in it. Let us show the world that God loves us with a smile and not a frown.

Live prepared. Live with God. AMEN

Mayor to study reservoir plan

VERNON — Mayor Marie Herbst said Thursday that she will be meeting with state Department of Transportation and Department of Environmental Protection officials to discuss plans for Walker Reservoir. The mayor wants the reservoir cleaned up so it can be stocked with fish and used for passive recreation. Town officials want the pond restored for use by spring. They are not blaming all of the silt problem on the state but claim that the condition was aggravated by the highway expansion project.

Baldrige urbane Connecticut cowboy

By United Press International
 Malcolm "Mac" Baldrige is a successful blend of Connecticut cowboy and urbane businessman.

His nomination by Ronald Reagan to be Commerce secretary gives the president-elect a man who combines Eastern business connections with the Western ranch country of his youth.

"He is one of the top businessmen in the country, and more businessman than politician, and that's what is needed in the Commerce Department," said Connecticut Republican Helen Robbins.

Baldrige took over a struggling, financially troubled brass mill in Waterbury, Conn., in the 1960s and turned Scovill Inc. into a highly diversified international manufacturer of consumer, housing and industrial goods.

He used his business and organizational skills in heading George Bush's 1980 Connecticut Republican primary campaign victory over Reagan.

And when Bush failed to win the GOP presidential nomination, Baldrige organized businessmen nationwide for the Reagan-Bush ticket and served as co-chairman of the successful Reagan-Bush campaign in Connecticut.

Despite his reputation as a soft-talking man with impeccable credentials and connections in the business world, the 58-year-old Yale University graduate is a rodeo cowboy who until recently was ranked among the top 10 calf ropers in the United States.

Born in Omaha, Neb., Oct. 4, 1922, Baldrige learned his calf roping skills in Nebraska, where he spent his summers working on a cattle ranch. For $1 a day in a six-day week, he rode horseback to check fences and put up hay, and helped break horses.

During the 1970s, Baldrige was competing in 10 professional rodeo events annually, contending riding and roping are as natural for a westerner as golf and skiing are for the New Englander.

Baldrige, chairman and chief executive officer of Scovill, is known in Connecticut political circles as a hard-working, behind-the-scenes organizer who delegates responsibility — then expects the work to be carried out.

"He (Baldrige) delegated well, and when he gave you a job to do, he expected it to be done," said Betsy Hemingway, who worked closely with him in the Reagan-Bush Connecticut campaign. "You wanted to do it for him and do it right."

"He expects a lot of people," Mrs. Hemingway said, "but it was absolutely a pleasurable experience working with him during the campaign."

Mrs. Robbins, who was active in Bush's primary campaign and later the Reagan-Bush presidential campaign, described Baldrige as "a very warm, laid-back person, but with a great sense of humor. I don't know of anybody who has ever met the man who doesn't like him."

"We (Bush supporters) won the primary here in Connecticut, and I give him a great deal of the credit for it," she said. "He's a great organizer and a great person."

Baldrige has a brother, Robert, who lives on Long Island, and a sister, Tish, who served as a secretary in the White House for Jacqueline Kennedy and now lives in New York City.

Baldrige majored in English at Yale and served in World War II as an infantry captain in the Pacific. Following his discharge, he went to work as a trainee in a Naugatuck, Conn., factory and rose to become the firm's president. In 1962, he joined Scovill as executive president, then became president and later chairman and chief executive officer.

In 1966, he was mentioned as a candidate for the GOP nomination for governor in Connecticut, but chose not to run. Instead, he remained an active party member and worker, serving in various positions, including Connecticut GOP finance chairman.

He is married to the former Margaret Trowbridge Murray, and they have two daughters, Megan and Mary.

Tax vote

WEST HARTFORD (UPI) — A taxpayers group in this affluent suburb has gathered enough signatures to force a referendum on freeing taxes over the next two years.

The West Hartford Taxpayers Association filed papers Thursday with 3,129 signatures — six more than needed — for a special election within three months on the tax question.

However, the group was attempting to work out an agreement with town officials to keep budget increases to 3 or 4 percent. If the settlement is reached, the referendum might not be held.

Decorate the Yule tree
If you are lucky enough to spend Christmas in the country — and many city dwellers can make their luck — you can create for yourself the old-fashioned Christmas our grand-grandparents enjoyed by decorating with the wonderful things that nature offers not very far from the doorstep. For your tree, bought at the general store or selected from your own land, there are ornaments limited only by your imagination. Sports Illustrated points out in the December issue: "Pine cones dipped in paint, dried Indian corn, straw popovers, corn husks, dried Queen Anne's lace, sand dollars or any seashells, succubus, dried milkweed pods — the list goes on and on. Nothing decorates a mantle, window sill or tabletop more beautifully than a couple of well-placed evergreen boughs, the article notes. To make a natural wreath, it is easiest to get a circular frame from the florist, wrap it with ribbons or cloth strips, then stuff pine, spruce or fir sprigs into the wrapping. Then attach pine cones, berries or weed seeds to complete the job."

Assistance still sought for needy families

By NANCY CARR Executive Director
Many of our 210 families (Yes, I know every time you read that figure it is a little higher, that's because we are still finding people in quiet corners who need help for Christmas) have been adopted for Christmas baskets. We still have 20 elderly or disabled to arrange for and 16 families. One is a family with four children between 11 and 16. If you've been meaning to call us but haven't gotten around to it, our numbers are 648-2983 or 646-4114. Or you can provide a turkey, fresh fruit, potatoes and we'll add gifts and canned goods. Or you can bring gifts and we'll match your gift with someone else's turkey. If you are planning to donate a turkey or food, please let us know as soon as possible. If enough food, particularly meat, comes in we can add extra families to the list. Everything has to be ready to go by 9 a.m. Tuesday, Dec. 23 at Concordia Lutheran. So we're beginning countdown this week. Toys, please. Please don't forget to

- leave your toys at your friendly local fire station with your friendly local firefighter. These men are doing a bang up job with cleaning and trying to repair and paint toys. I suspect a couple of them are going to need to sleep right through January when this is all over. As usual we are short on new gifts, particularly for the older children. We don't use Seasonal Sharing money for anything except food, hot meals and the clothing vouchers, so if you have a longing to put a twinkle in a big or little eye, please do your shopping today or tomorrow. Sharing Families from Center Church will be setting up the toy disbursement center at Pine Street Fire Station and toys will be distributed this Friday and Saturday, so please get your gift to the firehouse by Thursday. Gift suggestions for teen-agers: 1. Small gift certificates. 2. Hats, mittens, gloves, scarves. 3. Knee socks, socks. 4. Teen-age games (Monopoly, Checkers, Concentration, Chess, Scrabble, etc.) 5. Sports equipment of all kinds. 6. Billfolds. 7. Pens, stationery. 8. Lipsticks, combs, brushes, perfume, men's cologne. 9. Crafts, models. 10. Watches. 11. Inexpensive transistor radios. 12. Inexpensive calculators. 13. Tshirts. 14. Necklaces, belts. 15. Sweaters. Remember, we invite parents to come in and select a gift so that they can give it to their child. Don't wrap the gifts but if you like, include the paper and ribbons for later wrapping. We've got quite a way to go in just a couple of days so while you are out shopping, keep our children in mind. Convalescent homes As of today, very little has come in for our friends in convalescent homes. We'll take these gifts right up to Christmas Eve. Here is another list of gift suggestions: Men: Shaving supplies, deodorant, comb and brush sets, talcum powder, socks, handkerchiefs, stuffed animals, felt or soft slippers, pajamas, wallets, cardigan sweaters, fashionable ties, flannel sport shirts, lap robes. Women: Cologne, deodorant, warm slippers, warm nightgowns, afghans, sweaters, shoulder shawls, snap down the front house gowns, change purse, wool bed jackets, jewelry, nylon slippers, talcum powder, socks, shawls, hair ribbons. Again, don't wrap but do include paper. Gifts for shut-ins and convalescent homes can be left at Heritage Savings Bank, Main Street, Manchester, or the Heritage branch at K-Mart (now, that's convenient — just buy your gift and drop right in the box) or St. Mary's parish office at the Department of Human Services or, of course, the MACC office of any fire station. Every year at this point I begin to gulp. All these children and convalescent home patients and shut-ins and each year everything costs more and each year we seem to have 10 percent received so much from a family who adopted her that she says she can make it clear to the end of the year and could we please give her Christmas basket to someone needing the help more than she does. Glory! Makes you feel good all over, doesn't it? Christmas sparkles — to Marge Reed and last minute. Thinking of last minute, a number of people showed up too late for the Christmas carol sing. We're sorry. It was a delightful half hour and we always hold it at 6 so the little ones can get home into a warm bath and to bed. As you could tell by Steve Harry's pictures, the weather was perfect. The Salvation Army Band and the Round Table Singers were great, but most of all the people made it Christmas. Only one fight — it was over far too soon. For all of you "Thank you all in God's name for the Thanksgiving basket. May God bless every hand. It helps in many ways." Thank you kind lady for your letter. One elderly lady in Bolton which also collected food for our food baskets. — to a very special young couple who has spent hour upon hour cleaning out and reorganizing our Clothing Bank (you wouldn't believe how much better it looks). Thank you Bill and Linda Cregan. And to Bruce Lou Scott for the lovely knit lap robes, knit vests for teen-agers and hats and mittens. — to Emanuel Lutheran Church Women who have knit bags of colorful hats, gloves and mittens for the Christmas baskets. — and to a friend who came up with a new and marvelous idea. She has sewn in seven $15 gift certificates for teen-agers to a local store. Thank you! — to Bob Gorton for three bags of fresh winter squash. — to Cheney Tech for its collection of food and money for the Emergency Pantry. — to Stanley Circle South Methodist Church for a much needed contribution to the Food Bank. — to St. Maurice Church

Watkins for all the clothing racks which made the reorganization possible. They've been a great help with the Christmas lists, — to the 5th and 8th graders at Martin School for a very nice food collection including everything from main meals to fruit juices.

Collections disputed

PRETORIA, South Africa (UPI) — When Jacob van Tilburg, a convicted Nazi collaborator during the occupation of Holland, died in October, he left behind a private art collection valued at upwards of $16 million. The trustees were bequeathed to the University of Pretoria and has become a major source of embarrassment. Jewish organizations in Holland and South Africa claim van Tilburg amassed the collection by exploiting Dutch Jews. The organizations allege the former alderman of Dordrecht promised to look after the art treasures of 20 Jewish families taken off to death camps by the Nazis. After the war ended and van Tilburg completed his 13-month jail term, he emigrated to South Africa with the art collection. Dutch Jews now want it back but the University of Pretoria will not budge. The collection of paintings, Persian rugs, antique vases and silverware remains out of public view in a house near the university. School officials are reluctant to talk about it. One who did, art professor Felix Milant, said the university would gladly give back any piece provided a proof of ownership was produced. But the rest of the collection would remain where it is. "It has never been proved that it was plundered and, after 40 years, it is unlikely that it will be proved," Milant said. Local Jewish leaders deplore the university's attitude. "The whole thing must be returned. It is a collection of shame," said Alec Goldberg, director general of the South African Jewish Board of Deputies, a body representing 345 Jewish organizations around the country. Van Tilburg never claimed the collection totally as his own. In one of his last press interviews before his death he argued that he was arrested so quickly after the war he did not have time to return the fortune to its rightful owners. The Dutch Ministry of Justice conducted an investigation into how the collection was amassed and found no proof of any wrongdoing. It said no official government move would be made to have the treasure repatriated. "The Dutch government has taken a very in-different attitude towards this affair," Goldberg said. "The Jews must once again help themselves." There have been calls in Holland for a renewed investigation into the matter but the statute of limitations on such a crime ran out 20 years ago.

At an organizational meeting of a Community Planning Committee, in Vernon, members of the committee were introducing themselves. "I'm George Russell, town planner," said one. "I'm George Russell, chairman of the Economic Development Committee," said another member. A third member, who could not be identified, said, "I'm George Russell, town planner."

During a planning committee meeting on town use of vacant buildings, committee members were asked by Dr. Richard Warren to introduce themselves and let how they would like to be identified. George Russell, town planner, said, "I'd like to be known as the town planner—I am the town planner."

"I'm afraid we're not all singing out of the same hymn book," said Dr. Richard Warren, a state consultant, at a recent meeting in Vernon. He was commenting on the meeting among committee members. He then turned to the Rev. John White of St. Bernard

Church, a committee member, and apologized for his comment.

"I believe the kindergarten through eighth grade schools of the child the ability to grow emotionally before beginning high school," —Mark Waxenberg, former president of the East Hartford Education Association, told the school board last week in a hearing regarding the proposed transfer of 8th, 7th and 8th grade students from Center School to O'Brien School.

MANCHESTER — More than 150 persons gathered Sunday afternoon at the Center Congregational Church to reaffirm their commitment to human rights for all.

Barbara Weinberg, a town director and one of those who spoke, said she felt the event was so positive something similar to it should be held twice each year.

"As I looked at the crowd, I saw a good mix of our community, including people you don't normally see. I think if we bring people like this together more often, then when things happen, people will care more," Ms. Weinberg said.

Those who assembled included blacks and whites, Asian refugees, Catholics, Protestants and Jews, men and women, young and old. They came together to hear music by a local choir and the Metropolitan A.M.E. Zion Church of Hartford. They came to hear prominent local people representing all walks of life read the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, as adopted by the United Nations.

Nancy Carr, executive director of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches, which co-sponsored the event, said "The program was excellent. Of all the things we've done since the 1960's, this was the most significant."

Mrs. Carr said she was especially touched by the keynote address, offered by Manchester Community College President William Vincent. "This symbolic of who we are, together, Rabbi Leon Wind, who survived the concentration camps, was there, and Lucinda Harris, whose home was recently firebombed," Mrs. Carr said.

Major Stephen Penny, who read a proclamation stating the country's, community's, and individual's belief in human rights for all, also praised the event.

"It is obviously a positive event when people can meet and exchange views when they might not otherwise do that," Penny said today.

The event kicked off Human Rights Week in Manchester, which will include presentations on the subject to school children. It will also include a discussion of racism, sexism and poverty at M.C.C. and students in town will be collecting donations for the needy.

The goal of the week, and of the Sunday event, is for each individual to "reflect upon the ideals embodied within the UN document, the U.S. Bill of Rights, and to reaffirm our commitment to these in all areas of our work and lives."

MANCHESTER — Town directors have tentatively arranged to meet Wednesday afternoon with Town Manager Robert Weiss and Police Chief Robert Lannan to discuss the police department's budget and staffing problems.

Republican Director Peter D'Onofrio, who along with Deputy Mayor Stephen Cassano will represent the Board of Directors, today said his main concern is that not enough officers are patrolling the town's streets.

Lannan came under fire last week by town directors who expressed concern over transfers into the police department's overtime account.

Directors have asked for an explanation, saying they budgeted staff increases and reduced overtime allocations.

D'Onofrio also said he and Cassano will ask why the town was not kept abreast of hiring delays caused by the state's decision to curtail testing of candidates for town positions.

Both Weiss and Lannan have pointed to testing delays as one reason why new officers have not already been hired.

Police said the woman, entered the station to get gas at about 9:30 p.m. and followed the attendant into the station where she demanded money. In a teletype report, police said the woman carried a shiny object believed to be a knife.

Wild card berth now goal of Rams

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — The Los Angeles Rams lost the NFC West title Sunday for the first time in eight years, and they took it lying down. Or sitting on nice, comfortable chairs.

That's all they could do as the Atlanta Falcons routed the San Francisco 49ers 35-10 to clinch the crown and dethrone the Rams.

With the knowledge that all hope of competing in the playoffs rests on a wild-card berth, the Rams square off tonight against the Dallas Cowboys in another chapter of what has become a fierce and often bitter rivalry.

The nationally televised game is important to the Cowboys for a reason that most NFL fans would love to have. They want to finish ahead of Philadelphia in the NFC East to avoid the extra wild-card game. But either way, the Cowboys are in the playoffs, which is as unusual as bad food on an airplane.

But for Los Angeles, the results of this game and their regular-season finale against Atlanta next weekend will determine whether they suit up or lie back on the couch during the final weeks of December.

The playoff picture, which would take a half-dozen MIT mathematics professors to explain thoroughly, looks something like this from the Rams' viewpoint:

If the 9-5 Rams defeat either the 11-3 Cowboys or 12-3 Falcons, they'll be in the playoffs via the wild-card berth.

The Rams also will qualify if Green Bay defeats Detroit next weekend.

But if the Rams lose to Dallas and Atlanta, the Lions tie playoff berth and the Rams pack it in for the season based on Detroit's 41-20 victory over Los Angeles on the opening day of the season.

In the NFL's enormously complex tie-breaking procedure, head-to-head competition is the first factor in determining the wild-card entry.

Patriots' message: not dead yet

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — Their fate may be in the hands of others but the New England Patriots Sunday sent a resounding message to those who may have given up on the team — they're not dead yet.

The Patriots, behind a fire up defense and an efficient, smooth-running offense, trounced the AFC East-leading Buffalo Bills 24-2 to keep alive their chances for a playoff berth.

The Patriots' defense recorded eight sacks and held Buffalo to just 154 total yards. The offense purred under the direction of Matt Cavanaugh, who passed for two touchdowns in starting for only the third time this year.

"If they played that way every week, they'd be undefeated," said Bills' defensive lineman Fred Snodgrass. "It was their day and it was our worst game."

Despite the loss, Buffalo, 10-5, can clinch the AFC East title with a win next weekend at San Francisco. The victory gave New England, 9-4, three chances of reaching the playoffs, provided they beat New Orleans next Sunday. They can make it as a wild card if either San Diego or Cleveland lose, or as the AFC East champions if Buffalo is upset.

But after two demoralizing losses to San Francisco and Miami and a flogging from the Boston team, the Patriots wanted to prove they still belonged in the playoff hunt.

"When we're on our game, we can be the best," said Cavanaugh, who had TD passes of 5 yards to Russ Francis and 13 yards to Andy Johnson. "We can't afford to let one next week. When we execute like we did today, we can play with anybody."

The Patriots had lost four of their last five games to fall two games behind Buffalo. There was talk that coach Ron Erhardt would be fired if the team failed to make the playoffs.

"If they fired Ron Erhardt, they'd have to fire all of us," said Francis, who hauled in four passes for 49 yards, all in the first half. "Ron knows what he's doing. He's not the weakest here. If they're looking for a weakness, they're looking in the wrong direction if they're looking at him. The team is close to Ron Erhardt and close to each other."

The game began on a high note for New England when Ted Brown couldn't handle the opening kickoff and stepped out of bounds at the 2-yard line. The Patriots' defense held and New England scored on its first possession when rookie Vagas Ferguson burst up the middle from 9 yards out.

Ferguson finished the day with 81 yards, making him the best rookie rusher in team history. He has 786 yards so far in the season. He had 691, set in 1989 by Carl Garrett.

Six minutes into the game, Bills quarterback Joe Ferguson was tackled by Mike Hawkins on a busted play, sprained his left ankle and did not return. Backups Dan Manucci and David Humm were ineffective, but Ferguson said he'd be ready to play next week.

"Joe is our leader and losing him hurt us a lot," said Bills safety Bill Simpson, who had one of two Buffalo interceptions. "The loss was bad enough. But the injuries (another to Jeff Nixon) were disastrous."

"We're alive," said Erhardt, who was carried off the field by some of his players. "We played with emotion, intensity and executed well, contrary to what some people think who said we can't coach and that we're losers."

"It's a great feeling, the players and the coaches, everyone caring together. And now all we need is some help."

That's the message the Patriots want to send to their fans and the NFL. They are not dead yet.

"We know we were a better team than our record," said Galbreath, who has been reduced to second-string status after starting last season. "Dick Stanfel believes in us and he's been trying to get us to believe in ourselves. I'm glad he showed the confidence in me to keep me in at the end when it was important."

Stanfel, who replaced the fired Dick Nolan on Nov. 23, was overjoyed in the Saints' clubhouse, which had the festive look of a Super Bowl winner's dressing room.

"I saw a comment in the papers that some of the Jets said it would be an embarrassment to lose to the Saints," Stanfel said. "I told our guys it would be an embarrassment to lose to the Jets. We had a lot of adversity but our guys fought it all the way through and I'm proud of them."

"This is the biggest thing that has ever happened to me in football. I was a penalty just before today's 31-yard TD run. It's upsetting when you lose to the worst team in football and very demoralizing."

Galbreath was another Saints player relieved to get the victory.

Tax reform may hurt overseas charities

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A little noted provision of a congressional effort to reform the tax structure, passed hurriedly in the final moments of Congress two years ago, threatens to seriously reduce charitable and church relief work overseas.

The provision, if allowed to go into effect, could cost the Southern Baptist Convention, for example, $2 million which would normally be used for programs, and CARE estimates that one dollar in every seven it now uses for programs will have to be diverted to pay employees' salaries.

That could mean a sharply reduced ability by U.S. religious and voluntary organizations to care for earthquake victims in Somalia, feed famine-stricken people in Thailand and aid Cambodian refugees in Thailand.

At issue is a provision of the Foreign Earned Income Act of 1978 which sought to make more equitable the income tax burden of U.S. citizens working overseas, in part to avoid losing overseas jobs for Americans.

For many Americans, especially those working for profit-making corporations and living in Western Europe and Japan or earning relatively high salaries, the effect was to substantially reduce the amount of tax which was due.

But for charitable and church workers, the impact of the reform measure was just the opposite.

What the new law did was to eliminate the $20,000 income exclusion prior to 1978. Americans working abroad for non-profit or charitable organizations and who made less than $20,000 were excluded from paying U.S. taxes. Under the new law, the exclusion was replaced with a package of five special deductions based on cost-of-living and other considerations.

"If the new law is allowed to go into effect for tax years 1979 and beyond," said Sen. John H. Chafee, R-R.I., "it will mean devastating tax increases for Americans working for charities abroad."

"Furthermore," according to Chafee, "it will mean that most non-profit groups will have to take money directly out of their program budgets to pay their employees higher salaries."

Chafee, who has been leading the fight for new legislation to protect the charitable and church workers, cited the small Foster Parents Plan charity of Warwick, R.I., as an example.

If the reform provisions go into effect, he said, it will cost Foster Parents Plan an "out-of-pocket" expense increase of $100,000 — an amount that could otherwise be used to support more than 500 needy children overseas.

CARE workers overseas, who earn about $12,000 a year, will face a tax increase of $1,437, according to officials of the relief agency.

"From a humanitarian point of view, and in terms of continued good will for the United States, the impacts of these curtailments in charitable services could be devastating," said Wallace J. Campbell, president of CARE.

The Southern Baptist Convention's Foreign Mission Board, which runs one of the largest overseas mission operations of any church or agency with more than 3,000 modestly paid missionaries in 94 countries, already pays $1 million annually in taxes to foreign governments.

Adding to the concern of church and charitable organization officials is the decline of the U.S. dollar abroad, already severely pinching relief and development programs, and the continuing decline of U.S. foreign aid which makes the work of non-profit groups even more important.

"If legislation is not enacted, the ability of the overseas charities to continue to perform their historical mission will be seriously impaired," said Wallace.

"Essential charitable services will have to be eliminated and a unique opportunity for good will for America will be lost."

Since the church and charitable organizations first discovered the potential impact of the new law they have been pressing Congress for legislation to remedy the situation.

The Internal Revenue Service, meanwhile, expecting congressional action to restore the $20,000 exclusion, has granted two extensions of the filing deadline for charitable organizations for the 1979 tax year.

Congress, however, has yet to act and the current extension expires Dec. 15.

"At this late date," said Chafee, "it appears unlikely that we will have final passage of any substantive tax legislation."

He said he would ask the IRS for yet another extension — until June 15, 1981.

Such extensions, however, do not solve the problem, according to voluntary organization officials, and unless Congress acts early in the next session, their relief aid programs will be severely damaged.

School children adopt new heroes

By UPI Education Editor

College kids have new heroes these days — the college graduates who are making fat paychecks out in the business world.

That's according to a report from the Carnegie Council on Policy Studies in Higher Education, which adds that "fat" in this case means "enough to go first class."

The report, entitled "When Dreams and Heroes Die," condenses studies of students on campuses coast to coast who are working to attain college degrees which carry the highest price tag in history — over $40,000 for some schools.

Arthur Levine, the report's author, said many students view their own futures as bright but that the country's as poor, so that they see themselves "in the first class on the Titanic."

Levine said 91 percent of those polled say they are optimistic about themselves but only 41 percent are optimistic about the country.

"All the rest are either pessimistic or mixed," Levine said. "Freshman surveys confirm this, too."

With each succeeding year, students have grown slightly more pessimistic about the country until 1979. That year pessimism increased by a full fifth in contrast, nine out of every 10 students were quite positive about their own futures.

Levine said a typical interview with a college student goes like this:

Interviewer: Will the United States be a better or worse place to live in the next 10 years?

Student: The U.S. will definitely be a worse place to live.

Interviewer: Then you must be pessimistic about the future?

Student: No, I'm optimistic.

Interviewer: Why?

Student: Because I have a high grade point average and I'm going to get a good job, make a lot of money, and live in a nice house.

Levine said when students are asked what they worry about they put down everything under the sun — and that, too, if you include solar energy.

Among the worries cited: — Fears over the economy, pollution, energy, crime, morals and nuclear war.

— Apprehension over nuclear power, corporations, greed, illegal aliens, and the right wing.

— Concerns over Anita Bryant and her anti-homosexual campaign.

— Phyllis Schlafly and her anti-equal rights, divorce, authoritarianism and money.

— And Drugs, increased gun violence, reduced standards of living, the environment, and the justice system.

"There is a sense among today's undergraduates that they are passengers on a sinking ship, a Titanic if you will, called the United States or the world," Levine said.

"Perhaps this is part of the reason why suicide has become the second leading cause of death among students in the 1970s, exceeded only by accidents."

"Today's fatalism fuels a spirit of justified hedonism."

"There is a growing belief among college students that, if they are doomed to ride on the Titanic, they ought at least to make the trip as pleasant — make that lavish — as possible and go first class."

The report said young men in class means consumer goods aplenty during the student days.

Election seen as swinging education to the right

By United Press International

The landslide election of Ronald Reagan left the National Education Association disappointed and put the future of the brand new U.S. Department of Education in doubt.

But there may be joy in the private school sector. And among managers of public schools and in presidents' offices along college row — plus hope Reagan would make good on his campaign promise to whittle federal education regulations.

Among both sides there was agreement that the landslide was not caused by people taking stands on education issues first and only

Inflation and foreign policy were the prime considerations of voters, most education leaders believe.

The NEA, the 1.8 million-member public teachers union, nearly canonized President Carter a while back for setting up the nation's first Department of Education — an NEA goal for 25 years.

NEA members were among delegates at the Democratic national convention that nominated Jimmy Carter. Then the union put together election kits and urged members to work for Carter re-election.

Now leaders of the NEA and the other teachers union, the American Federation of Teachers, say they are worried about the survival of public education, the future of the Department of Education and many federal education programs reaching into the nation's 16,000 school districts.

They note that Reagan promised to push for tuition tax credits — a goal of the private education sector, including the National Catholic Education Association and the National Association of Independent Schools.

"If tuition tax credits become the law ... the U.S. government will, through a system of tax giveaways, pay for a substantial part of the tuition of children in private schools,"

Abby By Abigail van Buren DEAR ABBY: I read with interest the letter from CHILDLESS COUPLE, who were considering artificial insemination. This may help. For four years my wife and I tried without success to have a child. We were both tested. She was fine, but the doctor said that because my sperm count was so low, my chance for fathering a child were slim. That was when we considered artificial insemination. I saw a fertility specialist. He asked me what kind of shorts I wore. I told him I had worn jockey shorts for years. He suggested that I switch to boxer shorts - the loose-fitting kind, instead of the snugly fitting jockey type. When he explained why, I thought he was crazy, but I took his suggestion, and four months later my wife conceived. Our baby is due in March. I'm signing my real name, but please don't use it. Just sign me as... FUTURE FATHER DEAR ABBY: When I read your letter, I laughed and threw it into my wastebasket. But I quit laughing and quickly retrieved your letter after reading several more bearing the same incredible message. Read on for a short story that may help some for whom pregnancy is inconceivable. DEAR ABBY: There may be an easier solution to the low sperm-count problem than artificial insemination. First, the poor guy should try to increase his sperm count by having a more balanced diet. And secondly, he should discard his tight-fitting jockey shorts and wear old-fashioned, loose-fitting underwear. A doctor told me that in order for sperm to multiply properly, they need a slightly lower temperature than normal body temperature; that's why nature placed the testes outside the body. Jockey shorts tend to make the testes outside the body, while loose-fitting shorts allow the air to circulate, thereby reducing the temperature of the sperm below that of body temperature. My wife had prayed for a baby for 13 years, but only after I changed my style of underwear was she rewarded: FATHER OF 4...

DEAR BELIEVES: Your live-in friend should not be exempt from domestic chores because he works longer hours on an irregular basis. When he works he should pitch in and do what he can. In a partnership (and that's what living together) the chores should be shared. DEAR ABBY: I disagree with your opinion that female police officers are not a threat to the wives of male police officers. We were happily married until my husband was assigned to work with a female officer. He told me not to be jealous of her, that she was a real "GO". Well, to make a long story short, he divorced me and married her, and now they have a puppy. SMALL TOWN, TEXAS Do you have questions about sex, love, drugs and the pain of growing up? Alley Oop - Dave Graue DEAR ABBY: My fiance and I live together, and it's the point where I think we need a referee. I'm 28 and never been married, he's 30 and divorced. We fight constantly over the division of the household chores. I work from 9 to 5 Monday through Friday. He runs a catering business, involving long, irregular hours, sometimes seven days a week. I think the housework should be shared on a regular basis. He insists that housework is not his job - that since he works longer hours and more days he should have to do anything around the house. What do you think? BELIEVES IN SHARING DEAR BELIEVES: Your live-in friend should not be exempt from domestic chores because he works longer hours on an irregular basis. When he works he should pitch in and do what he can. In a partnership (and that's what living together) the chores should be shared. Bridge Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag Bridge through the years who tried to learn contract, and did write in it. Alan "Can you explain North's 13-point outcrop when he held the dealer's trump suit? It was an opening bid and no bidtable suit. A bidtable suit had to have at least king-jack at its head. Actually, Foster said that he had a bidtable suit. Modern bidding might get South to three trump on the sequence one diamond-three diamonds-three trumps. East would be on lead and probably open his fourth-best heart and declarer would make five odd." Oswald "I'm quite from Foster. Partner led the king of spades and I started an ace and a warning by playing the nine. He played the ace I played the king. He bid a third spade. South ruffed, drew trumps, ran his clubs to discard dummy's king and queen of hearts and made his fourth-best heart. He was marked with the deuce since it had not appeared so East should have had a heart." Alan "I guess declarer was not allowed to false card when he held the deuce. Incidentally a modern defender would play 6-9 when his partner just might find the heart shift." NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.
