Rain doesn't deter friends of Grasso

HARTFORD (UPI) — Nearly 20,000 mourners paid their last respects to Ella Tambross Grasso during a round-the-clock tribute before the funeral mass at noon today for Connecticut's former governor.

Friends, colleagues and many who had never met Mrs. Grasso walked quickly past her open coffin today in a first-floor alcove of the Capitol. The doors were to shut at 10 a.m. for final preparations before Mrs. Grasso's body was moved for the services.

The crowd lined up in the grey, winter chill Sunday to file past hundreds of flags and flowers to pay their last respects to the woman they called "Ella." Mrs. Grasso was to be buried with military honors in her home town of Windsor Locks today after a state funeral at the Cathedral of St. Joseph in Hartford.

Mrs. Grasso, 61, the first woman in the nation elected governor without succeeding her husband, died Thursday after a 10-month bout with cancer that forced an end to her 28-year political legacy.

State Senate Majority Leader Richard Schaefer, D-Exeter, a close friend of the former governor, said Mrs. Grasso's husband, Thomas, and children, Susane and Jim, were present when the casket was opened at a private service.

"The family decided she looked so beautiful the casket was going to be open to the public," he said.

Democratic State Party Chairman James J. Fitzgerald said, "I thought she looked absolutely beautiful."

A bouquet of Mrs. Grasso's favorite flowers — red roses, pink carnations and white baby's breath — were placed by her family in front of the casket. A wreath sent by President Reagan was to the side.

Her grey casket, draped with the blue silk flag of Connecticut, lay in state in the historic Capitol where Mrs. Grasso rose from a freshman lawmaker to a powerful and popular chief executive. The cancer forced her to resign on New Year's Eve.

Mrs. Grasso wore the azure blue dress made especially for her 1975 Inaugural Ball and held rosary beads and the Connecticut State Register and Manual in her hands.

Approximately 1,000 people per hour signed into the guest book during the day and evening Sunday before walking by the casket. The line that stretched down toward Bushnell Park did not diminish when the cold rain came harder in the late afternoon.

Fitzgerald said the tribute for Mrs. Grasso, at her best when taking charge during blizzards and tornadoes, "was something she well deserved."

"Even though it was inclement weather out here, she was there when it was inclement for them, and it won't stop them," he said.

Former Gov. Ella Grasso's son, James, sits at the head of the casket draped with a Connecticut state flag as mourners od past, Sunday. A bouquet of Mrs. Grasso's favorite flowers were placed by her family in front of the casket and she had rosary beads and the State Register and Manual in her hands. (UPI photo)

Herald changes its look

MANCHESTER — Today The Herald starts a different look. The new masthead at the top of this page signifies the approach of the 10th anniversary of the newspaper.

The Herald has been serving the communities of the greater Manchester area for almost a century.

The observance of the anniversary will come later this year.

The new masthead also drops the word "evening" from the name of the newspaper, due to The Herald's Saturday morning publication time.

In addition an expanded index at the bottom of the page helps readers find news of most interest at a glance.

The reorganization of the inside pages of The Herald is now complete. Over the past few weeks stories about Manchester and great towns have been grouped together to help readers find stories about their towns.

The result is a more readable, more complete newspaper serving all the area towns with hometown news plus all the news of Manchester.

The changes apparent in today's Herald have come as a result of an ongoing effort to keep in touch with readers, asking for suggestions and comments.

It is part of a continuing program at The Herald.

Wednesday evening from 6 to 8 p.m. readers are invited to call The Herald editors with comments on the new reorganization. Those comments will be used to guide Herald editors in future upgrading of the newspaper.

Red tape delays freedom

By United Press International

A last-minute hitch at Tehran's Mehrabad Airport prevented American free-lance writer Cynthia Dwyer from flying to freedom today, one day after Iran's Revolutionary Court ordered her expelled from the country as a U.S. spy, diplomatic officials said.

Mrs. Dwyer, the 49-year-old mother of three who came to be known as the "Red hostage," was escorted to the airport by a Swiss diplomat and was to be put aboard Iran Air Flight 735 to London via Vienna, Austria, and Frankfurt, West Germany.

But, nearly six hours after the plane left, Swiss officials and the U.S. State Department said a last-minute problem with Mrs. Dwyer's identity documents prevented her departure.

"When she wanted to leave Tehran, there were last-minute difficulties with travel documents and exit permits, etc., with the Iranian authorities," said Swiss Foreign Ministry spokesman Othmar Uhl.

"The Swiss Embassy is now trying to solve the problem and put her on the next plane with an appropriate destination."

For hours, Iran Air officials had maintained Mrs. Dwyer was aboard the plane en route to Vienna, Iran Air officials said.

officials in Austria said they spoke with the plane by radio as it was making its approach to Vienna and the pilot said Mrs. Dwyer was, indeed, on board.

But airport police who searched the plane denied Mrs. Dwyer was a passenger.

Uhl said Mrs. Dwyer was with Swiss Ambassador Erik Lang and Embassy Counselor Wilhelm Schmidt who accompanied her to last week's trial and who was to accompany her out of Iran.

Uhl earlier had said Mrs. Dwyer left Iran aboard the Iran Air flight. Two officials at Tehran's Mehrabad Airport and spokesmen for both the

A room was reserved at the Vienna airport for a news conference, if Mrs. Dwyer agreed to discuss her 281 days in Tehran's Evin Prison.

U.S. officials also said Mrs. Dwyer would be given any money she may need to continue on to her home in Amherst, N.Y., a suburb of Buffalo.

An Iranian revolutionary court Sunday found Mrs. Dwyer guilty of spying, but sentenced her to the nine months she already spent in jail and ordered her expelled from the country.

The move left only one American in custody in Tehran — Alghan-born Zia Nasrany, who also was arrested last May.

Cop union to fight again with appeals board

EAST HARTFORD — Representatives of the police union will be returning to the Town's Personnel Appeals Board with what they call a "stronger grievance" seeking overtime pay for three patrolmen in connection with the brutality complaint of David K. Lannan, the 22-year-old son of Manchester Police Chief Robert D. Lannan.

The officers are seeking overtime pay for appearing at a Jan. 30 hearing on their days off to answer

Clarence Drumm suspended O'Connor and Sherwood for 30 days without pay following the meeting of Jan. 30 where the officers gave "their side of the story" to the police chief.

Lefebvre will receive a written reprimand in his personnel file for allegedly not reporting the incident.

The complaint comes from the Dec. 4 arrest of Lannan at Main and Dexter streets for a traffic violation.

any person.

The overtime pay grievance follows a request for overtime pay from Sherwood rejected last week by the appeals board. Sherwood was asking for overtime pay for coming in on a day off at the end of December to answer the complaint.

Union officials say the latest grievance filed by all three officers involved in the incident is stronger than that decided on by the board last week.

Scientists use snow study to plan for future wars

JERICHO, Vt. (UPI) — In the cold mountain valley where Snowflake Bentley first photographed snow crystals 100 years ago, military scientists hope to find ways to defeat winter on battlefields of the future.

For a month, the 50 researchers of operation "Snow One" have camped on a National Guard firing range, watching the snow drift down.

In that time, Army meteorologists sketched the most precise pictures ever of falling snow.

One thing Bentley and the contemporary researchers agree on: Snow One will cost $1 billion before it shuts down in late February.

"A million dollars is nothing. The military spends more than that in one week buying these weapons systems. The important thing is to find out if they will work in adverse conditions like snow," Aitken said.

For snow, Jericho is usually the place to come.

It was here that Wilson "Snowflake" Bentley, a poor hill farmer, in 1880 produced the snowflake photographs that first revealed the beauty and endless variety of snow crystals.

Bentley labored with a primitive microscope and camera to produce his black-and-white photos.

Today, the Cold Regions Lab researchers use computers to produce brilliant red, blue and green snow pictures and laser beam holocameras to turn out three-dimensional pictures of the snow.

One thing Bentley and the contemporary researchers agree on: snow crystals may be tiny but they are extremely complex. They change in size, shape, density and water content as temperature and wind conditions change.

Right now, scientists do not know what kind of snow crystals are produced by a given set of wind conditions.

And until recently, the military didn't much care.

Update

Defense wants reversal

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (UPI) — Lawyers for Pfc. Robert R. Garwood asked a military judge today to reverse his conviction for betraying his country because there was insufficient evidence to support the jury's verdict.

Garwood, 34, of Adams, Ind., was found guilty by a panel of five Marine Corps officers Thursday of collaboration with the enemy in Vietnam and assaulting an American POW in a jungle prison camp. The five Marines, all Vietnam veterans, will now determine Garwood's sentence.

Garwood, the only Vietnam-era serviceman ever tried for his actions in a POW camp, could be sentenced to life in prison and ordered to forfeit $147,000 in back pay and benefits.

Kevin McKenzie replaced the Russian dancer in the company's final performance of "Giselle" Sunday night.

Rate members of the audience booed and demanded their money back, which was cheerfully refunded at the box office.

Barbara introduces Yoko

Yoko Ono's video of "Woman," the current hit recording from the John Lennon-Yoko Ono's "Double Fantasy" album on Geffen Records, debuts Thursday on ABC-TV's "20/20" news magazine program.

Barbara Walters will introduce the Yoko Ono-directed video, which has been withheld from public viewing since Lennon was assassinated in New York two months ago.

The good shepherd himself

Country singer T.G. Sheppard, who is enjoying the success of his big hit recording "Smile" and "Do You Wanna Go To Heaven," quit the singing business a couple of years back to become an executive with a record company in Nashville.

It was there in Tennessee he became convinced that one particular song would be a big country hit — but eight record companies disagreed and they turned down the song.

Well, T.G. says it stands for "The Good" is a determined man, so he went into the recording studio to cut the record himself.

And he showed Nashville: the song "Devil in a Bottle" soared to the No. 1 position on the charts.

Valentine's day message

Singer-songwriter Melissa Manchester — currently hot with her new single "Lovers After All" — a romantic duet with Peabo Bryson — says she doesn't see anything contradictory about the popularity of the old-fashioned love songs in these cynical 80s.

"Because it is such a cynical age, people find escapism. They're soothed by songs of love and romance," Melissa says. "But most importantly, love songs reaffirm and re-emphasize feelings of hope. And, mister, we need them more than ever."

Prime rate edges down

NEW YORK (UPI) — The prime rate edged downward another notch today as Morgan Guaranty Trust, the nation's fifth-largest bank, lowered its key lending rate to 19 percent from 19 1/2 percent.

The reduction put the corporate loan rate at its lowest level since Dec. 10.

Analysts said the slow, but gradual decline of the prime has resulted from a steep decline in credit demand and lower cost of funds to banks.

Curb appeals, Burger says

Maine depends on paper firms

RUMFORD, Maine (UPI) — It's a bitter Clarence Smith who reminisces about his 15 years at the huge Boise Cascade paper mill.

"They know they've got a grip on the people, so they always get their way," he said, sipping a coffee at Dick's Pizza across the murky Androscoggin River from the plant's billowing smokestacks.

Smith, 41, left his job at Boise in 1974, becoming disabled after a series of back operations. He complains about the size of his $84-a-month pension.

"You either work on their terms or you get out of town," he said angrily.

Smith has nowhere to go. He may return to the western Maine plant if his back condition improves.

The saga of Rumford is paralleled in more than a dozen Maine communities hosting large paper mills — where timber from the state's vast forestlands are turned into nearly 18,000 tons of pulp and paper a day.

Boise employs about 1,650 people to man the plant's conveyers, bleachers, hoppers and dryers — working round-the-clock in three shifts through deafening clamor.

"If Boise left this place would be a ghost town," said Smith's wife Mary, who works the counter at Dick's Pizzeria.

And people of Maine have lived for decades in a love-hate relationship with the powerful paper firms headquartered elsewhere — New York City, Philadelphia, Oregon — but which control their economic destinies.

The paper companies pay well — about 1 1/2 times the manufacturing average — in a state ranked near dead-last in per-capita income, employing about 20,000 people.

Other traditional Maine industries — shoes, potatoes and poultry — are dying.

The paper industry's stranglehold over the state's economy scares people in towns like Rumford — which boasts of itself as "birthplace of Edmund S. Muskie," and much else.

Independent lumbermen who supply much of the timber used for paper production complain about low prices paid for their logs.

And environmentalists have charged the paper mills treated Maine's rivers as "open sewers," the air as a haven for foul odors.

"Maine is poor," Ralph Nader said in 1973, when his public-interest group published a sweeping indictment of Maine's paper industry called "The Paper Plantation."

"Maine is corporate country — a land of seven giant pulp and paper companies imposing a one-crop economy with a one-crop politics which exploits the water, air and people of a beautiful state," Nader wrote in the introduction.

The big seven are Boise, Georgia-Pacific Corp., Great Northern Paper Co., International Paper Co., Scott Paper Co., St. Regis Paper Co. and Diamond International Corp.

About 20 paper firms own nearly 40 percent of Maine's land — 6.7 million acres out of 17 million acres.

And the forest industry accounts for about 42 percent of the total value of manufactured goods, 37 percent of all manufacturing wages.

The industry never issued a joint response to the Nader charges.

"Some companies thought there should be a detailed response, while others said they shouldn't dignify it with a response at all," said Henry Magnusson, director of the Paper Industry Information Office, a trade group.

Miami quiet after verdict

MIAMI (UPI) — A member of the jury that convicted three blacks of murdering three white motorists during last May's Liberty City riots says jurors feared their verdict "was going to burn up" the city, but police said only one small protest was held over the weekend.

No violence was reported at either demonstration Sunday.

Jeering parents at an angry meeting in the borough of Queens said they would continue their boycott of two elementary schools until a decision that would transfer 27 of their children to a black school is reversed.

In Alexandria, La., blacks marched in favor of a federal judge order mandating the integration of Rapides Parish schools through busing and some school closings.

The New York rally was called to denounce a decision closing the annex of Intermediate School 21 — a move aimed at achieving integration at the main building of the predominantly black junior high school nearby.

Houston school to battle new strain of meningitis

HOUSTON (UPI) — Health officials today ordered vaccinations for 800 students and staff members of an elementary school linked to eight cases — one fatal — of a contagious strain of meningitis.

The elementary school outbreak, along with 26 other confirmed cases — three fatal — of meningococcal meningitis in Houston this year, has alarmed and mystified medical authorities.

"The quickest and safest" action is to vaccinate, Dr. Robert MacLellan, deputy director of the Houston Health Department, said Sunday, adding that shots will be given to all students, faculty members and staff.

A sixth-grader at Dodson Elementary School died from the meningitis last week and four classmates were reported ill between Jan. 5 and Feb. 4.

Of the 26 confirmed cases, three are pre-school siblings of the four surviving infected students.

Epidemiologists from the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta said it was extremely rare that five cases be found in one area.

The vaccination program, scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. today, will involve about 785 students. Officials said the shots were safe and caused no serious side effects.

The action was agreed upon Saturday following a lengthy meeting between officials of the CDC, the Houston Health Department and Dr. Ralph Feigin, chief of Texas Children's Hospital and a specialist in infectious diseases.

In addition to the 26 confirmed cases of meningitis, of which three died, four other suspected cases in the area were under investigation.

In Texas in all of 1980 there were only 35 cases reported resulting in six deaths, said Jan Simons, a state health official.

The most recent confirmed case of meningitis was found in a patient already hospitalized, said a spokeswoman at Dr. Feigin's office. Early symptoms led officials to believe the patient was suffering from something else, but he was confirmed Saturday the illness was meningococcal meningitis.

Experts say meningococcal meningitis, which attacks the membranes covering the brain and spinal cord, is transmitted only by extended intimate contact. Health detectives were mystified as to how five small children could accomplish that.

Tax and budget cuts face close scrutiny

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Concentrating on his plan to avert an "economic calamity," President Reagan today moves into a crucial week reviewing his tax and budget-cutting options before publicly unveiling his austerity program.

The president scheduled a lunch with Treasury Secretary Donald Regan and budget director David Stockman, the two men in charge of the administration's economic policy.

The meeting precedes one with Rep. Robert McClory, R-Ill., and a conference with state legislators and county executives later in the day.

The local officials were to be given some inside information on what to expect when Reagan unveils the depth of his new economic program in a joint session of Congress Feb. 18.

In a televised address last week, the president spoke of the need for major economic surgery, contending the United States faced an "economic calamity" and was in the worst financial mess since the Great Depression.

The timing of Reagan's two speeches — the one Thursday and the one to Congress next week — was selected because the current congressional recess for Washington's Birthday falls in between.

The administration hoped members of Congress would return to Washington with positive soundings from their constituents, providing them with leeway to make the hard choices Reagan's proposals will force.

Before the week is out, Reagan also will have entertained local parties and governors of both parties. With funding cuts expected in so many social programs, the state leaders are anxious to get in their arguments before the ink dries.

With the president not yet in office three weeks, Lyn Nofziger, one of Reagan's top political consultants, told California Republicans in Sacramento Sunday the president

Reagan to dump regular summits

LONDON (UPI) — President Reagan will scrap the twice-yearly allied summit meetings of the Carter administration in favor of increased exchanges of intelligence with European allies, U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig said in an interview with the Sunday Times.

Haig also said the Reagan administration was keeping its options open on arms control with the Soviet Union and had not decided "whether to develop a whole new treaty or whether to put fixes into the existing treaty or whether to do it by amendments."

Haig said Soviet behavior in world trouble spots and what he called "technical flaws" in the SALT II treaty would affect President Reagan's decision on the arms control issue.

Haig also said the United States will develop closer ties with NATO and the United States on how to limit theater nuclear weapons.

In explaining the switch from summit meetings to intelligence sharing, Haig warned that such exchange can only be achieved if the U.S. in-depth network can do a better job of plugging press leaks.

Haig said the Reagan administration has not made up its mind on nuclear disarmament and the SALT II treaty.

"It has been my experience that achieving arms control is never the product of rhetoric or idealistic hopes," Haig said. "It is always the product of pragmatic reality."

One could make the case that it was the consensus about deploying cruise missiles in Europe at the NATO ministerial meeting in December 1979, which created the circumstances that led to the start of the discussions between the Soviet Union and the United States on how to limit theater nuclear weapons.

Cops hunt for child in Atlanta

ATLANTA (UPI) — Police hunted today for an 11-year-old boy, hoping to keep his name from being added to the city's list of 17 missing or slain black children.

While the search was on for Patrick Baltazar, last seen Friday night, officials learned another black youth who disappeared in January was never seen in Florida.

Investigators refused to say Sunday whether the 35-member police task force investigating the slayings of the two boys was taking appearances of two more who were reportedly last seen around midnight Friday near a downtown entertainment complex.

The other black youth, Lee Gooch, 15, who was last seen more than a month ago, was held in a Tallahassee, Fla., jail on traffic charges, but was released Saturday, Atlanta's WSB radio reported Sunday.

A police spokesman said last week Public Safety Commissioner Lee P. Brown was considering adding Gooch to the list of 15 dead and two missing children.

The teen-ager gave Florida authorities a false name, but his father identified the youth from a photograph. However, he was released Saturday and police still don't know where he is.

Volunteers again spent the weekend searching abandoned buildings, woods and vacant lots for clues that might solve the string of slayings and disappearances. But authorities said nothing was found this weekend.

On Saturday, Vice President George Bush said in Washington the FBI and other federal agencies would increase their involvement in the case.

Bush said the Reagan administration made the decision after reviewing a Justice Department report.

"I join with President Reagan in extending to the families of the children who have been savagely deprived of life our deepest condolences, and to the people of Atlanta our commitment to do everything within our power to bring an end to this nightmare," Bush said.

Carter defends deal with Iran

ATLANTA (UPI) — Former President Jimmy Carter is declining direct comment on the Reagan administration's economic plans, but he vigorously defended an agreement with Iran for the release of the American hostages.

Famed and relaxed, Carter was returning from a vacation in the Virgin Islands when reporters questioned him in Atlanta's new airport Sunday about President Reagan's charge the Iranian crisis was mishandled from the start.

"It was handled as best I could and the hostages came home safe and free and our nation's honor was protected," Carter said. "I think it was handled well."

Reagan said last week the United States should have taken an early stand of not bargaining for the hostages' freedom.

Carter also said he was pleased to hear that self-styled Iranologist Cynthia Dwyer, accused by the

POWs reported in Laos

SEATTLE (UPI) — A former Royal Lao Air Force pilot claims up to 50 American servicemen of the Vietnam War era are being held captive in Laos, it was reported.

In a copyrighted story Sunday, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer said the former pilot, Sayfa Phonsavan, who now directs the Lao Family Center in Seattle, has gained information from the hundreds of Laotian refugees who seek services from his agency.

"The truth is that there are today 40 or 50 Americans, most of them who were shot down over Laos during the (Vietnam) war, being held prisoner there now," said Sayfa.

"The people coming to the Lao Family Center tell me that the communists found many American pilots in the jungles and have kept them."

Sayfa predicted that the Americans being held captive in Laos won't be returned for several more years because, in addition to working as laborers, they are being forced to provide technical know-how.

"The governments there use the Americans to teach them how to fly the airplanes and helicopters abandoned in 1975," Sayfa said. "They are also being used as English instructors and for other work."

Until recently, official U.S. policy has been to deny such reports. But last week, the Post-Intelligencer said, State and Defense Department officials confirmed that they are carrying out an ongoing investigation into servicemen missing in action.

Gumshoe hits big jackpot

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — A private investigator, playing a slot machine in the Flamingo Hotel, hit an all-time world record jackpot of $340,000, smashing the mark set by another gambler at the hotel just 23 hours earlier and becoming the third casino to break the world jackpot record in two weeks.

But the hotel casino, which paid out a total of more than $1 million to the three "Slot Kings," is not acting like a sore loser.

It announced Baron Hilton, the corporate chairman of the hotel chain, will honor the three big-time winners at a special ceremony tonight and it will now up its super-jackpot sum by another $5,000 to $345,000. William St. Onge, 43, of Garden Grove, Calif., became the new "King of the Slots," $335,000 — surpassing a record set at the Flamingo last Jan. 25.

SAC scramble is biggest ever

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two Minuteman III missiles were ready for launch today as part of a Strategic Air Command drill that suddenly ordered more than 400 bombers and tankers into the air Sunday. The surprise exercise marked the largest airborne mobilization by SAC in its 35-year history.

The B-52 bombers, FB-111 fighter-bombers and KC-135 jet tankers took off within a 10-minute period from over 70 bases around the United States, a SAC spokesman said. As part of the exercise, SAC planned to launch two Minuteman III missiles today from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., said SAC spokesman Maj. Lew Lambert. The missiles were to be fired 90 minutes apart into the Western Pacific Test Range at Kwajalein.

The bomber crews were scrambled Sunday in response to a mock nuclear attack during the annual Global Shield exercises directed from SAC headquarters at Offutt Air Force Base near Omaha, Neb.

Col. Mike McRaney, SAC director of public affairs, said the annual drill began two weeks ago. It will continue through next week.

Aside from "a few aborts," McRaney said, "the vast majority" of the aircraft reached their "holding positions" without incident. In the event of a real nuclear attack, the president of his representative would order aircraft from their holding positions to their targets, he said.

To increase the chances of surviving the simulated attack, some 150 aircraft were dispersed to scattered locations before the exercises began. In the event of nuclear war, McRaney said there probably would be enough advance notice to take similar steps to ensure survival of the bomber and support fleets.

Lambert said in Sunday's "positive control launch," the SAC planes took off with encoded launch orders but without the encoded execution orders that must be provided to trigger an attack.

Polish Reds facing crisis

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — The Solidarity union challenged the government today with a paralyzing province-wide strike involving as many as 300,000 workers, and the beleaguered Communist Party began a crucial meeting on how to handle the mounting pressure.

A spokesman at Solidarity headquarters in Gdansk said factories all over the country showed support for a Rural Solidarity farmers union and warned that the court does not recognize it Tuesday.

NBC news also reported that the officials said Soviet leaders are expected to support another change in the party leadership in Poland. A State Department spokesman said the officials could neither confirm nor deny the report.

The official Polish news agency PAP said Politburo member Kazimierz Barczewski reported at the party meeting on the work of the Politburo since the last session in early December, instead of party leader Stanislaw Kania. speculation by Western diplomats that Kania may be replaced during the plenum, which is only two weeks before the Soviet Communist Party Congress that Polish leaders are to attend.

Several thousand students at the University of Poznan began a sit-in at university buildings today to support thousands of fellow students who have been occupying Lodz University for nearly three weeks.

PAP said today's strike covered "the entire province" of Jelenia Gora. The local Solidarity union said from 130,000 to 300,000 workers were on the job closing as many as 450 factories. Transport services scheduled a walkout later in the day.

However, following telephone conversations with government officials in Warsaw during the night the union decided to resume talks on their demands.

Today's strike in the southwest province of Jelenia Gora was called after talks on union demands collapsed Sunday. Other protesters were called to support a Rural Solidarity farmers union on the eve of Tuesday's supreme court decision on the groups' application for official recognition.

The talks were broken off and postponed without indicating when they would be resumed again. "It means we will go on strike as it was planned. It means confrontation."

Ron Clinton, a member of the guidance counseling staff at MCC will conduct the workshops which are available free of charge to MCC students and staff, as well as the community. The first workshop is entitled "Career Life-Planning," scheduled on Mondays and Wednesdays from 2 to 3 p.m. starting Monday, Feb. 23 and continuing for three weeks through March 11.

Grant to finance course

MANCHESTER — With a grant from the Connecticut Department of Vocational Education, Manchester Community College is cooperating with Cheney Technical School in offering an inspector trainee program for displaced homemakers. This is an opportunity to participate in a tuition-free technical skill training program. No experience is necessary. The only requirement is that students have a sincere interest in learning a technical skill and that they have some basic high school math.

Free clinic to be offered

MANCHESTER — Manchester residents 60-years-old or older are encouraged to attend the next free walk-in blood pressure clinic sponsored by Manchester Public Health Nursing Association. It will be held Feb. 17 at Mayfair Gardens from 12:30 to 2 p.m. Many people are unaware that their blood pressure is elevated and they often have no symptoms apparent. The clinic is an effort to increase public awareness and refer for appropriate medical treatment when indicated.

MACC chief not worried

MANCHESTER — Despite a budget deficit of nearly $4,000, MACC director Nancy Carr remained undismayed. "We're not worried about it," she said, adding that every year there had been a deficit and every year the money has come in. "There are several options open to us," she said. MACC's finance committee requested everyone's help in obtaining additional funding for the program and in finding ways to decrease expenses.

School board sets meeting

MANCHESTER — The Board of Education will meet at 8 p.m. at 45 North School St. On the agenda will be a review of the Stanford test results for grades two, four, six and eight. School Superintendent James P. Kennedy will also give a cost analysis of the petition presented to the board at its last meeting concerning a reduction of class size by 20 percent over the next three years. Also on the agenda are reports on free and reduced-price meals, a policy decision on the disposition of outdated books, and a policy decision on requirements for graduation from Manchester High School.

Club members petition against fee increase

By MARY KITZMANN Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — Members of the Manchester Country Club are once again petitioning against a requested 10 percent fee hike.

Approximately 50 members submitted a petition Sunday to James McCavanagh, Democratic director chairing a board subcommittee on whether to recommend the fee raise, opposing the increase. It is the second consecutive year opposition has surfaced to proposed increases.

Last year a petition was presented to the Board of Directors, but after initially denying the increase, the directors reversed the decision and allowed the country club to raise its dues.

The Board of Directors leases the land to the club for $25,000 a year, with nine years remaining on the lease. The board must approve any fee increase under the lease arrangement.

But according to McCavanagh, the board's jurisdiction does not extend to budgetary problems of the club, and the member's unhappiness with management.

"For some reasons many members are unhappy and say there are problems down there," McCavanagh said.

"But the board can't be in the middle of it. The complaints are not within our jurisdiction."

For the past two years the club has faced a deficit ending this year $22,000 in debt and $5,000 last year. Members say the club is mismanaged and that fee increases will price membership out of the range of most Manchester residents.

While McCavanagh noted the board's jurisdiction did not apply to internal problems and wished "the club would solve them" he has been reviewing the club's budget. He received an itemized budget after several requests, and with Barbara Weinberg, director, has had several meetings with the club's directors.

He said a recommendation on whether to grant the increase, raising dues from $306 for a single membership and $560 for a family, will be made at Tuesday's board meeting, where those opposed to the increase are also expected to speak.

McCavanagh noted the members' unhappiness with the budget problems, but stressed the Board of Directors could decide only on granting the 10 percent dues hike.

"A large cross-section of members are unhappy with it," McCavanagh said. "But I don't want the board to become involved. Rather the members should be talking to the club's directors."

The club is also trying to institute a minimum of a $30 and $30 spending limit at the bar and restaurant. Members are also upset about this, McCavanagh said.

Last year the Board of Directors approved the 10 percent hike with the stipulation a finance committee be formed to oversee spending. The committee, however, was not formed until the end of this fiscal year.

Race relations forum topic

MANCHESTER — Temple Beth Shalom and South United Methodist Church will sponsor a forum on race relations in Manchester on March 1. The forum is part of the 50th annual interfaith meeting between the two organizations.

The forum, which will include a presentation by the speakers and public participation, will address implications of race relations in Manchester. It will include discussions on housing, school and unemployment problems and will focus on the town's past experience, present involvement and future expectations.

Manchester's withdrawal from the federal Community Development Act grant program sponsored by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development has led to discussions about alleged racism in Manchester. This grant would have provided money for low-income housing. The withdrawal by the town, along with the firebombing of a black family's home last fall, has produced a great deal of discussion among the community.

This forum on March 1 is one effort to ease the growing tensions that are said to exist between black and white residents.

Another forum, sponsored by MACC and The Herald will take place sometime this spring.

Heart canvass begins

MANCHESTER — Volunteers with the American Heart Association will be canvassing Manchester in February, distributing life-saving educational information and collecting contributions. This year's Heart campaign goal for Manchester has been set at $10,000.

The money raised during our February campaign goes to educational and community service programs here in Manchester and to state and national research projects," said Dr. Charles Francis, president of the American Heart Association of Greater Hartford.

"With costs rising everywhere and the tremendous toll in lives and money that cardiovascular diseases take each year, it's absolutely essential that we meet that goal," he added.

According to 1979 statistics compiled by the local Heart Association, 23 Manchester residents died from cardiovascular diseases that year, 45% of all deaths.

A group of eight Eucharistic Ministers are working together to bring a volunteer service in the West Building twice a month. It was a joy to participate in their first service — to see their warm reception by the residents and their obvious satisfaction in providing this ministry. Father Padellini of the Roman Catholic Church, St. Bridget's Church accompanied the ministers on their first endeavor which added to the experience for the residents.

It was a rich and full morning. Most gratifying for me was to see the enthusiasm of the Eucharistic Ministers who are so willing to give of their time and love to bring Christ's message in the Eucharist to those who would otherwise not receive it.

Our satisfaction in providing this ministry to convalescent homes and seeing the pleasure and warmth and joy it brings, Monday, Feb. 23. It will be in two shifts so we can reach those who are free in the daytime (11-2 p.m.) and also those who are free in the evening (7-9 p.m.). The function of the Auxiliary will be explained and how we hope to support and encourage our volunteers to become one to come and share in this experience with us. If you have questions or would like more information about the type of volunteer work that we need, please call the president of the Auxiliary Paula Chase at 647-9432 or myself at 649-7338.

Battered women have option Shelters help them cope

NEW YORK (NEA) - Almost every night, there are 60 women and children in the YWCA shelter for battered women in Salt Lake City; 49 at the one in Tacoma, Washington.

That's capacity for each, but only one-fifth of those who "want in" there, and at the 67 other Y shelters around the country. "Only one out of five women gets service at our shelters because we don't have enough resources," says Ruth E. Curry, ordained minister in the United Church of Christ and specialist in battered women's programs on the YWCA's National Board.

According to a survey by the National Board conducted last May among the Y's 398 associations - 134 of which maintain battered women's programs, 125 of which responded by deadline - 46,186 women and children were sheltered by Y's between 1978 and 1980, and 62,000 counseled. Multiply five and "you get the actual number who asked for help," she says.

Those asking are mostly between 21 and 35, said the survey; mostly white, black, Hispanic or whatever other group composes the majority of that community. They're married or transitional housing or support from us in getting help from other agencies. But whatever she decides, we try to help her become independent as quickly as possible and make her own decisions.

So, like one woman Ms. Curry knows of who'd been beaten so badly so often that her 3-year-old developed a severe case of ulcers from watching her eventually seek help, perhaps first calling YWCA crisis line anonymously, or going straight in for counseling by one of the trained volunteers; or, in cities like Cincinnati where hospital emergency rooms maintain hot-line numbers to the shelters, going straight from a former to the latter.

Whether the shelter resembles a YWCA residence or a former boarding house, its location is either kept secret or the premises securely patrolled so that batterer cannot harass his wife. If there's a fee for room and board, Ms. Curry says, "it may be as little as $2.50 a day, but no woman is turned away if she does not have the fee."

She is, however, turned toward a new point of view. "We want her to see she has options," she says, "and to look at whether she wants to stay and the family."

Catherine Simpson of the Rutgers University English department will talk about "Ellen Moers as Literary Woman" April 1, beginning at 3 p.m. in Room P-108 of the Library.

She is a critic of contemporary literature, a novelist, and editor of the "Signs" Journal of Women in Culture and Society.

The series will conclude April 13 with a talk on "Changing World Contexts for U.S. Women" by Elaine S. Now on penicillamine and has been taking it for 16 weeks with no sign of relief. Her doctor claims it will take time. She goes in for blood and urine tests which are OK so far. The penicillamine, her doctor says, may want to use it again or try another medicine.

To avoid confusing other readers, I would like to point out that there are three main kinds of arthritis, the rheumatoid type, osteoarthritis and osteoarthritis that occurs more commonly in older people and is sometimes called degenerative arthritis. Osteoporosis, dissolving bones, is not really arthritis although many people call it arthritis.

The nature of rheumatoid arthritis, which is an inflammatory disease, and treatment is discussed in greater detail in "The Health Letter" number 4-11, Rheumatoid Arthritis, which I am sending you.

DEAR DR. LAMB - My wife has had rheumatoid arthritis for 20 years. She has been on gold shots, prednisone and Motrin. She is now on penicillamine and has been taking it for 16 weeks with no sign of relief. Her doctor claims it will take time. She goes in for blood and urine tests which are OK so far. DEAR DR. LAMB - Please comment on moles. Are they usually cancerous? I have this large mole under my buttocks where it gets irritated when I go to the bathroom. It puts me in mind of a mushroom. The outer edges can be lifted up. It's starting to feel uncomfortable when anything touches it. It is about the size of a dime, dark in color with dots on it.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am not convinced that you have a mole. The only way you will find out is by having a doctor see it. You may be describing a "venereal wart." These are commonly located around the pubic area. They are caused by a virus and are treated in a different manner.

Flouride can prevent decay

This is the fourth in a series of 13 articles on dental health published by The Herald, in cooperation with the Manchester Dental Society, in observation of National Children's Dental Health Month.

"Along with regular brushing and flossing, are there any other things I can do to keep my teeth healthy?" Yes, there are several other preventive measures you can undertake to assure good dental health for your entire life, including the use of flouride, a well-balanced diet, regular checkups by a dentist and the use of sealants.

Flouride, which occurs naturally in water, is an effective element in preventing tooth decay. Studies show that flouridation of community water supplies can reduce tooth decay by as much as 85 percent. Where flouridated water is not available, you can have flouride solutions applied by a dentist. The use of toothpastes, mouth rinses and gels containing flouride are good preventive measures, too.

A well-balanced diet that contains a minimum of sugar is another important factor to good dental health. Poor nutrition can foster susceptibility to gum disease and weaken bones which support the teeth.

It's wise to limit your sugar consumption because sugar combines with bacteria in the mouth to form acids that cause tooth decay. Regular dental checkups are basic to your dental health. A person who delays seeing a dentist until there is a serious problem may find treatment more extensive, more costly, and perhaps more painful, in the long run.

Another well-regarded preventive measure is the use of resin sealants on the chewing surfaces of the teeth. Dentists apply sealants to the decay-susceptible area of the tooth to create a barrier that resists decay-producing bacteria and acids. Sealants should not be regarded as a panacea, but rather as part of an overall prevention program that includes good oral hygiene habits, checkups by your dentist, flouridation and a sensible diet.

Ruth E. Curry

Department of Health and Human Services, the National Institute of Mental Health and elsewhere.

One of the things we learned," says Ms. Curry, "is that there's a need to provide the battered woman with someone from her own ethnic background to talk to, someone who can really listen and hear what she's saying. And, we need to have available to every program a person trained in therapeutic counseling or social work. Perhaps someone from the local mental health organization. Some of the women who come to the shelters really do need long-term counseling to develop their strengths. That has been available, but not to the extent we want it to."

But what the battered women's programs all need most of all, she says, is money. "We're hoping state funding will increase," she says. "And we will ask the United Way for an increase in our allotments which vary from community to community. We will also be asking for help from the business community and foundations."

And if there's no help? "We WILL get funding," she says, adamantly. "We will keep these programs going and we will increase them because we are not interested in applying a Band-Aid to the problem. We want to change the way the women and children are coping, and the way in which they can proceed whether they go back home or not."

"There is," she says, "no way we can let this program stop."

Conditions right for balancing budget

With the increased clout of Republicans in Congress, the climate may be ripe for a measure to limit or eliminate deficit federal spending.

Proposals for mandating a balanced budget have been discussed in many quarters in the past few years. It is understood some 30 states are moving toward constitutional conventions to write such an amendment.

Now comes a joint resolution — introduced in the House of Representatives — calling for a constitutional amendment that would require a two-thirds vote of each house to adopt a budget which calls for red ink spending.

This less stringent approach was offered by Rep. Robin L. Beard, R-Tenn. Word from his office indicates Sen. Richard G. Lugar, R-Ind. will submit a similar resolution in the Senate.

The two lawmakers introduced their respective measures in the 96th Congress, but they were buried in the judiciary committees controlled by the Democrats.

Beard, in a statement accompanying his resolution, said: "In the last 51 years, the federal budget has been in deficit 42 times. This half-century of fiscal irresponsibility by the federal government is directly responsible for the serious trouble our economy is now experiencing."

He might have noted further that the last time Congress balanced the budget was in 1969 — and the last time before that, 1960.

The congressman deplored the "chronic inflation" which has afflicted the economy, particularly in the past decade. To sharpen the focus on that specter, the inflation rate was 13.3 percent for 1979, 12.4 percent in 1980, and generally is being forecast at about 12.5 percent for this year.

The extent of actual workable than an amendment simply mandating a balanced budget or holding spending to a certain percentage of the gross national product," said the Tennessee congressman.

"My amendment allows for deficit spending whenever there is a clear consensus that it is needed, such as during wartime."

Simply, this plan would require that whenever Congress takes the economically-questionable step of spending in deficit, it does so as the result of a broad consensus, not a mere 50 percent plus one majority.

The record of the past half-century ought to make it clear that some type of measure is needed to insure budgetary restraint.

As Beard said: "A balanced budget must become a reality, not an ideal which is invoked only at election time."

Drug deals make the most of U.S.-Puerto Rico ties

WASHINGTON — In the simmering debate over statehood or independence for Puerto Rico, one point is never touched on. The interest in the island is not the island itself, but the way it is used as a conduit for drug traffic.

"Its half-brother status to the United States is perfect for drug smugglers," an intelligence source told my associate Dale Van Atta. The reasons are detailed in a Drug Enforcement Administration study completed last year, "The Role of Puerto Rico in Narcotics Trafficking."

The island serves as "a funnel" for the cocaine flow from Latin America to the U.S. mainland, the report states, partly because it is "strategically located on the north-south trade route."

Another factor: While Puerto Ricans have the freedom of movement and other advantages of their American citizenship, they also "share a common language, religion, ethnic and cultural background with people in numerous Latin American

Although the DEA report emphasizes Puerto Rico's position as a transit point for Latin American drugs, it also notes the following unfortunate conditions: Heroin abuse on the island "remains high"; cocaine, "primarily from Colombia, but also from Bolivia and Peru... is readily available... and is primarily abused by the more affluent residents"; and Colombian marijuana is "considered the second primary drug of choice."

Salveson, in a multimillion-dollar suit in federal court, claims he thought up the idea of bank-run credit cards like VISA and MasterCard, and took the concepts to the California banks in the mid-1960s.

Salveson says his idea was to make electronic cash transfers more efficient, increase credit card competition and lower credit costs. But the banks, he said, have pirated his system and have turned it upside down — restricting competition and overcharging cardholders $5 million a year.

The use of Puerto Rico by dangerous drug smugglers, however, remains a major problem.

Return of the gas line?

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Continuation of the Iran-Iraq war into spring will most likely bring about a new round of gasoline allocations by major distributors — and a new round of gas lines for U.S. motorists. That is the warning contained in a confidential new report on the world's oil supply by experts at the Energy Department.

Crude-oil exports from Iran and Iraq since the outbreak of hostilities last fall have averaged no more than one-tenth of their previous 4 million barrels a day. This has substantially reduced the world's oil supply.

When it became apparent that oil production and oil-export facilities would be major targets of both warring parties, analysts predicted that major shortages and skyrocketing prices would result if the war stretched into 1981.

But this has not yet happened for a combination of reasons. First, other countries in the region have increased their oil exports by about 1.5 million barrels a day. In addition, the war began at a time when world oil stocks were at a record high and demand was at its lowest level in several years because of conservation and the weakened economies of many oil-importing nations.

The large oil supply and cooperation among members countries of the International Energy Agency have kept the pressure off the spot market. But aggressive purchases by France since November have forced up world oil prices.

Now the experts at the Energy Department say that several indicators point toward worldwide oil

Jack Anderson

These commonalities make Puerto Rico an ideal intermediate point between drug suppliers in source countries and consumers in the U.S."

The island has become a crossroads for cocaine shipments en route to the mainland and heroin deliveries coming back to the consumer market in Puerto Rico.

"Strong family ties... facilitate the southward movement of heroin from the major distribution cities of Chicago and New York," the DEA study says. Unrestricted immigration from Puerto Rico to the mainland has given the 3.3 million islanders an estimated 2 million relatives in the continental United States, particularly New York City. These family relationships account for regular, frequent and mostly legitimate travel between the mainland and Puerto Rico. The traffic is too heavy for effective police control — a situation made to order for dope smugglers.

The most convenient smuggling route by air is through San Juan International Airport, but three other airports can also be used, as well as "numerous smaller airports which cater to private aircraft, and unattended airstrips and flat areas of terrain which can accommodate light aircraft," the report states.

By sea, dope smugglers have the alluring prospect of "over 700 miles of shoreline which are available to small draft vessels," plus "numerous yacht basins, marinas, fishing villages and (some) deep water ports which service maritime traffic."

Wagman File

shortage by late spring unless Iran and Iraq resume major exporting.

Their report notes that the oil surplus is only half of what it was last fall; it will disappear by April if the decline continues at its current rate. This compounded by an unusually severe winter that is depleting home heating oil at a faster rate than had been expected; as a result, refineries will have to continue producing heating oil for a longer period before switching over to gasoline.

If a major worldwide shortage occurs in the spring, oil companies would be faced with the choice of acquiring additional oil at premium prices on the spot market or parceling out whatever supplies they have left to their customers.

The experts fear that sharp buying pressure on the spot market would cause oil prices to soar to levels unacceptable to most Western nations. Thus, governments would encourage oil companies to make only limited spot purchases.

That would inevitably require the allocation of remaining supplies. Few U.S. drivers need to be reminded of the last time that happened — of odd and even days, red, yellow and green flags, hours of waiting in line.

Thoughts

"Death and life are in the power of the tongue" Proverbs 18:21

The profanity of this Biblical statement so often escapes us. A kid word spoken at the opportune moment can be a lifesaver. A harsh word can be a crucifier than a weapon. An interesting Rabbis legend illustrates the fact that our power of speech can be either used for good or for bad.

Rabbi Shimon ben Gamliel said to his servant Tabhai: "Go to the market and buy me good food." He went out and brought back a tongue. He told him: "Go out and bring me bad food from the market." He went out and brought back a tongue. Whereupon he asked him: "Why when I said 'good food' did you bring me a tongue and when I said 'bad food' did you also bring me a tongue?" He replied: "It is the source of good

Celebration of New Years gets students crowing

Annual Vernon fund drive to boost YMCA offers

VERNON — March 2 has been targeted as the date for the kickoff of the annual Indian Valley YMCA fund drive.

The Indian Valley chapter serves the towns of Vernon, Tolland, South Windsor, East Windsor, Ellington and Manchester and has been in operation since 1970. Tom Reidy is executive director.

Reidy said the program volume is increasing tremendously adding, "Because of inflation and increasing demands put on the Y by the community, we must raise $10,000 during the campaign."

Reidy said a YMCA youth membership costs only $10 a year, but it costs the Y more than twice that to keep a child enrolled in a program for the year.

"Rather than increase our membership fees and be forced to exclude people from participating, the Y Board of Managers decided to ask the community to help our Y to continue expanding its services it must raise additional funds."

The campaign is organized into two sections made up of volunteers from community, Perry said.

He said the Latch Key program to provide day care for students in Grade 1-6, before and after school, Day Camp, Youth and Government and Hi-Y programs are now starting up and Perry said if the Y is to continue expanding its services it must raise additional funds.

This can be a real challenge for an adult but the children perked. Just a couple had to resort to the forks they were given in case of an emergency.

The luncheon consisted of rice, Chinese noodles, stir-fried vegetables and, of course, fortune cookies for dessert.

One of the highlights of the afternoon was a trip to the school's gym where the children participated in a Chinese ribbon dance. They had practiced the dance in their room but found it to be much more fun with bigger ribbons and plenty of space to twirl in the gym.

After the dancing and the eating, the children settled down to hear some Chinese stories read to them by Mrs. Dennis while they made Chinese lanterns.

It was a fun and interesting way to have the children learn how someone in another country celebrates their New Year.

Council votes probe Monday

COVENTRY — The town council endorsed a motion that will initiate action on a police department study.

The council's interest in the study, which will cost up to $8,000, is due to what council members have referred to as a recurring problem in the police force.

Tom Crockett, a representative of the National League of Cities, said that the study will analyze the police department from all standpoints and then submit recommendations which they hope may alleviate some of the problem.

He drew a sharp distinction between the nature of the study and that of an investigation, adding that what he had heard reflects that the town does "have some problems that indeed need to be looked into."

He could not ascertain where the study will be conducted, but he said that it would be objective and that the study requires that

Officials discuss options in Coventry cop case

COVENTRY — The Town Council took action on the Sousa issue Thursday night but said a decision would be reached early next week.

The council discussed the situation in executive session with town attorney Abbot Schwelb pertaining to the council's options and power in the issue since the court decision came out last Monday.

Sousa was fired Dec. 18 by Town Manager Frank Connolly according to town personnel policy. Sousa subsequently filed suit against the town for reinstatement of position and back pay.

The court decided that Connolly fired Sousa illegally, since state statute supersedes town personnel policy. According to the statute, a police chief cannot be dismissed without due cause and a public hearing.

What the council must decide upon is whether to grant Sousa a public hearing.

Council members have been confused as to their role in the issue, not knowing if the power to grant a hearing is within their jurisdiction, and if it is, whether the decision to reinstate Sousa is theirs.

In a statement released Thursday night after the executive session, council Chairman Roberta Koontz said "the council has taken no action this evening and a decision will be made early next week concerning the police chief matter."

The meeting with Schwelb was the council's first since the court decision. The council members had no statements other than the one released jointly, but before the meeting the members has said they expected Schwelb to inform them of their options and to provide them with a legal interpretation of the court decision.

Their part, they said, is of particular interest alluding to all the members' feelings that by meeting with the town attorney she hoped to "determine the legality" of the issue, adding that she would be analyzing the "court decision and what the town attorney has to say."

Power experts to speak

HARTFORD — Fifth-graders in East Hartford and Manchester Schools have been learning about electrical safety from experts in the field — working linemen from the Hartford Electric Light Company.

The linemen demonstrate safety equipment they use and show slides to emphasize the precautions they take when working on or near electric lines.

During the presentation, which takes one class period, the children are given safety rules and shown why they are important. They are told: keep away from fallen wires and report their location at once; don't climb towers, poles, trees or fences around electric equipment; don't shoot at insulators; don't throw rocks at streetlights; don't fly kites with metallic string or near power lines; obey all warning signs.

A question and answer period follows the presentation.

The safety program is made available to all grammar schools in the area served by the operating companies of Northeast Utilities in Connecticut and Western Massachusetts.

HELCO personnel carrying out the program in the area are: Lawrence Butts, Arthur Healey, Peter Therout, Paul West, Douglas Wright, Robert Winoak, Frank Zuraw.

The programs have been under way since Jan. 20. Remaining on the schedule are Bowers and Washington schools in Manchester on Feb. 11 and Slye School in East Hartford on Feb. 27.

Whalers elated with one point

All tangled up on the ice after collision early in Philadelphia. Teams battled 6-6 tie. (UPI photo)

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — For the Hartford Whalers, adding a point to their NHL standings is a heartening experience.

"We had been struggling and this point we picked up tonight should give us a big lift since we had not been playing that well," said Hartford goalie John Garrett (32-17-0) after setting for a 6-6 tie Sunday night with the Philadelphia Flyers.

"To do what we did against the Flyers tonight really built up our confidence," he said.

Paul Holmgren's goal at 15:04 of the third period created the final deadlock in an NHL game that saw a player from each team score a hat trick.

"We have to do better for checking and we have to realize we've got to play 60 minutes of intense hockey," said Holmgren, who plays in the All-Star game Tuesday in Los Angeles with four teammates. "We are capable of winning the Stanley Cup again."

Hartford's Warren Miller and the Flyers' Reggie Leach each scored three goals before Holmgren forced the tie, Rick MacLeish made a pass from behind the Hartford net to Miller's 38th goal at 3:19 and Holmgren, who batted the puck past goalie Garrett.

"It was my first NHL hat trick," said Miller, who played with Paul Holmgren and Tom Gorenc at the University of Minnesota.

Leach's hat trick was his first of the season and the ninth of his career.

After a scoreless first period, Philadelphia took the lead on Bill Barber's 38th goal at 5:53. But Hartford countered to take the lead on Miller's 17th goal at 7:50. Dave Daboll's 35-footer at 9:50 and Miller's 18th on a power play at 13:03.

The Flyers tied it on a power play at 16:09 with Barber's 37th goal, but Hartford regained the lead for Hartford with his second goal — a 55-footer at 17:05.

Leach completed his hat trick with goals at 1:10 and 3:15 of the third period to give Philadelphia the lead again. Jeff Brubaker sent in a rebound past goalie Phil Myre to bring Hartford even at 5-5 at the 9:39 mark. Miller completed his hat trick at 11:38 scoring on a breakaway, but Hartford's lead vanished with Holmgren's tying goal.

"There were a lot of long shots scored in this game tonight," said Hartford coach Don Blackburn. "Both sides were playing with not much intensity during the early part of the game. Then both teams opened up and we came through with a gutsy effort and we might have won the game."

"We had been struggling," Blackburn said. "We had a tough home stand and it got to the players drained going to the Hartford rink because the fans were getting on them."

"We had a good effort tonight," said Flyers' coach Pat Quinn. "We made some blunders. We worked a heck of a lot harder than we had been lately. We didn't make a lot of mistakes tonight, but the ones we did make were costly."

The Flyers remain second in the Patrick division and the Whalers fourth in the Norris division.

Blues must settle for second place

NEW YORK (UPI) — The St. Louis Blues, in their first grab at the stars, fell a little short. So for the time being they must settle for second place in the NHL.

"We should've won because we were in the better position to win," said St. Louis goalie Mike Liut, who along with his mates squandered a two-goal lead in the third period Sunday night in a 3-2 tie with the Buffalo Sabres.

"I got a good look at the net and just tried to put it on the net," said Liut. "I think this is the best game and the best team effort since I've been here," said Liut. "We checked them into the ice."

In other games, Chicago hammered Winnipeg 9-1, Minnesota beat the New York Rangers 3-3, Philadelphia knocked Hartford 6-8, Quebec nipped Boston 4-3, Toronto tied Colorado 4-4, Detroit edged Vancouver 3-2 and Calgary swamped Edmonton 10-4.

Black Hawks 9, Jets 1.

At Chicago, Darryl Sutter and Ted Bailey scored two goals each and Tom Lisjak had a five-point night to lead Black Hawks to their third straight victory and 10th straight at home. Chicago now stands 23-24-7, tied with Boston for 10th in the overall standings. Dave Christian scored the Winnipeg goal.

North Stars 3, Rangers 3.

At New York, All-Star Eddie Johnston keyed a three-goal, second-period outburst with a goal and an assist to help the Rangers edge Minnesota's wireless streak to seven games. Kent-Eric Andersson scored a short-handed goal and set up Craig Hartsburg for the tying score for the Stars.

Flyers 6, Whalers 6.

At Philadelphia, Paul Holmgren's goal at 15:04 of the third period lifted the Flyers. Hartford's Warren Miller and Philadelphia's Reggie Leach each scored three goals.

Nordiques 4, Bruins 3.

At Boston, Robbie Florek scored with 5:12 remaining to help Quebec extend its winning streak to five games. Jacques Richard scored the third goal of the season and Real Cloutier his third and fourth. Rick Middleton notched his 29th for Boston.

Maple Leafs 6, Rockies 6.

At Denver, Bill Derlago scored with 3:50 left in the game to rally Toronto, which is winless in seven games but which remained one game ahead of Colorado in the battle for a playoff spot. Merlin Malinowski sparked the Rockies with two goals and two assists.

Royals 3, Canucks 2.

At Detroit, Reed Larson scored two goals in the first six minutes before being ejected from the game for attempting to kick Vancouver's Tiger Williams.

Flames 10, Oilers 4.

At Edmonton, Ken Houston scored three goals and Greg Chouinard and Willie Plett added two goals apiece. The Oilers' Wayne Gretzky upped his league-leading point total to 103 with a goal and two assists.

East Hartford pins Manchester matmen

Manchester High wrestling team captured six of the 12 weight classes but dropped a slender 25-31 decision to East Hartford High Saturday afternoon in East Hartford.

The setback drops the Silk Towners to 9-8 in the CCIL and 11-13 overall. Manchester closes its regular season Wednesday night against Penney High in East Hartford at 6 o'clock.

Sophomore Curt Howard upped his personal mark to 12-3 with a first period pin in the 100-pound class for Manchester. Seniors Bernie Zimmerman (155) and Dan Kibbie (119) each picked up wins, the former on a decision and Kibbie by pin. Junior Mike Griffin took a major decision and

Tunxis outscores, outmuscles MCC

Taking a physical, bruising affair, Tunxis Community College stopped Manchester Community College, 93-73, in CCAA basketball action Saturday night at East Catholic High.

Tunxis had a 32-29 lead with five minutes left in the first half as MCC fought back with a fast break offense as it gained some semblance of control of the boards. But Tunxis moved to a 63-41 lead at the half as the foul-plagued Cougars put the visitors on the foul stripe, from where they converted.

MCC made a second run in the second half, closing to 58-58 with eight minutes to go. But the Cougars saw their hopes dashed as three players, Doug Leonard, Jim Lindberg and Rob Roche, fouled out. Tunxis then took advantage of the MCC reserves.

The victory pushes Tunxis to 16-7 for the season while the loss drops the Cougars to 5-13.

MCC resumes action tonight at South Central Community College in an 8 o'clock start.

John Pruitt had a team-high 30 points to pace Tunxis with Bill Porter adding 22 and 6-foot-7 Bill Dorchte 17 markers. Tommy Brown had a game-high 31 points for MCC with Lindberg the only other Cougar in twin digits with 11. The 6-foot-3 Lindberg led all rebounders with 15 caroms.

There were 44 fouls whistled, 26 on MCC.

Tunxis (93) — Moore 1-2-4, Payne 2-4-12, Dorchte 4-17, Donaldson 4-9, Pruitt 12-6-30, Porter 10-2-22. Totals 37-19-83.

East girls' hopes for tourney ends

Going down with guns blazing, East Catholic girls' basketball team saw its hopes of qualifying for the state tournament dashed in the closing six seconds as homestanding South Catholic rallied for a 58-49 verdict in HCC play Saturday night in Hartford.

The setback drops the Eaglettes to 7-9 overall for the season and out of consideration for post-season play with only one game left on the regular slate.

East hosts HCC for Mercy High Tuesday night in a make-up clash at 8 o'clock to wind up its regular season.

The Eaglettes will be involved in the HCC playoffs, which begin Thursday night at the Eagles' Nest.

East had a 49-48 lead with very little time left on the clock, but South's Julie Hogan earned 3-for-4 from the charity stripe to close the gap. The only miss careened out towards the foul line where South's Karen Byrne grabbed the rebound and tossed. Hogan the game-winning jumper, which caught nothing but net.

The Eaglettes had a last-second shot but it kicked off the rim and fell to the floor.

The win moves South to 8-2 in the regular slate.

South Catholic (50) — Byrne 8-3-4, Hogan 4 5-8 13, Horan 2 1-2 5, Cassano 3 1-7 7, Bell 0-0-6, Carucci 0 0-0 0. Totals 20 10-14 50.

College basketball roundup

NEW YORK (UPI) — Notre Dame and UCLA are two of the finest teams in the nation, and yet neither could hit a field goal over the last seven minutes Sunday. That left it up to the foul shooters.

Despite the howling and waving of the crowd of 11,345 at South Bend, Ind., UCLA's concentration proved better than Notre Dame's, and the 14th-ranked Bruins nipped the 10th-ranked Fighting Irish 51-50, Michael Holton and Rod Foster hit the key free throws in the final 15 seconds.

"I'm a helluva foul shooting coach," said UCLA Coach Larry Brown. "We've been shooting into flags for the last month. We made the crucial free throws today that we haven't been making this year."

Kelly Tripucka, who led all scorers with 18 points, made one of two free throws to give the Irish a 48-48 lead with 2:18 left. Darren Day, who scored 12, made both of his with 1:56 left to tie the game for UCLA, but it wasn't easy.

"Definitely, Notre Dame has one of the better coaches in the nation. There is no doubt about that," Day said. "You just have to concentrate and put them through."

That's the way it stayed until Holton, 84 percent from the foul line, made one of two free throws with 15 seconds left to put the Bruins ahead 49-48. Notre Dame's Tracy Jackson missed a 20-footer with eight seconds left and Foster was fouled. Foster, 81 percent at the line, hit two with five seconds left to seal the triumph.

The loss was Notre Dame's fourth in 20 games this season and ended a 13-game home winning streak. The game was close from the start, though UCLA — behind the shooting of Mike Sanders, who scored 12 of his 16 points in the first half — opened a 26-18 lead with 8:17 left in the half.

In other action Sunday, 17th-ranked South Alabama routed Jacksonville 86-65 and Clemson pounded South Carolina 115-81.

Ed Rains scored a game-high 21 points and Rory White added 18 to spark the Jaguars to a Sun Belt Conference victory. South Alabama, 19-3 and 7-2 in the conference, also led off 15 points from Kim May.

The Jaguars led 35-23 at the half and stretched the lead to 72-36 with 7:38 left, as game Jacksonville, 6-15 and 3-6, was led by Sing Garam's 14 points.

In Saturday games involving Top 10 teams, No. 1 Oregon State topped Stanford 82-67, No. 3 DePaul downed Alabama-Birmingham 77-66. No. 4 LSU defeated Mississippi State 94-89. No. 5 Arizona State drubbed Colorado 94-62. No. 6 Wake Forest clobbered Georgia Tech 86-56, and No. 10 North Carolina rolled over Furman 79-64.

At Palo Alto, Calif., Mark Radford scored 20 points, including a game-high 12 in the second half, to give undefeated Oregon State a Pac-10 triumph. The Beavers rose to 20-0 for the season as the Bruins, downed Boston University 84-62.

At Stanford, Mel Daniel led Furman with 32 points.

Early BC lead stuns UConnns

No one can call UConn quitters. There was no quit in the Huskies Saturday evening as they feverishly worked to overcome a 21-point half-time deficit. They fought within two minutes to 15-10 to go but couldn't make it all the way back as Boston College annexed a 76-71 Big East Conference decision before a loud, overflow crowd at the Field House in Storrs.

The crowd's reaction and his players' second-half effort were thrilling to UConn Coach Dom Perino.

"Our kids just hung in there. And the display of the fans shouldn't be forgotten. Maybe they were the ones who got us to (within) two points," Perino stated. "We got it down and what makes it so great is the way we came back against a team which is so methodical."

"We had everything going in the second half but couldn't climb the hill. But the way the kids played, I'll take the loss."

The loss ended Connecticut's three-year, 23-game regular season win streak at the Field House. Boston College, in overtime, was the last club to beat the Huskies in Storrs back on Feb. 23, 1978.

The setback also marks UConn's first at home in conference play. It was 7-0 previously.

The victory boosts the Eagles into a first place tie in the Big East with St. John's, each 6-3. UConn shares the next rung with Georgetown, each a half game behind at 5-3. BC, which is in league competition to annex the championship. They scored 61 goals and allowed only 4 in the nine outings.

NEW YORK (UPI) — A loss to the Dallas Mavericks in part for a little renewed vigor on the good of many humiliated opponents, but who worse imagine it could prompt the New York Knicks to kick team ball?

"Before the Jan. 10 loss to Dallas) we had a two-day, one-on-one situation when we counted on the own talent to score," Knicks' forward Patrick Russell said Sunday. "We had 24 points to lead five players totalling 17 or more points in a 116-102 victory over New Jersey."

"Sometimes that will win ballgames, but most of the time that isn't enough."

The triumph was the fifth straight for the Knicks, who have been criticized for their lack of team play, and put them 13 games above 10th in the first time this season. It was also their eighth win in 11 games since the shocker in Dallas.

"I'm 102 percent sure," said Julius Erving slammed home a dunk with 25 seconds remaining to thwart a Los Angeles rally and joined teammates Maurice Cheeks and Darryl Dawkins to help the Spurs over Dallas. The Spurs overcame an 18-point first-quarter deficit with a 30-11 streak in the second period to tie the score, 54-54, at the half and Dallas hit only 9 of its first 30 shots after intermission.

Former governor takes on new political role

NAUGATUCK (UPI) — A man named Wes Cady rummaged around his attic the other day and discovered an old scrapbook. He sent it along to Jerry Labriola saying, "It might be helpful to you when you decide to run for governor again."

Dr. Gerald Labriola, M.D., conceded it indeed might be nice to win another landslide — he beat Robert McCarthy of Rockville by 122 votes in 1949 — but for the moment, Labriola, a Republican, is serving as a new state senator.

Still and all, as Cady, an official of the YMCA, seemed to be saying in the letter that accompanied the scrapbook, lightning has been known to strike twice.

Jerry Labriola was a handsome 17-year-old Naugatuck High School senior when he won the election in a program sponsored by the YMCA. He presided over the state for two days — Gov. Chester Bowles gave him a few pointers — and Labriola recalls being disappointed when a "clean air" bill was defeated.

He put people above politics in his two-day stewardship.

"In considering a piece of legislation," Labriola said in an address to the joint session of the student Legislature, "first ask yourself 'How much good will this do for the majority of the people? ... Never

As he looks through a scrapbook sent to him, along with the scrapbook was a note saying, "It might be helpful to you when you decide to run for governor again." (UPI photo)

He has been a popular figure in the community and active in it through the years, a man who's at ease talking to anybody. He found there were two things people talked about on the campaign trail — the economy, and the hostages then being held in Iran. "They didn't like the idea of the United States being pushed around and neither did I," he said.

He wants to reduce the number of state employees, and offers cost control suggestions for their telephone usage and for out-of-state travel. He would like photo identification cards issued to voters as a check against fraud, and would ban pay raises for elected and appointed officials during their terms of office.

He is going to be an active legislator in more ways than one. In an organizational session before the Legislature opened, somebody wanted to know if there was a doctor in the house. There was one in the Senate, Jerry Labriola.

He thought at first he might have a heart attack victim on his hands as he responded to the call, but wound up removing a splinter from an eye. There are people in his hometown who say he would make a fine governor. And there was this sentence in his remarks to the student Legislature back in 1949. "Perhaps," Jerry Labriola said, "we may have in our midst today the future governor of this state."

Cromwell church claims unique ministerial intern

CROMWELL (UPI) — From Colorado to Connecticut — a journey prompted by a calling to the ministry, and the Rev. Cathy Bouts is delighted.

"I love Cromwell," said the 27-year-old Miss Bouts, with a smile that seemed to express her happiness with life. "I wouldn't want to be anywhere else this year."

Cathy Bouts is pastoral intern at the Covenant Congregational Church in Cromwell, and one of a small but growing number of women in her denomination who are entering the ministry.

The Covenant Church nationwide has four ordained women now, Miss Bouts said, two with their own churches and two looking for positions. "The structure to allow ordination of women has only been in place for four or five years," she said.

"Previously, women could go to seminaries and work in churches but they were licensed without being ordained. Ordination is more permanent."

Miss Bouts is finding a wide range of experiences during this year of internship under the tutelage of the Rev. Dr. Robert McNaughton, pastor at Covenant Congregational Church. In addition to her direct church duties (which include sermons one Sunday each month), she is involved in visitations with the residents of Pilgrim Manor Health Center and Covenant Village — two facilities for senior citizens sponsored by her denomination — and is active with the Children's Home of Cromwell, also a denomination-sponsored endeavor.

Her Children's Home activities include a Christian education program once a week and a Bible study group for those of high school age. At Covenant Congregational, youth are also an important part of her work as she serves as counselor to the junior high fellowship group.

Legend comes true: Understudy becomes star

NEW YORK (UPI) — "You're going out there on the stage as an understudy. You've got to come back as a star."

Julia Migenes Johnson, who grew up in a New York tenement and went on to become a popular television and concert personality in Europe, has scored a success at the Metropolitan Opera as the understudy who took over the title role in "Lulu" for ailing Teresa Stratas. (UPI photo)

This paraphrase of one of the corniest lines in the current Broadway hit, "42nd Street," describes the transformation of Julia Migenes Johnson at the far end of Broadway, the Metropolitan Opera House.

Mrs. Johnson took over the title role in "Lulu" for ailing Teresa Stratas for four performances of the opera in December and January and forged an immediate reputation for herself as one of the most exciting singing-actresses at the Met.

She followed her first performance of the role with a telecast of the opera on the "Live from Lincoln Center" series and reconfirmed for a national audience her obviously valid claims to a major operatic career. Her success has been described as "overnight," but the truth is that operatic success has been slow in catching up with Mrs. Johnson's varied career.

In Europe she is a popular television and concert personality and recently won the Belgian Radio Super Lion award as the best European broadcast entertainer of the year. She has had her own award-winning television show in West Germany featuring opera, operetta, opera parodies, comedy and such guest artists as Joel Gray. She has just completed a pilot for a 15-show series on British TV.

"I don't want to stop my TV work because it's fun and pays better than opera," said the petite, mid-30ish soprano whose perky face is dominated by burnished brown eyes. "I've always lived in two worlds — serious and light music. But I will be doing more opera now. I've got bids now from the Berlin Opera and London's Covent Garden and it'll be singing at the Met and in Houston next season.

"But I think to get five or six operatic roles under your belt and then just travel the world doing them is another sort of death. I don't want to be stuck in a rut."

Proving she isn't, Mrs. Johnson has signed a contract for three record albums — Germaine, German leader, and opera arias — and is planning a concert tour of Europe in 1982 in a program of light and heavy music. She admits it's getting to the point that she has too much to do. She will take time out in July to have a baby and find a home, preferably in the Los Angeles area to place to rear a child. "Since her husband, Jerry Johnson, has given up financial counseling to become a writer of short stories and screen plays, they can live anywhere they wish," she pointed out.

The singer grew up in a New York tenement in a family of Greek, Puerto Rican and Irish stock. She, a brother and a sister formed a children's sing-and-dance team and got jobs on television, in children's shows, Macy's Thanksgiving Day parades, and Radio City Music Hall.

While enrolled at the High School of Music and Art, she was chosen by Leonard Bernstein to sing an aria on television, and the composer-conductor encouraged her to get a scholarship to study voice at the prestigious Juilliard School. She dropped out of Juilliard after six months because of the "snooty" attitude of the students. "I went around in jeans; they didn't. They were all very special people practicing some higher art. I'd been through the mill and didn't have time for that sort of elitist attitude from people with no experience. I'm not taken with music as culture but for what music has to say."

Next came the role of Grizella in a New York City Center revival of Bernstein's "West Side Story" and two years as Hotel, one of Teyf's daughters, in "Fiddler on the Roof" on Broadway. She also sang in Gian Carlo Menotti's "The Saint of Bleeker Street" and "The Consul" at the New York City Opera. Then in 1968 came a bid from the Vienna Volksoper to do Maria in a German language production of "West Side Story."

"I wanted to go to Europe to make up for my lack of training in vocal techniques. I was young and I could take the time. People said I was crazy to leave New York — I'd been on the Tonight Show four times, you know — but I wanted to do what would make me happy. I had no idea I'd live abroad for 12 years, first in Vienna (an artist can die there), but to bust out and then in Paris (where I'd always wanted to go all my life anyway), singing everything from bass baritone to Yma Sumac."

America forgot about Julia Migenes (she recently added Johnson "so my husband won't be Mr. Migenes") until 1978 when she sang an impressive and highly spirited Musetta in "La Boheme" at the San Francisco Opera. This brought her to the attention of Joop Ingpen, the Metropolitan Opera's latest beagle conductor, who encouraged her to get a scholarship to study voice at the prestigious Juilliard School. She dropped out of Juilliard after six months because of the "snooty" attitude of the students. "I went around in jeans; they didn't. They were all very special people practicing some higher art. I'd been through the mill and didn't have time for that sort of elitist attitude from people with no experience. I'm not taken with music as culture but for what music has to say."

'Be honest,' Grasso told spokesman

HARTFORD (UPI) — Former Gov. Ella Grasso told the Hartford Hospital spokesman who fought her press statements and the announcement of her death to be "totally honest" about her 10-month battle with cancer.

James Battaglio, a hospital publicist, recalled Mrs. Grasso's advice to him last November in dealing with reporters: "I want you to be totally honest and be as tough as they are."

"She said she wanted it done with honesty and dignity," Battaglio said the day after "the unhappiest moment of my life" — the night he had to announce her death.

His vice trembling, Battaglio announced Mrs. Grasso's death Thursday night to gathered reporters.

"I didn't have anything prepared," he recalled after an 11 1/2 week routine that included daily meetings with Mrs. Grasso and twice-daily hospital visits for her fight with cancer. "I thought I wouldn't have to say anything, that the whole world outside knew that this famous, dignified woman was dying."

Battaglio, 34, a former reporter for the now-defunct Hartford Times, said Mrs. Grasso remained cheerful and kept her sense of humor throughout her illness, even as her condition worsened.

"She'd say to us, 'I haven't given up hope, why should you?' She always talked about living, being alive. Her personality was contagious. She made believers out of us."

He said when the former governor entered the hospital last April for a hysterectomy to remove a cancerous ovary, Battaglio "wrote out four or five lines and took them upstairs."

"She approved them and said, 'All right, now make sure you give it to everybody.'"

In November when Mrs. Grasso reentered the hospital and doctors found the cancer had spread to her liver, Battaglio remembered telling her, "We did not have to give out anything, that she had the right to patient confidentiality."

"But she said, 'I'm the mother of freedom of information in this state and I don't go back on it now. I never censored anything, although she did get mad over a few of the stories she read about herself,'" Battaglio said.

Before the disease forced her to work on Dec. 31, Mrs. Grasso visited every day on state business from her hospital bed, said Battaglio. Mrs. Grasso had been hospitalized from Dec. 8 until she died.

When asked initially if she wanted a television set in her room, Grasso told Battaglio, "How would it be for the governor to be watching television when she's supposed to be working? I don't watch television in my other office," he recalled.

"I'm just temporarily relocated from the Capitol," Battaglio recalled Mrs. Grasso saying.

Agostinelli on duty
HARTFORD — Col. Nathan Agostinelli was on duty yesterday and again today at the State Capitol where the body of former Gov. Ella Grasso lies in state.

Agostinelli, who is in the Army Reserve National Guard, is also a former state controller. He was on duty from 11 to noon yesterday and again this morning from 10 to 10 a.m.

Weekend car crashes kill six
By United Press International
At least six people died in weekend traffic accidents in Connecticut, including two elderly women killed in a hit-and-run accident in Bridgeport and a Guilford teen-ager riding in a car that slammed into a bridge abutment.

The latest victim was Lisa Holm, 16, of Guilford, who died Sunday night at Yale-New Haven Hospital. She was a passenger in a car that went out of control on Interstate 95 in Branford about 10:30 p.m., slammed into a bridge abutment, flipped over and slid across the highway on its roof. The driver, Kenneth Bassett, 20, also of Guilford, was admitted to the hospital but his condition was unavailable.

The five other victims were Julia Morrissey, 76, and Elizabeth Murphy, 76, both of Bethany; Robert Susan Downs, 22, of Bethany; Robert Louis Williamson, 35, of New Haven; Maria Hendan, 55, of Southington; and David Jacobs, 53, of New Haven.

Mournful supporters say goodbye to Ella

HARTFORD (UPI) — Many of those Ella Grasso called "my people," a group of thousands which included state leaders and street gang members, have bade a final goodbye to the former governor who captured the hearts of so many.

The young and the old came Sunday, some carried children and waited up to an hour to enter the Capitol. They filed through the flag-filled building and past the open casket of the former governor who died Thursday.

Many cried, others just looked. Hundreds made the sign of the cross. One man blew her a kiss. Another left a single flower.

A group of West Haven residents rented a bus with the banner, "We love you Ella." A shuttle bus brought hundreds of people down from Mrs. Grasso's home town of Windsor Locks.

The fishermen's fleet from Stonington sent a floral arrangement of an anchor with a break in it. "We came because we love her," said Lee Ravizza of West Hartford. "She was a great person."

John Romano of Rocky Hill said, "I think we just lost the greatest by losing her. She never said no to anybody."

Robert Dinopoli and his family came up from Old Lyme, where Mrs. Grasso had a summer home and they attended the same Roman Catholic church.

"It's a small way of saying thank you and good-bye," he said. "Members of the Savage Nomads, one of Hartford's toughest street gangs, also filed past the casket."

"We're here to pay our respects, just like everybody else," one member said. "She met with us too."

Approximately 1,000 people an hour passed through the Capitol where Mrs. Grasso was to lay in state for 23 hours. She was to be buried a state funeral at noon today and given a Windsor Locks.

Move under way to oust Weicker

HARTFORD (UPI) — Some of Connecticut's conservative leaders, unhappy with Sen. Lowell P. Weicker, R-Conn., are trying to draft Senator Robin Moore to run against the state's highest-ranking elected Republican in 1982.

Allen F. Lyons, a spokesman for the Connecticut Conservative Union, said state conservatives would like Moore, the author of "The Green Berets" and "The French Connection," to wage a primary against Weicker and the Republican Senate nomination.

Lyons said the Conservative Union plans a news conference Tuesday to announce its support for Moore and formation of a "Draft Robin Moore for Senate" committee.

Moore, a longtime Westport resident, was in Jamaica and unavailable for comment.

State police probe shootout
HADDAM (UPI) — State police say a local man was shot to death and his teenage son was in guarded condition today at Hartford Hospital, suffering from gunshot wounds in the head.

The older Kozman was pronounced dead at the hospital. Police were investigating and had no further details. No arrests have been made.

Man steals fire truck
HARTFORD (UPI) — A city man today on charges he stole a fire truck while firefighters were investigating a water leak on Watersfield Avenue.

Police say Jean Gilbert, 34, led state troopers and police from Hartford and Rocky Hill on a chase 2 miles south on Interstate 91 and Wesleyan University in Middletown where the truck was stopped. Gilbert was charged with second-degree larceny and interfering with police.

Jailed man hangs self
MERRIDEN (UPI) — Officials say a Wolcott man, who had been held for arraignment on charges stemming from the assault of a prison guard, hanged himself in a police department lockup.

Brian Madden, 18, was awaiting transport to the New Haven jail when he was discovered Friday hanging by his shirt in the cell block, police said. He was awaiting arraignment on charges of criminal attempt to commit larceny and first-degree burglary.

Madden on Tuesday allegedly broke into the Cheshire Correctional Center, where he had been an inmate.

Nevas is Weicker's pick
HARTFORD (UPI) — Published reports say Westport Republican Alan Nevas, a former legislative leader, is the top choice of Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., to be Connecticut's next U.S. attorney.

Weicker declined comment on Saturday's report in The Hartford Courant, which quoted sources as saying the state's senior senator will discuss the appointment at a news conference in Hartford next week.
