Forst takes police post

HARTFORD (UPI) - State Police Col. Lester J. Forst was sworn in Friday by Gov. William O'Neill as the new deputy commissioner of public safety to handle day-to-day state police operations. Donald Long will continue as public safety commissioner but will be confined to an administrative role over that agency, the Military Department, the Office of Civil Preparedness and several fire, gun and building boards. Long, 44, a 20-year veteran of state police, said he did not view the change as a demotion. He said filling the deputy's slot had been discussed for some time. The change came on the heels of an investigation by the Legislature's Public Safety Committee into why back up troopers were not sent to Meriden March 21 when violence broke out at a Ku Klux Klan rally. "I'm anxious to get back on a positive note," said Long, who will be eligible to retire in three years. "I think the hearings have created a great deal of confusion and caused considerable damage within the state police department."

Zinsser disputes majority in asking Long's removal

By PAT COURNEY Herald Reporter
MANCHESTER - Sen. Carl A. Zinsser, (R-Manchester) the ranking member of the legislature's Public Safety Committee, which called for the removal of Public Safety Commissioner Donald Long as commanding officer of the Division of State Police, said Friday night, "It's unfortunate that when you're the head man you take the blame." Sen. Zinsser had sent Gov. William O'Neill a letter May 14 saying he was "unable to support the majority report" of the investigation regarding the role of the state police in the incident involving the assault on Meriden police and Ku Klux Klan members at a rally held there March 21. The majority report had called for Long's removal as commanding officer of the state police and for the reassignment of two officers in command of the day of the incident. "I felt, quite honestly, that the staff of the Public Safety committee should have done the report on the incident because I felt there were some members of (the committee) who were out to get Commissioner Long," Zinsser said. "Our job as committee members was to do a thorough, objective report on what happened and give it to Gov. O'Neill. It was his job, his responsibility to make decisions on how to correct the situation," he continued. "When the committee members got into saying this one and that one should be removed, I thought it was not our job to make such personnel decisions." Zinsser commented, however, that the commissioner retain his post as commanding officer of the state police. It also recommended that any personnel changes be made by the governor's office. "There's blame enough for everyone to share in this incident," Zinsser said. "The Legislature too has to share in it because part of the problem in Meriden was that the police lacked radios - because of insufficient funds - and they lacked manpower, because the funds for extra men have been used for gasoline. We all share in the blame for the unfortunate incident," he concluded.

Textile fibers link victims in Atlanta

ATLANTA (UPI) - A medical expert said Friday "colored textile fibers" found on the bodies of at least 6 of the 17 young blacks killed in Atlanta during the past 21 months is the only physical evidence that links the cases. One of the bodies on which the fibers were found was that of 17-year-old William Barrett, who will be buried Saturday. A volunteer search for clues in the case also will be made Saturday. Dr. Larry Howard, who heads the State Crime Lab, said during a news conference that he and his interview investigators had found "lots of evidence" on the bodies that might be significant to the case, but "it's unique to each victim." Howard said his possible some earlier stabbing victims believed unrelated might nonetheless belong on the task force list because Barrett had stab wounds in his stomach which were apparently inflicted after death. "We've got lots of physical evidence, Howard said. "But you have to interpret that. Do the fibers come from the killer or from some place the victims frequent?" He said the fibers did not come from a rope. At least two victims were garroted with a rope, and Barrett, the latest youth to die, was strangled with "something soft like a scarf or towel." "They're textile fibers, not carpet, curtains, clothing. We have several colors." Howard said his possible some earlier stabbing victims believed unrelated might nonetheless belong on the task force list because Barrett had stab wounds in his stomach which were apparently inflicted after death.

Pope still in danger

ROME (UPI) - Doctors said Friday they were still not absolutely certain that Pope John Paul II will live, although he is making "favorable" progress from an assassination attempt. Since the pope underwent major abdominal surgery Wednesday afternoon doctors have repeatedly stressed that the next seven to 10 days would be critical because of the risk of infection. "We are still not in a position to say whether the pope will live," said Dr. Emilio Tressati, chief medical officer of Rome's Gemelli hospital. He said, however, doctors were "satisfied," considering the extent of his wounds. Earlier, doctors said the pontiff's condition was improving from the assassin's bullets which shattered his left hand finger, pierced his elbow, severed his colon and narrowly missed the vital aorta that carries blood to the lower body. Tressati said there was noable improvement in the pope's breathing.

New sinkholes

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS, Fla. (UPI) — Sinkholes that have swallowed trees, cars, a house, streets and sections of business buildings in the past week plagued Central Florida anew Friday, threatening a suburb with $100,000 to $300,000 homes.

The latest sinkholes brought the eight-day total to five. Two that opened in suburbs of Tampa and Orlando were small in comparison with the massive Winter Park sinkhole that opened May 8.

A 20-foot-wide and 15-foot-deep cavity that appeared in the Carrollwood section just north of Tampa damaged a home and left a 1980 model luxury car marooned in a garage.

The owners of the auto moved all their belongings from their house into the home of a relative next door.

At Windermere, a fashionable suburb of luxury $100,000 to $300,000 homes 10 miles south of Orlando, a sinkhole opened early Friday in the middle of a street. It soon became a cavity 40 feet long and 12 feet deep.

Sinkholes at Auburndale and Altamonte Springs that opened Thursday were reported virtually unchanged Friday.

The Altamonte Springs sinkhole opened cracks in the foundation and a wall of the home of a retired couple, forcing them to leave.

Authorities at Tampa reported the sinkhole there was only the latest of several along a direct line that may indicate a dried up underground stream in the area.

At Orlando, geologists said the Winter Park sinkhole and the Altamonte Springs sinkhole occurred along the same geological formation.

Job claims drop

WETHERSFIELD (UPI) — Average weekly claims for unemployment benefits dropped 5.5 percent during the latest reporting period to the lowest number in a year, Labor Commissioner P. Joseph Peraro said Friday.

"For the two weeks ending May 8, there were 38,617 claims, a drop of 2,258 from the previous two weeks. First-time filings also dropped from 4,908 to 4,316 while benefits expired for 391 people."

At the same time last year, total claims averaged 41,741 weekly.

The state's unemployment rate was 6.2 percent, Peraro said.

Winner comes home

WAYLAND, Mass. (UPI) — Kenny Wright came home from Arizona a winner, and his family, friends and a spanking new bicycle won't let him forget it.

Wright, 11, beat out 400 competitors in Phoenix, Ariz., last week to become the National Elementary School Chess Champion.

The fifth-grader at Happy Hollow School financed the trip with money earned on his paper route. He saved for nine months, foregoing the 18-speed bicycle that beckoned from his dreams.

Instead he put the money toward airline tickets for himself and his father Russell, a Wayland roofer who "taunted Kenny on" to chess at age 7.

"It feels great and I plan to go on playing for the rest of my life," the young champion said through a milk mustache. His first reaction on winning the national tournament was "to scream and jump around," Wright said.

New goals are to successfully defend his title next year in Philadelphia and to become a chess master by age 15.

Wright and his father flew home Sunday with the trophy strapped to an extra seat in plane's cockpit. The trophy now sits in a place of honor on the family's living room mantle, a horde of smaller trophies having been displaced to the youngster's bedroom.

Wright's favorite subjects — after lunch and recess, that is — are science and math. He hopes to continue his chess hobby throughout his life.

Linda Russell described her younger sons as "something special." Brother Russell Jr., 14, "is very proud of his younger brother," she said.

Friends and relatives decorated the family's home with crepe paper and streamers Monday when the new champion and his father returned from Phoenix.

Halfway through the welcome home party, Wright was presented a surprise — a brand new bicycle.

Smugglers convicted

PORTLAND, Maine (UPI) — A U.S. District Court jury Friday found seven men guilty and one man innocent of conspiring to smuggle nearly 19 tons of marijuana into Maine last year.

Authorities said the marijuana was seized on a 65-foot shrimp boat that was boarded a year ago by Royal Canadian Mounted Police off the Nova Scotia coast.

No date has been set for sentencing.

Convicted are: David Hensel, 29, of Key West, Fla.; Craig Dill, 29, of Huntington, W. Va.; Gerald Case, 34, of Clarkston, Ga.; Larry Duke, 33, of Howell, Ga.; Robert Hubbard, 27, of Atlanta; Charles Standley, 37, of Georgetown, Ga.; and John Wells of Cobbtown, Ga.

The jury acquitted William Storey, 32, of Riverdale, Ga.

Shuttle to fly again

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The second test flight of the space shuttle Columbia, the re-usable rocket plane that returned America to space glory last month, has been scheduled for Sept. 30, the space agency announced Friday.

The four-day, five-hour orbital voyage will mark the first time a spaceship has flown more than once. The Columbia again will land at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

Officials at the Kennedy Space Center said they originally planned to launch astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly on Oct. 18, but advanced the date to Sept. 30 by deleting tests engineers considered unnecessary.

Launch by Sept. 30 — the last day in the current fiscal year — would enable the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to meet a commitment it made to Congress of achieving two shuttle flights in fiscal 1981.

NASA said, however, that the date is "success oriented" and that unforeseen problems such as bad weather or technical difficulties could delay the launching.

Fritz Widick, chief of shuttle orbiter and external tank operations at the Florida spaceport, said the near-perfect performance of the Columbia on its maiden test flight April 12-14 made possible the abbreviated testing leading up to the longer second flight.

Jobs imperiled

PITTSFIELD, Mass. (UPI) — Job reductions in the largest division of General Electric Co. in Pittsfield may grow to twice the number estimated earlier in the year, a company official says.

Nicholas Boraski, vice president and general manager of the GE's Large Transformer Business Division, this week said his section will suffer heavy losses this year.

"More seriously, in 1982 we expect losses in millions of dollars," he said.

Boraski had estimated in a 1981 business forecast issued in January that about 300 workers would lose their jobs this year at GE, largest employer in Berkshire County.

But he now predicts the number may be double that amount with further job reductions expected in 1982.

The situation stems from a national economic problem caused by the drop in demand for electricity and, therefore, for electric equipment, Boraski said.

About 7,800 employees work for GE in Pittsfield, the lowest number employed at the firm World War II. GE has plants around the state, including divisions in Fitchburg and Lynn.

Quadruplets survive

BOSTON (UPI) — A Canton woman was in good condition Friday after giving birth to quadruplets, all boys in excellent condition.

A spokesman for Brigham and Women's Hospital identified the parents as Charles and Alice Earle.

Dr. Isaac Schiff, assistant director of reproductive endocrinology, was the physician in charge assisted by four other doctors.

The babies, delivered by caesarean section, ranged in weight from 4 pounds, 5 1/2 ounces, to 5 pounds, three ounces, the spokesman said.

Physicians allowed the quadruplets to be photographed but the parents were not available for interviews.

The spokesman said Mr. and Mrs. Earle "are in good condition."

U.S., Russian ships draw nearer Lebanon

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Soviet and American warships moved close to Lebanese waters Friday as President Reagan's special envoy attempted to avert a Syrian-Israeli war over the Lebanese missile crisis.

The Israeli newspaper Yedioth Ahronoth earlier reported that the "Moscow" was steaming off the northern coast of Lebanon. The newspaper said the USS Forrestal was also deployed off the Lebanese coast only after "it was made clear the Soviets are using their navy to sabotage the U.S. Envoy Philip Habib mission.

News of the naval movements came against a backdrop of rising tension over Israeli demands that Syria remove SAM-3 and SAM-6 anti-aircraft missile batteries from Lebanon.

Although the Syrians fired four Soviet-made anti-aircraft rockets in Lebanon Thursday, shooting down a pilotless Israeli reconnaissance plane, the SAM batteries were quiet Friday.

White House moves to compromise on tax

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House began inching toward a compromise on President Reagan's tax cut proposal Friday in the wake of warnings from congressional leaders that the administration plan doesn't have a chance.

"I'm reminded of the words of a country song that could apply today. The door is open and the light is on in the hall," acting White House press secretary Larry Speakes told reporters.

Speakes said the president still believes his tax cut proposal is the best plan but "we have always said we are willing to listen."

The comments were considerably more accommodating than a presidential statement earlier this week that "this is no time to compromise."

An administration official said the president still is adamant on a multi-year rather than a one-year tax cut but there is room for bargaining on other specifics of the 30 percent tax rate reduction proposal.

On Capitol Hill, Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd said the president's tax plan, known as Kemp-Roth for its congressional co-sponsors, has no chance of winning congressional approval as it stands.

"Congress will not pass a three-year (30 percent) across-the-board tax cut that would produce huge deficits and be highly inflationary," Byrd said.

He said "the American people want a tax cut" but it should be "more productivity oriented" than the plan sponsored by Sen. William Roth, R-Del., and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y.

House Republican leader Bob Michel already has acknowledged, "We have not got the votes." He told a small group of reporters Thursday that most of the conservative Democrats whose support was crucial in the president's budget victory last week do not plan to vote for Reagan's tax cut.

"My view is, why take an unnecessary defeat when you don't have to," Michel said. "We ought to concentrate on fashioning a bill in the House that could be passed in the Senate and be signed by the president."

A Treasury Department spokesman reported that chairmen of the House and Senate tax-writing committees met separately with Treasury Secretary Donald Regan Thursday.

"No compromise came out of the meetings," he said, describing them as "listening sessions."

The spokesman said it is doubtful there will be any further tax cut discussions with the administration until Regan returns May 26 from a trip to the Middle East and Africa. He left Thursday night.

Production increases, but spending goes on

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite the coal strike, high interest rates and sagging auto sales, the nation's industries raised their output in April, the Federal Reserve reported Friday.

Industrial production, a benchmark of economic growth, expanded by its seasonally adjusted 0.4 percent in April, the Fed said. Production figures signal future employment and tax revenue changes.

If the coal strike had not depressed production in the mining industry, factory production overall would have grown 0.7 percent for April, the report said. Auto production contributed about 0.1 percent of the overall growth.

"Manufacturing turns out to be much stronger than expected in general," said economist Evelina Tainor of the First National Bank of Chicago.

With February's production figures revised upward from a 0.4 to a 0.1 percent decline and March figures showing a full one-half percent growth, up by 0.1 percent, Ms. Tainor said long-range forecasts may well be revised once more.

"I think the second quarter will be a little stronger than people are expecting, and the year will be a little stronger."

Mining output was down only 2.1 percent from April 1980, even though the 60-day strike by 160,000 coal miners has cut down coal production substantially.

"I'm surprised that mining is not down by more," said William Cox, acting chief economist of the Commerce Department.

Michael Evans of Evans Economics, a private forecasting firm, said his study of the coal industry strike two years ago had not reflected the large extent to which coal operators were "secretly" mining coal, shipping by trucks at night.

Evans predicted the gross national product growth "will be positive this quarter," as opposed to the administration's "soggy" forecast, that there may be a negative movement.

"Consumers keep spending and the savings rate remains low," Evans said. "Interest rates are not really having the effect on the economy most people expected."

Ms. Tainor and Cox both warned the auto companies are sending dealers more cars than they can sell. "I fear they are building up faster than we like to see," Cox said.

Ms. Tainor agreed, saying, "I think they will come up with another inventory accumulation and will have to do something to sell those cars off."

Gun crew alert Rifle volleys fired over coffin of Hughes

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Three guerrillas, wearing black masks and combat jackets, fired three rifle volleys over the flag-draped coffin of dead IRA hunger striker Francis Hughes Friday while three victims of the terrorist violence also were buried in Northern Ireland.

In County Armagh, Cardinal Tomas O'Fiaich, Ireland's Roman Catholic Primate, said the four funerals "of people who should not have died" marked "a black day for the north."

There were no reports of rioting, although violence flared in Belfast Thursday night when leftist IRA guerrillas killed a policeman and seriously wounded another in a rocket attack on an armored police Land Rover.

Hughes' coffin, covered with the tricolor of the Irish Republic, was lowered into the ground with full "military" honors near his home village of Bellaghy, 40 miles north of Belfast.

The hunger strikers are hoping to pressure the British government into giving IRA convicts the right to "political" status in Ulster jails.

Cassano: It was hard to defend CD program

By PAUL HENDRIE
HARTFORD — Deputy Mayor Stephen Cassano testified Friday that he favored Manchester's continued participation in a federal community development program, but he said actions of the Department of Housing and Urban Development made it difficult to convince townspeople of the program's value.

Manchester voters ultimately decided, in an April 1979 referendum, to withdraw from the Community Development Block Grant program.

The federal government and three low-income Manchester residents are suing the town, charging racial discrimination motivated the pull-out. The CDBG program promotes, in part, development of low-income housing. The trial in U.S. District Court has so far lasted five weeks.

Cassano testified that Manchester residents felt HUD was intruding in local affairs during 1978, when it issued a series of conditions the town had to meet to receive its block grant.

"They (town residents) were concerned that some conditions were being placed on the town. It was an infringement on the rights of the town, they felt," Cassano testified. "I was a supporter of the program and every time I'd turn around, something (HUD) did would complicate the program."

Cassano testified that HUD official Daniel P. Kolesar sent the town a May 26, 1978 letter ordering the town to institute a program to enforce laws against housing discrimination.

"Certain conditions had to be met for us to receive a block grant that year," said Cassano. "It was put very bluntly that either we meet these conditions, or we forfeit the money."

The deputy mayor said Manchester had no record of housing discrimination, so he felt the program was not needed. But he said he voted for it anyway, so the town would receive its money.

The fair housing plan involved hiring Wilber Smith — who has served as a state senator from Hartford before and since his tenure in Manchester — as a fair housing officer.

The plan also required the town to publish a brochure advertising housing opportunities in Manchester.

Cassano said he supported the appointment of Smith, even though there was some local reaction against Smith because his controversial reputation preceded him.

Ironically, Smith himself was not an advocate of blacks moving from the city to the suburbs, according to Cassano, who is a sociology professor at Manchester Community College.

"In effect, what he was saying was that it would be foolish for minorities to leave the central city because the jobs are in the central city and the transportation is in the central city," Cassano testified. "He said this (suburbanization) is not what minorities wanted and would not be in their best interests to do this."

Cassano said Smith presented those ideas as a guest lecturer in one of the MCC courses Cassano teaches. He said he also heard Smith, on a September 1979 WKND Radio interview advocate that blacks remain in the city, so they will not erode their political base.

Smith testified earlier in the trial that he feels Manchester is unresponsive to blacks.

Cassano said he voted in favor of the housing brochure to satisfy HUD, even though he felt it had little value.

"Very frankly, I thought it had little value," said Cassano. "We have several Chamber of Commerce brochures that stated the same thing."

According to Cassano, as fast as Manchester would satisfy one HUD condition, the department would impose new ones. He said HUD officials claimed Manchester had "zoning impediments" to the development of low-income housing.

But Cassano said these officials later admitted they never even reviewed the town's zoning regulations.

"We were concerned that the program was beginning to get a negative image in the community and we wanted to get a clarification from HUD of what is expected of us," he said.

The deputy mayor said a reaction to his government was the prime motivation for the referendum, with racism playing an insignificant role.

"Obviously, the major factor was anti-government," Cassano testified. "There was obviously a fear of excessive services that are generally associated with municipal facilities. In a town of 50,000, there has to be some racism. But I would say they played a very small role."

Cassano joined other defense witnesses who said the local news media misrepresented the CDBG controversy to the public and helped sway the voters against the program.

Cassano said he recognized before the April 1979 referendum that voter approval of the CDBG program was destined to lose.

"For 17 days consecutively before the vote, I made some appearance somewhere on behalf of the program," he testified. "I felt I was on a sinking ship. You may believe in something and work very hard, but you know from the thing people asked that their concerns were deep-rooted."

Cassano defended former director Joseph T. Sweeney from other witnesses' charges of racism.

"He was a very diligent worker, a unique person," said Cassano. "Joe was the kind of person who, if you gave him an assignment, you just knew it would be done thoroughly."

Cassano testified that he heard public statements from town residents John Tucci and Frank Lupien, which he considered racially motivated. But he said they, by no means, represent Manchester's mainstream.

For example, Cassano testified that when Tucci ran for a slot on the Board of Directors, he finished last in a field of 12, more than 4,000 votes behind the next lowest vote-getter.

A defense strategy seems to be an effort to isolate Concerned Citizens for Manchester Development members, including Lupien and Tucci, as an insignificant group, out-of-step with the rest of Manchester.

Defense attorneys went to great lengths Thursday to disassociate Sweeney from that group.

Cassano also testified that the current discrimination lawsuit is a regular topic of discussion in his sociology classes, which included a large number of blacks from Hartford.

In the next room a typewriter, temporarily abandoned, sat on the dining room table inundated with documents, notes and open volumes.

"Basically, my house is not like it used to be," said Mrs. Dorn, who had five exams and a research paper to complete last week during finals. "I used to take great pride in my housework. Now I just get by."

Many older students at Manchester Community College last week had to drop everything — job, family, housework — to study for final exams, which represent a major portion of a student's grade. Finals week, occurring once every semester, is an unique experience for these students, disrupting their lives and the normal routine of their families.

For Mrs. Dorn, an East Hartford resident who returned to school two years ago after leaving college prematurely several years earlier, "this is the bad week of the year. I don't do anything else. I just study. And I don't like a lot of noise," she asserted.

With three teen-agers in the household, silence is a rare phenomenon. But during finals week, Mrs. Dorn said, her children do their best to cooperate and even take charge of the housework.

One daughter does all the grocery shopping not only during final exams but also during the rest of the term when her mother is busy with her six courses and editing The Cougar, the campus newspaper.

"They're very proud of me," said Mrs. Dorn, who will be transferring to the University of Hartford next year to work for a degree in Communications and Public Administration.

She rose with the sun every morning last week to prepare for her exams. "I think I get extra adrenalin to do it," she said. "Next week I'll get tired."

Nancy Kelley of Thomas Drive in Manchester, a mother of young children and a full-time student of accounting, was also an early riser last week. "Most of my studying gets done at 3 a.m.," she said. "She is so super organized that we really don't suffer much," he said amazed. "She cooks a meal every night. She was mowing the lawn when I got home tonight."

When Mrs. Kelley returned to school last fall her husband took a part-time job in addition to his regular job to support the family, she said.

Later in the day, Mrs. Kelley would take an exam and then "I ran around with the kids all day," she said. Although she got some studying done in the evening, "at about 9 p.m. I'm really exhausted," she said.

Alan Howat of Vernon, a business major, businessman and father, had to struggle through finals week. "It's been pretty rough," he said. "I've been cramming all week."

In addition to his exams, Howat started a home improvements business last week. He studied at night when his family was sleeping, he said. On a normal schedule, 1 a.m. is very late for Howat, but that wasn't true of last week, he said.

Carol Krantz of Glastonbury was so busy last week that she couldn't be reached for comment. But, according to her husband, Paul, Carol can somehow retain a normal routine during finals.

"She is so super organized that we really don't suffer much," he said amazed. "She cooks a meal every night. She was mowing the lawn when I got home tonight."

With three teen-agers in the household, silence is a rare phenomenon. But during finals week, Mrs. Dorn said, her children do their best to cooperate and even take charge of the housework.

One daughter does all the grocery shopping not only during final exams but also during the rest of the term when her mother is busy with her six courses and editing The Cougar, the campus newspaper.

"They're very proud of me," said Mrs. Dorn, who will be transferring to the University of Hartford next year to work for a degree in Communications and Public Administration.

She rose with the sun every morning last week to prepare for her exams. "I think I get extra adrenalin to do it," she said. "Next week I'll get tired."

Nancy Kelley of Thomas Drive in Manchester, a mother of young children and a full-time student of accounting, was also an early riser last week. "Most of my studying gets done at 3 a.m.," she said. "She is so super organized that we really don't suffer much," he said amazed. "She cooks a meal every night. She was mowing the lawn when I got home tonight."

When Mrs. Kelley returned to school last fall her husband took a part-time job in addition to his regular job to support the family, she said.

Later in the day, Mrs. Kelley would take an exam and then "I ran around with the kids all day," she said. Although she got some studying done in the evening, "at about 9 p.m. I'm really exhausted," she said.

Alan Howat of Vernon, a business major, businessman and father, had to struggle through finals week. "It's been pretty rough," he said. "I've been cramming all week."

In addition to his exams, Howat started a home improvements business last week. He studied at night when his family was sleeping, he said. On a normal schedule, 1 a.m. is very late for Howat, but that wasn't true of last week, he said.

Carol Krantz of Glastonbury was so busy last week that she couldn't be reached for comment. But, according to her husband, Paul, Carol can somehow retain a normal routine during finals.

"She is so super organized that we really don't suffer much," he said amazed. "She cooks a meal every night. She was mowing the lawn when I got home tonight."

Agency proposes cuts in nuke safety

WASHINGTON — The near disaster at Three Mile Island two years ago threw a scare into those Americans who live near the many nuclear power plants across the country. But it seems to have had little sobering effect on the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, which is supposed to ensure that the public is safe from nuclear accidents.

Three Mile Island's close call led the agency to review existing plant operations. This caused a shift in staff time and other resources, which led to a backlog in nuclear power plant licensing. The delay, the industry argues, burdens electricity consumers with expensive substitute power costs.

Now, in an effort to remove the licensing logjam, the NRC seems to be forgetting one of the lessons of Three Mile Island: That crucial safety issues were either overlooked or ignored in the licensing of the Pennsylvania reactor. The NRC has proposed rule changes that would limit public comment and reduce the authority of the agency's Atomic Safety and Licensing Review Board to raise safety issues.

Even more shocking is the NRC's request for authority to issue "interim" licenses that would allow a nuclear plant to start up at low power before public hearings have been concluded.

By April 1, 61 new employees had been hired to work in the agency's Office of Reactor Regulation — the division that processes license applications. In addition, employees have been transferred from other agency offices to help achieve the announced goal of cutting hearing time from 18 to 10 months for nuclear power plants.

The new focus within NRC is "more geared to speed and on not being bad actors than it is to supervising an agency insider told my reporter John Dillon. Since the Reagan administration came in, he said, the NRC has undergone "a 180-degree shift in that area since Three Mile Island."

The commission proposes to delay an assessment of auxiliary feedwaters systems, the system that proved critical at Three Mile Island. The NRC licensing speedup will also, according to the confidential report, mean the agency will have to "cancel monitoring the industry test programs on safety and relief valves." It was a stuck-open relief valve that contributed to the TMI accident, and secret files at the NRC show that such malfunctions are endemic in the nuclear power industry.

The NRC's own files also contain warnings that corrosion and radiation are weakening pipes and reactor vessels a potentially disastrous situation. Yet the agency plans to delay for 18 months the issuance of regulatory guides on anticipating radiation damage.

The NRC also plans to extend by six months the time for analysis by nuclear plant management of severe accident studies.

The NRC's blueprint for speeding up license procedures includes delays in many "action plans" designed to improve nuclear plant safety in the aftermath of Three Mile Island. One agency commissioner, Peter Bradford, has objected to this postponement of the so-called TMI directive.

around the need for congressional approval.

Last year, the Pentagon leased about $60 million worth of military hardware to Turkey, Honduras, and the Dominican Republic without going through Congress. And last January, the generals leased free of charge six helicopters valued at $5.9 million to the Salvadoran junta, again without getting approval from Capitol Hill.

Headslines & Footnotes: British actress Susanah York, who played Superman's mother and is now in New York in "Hedda Gabler," jetted down to Washington the other day to testify against the proposed deployment of 190 cruise missiles in Britain. "If we accept the missiles there is no doubt that we'll be the prime target of a pre-emptive attack," she said. "We want to create a European nuclear-free zone." York said she doesn't mind if she is "used" by political groups "as long as I can deliver the message."

The Equate Employment Opportunity Commission has interpreted its mandate in a way that has raised some eyebrows in New Orleans, where a federal trial attorney named Terrell Brussard was recently named acting regional supervisor of EEOC lawyers and given a pay boost to boot. What makes his promotion surprising is that last December Brussard pleaded guilty to misapplication of federal funds and was given a one-year probation on condition that he perform public service. Brussard's supervisor, Pat Fields, shrugged off the attorney's criminal record, saying that's "his business." Copyright, 1981, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Bennet closing on right track

Superintendent of Schools Dr. James P. Kennedy recommended Monday that the Board of Education close the main building at the Bennet School complex as a money-saving move.

The Herald supports Dr. Kennedy's recommendation.

According to a report from the school's administration, closing the main building would force 79 students to transfer from Bennet to Iling Junior High School. In addition, 39 current sixth grade students who were scheduled to attend Bennet this fall would attend Iling instead.

While changing schools and plans is an inconvenience, it is not a sufficiently traumatic experience to justify keeping Bennet's main building open. Many students change schools each year because of geographical moves without major problems.

In addition, most of the students are from the Verplank district, with 14 from the Tolland Turnpike area, so a student is not being sent alone to a new school but with others from the same area.

The Board of Education planned to close the building next year at the completion of a three-year phase-in program to gradually shift students from the Verplank area from Bennet to Iling.

Closing the building this year will save the schools an estimated $110,000 — $70,000 in salaries and $40,000 in utilities. It will also mean that all Bennet students can be housed in buildings on the east side of Main Street and will not have to cross the street to reach the main building, the only one on the west side.

The Board of Education is currently trying to trim $730,000 from its budgets. Most planned improvements to the educational program have been eliminated and many existing programs pared in recommendations for budget cuts.

Closing the Bennet building would save other educational programs from further cuts. The board should follow Dr. Kennedy's recommendation.

Congress to take action on industrial development

By LISA SHEPARD

WASHINGTON — Robert Miller has nothing against K-Mart. He just thinks it's unfair that the nation's second largest retail store should get a financing boost from the federal government when he had to use conventional financing for the supermarket in Easton, Ohio bearing his name.

Now that K-Mart wants to be a neighbor to Miller's supermarket, Miller decided he'd pay his own way to Washington and plead his case before a congressional subcommittee looking at the uses and abuses of small-issue, tax-exempt industrial development bonds (IDBs).

But also testifying at the same hearing were several economic development directors from the 47 states issuing IDBs, giving ringing praises to a federally sanctioned way of providing low-interest loans to selected businesses.

In Chicago, a city wracked with poverty, crumbling buildings and industries fleeing to the suburbs, IDBs saved 9,843 jobs over the last four years, according to the Windy City's economic director. Another 5,000 new jobs were created.

The dilemma Congress now faces is how to ferret out the bond's abuses, yet continue to provide the attractive financing method of targeted areas of the country suffering from urban decay or high unemployment.

For three days in April, the Ways and Means Oversight subcommittee listened to speech after speech, either heralding the IDBs or loudly condemning their use for go-go clubs, racquetball courts and McDonalds, where only a few jobs are created.

No one is faulting McDonalds or any other developer for using the smart financing. What businessman wouldn't take advantage of what amounts to be the cheapest financing on the market today.

Typically a state or local government issues an IDB and makes the proceeds available to a business at below-market interest rates. Everyone's a winner, says IDB supporters. The business gets a cheap loan, construction crews go to work and investors make somewhat less than on conventional bonds but don't have to pay taxes and the local government never loses a dime.

The losers, say the bond's denouncers, are local industry and taxpayers.

"The K-Mart thing is a good example," said Rep. Sam Gibbons (D-Fla.), an ardent critic of IDB abuses. "You are not really creating any more jobs. You are just transferring sales from one area of the community to another."

Gibbons and other members of the subcommittee will now decide whether any changes should be made in a 1978 law allowing the issuance of tax-exempt IDBs for up to $10 million. A study by the Congressional Budget Office estimates that for fiscal year 1990, the federal treasury lost $721 million in revenues because of IDBs. If no change is made in the law, a $1.5 billion loss is expected by 1995.

The subcommittee plans to meet in May to take some action. As a first step, the panel is sure to call for national reporting on IDB issues to get some idea of how many are sold annually. There is a strong sense among members that it should move to limit IDB abuses but also preserve their use for economically deprived areas.

Staffers on the Ways and Means

Committee are tussling around several ideas but offering no assurances that one is favored over another. The Committee has expressed a desire to make whatever changes it decides part of the first Reagan economic package.

One suggestion would call for specific language in the 1978 law limiting IDB use to industrial purposes only with an exception for commercial projects in economically deprived areas.

However, that would require reams of written words defining commercial, industrial and economically deprived. Similar changes for mortgage revenue bonds resulted last year in so many rules and guidelines that not a single bond has been issued under the new rules.

Kennedy is using to great advantage his position as ranking Democrat on the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee. He has defined a whole range of issues on which he thinks his party should oppose President Reagan and has won agreement from committee Democrats to vote against the administration on many of them.

This may not do much to bring about the defeat of the President's proposals in the Senate. But Kennedy is gathering valuable IOUs from Democrats across the country by leading the defense of the programs and positions that they hold dear.

Kennedy and his staff have carefully chosen the issues on which he will oppose the administration and the Senate's conservatives. They include military aid to Saudi Arabia and El Salvador, re-establishment of close ties with right-wing regimes such as Argentina that have less-than-glorious human-rights records, reduced federal support for health-care facilities and hospital cost containment, abolition of the Legal Services Corporation and cuts in spending on school lunches, education and fuel-cost assistance to the poor and the elderly.

The contrast in the approaches of Mondale and Kennedy could not have been more clearly shown than when they recently addressed a gathering of Democrats in Mondale's home state of Minnesota. The former vice president gave a safe speech in which he talked about the need to resolve the party before 1984 and to formulate new programs in light of the conservative shift in national opinion.

Kennedy prepares for 1984

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Most political observers expect a match race for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination between former Vice President Walter Mondale and Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

Mondale has decided to maintain a low profile during the coming months while he concentrates on building a strong campaign organization. He is adhering to the traditional political wisdom of not getting out in front too early.

Kennedy, however, has opted for a very high profile. He is attempting to position himself as the keeper of the Democratic faith in a party short of leaders and as the most outspoken opponent of the Reagan administration in the Republican-dominated Senate.

Kennedy is using to great advantage his position as ranking Democrat on the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee. He has defined a whole range of issues on which he thinks his party should oppose President Reagan and has won agreement from committee Democrats to vote against the administration on many of them.

Air sprayers against moth need permits

HARTFORD (UPI) — Connecticut residents who want to battle this spring's invasion of gypsy moth through aerial spraying must obtain permits from the Department of Environmental Protection, officials said Friday.

Deputy DEP Commissioner John Anderson said many people are seeking to spray their woodlands from the air to combat the biggest population of gypsy moths in recent years.

He said there are strict state requirements for all aerial spraying of pesticides and a permit must be obtained. No aerial applications can be made to a tract of land of less than 10 acres.

About 15 towns will have some aerial spraying within their borders over the next few days or weeks and the DEP is making every effort to ensure it will be done safely and effectively, Anderson said.

O'Neill signs bill on study

HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. William O'Neill Friday signed a bill which authorizes a committee of legislators, business and labor representatives to study the issue of plant relocations and layoffs.

The 11-member committee will be made up of four lawmakers, six business and labor representatives, and one member from the Conference of Municipalities.

The committee will review the impact of plant closings and layoffs and report to the Legislature by Feb. 15, 1982.

O'Neill also signed a bill which will allow the sale of wine as well as beer on college campuses starting Oct. 1.

The governor has signed 147 bills and vetoed one bill passed by the Legislature.

School suit accord due

HARTFORD (UPI) — A tentative out-of-court settlement has been reached in a class action suit filed against the state Education Department and its vocational-technical division.

The suit was filed last month in U.S. District Court in New Haven by the Spanish-American Coalition and 12 Bridgeport students. The suit claimed the state failed to comply with federal laws that guarantee Spanish-speaking persons equal opportunity for vocational education.

Lawyers for the plaintiffs and state officials Thursday agreed to allow at least an additional 15 Spanish-speaking or limited English proficiency students to enter ninth grade at Bridgeport's Bullard-Havens Regional Vocational-Technical School this fall after a summer preparatory program.

They also agreed to offer bilingual instruction and to hire several Hispanic Spanish-speaking counseling counselors. Bullard-Havens regular curriculum has been taught only in English, and only one of its four counselors was Spanish-speaking and of Portuguese descent.

The settlement must be approved by U.S. District Judge Eileen B. Burns, high-ranking Education Department officials and the coalition. If the settlement is not approved, the next court date is June 5.

Funeral service today for Coast Guard cadet

NEW LONDON (UPI) — Funeral services were scheduled for Saturday at the U.S. Coast Guard Academy chapel for Cadet Julia A. Babineau, 21, of Westwood, Mass., who died in a sailing accident on the Thames River.

Ms. Babineau was a third-year cadet and her father, William Babineau, is a former Coast Guard officer and an instructor at the academy.

Academy spokesman Ed Swift said Ms. Babineau died Wednesday after being struck on the head by a swinging boom while aboard a 38-foot sailboat.

"The vessel was brought right into the academy immediately," Swift said. "From the time of the accident to the time she got to the hospital there was cardiopulmonary resuscitation administered to her," he said.

Swift said Ms. Babineau was pronounced dead at the academy hospital about 20 minutes after the accident.

Six cadets had been sailing the academy-owned Marveta II when the accident occurred.

He said the cadets were operating the boat during a "semi-recreational" period, free time which was supposed to be used for physical education.

Ms. Babineau also leaves her mother, Mary Linda Babineau, and four brothers and sisters.

Burial will be Monday at the National Cemetery at Otis Air Force Base, Cape Cod, Mass.

'Tick, tick' says bomb but check says dryer

SOMERS (UPI) — Peter Boggio thought he had spotted "some big hunk of metal" stuck in bushes outside his restaurant Friday. But when he shoved it and heard "tick, tick, tick..." he gasped and rushed to get police.

The Stafford Springs state police barracks dispatched a bomb squad to Boggio's Somers Inn on Main Street. When the explosives expert arrived, he thought he had "lived" on his hands, a police spokesman said.

It turned out to be an old-fashioned upright hairdryer.

"It looked just like a regular rocket — with fins and all. It also had a timing device," said trooper Kenneth Startz of the State Police Emergency Division.

Boggio spotted the device just after 8 a.m. in front of his restaurant.

"It was sticking through shrubbery," he said. "It looked just like some big hunk of metal. But when I rolled it over I swear I heard ticking. Three times or so — tick, tick, tick."

Police spent "most of the morning and into the afternoon" gingerly inspecting the suspected rocket and trying to trace its origins, said state police spokesman John McLeod.

The cylindrical device with fins protruding from one end weighed about 30 pounds, measured 4 1/2 feet long by 10 inches wide, was hollow and made from "very heavy cardboard" covered with gray canvas, said McLeod.

It had "nothing so obvious" as a cord, McLeod chuckled.

It was labeled, Willet Jet Stream Co., a firm in San Francisco, Calif., but when police tried telephoning the company "at that hour" they got no answer.

"We dispatched a police officer (from San Francisco) to the company to wait for them to open up," said McLeod.

"Finally, the word came back that it was a hairdryer," said McLeod.

The firm reported "this wasn't the first time" their hair dryer, manufactured more than 20 years ago, had been the "brunt of a practical joke," said McLeod.

Boston Mayor unveils surprise school plan

BOSTON (UPI) — Mayor Kevin H. White's administration Friday unveiled a daring surprise strategy to keep the schools open through the academic year — at the courts have ordered — while risking city bankruptcy on the gamble that court-ordered tax abatements can be delayed or dealt with later.

The school system fiscal year budget expires Saturday. White circumvented the City Council he feuded 10 weeks with and unveiled the plan to enable the city's 64,000 students to remain in classrooms through June 15.

The school situation apparently solved, that put the matter of solving the tax abatement solution back to the Legislature or the City Council or the businesses owed the rebates.

Although city officials have steadfastly maintained there was no more money to bail out the schools, City Treasurer Lowell L. Richards announced, "The city has decided to attempt to fund school operations through the end of the school year out of existing cash and carry over the deficit" into fiscal 1982.

The announcement — in an affidavit to Superior Court Judge Thomas Morse who had ordered the schools stay open — described the city's cash situation as "extremely precarious" because of $23 million in tax abatements due July 1.

Hopeful of court relief on the abatements, Richards warned if the city must pay $30 in refunds to over-assessed Boston property owners as well as keep the School Department afloat, "the city will almost completely exhaust its cash supply by July 1."

Already obliged to keep the schools open, he said if the abatements aren't delayed, "the city would be unable to meet any payroll or carry out essential services after July 1" when the new fiscal year begins.

The Legislature has already rejected a bailout plan which would have allowed for city bonding to pay off the court-ordered tax abatements to businesses which had been over-

Judge blocks New Britain's school closing

HARTFORD (UPI) — A Superior Court judge issued an injunction Friday preventing the New Britain Board of Education from closing public schools for two days to offset a projected deficit.

The closings planned for next week would have affected classes for 8,200 students in the city's 10 elementary, three middle and two high schools.

Judge Douglas B. Wright issued the temporary injunction sought by state officials and ordered a hearing for June 8. Board officials said they would comply with the order.

The order headed off a confrontation between city and school board officials and angry parents who had asked state Board of Education officials to seek the restraining order.

The New Britain school board, at odds with the City Council over funding, voted Tuesday to close the schools, saying they would be breaking the law by ending the year with the $75,000 deficit.

The decision to cut the New Britain school year to less than the 180 days required by law brought furious reaction from parents and teachers.

Gerry Tullai, the head of a 4,000-member group, Citizens United for Better Education, said he was "delighted" by the injunction order because it will require the City Council to provide the money necessary to keep the schools open.

"It's the least we could have expected," said Tullai, who credited state board officials for going to court to head off the closings.

"They were really on top of it and could see through the shenanigans going on," said Tullai, who had met Thursday with Joseph R. Gordon, associate state education commissioner.

City Council members have agreed to keep track of how Connecticut will be affected by federal budget cuts.

"It's going to be a very difficult time," Gejdenson said.

Ratchford said the "bloody" details of the Reagan administration budget reductions will have to be worked out at the committee stage.

He sits on the education and labor panel, where Ratchford said about 40 percent of $36 billion in programs must be eliminated.

"Where is it going to come from? That's the real dilemma," said Ratchford, who added that budget talk is overshadowing every other issue at the federal level the way it is on a local scale.

"Just like up here money is dominating everything," he said. "It gets to be tedious. It's getting to be a one track record."

Masked duo robs bank

WATERBURY (UPI) — Two masked bandits Friday held up a savings and loan office and fired at least one shot before they escaped with about $5,000, police said.

One man carried a shotgun and the other a rifle, they invoked the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Waterbury branch office on Reiville Drive about 2 p.m.

Police said the men fired a warning shot that forced tellers to unlock an inside door that allowed the bandits to rifle cash drawers.

No one was injured as the robbers ran to a getaway car driven by a third man. The vehicle was found abandoned a short time later near the office.

Ratchford raps SS hike delay

HARTFORD (UPI) — Rep. William Ratchford, D-Conn., predicted Friday the decision by President Reagan to delay cost-of-living increases for Social Security recipients will prove to be his administration's "biggest political mistake."

Reagan announced Tuesday his plans to improve the first major reduction in Social Security benefits since the retirement program began 45 years ago. Unless approved, Reagan warned, the system could go broke.

"This will prove to be the biggest political mistake of the Reagan administration," Ratchford, a second term congressman, said at a Capitol news conference.

"I think it will be marked as the first major mistake politically that this administration has made," he said. Ratchford formerly was Connecticut's commissioner on aging.

U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Richard Schweiker said recipients will receive their 11.2 percent cost-of-living allowance on July 1 as scheduled, but the increase will be delayed three months next year.

Ratchford and Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., said the state's congressional delegation has agreed to meet twice each month on a formal

New town candidate favors CD program

By Pat Courtney Herald Reporter
HARTFORD — A political newcomer has announced his intention to seek the Democratic nomination for a seat on the Board of Directors. Gary Covey, 36, of 184 Oak St., said he first became interested in politics when he became a volunteer in the campaign to elect Jimmy Carter as president in 1976. Covey made a previous attempt at attaining public office, when he sought the Democratic nomination for Town Council in Windsor in 1979. He was defeated in caucus.

Bolton firm planning to move to Andover

BOLTON — The town will be losing one of its big tax payers as of October, but not a large amount of revenue, as Scott Electronics, Inc., a firm which assembles electronic parts, is planning to move to Andover. The firm presently employs about 15 persons, William Bullak, a half-owner of the firm said Friday. The move to Andover, he said, is due to the firm's desire to expand since it anticipates a larger volume of work in the future. The firm assembles electronic parts for aircraft groups and various firms dealing in areas of photography, cabling, control systems and dust equipment, he said. The firm had been granted about a $200,000 grant for the project in Andover, a project just approved by Andover's Planning and Zoning Commission. In Andover, the firm will be the town's first light industry, and will be located on Route 4, about one mile east of the Bolton-Coventry town line. Bullak said the firm will own the land in Andover once the factory is completed. The firm presently leases its building on Howard Road, which it shares with Able Coil Co. Due to the leasing situation, the firm does not provide the town with slot of revenue. Tax Collector Elaine Potterton said Friday that the firm paid $165 in taxes last year, based on $6,000 worth of personal property. If the firm owned the building, she said, the revenue would be much greater, and their departure would then have more impact on the town's business revenues. Bullak said the firm will begin construction of the factory next week, and would be moving into Andover as soon as it is completed, which, at a rough estimate, will be sometime around October. The new plant will employ about 25 persons.

Two sought in slaying

ESSEX JUNCTION, Vt. (UPI) — Police searched for two men Friday night in the apparent murder of one unidentified girl and the assault of another girl at Essex Junction Recreation Field. Deputy State's Attorney Harold Eaton Jr. would not immediately release the names of the victims, but said they wanted to find the two men for questioning. Eaton would not confirm reports that the girls had suffered stab wounds. The injured girl was taken to Medical Center Hospital in Burlington where Eaton said she was undergoing treatment.

Stage set for Tuesday

All the preliminaries are out of the way and the stage is set for Tuesday's showdown with Windham as Manchester High boys' track team disposed of Fermi High, 128-36, and host Mill High, 110-44, in CCLL competition yesterday in West Hartford. Dave Chastensen was a double winner for the Silk Towners by sweeping the 100 and 200-meter dashes while Batch Wemmel took the long jump, Peter Murphy the 1,500-meter run, Peter Murphy the 800, Dave DeValve the 3,000-meter run, Fred Lea the shot put and Donald Hurst the 400-meter run. Knocking Cromwell high out of sole possession of first place, Bolton High girls' softball team registered a 4-1 upset win over the Panthers in COC play yesterday in Cromwell. The Panthers are now deadlocked with East Hampton for the top rung in the conference while the victory moves the Bulldogs to 8-4 for the season. Bolton scored single runs in the first and second innings and plated its final markers in the fourth. Tracy Kalkus, Kathy Groves and Ellen Godreau were the offensive stars for Bolton. Mary Manegazza was the winning hurler. Godreau in centerfield, Groves at shortstop and third baseman Darcy Grisel straddled defensively for the Bulldogs.

R Sox stop KC

BOSTON (UPI) — Carney Lansford lashed a bases-loaded single with two outs in the ninth inning Friday night to give the Boston Red Sox a 4-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals. With two outs, Carl Yastrzemski walked, scored and pitched to second by Jim Rice and Tony Perez walked to fill the bases. Lansford then lashed an 81-pitch off Rene Martin, 6-1, into right field. Mark Cleary, who came on in the sixth inning and hurled 3-2-3 innings of one hit relief, boosted his record to 3-0. Boston tied the score at 3-3 in the fifth on Dwight Evans' fourth homer, his eighth, and a solo shot by Carl Yastrzemski, his second. Kansas City grabbed a 2-0 lead in the second when Frank White hit his second homer of the year following a double by Jamie Quirk. They made it 3-0 in the fifth on a solo home run by Willie Aikens on his fourth.

Rangers 2, W Sox 1

CHICAGO (UPI) — Ferguson Jenkins and Steve Comer combined on a three-hitter and Al Oliver's sacrifice fly in the seventh inning snapped a 1-1 tie Friday night, lifting the Texas Rangers to a 2-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox. Jenkins, 2-2, struck out four and walked six in 7 1/3 innings before giving way to Comer, who recorded his fourth save of the season. The only hits Jenkins allowed were a homer by Carlton Fisk in the first, a single by Mike Squires in the fifth and a single by Tony Bernazard in the eighth.

Tigers 5, Angels 1

DETROIT (UPI) — Jack Morris pitched a six-hitter and rookie Rick Leach drove in two runs Friday night in leading the Detroit Tigers to a 5-1 victory over California which snapped the Angels' five-game winning streak. Morris struck out eight and survived four walks with the aid of two double plays in raising his record to 4-3. The Angels bunched two singles and Don Baylor's RBI double in the sixth inning around the fist of the Detroit double plays to score their run.

Brewers 3, A's 0

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Ben Oglivie rapped out two singles and a triple and drove in two runs Friday night, lifting the Milwaukee Brewers to a 3-0 victory over the Oakland A's. Brewers' starter Pete Vuckovich allowed five hits through seven innings and boosted his record to 3-2 with relief help from Jamie Eastery in the eighth and Rolfe Fingers in the ninth. Milwaukee had lost seven of its last eight games.

No-hitter follows one-hitter

Far from being discouraged when losing a one-hitter last week in the International Little League, when his mound opponent threw a no-hitter, Neil Archambault came back like a true champion this week. The brilliant Hartford Road Dairy Queen hurler had his name entered in the No-Hit, No-Run Club when he accomplished the feat against Amalbi's Contractors at Leber Field. Last week, Archambault struck out 16 Oiler batters but a wild pitch did him in and allowed the game's only run to score. Against the Queens, he struck out all 18 batters in his perfect game performance. This time he was the recipient of a 14 decision. Archambault and Hein are both veterans of Little League Play and were members of the International All-Star squad last summer in tournament play. Pfling has long dominated Little League play and the current season, only in its first full week, appears to have plenty of the same in store.

'Great feeling' Indians' Len Barker Pitches perfect game

CLEVELAND (UPI) — After spouting down the Toronto Blue Jays with the major league's first perfect game in 13 years, Cleveland's Len Barker tried to describe what it felt like being on baseball's summit. "It's a great feeling. I feel like I'm flying about 3,000 feet," said the 26-year-old right-hander Friday night after pitching the Indians to a 3-0 victory and notching baseball's second no-hitter in a week. "I really felt good tonight," said Barker, who threw 103 pitches against the Blue Jays, with 84 going for strikes. "I had a good fastball and I was able to get my curve ball over. This is the first time I have ever come this close and I just can't believe it."

"I had a couple of no-hitters in American Legion ball but nothing like this. I am not superstitious so I didn't do anything special in the dugout. I even step on the line when I go out to the pitcher's mound." Barker's no-hitter was the first by an Indians' pitcher since Dennis Eckersley stopped California, 1-0, on May 30, 1977 and came just five days after Charlie Lea of the Montreal Expos tossed a no-hitter against the San Francisco Giants in the National League. Using mostly fastballs in recording the second perfect game in Indians' history and the eighth in post-1900 major league regular season history, Barker had only one better come close to getting a hit. That came in the first inning when the leadoff batter, Alfredo Griffin, grounded one up the middle which Verzyer grabbed after ranging far to his right and barely nipped the speedy Blue Jays' shortstop at first base. Only schools serviced by the board are eligible. Tom Penders, who will head the speaking program Wednesday night at the Explorers' Top Off Hall of Fame banquet at the Marco Polo in East Hartford, is a "kid" brother of Jim Penders, East Catholic coach. # Three sentenced in kidnapping

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — Three New York men convicted on federal kidnapping and conspiracy charges have been given stiff prison sentences for their part in a case involving the abduction of two Middlebury youths. Sentenced in U.S. District Court Thursday were John McCollough, David Taylor and Charles Simmons, all alleged hit men from the Bronx, N.Y. All three also faced murder and attempted murder charges in the shooting death of John Senior, 20, and the wounding of his friend, Joseph Vilela, 22, last summer. Lester Bellin, who police said masterminded the execution plots to protect illegal operations, was to be sentenced Monday on kidnap and conspiracy charges. Authorities said McCollough hired the other two New York men to help carry out the execution plots. Judge Ellen B. Burns sentenced him to a maximum term of four consecutive life sentences, plus 10 years in prison for study by psychiatrists. She said she would reconsider the sentence after a 90-day examination requested by McCollough's attorney who claimed his client was suffering from mental disorders caused by his combat duty in Vietnam. Taylor and Simmons received two concurrent 40-year terms. Authorities said Bellin, 48, organized plots to kill two men and two women who threatened the cover he had created for confidence schemes and drug deals. Officials said Bellin posed as a wealthy advertising consultant while he rented the $325,000 Middlebury estate owned by Senior's family. Police said some of the plots were abandoned but Senior, who worked as a handyman on the estate, was kidnapped and shot to death. His body was found in New York's East River last Labor Day. Police said he had been shot three times in the chest after his hands had been tied behind his back.

Criminal law expert dies

PORTLAND, Maine (UPI) — State Supreme Court Justice Harry P. Glassman, Maine's leading authority on criminal law, died Friday at Maine Medical Center where he had been in critical condition since April 20. He was 53. Family members refused to allow the hospital to release details of the cause of death or of the funeral arrangements. A Maine Medical Center spokesman said Glassman died in the intensive care unit at 1:35 a.m. Friday. His wife, Portland lawyer Caroline Glassman, was the hospital. Gov. Joseph E. Brennan ordered state flags on all state buildings lowered to half-staff in mourning. "Harry Glassman was an attorney who represented the very best standards and performance of the legal profession," said Brennan, a former student of Glassman's at the University of Maine School of Law. "He was Maine's foremost legal scholar."

No room for Winfield with A's

NEW YORK (UPI) — Billy Martin loves to agitate. It's part of his make-up. Some of his statements are calculated, solely designed to get a rise out of the other guy and maybe stir him up. But other things he says he firmly believes.

Take his comment about Dave Winfield. "Forget his salary. He couldn't make our outfield."

On the face of it, that sounds utterly ridiculous. Winfield laughed when he heard about it. "I could say something about it, but I won't," he took the diplomatic way out.

It is even conceivable that a team like the eminently successful New York Yankees would sign Winfield to a $23 million contract and that if the Oakland A's had to, they couldn't find any place for him in their outfield? Who's kidding who?

Martin made some other remarks about Winfield's ability and admitted he was only agitating later on. But he stuck by his statement that Winfield, hitting .346 eight now on the Yankees, could not displace any of the A's three regular outfielders — left fielder Rickey Henderson, center fielder Dwayne Murphy and right fielder Tony Armas.

Personally, I'm sure if he were as fortunate enough to get a ballplayer like Winfield, Martin would make it his business of finding some way to use him even if it was only as a designated hitter. Cliff Johnson and Mitchell Page generally are platooning in that job now.

But Winfield is much more than just a designated hitter. Outside of maybe Montreal's Ellis Valentine, I don't know of any outfielder in the majors with a better arm and there aren't too many others who can outrun him or track down a ball much better.

Winfield isn't what you'd exactly call a liability with the bat either as he so amply demonstrated to Martin with a fence-rattling, RBI-producing 430-foot two base blast off the left-center field wall at Yankee Stadium in Tuesday night's game and again on Wednesday night with a scorching line double that was good for two runs. Thursday night, his sacrifice fly accounted for the Yankees' winning run.

Martin has his first place A's pumped up so high now, they can't do much wrong. He is a devout believer in building up his players with the press and there's nothing wrong with that, especially if they deliver as the A's have been doing. Sparky Anderson, Chuck Tanner, Tommy Lasorda and Ralph Houk all do a good job of beating the drums for their players, sometimes a little too much, but none of them are any better at it than Martin. He's the best.

Offensively, Armas, who hit 35 home runs and drove in 109 last year compared with Winfield's 20 and 87 at San Diego, is the most productive of Oakland's three outfielders at the moment with his 314 figure, 25 RBI and nine homers. When he heard Martin's comment about Winfield not being able to break into the A's outfield, he didn't really know what to say about his manager's statement.

"He knows better than anyone else about baseball," Armas allowed. "I can't say anything."

Murphy seemed a bit surprised at what Martin had said about Winfield. "I take that as a great compliment," said the A's consistently improving 26-year-old center fielder, who hit .274 last season and had 68 RBI and 13 homers, and so far this year is hitting .282 with 20 RBI and six home runs.

"Winfield is a real good ballplayer," Murphy added. "He can hurt you anytime. He had a lotta bloop hits the last time the Yankees played against us in Oakland but I'll take 'em."

Henderson, the 22-year-old speedster who broke Ty Cobb's American League record by stealing 100 bases last year while hitting .305, driving in 53 runs and contributing nine homers, is having himself another good year. He's hitting .292 and has 14 RBI and three homers along with 20 stolen bases. He didn't sacrifice fly accounted for the Yankees' winning run.

"If it was going to be a one-on-one situation between Winfield and me in left field, I don't think I'd be building up my players with the press and there's nothing wrong with that, especially if they deliver as the A's have been doing. Sparky Anderson, Chuck Tanner, Tommy Lasorda and Ralph Houk all do a good job of beating the drums for their players, sometimes a little too much, but think he has to become adjusted to the pitching here in the American League. Winfield's 21 RBI put him up among the leaders in that department, which Armas leads, but he keeps being asked about having only three home runs and he keeps answering, "Anyone who thinks I have to hit a home run every day to help the ball club has no idea what it's all about."

Scouts who chart the players on the major league level are about as objective as anybody you can find in baseball. One of them, Doc Foy, who works special assignments for the Milwaukee Brewers, his reaction to Martin's remark about Winfield not being able to make Oakland's outfield and he felt it was probably true.

"I can understand Billy saying it," he said. "I'm not downgrading Winfield's ability in the slightest degree, he's certainly one of the top 10 players in the game, but the way Billy's offense is set up, I don't see how Winfield could fit into his outfield."

"Henderson has to be the leadoff hitter because of his speed, his ability to get on base and because right handed pitchers don't bother him. With the kind of power Armas has, you certainly wouldn't replace him in the outfield with anybody and there aren't too many better center fielders than Murphy. He has shown he can hit and I think he'll generate more power as he keeps on playing."

"I like all three of Oakland's outfielders," Foy said. "I'm coming closer to winning again." "I don't know? Maybe as the DH, but Johnson is doing a good job in that capacity now. Or maybe Henderson could be the DH and in that way open up a spot for Winfield in the outfield. I don't think there's much chance of Winfield ever finding out, though. Not with the contract he has with the Yankees. And even if the A's had any chance of getting him, I don't think they would because they'd have to give up too much. Billy would never do that."

Winfield isn't upset over Martin's remarks about him. He believes controversy isn't all that bad.

"If it makes for more competition between Oakland and our club, that's good," says the even-dispositioned 29-year-old outfielder who has won four straight batting titles. "We didn't have much competition where I came from."

Whitworth pace-setter

PARAMUS, N.J. (UPI) — Kathy Whitworth, "the all-time leading money winner among women golfers, shot a scrambling 4-under-par 69 Friday to share the opening-round lead with three others in a $125,000 LPGA tournament.

Also in at 69 on a windy afternoon at the 6,151-yard Ridgewood Country Club were Janet Coles, Shelby Hamlin, with four consecutive birdies on the back nine, and Barbara Mooney.

Beth Daniel, the 1980 Player of the Year, had two birdie putts of 20 feet and another of 25 but suffered her only bogey of the day on No. 17 to fall one shot behind the leaders at 70.

Tied with Daniel were Dot Germain, Mary Dwyer and Betty Eisner.

Whitworth, winner of 80 LPGA events since 1959 and $558,368 in official prize money, putted it well to register eight birdies to go with four bogeys. She had two birdie putts of more than 20 feet and another 20-footer to save par on the fourth hole.

"I'm coming closer to winning again," said Whitworth, 31, a former government student who is president of the LPGA players' council. "I intend to do the same thing tomorrow — but my intentions don't always turn into reality."

Nancy Lopez-Melton, the leading money winner on the tour this year, had a 77 and Amy Alcott, winner of last week's tournament, opened with a 75.

hot with her putter, sinking putts of 20, 10, 60 and 30 feet among her six birdies.

Mooney, who celebrated her 38th birthday earlier this week, had all five of her birdies on the front nine, including a 15-foot putt on the second hole and a 20-footer on the ninth. Coming home, she said, "I seemed to leave the ball short of the hole on the last five holes."

Hamlin hit every green for the first time this year and was ecstatic following her fast finish which included a 23-foot birdie putt on the 17th hole.

"It makes me very happy this happened," said Hamlin, 31, a former government student who is president of the LPGA players' council. "I intend to do the same thing tomorrow — but my intentions don't always turn into reality."

If all those people get a chance to qualify, another list of drivers will get out on the track, including Dan Gurney, who has decided against making an attempt last Saturday but now has recorded an unofficial lap of 2:00 mph.

As the legal cobweb unraveled, it became obvious the suit was not simple. Davis said the case and its issues are widely misunderstood.

In an interview in his downtown hotel suite, Davis tried to clear a clouded picture of the long-delayed and much publicized trial involving the Oakland Raiders, NFL, Los Angeles Rams and Los Angeles Coliseum Commission, Raiders' owner Al Davis wanted a few points clarified.

On the surface, the case is simple. Davis wants to move his team to Los Angeles and the NFL won't let him, citing rule 4.3 of the league constitution which requires a three-fourths majority approval of other owners for such a move.

Davis says that's a gross violation of the Sherman Anti-trust Act. That's what has him fuming. And that's the issue that has made Davis refer to the NFL, of which he is a full-fledged member, as "they."

Those are uncharacteristic words from the trainer of Pleasant Colony, to say the least. Campo has boldly predicted victories before the Wood and the Kentucky Derby and the fast-talking "Pat Man" was right both times. Suddenly, the predictions have ceased.

"You want me to handicap the race? Campo asked Friday. "OK, Partes will win, Paristo is second, Bold Ego third and Highland Blade fourth."

Campo was kidding, of course, purposely omitting his own colt being scratched.

Track officials said no reason was given for the change, but the colt was expected to be scratched if the Pimlico track turned sloppy. The scratch freed jockey Angel Cordero to ride Flying Nashua. Cordero had been listed on both horses.

"I don't know what's gonna happen," said John Campo. "I don't get paid to think."

It certainly does.

Upset seen for Preakness

BALTIMORE (UPI) — An uncertainty hovers over Pimlico Race Course.

As Saturday's 108th edition of the $200,000-added Preakness Stakes draws near, an upset, a surprise of some nature, seems to be the one thing people are willing to predict.

According to logic, Pleasant Colony, Woodchopper and Partes merit the bulk of consideration to win the second round of racing's Triple Crown. Yet most of the experts who have called this aging track their office for a week can't seem to follow logic.

Bold Ego and Top Avenger, a pair of speed horses with questionable heart, have drawn much attention.

A Run, one of two Larry Barrera-trained colts, is fully recovered from a nasty fever attributed to "van sickness" and has the ability to pull off a shocker. Highland Blade, a Damascus colt who finished second to Pleasant Colony in the Wood Memorial, is well-rested and looking fit.

The field, however, was reduced to 13 Thursday with Pass the Tab being scratched.

Track officials said no reason was given for the change, but the colt was expected to be scratched if the Pimlico track turned sloppy.

The clinics, sponsored by the MCC Athletics Department, the MCC Community Services Division, and the Manchester Recreation Department, present young athletes with opportunities to improve and develop skills in many sports, including soccer, basketball, baseball, tennis and football for boys, and basketball, tennis, cheerleading and softball for girls.

Team play spiced latest Celtic win

BOSTON (UPI) — They did it as a team, relying on the contributions of all concerned. And, when it counted most, the Boston Celtics demonstrated that a combination of talent and togetherness can produce a champion.

The Celtics secured their 14th NBA title Thursday night by disposing of the Houston Rockets 102-91 in the sixth game of the championship series. It was their first title since 1976 and although there had been 13 previous crowns, the 11 players and coach were experiencing basketball's ultimate thrill for the first time.

Boston received a stellar playoff performance from MVP Cedric Maxwell, who had 90 points in the last four games. Larry Bird, who endured a shooting slump through most of the series, struck for 27 points in the finale including three key baskets in Game 6 to thwart a valiant Houston comeback.

"I just can't say enough about Larry," said guard Chris Ford. "Here he is in such a slump and yet, when the money was on the line, he came through. But he's been our money player all year."

There were stories about defense, about composure, about harmony. The Celtics again showed the basketball world that their unselfish style of play molded more than two decades ago is still in fashion. And still successful.

"We just kept our poise and showed what we were made of," said Bird. "There was a lot of pressure on us because everyone said we won the championship when we beat Philadelphia. But we had to work hard in this series, we stuck together and pulled through. We deserve it."

Everyone seemingly had a hand in the title, from the star to the 11th man. They talked about unity, about erasing the bitterness and acrimony that had clouded the team during the dark days just two years ago.

"I've always believed you do it as a team," said Ford. "This game was invented to be a team sport, five men working together. That's the way we play and that's why so many people in America like this team. Someone along the line, everyone contributed in some way, maybe not on the court, but in some way."

The championship ended another banner season for the Celtics, who for the second straight year had posted the NBA's best regular-season record. But after being eliminated in five games by Philadelphia last season, the Celtics naturally tense for Heard, who nevertheless parred Nos. 17 and 18 in the playoffs. "I had the shakes," he said. "I started on the 17th fairway when the lightning first appeared."

Heard's nervousness was understandable. In 1975 at the Western Open in Chicago, Heard and playing partners Lee Trevino and Bobby Nichols were waiting out a rain delay on the course, crouching under umbrellas, when lightning hit the ground near them, putting all three in the hospital.

Indy drivers anxious for track time today

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Drivers hoped for some track time Friday in advance of Saturday's qualification runs at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Three days last week saw a record number of cars run on the Speedway oval but weather closed the track for all but two days this week with the promise of a sun-filled day Saturday for the continuation of the qualifying process, every driver was expected to get some track time, as long as rain stayed away.

The track opened at 11:30 a.m. (EST), and Don Whittington was the first driver out in car No. 91. The skies were cloudy and the track had to be dried from an early morning rain.

Sun and temperatures in the 70s Young traded

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The San Diego Chargers announced Friday they have traded 10-year veteran defensive tackle Wilbur Young, the team's Most Valuable Lineman in 1979 to the Washington Redskins for offensive lineman Jeff Williams.

Williams, 28, has started 38 of the last 39 games for the Redskins as a guard and tackle since becoming a starter in 1978.

When the time trials start, Jim McElreath should be first in line, followed by four rookies — Steve Chassey, Jose Garcia, Patrick Bedard and Geoff Brabham. Eighth on the list is Bobby Unser, who has turned in an unofficial lap of 197.510 mph.

Two cars later, Wally Dallenbach is expected to qualify Mario Andretti's car, because Andretti will be racing in the Belgian Grand Prix. Dallenbach ran a 197.943 mph lap in practice Wednesday.

Further down the list is Gordon Johncock in car No. 10, which has turned an unofficial lap of 197.585 mph; Mike Mosely, who has the fastest unofficial lap ever by a stock block car of 197.455 mph; and Rick Meaux, who has the month's fastest unofficial lap of 200.312, turned in during practice Wednesday.

Among the group guaranteed a qualifying attempt, but not for pole position, is one-lap and four-lap record holder Tom Snow, who has a 1:05.05 min. in car No. 12.

If all those people get a chance to qualify, another list of drivers will get out on the track, including Dan Gurney, who has decided against making an attempt last Saturday but now has recorded an unofficial lap of 200 mph.

Stars hopeful

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — General Manager Lou Nanne says he hopes the home crowd will spur his Minnesota North Stars back to their earlier winning playoff style when the Stanley Cup finals move to the Met Center Sunday night for Game No. 3.

The New York Islanders, defending Stanley Cup champions, hold a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven series.

"We played much better in the second game," Nanne said. "But we've got to improve our power play. It had been very effective in the earlier three playoff series. We can't afford to let the Islanders off the hook when they take penalties."

Base fishermen, for example, are notorious for having several rods rigged at one time. Extra lures, usually half a dozen or more, are usually tossed onto the deck or floor and where they land, they quickly become tangled with jackets, boat mooring lines and other gear. Hire it's baby's first method of lure storage is to use a rod holder because you could step on one and impale your foot on a hook. Plus, at the end of the day, it's difficult to extricate tangled lures so they can be returned to a tackle box.

One solution to this problem is an empty three-pound coffee can. Fishing experts learned the trick from an inventive angler who has been making lure holders for fishing buddies. There are two types, each easy to make at home.

Dull any sharp edges on the lip of the can using a ball-peen hammer. For bass lures, measure the diameter of the post supporting the fishing seat and buy a hose clamp that will fit around the post. A car radiator hose clamp is fine. Make two slits in one side of the can an inch apart and halfway between top and bottom. Slip the clamp through these and attach the can to the seat post. Extra lures are hung on the rim of the can where they're out of the way and safe from enlargement. The capacity of the can is doubled by hanging lures inside and outside.

A second method is to mount the can in the center of a foot-square pine board using two flat-headed wood screws. The board provides a base to prevent the can from tipping over. Glue carpet to the bottom to deaden the sound.

Phyllis George keeps on smiling

The governor's lady

NEW YORK — Interviews can be a noble study in distance when the person being interviewed puts up an invisible armor-length wall and shrugs private views in vague, hazy perceptions. Phyllis George Brown is not like that. She oozes camaraderie and openness, her hypnotic eyes dash with merriment, her mouth a glorious smile even in repose.

Phyllis George Brown, wife of Kentucky Gov. John Y. Brown, the Kentucky Fried Chicken millionaire (estimated personal fortune of $35 million) and former Boston Celtics owner, is sitting in the Carliote Hotel, sipping tea with honey and giving revealing word pictures that tumble out one after another.

"My husband is not threatened by a full blossoming on my part but he falls it down in a boyish, stylish way. He tells people, 'I think she is a help,' but he means, oh, so much more."

"If you sneeze, you lose. I like to give snugs to open."

"I had so much before I married John, but John is my knight in shining armor."

"My husband is a self-made man. I am self-made too. Our lives parallel, kind of, although he is 15 years older than I am."

"For once in my life, I am not concentrating on Phyllis and Phyllis alone. My career was my survival, how I paid the rent. Now I can secure, really secure at home, and I can use my time and energy to help others. I used to think only of me."

The little confessions keep coming. They spill helter-skelter from this former Texas beauty queen who radiates a happiness and a glow that cannot be contained. Therefore, it is dissected. Even the way she is dressed announces joy. A bright red suit. Red streaks in her hair. Red lips. Red nails. The flamboyance matching her rate of mind.

Stay alert at the checkout counter

By MARTIN SLOANE

DEAR SUPERMARKET SHOPPER - I hope that your experience with the checkout counter is no place to doze.

The cashier was going through my coupons after ringing up all of my purchases. When she reached the coupon for frozen waffles, I mentioned that I was going to make a "double play" because I also had a refund form for the waffles.

She asked about the offer, and since I just happened to have the refund form with me, I handed it to her. As she reached out to take it, the cashier suddenly added 97 cents to my register tape.

At first we were puzzled because all of my groceries had already been bagged. Then she noticed that the refund form had two universal Product Codes stamped to it. The electronic scanner had read one of the UPC's on my refund form.

We laughed, and a correction was made. But it could have easily gone unnoticed.

I think that shoppers should be made aware of the fact that some of the electronic scanners are very sensitive. Any UPC symbol that comes within striking distance may wind up as an additional charge on your register tape.

DEAR JOYCE - Your experience is a good example of why the checkout counter is no place to doze.

More than $5,000 of your hard-earned money passes across the check-out counter each year. So, it pays to stay awake and keep track of every item that is added to your register tape. This remains true in stores that have switched to electronic scanners.

Shoppers redeeming the coupons should be especially watchful that the scanner does not record the coupon as a cash register suddenly added 97 cents to my register tape.

I hope that other companies will instruct their staff to give out refund fulfillment houses to accept proofs from smaller sizes whose weights total the required size.

Write to the following address to obtain the form required by this offer: Lifetime Save #130, P.O. Box 9788, St. Paul, Minn. 55117. Send for this refund form by June 15, 1981. (Clip 'n' file refunds.) (Week of May 10)

I would like to suggest that the companies allow us to put together our proofs of purchase until they equal the required amount. For instance, we

Well, the big action starts bright and early Monday morning because that's when the first of the Big Week to Remember. Kicking off the events will be our annual low-net Golf Tournament, which starts at 7:45 a.m. at the Twin Hills course.
