Death toll rises in storms' wake

By United Press International

National Guardsmen patrolled streets today from Minnesota to Ohio, where a barrage of tornadoes and thunderstorms damaged hundreds of homes, knocked out power to thousands and injured nearly 150 people. At least 13 deaths were blamed on the storms.

In vicarious weather assailing the nation's midsection during the weekend from the East Coast to the West, four people died in both Ohio and Texas, two in Illinois and Minnesota and one in Maryland. Two others were missing in Texas.

The Minnesota deaths included one man who died following Sunday's Twin Cities tornadoes and a man who was struck by lightning during a softball tournament at Long Prairie. Nine others were injured.

More than 80 people were injured in Minnesota and Ohio reported at least 60 people injured. Thousands of people were evacuated in widespread flooding in Texas, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio and Indiana, but most returned to their waterlogged homes Sunday.

Thunderstorms hovered over central Texas for the sixth day today, where weekend storms flooded rivers and creeks with 13 inches of rain, forcing the evacuation of 2,000 people.

Four out-of-state sightseers who ventured onto rocks protruding from the rain-swollen Pedernales River were swept away Sunday. The bodies of two were found in brush in the fast-moving river. Officials, fearing the worst, resumed their search for the two missing at daylight today.

In Minnesota and Ohio, national guardsmen protected storm-ravaged areas from looters and patrolled flooded streets in Joliet, Ill.

A tornado touched down in two Upper Michigan counties Sunday, knocking down trees in some lightly populated areas but causing no serious damage. Weekend rainstorms flooded the southwestern part of the state, prompting a brief evacuation of 100 families in Berrien County.

The Little Calumet River flooded northwestern Indiana, blocking most north-south roadways and interfering with a major route running to Chicago. Several families fled their homes.

Engineers from the National Guard checked structures along rivers and streams and stood by in case further evacuations were needed.

Five tornadoes swept through Minneapolis and St. Paul Sunday afternoon, flattening homes and cars and causing millions of dollars in damage in about 35 minutes. A 56-year-old Edina, Minn., man suffered a heart attack while trying to lift tree branches in his backyard. Scores of other people were injured.

More than 100,000 people in the Minneapolis and St. Paul areas lost power during the assault.

Authorities said they received numerous reports of looting in the areas struck by the tornadoes.

Hardest hit was suburban Roseville, where the tornado shattered windows, flipped cars and mangled signs at the HarMar Shopping Center.

As many as 50 homes were damaged or destroyed, and hundreds of trees were knocked down or uprooted, smashing nearby cars.

Charlotte Schwewker gathered her six-member family into one corner of their home and pulled a bunk mattress over them.

"We couldn't bear a thing but our cars were popping," she said. "Then we heard chandeliers crashing upstairs and we started getting water in the basement."

In the small central Ohio town of Cardington, more than 100 guardsmen and about 100 police patrolled the streets to protect damaged homes and businesses from looters.

Disaster duty

A National Guardsman reaches out to aid a man in chest-high water in Joliet, Ill., Sunday. The Illinois National Guard was called out following evacuation of a nine-square block area of the city flooded by torrential rains. The storm dumped 7.6 inches of rain on Joliet. At the height of the flooding more than six feet of water coursed through 20 percent of the city's streets. (UPI photo)

Residents oppose encounter club location

By Pat Courtney
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — A petition opposing the conversion of a Main St. house to an encounter club has been signed by 17 residents of the area, and the petition's circulators say they are not done yet.

The Herald reported last Friday that the first floor of 286-288 Main St. is being converted to house Close Encounters, a massage-parlor-turned-encounter club, now at 325

Main St. Mrs. Walter B. Quinn, 280 Main St., whose home is next door to the building said, "At least they won't open without someone protesting."

Mrs. Quinn, her son, Edwin L. Quinn and her daughter, Lucy Quinn, began circulating the petition last week after consulting attorneys. They plan to submit it, after more names are gathered, to the Board of Directors.

The owners of the encounter club, which is being forced to leave its present location because that block of Main St. is being demolished courtesy/encounter to make room for road improvements, say they are planning a July 1 opening date. Gerrold Stratton and Paul O'Bright bought the building last week and transferred title to JP Associates, the partnership which owns Close Encounters.

But according to Thomas O'Marra, zoning enforcement officer for Manchester, the opening is contingent upon the issuance of a certificate of zoning compliance, which the owners have not yet obtained.

Among the requirements for the certificate is that the business must have one parking space for every 250 square feet of interior space in the part of the house used for the business, O'Marra said. He added that he did not know at this time if the present parking space there, a two car garage and a driveway, would be adequate.

Having learned that work is already in progress to convert the first floor apartment to a business, O'Marra also said he had not issued a permit for alterations and additions to Stratton and O'Bright. He said he had visited the site once, but was unable to find either owner to question him.

Edwin Quinn said he voiced residents' concerns over the weekend to Mayor Stephen Penny, who advised him to speak with zoning department officials. Quinn said he is attempting to learn whether the business currently has enough parking space.

The petition states, in part, that the encounter club will "destroy the respectability of the neighborhood," "depreciate property values" and "by its unreasonable hours, create a disturbance," according to Mrs. Quinn.

For Board of Education

Fitzpatrick eyes candidacy

By Nancy Thompson
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER — Former director John J. Fitzpatrick is considering running for a seat on the Board of Education, a Democratic official said today.

Fitzpatrick joins Richard Dyer, head of the town's Human Relations Commission, and Susan Perkins as possible Democratic candidates for the Board of Education, according to Theodore Cummings, Democratic Town Committee chairman.

Cummings said that Dyer is "very definitely interested" in receiving the party nomination for the November school board election.

Dyer, an attorney with the firm of Squitiro and Phelan, is on vacation and could not be reached for comment.

Cummings said that Susan Perkins, and active member of Parent Teacher Association and a person who has been "very close to education issues in town for a number of years," is also seeking a nomination.

Two current Democratic members of the Board of Education, Chairman John Yavis and Secretary Eleanor Colman, have announced that they will not seek re-election to the board this fall.

One other seat on the board, currently held by Republican Robert Heavisesides, is up for election. Heavisesides is not decided whether he will run again.

Acting Republican Committee Chairman Curtis Smith said the party has several people interested in running for the board, but would not reveal names.

Michael Pohl, a senior at Manchester High School who announced in January that he would seek the Democratic nomination for school board candidate has withdrawn his name from consideration, according to Cummings.

Possible candidate Fitzpatrick was recently honored by the town Democratic organization for his service to the party. He served on the Town Building Committee and was elected to the Board of Directors in 1977, serving one term. He was also an officer of the Manchester Democratic Club.

Fitzpatrick, who was born in Ireland, is a graduate of St. James School and Manchester High School. He is a past Grand Knight of the Campbell Council of the Knights of Columbus.

Stripmine law upheld

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a major victory for government regulatory power, the Supreme Court today unanimously upheld the federal stripmining law which requires mined land be reclaimed.

The ruling was clearly on the side of federal power in a dispute that pitted government regulation of environmental abuses against the states' control of land use.

In two opinions by Justice Thurgood Marshall, the court held Congress had the power to pass a program of land use and land reclamation, even though such activities traditionally have been left to the state.

The rulings reversed lower court decisions in Virginia and Indiana invalidating provisions of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977.

Marshall wrote that the law's regulatory scheme "is reasonably related to the goals Congress sought to accomplish. The act's restrictions on the practices of mine operators all serve to control the environmental and other adverse effects of surface coal mining."

The court's ruling comes as the Reagan administration is retreating from enforcing surface mining regulations by phasing out most regional enforcement offices.

In another important ruling today, the court dealt a major defeat to prisoner rights advocates, ruling 5-4 that overcrowded state prisons may house two inmates in a cell designed for one.

The justices rejected arguments that "double-celling" of inmates is unlawful cruel and unusual punishment.

"The Constitution does not mandate comfortable prisons, and prisons which house persons convicted of serious crimes cannot be free of discomfort," Justice Lewis Powell wrote for the majority.

In other actions today, the high court:

—Ruled 9-0 the health care industry is not entitled to antitrust immunity, rejecting arguments Congress intended to give the industry an exemption to foster cooperation among hospitals to control costs.

—Unanimously ruled that a Georgia law that makes it a more serious criminal offense to abandon a child and leave the state than to abandon the child and stay in the state is not unconstitutional.

—In an 8-1 ruling, cleared the way for resumption of antitrust action against two of the nation's largest department store chains, but reduced the number of parties pursuing the case.

—Ordered Louisiana to refund approximately $600 million in revenue and interest it collected through an illegal tax on natural gas shipped through the state.

'Still not too late'

By United Press International
Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini told President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr today "it is still not too late" to repent for his wrongdoings, but crowds of the president's supporters rallied in his support. Tehran radio repeated warnings by the prosecutor-general that protesters would be challenged by the feared Hezbollah — God's party — militants, as in earlier demonstrations last week. But in central Tehran, crowds gathered near Tehran University in response to a call for nationwide rallies in support of the president, witnesses said. They said that for the first time Bani-Sadr's supporters included a large number of women wearing the chador, the ankle-length veil worn by the Moslem orthodox in Iran. Khomeini issued his "compromise offer" to Bani-Sadr as parliament resumed an open session but announced no immediate plans to debate impeachment of the president, as demanded by 120 of its 700 members. Addressing clergymen and visiting followers from Iran's southeastern Baluchistan-Sistan province, Khomeini said "I am sorry that they have dug their own graves," the Pars news agency reported. This appeared to be a clear reference to the moderates. "I did not expect it to happen this way," Khomeini said. "I now accept their repentance as Islam accepts repentance."

Suspect being held

LONDON (UPI) — The ex-Royal Marine charged with firing blank shots at Queen Elizabeth II was ordered held for 10 days today at a 3-minute court hearing during which he seemed slightly agitated. While the queen has refused to give up close contact with her subjects despite Saturday's incident, Scotland Yard is reviewing protection of the royal family with the wedding of Prince Charles to Lady Diana Spencer less than two months away. Police declined to discuss details of the security review. But British newspapers, without naming sources, unanimously reported the 56-year-old monarch has insisted on keeping a "high profile" in public appearances. Marcus Simon Sarjeant, 17, a tall, slender youth with dark hair who wore a black T-shirt and dirty blue jeans, stood before Magistrate Evelyn Russell in central London's Bow Street court for less than a minute. He carried a short, tartan-style overcoat and appeared only slightly agitated as a police officer led him firmly by the arm into custody. Detective Superintendent Charles Snape asked that Sarjeant be held in custody. There was no plea offered and no application for bail. Russell told Sarjeant he should apply for state legal aid before his next appearance in court June 24. The nation and millions of television viewers were startled Saturday when six blank shots were fired directly at the queen from about 100 feet away as she rode horseback in the Trooping of the Color ceremony near Buckingham Palace.

Rail shutdown due

CHICAGO (UPI) — Commuters enjoyed normal service from the area's mass transit today, but one railroad may shut down Tuesday — setting off a chain reaction with other commuter rails — if officials cannot agree on a method to keep them running. William Birkley, a spokesman for the bankrupt Milwaukee Railroad, Sunday said there would be normal service today on its commuter lines regardless of the outcome of appeals that kept the line running during the weekend. However, Birkley said, if nothing is worked out by the end of the business day, the railroad will discontinue service at 2:01 a.m. Tuesday.

News Briefing

Reagan to speak

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, fully respected from the attempt on his life, will meet reporters Tuesday at his first news conference in more than three months. The last presidential news conference was held March 6. Reagan was shot and seriously wounded on March 30 and plans for a once-a-month news conference were shelved during his convalescence. Reporters have been pressing the White House for a question-and-answer session with the president for weeks. On Sunday, as he left church with first lady Nancy Reagan, the president confirmed a news conference, widely rumored, was in the works. Asked about the Middle East, Reagan smiled and said, "We're going to have a press conference this week." Pressed about the Middle East, Reagan said, "I'll talk about these things at my news conference." Officials acknowledged the news conference would be held Tuesday afternoon.

Boy's body sought

FRASCATI, Italy (UPI) — Rescue workers, having lost their race against time to save a 5-year-old boy who fell into a well and became trapped 200 feet underground, today undertook the grim task of recovering his body. Late Sunday, engineers began testing the earth under a rescue shaft drilled during the week to determine the type of rock they would have to penetrate to reach the body of Alfredo Rampi. A commission of civil defense officials decided Sunday afternoon the boy's body would be retrieved by drilling the rescue shaft to the level where it is trapped and then digging horizontally into the well. Authorities issued an official declaration of presumed death Sunday after electronic sensing devices sent deep into the well shaft revealed no sign of life where the boy had been wedged in a 1-foot-wide space since Wednesday.

Nukes protested

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — A one-minute statement by President Reagan's daughter Patti Davis condemning nuclear power brought more than 18,000 people to their feet at the fourth annual Survival Sunday in Los Angeles, Calif., an anti-nuclear protest. She told the crowd, "We won't need nuclear power. There are other ways to turn on our lights and run our blow dryers. What we have to do is take the spirit here today and extend it to every day." Capitol Region Highlights

Joins race

HARTFORD — Rep. Thirman Milner, D-Hartford, has become the third announced Democrat to enter the mayoral race in Connecticut's capital city. Milner told supporters Saturday the time had come for a mayor "who will be willing to roll up his sleeves and join hands across this city." Milner has represented Hartford's seventh district for three years. He has joined Deputy Mayor Robert F. Ludgin and Johanna C. Murphy in the race. If elected, Milner would be Hartford's first black mayor. Mayor George Athanson, who has served as mayor for 10 years, hasn't said yet if he will seek re-election in 1982 but he is considered the favorite to win the endorsement of the city's Democratic Town Committee.

Tenants sue

VERNON — Four tenants of the Mountain View Apartment complex have filed a suit against their landlord over a heating surcharge they claim is unfair.

The landlord for the complex is Eliot Lassow Associates. The suit was filed by David Lear, Richard Fiddler and Marilyn Hitchcock. They want the landlord to repay the surcharge and not to take the surcharge from the security deposits of those who haven't paid. Three of the tenants were assessed for $241.62 for heating costs incurred by the landlord between July 1979 and March 1980. The fourth was allegedly charged $68.

The suit is the third filed involving J.D. Realty,

Seeking details

VERNON — George Russell, town planner, has suggested that the town obtain written answers to its questions concerning the way the town's application for a three-year $1.5 million federal Community Development Act grant was scored this year. He said the town should get definite written guidelines before it prepares next year's application. Vernon and the town of Windsor were passed by for the second year in a row on the grant applications. Russell said his office has found what appears to be inconsistent methods of review and scoring of applications by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Ratify contract

HARTFORD — About 260 employees of the Institute of Living have ratified a new contract, averting a strike that had been threatened for today at the private psychiatric hospital. The two-year contract providing wage increases and improvements in overtime and insurance benefits was ratified unanimously Sunday by members of District 113 of the New England Health Care Workers Union. The contract covers about 260 psychiatric aides, practical nurses and technicians who voted to af-

Relief planned

EAST HARTFORD — The state Department of Transportation intends to cut the noise problem for the some 20 to 25 residents living on Blinn and Summer streets. The noise comes from Interstate 84 and residents said it's like having a vacuum cleaner going in your house 24 hours a day. The state intends to cut the noise problem in half by building a wall barrier along the south side of the highway adjacent to the neighborhood. The $200,000 project would be 90 percent federal and 10 percent state fund. Plans will be presented by the state in conjunction with the Federal Highway Administration, tonight at 7:30 in the Town Hall.

Driver killed

EAST HARTFORD — James H. McLaughlin, 54, of Bigelow St., East Hartford, died Sunday when his car went out of control and struck a guard rail on Interstate 84, State Police said. McLaughlin was thrown from the vehicle. He was pronounced dead at St. Francis Hospital and Medical Center in Hartford at 7:22 p.m., police said.

New York Mayor Edward Koch speaks during official "State of Israel" parade in New York City Sunday. Koch draws roars from the crowd when he denounced Iraq's leader, Saddam Hussein, as a "certified madman bent on the destruction of the world."

Letter changes rally

NEW YORK (UPI) — A letter from Prime Minister Menachem Begin turned an annual "Salute to Israel" parade into a bid for American support in the expected U.N. vote on sanctions against Iraq for its destruction of a Iraqi nuclear installation. Cheers were raised when Israeli ambassador to the U.S., Ephraim Evron, read the personal letter Sunday from Begin to the 50,000 spectators lining a 25-block stretch of Manhattan's Fifth Avenue. The letter was addressed to "my American friends, Christians and Jews alike." In the U.N., the Arab nations also asked for American support. Speaking Sunday, Iraqi Foreign Minister Saddam Hammadi said he saw no reason why the United States should veto a resolution imposing sanctions against Iraq. No resolutions have yet been tabled and there is little prospect of a vote by the council until later in the week.

Arab diplomats used the weekend to work one and perhaps two resolutions censuring Israel for its attack on Iraq's nuclear plant. The United States has let it be known that it will veto any resolution that does more than condemn Israel for the raid, and that alone.

Begin says missiles next

JERUSALEM (UPI) — With the world still stunned by Israel's lightning raid on Iraq's nuclear reactor, Prime Minister Menachem Begin warned that the Syrian missiles in Lebanon could be next. Begin told an election campaign rally late Sunday that when U.S. Envoy Philip Habib arrives in Israel later this week, he will ask the American, "Are you removing the missiles or not? If you're not removing them, then we will." Army Radio quoted the prime minister as saying "Rafal" and "Yanush" — the nicknames of Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Rafael Eitan and the command of the northern fleet, Gen. Aigdor Ben-Gal — "are ready" for action. But the radio also said Begin told his audience there would not be a war with Syria over the missile issue. There was no elaboration.

On Haig's China talks

PEKING (UPI) — Secretary of State Alexander Haig discussed the Taiwan issue and Sino-American "defense matters" with top-ranking Chinese officials today, but both sides claimed a virtual news blackout on the extended discussions. Haig met with Foreign Minister Huang Hua for nearly twice the scheduled two hours to discuss matters that included Taiwan, but U.S. officials denied the two sides were dealocked on that issue. Haig also had an "exchange of views on defense matters" with Defense Minister Geng Biao, but senior U.S. officials declined to elaborate on what was discussed. Likely topics were the sale of U.S. technology for military purposes and the possible sale of U.S. offensive weapons. "The atmosphere was of course very friendly," a senior official said. "The atmospheres were good." The Chinese and Americans agreed not to release substantive details of Haig's talks, apparently to avoid jeopardizing the success of the secretary's meeting Tuesday with Vice Chairman Deng Xiaoping. Haig discussed international tension resulting from Soviet military moves Sunday with Huang and his second meeting with his Chinese counterpart today was designed to cover bilateral relations. The meeting ran over its scheduled two-hour length by one hour, 45 minutes, forcing Haig's aides to call off a planned visit to Peking's Forbidden City and rousing speculation the two sides crossed swords on Taiwan. Haig, in his only public comment during the day, said the reason the meeting was extended was that "we had much to discuss."

A U.S. official said there was "certainly no deadlock" during the meeting with Huang and that the meeting's length was "by no means because of differences between the two sides."

Haig's three-day visit is the first high-level, detailed discussion of the future of relations between the Chinese leadership and President Reagan's administration. The trip is aimed at upgrading security cooperation between China and the United States to counter what both sides perceive as a growing Soviet military challenge. But there appeared little room for compromise on the Taiwan question, at least in the public statements made by both sides in the days before Haig's arrival. China considers Taiwan part of its own territory and resents American military support for what it regards as a breakaway province. The official media is demanding that Washington sever its military links with Taiwan before China will enter into greater economic and military cooperation with the United States. But the Americans are not prepared, particularly with a conservative Republican president in the White House, to cast off Taiwan. The Reagan administration apparently is betting the Chinese will accept continued U.S. links with Taiwan despite their public statements to the contrary in exchange for greater U.S. military and economic assistance.

News blackout in effect

Opponents will fight condominium plans

By Paul Hendrie
Herald Reporter

MANCHESTER—A leading opponent of plans to build 98 condominium units near the Manchester Country Club said this morning that he expects a large turnout of fellow opponents at a Planning and Zoning Commission hearing tonight.

The MIP 14 company is seeking a zone change of the mostly residentially-zoned land to planned residence development, so the condominiums can be developed.

A public hearing on the condominium proposal is scheduled for 7:30 tonight at the Martin School. Commission members said at their regular meeting last week that they expect a large turnout and a long meeting tonight.

Attorney John LaBelle Sr. said the proposal to be considered is nearly identical to plans to develop 108 condominiums on the South Main Street property, which were successfully fought by area residents last fall.

"The objections to the plan are essentially the same," said LaBelle. "There would be sewer problems, traffic problems and use of the watershed against the comprehensive plan."

The PZC last October rejected that zone change application from the First Hartford Realty Corp. by a 3-2 vote.

Town Director of Planning and Economic Development Alan Lamson said last Friday that First Hartford's application was rejected because of concerns about the proximity of the land to the watershed and the water supply and concern that increased traffic in the area would aggravate traffic conditions on the roads north and south of the property.

Last fall's application was for a zone change to residential-M, which allows single and multifamily homes and duplexes, Lamson said. He said the current application is for a change to Planned Residence Development, which permits all multi-family dwellings.

A principal in MIP 14, the present applicant, is Neil Eitis, who is also a principal in First Hartford Realty Corp.

Although the PZC is not required to hear a zone change request similar to one heard less than a year ago, the waiting period is not mandatory," Lamson said. He said the PZC has opted to hear this request.

LaBelle said there is widespread opposition to the proposed development among its neighbors.

"Most all of the people in the area surrounding it oppose it," said LaBelle. "As far as I know, there should be a large turnout of people opposing it."

LaBelle declined to discuss strategy opponents of the project will use at tonight's meeting.

At last fall's meeting, both proponents and opponents of the condominiums called expert witnesses to argue the effects of the development.

LaBelle declined to predict any action the residents opposing the development might take if the zone change is approved.

MANCHESTER—Norman Hansen of 7 Lincoln St. hasn't been back to his homeland of Oslo, Norway for 58 years. So when he recently had an opportunity to talk with a visitor from that country it was like having a touch of home being brought to him.

Martha Frisland, who is in this country under the Students for Improving Relations Program, got together with Hansen through a friend and a school guidance counselor. Martha is a senior this year at Ellington High School.

Hansen was the subject of a story in the Manchester Herald 11 years ago, when his brother, Harry, came to this country and the two were reunited after 47 years.

Miss Frisland just happens to live in the same neighborhood in Oslo as several relatives of Hansens. She knows where the insurance company is where he worked as a young boy and knows exactly the route he took when he walked to and from school.

She's also familiar with the area where he lived. Incidentally the house in which he was born and grew up still stands and is in mint condition.

The church he went to was burned down, he was told.

modern home. She said meat is very expensive in Norway but fish is inexpensive and so they eat a lot of it. She said that's one thing she misses here.

She was dressed in blue jeans and said that's the usual dress of teenagers in her country too. "I brought these with me but I'm going to buy some here to take back. They cost about $50 a pair at home," she said.

Martha speaks English fluently but said in her home in Norway, only Norwegian is spoken but all school children, from Grade 4 up, have to learn English.

Martha and Hansen exchanged a few words in Norwegian. And even though he has been away from his country for so long he still keeps up on the language and what's going on by subscribing to a lot of Norwegian magazines and papers.

As a token of friendship, Mrs. Hansen gave Martha a beautiful doll for which she had made all hand-crocheted clothes.

The Hansens and Martha parted with the hope that when Martha returns to this country to go to college, that they can get together again for a chat about their mutual homeland.

Unemployed machinist finds new career

By Pat Courtney

MANCHESTER—A Manchester man who was one of 1,000 workers laid off by Pratt & Whitney Aircraft last month has found work in what may represent a growing trend in employment: temporary jobs for technically skilled workers.

Gaston Pelletier, 25, began work last week at Gerber Garment Co. in Vernon as an employee of Tech-Aid, a firm which specializes in matching the temporary employment needs of local industry with unemployed workers with the needed skills.

Pelletier, a vertical turret lathe operator met a representative of Tech-Aid at a "job fair" sponsored by the state at the airport after the layoffs were announced.

A spokesman for Tech Aid said the Newton, Mass.-based firm became involved with Pratt & Whitney several months ago, when the first round of layoffs this year took place. Peter Byrne, contracts manager for Tech Aid, said "we called Pratt's personnel department and asked them to send us people's resumes. Even if we couldn't place everybody, we thought we could at least talk to them, tell them what we knew about finding jobs in their area."

Byrne estimates his firm has interviewed several hundred workers from Pratt & Whitney, and has been able to place about one eighth of them.

Offer awaited to end strike

By Paul Hendrie

MANCHESTER—An official for Teamsters Local 1035 said this morning that the union is waiting for the beer distributors to make a counter offer that would end the labor dispute that has halted all beer deliveries in Hartford and Tolland counties.

No new negotiating sessions have been scheduled.

Local 1035 president John Hollis said Friday that the union filed unfair labor practice charges with the National Labor Relations Board Friday afternoon, charging the distributors with unfairly locking workers out while continuing to allow customers to pick up beer and with improperly using non-union warehouse workers to serve those customers.

"I really feel this is a major violation of the National Labor Relations Act," said Hollis.

Union and company negotiators met last Thursday, when they agreed to a "cooling off period" suggested by the federal mediator. Although no new talks are scheduled, Hollis said Sunday, "I'm pretty confident we'll hear from them (the companies) Monday."

Susca said the next move is up to the companies.

"As I say, we're waiting to hear from the companies," said Susca. "We're waiting for the companies to make a counter proposal."

Area package stores, surveyed last week, said their beer supplies should last between two days and three weeks.

But most package store owners contacted said they would cross the picket lines to pick up their beer, if they ran out of supplies. Spokesmen for two of the distributors involved said Friday that a large number of

The drivers struck Hartford Distributors, a Manchester company, Wednesday morning. The other four firms in the Hartford Beer Distributors Association suspended their deliveries and warehouse work Thursday.

Some 230 delivery drivers are now off the job.

A more serious problem appears to be what to do with empty bottles, usually picked up by the distributors. Grace Neme, executive director of the Connecticut Food Stores Association, said the supermarkets and small stores represented by the group already have more empties than they can handle.

She said the supermarket chains, which usually take in more than a million empty bottles a week, are not willing to cross Teamsters' picket lines to return the bottles.

Besides Hartford Distributors, the distributors involved in the labor dispute are: Forham of Hartford, Rogo of East Hartford, B. Vetrano of Bristol, and Franklin of South Windsor.

Hartford Distributors, which markets Anheuser-Busch products, is Greater Hartford's largest beer distribution company.

Rain postpones derby

MANCHESTER—The fifth annual Soap Box Derby, sponsored by Local 1579 of the International Association of Firefighters of the Town of Manchester Fire Department will be run June 28.

The annual race, scheduled to be run yesterday, was postponed because of rain.

Robert Barker, derby director, said the race will take place on Brookfield Street near Manchester High School beginning at 11 a.m. on June 28.

Barker said all the cars entered in the race will be impounded for the two week period and "kept under lock and key so they won't have to be re-inspected."

"We had a lot of disappointed kids here today," Barker said Sunday. "But hopefully we will have good weather in two weeks."

A total of 48 entrants was scheduled to compete in the race.

New summer course to enrich students

MANCHESTER—The Manchester Board of Education offers a summer program of courses and activities to enrich the background provided by the regular school program.

Mail registration for the programs will continue through July 5. Registration will also take place in person on July 8 and 9 at Iling Junior High School, from 9 a.m. to noon.

Two courses will be offered for students in grades three through six to keep reading and math skills polished. Reading Maintenance and Math Maintenance are designed to keep skills sharp and make the subject fun through small group meetings.

Preparation for the Scholastic Achievement Tests in both English and Math will be offered for grades 10 to 12. The courses review the skills tested on the SATs and include practice on sample tests.

Activities aimed at grades four through eight include Art for Fun, with frequent projects in different media each day, Beginning Cooking, Nature Crafts, including rock people, sand casting, leaf printing, sun prints and more.

Students in grades four through nine may participate in a theatre workshop. The class will write and produce a short play, including work in all facets of the theatre.

Activities open to adults as well as elementary school students include Collecting Baseball Cards for Fun and Profit (for fourth grade and older), Creative Writing Workshop (grade eight and up), Sewing for Beginners (grade four and up), Sketching Outdoors (grade

GOP senators find Hatch can't be pushed

WASHINGTON — The heroes in the drama of government are sometimes damned by the press and public alone with the rascals. But the honorable men and women in public life deserve to be noticed.

Such a legislator is Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, a feisty lawyer, a former construction worker, a card-holding member of the AFL-CIO and an erstwhile bishop in the Mormon Church.

Though an unabashed conservative in this political philosophy, his sense of personal rectitude has made him just as tough on Republicans as Democrats when he suspects wrongdoing by government officials.

But apparently two Senate colleagues, Roger Jepsen and Charles Grassley, both Iowa Republicans, had the impression that Hatch belonged to the "go-along-to-get-along" crowd.

According to my sources, it took a heavy face-to-face confrontation in Hatch's office to instruct the two senators from Iowa that Hatch would not back off an investigation merely as a senatorial courtesy. Here's what happened:

Jack Anderson

As a power on the Senate Judiciary Committee, Hatch has been looking into the case of Jack Nard, a Pittsburgh contractor who was involved in a civil suit with Armour Co. A Judiciary Committee staff report concluded that a federal judge may have been pressured politically to rule against Nard, and that the contractor's complaint to the Justice Department was ignored.

Hatch received a staff recommendation that one of the witnesses at the Nard complaint be investigated for possible perjury. The witness was Ewan "Curly" Hultman, a former U.S. attorney from Iowa who directed the grand jury in the Nard case. Hultman is a political buddy of Jepsen and Grassley.

When they learned about the adverse staff recommendation, the two Iowa senators marched into Hatch's office to protest.

"All hell broke loose," a source told my associates Jack Mitchell and Indy Badhwar.

"Those two thought they could shout Orrin into dropping the case," a Hatch staffer reported, adding "Boy, were they loud!"

But Hatch refused to be moved by the angry entreaties of the two Iowans. He kept his temper, but informed Jepsen and Grassley firmly that his investigation into their pal Hultman would go forward.

Footnote: A spokesman for the Iowa senators insisted they weren't trying to pressure Hatch into dropping the investigation of Hultman, but simply wanted to inform him that his staff had done some "sloppy homework." The spokesman said the Iowans believe Hultman is an honest man who is being unjustly ministration is generally recognized as a failure," the paper stated. "Its basic approach — to stop drugs at the source — has not worked and cannot work."

The analysts recommended instead a six-point program that would, they claimed, save the government $200 million a year — and be more effective against the narcotics traffickers. The suggestions including giving back to the Customs Service responsibility for anti-smuggling efforts employing the Internal Revenue Service to attack illicit drug profits through the tax laws and using diplomatic pressure on nations that produce drugs or are transit points in the international traffic.

Dozens of narcotics experts have reportedly been urging the administration to simply abolish the DEA and return its functions to FBI, CIA, IRS and Customs. But high-level Justice Department officials inform me that there are no firm plans even to shake up the beleaguered drug agency.

Although DEA has had some spectacular successes in its covert operations and the seizure of millions of dollars' worth of narcotics, it has suffered recently from federal investigations, discrimination suits and poor morale.

Watch on waste: There are "cola" fanciers in Congress who are costing the taxpayers millions each year. This "cola" is not a soft drink, but COLA, an acronym for "cost-of-living allowance." To be fair to government employees stationed in such expensive locations as Alaska and Hawaii, Congress legislated cost-of-living allowances that supposedly bring their pay up to that of Washington, D.C. But unlike the produce drugs or are transit points in the international traffic.

An editorial Public blameless if measure fails

If current efforts to reinstate the death penalty by federal statute don't get off the ground, it won't be for lack of congressional opportunity and apparent public support.

Bills have been introduced in both the Senate and House Hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee are to resume Tuesday on the Senate measure sponsored by Sens. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C. and Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.

Polls have indicated a large majority of Americans favor the death penalty for capital crimes, according to Rep. Robert L. Livingston, R-La., sponsor of the latest of three measures in the House.

Thirty-seven states have rewritten their death penalty codes since the Supreme Court ruled in 1972 that the death law, as it was being applied then, constituted "cruel and unusual punishment" in violation of the Constitution.

As Livingston pointed out in a House speech, assassination attempts this spring on two leading world leaders — President Ronald Reagan and Pope John Paul II — have spurred demands for stern remedies.

Urging prompt committee hearings, Livingston declared that "terrorism and violent crime" are ravaging every nation and people and "sounding loudly on our own shores."

The nation screams with violent crime, he declared. "More than 400 Americans are murdered every week." The lawmaker cited three points to illustrate public support:

(1) A November 1980 Los Angeles Times poll found 62 percent approving the death penalty. (2) Newsweek found in a February 1981 survey that 65 and 68 percent of the citizens nationwide favored death sentences. (3) A Baton Rouge Morning Advocate poll in January 1980 found 70.7 percent of statewide-registered voters were in favor.

To arguments that evidence on

"That's more like it, everybody knows you can't solve problems by simply THROWING money at them."

Manchester Spotlight Anger was a separate item

Manchester mayor Stephen Penny's rising anger was itself a separate item on the agenda at the Tuesday night Board of Directors meeting, as he chose the section of the meeting reserved for electors' comments to lash out at Holl and Harrison streets residents, who are opposing a proposal by Multi-Circuits, Inc. to expand in their neighborhood.

Penny seemed genuinely offended, in a personal sense, at the decision of the residents to circulate a petition to force a referendum on the matter before the Board of Directors had had a chance to deliberate over it. He acknowledged that he had never seen or heard of residents doing so in recent Manchester history.

There probably isn't a politician alive who hasn't experienced frustration when faced with organized opposition from citizens. Some fear their potential power, others are disheartened by the citizens' apparent alienation from the electoral process.

In his way, the mayor was sharply reminiscent of a young Nicholas Carbone, the former deputy mayor of Hartford, trying to grapple with the ascendant neighborhood block clubs of Hartford in the mid to late 1970s.

The argument is not being made, either, that elected officials need a strategy or some artifice for interacting with community groups. What is needed, however, is a thorough understanding of why the groups form and what it says about the needs that government and elected officials are and are not filling.

Activist community groups form because their members share a belief that they must take action because others have not. Chief among those whom they typically see as villains are elected political leaders, because politicians rarely, if ever, can please all the people all the time.

Pat Courtney
Herald reporter

The time a politician spends working on problems in the west end of town is time he or she isn't spending in the north end, shaking hands and discussing concerns, and vice versa. Over time the absences can add up, and if they are remembered when the neighborhood faces a problem, the situation can be ripe for formation of a grass roots group. There are no ward healers anymore.

Elected officials in many of this country's larger cities have found themselves under siege over the past decade from community groups. Neighborhood block organizations aren't a new idea, but the perceived need for them was heightened by the worsening economic and social climate of the 1970s in cities everywhere.

Some towns, like Manchester, are just now seeing the emergence of strong-willed neighborhood groups which refuse to defer to the requests of elected officials and refuse to be polite when asking for what they think is their due.

Elected officials have their most frustrating moments when they must work with groups which do not have all their facts straight, or represent such a small area or narrow interest group that the effort seems the antithesis of what an elected leader should do.

But some community groups do have their facts straight, and in addition some have "right" on their side. The mark of a good leader is distinguishing between the groups, and working with them accordingly.

The Concerned Citizens of Manchester came first, and now the Holl and Hollister street residents have tested the political and emotional stamina of elected officials here recently. Others are sure to form around other issues.

Given that the phenomena is not going to go away, the mayor and other elected officials would do well to begin thinking of more constructive ways of dealing with them than engaging in shouting matches.

Political careers could hinge on it.

Governor not saying he'll run

HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. William O'Neill says he plans to help candidates in this year's local elections before launching any effort to win a full term as governor in next year's state election.

A published report said Sunday that O'Neill would announce at a Democratic outing in Wallingford that a committee was being established to prepare his 1982 campaign.

But O'Neill showed up at the outing in Mountainside Park and quickly denied that any committee was in the works and remained non-committal about whether he would seek election in his own right.

"My intention between now and November is to work for local candidates running for mayor and selectman across the state of Connecticut," he said. "There is nothing to forming a committee at this time... nothing whatsoever."

The Hartford Courier reported in its Sunday editions that the campaign committee would send a strong signal to Democrats who have been uneasy about O'Neill's uncertain political plans.

O'Neill has been non-committal about seeking the governor's office that he assumed when Ella Grasso resigned in December. Mrs. Grasso died of cancer in February.

O'Neill indicated last week that he wasn't sure yet that he liked being governor.

The Courier said O'Neill's political associates have told him his reluctance to commit himself might erode his support, especially since Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., was considering running for governor.

Moffett has said he was considering either running for the Senate or for the governor's chair and is opening a campaign office Monday in Farmington, where his supporters will begin examining where his best chances lay.

Special reunion Banker heads Trinity

HARTFORD (UPI) — A former president and chief executive officer of Connecticut's largest bank Monday in Farmington, where his supporters will begin examining where his best chances lay.

James English Jr., now vice president of finance and planning at the four-year liberal arts college, will become its 16th president on July 1 when he succeeds Theodore D. Lockwood, who is retiring after 13 years as president.

English joined Trinity in 1977 after 28 years with the Connecticut Bank and Trust Co., where he was named president in 1966, chief executive officer in 1980 and chairman of the board in 1970.

Dr. George W. B. Starke, chairman of Trinity's trustees, praised English's "unusual combination of talent and experience in the business and education sectors."

A search committee of trustees, faculty and students was named in February to screen candidates for a new president after Lockwood announced he planned to retire by January 1982.

The committee reviewed 119 applications and narrowed the search to six finalists.

English said Trinity's location in a "major, progressive city gives us a wonderful opportunity to relate the problems and perceptions associated with the liberal arts and sciences to the perplexities of life in today's world."

English, a West Hartford resident, was graduated from Yale University and earned a master's degree in English from Cambridge University. He also earned a law degree from the University of Connecticut Law School.

Republican chief says he'll keep 'hands off'

HARTFORD (UPI) — Republican State Chairman Ralph Capelatro says he'll maintain a "hands-off" policy in next year's GOP state ticket, leaving the choices to be made by the party convention and not in a "back-room deal."

Capelatro said there had been "great resentment" in 1978 when convention delegates felt they were forced to "rubber stamp" the candidates who had been chosen by the party leadership.

"The perception of Republicans at the (1978) state convention was that they came to rubber stamp someone else's choices," Capelatro said. "I don't want to see that happen again at next year's conference."

BRIDGEPORT (UPI) — The New York Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church has rejected a resolution opposing a resolution of the draft and pacifist draft registrants.

"I'm not sure I'm in a position to speak on this," said Rev. Randy Day of Jamaica, N.Y., who proposed the resolution Saturday, said he was surprised it was rejected.

because it created resentment in the grass roots. The GOP was swamped in statewide elections two years ago.

Capelatro also predicted Gov. William O'Neill will be the Democratic candidate for governor in 1982 and "anyone who thinks he'll be easy to defeat is deluding himself."

Capelatro also predicted a Republican would win this fall's mayoral race in Bridgeport, with Northeast Utilities has, for many years, taken a leadership role in energy conservation.

For example, a year before the oil embargo of 1973-74, NU established an Energy Management Services Department to advise and assist customers in conserving energy. Since 1978, we've sponsored National Energy Watch, a broad energy conservation program, throughout our service territory. Further, since 1979, we've been the largest contributor to, and participant in, CONN-SAVE—a highly successful nonprofit home energy audit program to help Connecticut residents cut energy bills. And this January, a companion program (Mass-Save) was introduced in Massachusetts.

All of these continuing activities are prologue to the Northeast Utilities Conservation Program for the 1980s and 1990s. Or, more simply, NU 80s/90s.

Grumman buses fixed; due to return Tuesday

HARTFORD (UPI) — Connecticut Transit will put the first of 183 Grumman Flexible buses back on the streets Tuesday following repairs to correct structural and mechanical defects.

The buses were pulled from service to 2,600 buses it has sold nationwide since the model was introduced 30 months ago. About 10 percent of the buses which cost $90,000 each have been fixed so far.

The repairs nationwide are estimated to cost $7 million.

Connecticut Transit — unlike other cities — avoided cutting back service by using its older buses when the new Grumman were pulled for repairs.

Spaulding said as the 183 Grumman buses are returned to the streets — at the rate of about one or two buses a day — the remaining 97 will be fixed for the work.

Developer named

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — The House Co. of Columbia, Md., has been selected as the preferred developer for a $70 million office and store complex proposed for downtown New Haven.

Rouse was given exclusive rights to negotiate development of more than 400,000 square feet of commercial and retail space in the project that will possibly include two new department stores.

Mayor Biagio DiLieto said Sunday.

Rouse has developed a number of major urban retail complexes, including Faneuil Hall in Boston, Harborplace in Baltimore and Market East in Philadelphia.

Game of skills can save lives

HARTFORD (UPI) — Robert Santangelo, Connecticut's motorcycle safety coordinator, plays a game with his students called "What If?" He says the skills they learn could save their lives.

The aim is to build up a catalogue of automatic reactions to every conceivable threat on the road.

Santangelo, who became the state's first motorcycle safety coordinator in October 1980, says bikers have to learn not to freeze when faced with the unexpected.

A recent University of Southern California report found many cyclists involved in accidents did nothing when they saw impending danger.

"They weren't trained to do anything," said Santangelo. "If somewhere in the middle of action you have to think about what to do..."

"What If?" is played at nine rider education courses sponsored by towns or schools. The 20-hour course costs $30 and includes 12 hours of riding instruction on motorcycles loaned by local dealers.

Students, who range in age from teens to early 70s, are taught to ride much in the same way one is taught to ride a horse — first they walk the motorcycle. Then they learn how to start it, how to find the friction point on the clutch, how to get it moving, how to shift gears, and how to make turns.

Expansion of the program comes as the number of motorcycles on the road and the number of fatalities increase. There were 78 motorcycle deaths in 1978. The number increased to 91 in 1979 and to 115 last year.

Santangelo said the fatalities have far outpaced the increase in the number of motorcycle registrations, which rose from 62,000 in 1976 to 76,000 last year. There are 28,000 licensed motorcyclists in Connecticut.

Some people say there are just more motorcycles on the road. Others blame the deaths on removal of the helmet law. Alcohol also plays a part, some say, as it does in other motor vehicle deaths.

Santangelo, who has been riding more than half of his nearly 34 years, believes all of the factors play a part.

"Young people are over-represented in fatalities," he

Group lobbies

WEST HARTFORD (UPI) — A group that fears Connecticut is in danger of losing environmental gains made in the last decade has formed a political committee to push pro-environment candidates for the Legislature.

Spokeswoman Holly Schader said the group had raised $1,500 toward the effort of federal budget cuts and support candidates for 1982 who are sympathetic to environmental concerns.

About 40 people turned out for Saturday's organizational meeting of the group, which is known as ELECT — Environmentalists to Elect Legislators in Connecticut.

Group member Beth Weinstein said Connecticut should be prepared for the effect of federal budget cuts and the new policy makers in Washington.

"We are at risk of losing a lot of the environmental gains we have made in the last decade," she said. "We feel we must guard what we have here in the state of Connecticut" by electing pro-environment legislators, Ms. Weinstein said.

The Past As Prologue

As we see it, a responsible utility not only produces energy, it encourages its conservation as well. For that reason, Northeast Utilities has, for many years, taken a leadership role in energy conservation.

'Iron Triangle' costs billions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The "Iron Triangle" alliance of defense contractors, Congress and the Pentagon costs the taxpayer billions of dollars directly — and perhaps billions more in unseen costs, a study by the Council on Economic Priorities said today.

The study said America's biggest defense contractors use their connections to get huge shares of the defense pie, said Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio.

The study examined eight companies that received 25 percent of all Defense Department contracts from 1979-1979 and 36 percent of all NASA contracts in the same period.

Based on preliminary Defense Contract Audit Agency reports obtained under the Freedom of Information Act, the study said five of the contractors spent nearly $16.8 million on "government relations," including lobbying, in 1974 and 1975. More than $15.8 million of that was for lobbying to get government contracts, the report said.

Many of the expenditures were questioned by defense auditors, the report said. After negotiations between the contractors and Pentagon, the figures on questioned costs were scaled down sharply, but that only reflects the government's inability to provide a suitable cost allowability standard, the report said.

The study also found that many of the contractors use their connections to get huge shares of the defense pie, said Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio.

Marijuana charges lodged

MANCHESTER — Local detectives arrested Joanne M. Boulton, 49, of 53 Mill St. Friday and charged her with possession of marijuana after they found 37 marijuana plants at that address.

Vernon police had complained to town detectives that they had discovered the plants while investigating Ronald St. Laurent at the same address. Police said the investigation had been requested by the Tolland County State Attorney's Office.

Saturday, police arrested Mark Chamberlain, 27, of Manchester and charged him with two counts of second-degree larceny, one count of third-degree larceny and one count of issuing bad checks. Bond for Chamberlain was set at $1,500.

Police also arrested three youths Saturday morning after a fight outside the Hartford Road Cafe, at 278 Hartford Road in which an Ellington man was assaulted and treated at Manchester Memorial Hospital.

Police said Paul Clements, 36, of Bette Drive, kicked Christie Johns, 25, of Ellington in the back of the legs and sent him to the ground outside the cafe. Clements was charged with third-degree assault.

Witnesses told police that Glenn Pelekin, 19, of Tolland, kicked another man in the chest as he tried to help Johns. He was also charged with third-degree assault.

Elsewhere, police said $750 in equipment and gasoline was taken June 8 in a burglary at the Ameron Pipelining Division at 266 Center St. Police reported in chains worth about $600 were taken from a storage trailer, and about 50 gallons of gasoline worth $75 were siphoned from two trucks. A $75 chlorine drum was also stolen, police said.

Budget suit dismissed

COVENTRY — The case brought against the town of Coventry by eight citizens seeking an injunction that would prevent the town council from changing the town budget from that one adopted May 11 at the town meeting was dismissed this morning by Judge Eugene Kelley after the plaintiffs failed to show cause for a court hearing.

Council vice chairman Roy McLain said this morning that Kelley "released the town of Coventry from an order to show cause on an alleged misuse of power in the management of the annual town budget." He added that the court action happened after the plaintiffs failed to show.

"Since no date to reappear was set," he said, "I assume that this particular action is terminated."

The residents, led by former state Rep. Robert Walsh, filed suit June 2 through an attorney to prevent the town council from setting the mill rate at anything other than 72.5, as was approved under questionable circumstances at a town meeting May 8.

The council revoked the town meeting action May 11, which sent the vote on the budget to the polls, where it was defeated by a 2-1 margin.

Both sides ready to bargain

NEW YORK (UPI) — Despite the loud silence of that first weekend without major-league baseball, negotiators refused to predict when they would resume playing catch with the issues.

Don Fehr, an attorney for the Players Association, said his side would be ready this afternoon and was waiting for Federal mediator Kenneth Moffett to contact management.

Ray Grady, chief negotiator for the owners, said his side was ready to bargain at any time.

So there they were, as divided as ever while the nation turned renewed attention to picnics, pool and minor league baseball.

Meanwhile, the White House said President Reagan plans no intervention in the strike as suggested by Baltimore Orioles' owner Edward Bennett Williams.

"The president has no intention of getting involved in the dispute," White House spokesman Robert Gray said Sunday. "There were also suggestions that he get involved in the cool strike, but he didn't. The president hopes (the players' strike) can be settled without his action."

Negotiators were wondering how it could be settled without the participation of Marvin Miller. The executive director of the Players Association absented himself from the most recent talks but Fehr denied Miller purposely was impeding the discussions.

"Not now nor has it ever been Marvin making the decisions," Fehr said. "It's always been the players."

Reagan won't get involved

They're not scattered to the four winds like they were during the season. Part of the reason Marvin stepped out was because a significant number of player reps had been getting involved in the dispute.

"We don't pay any benefits to the players," the attorney said. "We couldn't possibly do it. Even if we tried to fund it 25 percent, that would be $1 million a week. The players knew that the strike was coming, and they have taken it into consideration and have been husbanding their funds."

While both sides agree on some level of compensation, the players refused to predict how long the strike will last, but the 26 club owners appear to be in better shape than the players if the walkout lasts more than several days.

Whereas the owners have $50 million in strike insurance, which begins June 24, and another $10 to $15 million in emergency strike funds, the players' union is paying no benefits to its members.

Fehr said the players stand to lose considerable sums.

"We don't pay any benefits to the players," the attorney said. "We couldn't possibly do it. Even if we tried to fund it 25 percent, that would be $1 million a week. The players knew that the strike was coming, and they have taken it into consideration and have been husbanding their funds."

Next fight for Hagler in Italy

BOSTON (UPI) — Marvin Hagler's next stop on the middleweight circuit will be San Remo, Italy, where officials apprehended some swindlers from the town-owned casinos and came up with some extra cash to promote a title fight.

While Hagler likely will make another $400,000 or so in that September bout against probable foe Mustafa Hambo, his biggest bonanzas are further down the road. Welterweight title Sugar Ray Leonard and Tommy "Hit Man" Hearns may both eventually slide up to the middleweight division, setting up more megabuck paydays for themselves and the first for Hagler, the only undisputed champ in the sport.

Hagler capitalized on the unexpected development, sending punishing jabs to the injured area whenever possible. He also opened two cuts of his own and was unscathed when the bout ended.

"He never hit me, he never touched me," claimed Antuofermo. "I had more than enough to go on."

Referee Dave Paarl agreed, pointing out it was Antuofermo's corner which stopped the fight.

Like Atlanta, "We have got to make up for the deficit for the bad (Three Rivers Stadium) debt," Caliguri said.

Pittsburgh's cost on the stadium indebtedness has been $750,000 this year, and "that's just going to increase," said Caliguri, who said he attends about six Pirates games each season.

Royster also said he believed the strike would hurt major league baseball. "We expect them to play baseball," said Royster, who commented that professional athletes "may be close to killing the goose that laid the golden egg."

Dallas Mayor Jack W. Evans said the strike wouldn't have as great an economic impact on the Dallas-Ft.

Strike will be costly to all cities involved

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Most mayors of cities struck by major league baseball players agree the walkout will have a negative economic impact on their metropolitan areas, but one says it could help their team.

"There is a direct impact on taxpayers," said Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson during a break in the annual U.S. Conference of Mayors meeting at a Louisville hotel.

Seattle Mayor Charles Royer said the strike could benefit the troubled Seattle Mariners who were struggling in sixth place in the American League West Division when the strike halted play Friday.

"It could help the Mariners," Royer said with a laugh.

Jackson, who said he attends an Atlanta Braves game about once a month, said taxpayers in the Atlanta area will be forced to pay any increased deficit caused by the strike. Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium is jointly funded by the city and county and annually operates at a deficit of about $300,000 which must be covered by local tax funds, Jackson said.

"I (the stadium) has never paid its own way," said Jackson, who said he "loves the Braves."

On a more serious note, Royster, who played college baseball at the University of Oregon and semi-professional ball in Portland, Ore., said the strike would hurt Seattle's economy because fewer people would travel downtown to see Mariner games.

"I've just been in it since Feb. 15 and it's the first time in history they're not playing baseball on a June weekend. I feel funny sitting in my own ball park watching a soccer game."

CHICAGO (UPI) — This is Eddie Einhorn's first year as owner of a major-league baseball team and he is not interested in watching a soccer game in the ballpark instead of his own baseball players at work.

Bob Feller sides in with players

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Unlike many former baseball players who feel bitter about having performed in an era when salaries were low, former Cleveland Indians' great Bob Feller and ex-teammate Hal Naragon think the players are right to sign with new teams. Forty games already have been canceled by the strike, the third in major league history but the first to begin after the start of the season.

A source in the negotiations refused to predict how long the strike will last, but the 26 club owners appear to be in better shape than the players if the walkout lasts more than several days.

Whereas the owners have $50 million in strike insurance, which begins June 24, and another $10 to $15 million in emergency strike funds, the players' union is paying no benefits to its members.

Fehr said the players stand to lose considerable sums.

"We don't pay any benefits to the players," the attorney said. "We couldn't possibly do it. Even if we tried to fund it 25 percent, that would be $1 million a week. The players knew that the strike was coming, and they have taken it into consideration and have been husbanding their funds."

'Hard to have any sympathy'

He said he "loves the Braves." On a more serious note, Royster, who played college baseball at the University of Oregon and semi-professional ball in Portland, Ore., said the strike would hurt Seattle's economy because fewer people would travel downtown to see Mariner games.

New White Sox owner not happy with strike

CHICAGO (UPI) — This is Eddie Einhorn's first year as owner of a major-league baseball team and he is not interested in watching a soccer game in the ballpark instead of his own baseball players at work.

"This is my first involvement in baseball," said the dejected Chicago White Sox owner, who watched the Chicago Sting soccer team lose to the Washington Diplomats 2-1 in Comiskey Park Sunday.

Club to hear physician

MANCHESTER — Dr. Howard J. Lockwood, M.D., of Manchester, will be presenting "Travel Tips" at the Tuesday meeting of the East of the River Diabetes Club. Dr. Lockwood is an internist and a member of the American Diabetes Association. "Travel Tips" will include information to help make summer travel and recreation safe and easy for the family coping with diabetes. The meeting will be held in the Conference Rooms at Traveler Memorial Hospital at 7:30 p.m. For further information contact the American Diabetes Association at 236-1948.

To pay respects

MANCHESTER — The West Side Old Timers of Manchester will meet Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the Holmes Funeral Home, 400 Main St. to pay respects to the late Nicholas Angelo.

Budget suit dismissed

COVENTRY — The case brought against the town of Coventry by eight citizens seeking an injunction that would prevent the town council from changing the town budget from that one adopted May 11 at the town meeting was dismissed this morning by Judge Eugene Kelley after the plaintiffs failed to show cause for a court hearing.

Council vice chairman Roy McLain said this morning that Kelley "released the town of Coventry from an order to show cause on an alleged misuse of power in the management of the annual town budget." He added that the court action happened after the plaintiffs failed to show.

"Since no date to reappear was set," he said, "I assume that this particular action is terminated."

The residents, led by former state Rep. Robert Walsh, filed suit June 2 through an attorney to prevent the town council from setting the mill rate at anything other than 72.5, as was approved under questionable circumstances at a town meeting May 8.

The council revoked the town meeting action May 11, which sent the vote on the budget to the polls, where it was defeated by a 2-1 margin.

Victory leap

BOSTON (UPI) — Marvin Hagler's next stop on the middleweight circuit will be San Remo, Italy, where officials apprehended some swindlers from the town-owned casinos and came up with some extra cash to promote a title fight.

While Hagler likely will make another $400,000 or so in that September bout against probable foe Mustafa Hambo, his biggest bonanzas are further down the road. Welterweight title Sugar Ray Leonard and Tommy "Hit Man" Hearns may both eventually slide up to the middleweight division, setting up more megabuck paydays for themselves and the first for Hagler, the only undisputed champ in the sport.

Hagler capitalized on the unexpected development, sending punishing jabs to the injured area whenever possible. He also opened two cuts of his own and was unscathed when the bout ended.

"He never hit me, he never touched me," claimed Antuofermo. "I had more than enough to go on."

Referee Dave Paarl agreed, pointing out it was Antuofermo's corner which stopped the fight.

Like Atlanta, "We have got to make up for the deficit for the bad (Three Rivers Stadium) debt," Caliguri said.

Pittsburgh's cost on the stadium indebtedness has been $750,000 this year, and "that's just going to increase," said Caliguri, who said he attends about six Pirates games each season.

Royster also said he believed the strike would hurt major league baseball. "We expect them to play baseball," said Royster, who commented that professional athletes "may be close to killing the goose that laid the golden egg."

Dallas Mayor Jack W. Evans said the strike wouldn't have as great an economic impact on the Dallas-Ft.

Wemmell third in decathlon

Placing third in the state CIAC Decathlon Championship last weekend at Willow Brook Park in New Britain was Manchester High's Butch Wemmell.

The blonde-haired sophomore totaled 6,019 points to take the bronze medal. Mike Shinsky of Ripon won High of Stamford won the state crown with 6,335 points with Cedrick Jordan of Windsor scored with 6,047 points.

Wemmell was the lone participant to use college implements in the shot put, discus and high hurdles in an attempt to set a national sophomore record. He fell short with the national mark 4,201 points. He has until Aug. 31 to shatter the mark.

"I think we're going to enter him in another decathlon to give him another shot at the record," stated Manchester Coach George Sutor.

Wemmell did not have a good first day as he turned in a 11.9 clocking in the 100-meter dash, had a 21-foot, 3-inch effort in the long jump, threw the 16-pound shot put 39-feet, 11-inches, did 6-feet, 9-inches in the high jump and had a .56:1 clocking in the 400-meter dash. Usually you'll score higher the first day," noted Sutor.

Wemmell's clocking in the 100 was not as hoped and the height cleared in the high jump was also lower than desired. The effort in the latter was hindered by the facilities, Sutor cited.

Junior Peter Murphy took seventh place in the 3,000 meter steeplechase with a school-record clocking of 10:13.9.

Fletcher impresses with win

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Frank Fletcher won the U.S.B.A. middleweight title Sunday with an unanimous decision over Norberto Sabater in a 10-round fight and said he was now "ready for anyone in the middleweight division."

Fletcher, 27, a Philadelphia boxer known as "the Animal," used an aggressive attack to stay on top of Sabater for most of the action-packed bout.

The victory raises Fletcher's record to 12-2-1 and should put him into the top 10 middleweight contenders for the WBC and WBA titles.

"Right now, I feel like I'm ready for anyone in the middleweight division, including champion Marvin Hagler," he said.

It was the first blemish on 23-year-old Sabater's record — he came into the bout rated eighth "with a 19-0 record."

The bout was/was a U.S.B.A. title fight when U.S.B.A. President Robert Lee stripped Curtis Parker of the middleweight title. Parker had not defended his crown since May 4, 1980.

Both fighters began the fight by sluggering it out in the corners. Fletcher was the aggressor, while Sabater chose to stand and trade punches with the 157-pound Philadelphia.

"It was a tough fight, he showed he could take some of my best punches," Fletcher said at the post-fight press conference. "But if the fight would have went two or three more rounds, I feel I would have got to him."

"I felt like I had him hurt in the eighth, but somewhere he must have found some energy to survive my power," he said, trying on his new U.S.B.A. title belt.

Sabater fought in contrast to his usual style — generally by using his jab and relying on jabbing attacks.

In a subdued interview where he spoke quietly and held ice packs under both eyes, Sabater recalled his first loss in 20 fights and agreed in part with Fletcher's assessment.

"I gave it everything I had the first four rounds," he said. "I made a mistake — I went for the early knockout, and didn't have anything left in the latter stages."

"Next time, I'll fight him smarter, move around the ring more. Of course, it's up to him to fight me again."

Boxing fans in the middle rounds were one of the best recent fighting action in Atlantic City rings, as both fighters boxed aggressively and landed impressive combinations.

Spinks not only loser in Joe Louis Arena

DETROIT (UPI) — Leon Spinks wasn't the only loser Friday night. Martha Louis, widow of former heavyweight champion Joe Louis who died April 12, traveled from her home in Las Vegas, Nev. for the dedication of the Joe Louis Arena, where the Larry Holmes-Spinks title fight was held.

Only there was no dedication, and further, there was no apology given to her. Accounts of what actually happened to upstage the dedication are varied, but one thing is for sure: Martha Louis is not happy about it.

"They didn't have any dedication at all," said Mrs. Louis Sunday. "I came in specifically for the dedication. They sent me the tickets. They were always talking about the dedication from time to time. They were supposed to have it in February for the championship fight. I said before Joe died that he'd never live to see it. And now this."

"The arena was to have been dedicated to the 'Brown Bomber' before the Holmes-Spinks fight, but confusion over the location of dignitaries involved apparently caused the arena to remain undedicated.

In announcing the match between Spinks and Holmes, officials dedicated the arena to itself, but dedication of the arena itself never came off.

Attorney Edward Bell, coowner of Renaissance Sports Inc., which helped stage the fight, said Sunday the plans for a 7:30 p.m. ceremony were scrapped when Mrs. Louis couldn't be found.

'Didn't have any dedication'

Bell added that they were also being pressured by ABC television to get the scheduled lightweight fight between Samuel Marbury and Jo Kimpuni underway.

The ring announcer then told the fans that the dedication ceremony was postponed until "immediately after the Spinks met with the canvas."

But Young said he did not want to hold the dedication after the fight as people were leaving.

"I didn't want to dedicate the arena looking at people's backs," Young said. A spokesman for Don King Productions, the bout's main promoter, said, "It didn't come off (as scheduled) because Mayor Young showed up late... and we had to get the fight program underway."

But Young says he was at the arena on time.

"There was some confusion about the timing of the dedication," said Young. "It was supposed to be at that time. Martha Louis was not. Since the fight was on national television, they couldn't depart from the schedule."

Young said city officials will try and dedicate the $23 million arena this fall, after a statue is commissioned of the late Louis, who died at 36.

Five members of the Bennet High track team took part in Sunday's state Junior Olympics at Greenwich High and all qualified for the New England Junior Olympics, slated July 18 in Greenwich.

Don Hickey won the long jump with a leap of 18-feet, 9-inches and took second in the javelin with a toss of 130-feet. Steve Djononas won the 200-meters in :24.0 and took second in the 100 in :11.79. Dave Chase was fourth in both the 100 and 200 to advance. Ellen Green was third in the javelin with a toss of 73-feet, 6-inches and Wendy Burgess was third in the 100-meter low hurdles with a time of :18.4.

The top four in each event advanced to the New England competition.

President's Cup won by Horvath

Propelled by a brilliant three-putt hole 69 round Saturday, Len Horvath won the 1981 President's Cup Golf Tournament at the Manchester Country Club on the weekend. The former club champion followed up with 74 and 75 rounds in the rain Sunday for a 218 total, nine strokes better than runner-up Dave Kaye. The latter posted a 227 score. Defending champion Woody Clark was fifth with a 232 total on rounds of 74-82-76. Tied

Caponi couldn't believe eyes before winning putt

KINGS ISLAND, Ohio (UPI) — Donna Caponi couldn't believe her eyes when she lined up what turned out to be the winning putt in the final round of the 27th LPGA Championship Sunday.

"I couldn't believe it," said Caponi, who calmly walked the 15 feet into the hole to break a three-way tie and win her second LPGA title in the last three years on the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center Course.

"If you're going to have to putt to win a championship, have one like I did, straight up and straight in. When it was two feet from the cup, I knew it was in."

Jerilyn Britz, who along with Pat Meyers shared the lead going into the final hole, at Tunder-par, still had to putt for a chance to tie after Caponi's clutch performance. But she made a premature visit to her good friend to congratulate her anyway.

"She just came over and said, 'great putt,'" Caponi explained. "I said, 'Do you want me to help you read yours?' She just laughed."

Britz, who led the 1979 LPGA Championship here for 66 holes before Caponi caught her for the victory, then missed her 10-foot downhill putt to the left and Caponi had her fourth major title and 22nd triumph since turning pro in 1965.

Caponi also has won two women's U.S. Opens. Caponi, who shot a 1-over-73 in Sunday's final round, had a 27-hole score of 8-under-280 to win

Seeking to win over $1 million

$22,500 and edge into third place among the all-time LPGA money-winners with $92,857. She is seeking to become the first $1 million winner on the ladies' tour.

Caponi began the day with a two-shot lead and pushed it to three after a hole in one on the 17th hole, although not more than one shot the ball. I enjoyed being in that position. Maybe the next time I'll be able to do more about it."

Britz, the 1978 women's U.S. Open winner, said she was not disappointed with the outcome.

"It's the best I've played all year," said Britz, who stood only 77th on the 1981 money list coming into this event.

Sunday's round, unlike the first three was played in swirling winds, although it was completed without the rain delays that hampered the second and third rounds.

"It was unbelievable," Caponi said of the wind. "Everytime I looked at a flag, it was going a different way."

Meyers, who had a good look at Caponi's winning putt, said she knew "the minute she hit it" it was going in. "She (Caponi) was due to make one of those," said Meyers. "You just sort of knew it was going to happen."

Meyers, who did not pick up a bogey Sunday until the 16th hole, said she actually had trouble after the 12th.

"From the 13th on in, I didn't hit the ball as good as I did the first 12," said Meyers. "But I felt pretty good out there."

Debbie Massey finished alone in fourth place at 283 followed by Anne Carter, Nancy Lopez-Melton and Beth Daniel at 284, defending champion Sally Little at 285 and Amy Alcott 286.

Floyd looks ahead to Open

HARRISON, N.Y. (UPI) — It's long been a theory of Ray Floyd that streaks play a very important role in deciding sports events.

In just a few days he'll put this feeling to a severe test in quest of the biggest prize that has eluded him in 19 years on the pro golf tour.

Despite what he called "probably one of the worst rounds I've played in a month or two," Floyd continually escaped trouble Sunday for a 2-shot victory in the $400,000 Westchester Golf Classic. He had a 72-hole total of 9-under-275.

The tournament is known as the "Manufacture of a Hero" after Westchester Club. Just outside of Philadelphia, to begin preparation for the U.S. Open which starts there on Thursday. He never has won the Open, and it now has become the major priority in a career which includes 15 victories and more than $1.7 million in earnings.

Earlier this year Floyd won the

'Hoping this is my year'

Doral Open and Tournament Players Championship in consecutive weeks, a feat which brought him a bonus of $250,000, and this achievement is very much in his mind as he heads to Merion.

"I can only look back to those back-to-back victories and I'm hoping this is my year for back-to-back victories."

Floyd called a saving par on the 12th hole, when he pitched to aim and sank the putt, as the key hole for him Sunday. He moved to the front for good when he parred the 16th hole, and wrapped up the victory with a four-foot birdie putt on No. 17.

Overcome problems
RIVERSIDE, Calif. (UPI) — Stock car racing has developed into a science with hundreds of thousands of dollars used to develop the finest racing machinery possible all five days of the week.

But for Darrell Waltrip, Sunter's Warner W. Hodgdon 400 at Riverside International Raceway came down to a problem eventually countered by anyone who has ever been behind a steering wheel — a flat tire.

Waltrip overcame the tire blowout, however, and scored a narrow victory over Dale Earnhardt in the $180,685 Grand National event.

Record time

LE MANS, France (UPI) — Belgium's Jacky Ickx, record-breaking five-time winner of Sunday's Le Mans 24-hour automobile race, hasn't quenched his thirst for winning.

Ickx's victory in a Porsche 956 with British co-driver Derek Bell, was marred by the deaths of French Renault driver Jean-Louis Lafosse and a race marshal, Jean-Pierre Monin, killed in separate accidents Saturday as competitors struggled to maintain concentration in the intense heat.

"I like Le Mans," Ickx, 36, said, "and I'll be back." "I would not like to say this year will be my last competition."

Watson confident going into Open

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Tom Watson has something more valuable than adrenalin and more precious than a hot puffer heading into the U.S. Open this week. He has confidence.

After a slow start in 1981, Watson has come on very quickly in the last two months to claim his customary spot atop the PGA earnings list with $32,432. He has captured three tournaments this year, including his second Masters, and has finished third or better in six of his last eight starts.

In his most recent outing, a week ago at the Atlanta Golf Classic, Watson captured his 28th career victory with a sudden death playoff over native Georgian Tommy Valentine.

Watson bypassed the Westchester Classic this week to hone particular facets of his game for his bid to win the only major championship that has eluded him in his climb to the top of his profession. And he feels comfortable if not cocky heading into the 81st U.S. Open this week at the Merion Golf Course in Ardmore, Pa.

"My major problem in the last few Opens, except for possibly last year, was that I wasn't playing well," said Watson. "And as a result, I didn't have much confidence in my game. If I don't think I can make a 15-foot putt, I can't."

"But I'm competitive tough right now. I'm making my shots. I missed a lot of greens last week (Atlanta) but I was missing close to the hole. I was staying out of trouble. I think I have the confidence that I've been lacking in recent years (heading into the Open)."

The Kansas City native has won three British Opens, two Masters and one PGA championship in his 10 years on the tour. He has been named the PGA's Player of the Year every year since 1977, has won the Vardon Trophy three times for the lowest stroke average on the tour and ranks third on golf's all-time winnings list with $2,534,723.

'Competitive tough now'

But his failure to win a U.S. Open continues to hang over his head.

"The major championships are what it's all about," said Watson. "They've been around for such a long time. They were the first tournaments. Every sport has them — the Super Bowl, the World Series, the NHL playoffs, NBA playoffs... in golf there are four of them."

"It's easier to win the Masters after you won it once. I've never won the Open and it's something I put myself under more pressure (at the Open) than I usually do in a golf tournament. I like that — I like the idea of personal pressure. But I don't have a phobia about not winning. If I don't win, I'm sure I'll be back again next year."

Watson said he has played Merion only once before, on a rainy day last September at the invitation of a friend, but failed to break par.

"It's probably the shortest Open course I've ever played," said Watson. "But the fairways are tight and the rough long. Most players won't be using their drivers very much. It's too big a gamble of ending up in the rough. You can't advance it from there; you've just got to get it back onto the fairway. It's better to be in the fairway with a 2-iron than in the rough with a 9-iron."

"Merion doesn't overpower you. You need finesse. You've got to be patient. Par is a good score. The last four holes are extremely difficult before holes. You want to par those. But there are a lot of birdie holes before that."

Barber gets new life after 50th birthday

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (UPI) — Miller Barber qualified for the Professional Golfers Association seniors circuit less than three months ago when he turned 50, and that birthday has already given him a new financial lease on life.

The Sherman, Texas native has career earnings of more than $1.5 million on the regular PGA tour and his $20,000 sudden-death winning purse Sunday at the $200,000 PGA Peter Jackson seniors championship won't likely be his last seniors victory.

Barber and Gene Littler, two of golf's most renowned names from past glories on the main PGA tour, battled together over the final 18 holes before a costly drive on the sudden death hole ended Littler's chances.

Both players ended the regular 54-hole play on the 6,514-yard Espiridiano Golf and Country Club course at 6-under-par 204 after beginning the final round at 5-under-par 135.

Littler, who earned $16,000, drove straight into disaster off the playoff hole when he landed in the rough, behind a tree, and was forced to take a drop stroke. The La Jolla, Calif. native, also 50, then drove his third shot onto the green and two-putted.

Barber was flawless under pressure, driving straight down the fairway, then landing 30 feet from the pin after two shots, from where he two-putted.

Porcelain cage

The white ceramic bird cage weaves decorative magic as a planter suspended on a chain. An attractive accessory to a room, as is, or filled with greenery. Its glazed white finish allows it to fit into any color scheme. For more information on this and many other unusual items, write Armstrong House, Dept. 15PHM, P.O. Box 3001, Lancaster, Pa. 17604.

Befriend friendly bugs

Every year more people work protecting your treasured plants. A helpful cannibal among good insects also merits your attention. The praying mantis is a fierce-looking relative of the grasshopper. There the similarity ends. The Chinese mantis is 4 inches long and eats insects from its nymphal state through its adult stage. You can buy egg cases of mantises by mail and at some garden centers. These are frothy, hard cases that you simply place in bushes before normal hatching time in the spring. Hundreds of tiny mantises emerge in April to June, depending on locale, to eat their way through your garden. They'll devour many pesky, harmful bugs. Then, females lay more eggs to provide you with more mantises for the coming year. Aphids, mites, scales and leafhoppers ruin many plants by sucking juices from them. Green lacewings help you by sucking the juices from these insect pests. You can identify this helpful insect with its four delicate, filmy wings and long antenna. It has distinctive reddish-gold iridescent eyes. Most likely, it will be found wandering among the foliage preying on harmful insects. These insects, too, can be ordered from mail-order suppliers. All of these beneficial insect allies are worth befriending. Some firms also sell tiny traps that dive bomb harmful fruitworms. They lay eggs as they sting their worm victims. Eggs hatch and wasp larvae devour the destructive worms that would otherwise feed on your plants. Consider going natural this year in your garden. Armies of these useful insect allies can help control destructive pests for you.

Tips for consumers

Depending on where a family lives, air conditioning either can be a luxury or a near necessity. After the decision to buy air conditioning comes the choice of a central system versus room units. Depending upon the dwelling, the Better Business Bureau points out that room air conditioners can be economical, but care must be taken in selection. Any type of air conditioner is designed to deliver cool air, dehumidify, circulate air and clean it. Some systems may perform such added functions as ventilation and heating. Room air conditioners can be ideal for efficiency apartments or other single room cooling needs. They can be moved from room to room within a home and, when a family moves, the air conditioner can go with them. In evaluating an air conditioner, consider three prime factors: The unit's cooling capacity compared to the area it will serve; Its Energy Efficiency Rating (EER) and Energy Efficiency Ratio (EER). The cost and complexity of installation. There are drawbacks to a unit that's too large or too small for its room. An oversized unit may be more expensive than necessary, could cause uncomfortable variations in temperature and is likely to cool the area so quickly that moisture remains in the air. An undersized unit would be a false economy, however, and should not be expected to perform well. An air conditioner's cooling capacity is measured by the number of British Thermal Units (BTUs) of heat it can remove from the air in one hour. This capacity will be clearly marked on the name plate of the unit. Although some ads will talk of a unit's horsepower or amperage, these have no relation to cooling capacity. There are formulas for determining the right cooling capacity for a room. Take the cubic room measurements to an air conditioner dealer who should be able to determine the appropriate capacity. Also, note the number of openings, window exposures, type of lighting and insulation, which are factors in the equation. The Energy Efficiency Rating is a measure of energy consumption and, therefore, a gauge of operating cost. EERs range up to 11.6. The higher the number, the more efficient the unit. An air conditioner with a higher EER may be worth, in the long run, a higher initial price. EERs are a part of the labeling of all new units. When considering the purchase of an older unit the EER can be calculated by dividing the cooling capacity (BTUs/hour) by the wattage (power). Ease of installation is also an important factor. Window units are usually designed for a minimum of installation effort, but be sure to read the manufacturer's instructions and follow them carefully. Before installing any unit, verify that the electrical wiring is adequate for operation. Inadequate wiring wastes power, cuts efficiency and is extremely dangerous. Consider these installation tips: Use a line not already loaded with appliances; Make sure the outlet is properly grounded. Never remove the grounding prong from a three-prong outlet; If possible, install the unit in a shaded window, but avoid areas where outside dust, odors or pollen will be drawn into it; Never block the back of the unit. When shopping for a room air conditioner don't forget the importance of a warranty. Does the warranty apply to parts, labor or both? Is it backed by the dealer as well as the manufacturer? Are there facilities locally that will honor it? Some units may have to be shipped back to the manufacturer for repairs. What is the reputation of the dealer? Be sure to contact the Better Business Bureau for a reliability report. By choosing the unit, manufacturer and dealer carefully and installing the air conditioner properly, the smart consumer will also be a cool consumer.

Fish and chips

There are 15,000 fish and chip shops in Britain. As one of the original convenience foods, fish and chips are supposed to be eaten out on the street or walking somewhere. Englishmen have been relishing fish and chips for last 100 years, ever since the industrial Revolution, produced the first factory workers and their need for cheap, quick, and nourishing food.

Eye injuries at home frequent CSPB says

Each year an estimated 1.3 million Americans suffer eye injuries while working around the home and garden, according to Dr. Jeffrey Gold, member of the Eye Safety Committee of the Connecticut Society to Prevent Blindness. "More accidents resulting in eye injuries occur around the home than anywhere else," Dr. Gold said, "and 80 percent of these injuries could be prevented." Wearing protective eyewear, the Society points out, can prevent serious eye damage or even blindness caused by chemicals, pesticides and cleaners containing ammonia. "Before using any product, read the package labels and instructions thoroughly, paying special attention to warnings," Dr. Gold said. Hand tools, power equipment and lawn mowers are also frequent causes of eye injuries. These machines can propel splinters, wood chips and stones with tremendous force into your eye or someone else's, causing severe harm to vision. Guard your vision by purchasing a pair of protective eye goggles at your local hardware store, or local vendor, listed under Safety Equip-

MACC Human Needs seeks funds

By Nancy Carr, Executive Director
The MACC Human Needs fund is out of money. Drained dry. What's worse, it's drained at the beginning of June, when all the organizations who traditionally send us money are finished for the summer. Incredible planning. We can hardly believe it ourselves.

During 1980 what happened? From Jan. 1 to Dec. 31 we made 92 financial grants and small loans to families on a "once only basis" to meet the monthly rent bill, for emergency housing (in motels) for families evicted, and to help with security deposits.

Most of the money from Human Needs has gone to help families on a "once only basis" to meet the monthly rent bill, for emergency housing (in motels) for families evicted, and to help with security deposits. We are particularly apt to grant assistance to a family who can't come up with the month's rent for a lively and enthusiastic volunteer: Marge and Ken Lappen, Paul Sombic, Carol Harrison, Sharon Massee and Karen Rading. They've already met once and they'll be meeting again tonight at 7:30 at St. Bartholomew's. If you're interested in being part of an exciting summer project to provide fresh low-price produce within walking distance of our downtown residents and of the community, come join us.

Farmers Market

Is a coming to downtown Manchester thanks to six lively and enthusiastic volunteers: Marge and Ken Lappen, Paul Sombic, Carol Harrison, Sharon Massee and Karen Rading. They've already met once and they'll be meeting again tonight at 7:30 at St. Bartholomew's. If you're interested in being part of an exciting summer project to provide fresh low-price produce within walking distance of our downtown residents and of the community, come join us.

Thank You

— To an anonymous donor of one hundred ($100) badly needed dollars to the Human Needs Fund. — To Jackie Nichols, Nearly Nu Shop, Grace Bogdan, Judy Clough, Mrs. Paul Arra, and Curiosity shop for their contributions to the Clothing Bank. — And to Mr. Monaco, John Frase, Mrs. Fitzgerald for donations of furniture.

Car wash

MANCHESTER — Manchester High varsity cheerleaders will hold a car wash bake sale next Saturday, June 20, in the student parking lot at the school from 9 a.m. to 3 o'clock. Proceeds will go towards purchasing needed equipment.

People Talk

Nancy's fears

First Lady Nancy Reagan says she's always been afraid someone would try to kill her husband, and she always will feel guilty she wasn't with him March 30 when he was shot in the lung.

In an interview in Redbook magazine published Monday, Mrs. Reagan said, "I always feared this would happen. I've had to learn to live with the thought and the possibility of danger for a long time now. You take all the precautions you can and then you put your faith in God and go about your daily life. If you don't see a function, I will always feel guilty I wasn't with Ronnie when he was at the Hilton that day."

$22 bills

Love22, who legally changed his name from Lawrence Wagner because he attributes magical powers to the number 22, is in trouble with the law again over his $22 bills.

Love22 was arrested in New Orleans Saturday on a charge of selling his funny money, bearing his likeness, without a permit.

Bolton valedictorian 'got it all together'

By Richard Cody Herald Reporter

BOLTON — Not only does she receive almost every award available at the high school and hold down a part-time job, but she also plays four musical instruments and enjoys a social life.

"She's got it all together," says high school Principal Joseph Fleming.

Ellen Godreau, graduating tomorrow as valedictorian and top graduating senior, originally moved to Connecticut from California at age 7, and after spending two years in Manchester schools, she began her education in Bolton.

By the time she finished, the school's award store room was ravaged and in her possession. Since she never kept a scrap book the exact number of awards and recognitions she received over her years in Bolton, never mind those before she came to Bolton, will be left to either memory or research.

The greatest honor, she says, is being chosen valedictorian. But the awards were always something that came to her as a result of striving for knowledge and improvement, rather than striving for recognition. This way, she said, she was never disappointed.

"If someone tries to get an award, and fails to do so, then they're even more disappointed. Certainly, though they're free to get."

However, she said, she will attend the University of Connecticut in the fall to take up engineering, since she always liked math and sciences alot. On reflection, she said, being accepted by her classmates as something other than a "bratty kid" did not come quickly, since "they will always stereotype you" when entering a new school.

95th birthday.

Frances Tedford, a Manchester resident and patron of St. George's Episcopal Church in Bolton, celebrated her 95th birthday Thursday at the church with members of her family and friends in the church. Mrs. Tedford is the oldest member of the church, and still remains active in both church affairs and non-church activities.

Gypsy moth invasion to start cocoon stage

By United Press International In Rhode Island, the state's black caterpillars would surpass their 1980 defoliation of 380,000 acres of trees.

Deloliation peaked in Connecticut in 1971 when the leaf-eaters chewed up 654,000 acres.

In Maine, another type of caterpillar has been plaguing residents. The forest communities most heavily hit by the leaf-munching pests include Cumberland, Sebasticus, Burrillville, Lincoln, Coventry, North Smithfield and Glocester.

Final arguments due

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — Attorneys today prepared to deliver final arguments in the retrial of a young city man charged with felony murder in the 1974 shotgun slaying of a Yale University graduate student.

The final arguments and judge's instructions to the jury were all that remained before deliberations began in the trial of Eric Washington, who was charged in the death of Yale student Gary Stein during an attempted robbery.

Washington, who was 14-years-old when Stein was shot twice with a sawed-off 12-gauge shotgun, did not take the stand in his defense at the second trial in Superior Court.

Garden club sets trip

MANCHESTER — The Coventry Garden Club is sponsoring a bus trip to Newport, R.I., Thursday, June 25.

The cost is $38 which includes admission to Hammersmith Farm, Mrs. Astor's "Beechwood" mansion, Green Animals Topiary Gardens & Toy Museum, lunch at The Pier and dinner at Coachman Inn.

The bus will leave the South United Methodist Church at 7:30 a.m. and Meadowbrook Plaza, Coventry, at 5 a.m. Reservations, by check no later than Thursday, should be made to Mrs. Stacey Juros, Apt. B-4, 205 Hornstead St.

Your Birthday

June 15, 1981 Bonds will be greatly strengthened this year with someone extremely important to you. Before your next birthday, two of you will be functioning as one.

GENIUS (May 21-June 20) Your powers of persuasion are exceptionally good today and you should be very adroit at turning companions around to your way of thinking.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You have today, but you must be careful not to be heavy-handed in executing matters. Use a light touch.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your possibilities for advancing your self-interests are a bit better than usual today. Without being overly selfish, must or what's important to you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're not apt to learn more from observing successful people than you can learn from my book. Pay heed to one whose style you can imitate.

YWCA offers dance workshop

Dance Workshops for beginner and intermediate levels will be offered to adults this summer by the Nutmeg Branch YWCA. Registration is now being taken at the YWCA, 78 N. Main St.

The beginner workshop will be held Wednesday evenings 7:30-9:30, for 4 weeks starting July 1. The intermediate workshop will be 6:30-9:30 Monday evenings, starting June 29.

The workshops will consist of yoga-like stretching and deep breathing exercises, as well as a modern dance warm-up and a ballet barre for body alignment and strength. Dance phrases are simple and fun to learn.

The dance workshops will be taught by Katie Sakol, Ms. Sakol, a former director of Footprints Community Arts Center, has taught ballet and modern dance classes extensively, and has performed locally. She has taught dance at the YWCA for 5 years.

Emily Lesoner, M.S.W., will be available for individual and family counseling during the summer at the YWCA. Scheduling is flexible and by appointment only.

For more information concerning these activities, call the YWCA at 647-1437.

Law associate

William P. Rice of Enfield, has become associated with Brenda Dramal Goodwin in the general practice of law, with offices in Ellington and Windsor Locks.

Attorney Rice is a graduate of Western New England College School of Law, Southern Connecticut State College, Eastern Connecticut State College, Manchester Community College and Manchester High School.

He is the former director of the Respiratory Therapy Program at Hartford Hospital, and a former member of the U.S. Marine Corps. He is a member of the Connecticut Bar, and has been admitted to practice before the U.S. District Court for Connecticut.

He resides with his wife, Carol, and their four children at Douglas Drive, Enfield.

Leads industry

BLOOMFIELD — For the second consecutive year, Connecticut General Life Insurance Co. has led the industry in the number of employees covered under new dental plans installed.

In 1980, CG's new dental plans covered 769,000 employees exceeding by 15 percent the previous industry record established in 1976. CG put in force more than 1,200 dental contracts in 1980, 23 percent more than CG's previous record set in 1979.

Averaging annual sales results for 1976-80, CG is ahead of its nearest competitor by more than 8 percent, according to figures reported in a recent Employee Benefit Plan Review.

Several important contracts helped CG achieve this position of leadership, according to John Walton, marketing director. "We were selected to administer the new General Electric Co. Dental Assistance Plan for approximately 300,000 employees and we sold dental contracts to four multi-national oil companies — Gulf, Shell, Tenneco and Union — which added another 100,000 employees to our rolls. CG now insures 25 percent of all oil industry employees," Walton said.

Heads executives

HARTFORD — Robert W. Dunn, vice president and general sales manager for radio station WVIC-AM, has been elected president of the Greater Hartford Advertising Executive Council.

Other SME officers elected were three vice presidents: Clinton Billups, president of Brentco Corp. Rick Clough, president of Bartlett-Hartford Products Co.; and Dan Lauria, director of marketing services for Connecticut Natural Gas Corp.

Dunn, who lives in South Windsor, joined WVIC in 1970 as an account executive. He was named local sales manager in 1977 and general sales manager in 1978. He is active in the Knights of the Grip of Connecticut, the Greater Hartford Advertising Club and is director of the Advisory Council of Manchester Community College.

Retirement party

MANCHESTER — Nearly 100 fellow employees and family recently fete Blanche Newman of Manchester at a dinner party at Willie's Restaurant in honor of her retirement from CG/Aetna Insurance Co., Hartford.

Mrs. Newman began her career with Aetna 23 years ago as a coder and at her retirement, was an underwriting superintendent. She was instrumental in starting an American Red Cross Blood Program Committee at the Aetna 20 years ago and served as its chairperson for many years. She also acted as volunteer English instructor to Spanish speaking employees.

Mrs. Newman was active in Manchester PTAs while her children attended local schools. She was sales manager in 1977 and general sales manager in 1978. She is active in the Knights of the Grip of Connecticut, the Greater Hartford Advertising Club and is director of the Advisory Council of Manchester Community College.

These new relocation services, he added, "are cost-effective for companies, since they help minimize the loss of employee productivity so common in transfers. Knowing that relocation experts are providing his or her family with professional guidance, and actually handling some of the details of the move, the employee can better concentrate on work."

The services, which are currently available to companies in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, will be available after a three-month test period.

The new relocation services, Mr. Gross explained will:

- Orient the family to the relocation process and the area. Working with an MLRM counselor in the organization city, the family plans for the transition, discusses their apprehensions, assesses their current housing features and lifestyle, and develops a plan for a successful relocation.
- Immerse the family in the new community. At the destination site, the family discusses with MLRM staff how their needs can be met in the new community. Furthermore, they discuss local estate practices, determine financial qualifications for the family's new home purchase, and select real estate agents who know the community and the needs of the corporate transferees.
- Handle the details of the home purchase. MLRM experts can take care of time-consuming details such as preparing for the closing and preparing the new home for moving.
- Establish the family quickly in the new community. The MLRM counselor introduces the family to someone in the new community who can show them around and help them establish routines.

Vice president

STAMFORD — Combustion Engineering Inc. has elected Gene M. Wilkinson as vice president-personnel administration.

Based in CE's Stamford headquarters, Wilkinson will report to Thomas A. Ennis, vice president-administration.

Consumer price index wrong by understating down pace

It is true that our Consumer Price Index exaggerates the pace of inflation on the up side by giving too much weight to increases in the prices of housing and mortgage interest rates and understates the pace on the down side by not reflecting the full degree of declines in housing prices and mortgage interest rates?

YES!

Is it true that the U.S. economy has been twisted badly (and dangerously) out of shape by linking vitally important changes in the incomes of nearly half our population to changes in so inaccurate an index (Social Security benefits, food stamp and other so-called "government entitlement" programs)?

YES!

Assuming the truth of the above two serious condemnations, is it reasonable to expect there will be no amendments in the Consumer Price Index or even any serious attempts to correct its weaknesses for years — or perhaps as long as five years from now?

YES!

The CPI often has been called the single most important economic index issued by the U.S. government, and rightly so. It is the only measurement we have of changes in our cost of living. It profoundly affects the wages or benefits of tens of millions of Americans, for these totals are pegged directly to the CPI. If the index had been rising more slowly in recent years (as it would have been had housing and interest rates not been given such heavy weights), our entire inflation pattern would be far less critical.

Yet for political as well as for major technical reasons, desirable revisions will be pushed into the far-

Your Money's Worth
Sylvia Porter

distort future.

The Reagan administration is reluctant to act on changes in the CPI because it believes that weaknesses in the index as it now stands should work in favor of its overall economic-financial program. And the White House certainly wants to concentrate all its power and resources on pushing its overall program rather than on fighting any battle to improve the nation's most important price barometer.

Congress always has shown great reluctance to tinker with the CPI and must approve any changes before they can be made.

As for the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS), which publishes the index, it has been experimenting for a long time to develop alternative ways to measure home ownership costs. It still concludes that important though the current CPI is, the experimental indexes aren't much better.

One alternative index that the BLS has been issuing during the past three years measures the cost of shelter that a house provides the user rather than the investment aspects of home ownership. During this span, the experimental index has been rising much more slowly than the official CPI. Although some experts emphasize that the U.S. government could slash its costs by replacing the official CPI with this experimental measure, Congress has not approved any change.

And administration experts argue that as future interest rates decline (as expected) into the single-digit range, this drop will have a big impact on the CPI as it now exists and will cut the CPI overall.

Even less controversial improvements in this index meet a stone wall in Congress. In 1978, for instance, the BLS began publishing a revised, far more comprehensive version of the CPI. This index, technically called CPI-U, reflects the buying habits of all urban residents, including professional workers, the poor, the unemployed, retired and self-employed. (The older version excludes such groups and represents the way only about half of urban dwellers spend their money.)

Despite widespread approval of the CPI-U, Congress still has not made the shift. If it did approve, the BLS would save about $2 million a year by dropping the other version.

So, the bottom line? The next customary revision of the CPI is due around the mid-1980s. That's the probable timing for change — no matter how misleading or how condemned today's version is.

Annual Realtor award given

MANCHESTER — The Manchester Board of Realtors announced the selection of Realtor and Realtor Associate of the Year at a luncheon meeting Thursday at Willie's Steak House. The selections were based on civic activity, activity in the Local Board of Realtors, membership in the National Association of Realtors, business accomplishments, educational achievements and Realtor spirit.

The Realtor Associate honored by the local board was Evelyn M. Carlson. Mrs. Carlson has been active in civic, religious and service organizations in Manchester for many years. Her board activities include past chairman of the equal housing committee, chairman of opening the new board offices as well as serving on several committees. She is currently the public relations chairman. She is the past president, membership chairman and program chairman of the local chapter of the women's council of Realtors and was recently honored as their "woman of the year." She is the membership chairman for the state chapter. Mrs. Carlson resides in Manchester with her husband, Everett, and has four children.

The selection for Realtor of the Year is Barbara B. Weinberg. Mrs. Weinberg is currently serving as president of the local board and is the past first and second vice-president. She was also the chairman for the equal housing committee and the public relations committee. She has participated in other committee work and has been a lecturer for the indoctrination course. She is a member of the Board of Directors of the Town of Manchester and served as the state director of the Friendship Force. She has also been active in other civic, religious and charitable organizations. Mrs. Weinberg lives in Manchester with husband, Stanley, and has two daughters.

New approach for relocation

NEW YORK — A four-step approach to solving the human problems of relocation is being test-marketed by Merrill Lynch Relocation Management Inc.

The package provides the transferee and his or her family with pre-arrival counseling, destination counseling, home-purchase management and "neighbor-to-neighbor" assistance.

"In the 1970s, companies solved their relocation problems solely with dollar-related solutions," said Stephen Gross, vice president. "But relocation can be an upheaval for a family, and in the 1980s we have to add answers that consider personal and family adjustments."

"These new relocation services," he added, "are cost-effective for companies, since they help minimize the loss of employee productivity so common in transfers. Knowing that relocation experts are providing his or her family with professional guidance, and actually handling some of the details of the move, the employee can better concentrate on work."

The services, which are currently available to companies in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, will be available after a three-month test period.

- Establish the family quickly in the new community. The MLRM counselor introduces the family to someone in the new community who can show them around and help them establish routines.

Armstrong named chairman

MANCHESTER — Sebert R. Armstrong of Avon, president of the Caryle Johnson Machinery Co., has been elected chairman of the board, effective June 1, succeeding Frank R. Simon who is retiring after 40 years with the company.

Armstrong will continue as president and chief executive officer of the 75-year old power transmission firm which specializes in the design and manufacture of clutches and brakes. The board also elected as a director William G. DeLana, partner in the Hartford law firm of Day, Berry and Howard.

Armstrong joined the company Jan. 1, 1978 and was elected president on March 1 of that year. Previously he was president of Armstrong Engineering Co., Old Lyme, and before that vice president of Ena Division, Amerace Ltd., Ontario, Canada; both firms specializing in power transmission and control products for industrial machinery.

Since taking over the presidency, Armstrong has initiated an expansion program which has included the acquisition of Rollins Transmission Company of Charlotte, N.C., manufacturers of precision planetary transmissions; and Metronics Inc. of Bolton, makers of electric clutches and electromagnetic chucks. These acquisitions have led to an addition of over 4,000 square feet of manufacturing and engineering space at the Manchester plant. A new building addition to the existing Manchester facility is also in construction to be completed this year.

Frank R. Simon, the retiring chairman of the board, is the son of the late Scott H. Simon, president of the firm from 1935 until 1942. At that time Frank R. Simon was vice president and general manager. He became president in 1950 and chairman of the board in 1952. Under Simon's leadership, the Caryle Johnson Machinery Co. has become a recognized world leader in the design and manufacture of manual, electric, air or hydraulic clutches and brakes used as original equipment in all types of machinery equipment and machine tools.

Sebert R. Armstrong

William G. DeLana brings a wealth of knowledge to the Caryle Johnson Machinery Co. board. As a partner of Day, Berry and Howard, he has an intimate knowledge of Caryle Johnson products and services. He is also a frequent lecturer on tax law at the University of Hartford and other institutions of living.

Combustion gets contract

STAMFORD — Combustion Engineering Inc. reported that C-E Natco, a Tulsa-based unit, has received a $50 million contract from Kerridge Oil Co. of Bakersfield, Calif. for equipment and services used in the production of heavy oil in the Bakersfield region.

CE reported that the contract extends over a two-year period and that an agreement will be reached on the specific number of Therna Drive steam generators, ancillary equipment and the amount of service to be provided.

"For several years, C-E Natco has worked with Kerridge engineers to improve equipment especially suited to recovering the highly viscous crude located in the Kern River area of Bakersfield," said Robert W. Coggins, C-E Natco senior vice-president of technical operations.
