Short summer

Schools reopen Wednesday

By Nancy Thompson
Herald Reporter

After an unusually short summer, students and staff will be back among the pencils and books beginning Wednesday.

For the first time, the schools are opening before Labor Day, a move officials said would have a "minimal affect" on operations, although they predicted opening day attendance may be somewhat low because of it.

Students in some grades in the Manchester public school system may find themselves in new quarters, several programs changed locations over the summer. The Head Start program, formerly located in South School, is now split between Nathan Hale and Robertson School. Bennet Junior High School ninth grade has crossed the street to join the main campus. The former ninth grade building will house students from Howell Cheney Regional Technical Vocational High School, while their school is being renovated.

Students at Manchester High School will find the same old building, but they will discover a new drop-off point. Owing to extensive renovations planned at the school this year, buses will load and unload at the main entrance of the school on East Middle Turnpike.

In order to insure the safety of the students, there will be no through traffic in the parking lot in front of the school from 7:30 to 8 a.m. and 2 to 2:30 p.m. Parents and friends bringing students to school are asked to use the student parking lot on the Brookfield Street side. While teachers dust off their lesson plans and students turn their minds to reading, writing and arithmetic, administrators are looking at the fourth "R" — enrollment.

In Manchester public schools, the total enrollment is predicted to drop from 8,216 to 7,890 this year. Administrators predict that the number of children in the Head Start program will remain at 75 and the number in the ROTC program will stay at 82.

In kindergarten through sixth grade, the number is estimated to fall from 4,205 to 3,985. In grades seven through nine, it is expected to go from 1,800 to 1,869 and in grades 10 through 12, from 1,932 to 1,869.

The number of special education is estimated to remain at 122.

The predictions, which are made in the spring, are based on last year's figures and are the estimated number that will be enrolled Oct. 1.

While state education officials are predicting that this year's kindergarten enrollment statewide will be the lowest since 1950, Kennedy said kindergarten enrollments should increase slightly in Manchester, from last year's low of 476. The predicted kindergarten enrollment is 482, based on the birth numbers in 1977, although Kennedy said the predictions are not exact.

In Bolton, the largest freshman class at the high school in almost 10 years, 80 students, and several unexpected new enrollees have raised the total there to 233, 17 more than last May's enrollment. Coupled with a four student increase at the middle school, the total system's enrollment is 700, six more than last year.

Administration was expecting about a five percent decrease here, and Superintendent Raymond A. Allen said this morning the increase is a "pleasant surprise." He said he was especially pleased to see the high school enrollment up, and the large freshman class. The addition of about 20 Willington students contributed to the large freshman class, he said.

However, he said, elementary school enrollment is down about 20.

"The figures are showing that our primary enrollment is still down," he said. Schools open Wednesday. Coventry's school system, which also opens Wednesday, show a slight increase in enrollment, from 1,774 to 1,752. The school with the largest enrollment here is the Captain Nathan Hale School, a middle school, which shows a head count of 596, in front of the high school at 511.

Andover's elementary school's enrollment is down about five percent, officials said, to a total of 209. RHAM High School also shows a decrease, from about 1,250 to 1,226. Both schools open Sept. 9.

Manchester Community College will start classes Wednesday. Enrollment at the college has almost reached the 8,000 level, officials said.

The Cornerstone Christian School, opening this fall under the sponsorship of the Church of the Nazarene, held orientation today and will begin classes Wednesday.

Terrorist campaign continues

Autos burn at U.S. base in Germany

By United Press International

Eight automobiles were set on fire and destroyed at an American military housing area early today in the second attack on an American installation in West Germany in two days, the U.S. Army said.

In Frankfurt this morning an annex to a Social Democratic Party headquarters also was set on fire by terrorists in a campaign against American nuclear arms in Western Europe.

The star of the Red Army Faction — the name used by the leftist Baader-Meinolf terror gang — was painted on the building along with slogans that read: "The SPD is carrying out atomic arming with the U.S. Government." SPD are the initials of the Social Democratic Party.

The burnings came less than 24 hours after a car-bomb exploded at the Ramstein Air Base, injuring 15 people arriving for work at the U.S. Air Force European Headquarters. Two Americans, including a brigadier general, were still in the hospital today.

In what the State Department labeled a "bizarre" outburst of anti-American attacks, bombs also exploded Monday in Lima, Peru, rocking the American embassy, and factories and offices of four American companies.

The Army in statement said eight cars were set on fire early this morning at different locations inside the military housing area in Wiesbaden, 18 miles west of Frankfurt.

The gas tanks of the cars apparently were punctured with an ice pick and the gasoline was ignited, the Army said. All eight cars were destroyed.

"The motive for the fires is unknown," the Army said.

The Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung newspaper in an editorial said hysterical attacks against the Reagan administration were fueling anti-American sentiment in West Germany and furnishing terrorists with an excuse for attacks on Americans.

"Such uncontrolled propaganda produces consequences," the newspaper said.

With the outbreak of bombings in West Germany and Peru, a State Department official said it was a "bizarre weekend," but added there was no evidence the attacks were part of a new terrorist campaign against the United States.

Police in both West Germany and Peru searched for leftist suspects, although no group in either country claimed responsibility for the bombings.

West German police launched a manhunt for wanted terrorist Christian Klar, who they said may have entered the Ramstein base before the bombing. They said maps and information on security at the base were found last year in the Heidelberg apartment of terrorists Julian Plambeck and Rolf Behr after they died in an auto accident.

The bomb, placed under or inside a Volkswagen, blew the car's hood over the five-story headquarters building, knocked over people in a 100-yard radius and demolished several cars.

"Windows were blown out, partitions, interior walls, equipment and furniture received some damage," said an Air Force statement on the damage to the headquarters building which also houses the NATO Air Force headquarters for Central Europe.

New house price drops

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The average price of a new house dropped sharply in July, the first back step in five months, the government reports.

The Commerce Department said Monday the national average price for a new single-family house dropped to $83,600 in July, down $2,300 from the June level of $85,900 and down $2,900 from May's average.

But the price was still $6,800 ahead of the average in July of last year.

"It's certainly not surprising to see prices go down," said Bill Young of the National Association of Home Builders. "The market's so soft right now because of the high interest rates."

"Things have gotten so topsy-turvy you really can't say anything about trends," Young said.

Take activist role, staff told

By Nancy Thompson
Herald Reporter

Citing a "crisis of support" facing the public schools, speakers today urged teachers to take an activist role in promoting public schools.

Anne Gauvin, president of the Manchester Education Association, and James P. Kennedy, superintendent of schools, addressed that topic in their remarks to the school system's 500 teachers, who gathered in the teachers' cafeteria at Manchester High School today.

Both Ms. Gauvin and Kennedy discussed the bleak budgetary situation the schools find themselves in, with federal, state and local cuts passed down this spring.

"In many ways, this is our worst year in the sense of apparent support," Kennedy said. "On the other hand, public schools have never produced better."

In addition to the financial crisis, which locally forced the Board of Education to cut more than $700,000 from its proposed budget this spring, the speakers cited a "crisis of criticism" facing educators.

"There is a proliferation of critics who would have the public believe that the schools are failing. We witness all too frequently attacks from members of the new right, the moral majority, single issue groups who would vent their frustrations with society's rapid changes on an accessible target — the public schools," Ms. Gauvin said.

Despite the problems facing the schools, both Ms. Gauvin and Kennedy said there is reason for optimism.

"I believe education is worth fighting for," Kennedy said. "Public education in the Manchester school system is a productive system deserving of the support of the community. There are some indications of quality in this town. We are going to have to fight to keep them."

Kennedy urged teachers to make their views known to the school board in decisions it will make this year, including reorganization of the schools.

Ms. Gauvin said, "The answer to the problems that face the teaching profession and public education lies with you (the teachers)."

"Teachers can make the difference in what happens to public education," she continued. "I ask you to send that message to your students' parents, to this community and to the politicians at all levels of government. We are proud of the job we do. We are proud of our schools. We teach the children in this rapidly changing society as best we can with what support is given to us."

"Our schools deserve support from our community. Our schools must have support from our community. Only by working together can we provide the best possible learning opportunities for our children."

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini ordered his regime today to ease its crackdown against dissidents in the aftermath of the assassinations of President Mohammed Ali Rajai and Prime Minister Mohammed Javad Bahonar.

But former President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said "armed rebellion has already begun" in Iran and he said Khomeini's support among the people had diminished drastically.

Khomeini issued the order in a speech at his north Tehran home. Tehran Radio said in a live broadcast monitored in Ankara, Turkey. Khomeini's speech was interrupted several times during the broadcast. Khomeini's new order came as assassinations and attacks against the regime grew throughout Iran. Guerrillas killed a senior clerical judge and a guard in his courtroom in a brazen challenge to angry Iranian authorities who were demanding revenge for the firebomb assassination of the president and prime minister, Tehran Radio said.

Khomeini, whose regime has acknowledged executing more than 600 people since the ouster of Bani-Sadr in June, said authorities "must not lose control and not act more harshly than what is prescribed by God and Islamic law."

He said the "unpleasant episode in which we lost two of our best young men and best workers" should not cause officials "to become tougher towards their prisoners, their captives, or arrest people who, God may forbid, are not guilty."

OPINION / Commentary

Oil thefts: problem for Uncle Sam

WASHINGTON — Interior Secretary James Watt has appointed a special commission to investigate the theft of oil from wells and storage facilities on Indian lands, as well as the general problem of royalty collection on government-owned oil wells.

It was a step in the right direction. Interior Department survey reports indicate that the theft problem may be a lot more serious than has been acknowledged officially.

Until recently, Interior officials have been reluctant to admit there even was much of a theft problem, despite numerous General Accounting Office reports dating back nearly 30 years, which indicated that the collection process was slipshod.

And the amount of money involved is substantial. Last year, total royalties from oil and gas produced on federal and Indian lands came to $2.7 billion. Oil prices have now been decontrolled completely, and if Secretary Watt's plans to open up more federal land to drilling are approved, the royalties are expected to rise to nearly $23 billion a year by 1990.

This makes it all the more important to strengthen the royalty collection system and to prevent theft, obviously. Uncle Sam gets no royalties on stolen petroleum.

Records of the U.S. Geological Survey contain evidence of 13 actual or suspected thefts in the period between October 1980 and last April. For example, 1,743 barrels of oil or natural gas condensate were either stolen or lost in the Rock Springs, Wyo., drilling district alone.

Other thefts — or unexplained losses — were indicated at Bakersfield, Calif. (422 barrels) and Farmington, N.M. (66 barrels).

Leading the number of violations during the October-April period were the Casper and Newcastle districts in Wyoming, with a combined total of 575 noncompliance instances out of 3,899 wells inspected.

Another USGS document shows that between October 1980 and last June 15, a total of 38,000 well inspections had been made. The federal inspectors reported 4,453 instances of noncompliance with government regulations.

The bulk of these compliance failures involved trouble with seals and valves. "We're looking for broken seals," a veteran USGS official told my associate Tony Capar-

Jack Anderson
Washington Merry-Go-Round

io. He explained that broken or missing seals, and valves that have been tampered with, are persuasive evidence that thefts may have occurred.

The Interior Department claims that the theft problem wasn't brought to its attention until the late 1970s. But internal memos from inspectors in the field warned of the problem at least as far back as 1972 — and offered documented evidence of theft.

One glaring weakness in the royalty system has been pointed out by investigators for Rep. Ben Rothen-thal, D-N.Y.: The Geological Survey relies almost entirely on production and sales data provided by the oil and gas companies to compute royalties that are owed to the government. To check on these foxy guardians of the taxpayers' oil-producing chicken coops, the USGS audited only 5 percent of its leases last year.

More and better audits would undoubtedly make it tougher on oil thieves, the congressional investigators concluded.

WHISTLEBLOWERS PUNISHED: Last year, acting on complaints by Capt. Eugene Essex, then-Sgt. Paul Sample and others, the Air Force investigated the handling of nuclear weapons at Whiteman Air Force Base near Kansas City. The Air Force investigators found that there were indeed problems.

The problems included a mis-targeted missile, cheating on proficiency tests, misuse of classified codes and instances of launch crewmen leaving alarm circuit breakers open so they could nap on duty. In short, the charges constituted a serious indictment of our missile crews' professionalism — and the Air Force investigators found that there were indeed problems.

The whistleblowers had excellent performance ratings before they testified; afterward, they were given bad ratings and unfavorable letters in their personnel files.

The whistleblowers were assigned to work under the very officers they had accused — and who had been found to be responsible for the problems originally.

Rep. Ike Skelton, D-Mo., has promised to investigate these allegations. He said he will also address himself to the overall problem of the military's shortage of qualified manpower — a problem the Air Force brass stoutly denies the existence of in the missile branch.

Briefly noted

Here we're still recovering from the budget-reduction and tax-cut ordeals and now there's word out of Washington of another change in the way the government goes about its fiscal business.

The treasury is changing the color scheme of the more than half a billion checks it issues every year. The checks have been printed in black on green or gold backgrounds. The fronts will retain the traditional color scheme but the backs are being changed to orange printing on buff.

The reason is efficiency — to enhance legibility of endorsements and microfilmed records — not artistic effect. Or, obviously, symbolism, in which case there could have been only one appropriate color choice: red.

A MAJOR airline, Western, has been making a big promotional deal of its champagne flights for years. What's new about the practice this year, according to a Wall Street Journal brief, is that despite a 5 percent decline in passenger loads following the air traffic controllers' walkout, champagne continues to be consumed aloft at about the 1980 rate.

This apparently strikes the airline as somewhat unusual, but you don't have to look too far to see a possible connection.

IT PROBABLY doesn't, comes as news at this late date that the videogame business is booming. In fact, you could be a contributor to the boom.

Millions of Americans are, to an extent that is news. We are reported to have dropped some $9 billion worth of coins into the electronic devices last year, three times as much as we spent at movie box offices.

That may not be as one-sided an entertainment imbalance as it appears, however.

The bottom line for the big screens is certain to look much better when receipts from the popcorn concessions are in.

SECOND Thoughts on Headlines Department: "Angola interested in better U.S. ties." (From the Washington Post, reporting indications the African regime supported by 20,000 Cuban troops would like to improve relations with the United States.) Politically it would appear impossible as long as those Cubans are around. But if the Angolans want to talk purely business, it's just possible we might be able to develop something mutually profitable in bows and four-in-hands, or colorful foulards...

An editorial Should U.S. back world's pariah?

There are two ways of looking at the U.S. dilemma in South-West Africa or Namibia as that arid country has come to be called.

You can take the conservative viewpoint, the one that the Reagan administration is leaning toward and emphasize the strategic importance of the minerals such as uranium that are found in South-West Africa and the Marxist support for the guerrillas who are trying to wrest control of the country from the white supremacist South African government.

You can argue that the U.S. should do whatever it can—even if that means becoming allies of South Africa to keep South-West Africa out of Communist hands.

Or you can take the liberal approach, reasoning that after the guerrillas take over Southwest Africa they probably will be more nationalistic than anything else, will try to avoid too close a link with the Soviet Union and probably will be only too happy to obtain American dollars in return for strategic goods.

You can argue that in the long run the U.S. will be better off if it supports the side that ultimately will win in South-West Africa. And, since whites represent only about 10 percent of the population of South-West Africa, the minority's chances of staying in power forever are limited.

Persuasive cases can be made for either position. But meanwhile, by tending to side with the white minority, the U.S. is doing grave damage to its image in Africa and many other parts of the Third World.

The United Nations has long since condemned South Africa for continuing to occupy South-West Africa for not allowing majority rule there. When South African troops invaded Angola last week to pursue South-West African guerrillas, only the U.S. failed to criticize the raid. Even Britain and France two of our strongest allies, condemned it.

To the Reagan administration, the Soviet Union is the world's number one villain. But to many in the Third World whose contact with the Soviets is limited, South Africa is thought to be worse, a throwback to the hated days of colonial rule.

And indeed the South African regime runs one of the most effective and harshest police states in the world. The Soviet Union is one of the few countries with an even more reprehensible system.

The U.S. by backing South Africa is playing right into the hands of the Soviet Union in one important way. It is allowing the matter to portray America as a 'friend of racists and colonialists.

In the long run, that unfortunate image may hurt us more than the presence of a Marxist regime in South-West Africa.

"Why didn't we think of this before? Put the criminals on the outside and the law-abiding citizens on the inside."

Casinos no bonanza

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (NEA)—Financially strapped cities and states from New York to California have become intrigued in recent years with the concept of introducing casino gambling as a potential panacea for their fiscal woes.

But this city's recent experiment with government-sanctioned casino betting suggests, notwithstanding the claims advanced by its most zealous advocates, that it offers little promise of providing an instant financial bonanza.

On the other hand, legalized gambling is not likely to fulfill the worst fears of its most strident critics. Indeed, the risky venture here holds the potential for long-range success if a number of short-term difficulties — some of them severe — can be surmounted.

Most current analyses of gambling's impact on this once fashionable but now decaying seaside community tend to stress the casino's failure to immediately generate adequate revenues to promptly resolve all of the city's assorted problems.

One major newspaper, for example, recently reported that "much of Atlantic City remains an urban wasteland" and permanently concluded that "this dilapidated resort town may never realize the renewal... (it) hoped gambling would spawn."

The city does continue to display many of the symptoms of advanced urban blight — they are the product of years of economic decline that preceded the November 1978 statewide referendum that authorized casino gambling here.

The first casino did not open for business until May 1978 — only three years and three months ago. With eight casinos now operating and a ninth soon to open, the city is in the initial phase of what could well be an impressive economic revival.

Item: Atlantic City was host to approximately 14 million tourists last year, compared with 12.5 million visitors to Las Vegas in 1980. Although this city counted only 2 million annual visitors as recently as 1976, the number is expected to exceed 18.5 million this year.

Robert Walters
Syndicated Columnist

Item: Although the city's population is a relatively modest 40,200, at least 30,000 new jobs have been created by the casinos already in operation and that figure doesn't include indirect employment opportunities.

Item: Wages paid to employees of the city's hospitality industry have soared from $15 million in 1976 to more than $200 million in 1980 and are expected to reach $300 million by the end of this year.

Item: The total investment on the part of the casino industry is approaching $1.5 billion. In addition, tourist spending is estimated to total almost $2 billion annually.

The boom has, however, produced problems. "We were not ready with housing, we were not ready with transportation, we were not ready with public services," admits one spokesman for the hotel and casino industry.

Soaring interest rates have adversely affected every community in the country, but no other city of comparable size had such an ambitious, multi-billion-dollar construction program on the drawing board when the cost of borrowed money began to approach — and then exceeded — 20 percent.

As a result, many of the projects belatedly designed to meet the rapidly escalating demand for homes, office space and commercial facilities have been temporarily abandoned or indefinitely postponed.

Redevelopment here clearly has not reached the "critical mass" stage necessary to transform the long-depressed community into a glittering mecca for the tourists among the 40 million people who live within a 300-mile radius.

The city promoters talk optimistically of as many as a dozen additional casinos being built in the coming years. In addition, they know they need at least 20,000 first-class hotel rooms and a greatly expanded and improved convention hall (the current facility was built in 1929) to regain their status as the most popular in the east.

They probably have an even chance of attaining that goal — but gambling is not likely to offer fiscal salvation elsewhere because the nation's economy simply cannot support casinos in many additional communities.

Remy batting star for Sox

BOSTON (UPI) — Fenway Park, with its beckoning Green Monster lurking just a poke away, is an ideal place for hitters. But Jerry Remy's style remains the same in any park — just keep it out of the air and things might happen.

The Red Sox second baseman knocked in two runs Monday night to back the seven-hit pitching of Dennis Eckersley as Boston downed the California Angels 4-1. Remy drove in the game-winning run with an uncharacteristic double off the left field wall in the fifth off loser Dave Frost, 1-4, and then singled in an insurance tally in the seventh off reliever Bruce Kison.

"I hit the wall. It means I'm not swinging the bat well, even though I did stroke that double," Remy said. "If I hit the ball in the air, I'm done, because I can't hit it out of the park. I don't even bother checking the wind before the game because it does make any difference for a guy like me."

Remy is hitting .417 in scoring position, but he doesn't take full credit for his ability to produce under pressure.

"The main reason is (Dwight) Evans, with him swinging the bat so well, I'm coming up next. I have to get good pitches. I might get a single but he's liable to hit a homer. He's a much more intimidating hitter than I am."

Eckersley held the Angels to four hits through seven innings, retiring

13 in a row in one stretch. He fanned four and walked one to raise his record to 7-5 and was helped to his sixth complete game by the first-inning error by the Angels.

Fred Lynn, who was 0-for-4, added, "If we hold them to four runs in this park, we should win. I feel Eckersley made the pitches when he had to."

"It's more of a cramp than anything else," Yaz said. "I'll be ready tomorrow. The throw was off and I was at the bag so I had to get down to stay there."

The Red Sox closed the scoring in the seventh when Stapleton led off with a triple but was nailed in a run-down on Glenn Hoffman's grounder to Burleson. Hoffman took second on the play and scored on Remy's double.

The Red Sox took a 3-1 lead in the sixth when Yastrzemski led off with a double, but pulled a hamstring when he overran second base. Reid Nichols replaced Yaz and scored moments later on a Carney Lansford (11 straight games) single to right.

Michael on borrowed time

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ask, and ye shall receive, and since he came right out and asked George Steinbrenner to fire him, Gene Michael should be receiving word any day now he's being replaced by Joe Altobelli or Clyde King as the Yankees' new manager.

When the official announcement is made, possibly even before the end of this week, it will come as any big shock to Michael.

He has been on borrowed time since last Friday when he got a call in Chicago from Steinbrenner and was told by "Gene. I think I'm going to have to let you go."

I upset and angered over what he considered a series of threats, Michael urged the Yankee owner not to wait "Fire me, now. Get it over with," he said.

Michael then told a group of reporters what he had said to Steinbrenner and right there and then he burned all his bridges behind him. But good.

As someone who was the Yankees' general manager before he became their manager last November, Michael should be aware, perhaps better than anyone else, that you never take on George Steinbrenner in the newspapers.

If he needs any proof of that, he need only consult two of his predecessors, Dick Howser, who was named Kansas City's new manager Monday, or Billy Martin.

Howser hastened his own departure as Yankee manager last November by getting into a confrontation with Steinbrenner in the newspapers over not being consulted about the possible addition of Don Zimmer to the coaching staff, and Martin precipitated the firing of his two exits as manager of the Yankees with an inflammatory statement part of 1974 and most of 1975.

Both are low-key managers, like Michael, not given to loud outbursts. When Steinbrenner makes his next managerial move, it will not be an impulsive one.

The memory of the Yankees' loss to the Royals in last year's playoff still is with him and he's anxious for them to win this second half of the season as well as they did the first. He isn't at all convinced Michael can bring them home in front again and has decided to do something about it. Occasionally, he seems to act impulsively, but he always plans well in advance. He's a man who always takes out managerial insurance.

While Martin was still managing for him, Steinbrenner had Dick Williams in the wings and even signed him as his new manager, only to have Charlie Finley overturn the entire proceedings by reminding he still owned Williams' contract.

When Steinbrenner first saw major league managerial potential in Michael, he sent him to the Yankees' Columbus farm club in the International League to sharpen his skills, so that Michael was ready to take over for Howser. Not coincidentally, Altobelli, inherited Michael's job as Columbus manager last year and then was brought in as one of the Yankees' coaches this year so that he'd be available to move up.

King has been with the club on-and-off for several years as a general trouble shooter serving in the capacity of pitching instructor, scout and coach. He began the present season as the Yankees' No. 1 pitching instructor in their farm system and replaced Stan Williams as the Yankees' pitching coach in June.

Skipper's move wins for Seattle

By Fred McMane
UPI Sports Writer

Dick Howser's debut as manager of the Kansas City Royals was hardly the stuff on which pennants are built.

But things could be worse for the new Royals' skipper. After all, he could be in Rene Lachemann's shoes.

Lachemann, manager of the Seattle Mariners, had gone nearly two weeks between victories before his club squeaked out a 4-3 triumph over the Baltimore Orioles Monday night.

And, the victory probably would appeal to his baser instincts and if Lachemann had not "mismanaged" the team in the ninth inning.

With the Mariners leading 4-3 in the ninth, Lachemann had to make a decision on whether or not to relieve right-hander Larry Andersen with left-hander Shane Rawley and he stuck with Andersen, a move that paid off with a victory.

Jim Dwyer singled to left-center with one out and Terry Crowley walked to start the Orioles' ninth, but Jose Morales took a third strike and Rawley pitched to him.

"That's when I normally would've made a move," said Lachemann. "Bumby was up next and he's a left-handed batter, and Shane Rawley is a left-handed pitcher. I guess any other time, I'd have pulled out Larry."

Andersen was allowed to pitch to Bumby, however, and walked him with his 11th homer, and Tony Armas hit a run-scoring double to pace the A's to victory. The A's scored all four runs in the fifth to snap starter Bert Blyleven's 9-6 winning streak at three and the Indians' streak at five.

At Cleveland, Dwayne Murphy drove in four runs, including three with his 11th homer, and Tony Armas hit a run-scoring double to pace the A's to victory. The A's scored all four runs in the fifth to snap starter Bert Blyleven's 9-6 winning streak at three and the Indians' streak at five.

Phils outslug Braves

Dick Ruthven knew better than anyone how ugly it was.

"I'm happy that the team won but I'm not happy that we've ever been with the way I pitched," Ruthven said Monday night after surrendering eight runs in 5.2-1/2 innings out of the Atlanta Braves' 11-8 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies 11-8.

Mike Schmidt ripped his 23rd home run to help Ruthven earn his 10th victory.

"I made mistakes that I can see myself making if I was 22 or 23, said the 30-year-old Ruthven, "but I understand pitching now and I can't fathom myself making those types of moment mistakes."

With Atlanta leading 4-2, the Phillies scored four runs off loser Gaylord Perry, 6-5, in the fifth on a three-run homer by Schmidt and a solo shot by Keith Moreland, his sixth Philadelphia home run since the eighth on an RBI single by Gary

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Billie Jean King, the first woman athlete to earn $100,000 a year and the first female player-coach of a pro sports team, has become the first woman to lead a professional sports league.

Team Tennis president Larry King announced Monday that his wife would serve as the league's commissioner effective immediately.

Gary Carter
NEW YORK (UPI) — Montreal's Gary Carter, who had 13 RBI, three home runs and five runs scored, was named Monday the National League Player of the Week.

Carter had his first RBI game in one game for the Expos, including his fifth career grand slam. The next day he knocked in four more runs and had a .444 batting average for the week.

Austin Carr
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Washington Bullets Monday waived veteran guard Austin Carr.

Carr, 6-foot-4, was acquired last November from the Dallas Mavericks in exchange for future considerations. Previously he spent nine seasons with the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Carr averaged 4.9 points in 39 games with the Bullets last season. A graduate of Notre Dame, Carr was Cleveland's first round draft pick in 1971.

Kirk Gibson
NEW YORK (UPI) — Detroit Tigers' outfielder Kirk Gibson, who hadted 500 and compiled a slugging percentage of .731, Monday was named American League Player of the Week, beating out Texas All-Star third baseman Buddy Bell.

Among Gibson's 15 hits for the week were two doubles, a triple and a homer as he collected 22 total bases, scored six runs, stole two bases and had an on-base percentage of .531.

Clark Gaines
NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Jets waived four players Monday and placed veteran running back Clark Gaines on the injured reserve list to get down to the regular-season 45-man active roster.

Gaines, a five-year pro who rushed for a club-high 965 yards in '79, broke his leg against New England in the fifth game last season and has had problems recovering.

Phil Garner
NEW YORK (UPI) — The Houston Astros, looking for that one key performer who can help them beef up their first place margin and carry them into the playoffs, apparently have found him in second baseman Phil Garner, whom they are expected to acquire from the Pittsburgh Pirates in a multi-player deal today.

The only reason the Pirates are giving up Garner for a couple of the Astros' off-minor-league prospects and cash is because they have failed to satisfy his contract demands and are reconciled to losing him anyway in six more weeks when he becomes a free agent at the end of the season.

Jackson sparks offense

Day-to-day basis' for Yankee manager

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — New York Yankees manager Gene Michael says the load he has to bear is a lot lighter now that he has opened up and Reggie Jackson is hitting again.

Michael, who last week admitted his job is on the line, said he now works on a "day-to-day basis."

The time goes by much easier when the Yankees play well as they did Monday night in a 6-0 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

"It doesn't bother me anymore," he said. "Now that I've opened up, there's a big load off my shoulders and I can concentrate on the team."

The Yankees pounded out 12 hits, including two doubles by Jackson and one each by Willie Randolph, Dave Winfield and Larry Milbourne — all three Twins' pitchers. "We've been hitting well the last four days," Michael said. "The biggest reason why is Reggie. When he's hitting well, the whole ballclub is."

Jackson entered the game hitting .219. He was requested by the Yankees to undergo a physical examination last week and Michael said the right fielder got a clean bill of health.

Umpires to appeal

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Two umpires fined for engaging in a shoving match with a television crew at a Philadelphia Phillies baseball game have appealed the disciplinary action.

Attorney Richard Phillips of the Major League Umpires Association said he filed appeals with the National League for umpires Nick Colosi and Frank Pulli on the basis of their actions during the game and encouraged a volatile situation.

National League president Chuck Feeney Monday imposed a $500 fine against Colosi, and a $300 fine against Pulli for their roles in the Aug. 24 incident.

During the game, Phillies manager Dallas Green argued with umpire Steve Fields and knocked off his hat. Green was fined and suspended for five games.

After the game, a Philadelphia television crew went on the field and asked a question of Fields, implying he had not received much help from his fellow umpires during the Green dispute. Fields had worked during the umpires' strike two years ago.

Colosi and Pulli overheard the question and objected.

In the ensuing shoving match, a television camera was broken. The appeal will be heard sometime next week.

Final drills

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — World Boxing Association welterweight champion Thomas Hearns arrived in Las Vegas Sunday to begin preparations for his Sept. 16 showdown with World Boxing Council champion Sugar Ray Leonard.

Hearns, who had been training in his hometown of Detroit, didn't show up Sunday but was slated to begin training Monday.

Leonard, who has been in Las Vegas for 10 days, also didn't appear Sunday. He attended a gymnasium at Caesar's Palace, where the scheduled 15-round bout will be held, and was also expected to resume training Monday.

Patrols change roster

POXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — The New England Patriots Monday traded defensive back Bill Currier to the New York Giants and placed three players, including promising linebacker Larry McGrew, on injured reserve.

McGrew is likely to be out for the season with a torn cartilage in his left knee. The second-year linebacker from Southern California originally hurt the knee while getting out of bed to answer a telephone in training camp. An arthroscopic examination Monday revealed the cartilage tear, which will require surgery.

The moves trim New England's active roster to 46 players and Coach Ron Erhardt said he would announce the final move Tuesday.

NFL teams have until 4 p.m. EDT Tuesday to cut their rosters to 45 players.

The Patriots received a draft choice for Currier, who was signed as a free agent last year after being cut by the Houston Oilers. He played sparingly last year as a defensive back and special teams member.

Also placed on injured reserve were rookie guard Ron Wood and second-year receiver Preston Brown. The Patriots said both players hurt their backs in Sunday's 19-10 triumph over Washington.

Tackle box items

A fishing department has compiled a list of things proven worthwhile to include in a tackle box.

Items most frequently found are a pocket-sized plastic raincoat, sunglasses, sunburn prevention lotion, electrical tape, waterproof matches, tape measure, small first-aid kit, and a pencil and notebook for recording observations.

A good way to store small tackle, such as swivels, snaps and extra hooks, is to string them together in large safety pins. The easiest to find in a crowded tackle box are those with colored plastic heads, the kind used by mothers to pin diapers in youngsters.

One final tip: Glue a piece of cloth to the bottom of your tackle box. It'll help deaden sound when the box bounces around in a light boat, and will make the box nearly slide-proof when used in a modern bass boat or other craft which has carpeted decks.

Tough night all around for Weaver

TOWSON, Md. (UPI) — On the same night that his team lost a game to the California Angels, Baltimore Orioles manager Earl Weaver lost his driver's license to police on charges that he was driving while under the influence of alcohol.

Baltimore County Police said a car driven by Weaver was spotted crossing the 6200 No. hearing date road about 12:20 a.m. Monday and patrolmen gave chase when the car ran a red light.

Weaver, who has piloted the Orioles to four American League championships and one World Series victory in his 13 years at the Orioles helm, was charged with driving under the influence, failure to obey an automatic traffic signal, failure to drive right of the center line and failure to sign the traffic summons.

Weaver could not be reached for comment and the club said the matter was "personal" and no statement would be issued. The team lost to the California Angels 7-1 Sunday.

Weaver's bail hearing was held at 3:30 a.m. in the Towson Commissioner's office. Weaver was released after his wife put up a personal pledge of $200. No hearing date has been scheduled.

Weaver, 51, was fined $150 and his drivers license was suspended for 15 days.

During that April 16, 1973, incident, Weaver "yelled and screamed" and was "cocky and insolent," officials James Slocum testified at the time. After handing the manager the sentence, Judge

A little bit of Italy came to Manchester Sunday, when 12 visitors from Piacenza, Italy, and their host families were feted at a picnic at the home of Stanley and Barbara Weinberg at 157 Pitkin St.

Mrs. Weinberg is state and New England director of the Friendship Force, a people-to-people exchange program, and the Italians were in the United States on a 10-day visit while their American counterparts are in Piacenza.

Following a warm message of welcome from Mrs. Weinberg, Barry W. Boticello, president of the Friendship Force, a people-to-people exchange program, and the Italians were in the United States on a 10-day visit while their American counterparts are in Piacenza.

Since that time, Connecticut residents have participated in exchanges with Israel, Korea and Germany. Several other states have also participated in the program.

The non-profit, non-governmental group is geared to create international understanding and goodwill. Participation in the program is open to everyone, and announcement of future state trips will be made in The Herald.

Cremosi, 16, a student; Franco Eva, 63, chemist, who served as flight director; Emilia Ferrari, 56, English teacher; Maria Luisa Scardario, 44, police inspector; Enrico Gallini, 29, engineer; Pier Giorgio Morganti, 34, accountant; Giuseppe Ribaldi, 20, student; Giancarlo Rossi, 24, bank employee; Carlo Lucchini, 56, professor of math; Luisa Muselli, 68, retired teacher; Antonia Muselli, 65, teacher; and Alfredo Massari, 70, retired mechanic.

The Friendship Force program was initiated when former president Carter was governor of Georgia and the first exchange was from Georgia to Newcastle, England.

The tipoff:
Look for baseball players now to insert clauses into future contracts that assure them of being paid, struck or no strike. It's just another form of the $50 million insurance that the owners took with Lloyd's of London. In fact, a few of the more present players did get paid during the past strike.

Q. During his career as a Cincinnati Reds pitcher, hasn't Tom Seaver thrown a no-hitter? If so, what team did he throw it against and the date and the score? — Chuck Brazier, Linden, N.J.
The veteran right-hander threw the only no-hitter of his 15-year career in his first full season as a Red — when he blanked the St. Louis Cardinals, 4-0, on June 16, 1978. Among his 245 career victories going into the 1981 campaign were five no-hitters, a National League record.

Q. You wrote that Super Bowl XVI will be held for the first time in a cold-weather climate next January in Pontiac, Mich. — indoors. I believe that Green Bay and Dallas played at Green Bay — outside, cold-weather climate, temperature about 10 degrees below, Super Bowl II or III, or something like that. Game won by Green Bay on a quarterback sneak by Bart Starr with 13 seconds to play. However, the victory only gave the Packers the NFL title. It merely led to Super Bowl IV — where they defeated the AFL champion Oakland Raiders, 16-14, in Miami.
I was there. But it wasn't a Super Bowl game. The game was played on Dec. 30, 1967, in Green Bay with the temperature 13 degrees below at kickoff and the wind chill factor unbelievable. It got even colder as the game progressed. So, receiver Bob Hayes of the Cowboys never took his hands out of his pants. The Packers won, 21-17 — in the last game Vince Lombardi ever coached in Green Bay — on a quarterback sneak by Bart Starr with 13 seconds to play. However, the victory only gave the Packers the NFL title. It merely led to Super Bowl IV — where they defeated the AFL champion Oakland Raiders, 16-14, in Miami.

Divorce and adoption

Child should know the truth

DEAR ABBY: Should a child be told that he is adopted? When my husband (I'll call him Jim) married his first wife, he adopted her 3-month-old illegitimate son who had been fathered by a man who didn't want to marry her. (Jim was aware of all the facts.)

Dear Abby

Abigail VanBuren

...since "a few people in town know the whole story."

DEAR ABBY: I just read about the hostess who resents it when guests ask for a "tour" of the house. Here's the flip side of that one: Hostesses who ask their comfortably seated guests if they want a "tour" of the house.

DEAR ABBY: In all my 63 years, I've never written to an editor, nor have I ever written to an advice columnist, but I recently read an item in the newspaper that I think deserves national publicity, and I can think of no better way to get it than through your column. I hope you print it.

DEAR ABBY: I too, found the item very inspiring, and here is my edited version:

DEAR BORED: Politely decline.

Losing weight too fast

Diet effort can be overdone

DEAR DR. LAMB - I'm very worried about my weight. I'm 42 and at least 20 pounds overweight. Recently he decided to do something about it and has been on a strict diet.

Your Health

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I read somewhere that there is a vitamin that will help a person in restoring his sense of taste and smell. Do you know which vitamin it is?

DEAR DR. LAMB - I'm glad he has lost the weight but now he has a "mother" problem, a dieting to faint. Whenever he is bending over and gets up he feels dizzy and sometimes he has to sit or bend down to keep from fainting.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I have never had a fainting problem before, even though he has given blood and had lots of things happen. Is this a sign that he has heart disease? Will he have a stroke?

DEAR DR. LAMB - It is probably a sign that he has been overdoing his dieting program - trying to lose weight too fast.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I have been divorced for five years and have legal custody of my two children. Because of illness in the family, however, I sent them to live with their father in another state.

Ask Dr. Blaker

Karen Blaker, Ph.D.

DEAR DR. BLAKER - I have been divorced for five years and have legal custody of my two children. Because of illness in the family, however, I sent them to live with their father in another state.

ATLANTA - Ted Turner isn't the sort who would confess himself bewildered in most situations, but he said he is at least bewildered at the prospect of a cable news service in which the main news-gathering arm refuses to report major stories.

That he charged, is what his newest competitor is about to produce. The latest target of the man who created the Cable News Network with its 24-hour, all-news format and the sea of red ink in which it has sailed for the past 15 months, is Satellite NewsChannels - the offspring of ABC and Westinghouse's Group W.

"It's a joke," Turner said. And he added, "conflict of interest" as well. ABC and Westinghouse's Group W, which just acquired the Telepromer system with its 1.4 million cable hookups, will launch its own 24-hour, all-news cable operation next spring.

With Turner's operation losing in the neighborhood of $1 million a month, the competition might be deemed fatal, but at Turner heard in the Aug. 12 announcement was the voice of ABC News President Roone Arledge.

"Arledge said, and I quote, 'If Barbara Walters were to interview the Ayatollah Khomeini, obviously we would consider that an exclusive for ABC's World News Tonight,'" he said.

"For the first time in the history of journalism, a journalistic effort has been started where the news producing partner has a conflict of interest with his established business and announced at the onset that major stories will be withheld because of a conflict of interest situation."

"It's never been done before. How can you accept a news service that's deliberately withholding important stories, and it's supposed to be on 24 hours a day? All this is going to do is a promotion for the ABC evening news. They're going to say, 'the big stories come on at 7...'"

CNN's losses, and the burden of a recent loan of $50 million, might have the average businessman in a state of shock, ABC and Westinghouse's group W, which has demanded a congressional investigation of major network sex and violence programming which has charged amounts to "treason."

"Put it this way," said Arthur Sando, Turner's director of corporate communications. "Ted decides we're going to do something and the bulldozers are outside the next day."

Turner's answer to the network's "he said" is that he is going to get there first, and before it's over, I'm going to be dancing on their graves."

"We're the only company that I know of in this business that said we intend to compete head to head and toe to toe with the networks," he said. "It's just taken us time to get there and, before it's over, I'm going to be dancing on their graves."

Hayley Mills returns at 35

By Dick Kleiner
HOLLYWOOD (NEA) - You may be shocked to learn that Hayley Mills, the little darling of so many pictures, is now a fascinating 35-year-old with a couple of sons of her own.

The last is being remedied - sort of. She is not pursuing the career slam-bang, but she is about to do some things. You will be seeing more of Hayley Mills in the immediate future than you did in the immediate past.

In late fall or early winter on PBS, Hayley Mills will play in "The Flame Trees of Thika," a seven-part offering on Masterpiece Theater. That is based on a book by Elsie Huxley, and concerns Miss Huxley's youth in Kenya, which is where "The Flame Trees of Thika" was filmed.

"I haven't been very aggressive as far as my career is concerned for the last five years," she says. "I had it very easy when I was young...and then I found it difficult to do the right things as a woman."

School, town to try for soccer field again

By Richard Coady Herald Reporter

BOLTON — The school administration has applied again for a state Department of Education grant to help fund a new soccer field for the high school, even though two previous efforts to start the project were stumped.

"But we'll keep trying." He said the board should hear next spring if the project will be funded for the year 1982-83.

The school board applied for a grant in 1978, and was approved for partial funding of the project the next year, Allen said.

Bridgeport professors OK contract

BRIDGEPORT (UPI) — Fall classes begin today for 7,200 students at the University of Bridgeport as union professors head for work with a tentative contract settlement that averted a threatened strike.

Members of the university chapter of the American Association of University Professors accepted the three-year contract by a tentative vote of 133 to 4 Monday. A formal ratification vote was planned within a week.

University President Lelan Miles said he was "extremely pleased" that a settlement had been reached. He said classes for the private university's 7,200 students "will proceed on schedule" today.

The settlement at the University of Bridgeport was reached during a 24-hour bargaining session that began at 4 p.m. Sunday. It offers professors 27 percent pay hikes, averaging nine percent in each of the three years.

The contract covers professors at Central Connecticut State College in New Britain, Eastern Connecticut State College in Willimantic, Southern Connecticut State College in New Haven and Western Connecticut State College in Danbury.

The Geodesic Dome of the Bicentennial Information Center has become symbolic of the celebration of Los Angeles' 200th birthday. The structure is only one of many bicentennial projects designed to make "lasting contributions" to the community.

Los Angeles finds identity for 200th fete

By Barbara McDowell

What comes to mind when you think of Los Angeles? Eight-lane freeways bisecting palm-and-succo suburbs? Land-back suits and gum-rucking parties? Earthquakes, mud slides and brush fires? Hollywood and Vine? Beverly Hills? "The latest I've heard is that Los Angeles is granola land—the land of fruits and nuts and flakes," laughs Jane Pisano, the executive director of the Los Angeles Bicentennial. But she quickly turns serious, pointing out that Los Angeles is much more than the glitzy, rocky involvement that much of the world perceives it to be. "In fact, it isn't that at all," she says. "There are many more important driving forces. But breaking through that stereotype is tough."

I think a lot of people in Los Angeles are in denial, maintaining that image just because that's what distinguishes the city from every other place else.

Dr. Pisano has been lighting the metaphorical fuse since she took charge of the city's 200th birthday celebration. That was just eight months after she moved to Los Angeles from Washington where she had been a professor of international relations and an assistant to National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

For the past year Los Angeles has been celebrating its founding on Sept. 4, 1781. It was a group of 41 settlers—half of them children—who had traveled north from Mexico.

Many were of mixed Negro and Hispanic ancestry, says Dr. Pisano. There was one Spaniard. There were no Indians. So you had Indian, black and Hispanic cultures in the first people who came to Los Angeles, she says. It was a multi-racial and multi-ethnic community—and without tension.

She notes three developments that distinguished the growth of the city: the arrival of the railroad, the "break" of the port at San Pedro and the growth of the city and the geodesic dome Bicentennial Information Center, trees for the San Francisco Valley and a community center for the Hispanic community of Lincoln Park.

The committee has financed its projects through donations of about $7 million from individuals, businesses and foundations. Its only public funds were an initial $400,000 from the city and a federal grant of about $400,000 that required the raising of matching funds.

"Another of the bicentennial projects was an art exhibit titled 'L.A. 2001.' But Dr. Pisano is hesitant to offer her own predictions for the city in its tricentennial year.

"Change happens so rapidly," she explains. "It happens rapidly everywhere. I know, but Los Angeles is such an experimental kind of place. "I would love to see Los Angeles as its tricentennial maintain the vitality and the innovation that exist now and that have come from the phenomenal growth and the influx of people, mixing all this up and not having a long period of anybody being settled in his ways."

Today everyone is a minority in Los Angeles," says Dr. Pisano. "The breakdown is about 6 percent or 7 percent Asian, 10 percent to 12 percent black, 30 percent Hispanic and the rest Anglo."

She considers the leading attribute to her adopted city to be the ethnic and occupational diversity of its residents. Other strong points include its "vitality," "cultural richness," varied recreational opportunities and, of course, climate.

But she acknowledges that the city also has great problems. "I think Los Angeles—very much like New York, but in a different and more spacious way—has all the great things writ large and all the bad things writ large."

"Chief among the 'bad things' that she has observed are:

"Transportation. 'If we don't solve this problem it's going to choke the growth of the city. The average commute is now one to one-and-a-half hours a day; by 1990 it will be two to three hours a day."

Doria treasure hunt ends

MONTAUK, N.Y. (UPI) — A 25-year-old dream to recover the fabulous riches of the Andrea Doria was over today and weary treasure hunters, with only one of the luxury liner's two safes in tow but with new evidence of why the "unsinkable" ship went down, packed equipment for the journey home.

The expedition's leader and financier, department store heir Peter Gimbel, who made his first bid at the site of the day after the Andrea Doria sank July 25, 1956, called off the venture Monday because he had run out of money to continue the $30,000-a-day search.

The exhausted crew of the search ship Sea Level II spent the last day shooting more underwater film for a documentary on the Andrea Doria and prepared to raise anchor today for the trip back to the ship's home port of Montauk, N.Y. The vessel was expected to arrive Wednesday morning.

Although divers failed to raise the second of two safes believed to contain up to $4 million in cash and jewels, the expedition reached another goal—to discover why the liner went down, killing 50 people.

They found that hull damage more extensive than previously believed caused the Andrea Doria to sink to the bottom of the Atlantic following a crash with the ship Stockholm.

One crewmember of the Sea Level II, which has been anchored off the Nantuxet coast ever since the crash with the Stockholm, told United Press International that some divers were drenched by the order to return.

"A few people are disappointed," he said by ship-to-shore radio, explaining they had hoped Gimbel would extend the search for a few more days.

Most of the crew members, however, were "ecstatic" over their finds—even without the second safe, according to Gimbel's spokeswoman, Lillian Pickard.

Ms. Pickard said the valuables contained in the recovered safe would belong to the salvager.

"They have accomplished what they set out to do. There is absolutely no disappointment," she said.

"They just have a feeling that it is time for them to leave. They don't want to push their luck and extend the expedition for a few days," Ms. Pickard said. "They took the physical problems into consideration when they abided by the deadline."

Gimbel had contracted a fever, and several of the divers were suffering from respiratory and ear problems after more than two weeks in compression without any fresh air. The divers have been living in a pressurized compartment to acclimatize them to the deepwater search.

Divers located one safe Thursday and were keeping it immersed in water for fear its contents would disintegrate if sea water had leaked into the safe and was allowed to leak out.

Ms. Pickard has said the safe will be kept open before live TV cameras.

Late Sunday, divers discovered "massive damage" to the hull, astonishing shipwreck experts who assumed the liner sank because one of its watertight compartment doors had been carelessly left open.

Gimbel and another diver explored three decks down through the ship in search of the watertight door, but found an "enormous hole" leading to the outside of the ship, Ms. Pickard said.

"It did not matter whether the door was open or not," she said. "The ship would have sunk anyway."

Rocky Raccoon goes home

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Rocky, the raccoon cub that made Wisconsin's bureaucracy look like pitiless pet-keepers, is going home.

Rocky will be surrendered Friday in the Eagle River Courthouse to the human family who adopted him.

Attorney General Bronson La Follette has withdrawn a petition that kept the raccoon under house arrest at an animal farm in northern Wisconsin. Rocky had been sent there a few weeks ago after conservation wardens confiscated him from the vacationing Thomas Turner family.

The Turners had brought Rocky with them from their home in Schaumburg, Ill.

The Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources took the raccoon from the Turners because Wisconsin law prohibits ownership of wild animals. A judge ordered the raccoon returned to the Turners but the department defied the order.

La Follette entered the case on the behalf of the Department of Natural Resources until he had a change of heart—prompted by publicity about the raccoon's plight.

"This case could go as high as the state Supreme Court at great expense to the taxpayers and the Turners," the attorney general said. "It is in the interest of justice the state is withdrawing its petition to permit Rocky to be returned to his family in Illinois."

The Turners adopted the raccoon as a pet last spring when they found it abandoned by its mother in their home. They were on vacation in northern Wisconsin when he was taken by the warden.

The Illinois family said they were worried Rocky, born in the milder climate of Illinois, might not be able to withstand the frigid temperatures of northern Wisconsin and feared his life would be endangered if he was turned loose. They also said they had been told the Wisconsin officials might kill the animal rather than set it free in the wild.

State Sen. Clifford Krueger entered the controversy Monday, accusing the Department of Natural Resources of being insensitive and lacking common sense. Krueger said the DNR should return Rocky to its owners.

Wisconsin's wild animal law, Krueger said, was to "prevent people from taking them out of the woods or killing them out of season. It was not designed to cover animals left by an act of God between the walls of someone's home."

Study says women's pay bias persists

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Substantial discrimination in pay between women and men in comparable jobs persists in the United States, a report prepared for the government said today.

While underlining the problem, the 126-page report provided little advice for ending discriminatory practices, saying the social and economic consequences involved make it "an extremely complex question."

The National Research Council, an arm of the National Academy of Sciences, conducted the three-year study at the request of the government's Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

The academy is a private research group chartered in 1963 by Congress to examine questions of public importance.

Ann R. Miller, professor of sociology at the University of Pennsylvania and head of the study committee, said perhaps the most persuasive evidence of discrimination is that despite tremendous changes in the labor market during the past 20 years, there has been no change in the relative earning positions of men and women.

In the early 1960s, women who worked the whole year at full-time jobs earned less than 60 percent of what men did and that is still true today," she said.

The report stressed that although some women balance family demands by choosing typically low-paying jobs that allow easy movement in and out of the labor market, the predominance of women in low-paying jobs "also results from the exclusionary practices of employers and from the systematic underpayment of jobs held mainly by women."

Most of the crew members, however, were "ecstatic" over their finds—even without the second safe, according to Gimbel's spokeswoman, Lillian Pickard.

Ms. Pickard said the valuables contained in the recovered safe would belong to the salvager.

"They have accomplished what they set out to do. There is absolutely no disappointment," she said.

Continuing down the small car road

Your Money's Worth
Sylvia Porter

Outside a new glass and steel skyscraper in mid-Manhattan a few days ago, I saw a snappily dressed chauffeur guarding an illegally parked car just as jet black and as highly polished as the longest limousine. On its trunk lid was a professionally mounted TV antenna and on its roof, a radio-phone aerial. When I peered in, I could see the status symbols: a tiny screen TV, mobile phone, even a portable refrigerator.

But the car itself (you guessed it), was one of Detroit's newest 1981 compacts. It is, according to specifications listed in "Automotive News," roughly 3 1/2 feet shorter, almost a foot thinner and about 3 inches lower than the standard limousine of just five years ago. What's more, it weighs about a ton and a half less than its sumptuous 1976 ancestor; the horsepower of its six-cylinder engine is less than half that of its eight-cylinder predecessor; and its fuel efficiency is about double that of the 1976 version. Reflecting all these factors, the price of the '81 "compact limo" is roughly two-thirds that of its over-sized brother five years ago ($99,000 vs. $14,500), plus the extra on each, of course.

In a very tight squeeze, the '76 limousine could seat seven plus the chauffeur. In an identical pinch, the '81 can accommodate just three plus the driver. That late afternoon, though, only one person stepped into the car: a top executive leaving the skyscraper.

eightth size of the engine in the '76 limo. This car won't be out until 1986 (probably), so GM is understandably vague about the Suzuki deal and the products the two plan to market in a joint venture.

One guess, though, no longer than 11 feet, under 5 feet wide and perhaps 4 feet high. To put this in perspective, the smallest set of wheels you can buy from either Tokyo or Detroit today measures 12 to 13 feet long, 5 to 5 1/2 feet wide, 4 1/2 to 4 3/4 feet high, weighs in at 1,750 lbs. to 1,900 lbs.

To put this even more drastically the '76 limo was 21 feet long, about 6 feet 8 inches wide, 4 1/2 feet high and weighed in at almost 6,000 pounds.

In personal terms, in the past five years our typical car has shrunk from a six-person capacity to four occupants. And in another five years, this car is likely to hold no more than two or three of us.

But the size loss almost surely will not have as serious an impact on our lifestyles as a surface reading might suggest. Despite a slow trend to car and van pools in the past few years, U.S. government figures still show average car occupancy at just a bit more than one person per car per trip. So the excess space and weight are mostly a waste.

What must undergo serious change is our traditional way of thinking, not our way of life.

But what if you have a four- or five-person family? On Detroit's drawing boards, too, are smaller (six- to eight-passenger) vans—downsized trucks to replace the 10- to 15-passenger vans now in production.

If you have a large family or plan a long vacation, you'll be able to buy or rent one of the minitrucks, just as mounting numbers of you are renting big trucks to transport your family and furnishings when needed.

Undoubtedly, Detroit's downsizing its products, and our own downsizing of our expectations will force us to shift our attitudes. As I walked past the executive entering his little limo, we recognized each other.

"Can I drop you somewhere?" he asked. Instantly, I knew I wasn't dressed "up" to the "down" size. Not truthfully, I replied with a "No, thanks. I have just a short walk."

But I'll adjust to minicars, as you will. And small trucks. Or we'll all be truthful about those short walks.

Incorporations up

NEW YORK — Dun & Bradstreet reports that new incorporations rose 3.4 percent in April to a new all-time (seasonally adjusted) high of 49,574 from 47,927 the month prior. April's total exceeded the previous (seasonally adjusted) record high of 48,297, set in December 1980, by 2.6 percent.

Moreover, new incorporations ran 16.8 percent ahead of their comparable April 1980 pace of 42,461.

The increase in new incorporations over year-ago was seen in all of the geographic regions. The West South Central and New England areas had the largest gains, of 29.8 percent and 24.4 percent, respectively.

For the first four months of 1981, new charters totalled 193,999 or 8.3 percent more than the 178,071 for the like period in 1980.

Conference set

STORRS — A conference dealing with planning and designing effective industrial ventilation systems will be held at the University of Connecticut this fall.

The 14th annual Northeastern Industrial Ventilation and Air Pollution Control Conference will be held Oct. 12 to 16.

Participants will discuss the application of exhaust air cleaning as well as the degree of control needed in environmental systems.

Small classroom sections of about 25, led by two staff members, will design exhaust systems in the classroom, working from prepared plans.

Basic sections are for first-year participants dealing with fundamentals, while advanced sections are for participants with a working knowledge of ventilation design.

Registration and fee information is available from John J. Farling, the University of Connecticut, Box U-56 IV, Storrs, CT 06268, telephone 486-2283.

Merger accord

NEW YORK — The Penn Central Corp. and Colt Industries Inc. have signed a definitive agreement for Penn Central's acquisition of Colt by merger into a Penn Central subsidiary. The signing followed approval of the agreement by the Penn Central and Colt boards of directors.

Under the definitive terms, which differ in certain respects from those announced last month, the cash to be paid by Penn Central for the outstanding 13.6 million shares of Colt common stock is now fixed at a definite $635 million instead of a range of up to a maximum of $635 million. The balance of the purchase price will be paid by a combination of Penn Central convertible preference and common stock.

Career Expo

HARTFORD — Career Expo '81, which last spring included 40 participating firms and drew more than 4,000 people, will return to the Hartford Civic Center's Assembly Hall on Sept. 9 and 10.

Who will benefit from attending Career Expo '81? Anyone interested in increasing his or her value in the career marketplace, according to expo coordinator Dennis Jenks.

Jenks, president of Robert Dennis Productions of Glastonbury, has sponsored semi-annual career shows in Hartford for two years.

Expo hours are 11 a.m. until 6 p.m. on both days. Seminars are scheduled to run continuously between 4 and 5 p.m.

Persons seeking more information are invited to contact Jenks at Robert Dennis Productions, 2389 Main St., Glastonbury, 06033, or telephone 533-5885.

Home sales slip

WASHINGTON — Although existing home sales slipped in July, the resale market may soon be in for a boost as mortgage interest rates come down, Dr. Jack Carlson, chief economist, executive vice president of the National Association of Realtors, said.

July home sales declined 5.2 percent to 2.52 million units from a June level of 2.68 million units on a seasonally adjusted annual basis," Carlson said. "This is the second lowest level reached in the last three years, but we do see some light." July sales were 13.7 percent below the level of July, 1980.

Housing has been in a slump for 33 months because of high mortgage interest rates, he said. In October, however, the federal government will authorize thrift institutions, commercial banks and credit unions to issue tax exempt certificates which will benefit savers and home buyers.

To encourage sales of leftover 1981 Le Car models, AMC said it is providing cash sales incentives to dealers equal to the amount of the 1982 sticker price reduction.

Shallow etching

The depth of an etch in a stainless roll that will be used in film manufacturing is checked by a technician at Eastman Kodak Co., Rochester, N.Y. The etch, only two-thousandths of an inch deep, was made by coating the roll with a photo-resistant material, exposing it with the desired pattern, and then placing the roll in a chemical bath.

Chrysler prices rise 7.7 percent average

DETROIT (UPI) — Sticker prices of 1982 Chrysler Corp. cars are going up an average of $22, but the increased value of the dollar is allowing price reductions of up to $706 on imported Renault Le Car models.

Chrysler confirmed Monday it has notified dealers of tentative price increases on 1982 models averaging 7.7 percent, slightly higher than the 6.11 or 6 percent increase General Motors Corp. applied to its 1982 cars.

Harold K. Sperlich, president of Chrysler's North American Automotive Operations, said those prices could change when next year's models go on sale this fall.

If there is a change, he said, it will be a reduction on some models.

American Motors Corp., which imports the subcompact Le Car from its French partner Renault, said recent increases in the value of the dollar against the French franc allowed the unusual price reduction.

AMC hasn't yet announced prices of its 1982 domestic cars and Jeep trucks nor on the 1982 version of the 181 passenger car, another Renault import.

The action reduces the bottom-line sticker price of the 1982 Le Car basic hatchback to $4,795, down $505 from 1981 prices. The Le Car deluxe hatchback will go down $706 to $4,995, while the four-door hatchback model will be priced at $5,295, down $632.

To encourage sales of leftover 1981 Le Car models, AMC said it is providing cash sales incentives to dealers equal to the amount of the 1982 sticker price reduction.

Sperlich said at a news conference the Chrysler price hike was necessary to meet inflationary cost increases and Chase Manhattan Bank lowered the prime rate of business loans Monday to 20 percent, effective immediately.

Banks, investors await IRS word on certificates

NEW YORK (UPI) — Banks and investors are awaiting the Internal Revenue Service's final word on whether there would be a tax exemption for "all-saver" certificates that offered as much as a 50 percent interest bonus.

Chase Manhattan Bank, third largest in the nation, Monday abandoned its program to pay 40 percent interest to customers who deposited money for the certificates ahead of time after the IRS warned investors may forfeit the exemption altogether.

The IRS said it would make a definitive statement soon. Two Missouri banks followed Chase's move and others were considering it.

Banks and savings and loan associations are trying to attract savings expected to be deposited in the new certificates by offering high interest on money placed in advance in short-term accounts. Some thrift institutions have offered as much as 50 percent interest bonuses.

However another kind of arrangement did get IRS approval Monday. It would allow customers to convert any existing six-month money market certificates to

All Savers' certificates on Oct. 1 without the usual penalty for early withdrawal or any risk of jeopardizing the tax exemption.

Two conditions for such conversions were set: that they be at the customer's option and not mandatory, and that the existing certificate be at a higher or equal rate to the tax exempt certificate.

Customers who deposited money for the certificates ahead of time after the IRS warned investors may forfeit the exemption immediately with a bonus of an eventual tax exemption. However the offer would be far less attractive than the extraordinarily high yields that were advertised up until now for the combination of a short-term instrument (called a repurchase agreement or "repo") and the new tax-exempt certificates.

Also Monday, the Washington-based National Savings and Loan League called the IRS' weekend warning that a "repo" plus a certificate could eliminate the tax exemption "irresponsible" and an example of "government by press release."

At the IRS meetings on the issue were under way late Monday with some announcement expected today.
