Charge ignored

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) - The Maine Senate Friday manimously confirmed Donald L. Allen as the state's first corrections commissioner, ignoring allegations that he beat juveniles while working at the Boys Training Center. "I'm very much pleased by the unanimous endorsement," Allen said after the vote. He did not attend Allen's confirmation hearing Thursday by the Health and Institutional Services Committee was one of the longest most heated nomination hearings in Maine history, said Barbara Gill, R-Portland, chairwoman of "By no measure was it a run-of-the-mill hearing. Mr. Allen refuted those allegations face-to-face. He answered charges in the affirmative as far as the commitee was concerned." she said. Allen said he is working on several improvements to the corrections department simultaneously.

"A lot needs to be done, not the least of which was revealed by testimony yesterday. We all need to roll up of adult female offenders at the Maine Correctional Center." he said. Other problems to be addressed include a classification system for inmates.

Three former inmates at the center claimed Allen beat juveniles and witnessed beatings of others. Joseph Baltar, coordinator of Justice For All, a community based group investigating alternatives for the criminal justice system, also spoke against Allen's nomination Baltar said many members of his group were afraid to testify because they feared reprisals. He presented the Health and Institutional Services Committee with a report he said documented abuse by Allen.

Joseph E. Brennan's choice of Allen to take over the new Corrections Department, a cabinet-level position. Food laws killed

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Budget Director David Stockman said Friday he has killed "ridiculous" federal rules that listed ketchup as a vegetable and suggested soybeans be substitued for hamburger in schol lunches. He said the controversial guidelines were the result of a "bureaucratic goof" and the Agriculture Department officials who drew them up have "egg on their face." Stockman said the rules were withdrawn on Monday and new guidelines will be drafted which will permit mities to set their own standards. The withdrawal was news to officials at the Food and Nutrition branch of the Agriculture Department, who prepared the guidelines as a result of President Reagan's slash in funding for the school lunch program. A spokesman said Friday they has not been informed

Judge drops charges

WATERBURY (UPI) - A judge Friday dismissed robbery charges against two men who will go on trial next week for felony murder in the 1979 triple murder Purolator Security robbery

Superior Court Judge T Clark that Lawrence Pelletier, 38, of Waterbury and Donald Couture, 26. of Wallingford, would face double jeopardy if tried for both robbery and felony murder.

State's Attorney Francis M. McDonald strongly objected in vain to dismissal of the robbery charges by Hull. It was the second major set back in the state's prosecution of On Sept. 15. Hull blocked a state attempt to bring the two men to trial on charges carrying the death sentence by denying a request to reconvene the grand jury to weigh capital murder charges against Pelletier and Couture. Three security guards were gunned down in the pre-dawn raid on the Purolator garage on April 16 1979, in which nearly $1.9 million in securities and cash was stolen and later recovered

One of the guards, Edward T. Coty, was an off-duty police officer. Two other suspects in the case, Pelletier's girlfriend. Evelyn Vega. 28. and Couture's wife, Donna, 26, are charged with murder and

Hull told McDonald the robbery charges are already part of the felony murder counts and to prosecute the seperate charge of obbery would be double jeopardy. McDonald in his objections argued the brutal, execution style slaying of the three guards warranted more ounishment than three, 25 year-tolife sentences each suspect can receive if convicted

Hull has completed closed hearings on pretrial motions but has not announced his decison on a defense request to suppress certain evidence in the case. Jury selection was to begin Friday but due to the lengthy proceedings Hull decided to begin the process on Pelletier and Couture earlier pleaded innocent to the felony murder charges.

8. BIG not fig. The clue's evident concern with size fevors BIG.
14. LIMB not limp. One does not operate on, or for, a limp as such.
15. KEEL not neel. The KEEL of a beached boat, yes; but not a heel as such. One visualizes a feetprint more readily.
16. PONY not pond. The word "trips" implies fravel, which can hardly take place on a mere pond.
21. SAGACITY not salecity. Segacious writing can aptly be said to "reveal" that does well or not so well.
16. PLAYER not slayer. In the case of sensational murders, the slayer than writer's SAGACITY: A saliacious writer would be said to explaint, say, himself may be very much in the background and not "news, of course" himself may be very much in the background and not "news, of course" in the direct sense that his killings and his victims are. A sensational PLAYER in sports is very much in the public eye, of course.

PITTSBURGH (UPI) - Some 800 of the nation's power plants could have their capacity uprated in a program aimed at yielding national energy savings and controlling utility costs, of-ficials say.

Under a program at Westinghous Electric Corp., the goal is to increase the plants' generating capacity by 11 percen or more, leading to more coal use, increased efficiency and longer plant life. To gain the uprated capacity modifications would be made to the turbine-generator, boiler and the rest of current equipment at a given plant. One ould be to put in a sup boiler, while other methods under consideration include making turbine parts more efficient through repair or replace

Heading up the effort under the auspices of Westinghouse's Power Generation Group is K.A. Oleson, a marketing manager in the steam turbin

Although the program is in "formative stages," Oleson says his department has months and it has generated interest The idea itself, Oleson says, is not new, butthere is renewed interest and the program appears about ready to take off if one obstacle could be removed. Because of environmental considerations and current Environmental Protection Agency regulations, utilities are hesitant. Although officials want to nodernize, if existing plant emission are changed they may not conform to current EPA law and could lead to costly mandated pollution equipment

"It's our feling that without any degradation of the environment we could get more capacity. It's frustrating; the environmental thing is the only real roadblock," Oleson says. "If it could ease up, it (the program) would move

The Clean Air Act is currently up for review and should present restrictions be eased, that would help the program In the program, Westinghouse has pinpointed two categories of uprating - the large coalfired units and the plants being converted from oil to coal which could Between uprating coal plants and the combined conversionurating of oil units, could amount to over $2 billion per year. Coal use could increase by about 37 Additionally, the uprating would save utilities millions of dollars in fuel costs, reduce operating costs by up to 10 per-prove a plant.

Uprating might take a couple of years, Oleson says, while building a new plant takes 8 to 10 years. And in 1981 dollars, a new 500 megawatt plant may cost say $650 million, while uprating an existing acility would cost $37.5 million. The uprating versus new construction also goes further in uprating's favor Oleson says because of the reduced elec-

Reagan, in a Thursday night speech, called for $13 billion in additional spending cuts and $3 billion in increased taxes In Paris, Granville told Dow Jones news service the Dow industrial average, a widely followed market indicator, could drop to the 700s "in the next few days" and predicted Sept. 28 would see the market plummet. Trading on the New York Stock Exchange was the heaviest in a month. The Dow, down nearly 16 points early in the day, finished off 11.13 at 824.01 - closed at 822.53 on May 15, 1980. Of 1,874 issues traded on the NYSE, only 141 gained while 1,511 declined. Big Board floor volume stepped up to 54,390,000 shares from 48,880,000 shares traded Thursday when the Dow lost 5.80. American Stock Exchange turnover of 8,440,000 shares was the briskest since Granville's January sell order triggered the busiest day in Wall Street history
