Women view designs for workplace health

By Patricia McCormack UPI Health Editor. Good fits in hardhats, space suits, safety shoes and even office chairs...

Volunteer models show off some of the latest in protective clothing at the "Working Women - Designs for Workplace Health" national conference in New York.

Stellman said, however, in traditional women's fields - clerical, household, nursing - often face hidden hazards from, among other things, chemical exposures. From the secretary who breathes fumes from photocopying machines to the food equipment operator who cannot find work gloves to fit her, working women face a variety of health and safety problems on the job, she said.

Model work environments at the conference came complete with demonstrations of what safe and healthy workplaces should look like. Participants got to try out an automatic pipetter in the model chemical laboratory. This prevents dangerous liquid pipetting.

Architects talk about controlled environments that it turns out that the air inside may be more polluted than the air outside. This presents a particular hazard for office workers.

Spent toner and other large quantities of chemical waste from machine maintenance should be disposed of as a chemical waste, not as ordinary office trash.

News Briefing

Flood ruins crops

By United Press International

Farmers mounded flotation tires on their reapers Friday in Michigan, where flooding caused a half billion dollars in crop damage and left up to 4 feet of water in some fields. Cresting rivers prompted more evacuations in several small towns.

The flooding that buried some Michigan highway interchanges in up to 11 feet of water Thursday receded in most areas of the state. Officials said torrential rains have done as much as $500 million damage to the state's crops.

Hail up to 1 1/2 inches in diameter pelted Phoenix, Ariz., and thunderstorms, heavy at times, heralded the end of the summer dry spell in Southern California.

The Mason River near Lansing, Mich., crested early Friday, flooding substantial portions of nearby villages and creating what officials described as a "big mess."

Some residents abandoned their homes and officials planned to evacuate a convalescent home.

"Some people are driving through but I wouldn't," one man said.

"It's a mess," Fowler village clerk Willard McKean said. "Everybody is helping everybody else pump out their basements."

Michigan officials said it would be several days before they could make an accurate accounting of the damage caused by 9 inches of rain that poured on the state Thursday.

A 16-county survey by Michigan State University found crop losses of up to 70 percent in some areas. Some cornfields in Monroe county had up to 4 feet of standing water. Half the state's soybean acreage was flooded.

Shiawassee County reported loss of 70 percent of its dry bean crop and 60 percent of soybean acreage.

Harvesting in many areas was near a standstill. Harvesters slog through muddy fields on flotation tires as farmers struggled to salvage what they could.

A car dealer in a Detroit suburb reported the loss of $1 million worth of new cars in the deluge.

Flight postponed

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — It probably will be early November before the damaged space shuttle Columbia is repaired and ready to make its second orbital test flight, launch director George Page said Friday.

He also said the launch delay, which may amount to about four weeks, will probably push the shuttle's third orbital flight from mid-January into February.

Overall, he said, the mishap will have little impact on the multi-billion dollar space transportation program. Technicians working around the clock have already replaced 89 of 365 vital insulation tiles loosened Sept. 22 when a valve stuck open and allowed corrosive propellant to spill down the Columbia's side.

He said at a Kennedy Space Center news conference that the accident caught launch planners by surprise.

"Morphy's law sort of got us there," Page said. "We should have looked enough to say we can have this type of failure, but we didn't."

About three gallons of nitrogen tetroxide ran down the side of the spacecraft, acting as a solvent on the glue that held the tiles to the Columbia.

Housing plan due

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The President's Commission on Housing Friday recommended a "new course" in government housing policy, including a food-stamp type rent voucher and an end to federally subsidized housing projects.

The 25-member commission adopted a series of recommendations on public housing policy that will be presented to President Reagan in an interim report at the end of the month.

"Direct federal subsidy dollars should be provided to people, not to housing projects," the report said.

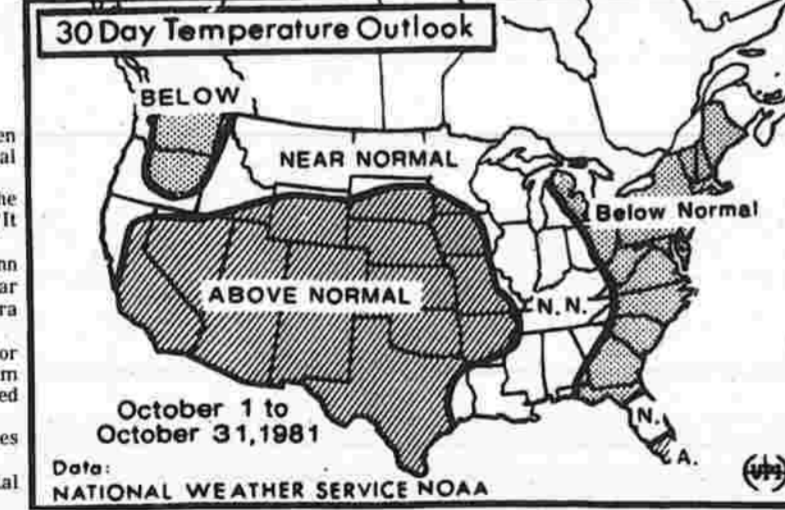

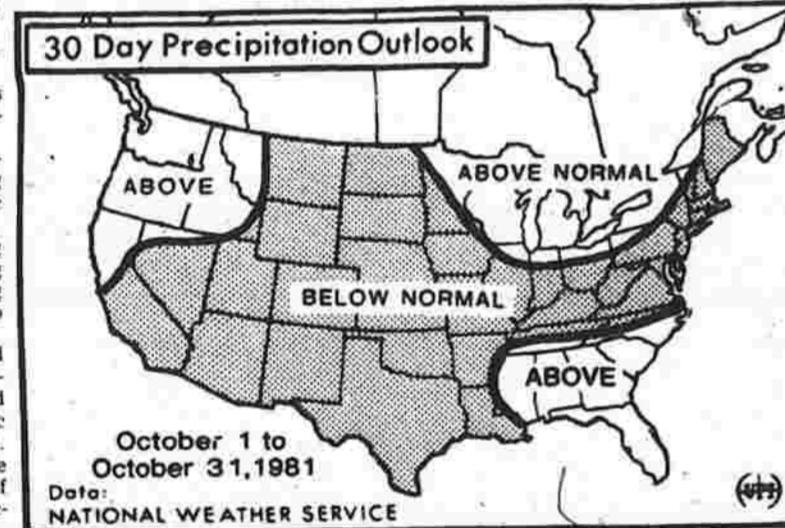

Commission chairman William F. McKenna, a Los Angeles attorney and veteran of several Republican administrations, said: "We're setting a new course."

The commission's goal is to "give the president options," he said, and bring federally assisted housing programs "into conformity with the president's basic fiscal and monetary programs."

Adoption of the proposals would mean replacing federally assisted housing projects — already being phased out by the administration — with a housing voucher system to deliver rent subsidies directly to tenants, much as food stamps are delivered.

Eligibility for the housing vouchers would be limited to those with incomes 50 percent or less of the area median income, and to people displaced by actions beyond their control, or who already live in inadequate or public housing with rents more than 50 percent of their income.

Local communities should decide whether low-income housing is "desirable," the report said. "Recipients of housing assistance payments should be required to occupy standard housing," it said.

Town wants crank

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — Residents of a western Maine town fighting to preserve the nation's last hand-cranked phone system may succeed in their crusade to block the switch from antiquies to pushbutton phones, officials said Friday.

When Oxford Telephone and Telegraph Co. bought the hand-cranked phone system in June, the new owners vowed to replace the plug-in switchboard with modern circuitry within two years.

But Public Utilities Commission Chairman Ralph Golder said Friday that Bryant Pond residents have submitted a petition that will likely force a hearing on the planned switchover — and could eventually derail it.

"This is probably going to have to go to a hearing to find out what is needed and to find out what the people out there want," Golder said.

Oxford must respond to the petition within seven days, after which the PUC could dismiss the petition.

The petition was signed by 35 Bryant Pond residents, including several town selectmen, said Brad Hooper, 21, a member of the newly formed "Don't Yank the Crank Committee."

Ten names are needed to request a hearing.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Two potential jurors in the drug trial of Elvis Presley's doctor, were rejected Friday, one because the judge feared she had been influenced by a television news show "The rock star's controversial death."

The other was dismissed after telling attorneys he had a relative who had suffered drug problems.

Although defense attorney James F. Neal predicted a jury would be selected by Monday, not a single member of the 12-member panel had been chosen in the third day of the white-haired physician's trial.

Terrorists bomb ship

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Suspected Basque terrorists bombed a Spanish destroyer Friday, blowing a nine-foot hole in the vessel in a dawn attack, but the 318 sleeping crewmen escaped harm.

"If it had come a few feet toward the bow, many people could have died," said the captain of the Marquesa de la Ensenada, explaining the crew's sleeping quarters were near the bow on the vessel, part of anti-guerrilla task force patrolling Spain's northern coast.

An anonymous telephone caller saying he represented Basque terrorists claimed responsibility for blast in the northern port of Santander and warned a second wave would be made against a ship at sea.

The ship's captain said that at the moment of the explosion an anonymous caller telephoned the ship to warn that a "fireracker" would go off at 5 a.m.

A navy spokesman in Madrid said the explosion, at 5 a.m., was caused by a "very powerful" bomb attached to a strut on the jetty, where the Marquesa de la Ensenada was moored.

The ship's captain said the blast blew a 9-foot hole under the waterline outside the engine room and water poured in, but the crewmen and civil guards quickly brought flooding under control. The gaping breach was patched and the vessel was towed to dry dock.

The Marquesa de la Ensenada was one of two destroyers and eight frigates patrolling Spain's northern coast in a six-month operation to stop ETA assassins slipping into Spain from France.

The separatist guerrillas of ETA, or Euzko Askatasunaren Alkartasuna, are fighting for independence from Spain which marks an end to their armed struggle.

Four hours before the explosion, youths tossed a small bomb near police headquarters in the Basque city of San Sebastian during a police festival. Police said the youths belonged to ETA.

Iranian planes bomb Iraqi power stations

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Iranian warplanes bombed four Iraqi hydroelectric power stations Friday in what Tehran said was retaliation for Iraqi air and ground attacks on "civilian" targets near the oil refining center of Abadan.

But in Damascus, an Iraqi military spokesman denied Iran had attacked his power plants, calling the Iranian report "completely untrue" and said Iraqi airspace was not violated Friday by "any hostile raider."

Iran said its air raids caused heavy damage to four power plants in the north and south of Iraq.

In another development, Iran said its anti-aircraft batteries had shot down an Iraqi MIG fighter plane inside Iran near the southern city of Ahwaz. Another Iraqi jet escaped, the official Pars news agency said.

Tehran radio also said Iranian warplanes shot down two Iraqi MIGs north of Iran's Khuzestan province in a dogfight Wednesday.

An Iranian military communique, reported by the state-run Pars news agency, said the air strikes were ordered in retaliation for recent Iraqi air and artillery attacks against Iranian "civilian" targets in and around Abadan.

Both Iran and Iraq, at war for the last 12 months, reported a major battle over the weekend in the disputed Abadan region with each side claiming heavy "enemy" casualties and damage.

The Iranians said they broke an Iraqi army siege of the city and pushed the "infidel enemy" across the strategic Karun river which pours into the Shatt al Arab, west of the devastated city.

The Iranians also said they killed 1,500 Iraqi soldiers and captured 2,000-3,000 others in the weekend battle.

The Iraqis, who said they killed 700 Iranians in the same battle, acknowledged withdrawing to the western bank of the Karun River. Their Mohammed Ali Rajai, Tehran strategic consequences and we can return to our previous locations whenever we want."

An Iranian military communique

Iranian air force jets, in retaliation for the Iraqi bombing of the civilian targets in Abadan earlier this week, struck four economic-military targets in the north and south of Iraq."

The communique said the 630 air strikes were aimed at Iraq hydroelectric plants, which had a total capacity of 1,620 megawatts.

It said targets included a 400-megawatt Iraq station in the north, a 180-megawatt station near the northern oil producing town of Kirkuk, an 800-megawatt station near the southern town of Basra and a 240-megawatt station near the southern oil terminal town of Umm Qasr. Damages ranged from 50 to 100 percent, it said.

Iranians vote for president

ANKARA, Turkey (UPI) — Millions of Iranians voted Friday in the country's third presidential election since Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini took power.

Revolutionary guards gunned down two anti-government protesters in fresh outbreaks of violence.

In the vote to replace slain President Mohammad Ali Rajai, Tehran cleric Sayed Ali Khomeini was expected to win a landslide victory.

The report said four other guerrillas were killed in Shiraz during earlier clashes with revolutionary guards but did not say when the fighting occurred.

Voters streamed to more than 22,000 polling stations, including those on the Iranian battlefield and 5,000 in Tehran itself. Twenty million Iranians out of a population of 34 million were eligible to vote, a spokesman said.

The heavy vote came after a warning by Khomeini and other clergyman that low turnout would be seen outside Iran as a setback to the Islamic regime. Many people told radio interviewers they voted "because the Imam ordered" it.

scheduled to accommodate the heavy turnout, the radio said.

But the presidential elections will not become official for several days but initial results could be disclosed Saturday.

In the southern city of Shiraz, revolutionary guards gunned down two Mojahideen Khali guerrillas and arrested two more in the only election day violence reported so far by the radio.

France seeks spy swap deal

PARIS (UPI) — France is seeking to swap an East German general jailed as a Communist spy for a major Soviet dissident such as Anatoly Shcharansky, French government sources said Wednesday.

In Bonn, officials said that although West Germany had freed East German spy Guenter Guillaume Thursday to get its own agents out of Communist jails, East Germany had failed to free as many West Germans as hoped because of publicity surrounding the swap.

"Some people will unfortunately stay a little longer under wraps in East Germany," said Egon Franke, Minister for Inner German Relations.

West German spokesman Kurt Becker said the swap set in motion by Guillaume's release should be wrapped up soon. Some 30 agents were released from East Germany for a prominent Soviet dissident like Shcharansky, Andrei Sakharov or Yuri Orlov.

Shcharansky, the most prominent Jewish dissident in the Soviet Union who is under a 13 year sentence for treason, has been in prison for 39 months.

Sakharov, now exiled to Gorky, another prominent Soviet dissident, is a Nobel Peace Prize winner.

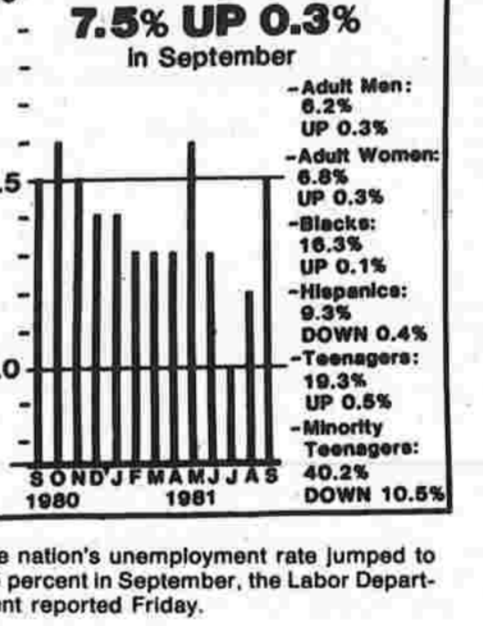

Orlov, 57, a physicist and founder of the Helsinki Human Rights Monitoring group, was sentenced to 12 years in 1978.

Zorn, 69, was captured in Lille in 1980 and jailed on charges of acquiring secret blueprints of Western weapons, including tanks and anti-tank missiles.

Guillaume's exposure in 1974 forced the resignation of West German Chancellor Willy Brandt. Those freed in the Guillaume deal included three agents jailed for life in the East, one of whom had served 13 years, and "several" other prisoners serving terms of 10 to 15 years, Franke said.

"Some very difficult cases were solved, cases which until now did not even come under discussion," he said, indicating East Berlin had made an offer Bonn could not refuse.

Unemployment Rate

More blacks jobless

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's unemployment rate inched up to 7.5 percent in September, with nearly 8 million Americans looking for work and another 1.1 million discouraged to try, the Labor Department reported Friday.

The rate was the highest in five months and unemployment among blacks hit a new high of 16.3 percent since the department began keeping separate records on blacks.

The report came a day after President Reagan told a nationally televised news conference his economic program will create 13 million new jobs over the next several years, but noted the unemployment rate might fluctuate in the meantime.

On Capitol Hill, chairman Henry Reuss, D-Wis., of Congress "Joint Economic Committee" called the new figures "disquieting bad news."

"It is particularly disquieting since President Reagan's policies have been in place for months," Reuss said, adding that it appears the "country is being greeted by a recession."

The 16.3 percent level for blacks was up slightly from the 15.2 percent figure for last month, the department reported.

For blacks aged 16-19, the September rate returned to near the July level, dropping from August's record of 50.7 percent to 40.2 percent, falling 67,000 to 963,000 with virtually all the decline attributed to white workers, primarily adult women.

Employment in construction, which had shown some growth in the latter part of 1980 and early months of this year, fell by another 20,000 in September and has dropped 165,000 since April.

Unemployment 7.5%

Solon says sailors roughed up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cases of "brutalities and misconduct" against some sailors at the Norfolk, Va., Navy base were reported to Congress Friday by Rep. Harold Holtzman, R-N.J.

In some instances, men were handcuffed to chairs all night or handcuffed to bunks while beaten by guards, Holtzman said in a report to a House armed services subcommittee.

The report said the incidents occurred at Norfolk Hall, a transient personnel unit at the Norfolk base housing about 800 sailors.

Holtzman said many of the problems result from housing sailors awaiting non-disciplinary action, such as new orders or court-martial, or those awaiting discharge or civilian court proceedings.

"The most serious allegations related to conditions at Norfolk Hall involve mistreatment of naval personnel, particularly but not limited to, those awaiting disciplinary action," the report said.

They include reports of beatings, physical and verbal abuse by chasers (escorts) and masters-at-arms, over-crowding, poor sanitary conditions, understaffing, theft and administrative difficulties.

Holtzman based his report on letters, phone calls and personal conversations with sailors.

He said that when he toured Norfolk Hall, one sailor reported he had witnessed incidents "where individuals were tied down in chasers' offices, where individuals were handcuffed to bunks while being beaten and where individuals were detained for no apparent reason."

"Other enlisted men, upon questioning, told me of (incidents) during which individuals were handcuffed to chairs or bunks, verbally abused, pushed around by MAS and denied mess privileges," he said.

One petty officer said "at times he witnessed individuals handcuffed to chairs for entire nights. He saw individuals returning from meetings with MAS, showing signs of being beaten (traumas, cuts, etc.)."

Militiamen following 200-year-old footsteps

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — After three years of preparations, Brigadier Gen. Gilbert Hempie is ready for a 150-mile march to Yorktown, Va., and the battle credited with ending the war for American freedom.

Hempie, 56, of the Rhode Island Militia, will join the ranks of more than 1,000 "colonial militia" and "French" reinforcements from 26 states and Canada following the 200-year-old footsteps of Gen. George Washington and French General Comte Rochambeau.

The five regiments of 200 men and two centuries have forced the modern-day soldiers to make some concessions.

They will make their week-long journey in cars and Army National Guard trucks rather than by foot or horseback and the route south will be asphalt rather than dirt and cobblestone roads or Indian paths.

But the Oct. 10-16 event promises to rival the Bicentennial celebration, with events planned in Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia.

Gilbert Hempie is an Army National Guard colonel who sold Rhode Island and its heritage commission on the idea three years ago and has been coordinating it since.

"It's a way of relating to our general public the living history of our nation's past," Hempie said.

Rhode Island's role in this important battle, Hempie said.

General Rochambeau and his army of 8,000 troops landed in Newport in July 1780 and stayed a year until the evacuation of the British march. At Yorktown, the French Adm. de Grasse cut off any to the visited by Rochambeau's troops along the march. Residents will provide them with three meals, a place to camp and indoor sleeping quarters such as school gymnasiums or armories.

The modern soldiers, including some French, French-Canadians and several descendants of Rochambeau and his officers, have been assigned to five regiments representing the original French units: Lauzun's Legion, Bourbonnais, Saintonge, Royal Deux-Points and Soissonais.

Among them, the regiments will stop in 22 of the 44 towns and cities

Grocery store will reopen at one Top Notch location

A former Top Notch food store on East Middle Turnpike will reopen later this month under local ownership.

Anthony Balboni of 152 Green Manor Road has purchased the store and plans to open the grocery store as Plesco-Save, a full-service supermarket.

Balboni said the store will employ 40 to 50 full and part-time workers.

Balboni said he hopes to open the store in the week of Oct. 26. The store closed Sept. 5, reportedly as the result of a dispute with Sweet Life, a division on the Springfield Sugar Co., a wholesale grocery distributor.

"Our slogan will be 'We challenge the competition,'" Balboni said. "No matter who's got what for a price, we will meet that price."

Balboni said the store will be operated independently but will buy supplies through the Springfield Sugar Co., "who will be our main supplier."

The store at 725 E. Middle Turnpike was one of five Top Notch stores closed in early September.

Another Top Notch store was on North Main Street in Manchester.

Negotiations are under way for the sale of the North Main Street store and another former Top Notch store in Glastonbury, but details could not be confirmed.

Balboni is the former owner of Gateway food stores in Vernon and Enfield. He sold the stores last year after more than 40 years in the grocery business.

Bids for MHS job close to estimates

Bids for general renovations at Manchester High School are "very close" to estimates, officials said Thursday.

Eleven bids for the work were opened Thursday afternoon. The bids range from a low of $3,683,000 to a high of $4,550,200. Estimated construction time goes from 372 calendar days to 700 days.

The apparent low bidder for the work is Custom Concepts Builders of Simsbury, which submitted a base bid of $3,683,000, with an estimated construction time of 450 days.

Building Committee Chairman Paul Phillips noted that the actual low figure could change because of there are eight alternate items with separate bids. Five of those could be deducted from the base bid and three could be added.

The five possible deductions are an indoor-outdoor track, locker room renovations, cafeteria remodeling, a weight room and windows. The three possible additions are tiles, clocks and auto lifts.

Phillips said the bids for the general renovations are "right on target."

"The total project is budgeted for $5.5 million, with $800,000 of that slated to pay for the roof.

General renovations planned at the school building include closing windows, modernizing and expanding science and industrial arts workrooms, remodeling classrooms for special use and making extensive renovations to the athletic complex.

Preliminary work on the first phase of the renovations, the installation of a new roof, is under way. Bids on the roof came in about $300,000 less than the committee had predicted.

Phillips said the bids for the general renovations are "right on target."

New main flushed; looked like geyser

What may have looked like a geyser on South Main Street Wednesday afternoon was actually the flushing of a new town water main being prepared, according to a Frank Jodiatz, water and sewer department superintendent.

The new main, which Jodiatz said was completed last Thursday, runs from Judith and Diane Drives down Hackmatack Street to South Main Street.

Each new pipe is first flushed for dirt and filled for pressure tests. Sometimes when the lines are flushed, air is trapped in the lines during pressure tests, the water will spurt out like a geyser, he said.

If the pipe has no leaks, it is then disinfected with chlorine, which sits for a day in the pipe. The pipe is then flushed and tested for bacteria, a process which is repeated until a zero count is reached, he said.

The town is conducting several water main flushing operations, including the cleaning and lining of an existing water main which runs from near Fern Street down South Main Street to the intersection with Hackmatack, Jodiatz said.

"There's a lot of work going on down there," Jodiatz said. "We're almost done with the 13 miles we're going to do."

Police Olympics scheduled today

All those on-the-job hot chases and wrestling matches may pay off this weekend when police from across the state gather today for the third annual Police Olympics at Manchester High School.

Organized for the first time under the banner Connecticut Police Athletic Association, the participants will compete in track and field, swimming and weightlifting events for individual and team trophies.

The individual competition will be divided into age groups—29 and under, 30 to 39, and over 40. Team trophies, determined by total points, will be awarded according to department size—50 and under, 51 to 100 and over 100.

The annual event began three years ago as a small group of state police officers, according to Manchester patrolman Gary Frost.

Last year, the competition was expanded, drawing nearly 100 police athletes from both in and out of state. Frost said. New divisions have been added to this year's event and Frost said the group hopes for a similar turnout.

The Police Athletic Association, which now consists of just an organizational committee, hopes to create a formal membership and hold individual meets throughout the year. Frost said.

The Olympics provides the officers with an opportunity to meet outside the line of duty in friendly competition, according to Frost.

"They're not necessarily the best athletes in the state," he said of the participants, "but we'll get together and give it a try."

The public is welcome to attend the event, which is free. The swim competition begins at 10 a.m., weightlifting at 10:30 a.m., and track and field at 11 a.m.

New contract

WALLINGFORD (UPI) — 30 workers at the Judd Drapery and Hardware Co. approved a new three-year contract Friday, averting a midnight strike deadline.

The new contract, approved 12-15 by members of Local 45 of the Amalgamated Silver Workers union, provides wage increases totalling 26 percent.

The workers have been without a contract since April 24 when their last contract expired.

The manufacturer was sold in April to the Newell Co. of Freeport, Ill. The former owner was The Stanley Works of New Britain.

The announcement commemorates the 100th anniversary of the Knights' first directors meeting in 1881.

Other resolutions voted at the 100th anniversary meeting included steps to refurbish and identify St. Mary's Church in New Haven as the Knights' national shrine and a proposal to re-inter at St. Mary's the body of the Rev. Michael J. McGivney, founder of the Knights, whose body is presently buried in a family plot in Waterbury.

Hunt for escapee resumes

BRIDGEPORT (UPI) — The search for escaped convict Daniel Biffied resumed Friday after the FBI apparently incorrectly identified a body as that of the reputed Hells Angels member, U.S. Attorney Richard Blumenthal said.

Biffied, once called "the most dangerous man in Connecticut" by federal prosecutors, has been the focus of an intensive search since he and three other inmates saved through bars and escaped Sept. 23 from the Bridgeport state jail.

Blumenthal said he was told by FBI agents in New York Thursday that a body found floating in the East River was that of Biffied, described by law enforcement officials as "the most dangerous man in Connecticut."

"I was informed yesterday afternoon by the FBI that his body was found," Blumenthal said. "The bottom line today is that Daniel Biffied is still at large and still a fugitive."

However, Connecticut FBI agent-in-charge A.L. Lacey issued a conflicting statement Friday in response to widespread reports alleging the death of Daniel Eugene Biffied.

"At no time did the FBI or any representative of the FBI make a written or oral statement confirming that a body recovered in New York City had been positively identified as that of Daniel Biffied," Lacey said.

Blumenthal said he didn't know who within the FBI had first determined they had recovered Biffied's body and said no federal officials from Connecticut were on the scene.

"As to the reasons why the identification initially occurred, there may have been some slippage of the transmittal of information or some initial and tentative miscommunication," he said.

Biffied, his father Richard Biffied, 51, of Bridgeport, and Samuel June, 52, of Bridgeport, were scheduled to be sentenced Oct. 9 by U.S. District Judge Warren G. Epton.

They faced a maximum possible sentence of 40 years in prison and $20,000 fines on June convictions on charges of conspiring to obtain money by extortionate means and conspiring to assault a Bridgeport man, both in connection with an alleged loan-sharking operation.

Connecticut's chief U.S. Marshal, Richard Maynard, whose office was responsible for Biffied while he was in federal custody and who knows him well, said Biffied was not the sort of man to turn state's evidence.

Maynard was responding to a reporter's speculative question Friday suggesting the confusion surrounding the ostensible discovery of his body was to provide a smokescreen for Biffied's accepting protective custody.

Maynard said there would be no point in Biffied participating in that kind of charade because he would have nothing to gain and Biffied wouldn't do it in the first place.

He said as far as the marshals were concerned, Biffied was a fugitive from Sept. 23 and his men are still looking for him and hoped to find him.

Four deny charges of insurance payoff

MIAMI (UPI) — Four New England men, including a former Rhode Island legislator, pleaded innocent Friday to charges they took kickbacks from firms insuring members of the Laborers' International Union of North America.

A fifth man charged in the indictment — reputed New England mob boss Raymond L.S. Patriarca of Providence, R.I., is fighting extradition on health grounds and was not arraigned.

The five were arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Charles H. Sorrentino were Arthur E. Coia of North Providence, R.I., general secretary-treasurer of the Rhode Island General Council of the Laborers' International Training Fund and president of the National Group Insurance Co.

The fifth defendant is Patriarca, 73, who faces an Oct. 13 removal hearing in Providence. He is ailing from heart problems and diabetes, and his lawyer claims he can't endure the stress of travel to Miami or a trial.

All five are free on $50,000 personal bonds and $50,000 corporate surety bond.

Their trial has been set for Nov. 16 in Miami before U.S. District Judge Alice Hastings. But the government filed a motion Friday to consolidate the trial of the five with the trial of 16 others indicted in June.

The five were indicted by a special grand jury Sept. 25, as the result of a three-year government probe into the 560,000-member union.

That same indictment led to the indictment in June of reputed underworld kingpins Santo Trafficante, Anthony "Big Tuna" Accardo and 14 others. Those 16 are scheduled for trial in March 1982.

The latest indictments charge the five with conspiracy in racketeering for allegedly splitting hundreds of thousands of dollars received from insurance companies since the kickback scheme began in 1972.

Trafficante and Accardo were charged under the federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act.

They are accused of giving or receiving unlawful kickbacks for granting union-related business stemming from the union pension fund and insurance plans including life, vision and dental.

Trafficante was charged with taking kickbacks as an associate of union officials, not as a union official. He is free on $25,000 bond.

The 75-year-old Accardo, reputed elder statesman of the Chicago mob, is free on $100,000 bond.

3rd juror picked in Purolator case

WATERBURY (UPI) — A third juror was chosen Friday for the trial of two men charged with killing three Purolator Security guards in a bloody 1979 commando-style heist.

Jacqueline G. Compe, a cosmetics saleswoman, was seated on the jury in Superior Court. She also became the third woman juror for the trial.

Jeanne L. Derwin, 46, a medical secretary, and Christine M. Monguluzo, 50, a housewife, were chosen Thursday for the panel.

The process of choosing 12 regular and four alternate jurors for the trial of Donald Couture and Lawrence "Buddy" Pelletier Jr. was scheduled to continue at 10 a.m. Wednesday.

Couture, 39, of Wallingford, and Pelletier, 38, of Waterbury, each face three counts of murder in the April 16, 1979, pre-dawn robbery at Purolator's Waterbury garage where the three guards were slain and nearly $1.9 million taken.

In addition to Couture and Pelletier, Couture's estranged wife, Donna Couture, 25, and Evelyn Vega, 28, Pelletier's girlfriend at the time of the robbery are charged in the case. The two women will be tried at a later date.

KofC plans fund for human needs

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — The Knights of Columbus said Friday it will set up a fund to provide the poor with about $1 million a year to meet human needs and special appeals throughout the world.

The New Haven-based Knights said its Supreme Council voted to transfer $10 million to a reserve account, formally establishing "The Knights of Columbus — Veterans Christi Foundation."

Some of the money will be used to help bishops in the United States and Canada finance church construction projects, the 1.3 million member Catholic men's organization said.

The announcement commemorates the 100th anniversary of the Knights' first directors meeting in 1881.

Other resolutions voted at the 100th anniversary meeting included steps to refurbish and identify St. Mary's Church in New Haven as the Knights' national shrine and a proposal to re-inter at St. Mary's the body of the Rev. College receives grant

HARTFORD (UPI) — Central Connecticut State College said Friday it has been awarded a $100,000 grant to support a work-study program — the largest federal grant this year to a New England college.

The program, which enrolls 82 students alternates six months of study with six months of employment in students fields of study, said college president F. Don James.

State agencies help employees find new jobs

EAST HARTFORD (UPI) — Many of the nearly 1,500 Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Group employees who were officially laid off Friday spent part of the day scouting and interviewing for new jobs.

The state departments of labor and economic development teamed up with Pratt & Whitney to help the laid-off employees find new jobs.

The state departments of labor and economic development teamed up with Pratt & Whitney to help the laid-off employees find new jobs.

"I have a lot of confidence I'll be able to find a job," said Martin Poulin of Middletown, who worked three years as a turret lathe operator at P&W.

Poulin, 25, said smaller manufacturers probably won't be able to match the $19.20-per-hour pay he was receiving at the United Technologies subsidiary, but he said he hoped to make up the difference in overtime.

He was philosophical about his departure.

"I knew when I went into Pratt & Whitney that I was a number and when I left I'd be a number," Poulin said.

P&W Employment Manager William Bourque said about 125 employees had registered by late morning. Many were interviewed by representatives from smaller firms who set up makeshift stations at folding tables in an adjoining room.

About 200 of the 1,485 employees who were laid off were salaried employees and the rest were hourly workers. Most had less than five years' seniority. Among them were skilled and unskilled machine operators, welders and inspectors.

Union representatives said results from the last job fair staged to help the 1,000 P&W employees who were laid off in May were "negligible." Another 500 employees were laid off in March and 240 in October 1980.

"I don't look at it that way," said Bourque, who estimated as many as 70 percent of the employees have the chance at another job. "I feel we make the facilities and opportunities available for the employees."

Richard Denicolo, a representative from Multi Circuits Inc., a Manchester manufacturer of electronic printed circuit boards, interviewed eight employees by noon. He said he had a good prospect and another man was a possibility.

He said the biggest obstacle was matching the Denicolo said he interviewed one woman who had been paid $20,000 as an electronics technician trainee at P&W. He said his firm would pay about $14,000 for a trained person.

Air museum opens again

WINDSOR LOCKS (UPI) — Officials gathered Friday to dedicate the new Bradley Air Museum exhibition building. The museum, which opened to the public exactly two years after a killer tornado demolished the facility.

About 300 state and local officials and members of the Connecticut Aeronautical Historical Association joined Maj. Gen. John Freund, the adjutant general of the state, and museum director Phillip O'Keefe at the unveiling.

A 90-piece band was on hand for the ceremony.

The reconstructed museum opens Saturday, the second anniversary of the Oct. 3 tornado which roared through Windsor Locks and Suffield, killing three people and leaving several hundred injured.

More than a dozen prized aircraft at the museum was either destroyed or damaged at a loss estimated at about $40 million.

The hangar that housed about 30 planes had its roof torn off by the tornado winds.

Two years later, some of the planes have been restored and others purchased for display at the new 35,000 square foot building.

Strike over; recall unsure

PITTSFIELD, Mass. (UPI) — A 69-day nurses strike is over, but it may be weeks before Berkshire Medical Center gets back to normal.

Nurses and administrators met Friday trying to figure how to meet the more than 400 nurses who walked off their job July 25 before ratifying a new contract proposal Thursday will be recalled.

Hospital spokeswoman Pam Bruce said "we have to learn how many nurses are returning and notify them formally, then we can determine our schedule."

The nurses will be phased in as soon as the hospital can get the patient census up, beginning in critical care," said Massachusetts Nurses Association spokeswoman Denise Sullivan.

Hospital Vice President Gilbert Guy said with the acronym of a bitter labor dispute over, "we need to work out the details of a recall plan. We will schedule them back on duty but it will be 4 to 5 weeks before we can resume our normal routine."

The nurses accepted a 27-month contract to end a strike that had left the county's largest medical facility operating at half its 383 bed capacity.

Mrs. Bruce said 31 striking nurses returned to work during the strike and 15 resigned to work elsewhere.

The settlement is for an 11 percent across-the-board pay hike this year and identical raise next year, plus a bonus of 2.5 percent, giving them a 15 percent increase during the first year.

The agreement is retroactive to July 5.

The Police Athletic Association, which now consists of just an organizational committee, hopes to create a formal membership and hold individual meets throughout the year. Frost said.

The Olympics provides the officers with an opportunity to meet outside the line of duty in friendly competition, according to Frost.

The public is welcome to attend the event, which is free. The swim competition begins at 10 a.m., weightlifting at 10:30 a.m., and track and field at 11 a.m.

OPINION / Commentary

Mob control of labor serious threat

WASHINGTON — Attorney General William French Smith has announced that the Justice Department will make street crime its No. 1 target. But the war on muggers should not blind the attorney general to the need for attacking the wholesalers of crimes.

Organized crime has become the nation's third-largest industry. The mob has taken over legitimate businesses and infiltrated labor unions.

With union pension funds rapidly becoming the largest pool of such private investment money in the nation, their control by the underworld poses a serious threat to the economy.

This should come as no surprise to anyone at the Justice Department. It was detailed four years ago in a still-secret 65-page report prepared by the department's organized crime strike force chiefs, Douglas Holler and Peter Vaira. Their conclusions are still valid today, according to an update by my associate Tony Capaccio.

"A majority of the locals in most major cities of the United States in the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Hotel and Restaurant Employees Union, Laborers International Union of North America and the International Longshoremen's Association are completely dominated by organized crime," the report states.

The report's authors noted gloomily that "the officials of these unions are firmly entrenched, there is little hope of removing them by a free election process."

The report concentrated on mobster infiltration in Chicago and Cleveland, but concluded that organized crime also has a substantial foothold in the New York City area.

In fact, the report states, "experienced investigators from the Labor Department list over 100 unions with members of organized crime or their associates in positions of power."

In Chicago, "the syndicate's influence is not only heavily concentrated but disciplined," the secret report states, adding: "The control comes directly from the top of the Chicago organization."

Jack Anderson

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Of all the Chicago unions, "the most striking and dramatic evidence of the hoodlum element... is in the Laborers International," the report concludes. Two of the union's important officials, Al Piloto and Vincent Solano, "also hold a position of power in the Chicago syndicate," according to the report. It claims that they "are two of the five lieutenants under Joey 'The Doves' Aiuppa, who controls the illegal activities in the city." Piloto, says the report, controls "Laborers International president Angelo Fosco."

Mob control of unions would be had enough if it were limited to the unions themselves. But as the report points out, "the most significant result of organized crime influence over the labor unions is the resulting political influence."

The report cites Cleveland as an example: "The Cleveland area is primarily an industrial community in which the unions wield a tremendous amount of political power. Corrupt union leaders are able to dictate their wishes to political candidates. Judges and prosecutors must carry their favor." Through this power of the unions, "organized crime has a definite say in the political and economic life of the city," the report concludes.

One citation in the report bears special significance in light of the Reagan administration's ties to Cleveland Teamsters official Jackie Presser. "There are organized crime figures or close associates of organized crime figures in virtually every Teamster organization in the Cleveland area," the report charges.

For some reason, the strike force report has been gathering dust at the Justice Department for four years. But Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, has also obtained a copy, and is reviewing labor's links with the Mafia.

A WORSE IDEA: One of the Carter administration's farewell gifts to Big Business let the Ford Motor Co. off the hook in what would have been the biggest safety-induced recall in automotive history. The effects of this decision are still being felt — with lethal results.

Despite this, Goldschmidt ruled that Ford could avoid a costly recall by simply sending warning stickers to car owners that would be stuck on the cars' dashboards.

Since then, at least eight people have died in accidents traced to the faulty transmissions.

A survey of 750 Ford owners in San Francisco, Minneapolis and Washington, D.C., showed that only 49 had bothered to stick the company's warning label on their dashboards.

automatic transmissions that sometimes slipped from "park" to "reverse" with unduly disturbing results.

Transportation Department safety watchdogs had concluded that the transmission was involved in more than 6,000 accidents, which caused 140 deaths and 1,700 bodily injuries. Two days before his decision, Goldschmidt received two boxes of Ford documents that supported the safety experts' claims.

Guest editorial This is not time for party politics

Simply put, Social Security is going broke.

This should come as no surprise. For the past several years, Social Security has been using up its surplus funds by paying out more in benefits than it takes in from Social Security taxes.

What is absolutely shocking, however, is the speed at which Social Security is going broke. The program is now using up its reserves at the incredible rate of $12,300 per minute. And the largest part of the program, Old Age and Survivors Insurance (OASI), is losing money even faster, at the rate of $18,800 per minute. In fact, if nothing is done to reform the system, OASI will be bankrupt in October of 1982.

When that happens, it will be too late for politicians to finally breach the sensitive issue of Social Security reform; it will be too late to talk about delaying costs of living increases or reducing benefits by a small percentage. When that happens, the 32 million Americans who depend on OASI funds will receive no benefits whatsoever because there will not be one dime left in OASI to write a check against.

With bankruptcy imminent, reform of the program is not an option. It is an imperative.

And yet, few Democrats in the Congress are willing to recognize this. They have latched onto Social Security as the single political issue which they can use to harm President Reagan. Playing on public misconceptions of the president's reform proposals, they have accused the president of disregarding the needs of the elderly.

In reality, it is inaction on Social Security, not reform, which threatens the elderly. Reform will mean minor hardships for some Social Security recipients. Inaction will mean bankruptcy of our entire Social Security system.

Inaction is what we have seen to date from Congress. Eager to damage the president's image and paralyzed by outcries from an ill-informed public, Congress has failed to take any steps to prevent the bankruptcy of Social Security.

As a result, the president has been forced to propose borrowing from other Social Security funds to bolster OASI. The problem is that this will only postpone the bankruptcy of OASI for a few months. In addition, it will further aggravate the financial difficulties of the still solvent health care and disability funds.

To devise a long term solution, the president has called for the formation of a bipartisan committee on Social Security reform. The only trouble is that there is no reason to believe that the Democratically controlled Congress will be any more receptive to the committee's proposals than they were to President Reagan's.

No solution the committee can come up with will be painless and any solution is liable to raise outcry from those affected by the reform. But the fact is, without reform, the entire system will go under and along with it the financial security of 32 million elderly Americans.

To prevent that, broad bipartisan reforms must be swiftly enacted. There is no time to play party politics with Social Security.

Two sides to dollar

Every silver lining has its cloud, and one appears to be fast developing for the recently strong U.S. dollar on international markets.

For a number of reasons, including most prominently continuing high interest rates that have been pulling billions of loose change from abroad into American banks, the dollar has been gaining value steadily in relation to most other major currencies. Currently it has been hitting levels against the yen, mark and franc some 20 percent above its low point of three years ago.

That is, of course, good news for American tourists whose money goes further abroad and for consumers back home who theoretically are buying foreign goods for less. But there is another side to the coin now turning up and it is not such good news. The strong dollar also means that U.S. goods cost more abroad and our trading partners are thus inclined to buy fewer of them.

This is already being reflected in the trade balance that last year showed a deficit of more than $80 billion or more.

In the past, shortfalls in merchandise exchanges have usually been more than balanced by income from intangibles, the return on investments and a wide range of American services that earn money abroad. But that balance is also shifting and is expected to fall many billions short of making up for this year's trade deficit.

So the price Americans are paying now and possibly for some years to come for their stronger dollar is a mounting debt to the rest of the world.

It is in the short term a no-way-out situation that may make dealing with the budget deficit look almost easy.

Athanson rolls out red carpet for Angels

HARTFORD (UPI) — Mayor George Athanson rolled out the "red carpet" Friday for the Guardian Angels but the police chief repeated his opposition to the anti-crime volunteers, fearing they may "provoke" street gang violence.

Curtis Silva, who founded the Guardian Angels subway and street patrols in New York City and established chapters in 26 other U.S. cities, said he received Athanson's enthusiastic support for patrols in a Hartford meeting Monday.

"This is one of the first times we've been given the red carpet treatment," Silva told reporters afterward on the steps of City Hall. "I'm used to the flea bag treatment. I'm used to ignorant politicians."

Silva, wearing the Angels' uniform red beret and white T-shirt, said he wanted to recruit 20 to 30 people for the Hartford Angels' chapter. He said the recruits would undergo three months of training in self-defense, first aid and the law but the timetable wasn't firm yet because "with the weather we'll need to find an indoor facility for training."

Silva also said he hopes to establish chapters in

New Haven and Bridgeport. Several months ago, Stamford became the first Connecticut city to have an Angels chapter.

Meanwhile, Police Chief George Sicaras said he was "disappointed" Silva was going ahead with plans for the patrols.

He said he met with Springfield, Mass., Guardian Angels' leader, John Rivera, about plans for establishing a chapter in Hartford and told him he opposed the proposal.

"Our agreement then was that if they truly desired to serve the community, then they should work with the police department through the police cadet corps or the police auxiliary," said Sicaras.

"I'm really disappointed that this guy from New York took these steps without talking to me," Sicaras said. "It smacks to me of a breach of faith, a publicity-seeking stunt."

Sicaras said he feared the city's two street gangs — the Savage Nomads and the Ghetto Brothers — might "perceive" the gang-related shootings or murders in Hartford in the past few months. Asked to comment on Sicaras' fears, Silva said, "That's ridiculous. What should we do, sit on the sidelines until everybody kills each other and then sweep up?"

He said the Angels were trained to "be a calming influence" and had had no trouble handling gangs in other cities.

"We're in Los Angeles — the gang capital of the country. We're certainly not Johnny-come-lately to the gang scene," said Silva.

as a new gang and the Angels might themselves become the victims of street violence.

"I'm not sure we want to terrorize the community or provoke these gangs further," said Sicaras, noting there have been 17 youthfull Guardians Angels murders in Hartford in the past few months. Asked to comment on Sicaras' fears, Silva said, "That's ridiculous. What should we do, sit on the sidelines until everybody kills each other and then sweep up?"

"We're in Los Angeles — the gang capital of the country. We're certainly not Johnny-come-lately to the gang scene," said Silva.

Talk won't be enough

By Helen Thomas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan says he will use his elevated position as a "bully pulpit" to rally Americans in the fight against crime and to his side on touchy social issues.

He told an international gathering of police chiefs in New Orleans, "We will use the 'bully pulpit' of the presidency to remind the public of the seriousness of this problem and the need to support your efforts to combat it."

Theodore Roosevelt described the presidency as a "bully pulpit" and the way to focus attention on issues of concern. Some presidents have used such a forum more effectively than others, but all have tried.

David Gergen, White House director of communications, also told reporters that Reagan plans "to speak out forcefully" on controversial issues — issues such as abortion and school prayer where the so-called "New Right" feels that he has abandoned them.

Although some of the issues "stir deep emotions and are divisive," Gergen said Reagan is not going to "step away" from them.

"I think he's going to march right down," he said, and added, "The president is going to express himself the way he has in the past."

He cited gun control as one of the emotional issues, and said that Reagan had reiterated his opposition as he had in the campaign.

Mostly, however, Reagan would like to use his "bully pulpit" to spread his ideology and philosophy of how a government should operate and the role of the individual in society — values and possibilities that typified early America.

The Federal Aviation Administration, which is taking steps to keep unemployment benefits from continuing in at least one state, has 21 days to appeal Peraro's decision.

Decko said the air traffic controllers "are either on strike, or they were discharged for repeated willful misconduct. In either case, the claimants would be rendered ineligible under Connecticut law."

Peraro ruled this week the federal air controllers in Connecticut, who were fired in August when they went on strike, are eligible for unemployment compensation. Peraro said his decision was based in part on an interpretation of the strike as a single, rather than a repeated, act of misconduct.

CBIA: Peraro wrong

HARTFORD (UPI) — State Labor Commissioner P. Joseph Peraro's decision to allow air traffic controllers to collect unemployment benefits was a misinterpretation of state law, a spokesman for a Connecticut business group said Friday.

Peraro's decision "is an undermining of the principles of our unemployment compensation system, and unless the decision is overturned on appeal, it sets a very grave precedent," said Kenneth O. Decko, president of the Connecticut Business and Industry Association.

He said the association "will explore all available options, including court action and legislative modifications to existing state unemployment compensation statutes, to eliminate any ambiguity which may have enabled the commission to rule in the controllers' favor."

TINA LAVERTY, Manchester: "I shouldn't be legalized. It's bad and people who smoke it sometimes have a bad influence on those who don't."

Drugs part of culture, youth worker says

By Nancy Thompson, Herald Reporter
"Take it or not, marijuana is part of the rite of passage," a youth worker told an audience of about 100 parents and their parents Friday. "Most people's first experience with drugs is from friends," Jacqueline Mills, a Crossroads counselor answered. "It is pretty much a myth that there are older people passing out drugs to kids. Older users too much to lose." The staff discussed the attitude toward drugs that exists in society — the "double message" children receive that it's alright to take a pill to help you sleep or lose weight, but not to use marijuana.
"As parents, as painful as it is, we have to accept that marijuana is part of the youth culture," she said. "Studies on the affects of marijuana usage are inconclusive, she said, in regard to the physical effects. Research has shown that long-term users tend to suffer from "burnout," or lack of motivation, and a decreased ability to concentrate."
The best method of prevention of all kinds of drug abuse, the staff emphasized, is communication. Students become involved with drugs because they feel alone or isolated or are responding to peer pressure.
If the children have a good relationship with their parents and can talk about drugs, their chances of abusing drugs decrease, they said. "The underlying message to preventing drug abuse is communication," Ms. Peterson said. "Sometimes adolescents use drugs in an acting-out way to say, 'Hey, pay attention to me.'"

Communication can also be an effective tool among adolescents themselves, Ms. Peterson said in response to a question from a girl in the audience about what to do if someone offers drugs.
"I'd say 'I'm not into it,'" Ms. Peterson said. "I wouldn't come out and say they're a creep. Maybe they're trying to be friends, maybe they use drugs because they need friends, and that's the only way they know how to approach you."
Under its terms, the residents will withdraw their objections to the sale in return for assurances from Multi-Circuits that it will abandon an expansion plan and use the garage property to ease the parking shortage near the plant.
The executive session of the subcommittee had been set in anticipation of the agreement.

Obituaries

John Gruber, 73, leading musician

John Frederick Gruber, who founded the Manchester Symphony Orchestra 21 years ago and served as its first music director for 16 years, died Friday at Manchester Memorial Hospital. He was 73.
Gruber made his debut as a concert pianist with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra under Leopold Stokowski.
Gruber, who, with his wife, Dorothy (Thompson) Gruber, lived at 287 Hills St., East Hartford, organized and operated the Manchester Radio and TV Shop from 1947 to 1965, when he retired.
During that period he learned a great deal about the sound system at Manchester High School. This knowledge stood him in good stead when he became the Manchester Civic Orchestra's conductor in 1960.

Resolution on garage sale to be made public Monday

A resolution paving the way for sale of the town's Park Department garage to Multi-Circuits will be made public Monday and presented to the Board of Directors for action Tuesday night.
Town Attorney Kevin O'Brien was formally instructed Friday afternoon to prepare the resolution. The decision to go forward with preparations for the sale was made by a director's subcommittee which met in executive session Friday.
The action came on the heels of an agreement between Multi-Circuits and its residential neighbors who had opposed the sale, fearing it would permit the firm to expand at its Harrison Street site.
They complained of noise, odor and traffic problems they say the firm has created.
After months of dispute between the firm and its neighbors, the sides got together to work out an agreement. Negotiations went forward quietly, then bogged down briefly.

Funds sought for defense

General Manager Robert B. Weiss will ask the Board of Directors at its Oct. 6 meeting to appropriate an additional $90 for the town's defense in the HUD discrimination lawsuit.
So far, the town has allocated $25,000 to pay the costs of attorney Dominic J. Squatrito's defense.
The most recent allocation was $18,720 in September.
Weiss said. "The special counsel (Squatrito) believes this will be the last expenditure unless there is a further appeal."
An appeal is considered likely. Both sides see this case as an important test.
Federal Judge M. Joseph Blumenfeld is expected to release his decision on the case at any time.

Officials of Urban League look for economic solution

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Officials of the Urban League in New England looked Friday for an antidote to President Reagan's economic policies, which they said are proving "disastrous" for the well-being of poor and working people.
"It is very evident that the policies of the administration in Washington are not in the best interest of not only black people, but average working people and those not fortunate to find work," said Henry Thomas, league president in Springfield, Mass.
"We believe America should be strong enough to both defend ourselves and take care of our children. They are not mutually exclusive," Thomas said.
Thomas and about 50 others from the Urban League's six regional offices attended a day-long workshop to combat the region's "anticipatory problems of Reaganomics and other cutbacks."
The Urban League has offices in Providence, Boston and Springfield, Mass., and Hartford, New Haven and Stamford, Conn.
"New England has special problems," Thomas said. He cited climate and resulting high heat and utility costs, urban decay and critical housing shortages compounded by Reagan's cutbacks in social services. "We want a healthy economy and we want people to have jobs, but not at the expense of black and poor people."
Lyons said there were some problems with Reagan's theory that reducing business taxes and federal regulation will create some 60,000 new jobs in private industry.
"What will we do between time? A lot of people are going to suffer and do without," Lyons said.
Thomas and Errol E. Hunt, the Urban League's executive director in Rhode Island, said violence may be a threat in the future because of frustration over economic conditions. And the reaction won't be limited to minorities.
"It's not all black people, but old folks and white folks — all people are starting to be affected," Hunt said.
Lyons said his 57th birthday earlier this week, is the third winniestest coach in National Football League history.
The one-time defensive back with the New York Giants, Landry has guided the Cowboys into the playoffs 14 of the last 15 seasons.
Since 1966 the Cowboys have won 183 games, losing 55 and tying two others for the best mark of any team in the NFL during that period.
Landry stands behind only George Halas with 325 while guiding the Chicago Bears for 40 years and Curly Lambeau who handled Green Bay clubs for 33 years while winning 234 games.
Off to their best start in five years when they won eight straight, the Cowboys will be after No. 5 against the Cardinals Sunday.
"Dallas wins because of the system," Smith adds. "They aren't asked to do more than they're capable of doing, and each man knows exactly what he's supposed to do. And they all know that Landry's going to pick the right play. They know, if they execute, they're going to win. It's uncanny, but inevitably he'll call the right play just when he should."
On the sidelines during a game, there is no calmer coach in football than Landry. He doesn't rant and go into a rage when a play fails or when disagreeing with an official's call.

One goal nullified, Tech in deadlock

Two unbeaten Charter Oak Conference squads met in miserable conditions yesterday in Cromwell and when everything was over both sides remained undefeated — but tied.
Despite having an apparent goal nullified, Cheney Tech came from behind to deadlock the home-dwelling Panthers, 1-1, in COC competition.
The tie leaves the Techmen at 1-0-2 in the conference and 4-0-2 overall while the tie leaves Cromwell 2-0-1 in the COC and 5-0-1 overall.
Cheney's next outing is Tuesday at Bolton Hill at 3:15.
The Techmen, after a scoreless first half, were apparently on the scoreboard at the 15-minute mark as Tom Eaton slid an indirect kick back to Paul Nowak, who slammed an 18-yarder into the cage.
The ref near the ball said it was a goal but the ref about 20 yards back of the ball said it did not take a complete revolution, remarked Tech Coach Paul Soucy. "It thought it took at least two revolutions. I'm sure the referee would have called it if I've seen," he exclaimed.
To make matters worse, Cromwell scored three minutes later as Steve Thomas with a diving header put the home club in front.
Cheney, however, would not be denied with Tom Eaton deadlocking it with three minutes left in regulation.
The senior striker took a shot which bounced off Cromwell keeper Dave Rose. It rebounded back to him and Eaton deposited it into the twine for the draw. It was Eaton's fifth goal of the season.
"The first five minutes Cromwell had five corner kicks but we didn't get away," Soucy cited. "After that we played an excellent game. I was proud of them the way they came back after the goal was called back."
It was a defensive struggle with Cromwell outshooting Tech by a slender 8-4 count. Cheney netminder Lou Lovernale was a standout between the pipes. Soucy acknowledged.

Catholic girls on target sweeping Bulkeley, 10-0

Five goals in each half powered Northwest Catholic at 3:15. "We needed three minutes we need Northwest again," remarked East Coach Don Fay. Northwest and Barnes, Karen Kaufold and Martha Barter chipping in one apiece. Barter played the first ball in goal and she along with Denise White registered the shutout.
Fay added: "I was very pleased with three minutes left in regulation."
East outshot Bulkeley, 36-3.

Landry system pays off in wins

"Leadership is a matter of having people look at you and gain confidence. If you're in control, they're in control," Tom Landry said. "When the system (The coach) takes the pressure off the players, he helps pick up the slack. On most teams the pressure of winning or losing is dumped on the guys who are playing, it's claimed Jackie Smith who found this out in his one season with the Cowboys after 15 years with the St. Louis Cardinals.
"Tom Landry is the most thorough football mind I've ever known. He knows every weakness of every player but they'll face him and he knows what can work against them," Smith adds.
Landry, who noted his 57th birthday earlier this week, is the third winniestest coach in National Football League history.

Whalers gamble

It's a gamble, the Hartford Whalers giving up its most consistent performer and captain, Mike Rogers, to the New York Rangers. It was not a popular move but only time will tell if the deal will help both clubs, which is always the aim when moving players around from one club to another.
Reports have circulated that Syd Marre received only $2,000 appearance money to run, and win, the special one-mile race in New York City. Billy Rodgers has openly admitted that he received in excess of $50,000 for running as an amateur last year and Patti Lyons Catalano, the country's top female marathoner, is reported to have received over $125,000 for taking part in amateur runs. One wonders about the Hartford Whalers' youth movement when the team acquired 16-year-old Paul Smyer, who was a standout in the NHL the last two years. Death claimed one of Manchester's top tennis players this week, Pete AuCoin. He was a former tennis doubles champ with Mal Darling and later a teaching pro. West Side Old Timers' reunion dinner will be tonight at the British-American Club at 7...Have a nice weekend.

Author Harry Golden dies

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Best-selling author Harry Golden, who left the remnants of New York and a jail term behind him to become an eloquent and sometimes humorous chronicler of the civil rights movement in the South, died at his home Friday after a prolonged illness. He was 78.
Golden was the author of nearly 20 dozen books and for 26 years he published the monthly newspaper "The Carolina Israelite" that led the civil rights movement at a time when other Southern publications remained silent.
"I get away with my ideas in the South, because no Southerner takes me — a Jew, a yank, and a radical — seriously," Golden once said. "They mostly think of a Jew as a kind of substitute Negro anyway."
Along with his civil rights work, Golden was well known for his chronicles of life of New York's Jewish immigrants. His best known work, "Only in America," was a collection of essays from the newspaper that soared to the best-seller list after its publication in 1952. Southern publications remained silent.
Funeral services will be at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Temple Israel, Bural will follow in the Hebrew Cemetery in Charlotte.
Born Harry Goldhirsh on May 6, 1903, the son of Jewish-Austrian immigrants, he grew up in a four-room tenement in New York, a childhood that deeply influenced his later work as he described the sights, sounds, smells and the people of the Lower East Side.
His life was not without its difficult moments. After bankruptcy proceedings, Golden abandoned his family and moved to the South in 1941.

On the end of the world

If the world's going to come to an end, it would be in my own selfish best interest if it happened somewhere around the year 2000. I'm not a prophet, but I'm a realist. In 20 years I'll have lived a reasonably long life and I could die along with everyone else in doomsday without the gnawing feeling that I'd be missing everything that happened after that. Prospects don't look good.

Journalist, author Rhea Talley Stewart

Manchester to Afghanistan

By Betty Ryder
Herald feature writer

She's warm, friendly and compassionate. She's an author, lecturer and noted journalist. She speaks with a soft southern drawl, a dead giveaway to her comfortable Cape Cod home tucked into a grove of shade trees on Boulder Road, wearing a colorful caftan, a memento of her many trips abroad, she reflects on her early days as a journalist and on the events which led her to write her book, "Fire in Afghanistan."

The paper was discovered rolled up inside the caftan just before it was printed in Arabic, a memento of one of her trips to India. Most of us don't give much thought to the end of the world. It doesn't pay, really. There are occasional nuts who predict it will come to pass on Tuesday, but it's nothing more of us worry about.

I think of it when I read about nuclear weapons. It's unthinkable, isn't it? Could it really happen? It is possible we're going to destroy — if not the world — all civilization on this planet, Earth? You have to admit there's a chance of it, but it's unlikely to be as dramatic as the wipeout war between ourselves and Russia.

There are two more likely possibilities for the end of the world. First, we could keep breeding until there are 100 times more people on Earth than there are now. At that point we would have taken up everything from the ground, turned it into garbage and dumped it into our lakes, rivers and oceans, thus ruining both earth and water and making the planet uninhabitable.

War with nuclear weapons might be a quicker and more merciful way to end the world, but it seems likely that the biggest danger of this comes not from Russia but from one of the small, poor nations that has nothing to lose.

Most crimes are committed by the people in our society who figures they won't be caught. If they get caught, on a world scale, it's the dictator in the little, underdeveloped country that doesn't have much to lose who is most apt to get himself some atomic bombs and drop them.

I HOPE one of those dictators doesn't get hold of one of our neutron bombs. I don't know where the inventors of that went wrong. I think they misunderstood the order the Pentagon gave them for a weapon. They make a bomb that kills people but doesn't damage buildings and certainly the order must have been for a weapon that did just the opposite — one that knocks down buildings but doesn't hurt people.

The world won't come to an end if all the buildings are destroyed as long as there are people left to rebuild them, but if all the people are killed and the buildings remain standing, Earth is going to look pretty ridiculous floating around in space for the next couple of million years with all those unused parking spaces.

As much as I hate the thought of having the world go on without me, I've put aside my selfish interests and have not been hoping it will all end in the year 2000. I hope President Reagan doesn't think it will either. If he doesn't, maybe he'll make those budget cuts in some of his military expenditures instead of social programs. That way I might not be able to look forward to the end of the world in the year 2000, but at least I could anticipate the government being able to pay my Social Security when the times come for it.

Commenting on revealing her age — a no-no for most women — she said, "A young man from the Associated Press did a story on me not too long ago. I didn't mind telling him my age — but I didn't expect him to put it in the headline."

Nowadays, Mrs. Stewart spends a good deal of her time working on her second book, which will bring her first story to date following the 1979 Russian invasion of Czechoslovakia.

As the last Western journalist known to have interviewed Amin, she hopes to be the first to interview his successor, Babrak Karmal, a man she calls, "the original communist, a perfect stooge."

But said she does enjoy talking with young people. "Thirty or 40 years ago we had a very few people who saw ahead and were devoted to protecting our wilderness," she said. "Today, I deal a great deal with young people and I'm very encouraged with their attitudes. You hear such terrible things about young people today, but that's certainly not the whole story."

Mrs. Murie was one of the U.S. Biological Survey's leading scientists and was, like his wife is today, a member of the board of directors of the Wilderness Society.

The couple moved from Alaska to Jackson, Wyo. in the 1940s led the successful campaign to enlarge the boundaries of Grand Teton National Park.

Mrs. Murie is currently working on her second book, "The Story of My Life." She's very clear and thoughtful, a passionate speaker. What she says comes straight from her heart.

She's always been a person who has been devoted to protecting our wilderness. She's always been a person who has been devoted to protecting our wilderness. She's always been a person who has been devoted to protecting our wilderness.

Romance's end suits man

DEAR ABBY: I am a 29-year-old single male, practicing law in San Francisco. Six weeks ago I broke up with a young woman after a relationship that had lasted nearly a year. She took it pretty hard, so I was rather surprised when she sent me an expensive three-piece suit for my birthday! I didn't want to accept such an expensive gift, so I returned it to the store for a credit, which I mailed to her with a very nice note. I was even more surprised when the same suit was redelivered to my office with an angry letter from her saying I had "damned well better keep the suit!"

Dear Abby
 Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am 19, and I'm dating a 27-year-old man. My parents do not object to the age difference in their ages. The problem is that my parents think this man is not really bad-looking. My friends are laughing at me because of this. I love him very much and he loves me, but my parents are terribly disappointed that I didn't pick a better-looking fellow. He is about an inch shorter than I am and he's losing his hair, but I don't care. He treats me better than any guy I've ever gone with, and our relationship is great!

DEAR AMY: Your friends are right. But there are several lessons to be learned here:

1) Never "mention" to a boyfriend that another girl is "fantastically well-patched together." (He may not be able to resist the challenge to "take her apart.")

2) If a man is interesting, few girls, out of loyalty to a girlfriend, will pass up a chance to date him.

3) Dawn talks too much.

4) So does Sue.

DEAR ABBY: The names are fictitious, but I am telling it like it is. I have been dating a fellow named Eric. I mentioned to Eric that Dawn, a good friend of mine, is a fan-tastically well-patched together. Well, Eric called Dawn and asked her for a date. Dawn accepted and she told Sue (who is also a friend of mine) that she went out with Eric. Sue told me, and now I am humiliated and angry. I contend that when Eric called Dawn, she should have refused him immediately, saying she and I were good friends, and then hung up the phone. Furthermore, Dawn shouldn't have told Sue or anyone else about her date with Eric because it made me look like a fool.

DEAR AMY: You're not really bad-looking, Abby. He is about an inch shorter than I am and he's losing his hair, but I don't care. He treats me better than any guy I've ever gone with, and our relationship is great!

Is raw meat dangerous?

Your Health
 Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I work in a well-know fast food chain. We sell beef and beef sandwiches. I am very worried about how the beef is cooked. Or I should say how it is not cooked. We get the beef frozen. We have instructions about putting it in the oven for thawing and then leaving it unthawed until our cooked supply goes low. If it then runs out of beef we go ahead and use it even if it has not been in the oven as long as it should be to be completely cooked.

I suppose the franchise knows what it is doing but what do you think I should do?
DEAR READER — There is a health reason for cooking food. Cooking destroys harmful bacteria and will even destroy some toxins already formed in the meat. It is not just a matter of taste. It is dangerous to eat uncooked meats, including poultry. Fortunately, in most instances the meat people get is a good case of food poisoning from the bactericidal action of the heat. The situation you describe cries out for a meat thermometer. The only way to kill unwanted bacteria is to subject them to a heat of about 170 F (80 C) for at least 30 minutes. Poultry should be cooked to 180 F (82 C). That means all the meat and that outside. That is why the thermometer should be inserted into the center of the meat being cooked. It doesn't matter what the cooking procedure is as far as health is concerned so long as these temperatures are reached and maintained. You might suggest that your supervisor get a meat thermometer on his point. But you must realize that we do not know that cancers are caused by viruses. Even if some are there is evidence that other cancers are not. As a case in point, most skin cancers are caused by radiation from the sun, not viruses.
 But the body's ability to reject or destroy abnormal cells or organisms is related to our immune system which does influence our resistance to cancer. One approach to cancer treatment or prevention is to improve the body's ability to destroy abnormal cells (cancer cells), regardless of their cause through improving the body's immune response.

Supermarket Shopper

Take no more than two forms

By Martin Sioane
DEAR SUPERMARKET SHOPPER — Please say something in your column about people who take whole pads of refund forms.

Our local Osco store was given one pad of Crest refund forms, and a customer took the entire pad. I told the manager that I needed the form, and he promised to get a few from a store in another town.

The offer expires in a few days. Since it's important drive, I will have to walk a mile and a half each way to pick up the form.

If people would only remember other shoppers when they reach for the whole pad, they might think twice and take only one or two refund forms. — Clarie M. from Dixon, Ill.

DEAR CLARIE — Your letter is better than any preaching I could do to persuade greedy pad grabbers to mend their ways.

DEAR SUPERMARKET SHOPPER — There is a great difference between the casual couponing that I used to do and the organized couponing and refunding that I do now. I used to throw all my coupons in a drawer. I now have them organized by envelope. I receive coupons in a restaurant, brings home the newspaper food sections that people leave behind in the parking lot, and I have many hundreds to choose from.

DEAR SUE — Tune your parents out and listen to your heart. If you love him and he treats you well, pay no attention to what anyone says. Handsome is as handsome does.

DEAR SUE — Everybody needs friends. For some practical tips on how to be popular, get Abby's Popularity book. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed stamped (35 cents) envelope to Abby's Popularity, 12066 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.

Bolton churches set seminar on death

Rev. Ernest S. Harris

BOLTON — A four-part seminar on death and dying is being planned for this month at St. George's Episcopal Church, Route 44A. The series is open to all area residents, without charge.

All of the Bolton clergy will participate in the program, which is being sponsored by the Bolton Ecumenical Council.

The theme of the seminar is, "The Last Stage of Growth," and the first meeting will be on Oct. 12 at 7:30. Other meetings will be on Oct. 18, 25 and Nov. 1.

The first session will cover practical matters such as wills and estate planning, especially geared for young families who are less than affluent.

Subsequent sessions will feature the Rev. Ernest S. Harris Jr., staff chaplain and director of pastoral care at Manchester Memorial Hospital, who will discuss grief and how to help bereaved friends or dying friends.

In addition to a return by Pastor Harris, a guest at the third session will be Sister Sue Keefe, coordinator of the Manchester Hospice Team.

The final session will feature a talk titled, "The Great Beyond." This will be by the Rev. Dr. J. Moun-tain Thomas of West Hartford, who was chaplain of Trinity college for eight years and is now a trustee of the Anglican Fellowship of Prayer and author of two books on prayer and on the Christian view of death and eternal life.

His talk will deal with resurrection and judgment and how the great final question all must face. This session will include a festival service of evisceration.

No prior registration is required. For more information call Sue Gordon, 643-3836 or the Rev. John Holliger, 643-9203.

Members who have moved away are being invited to return for a time of worship together, and former pastors and staff people have been asked to participate in the worship service.

Those to participate in the service include the Rev. John Neupert and his wife, Marcia. They were the founding pastors of the church in the capacity of ministers of education, and the Rev. Mark Larson, who grew up in the church and then entered the ministry. He recently assumed a pastorate in a Willington church. He will reflect on his experiences as a "son" of the church.

MACC News Program unique to area

MACC staff and volunteers work out of a tiny, cluttered office in three desks, a few phones which are frequently busy, a window and a door that is always open. On the door, a prayer for all those who enter here; those who come in need, and those who come to give — remembering that we are made one by the love of God.

A casual visitor might be surprised to learn that this office is the hub of a program that operates under the umbrella of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

MACC is a service consortium of 14 member churches which provides assistance to the poor, elderly, ill and handicapped. Specifically, MACC operates the Human Needs Funds, the Emergency Pantry, a free clothing and furniture bank and sponsors Project Re-Entry and Project Genesis, support networks for ex-offenders and mental patients.

In addition, MACC provides for chapelains at Manchester Memorial Hospital.

Third film on marriage to be shown
The Marriage Enrichment film series being shown at the Church of Christ, 394 Lydell St., continues this Sunday night with the third film, "What Husbands Need to Know."

This 8-film series is free to the public. After a brief devotional at 6 o'clock the film will be shown, ending at 7. A supervised nursery is provided, as well as a supervised area for older children.

"The church has brought this series to Manchester through the move toward contracting the impact of the terrible beating the marriage institution is taking in our society today," said Eugene Brewer, a minister to the church.

"But the films can help only to the extent that people take advantage of the opportunity to see them," he added.

MACC's programs are supported largely by volunteers who provide time, money and materials. But one year, a gala fund-raising event is held to provide monies for the core operating budget.

The Evening of the Performing Arts has become, in the eight year of its existence, a community tradition.

Performers number more than 100, and all donate their time to provide an evening's entertainment for the hundreds who come to enjoy it.

This year, the EPA is scheduled for Oct. 24, at 8 p.m. at East Catholic High School. On stage will be the Sphinx Temple Highlanders Pipe Band and the Jamboree School of Dance, the Sweet Adelines, the Manchester Square Dance Club, the Karen Krinjak Trio, the Bolton School of Dance, soloist Mary Stewart and the ever-
