Inflation report delayed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As the result of the administration's roundabout effort to reduce inflation by cutting the federal budget, the government's monthly report on inflation at the wholesale level was delayed several hours.

Recent federal budget cuts have severely restricted the Labor Department's ability to pay overtime to workers who print and compile the September Producer Prices report. So instead of its normal 9 a.m. release time today, the report was not to be made public until 2 p.m.

Private economists expected the report to show a 0.3 percent to 0.5 percent increase in the price of finished goods at the wholesale level in September, compared to the 0.3 percent increase registered in August.

If repeated each month for a year, the August increase in producer prices works out to a 3.6 percent annual increase.

The similarly low monthly inflation rate anticipated in the September report reflects continued declines in raw food prices and little or no increase in energy costs, according to David Ernst, vice president of the Washington-based forecasting firm, Evans Economics.

Ernst noted the once-a-year rebate that automobile manufacturers offered their dealers in September — the end of the model year — also will hold down the September inflation rate at the wholesale level.

Last year, the inclusion of the auto dealers "liquidation allowance" for the first time in the September producer prices report set off a minor political battle, as candidate Ronald Reagan charged the Carter administration with "jimmying" the statistics to make the last inflation report before the November presidential election look better than it was.

Recession not being forecast

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (UPI) — An economic recovery will take longer than expected but there will be no recession next year, some of the country's leading corporate executives said today.

In their forecast, economists of 20 major corporations represented on the prestigious Business Council, said while interest rates will fall only "somewhat" from October through December and unemployment rates will remain above the 7 percent mark next year, inflation will begin to come down.

And the business forecasters said, despite setbacks in the economy for both the second and third quarters, "the economy has not shown the cumulative pervasive decline that characterizes recession." They added, "A recession will not occur."

The economic report, delivered during a meeting at a Virginia mountain resort, was put together by consultants under the direction of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. Chairman Charles Brown.

Generally, the forecast was slightly more pessimistic than one delivered by the same group in May. The earlier report had looked forward to the administration's then-pending tax cuts. The group said "recent sluggishness in the economy will end during the current fourth quarter." In May, the economists had expected an earlier increase in business activity.

And the current report saw less success in lowering the nation's unemployment rate, saying it would go no lower than 7 percent next year. In May the group had predicted the rate dropping slightly below that mark.

Brown acknowledged a deepening pessimism from the council's May forecast and blamed both higher-than-expected interest rates and, most recently, sharp increases in unemployment insurance claims.

Robert Jablowski helps get things ready at the J.C. Penney Distribution Center in preparation for this weekend's 1981 Product Show and Auto Sale, sponsored by the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce. The show kicks off today with an auto parade and it will officially open tonight at the complex at 6 p.m.

Parade opens show

The Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce 1981 Product Show and Auto Sale, a grab bag of good food, fancy cars, funny clowns and interesting displays, kicks off today with an Antique and Classic Auto Parade, beginning at 3 p.m. from the chamber office on Hartford Road.

The auto parade, which includes Ronald McDonald's mobile van, will make its way to the J.C. Penney Distribution Center, site of this year's show. There the Sphinx Temple Highlanders bagpipe band will play to celebrate the show's grand opening at 6 p.m.

The show continues Saturday from noon to 8 p.m. and Sunday, noon to 6 p.m.

This year's show will be operating on three times more floor space in an effort to remedy the crowded conditions that resulted last year when an unexpected 18,000 attended the two-day event.

There is also an additional parking lot this year and a shuttle bus will carry people to the complex from the outlying lot.

Inside, more than 200 area businesses and organizations will have displays. Highlights include two new features, an international food fair and an auto sale.

The food fair will feature Italian, Mexican, Greek and Chinese cuisine and seating for 200 will be available. In addition, Cambodian and In-dochinese families from Manchester will be offering their native foods.

Ten area car dealers with 175 cars on display will be on hand for a giant indoor "tent sale." With bankers and appraisers there to handle the financial details, it will be possible for someone to drive in with an old car and drive away with a new one.

For the kids, Ronald McDonald will make two appearances, Saturday and Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. Child care will be available.

Tickets for the show are 75 cents in advance and $1 at the door. Children under six get in free. Advance tickets are on sale at most area banks.

Security is strong in Egypt

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — A U.S. delegation including three former presidents arrived in Cairo today for the funeral of slain President Anwar Sadat amid strong security measures and an outbreak of violence in southern Egypt.

Secretary of State Alexander Haig, heading the delegation on behalf of President Reagan, said on arrival there could be no finer memorial to Sadat "than to bring to the Middle East a full and comprehensive peace and to Egypt the better life he sought for his people."

"If we allow our grief to impede the task that Anwar ElSadat began, we will have done him a greater injustice than the assassins who took his life," Haig said.

The 17-member U.S. delegation included former presidents Jimmy Carter, Gerald R. Ford and Richard Nixon.

The American delegation headed to Cairo by an Egyptian delegation headed by Prime Minister Menachem Begin, a fellow peaceemaker in the Middle East.

Begin drove straight to the residence of President-to-be Hosni Mubarak, who will formally succeed Sadat after a national referendum next Tuesday.

The Middle East News Agency, meanwhile, said Mubarak had accepted an invitation from President Reagan to visit the United States early next year.

One of the first to arrive for the funeral was Sudanese President Jaafar Numeiry, Sadat's closest ally in the region.

All the visitors were met at the airport by Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan Ali and other senior officials.

As millions of Egyptian flocked to mosques for sabbath prayers, there were no immediate reports of further violence in the wake of a clash Thursday between Moslem fundamentalists and police in the Nile riverside city of Asyut.

Security officials said the fighting in Asyut resulted in at least 10 dead and many injured. The clash heightened tensions in the aftermath of Sadat's assassination and police beefed up their presence around mosques and other potential trouble spots.

Before all three living ex-presidents left Washington Thursday evening for the Saturday funeral, Reagan held a special ceremony at the White House. Haig will represent Reagan, who was convinced there was too much danger to attend the funeral.

"On behalf of the country, I want to express a heartfelt thanks to presidents Nixon, Ford and Carter and Mrs. Carter for undertaking this sad mission," Reagan said.

"Their presence in Cairo will express to the Egyptian people the depth of America's grief and sorrow at the loss of a great leader and a beloved friend."

With a closing wish from Reagan that "God hold you in the hollow of His hand," the three former presidents left for the presidential jet to fly to Egypt.

National Security Adviser Richard Allen told Washington television station WDVN that their plane "will not be alone." He did not elaborate on what might be escorting the plane, but did say extra precautions had been taken.

Egyptian security sharply scaled down ceremonies to prevent any outbreak of trouble and to protect the international mourners — including Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

In Tripoli, Libya, exiled Egyptian Lt. Gen. Saad Eddin El-Shazli, whose group "Independent Organization for the Liberation of Egypt" claimed responsibility for killing Sadat, warned that Vice President Hosni Mubarak faced death if he continued his predecessor's policies of peace with Israel.

In Beirut, Lebanon, a caller who said he was from the same organization told UPI the group was responsible for the Asyut violence and threatened to kill Begin and several

Zinsser supports Howe's candidacy

By Paul Hendrie Herald Reporter

HARTFORD — State Sen. Carl A. Zinsser, R-Manchester, in a surprise announcement this morning, said he will not seek the vacated 1st Congressional District seat, but will instead back Colleen Howe.

Mrs. Howe, a Glastonbury resident and wife of former hockey great Gordie Howe, announced her candidacy earlier this week. She is a political newcomer.

Mrs. Howe appeared this morning at a Capitol news conference with Zinsser, who also represents Glastonbury.

"Colleen Howe, with her newness will bring a fresh approach, a new face, new enthusiasm to politics in our congressional district," said Zinsser. "Colleen Howe's background as a successful business woman qualifies her to address ... problems such as too much spending, too many taxes and too much over-regulating." Zinsser said friends and supporters approached him to run, but after weighing the pros and cons, he decided to stay in the state Senate.

"I believe I have a responsibility both to my family and to the people in the 4th Senatorial District who elected me to represent them here in Hartford," said Zinsser. "I enjoy being a state senator and plan to continue in my capacity."

Zinsser said he told Manchester Republican vice chairman Curtis Smith of his intention to support Mrs. Howe.

Smith said this morning he does not back any specific candidate, but will let the town committee make its own decision on Oct. 22.

"That's old politics for the party leadership to choose who the candidate will be," said Smith.

Zinsser said he thinks Mrs. Howe can help the Republicans "broaden their base" in the predominantly Democratic district.

Other announced Republican contenders are former Hartford Mayor Ann Uccello and 1976 GOP congressional nominee Lucien DiPaz.

State college cost hikes below national rate

By Lisa Zowada
Herald Reporter

If you've been complaining about how much or how many more it costs to send your child to a public four-year college in Connecticut this year, there's something you should know.

The national average increase in total costs at four-year public colleges in 1981-82 is higher than the highest increase at either the state's university or three of the four state colleges surveyed.

While the national average increase was 14 percent, the highest increase in total costs among the four Connecticut four-year public colleges contacted was only 11 percent, the average increase at both Western Connecticut State College and Central Connecticut State College.

And at the University of Connecticut, total costs increased only 6 percent, less than half the national average. A student attending the Storrs campus in 1981-82 can expect to spend, all told, $4,890.

Eastern Connecticut State College had an increase in total cost of about 10 percent.

At Manchester Community College, one of 12 two-year regional community colleges in the state, tuition and credit cost increased 20 percent in the 1981-82 academic year. Tuition rose from $250 to $300 while hourly credit cost went from $9.50 to $10.25.

Tuition, fees and credit costs are uniform for all state community colleges.

The nationwide increase figure is notably higher than the national inflation rate, currently at 9 percent.

Public Four-year college, '81-'82

Average total costs	percentage of total costs for tuition and fees	Percentage of total costs for room and board
CONNECTICUT $3,883	24% ($923)	54% ($2,102)
NATIONWIDE $3,872	20% ($819)	48% ($1,846)

The national figures are provided by a survey of 1,160 four-year private and public colleges across the country conducted by the College Board.

The board is a non-profit educational association which design programs about and offer information on expanding educational opportunities.

The board says the 1981-82 total costs increases are the largest ever reported in the 10 years it has been conducting the survey.

Total costs figures include tuition and fees, room and board, books and supplies transportation and personal expenses.

Two of three Connecticut's private four-year colleges surveyed had a 1981-82 tuition, fees and credit cost increase which was substantially higher than the nationwide figure of 13 percent for the same type of institution, currently at 9 percent.

The Higher Cost of Higher Education

Wesleyan University and Trinity College those costs increased an average 16 percent of 1980, while the national average was 13 percent.

Total costs increases at two of these colleges were also above the national average of 13 percent. At Trinity, tuition, fees, room and board increased 19 percent, from $7,830 a year to $9,334.

Wesleyan in Middletown, one of the 30 most expensive private colleges in the country, reported a 16 percent increase in total costs, a year at the university costing $10,520.

Yale's tuition, fees, room and board rose 13 percent in the 1981-82 academic year.

While this year's increases on the national level are the largest in the past ten years, the College Board reports that since 1972-73, total expenses have risen less than the Consumer Price Index.

The index has risen 123 percent in 10 years, but total costs at public colleges have gone up 95 percent and 110 percent in private institutions.

The Candidates Are Saying

Cassano seeks help for needy

Democratic Deputy Mayor Stephen T. Cassano, running for reelection, has asked Manchester residents to join in dropping off clothing and various household items to help the needy.

Cassano announced he has made arrangements with leaders of both political parties to use their Main Street headquarters as drop off centers. The Mayor's Intra-Party Program at Manchester Community College is the sponsor of the effort and will also be a drop-off center.

Clothes and household items are especially sought, Cassano said. He said many young families and returning families settling in town have few of these items.

The collected items will be distributed to the Manchester Area Conference of Churches, the Mansfield Training School and area group homes. MACC is particularly hard pressed now, as it strives to establish homes for newly arriving Cambodian families.

Donations may be left at the Democratic headquarters at 913 Main St. - next to Regals - or at Republican Headquarters at 955 Main St. - in the Watkins building. Both headquarters will be open daily until 9 p.m.

Wilson expects vote from Japan

Independent Board of Directors candidate Edward J. Wilson says he believes he will be the only candidate who gets a vote from Japan this November.

Wilson says he has learned that an absentee ballot has been taken up by a Manchester voter who is now near Tokyo.

And Wilson says he has good reason to think he will win that vote. The voter is his son.

Flags at half staff for Sadat

General Manager Robert B. Weiss said this morning he will order flags at all town buildings to be flown at half staff until assassination Egyptian President Anwar Sadat is buried.

Governor William A. O'Neill ordered flags at all state buildings to fly at half staff until the burial.

Directors mull garage sale

A special meeting of the Board of Directors will be held this afternoon at 4:30 p.m. in the Municipal Building Hearing Room to act on the ordinance formally approving the sale of the Harrison Street town garage to Multi-Circuits Inc. for $400,000.

The board passed a resolution at its Tuesday night meeting approving the sale and outlining the conditions, but a formal ordinance could not be passed because there had not been time to advertise it in advance.

The board will also vote today to upgrade the public works directors job classification, so a salary range of $52,145 to $40,183 can be offered.

Public session

The Board of Directors will hold a public session Thursday, Oct. 15 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the Board of Directors office in the Municipal Building to hear comments and suggestions from the public.

Sessions are held the first Tuesday of each month from 9 to 11 a.m. and the third Thursday of each month from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the Board of Directors office.

McCavanagh taps Juleson

Board of Directors Secretary Raymond R. McCavanagh, a Democrat running for re-election, has announced the appointment of Raymond E. Juleson as campaign chairman.

McCavanagh also appointed former Director Joseph T. Sweeney, an attorney, as campaign treasurer. Juleson, of 329 Hackmatack Drive, is a vice president for operations at the Heritage Savings

Kleinschmidt names Marsh

Incumbent Democratic Director Arnold M. "Bo" Kleinschmidt has named Richard E. Marsh, 28, as campaign manager.

Also named to the campaign committee were Emma Avello, treasurer; Lillian Kleinschmidt, vice treasurer and Gail Caputo and Joy Marsh, publicity.

Class has openings

The Manchester Recreation Department still has openings in its Advanced Lifesaving Class which begins Monday and continues through December, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at Manchester High School.

Completion of Advanced Lifesaving is a prerequisite for enrollment in the Water Safety Instruction Course, which will be offered beginning in January.

Cheney Hall acquisition negotiations are continuing

Negotiations are continuing for the acquisition of Cheney Hall, even though a referendum to pay for it was pulled off the ballot, the chairman of the Cheney Historic District Commission said Thursday.

Judge William G. Fitzgerald told the Conservation Commission that town and historic district officials are talking to Cheney Hall owner John Barnini.

"It is possible that Cheney Hall will be acquired without costs," Fitzgerald said.

Acquisition and renovation of the building was proposed in connection with a plan by private developers to renovate two buildings—the Clocktower and Weaving Mills—into 350 apartments.

Cheney Hall, on the corner of Hartford Road and Elm Street, is seen as a "gateway" to the mill area. The developers consider its renovation important to attract tenants to the mills.

Strong opposition to the acquisition of Cheney Hall, which was slated to receive $1 million of a $2 million bond issue if approved by the public through referendum.

At the request of the historic district commission, the Board of Directors attempted to remove Cheney Hall from the referendum scheduled for the November ballot by passing an ordinance saying they would not use the money for Cheney Hall.

Later, the entire referendum was pulled off the ballot. A referendum for $700,000 for public improvements will be on the ballot in a Jan. 12 special election. Further referendums on Cheney Hall and the acquisition of the eight-acre portion of the Great Lawn could be added.

Fitzgerald called the building the "most historic, by far."

"It was not an attractive architecture, but it is an architecture that was never built before or after," he said.

Nevas: Mob is first priority

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — The man in line to become Connecticut's next top federal prosecutor says his first priority will be fighting organized crime.

"I intend to vigorously pursue every avenue available to us to curtail this kind of activity," said Alan Nevas, 53, whose nomination by President Reagan is expected to be confirmed by the Senate Judiciary Committee within 30 days.

Nevas made his comments in an interview published Thursday in the New Haven Register.

Nevas referred to the "hide of violence" exemplified by the Sept. 19 ambush slaying in Bridgeport of Frank Piccolo, 58, resident manager or captain in Fairfield County for the Carlo Gambino organization, one of New York's five organized crime families.

Piccolo was the latest in a string of Connecticut underworld figures who have either vanished or been slain in the last two years. Piccolo was shot in broad daylight by two masked men as he stood near a pay telephone on a street corner.

Gustave Curcio, 39, suspected by police to be the alleged driver of the getaway vehicle, a van, has been charged with murder and is free in $150,000 bail, posted by his brother, Vincent Curcio, a professional bondsman.

Nevas said the killing of Piccolo was another illustration of the "increased presence" of organized crime in Connecticut.

A Republican and former deputy minority leader and deputy majority leader in the Legislature, Nevas will succeed Richard L. Blumenthal, appointed by former President Carter in 1978.

TV, porn blamed for gonorrhea hike

BRIDGEPORT (UPI) — Connecticut's largest city faces a "serious health threat" from gonorrhea, with children who haven't reached their teens often among the victims of the sexually transmitted disease, a health official says.

Kasper, who has worked for the city as a venereal disease specialist for 15 years, said 307 cases of gonorrhea were reported among people ages 10 to 24 during the first six months of 1981 compared to 339 cases for all of 1980.

He attributed much of the increase to permissiveness and sex exploitation in entertainment and the media.

"It's been subtle and overtly corrupted. I've seen a lot in the past 15 years on the job," said Kasper, disturbed by the younger age of the patients found with gonorrhea.

"It didn't start overnight. It goes back to the start of sex exploitation in the movies and television, exploiting the innocence of youth. It goes back to these porno books available at every book store."

"It urges on sexual stimulation with no control, no comprehension of the consequences. The result is more sexual activity in the later prepuberty and early puberty stages," he said.

Kasper said his cases showed the problem crossed all racial and ethnic lines and heavily on mostly unsuspecting parents.

Auditors criticize road toll records

HARTFORD (UPI) — State auditors have charged the state Transportation Department with failure to keep close enough track of the $40 million handled annually at state highway toll booths.

Bookkeeping is so ineffective, there is no way to determine if there has been any loss of cash at the toll booths, the auditors said.

Their criticisms were announced Thursday in the midst of an investigation of the department by a one-man grand jury. Superior Court Judge George D. Stoughton is investigating allegations of bribery, kickbacks, bid-rigging and larceny in the department.

The auditors, Leo V. Donohue and Henry J. Becker, said the department supervision of the toll booths "did not appear to be complying with the (department's) own ... audit guidelines," which call for "field examinations and/or unannounced cash counts."

These checks had not been performed for several years, the auditors said. Their audit covered three fiscal years, beginning July 1, 1977, and ending June 30, 1980.

The auditors are a bipartisan team appointed by the General Assembly.

William Keith, department spokesman, had just received the audit and officials, including Commissioner Arthur B. Powers, would not comment until they have reviewed it.

Since a computer cashrecording system was installed in the toll-booth system in October 1978, there has been "a history of ... malfunctions," the auditors reported after their staff accountants made field trips to the department's 15 toll booths.

Judge to rule on move to thwart Klan rallies

WILLIMANTIC (UPI) — State police must be allowed to frisk participants in search of weapons at two Ku Klux Klan rallies planned this weekend if they are to provide "any measure of public safety," a state police commander says.

Lt. Wilfred Blanchette said state police had learned "plans have been made — if not already executed — to secret weapons" into the private park in Windham where the Klan rallies and cross burnings are planned Saturday and Sunday.

Blanchette, the state police eastern division commander, testified Thursday in Windham County Superior Court where the state is seeking an injunction to allow troopers to search for weapons at the rallies.

"It's absolutely necessary to provide any measure of public safety," said Blanchette, who warned police and others in the rally area would be "in grave danger of being injured and there would be little we could do to prevent it" without the injunction.

Judge Joseph F. Dannehy was expected to rule today on the injunction request and hear a separate request from the Windham Zoning Commission for an order banning the Klan rallies on the basis they would violate zoning regulations.

Last year, Dannehy issued an order barring all weapons from the nearby town of Scotland when the Klan met in that town for the first public Klan gathering in Connecticut in more than half a century.

No representative of the owner of the park where the rallies are planned or the Klan was present for Thursday's court hearing, where state police also asked for permission to search specific areas of the park for hidden weapons.

Klan members have held three rallies in Connecticut since 1980, the last two involving violent clashes with anti-racist protesters led by the International Committee Against

Moffett ready for senate race, paper reports

HARTFORD (UPI) — Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., has made an apparently firm decision to run for the U.S. Senate seat now held by Republican Lowell Weicker, it was reported today.

The Hartford Courant said it had confirmation from five independent sources that Moffett and his aides have been informing the congressman's political allies that he has decided on a run for the Senate in 1982.

Moffett, who has just about ruled out seeking re-election to a fifth term in the House, acknowledged Thursday that he was leaning toward the Senate race over his other top consideration of running for governor in Connecticut.

But he said "there has been no absolutely concrete decision made" and refused to confirm or deny that he and his aides had been spreading word to his allies that he would run for the Senate.

"I just can't talk about it because, in addition to my congressional chores, I have two to three weeks of political groundwork to do before making any kind of announcement," he said.

"I have to speak to various people in the next week or two about what I'm doing. There are going to be some people who are very happy with my decision and others who are going to be disappointed, and I need both groups to come together with enthusiasm," he said.

There have been several reports of Democrats in Connecticut urging Moffett to run for governor, a post now held by Democrat William O'Neill, who hasn't said if he will seek a full term in 1982.

However, in a story from its Washington bureau, the Courant quoted an unnamed political source in Washington as saying Moffett had made a firm decision to run for the Senate.

Republicans hurt by 'issueless campaign'

The municipal election of 1981 has already been dubbed the "issueless campaign."

That's not entirely fair, because a few issues have been raised. For example, the two states are on opposite sides of the debate over the proposed paramedics program.

Still, there is no overriding, emotional issue dominating the campaign as the Community Development Block Grant issue did in the past.

The two biggest political issues were cleared away just in time for the election.

The Multi-Circuits dispute has apparently been settled, though nobody seems to think that story had a happy ending.

The Cheney Historic District renovation was put on the back burner, taking all the candidates off the hook.

After all, the Republicans would have been hesitant to oppose the Cheney project, afraid they would be branded "anti-housing."

The Democrats would think twice

Manchester Spotlight
By Paul Hendrie
Herald Reporter

about supporting it, afraid that the fiscally responsible image they have been cultivating in this era of Reaganomics would be tarnished.

So we are left with the Democrats campaigning on the slogan "Manchester—a good place to live" and the Republicans promising to "cut spending," run a "business-like" government and "provide leadership."

Everything sounds nice, but it doesn't tell a would-be voter much.

Manchester Citizens for Social Responsibility Co-Chairman Robert Faucher noted the vagueness at a "meet-the-candidates" night, when he quipped, "I'm a little surprised by the low turnout, considering the fact that this has been the most exciting campaign in years."

The quiet campaign is explained by the candidates, especially the Democratic ones, as the product of an efficiently run, effective government.

"This has been called a campaign 'no issues' and Deputy Mayor Stephen T. Penny, "I can't believe

After all, what's the difference between the Republican method of sweeping a street and the Democratic method?

Republican William J. Diana, running for his fifth term, was asked recently how he is different from the Democrats.

"There probably really isn't too much difference," he said. "I'm concerned about Manchester and when they propose something that's good for the town, I'll support it."

Still, while nobody opposes harmony and efficiency and nobody is calling for old fashioned mud slinging, it is also hard to be convinced that everybody agrees upon a single approach to running the town.

But the voters will not get a clear idea of the alternatives by listening to catchy slogans and vague pledges.

Nor will voters learn much when some candidates come to two different campaign forums and recite the same speech word for word, or when some candidates recite survey data without being specific about what they will do to address the pinpointed issues.

Even those candidates who tell us to look at what they've done aren't telling us enough, unless they also tell us what they'll do.

Tactically, the Republicans, especially, are in a position where they will have to raise one substantial issue if they want to unseat the Democratic majority.

The Democrats are better known and can run on their record, as long as they guard against complacency.

And, of course, there are simply more Democrats than Republicans in Manchester. The Republicans have to offer the voters something fresh.

Ironically, the bi-partisan approach to government, which has given the Republicans a bigger say in providing good government, may also hurt their election chances.

Mayor Penny pinpointed the GOP identity problem recently, when he commented, "Unfortunately for the Republicans, our record has become their record, too."

In Manchester Last minute snags marred agreements

Manchester can be thankful that the drawn-out hassle over Multi-Circuits and its residential neighbors is over—unless some new problem surfaces. But we can be forgiven for regretting that the agreement was not worked out with a little less heat on all sides, and a little less distrust all around.

The meeting at which the agreements were formalized should have been one marked by conciliatory attitudes between the parties. Instead it was notable for recriminations not only between Multi-Circuits and the residents, but also among the residents and between the residents and members of the Board of Directors.

There are a number of disillusioned people as a result, among them the peacekeeper, Director Peter Sylvester, and Director William Diana, who had expressed serious reservations about selling the park department garage to Multi-Circuits.

Two last-minute developments made the meeting highly unpleasant.

One was the news that Walter Zingler, a leader in the fight against Multi-Circuits expansion, had agreed to sell his house to Multi-Circuits.

Diana bluntly labeled that extortion and the attorney for Multi-Circuits made it clear the firm felt the purchase of the house was linked to the agreement under which it would commit itself to limit expansion in Danger from a minority

To the Editors:

Mrs. Clapp, in a recent letter to the editor, clearly stated her objections to the State Board of Education's policy regarding academic freedom entitled "Free to Learn." I have not read the actual document but, based on the descriptions of "Free to Learn" in the newspapers, I agree with the policy.

Mrs. Clapp's main objection seems to be that the policy prevents parents from influencing the selection of books and teaching methods. My impression of the policy was that it prevented a vocal minority from dictating its own views. There is a dilemma: parents should have the right to influence but a minority should not dictate a policy contrary to the desires of the majority.

I agree with Mrs. Clapp when she says that concerned parents are education's most valuable resources and that education officials should not look down their noses at parents. What I disagree with is censorship in any form.

We live in a diverse society that is committed to protecting the rights of minorities. In this society, people with different ideas and beliefs live together in peace. The country is founded on tolerating differences. If we are to impose censorship, then who will be the final arbiters of what is acceptable and what should be burned?

Many Roman Catholics join in the movement to reduce violence and sex on TV. Among the leaders of this movement is a man who said, "those weren't Christians, they were Roman Catholics." Do Catholic parents want this man to determine what their children will read?

There is a movement to stamp out "secular humanism." Leaders of this movement charge that this is a religion opposed to Christianity. Among humanist thinkers are Thomas Aquinas, Martin Luther and John Calvin. Do Catholics, Lutherans and Congregationalists want the leaders of this movement to determine what books should be burned?

I have never heard alternative suggestions as to what should be taught. Numerous complaints about what is inappropriate in school materials are publicized. A definitive statement of what is the criterion for appropriate material is not presented. I suspect that if it was the support for the pro-censorship groups would greatly diminish. It is also very unfair to criticize without offering some feasible alternative.

Among the books that have been attacked around the country are "Grapes of Wrath," "Of Mice and Men," "Huckleberry Finn" and other classics of literature. The best books I have read have had strong stories. Will we deny children Shakespeare, Steinbeck, Dickens, Hawthorne, Twain and other treasures of literature because their stories offend someone? Many of the world's greatest ideas offend someone. The words of Christ offended the Pharisees. The Declaration of Independence offended King George. I find objectionable than the risk of shutting these students off from the great ideas of humanity.

I believe that the objections raised to the books and teaching methods are not usually a reflection of the desires of the majority. In each case that I've read or heard about where a book or teaching method was attacked the objector had not read the entire book or looked at the method as a whole. Objections to isolated words, sentences or sections are not relevant unless the entire book or method has also been considered.

I believe that the people raising objections to books and teaching methods represent a minority interest. The majority of the people believe that their school system is doing a good job. The school system has earned this confidence. In my opinion the proposed policy regarding academic freedom entitled "Free to Learn" is a necessary protection for the majority from vocal minorities.

Cheney Hall can be used

To the Editor:

Many Manchester people have cherished and sentimental memories of Cheney Hall. They would feel sad to have the building demolished.

The building does have possibilities for use. It could be used as a museum. Still better, it could be used as something like the Goodspeed Opera House at East Haddam. There are other good uses it could be put to.

It was sad that the building was permitted to deteriorate the way it did. But it has not deteriorated so badly it cannot be restored. These efforts should be made to save the building.

Colorful CIA aids

WASHINGTON—A cast of colorful characters that could have stepped out of a James Bond movie apparently helped ex-CIA agents Frank Terpil and Ed Wilson with the British end of their illicit international arms smuggling operation.

The two American renegades, who jumped bail after indictment on gun-running charges in this country and are now hiding out abroad, found associates to their liking in the ranks of British businessmen, intelligence officers and assorted underworld denizens. Their activities are described by sources and in secret Justice Department reports seen by my associate Dale Van Atta.

The overseas branch of Terpil, Wilson & Co. included these central figures and hit players:

—An "Odd Job" type named Mustafa, the bodyguard of a Libyan intelligence official who was Terpil's contact with Musammar Qaddafi. Mustafa is 6 foot 8, weighs 300 pounds, has a black belt in karate and sports claw marks on his face from an encounter with a lion. He acts as food taster for his employer, and stands guard even when the boss is engaged in romantic dalliance.

—David Jenner, a Brit who fronted—perhaps unwittingly—for Terpil in the purchase of the Hunters Lodge hotel in Crews, a dreary rail center in the industrial region of west England.

—Robin Braid-Taylor, a London-based arms merchant.

—Samuel Cummings, a sometime CIA arms expert, born in Philadelphia but now an Irish citizen.

—A former British intelligence agent named McGowan, who introduced Terpil and Wilson to a covey of current and former British intelligence and counterintelligence officers who could be useful to their operation.

—An unidentified provincial cop, possibly in the Cheshire Constabulary.

—A desk clerk named Ben at the Elysee Hotel in London, another Terpil-Wilson pit stop.

Where DINING Is A PLEASURE

Sunday Brunch At The Brownstone

• Our antique buffet abounds with fresh fruits, strawberries, danish, and our pastry chef's creations — mud pie, danish, and nut breads — still warm from the oven.

• On the dessert side you'll find cheesecake, chocolate mousse, napoleons, fresh cakes, and more — it's all included in the price of your brunch!

• Treat yourself to our Brownstone Special — a tender filet topped with a poached egg, artichoke hearts, and smothered in a rich Bearnaise sauce — or try our thick cuts of French toast served with New Hampshire maple syrup — or select another one of our enticing entrees.

• Your first Bloody Mary, Screwdriver, or glass of Champagne is on the house and all other brunch libations are Happy Hour priced: $1.99-$2.99

About Town

'Here' wins award

Nancy L. Greco of 16 Edgerton St. has been awarded the coveted first prize, Best in Show award in the 52nd annual Open Juried Show put on by the Connecticut Women Artists Inc.

Her work, a large drawing entitled, "Here," won out of some 500 entries from women artists throughout the state.

Juror for this show was Virginia Mann, director of the Silvermine Gallery in New Canaan. The artists' organization, through its open exhibitions, provides a forum for women artists living in Connecticut, to receive support and gain recognition for their creative efforts.

The annual show was at the Slater Memorial Museum in Norwich.

The show may be viewed at the museum 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on weekdays and 1 to 4 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday through Oct. 23.

Fashion show set

The Conference rooms at Manchester Memorial Hospital will be the setting for a unique fashion show on Oct. 16 at 7:30 p.m. when hospital employees, male and female, and some volunteers, will be showcasing a sampling of the fashions from the hospital's Gift Shop.

The show will also feature accessories and gifts. The show is being held to raise money for the hospital's Gift Shop. Also to be featured will be a Christmas vignette, more than 20 door prizes will be awarded and those buying gift shop items during the evening will receive a 10 percent discount.

Wine and cheese will be served at tables of four. Tickets are limited and are on sale at the Bright Shop at the hospital or may be bought by calling Mrs. John Malone, 648-6716. The price is $3.

Music fest slated

A Fall Festival of Music will be presented by the Royal Arch Masons on Nov. 20 and 21 at 8 p.m. at the Vernon Center Middle School, Route 30. Proceeds will benefit the DeMolay Scholarship Fund.

The festival will feature the DeMolay

Square Circle Club

The Square Circle Club of Manchester Lodge of Masons will have an Open House Monday from 9 a.m. to noon at the Masonic Temple, East Center Street.

There will be cards, pool, conversation and refreshments. All Masons and their friends are invited.

AARP unit meets

The October meeting of the Manchester Chapter 1275 of AARP will be Oct. 14 at 1:30 p.m. in South United Methodist Church.

The theme of the program will be "Central Europe," with Jim Klar as guest speaker. The program will feature colorful and varied scenes of Central Europe, Austria, and the Federal Republic of Germany.

Catholic Mothers

The annual banquet of the combined Catholic Mothers Circle will be held at St. Bridget's school cafeteria on Oct. 14 at 7 p.m.

Peter Marshall of Chester will be the guest speaker. A counselor at Becklet Academy in East Haddam, Marshall is a psychologist-psychiatrist. He is on the diocesan Board of Inner Healing and is a liaison between church and prayer groups for Middlesex County, Diocese of Norwich.

He is the father of 19 children and has spoken at many retreats.

For more information, contact Cathy Boulay at 648-1747.

Business meeting

St. Margaret's Circle, Daughters of Isabella, will have a business meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the downstairs, Knights of Columbus Hall.

Mrs. Irene Bergin and her committee are in charge of refreshments.

Members are requested to use the front door.

Plesse directs play at UConn

"Who's afraid of Virginia Woolf?" Not Charles "Chuck" Plesse of Manchester—he's directing the popular play at the University of Connecticut. Plesse is an associate professor of speech and theater at Manchester Community College, where he has taught for 16 years.

Plesse has been in theater work for 27 years. He's originally from Michigan and received his bachelor of arts degree from the University of Michigan and his master of arts degree from Springfield College in Illinois. He is presently pursuing a master of fine arts degree in directing at the University of Connecticut.

"People will definitely have an emotional response to this production," Plesse said of "Virginia Woolf." He said it's about people who love one another but are unable to admit their personal failures to the ones they love and are driven to drink and fantasy as a means of escaping the truth.

Plesse said he chose to direct this play because it's the "contemporary American classic as well as being one of his favorite plays."

"I'm very excited about this production because of the tremendous amount of intensity generated by Martha and George, the two main characters, played by Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton in the movie version. He said he's played that Trudi Bird and Robert Phillips, respectively at The Manchester Herald.

As to how he goes about casting, Plesse said he doesn't have any preconceived images of the characters when he is casting. "I look at the actors' strengths and weaknesses and work with the characters, based on who the actors are," he said.

Part of his directing technique is to encourage group and individual suggestions. "Some of the best ideas for this particular production come from the suggestions made by the actors and actresses in the play. The production of every play is a group effort. I hear everyone out and then I make the final decisions," he added.

Over the years, Plesse has established three theater groups, the Summer Theater III and the Actors' Cafe in New Jersey and Summer Theater III at Manchester Community College.

"Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" a production of the UConn Nutmeg Theater, will run from Oct. 8 through Oct. 17 at the Harriet S. Jorgensen Theater on the UConn campus. For more information or to reserve tickets, call 429-2912.

Advice

Resort owners tired of inconsiderate kin

DEAR ABBY: Three years ago, my husband and I bought a motel and restaurant in a resort area 300 miles north of our hometown. We are both from large families. Our problem is our relatives who come to visit us all summer long.

"We give them half-price on rooms and food, but they come when our tourist business is at its peak, and they take up all the rooms that could be rented to tourists for full rate.

Ours is a small but prospering business, and my husband and I run it together. Abby, our parents are welcome anytime, but carloads of aunts, uncles, cousins and their children, pile in on us, taking up most of the rooms. Also, after driving so far to see us, they expect several days expecting us to entertain them in the evenings after we have put in an exhausting 14-hour day!

Is there a nice way to ask them not to come at the height of the season? We just can't find the words. We do love them and don't want them to be mad at us.

DEAR ABBY: The words you used in your letter say it all—and very well. Love is usually a two-way street. Tell them. If they love you, they will understand.

DEAR ABBY: I want to share

God (Terrill C. Williams)

It's legal! He's God

FRESNO, Calif. (UPI) — "God" is a 42-year-old unemployed bachelor who believes he will be a successful writer and part of a "new age."

His name was Terrill C. Williams, but it was legally changed to "God" Tuesday in a decree signed by Superior Court Judge Charles Hamlin.

The former broadcaster explained he sought the name change because of a vision.

"It was like being hit by a bolt of lightning," he said. "It was a force that knocked me down and, while I was lying on the floor, I was instructed by three individuals that we were approaching a new age. By 1982 a new age would start unfolding and I was told I was going to be part of that new age, that someday I would be called upon to change my name to God."

This occurred, he said, six years ago.

"As a writer I was convinced that words are man's most powerful tool and by changing my name to God I am demonstrating the power of God," he said.

But it wasn't easy for Williams to become "God."

"I couldn't get a lawyer anywhere to handle the court petition because they said no judge would sign it," he said. "Then I had to give up my job last month because I could see that my superiors were uncomfortable with the idea."

'Rear-ender' is common car accident

By Benjamin A. Muzio Motor Vehicles Commissioner

Q. Now that we are into the fall season, we can expect bad weather. Can you give some advice on driving during this treacherous period?

A. Remember, first off that over 40 percent of all traffic accidents are "rear-end" collisions.

"Rear-end" accidents often occur due to speeding or tailgating.

"Know your vehicle's stopping ability and how rain, snow and loose gravel can affect it.

Remember that other vehicles, such as the one just ahead, may stop quicker than you can.

Be sure to use the second rule — choose an object near the road ahead, such as sign, post, tree, overpass, etc. When the vehicle ahead passes that object, begin to brake.

Remember that other vehicles, such as the one just ahead, may stop quicker than you can.

Andover group on offensive

Condo opposition is growing

By Richard Cooy Herald Reporter

ANDOVER — The same group of residents that helped prompt developer Eugene Sammartino into withdrawing his proposal for condominium regulations is circulating flyers throughout town this weekend to rouse opponents of the housing unit attending the Planning and Zoning Commission's hearing next month.

The commission is holding a public hearing Nov. 20 to solicit general ideas from residents about having condominiums or cluster-type housing in town.

Upon hearing that Sammartino, who owns the developing firm Fri-Land Squares Inc., had formally asked the commission to write in regulations to provide a mechanism for condominium proposals to be processed, the residents banded together to oppose it.

In recognition of the opposition, and though citing some support, Sammartino retracted the idea, vowing to try again when the town is ripe for such development.

But the commission, partly on its own initiative and partly from urging by Sammartino and several residents and officials, decided to hold the hearing for direction in future town planning while the issue is still at the front of everyone's mind.

Mary Boudreau, speaking for the residents who she says number 16, said the purpose of the flyers is to rally opponents together and give a strong showing at the hearing.

Most of the residents in the groups, she said, feel that developments of this kind "would damage the rural character of the town. 'We don't want to be disturbed,' she said. 'We don't want to lose this type of setting.'

At present the town has one small apartment complex, and no cluster-type housing. In fact, there is no way for the commission to even consider a condominium proposal, since there is no provision for it in regulations.

This proved to be Sammartino's stumbling block here, as he offered to hire a consultant at no cost to the town to help write in the regulations, the it prompted the opposition.

He had bought about 74 acres at the intersection of Routes 6 and 87 for about $150,000, on which he had hoped to build the development.

He is now waiting for a permit to excavate the land, and it should arrive from the state presently, officials said.

Dwarfed by pumpkins

Paul Edmondson, owner of the Edmondson Great Pumpkin Patch on Route 44A in Coventry, appears lost as he works in the midst of all the Halloween items he sells. He said the farm produces about 2,000 to 3,000 pumpkins yearly, along with mums, gourds and indian corn. Prices range from 75 cents for small pumpkins to $4.50 for the 40-pounders.

CCAG knocks governor

HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. William O'Neill's hands-off position on Northeast Utilities' $242 million rate hike request has drawn sharp criticism from a statewide consumer group.

The CCAG has asked what the state currently paid for electricity and how the rate hike, if granted, would affect that total. Jackson said the state paid $16.5 million for electricity in 1980 and would pay a projected $18.5 million this year.

with the rate hike proceedings which are pending before the Department of Public Utility Control. He said it would be "improper" and could possibly trigger an appeal of the DPU/C decision.

Claims decline

Claims for unemployment compensation filed in Manchester declined 2.5 percent in the two-week period ending Sept. 26, the Labor Department reported. The weekly average of Manchester claims was 1,365.

The Labor Department's Manchester office was one of 13 offices recording lower filings. Increases were recorded at six offices in the state.

Statewide, claims increased slightly in the two-week period, to a weekly average of 35,268.

Wins award

HARTFORD — Margaret Dutton Tuesday, was named State "Realtor-Associate of the Year" during the annual convention of the Connecticut Association of Realtors at the Hartford Civic Center.

She was selected from a field of 14 other candidates from around the state whose names were placed in nomination by their local boards of Realtors. A committee of the Connecticut Association of Realtors rated each nominee on realtor spirit (including reputation for ethical conduct), activity in civic affairs, and the candidate's activity in the association.

Of the 10,200 members in the state Association, approximately 6,000 are Realtor-Associate (generally defined as members who are not principals in their real estate firm.) The plaque presented to Dutton is the highest honor the state association can bestow upon a realtor-associate member.

Associated with Cashman Real Estate, 2 Holmes Street, Mystic, Dutton is also "Realtor-Associate of the Year" for the New London Board of Realtors.

Food prices up

NEW YORK — Coming after a moderate downturn the week before, Dun & Bradstreet's Wholesale Food Price Index advanced 0.1 percent for the week ended Sept. 29 to $17.30 from $17.29 the Tuesday earlier. The index was down, however, 4.3 percent from its like year-ago reading of $18.08.

Coffee prices rose sharply amidst news of export quota agreements by coffee growers. Oats, lamb and egg prices were also up considerably, but not as much as coffee. Flour, lard and sugar also posted wholesale cost gains, though of small amounts.

Offering some counterbalancing downward pressure on the index were large cost declines in rye, bellies and hogs. Slightly smaller decreases were seen in prices quoted for wheat, corn, barley, beef, hams, cottonseed oil, rice and steers.

Dun & Bradstreet's Wholesale Food Price Index represents the sum total of the cost per pound of 31 raw foodstuffs and meat in general use. It is not a cost of living index. Its chief function is to show the general trend of food prices at the wholesale level.

Tax services

A tax information and guidance service designed to guide people into the most advantageous tax shelter will be conducted by the Heritage Savings and Loan Association Oct. 9 through Oct. 11 at the Manchester Product Show at the J.C. Penny Distribution Center.

Heritage personnel will not only answer questions and inform people of new tax laws and investment plans, they'll also operate two computers which will determine a person's long-range tax savings based on personal data and the new tax laws. Each visitor to the Heritage booth at the product show will receive a computer printout of the information uncovered.

There will be no charge for this service. Various brochures on the new tax laws and new investment plans, such as all the savers certificates, will be available.

Estate panel set

STORRS — A panel discussion to aid people in planning the disposition of their estate under the new tax law will be held on Oct. 21, at 7:30 p.m. in the Community Room of the Storrs Congregational Church, 2 North Eagleville Rd., University Campus.

Issues to be discussed by the panel will include the new rules regarding the gift and estate tax marital deduction, the tax treatment of joint property, the increase in the unified estate and gift tax credit, the increase in the gift tax exclusion.

While there is no registration fee for this program, participants are encouraged to register in advance by contacting Ruth Reichel at Connecticut Bank & Trust, 429-6483 or the American Heart Association at 889-9411.

Bank clearings up

NEW YORK — The volume of checks cleared in 26 leading centers edged up 0.9 percent to a new peak of $1,991,859,000 in the week ended last Wednesday, Sept. 30, reports Dun & Bradstreet. Clearings exceeded the previous record of $1,981,646,000 set in the preceding week and rose 11.5 percent ahead of their year-ago pace of $979,064,941,000 in the similar week.

Banks in New York cleared $1,030,546,260,000 in checks this week surpassing their record of $1,018,112,001,000 last week. New York's transactions outweighed by 12.3 percent last year's volume of $918,534,422,000 in the corresponding week.

Outside New York, on the other hand, bank clearings in the other 25 centers continued to sag for the second straight week, falling 6.3 percent to $961,313,546,000 from $95,332,120,000 in the prior week and staying only 1.3 percent above their year-earlier pace of $90,540,519,000.

Twelve of the 25 cities, in fact, registered declines in check turnover from the like week last year. Only six centers chalked up gains of more than 10 percent from comparable 1980 levels: Buffalo, Houston, Denver, Atlanta, Pittsburgh, and Boston.

Federal fuel efficiency estimates often wrong

Evidence is now emerging that the fuel efficiency estimates the federal government has been forcing automakers to slap on the windows of all new cars have been (and are) an annual exercise in fuel foolishness and almost a classic case in bureaucratic boondoggling.

The Environmental Protection Agency issues the estimates as a by-product of its assigned role to monitor the exhaust emissions of new automobile models, then reports "Automotive News," the respected industry weekly, the about-to-be-abolished Department of Energy publishes the statistics in a gas mileage guide, printed to educate consumers. Next, the Federal Trade Commission pursues its assigned task of making sure the automakers inform prospective customers that "mileage may vary" from the published mpg figures.

Finally, the Department of Transportation's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration enforces strictures against the exhaust they coughed up. Detroit responded by loading cars with a variety of antipollution devices.

Miles-per-gallon efficiency plunged, auto purchase prices went up, unleaded fuel was introduced and gasoline hose nozzles were redesigned so that the wrong gas couldn't be pumped into a tank and ruin the pollution control devices.

The Arab cornered the picture, crude oil prices skyrocketed, motorists responded in fury — and Congress passed a new law mandating the automakers to boost their fuel efficiency to old levels. The EPA's own response to the automakers' efforts was brilliant. In effect, the agency said that if the manufacturers could raise their mpg as they were doing, they could have been achieving these levels all along.

Your Money's Worth

But today's typical car is more than 25 percent smaller than it was 10 years ago, gas is $1 a gallon more expensive and only four (not six) people can fit into the typical compact of the early 1980s. And the typical price is about double (almost $8,000 this year) for a compact as against what a then-typical "intermediate" was in 1973.

Most humiliating is that we, as drivers, feel there is something wrong with the way we handle our cars because we're not getting the mileage the EPA says we should be getting.

Now, though, a new General Accounting Office (GAO) analyst says it has figured out where the EPA has been going wrong in estimating fuel efficiency — and by how much. In its report, GAO concludes that many factors affect fuel efficiency which EPA isn't measuring.

Among the factors: terrain (hills), tires, temperature changes, traffic, driver tempers, lack of tune-ups, transmission type and ratios, optional equipment, the special cars EPA tests and the lubricants in them.

The bottom line, says the GAO, the EPA's estimates were off by about 12 percent in 1973 and were off by as much as 20 percent in 1977. Despite changes, they were still off about 16 percent in 1979, as auto engines became smaller but we still loaded our cars with fuel-draining options such as air conditioning and automatic shifts.

Now that the extent of EPA error is out, suggestions are being made to correct future figures by testing the cars more often, testing the types of cars really sold and doing on-the-road surveys of cars driven by actual drivers (like the "economy runs" oil companies once promoted).

EPA also now says, according to "Automotive News," that real road-city figures are about 14 percent less than its test figures for "city" driving, and that real road-highway fuel efficiency is about 25 percent less than its "highway" test results. The error rate varies with car design.

There are dozens of other variables, including temperature changes, altitude, thinner lubricants and road surfaces. Going too fast can cut efficiency 25 percent; going too slow can reduce your mileage 15 percent; accelerating too hard can make a 20 percent difference.

Still trust the official mpg tests? I don't.

Jogging shoes still 'in'

By LeRoy Pope
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — The tremendous vogue of the flamboyantly-styled, star of the 1970s, athletic shoe business, won't peak for another five years, two industry leaders agree.

Most of the shoes, worn by joggers and just about everyone else, are imported and range in price from $10 to upwards of $60.

Many of those who wear them insist a good running shoe is the most innovative and about the most comfortable footwear ever designed. They say that ought to influence the future of the whole shoe business.

But President John O'Neil of Converse Rubber Shoe Co. of Wilmington, Mass., and Cameron Anderson, president of Woolworth's Kinney Shoe subsidiary, doubt if the running shoe ever will cause big changes in dress shoes. Anderson said it is more likely there just will be a wider shift to wearing casual shoes where design has been influenced by the jogging shoe.

O'Neil, who has been in the canvas and athletic footwear business for 40 years and has seen hundreds of fashions come and go, says the running shoe's popularity eventually will level off and even diminish but that he still has the steady overall growth of the athletic shoe and canvas footwear business.

Anderson agreed. He pointed out that Kinney has made a huge investment in its 300-unit chain of Footlocker stores that handle premium priced athletic shoes. The popular priced shoes are sold in the regular Kinney stores.

O'Neil said there already seem to be signs of a shift by youngsters, the big market, from the jogging shoe back to the older and somewhat cheaper basketball shoe.

"Like any business dependent on style," he said, "one year's 'in-ness' can become today's 'out-of'."

Running shoes have made a lot of money for a lot of people in many countries — Japan, Korea, Taiwan, Germany, other European countries and the United States. The West German Adidas Co., maker of all kinds of casual and sportswear, has done enormously well with running shoes, although it now has been topped by Converse and Nike, Inc., of Beaverton, Ore.

Nike is run by Philip Knight, a former varsity runner at University of Oregon, and his ex-coach, Bill Bowerman. Knight conceived the idea of going into the running shoe business while he was a student at Stanford's graduate business school.

He reasoned that the Japanese probably could do in running shoes what they had done in automobiles, radios and cameras. So in 1964, he and Bowerman managed to sell $8,000 worth of Japanese running shoes. In the fiscal year ended last May 31, Nike's sales were $48 million. Nike now makes 138 models of athletic shoes for every known sport.

Two brothers, Adi and Rudolph Dassler of the tiny German town of Herzogenaurach, created both Adidas and Puma, which now are giants and bitter global competitors in the athletic shoe business.

Other important American firms engaged in the design, import and marketing of athletic shoes include Sears Roebuck, J.C. Penney, K-Mart, New Balance of Boston, Athletic Attie of Jacksonville, Fla., Brooks Shoe Manufacturing Co. of Hanover, Pa., and Specs International of Avon, Mass.

Workers honored

Lydall Inc. Vice President Leonard R. Jaskol presented gold service awards to 13 employees of the firm at a luncheon Wednesday.

Four employees were honored for 30 years of service to the company. They are: Stanley Baran of Lebanon, and Robert Handfield, John Kozin and Valentino Raymond, all of Willimantic.

Awards for 25 years of service went to: Peter DeCarli of Coventry, Estery Dorsey of Talcottville, Mary MacDonald of Vernon and Joseph Patterson of Manchester.

Those receiving 20-year awards were: John Harrower of Rockville and Alfons Olechno of Manchester.

Management seminars set

HARTFORD — During October, the Connecticut Business and Industry Association will sponsor a series of seminars on personnel management topics — performance appraisal, stress management, employee career development, and motivation and productivity.

The first seminar, "Performance Appraisal," is scheduled for Oct. 14, at the Lord Cromwell Motor Inn in Cromwell.

The second seminar, entitled "Career Development for your Employees," will focus on successful strategies for retaining productive employees.

The workshops will be held on Oct. 14, Holiday Inn, Darien; Oct. 27, Ramada Inn, North Haven; and Oct. 28, Sheraton Tobacco Valley Inn, Dunley's Tavern, Windsor.

Additional information regarding any of these eight seminars may be obtained by contacting Robert Fortgang, C.B.I.A. director of industrial relations and small business affairs, at 547-1661, in Hartford.
