News Briefing

PLO VIP dies

ROME, Italy (UPI) — The information chief of the Palestine Liberation Organization was killed Friday by a bomb explosion under his bed in one of Rome's most luxurious hotels.

Police said it was a highly professional assassination. Majed Abu Sharar, chief of the PLO's public relations department, died when the bomb went off shortly before 1 a.m. (8 p.m. EDT Thursday) in his room on the fourth floor of the Flora hotel on Rome's tourist-famed Via Veneto.

A PLO spokesman blamed Israel for the attack, calling Abu Sharar a victim of the "homicidal madness of Israeli terrorists."

However, a hard-line Palestinian group in Beirut claimed responsibility for the assassination, saying it killed Abu Sharar because he had "diverged" from the radical line and had become too moderate.

The bomb, placed beneath his bed, started a fire that burned Abu Sharar's corpse beyond recognition and forced scores of tourists and other hotel guests to flee their rooms in nightclothes.

Firemen quickly extinguished the blaze.

Police at first theorized Abu Sharar may have been preparing the bomb for a terrorist attack and that it had exploded prematurely. A bomb blast on Thursday damaged an Israeli tourist office only two blocks from the Flora hotel.

However, fire brigade experts said later they found evidence the bomb was rigged under Abu Sharar's bed.

Abu Sharar was registered at the hotel as Abbas Ziboumi, 45, an Algerian living in Beirut.

A spokesman for the PLO's Rome office conceded Ziboumi was really Abu Sharar, the PLO's top information official and a member of the central committee of Al Fatah, the guerrilla group headed by Yasser Arafat.

The spokesman said Sharar, in Rome for a conference of journalists, carried the Algerian passport as a security precaution.

Al Assifa, a pro-Syrian guerrilla group, telephoned news agencies in Beirut and Rome to claim responsibility for the killing.

"We have killed the traitor Majed Abu Sharar in Rome. He and his friends had diverged from the correct path of the Palestinian revolution and armed struggle. They represented the line of surrender," the caller said.

In the same way we killed Abu Sharar, we will kill all other who seek to compromise the principles of our revolution," it said.

Overdose agreed upon

FALL RIVER, Mass. (UPI) — A doctor testifying in the murder trial of licensed practical nurse Anne L. Capute agreed Friday with a Rhode Island medical examiner who testified that cancer patient Norma C. Leanes died of an overdose of morphine.

Dr. Leo A. Dalcortivo, chief toxicologist for the Suffolk County, N.Y., medical examiners office, testified for the state in the Bristol Superior Court trial's third day.

He said traces of morphine were found in autopsy tissue specimens he analyzed in May.

My opinion, with reasonable scientific certainty, is that Norma Leanes died of morphine overdose," Dalcortivo said.

Mrs. Capute, a licensed practical nurse at Taunton's Memorial Hospital, is charged with administering the fatal overdose. She has testified she was following doctors' orders by giving the victim enough morphine to make her comfortable.

Doctors earlier had diagnosed Mrs. Leanes' cancer as terminal, but the state contends an autopsy showed that was not the case.

Also Friday, defense attorney Patraque Piscitelli tried to discredit the discovery of morphine in the laboratory tissue samples.

Walesa has visitor

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Solidarity union leader Lech Walesa conferred with French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson Friday in his first meeting with a ranking official of a foreign government.

In another first, outspoken dissident leader Jacek Kuron was interviewed by a Polish newspaper and said Solidarity must remain a trade union and not seek political power.

It was the first time a Polish newspaper had carried an interview with the man Communist authorities have repeatedly attacked as Poland's foremost "anti-socialist" agitator.

Walesa met with Cheysson, now on an official visit to Poland, at the French ambassador's residence less than a week before the union leader was to embark on an official visit to France.

Details of their talks were not immediately available.

Walesa canceled a planned trip to France this spring because of the Polish crisis. He has traveled to Japan, Italy and Sweden and has met Pope John Paul II but until now had not met with any government officials except for Poland's.

Bush 'not involved'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President George Bush said Friday he is in no way involved in the possible Republican primary challenge by his older brother, Prescott Bush, Jr., of Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn.

"I have a policy to stay out of primaries," Bush told a National Press Club audience. "I am not involved,"

Teachers hold rally

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — About 600 striking teachers and aides marched around City Hall Friday in a solidarity march and some said they were ready to go to jail rather than return to work.

Schools Superintendent Michael Marcuse said the district would abide by a court back-to-work order and reopen schools Monday even though it is a public holiday — Columbus Day — and teachers who show up will collect double time pay.

Marcuse said the district's 213,000 teachers must remain at their jobs Tuesday in the event there are enough teachers to teach them.

Union leaders representing 22,000 striking Philadelphia Federation of Teachers members have refused to say whether they will abide by the court order until after the union appeal to Commonwealth Court was heard.

The union walked out Sept. 8, saying their contract was violated by a district decision to lay off 3,500 union members and cancel a 10-percent pay raise in a move to erase a $235 million deficit in the budget.

Drug arrests made

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two sailors died of a drug overdose and 19 others aboard the carrier Midway have been detained as suspects in the seizure of about $50,000 worth of marijuana — one of the biggest drug hauls in Navy history — the Navy said Friday.

The incidents were the latest examples of drug abuse in the Navy, which began a crackdown when its own survey nearly two years ago indicated 50 percent of 2,000 enlisted men sampled had used marijuana.

Six of the 14 men killed aboard the carrier Midway when a radar-jamming plane crashed on its flight deck in May were found to have used marijuana.

In one of the most serious incidents of its kind involving the Pacific 7th Fleet, two enlisted men died of "an apparent drug overdose" Sept. 23 and 24 while the Midway was in the Thai port of Pattaya, a Navy spokesman said.

He said he did not know whether the drug was heroin.

The Navy identified the two as Seaman Christopher Hatfield of Florida, Ind., and Steven Scott Weiner of Royal Palm Beach, Fla.

Navy investigators seized 17.4 pounds of marijuana aboard the same ship Sept. 14 while it was anchored at Subic Bay, the Philippines, and detained 19 enlisted men as suspects. Some of them may have been attached to the carrier's air wing, but none was a pilot.

The haul, one of the biggest in Navy history, had a street market value of at least $50,000, the spokesman said.

There was no immediate indication whether a Navy investigation had uncovered the source of marijuana supply to the Midway, but Navy officials are aware that drugs peddled "by criminal types" are accessible when a ship drops anchor in port.

The spokesman said he did not know what disciplinary action was taken against the enlisted men detained in a conspiracy to smuggle the marijuana aboard the Midway, a conventionally powered ship and one of the oldest of the 12 carriers in service.

Bond is denied

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — A judge denied bond Friday for Charles "Bo-Left" Livingston, charged with killing a "red doctor" and three other persons at a house where police said black magic was practiced.

Circuit Judge Frank Eppes also ordered 15 days of psychiatric tests for the suspect, who was allowed to talk privately with his family in a jury room.

Livingston, 32, was arrested last Friday and charged with the Sept. 28 killings of Edward "Doc" Harkless and three other persons in a secluded house littered with strange herbs, potions and voodoo books.

Eppes sent Livingston to South Carolina State Hospital for the tests and ordered samples of his handwriting turned over to investigators.

"The mental examination is a routine thing to determine competency to stand trial and the handwriting will be matched with evidence found at the scene," Harpoitian said.

Defense attorney Mike Thompson asked Eppes to allow Livingston more liberal visitation rights.

Before the bond hearing, Livingston, wearing a white shirt with khaki pants and sporting a trim mustache, chatted with relatives while about 100 onlookers packed the courtroom.

"Your honor, he hasn't even been able to talk to anyone in his family," Thompson told Eppes.

The judge glanced at Livingston and said, "Well, turn around and speak to them."

"Are Bo-Left's mother and daddy in the courtroom?" Eppes asked.

A slim, gray-haired man nodded to the judge and then stood with his wife.

Harpoitian consented to the visitation motion for Livingston, who said his brother nicknamed him "Bo-Left" because he is bowlegged and left-handed.

"Now he'll have a lot of cousins who've never even been to a reunion with him—they'll want to see him out of pure curiosity," the judge said.

Livingston is charged with four counts of murder in the shootings of Harkless, 62, described as one of the state's "top root doctors," Leroy Hemphill, 52, a truck driver from Chester, S.C.; Ralph Felder, 25, of Salley, S.C.; and Maxima Lykes, 27, who lived in the Harkless home.

Joggers run on the grounds of the Washington Monument Friday where flags were flying at half mast in honor of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. His funeral is today in Cairo.

Police guard against Moslem disturbances

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Riot police carrying grenades, batons and automatic rifles took up stations near mosques throughout Cairo Friday to guard against Sabbath-day disturbances by Moslem extremists on the eve of President Anwar Sadat's state funeral.

The young men, all unmistakably policemen, had orders to strong arm and arrest anyone trying to demonstrate.

The stringency of security measures were adopted immediately after Sadat cracked down on religious fanatics and political opponents five weeks ago, arresting 1,536 people. They were stepped up following Sadat's assassination Tuesday by four Moslem extremists led by an officer whose brother had been arrested in the crackdown.

About 80 Moslem extremists went on the rampage against the government at Asyut, 240 miles south of Cairo, Thursday. Some of them were armed with submachine-guns and they engaged police in day-long shootouts.

They attacked general security headquarters and a police station with a civilian building across the street before authorities brought the situation under control.

Security officials said about 25 people were killed and an unspecified number wounded.

Security concerns run high

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Security troops swept hot desert sands with mine detectors Friday, police guarded mosques and heavily armed soldiers on horseback patrolled the half-mile route which President Anwar Sadat's coffin will travel during his state funeral Saturday.

Criticism of security standards which permitted Sadat to be shot to death at almost point-blank range at a military parade Tuesday, fighting between Moslem extremists and security forces in a provincial Nile River town and a threat to murder Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin heightened concerns for a galaxy of world statesmen attending the funeral.

VIP mourners included Begin, three former American presidents and Secretary of State Alexander Haig, Prince Charles of England and a host of other dignitaries.

In Beirut, Lebanon, a telephone call to UPI Thursday from a group which claimed responsibility for killing Sadat, the "Independent Organization for the Liberation of Egypt," threatened to "continue striking at the traitors (Egyptian regime)." Another caller vowed an attempt against Begin.

The Israeli prime minister and Sadat shared the 1978 peace prize for their efforts leading to the 1979 strongman Moammar Khadafi as an "egomaniac who would trigger World War III just to make headlines." Bush warned of constant dangers in the Middle East.

"If this sale falls through, danger lies ahead," he said, citing the danger of the Saudis taking their needs and their trust elsewhere" and the danger of the "signals that will go out among the nations of the world" that Reagan does not have the cooperation of Congress.

At the White House, another Republican senator announced he would back the president and spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan is "optimistic" about the chances of the $8.5 billion Saudi arms package clearing the Senate.

"We think the tide is turning our way. We'll keep on it, I think good," Speakes said.

Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., emerged from a 15-minute meeting with Reagan to announce that he had decided the Saudi deal "serves our national interests."

Cochran was the fourth senator to make the move this week but he had been leaning toward support so his decision did not affect vote counts showing opponents with a majority in the Republican-controlled Senate as well as in the Democratic-controlled House.

Opponents need majority votes in both houses of Congress to block the sale of five Airborne Warning and Control System planes.

Bush says AWACs top priority item

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President George Bush Friday described the sale of AWACs radar planes to Saudi Arabia as the nation's most important foreign policy issue and warned that "danger lies ahead" if Congress blocks the deal.

"No single foreign policy matter on the immediate agenda is more important than this sale, especially now," Bush said in a reference to the assassination three days earlier of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Bush, who addressed a National Press Club luncheon, said the administration has "just got started" fighting for the sale. "I believe when the facts are out, we're going to carry the day," he said.

School panel told to shake up education

By D'Vera Cohn United Press International

WASHINGTON — A federal panel on excellence in the nation's schools was urged at its first meeting Friday to "rock a few boats" if it wants to reverse the deteriorating image of public education.

The 18-member National Commission on Excellence in Education, named by Education Secretary Terrel Bell in August, has an estimated $760,000 budget at a time when other federal education functions are being cut.

The panel met briefly with President Reagan at the White House Friday and was to continue its discussions through Saturday.

"I hope we rock a few boats," Minnesota Gov. Albert Quie told his fellow commission members at their first session. "If there's some shock quality, maybe it will help bring about some changes."

"This commission is being convened at a time when there is a great deal of concern and urgency about American education," said Bell. "Many are wondering what we might do to enhance the quality of learning in this country."

Bell established the commission to counter growing popular concern about quality in the nation's public schools. The panel's meeting came week after the College Board reported scores on standard tests by college-bound seniors did not drop for the first time since 1968.

The secretary conceded "many commissions come and go in this town," but said the excellence panel's recommendations will make a difference if they are accepted by the educators who hear about them.

"This is the highest priority that we have in the Department of Education," Bell said. "This is an endeavor of enormous significance."

"Your report must be to the American educational community, not — heaven forbid — to the federal government."

David Gardner, commission chairman and president of the University of Utah, noted the panel has no authority to hand down orders, but said he thinks "the timing is right" for its work.

"The people of the country welcome a discussion of these issues," he said. "There's a measure of receptiveness and readiness."

"There may be such great expectations that we may not be able to fulfill them all," said Norman C. Francis, president of Xavier University in New Orleans.

"If we miss this time, it may be missed for many, many generations to come."

Photos indicate comet struck sun

By Al Rossiter Jr. UPI Science Editor

WASHINGTON — An errant comet smashed into the sun two years ago, releasing the energy of 1 million hydrogen bombs and scattering coronatory debris millions of miles above the sun's surface, showed a huge glowing cloud of what apparently were fine grains of dust from the comet spreading out like a halo millions of miles above the sun's surface 11 hours after impact.

Dr. Donald J. Michels, chief scientist for the research laboratory's satellite instrument that made the discovery, said astronomers at ground-based observatories and other satellite experimenters are reviewing their data to look for other effects from the collision.

"We don't really know what to look for," he said. "We'll try to see if we can see anything unusual in the right place at the right time."

Food stamp IDs being demanded

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Food stamp recipients in 17 major cities will be required to produce photo identification cards to pick up their stamps under anti-fraud rules issued Friday by the Agriculture Department.

Elderly and disabled recipients can be exempted from the requirement.

The new photo ID system is principally designed to prevent the issuance of duplicate benefits," said Agriculture Secretary John Block.

It is also intended to prevent ineligible people from using food stamp authorization cards stolen from the mail to obtain stamps illegally.

New York City will be the first to implement the system beginning Nov. 1. The new rules give state welfare agencies up to a year to institute the system in metropolitan areas with at least 100,000 food stamp recipients.

Those areas include Washington, Baltimore, Newark, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, San Diego, Los Angeles, San Antonio, Atlanta, Miami, Chicago, Memphis, Cleveland, Detroit, Houston and New Orleans.

About 7 million of the nation's 22 million food stamp recipients live in those cities.

Urban areas, which have more food stamp recipients per capita than any American city, was not included in the system because Congress voted to put Puerto Rico under a block grant system, allowing the commonwealth to devise its own food program separate from food stamps beginning next year.

Until now, recipients have had identification cards but states could not require photographs on them. States will have an option of adapting drivers' licenses to the program.

Cost-cutters seen helping home-buyers

By Paul Hendrie
Herald Reporter

The Housing Advisory Subcommittee came up with list of "final preliminary recommendations" Thursday night which it hopes will cut construction costs for developers and make housing more affordable for home-buyers.

The committee is advising the Planning and Zoning Commission on changes to the comprehensive plan of development, which has been changed little since it was written in 1963.

The comprehensive plan is meant to guide the Planning and Zoning Commission in developing zoning regulations. The state requires it.

Other subcommittees will also be formed to advise the commission on the comprehensive plan.

Once the other subcommittees make their recommendations, they will compare notes and present final suggestions to the PZC.

According to Planning Department side Paul Sebestyen, who is coordinating the comprehensive plan revision, the subcommittee recommended that:

- Rear lots — lots with less than the currently allowed street frontage, but which still meet minimum square footage requirements — be permitted.
- Zero lot line development be allowed. This would allow houses to be pushed to the property line of the adjacent lot, rather than placed in property line of the adjacent lot, rather than placed in the middle of the lot. However, the minimum size of the lot itself would not be changed. Sebestyen said this would allow homes in some areas to be positioned in a way that they could take advantage of passive solar energy.
- Subdivision regulations be amended to allow "townhouses" by letting the owners of attached homes own their own lots privately. Such an amendment was recently passed by the Planning and Zoning Commission, removing the need for attached homes to be marketed as either condominiums or rental units.
- Subdivision and public improvement regulations be loosened in some areas. These regulations govern such things as road widths and thicknesses, sidewalks and curbing and developers have complained they are too strict and make development too expensive.

- Subdivision and public improvement standards be set by the Planning and Zoning Commission, rather than guided by the Board of Directors and the Public Works Department. The Board of Directors recently passed an ordinance giving the PZC authority over public improvement standards.
- Lower minimum square footage requirements in all zones by about 10 percent, wherever feasible.
- Determine land use by the density of the area, not the housing types in the area. High density development was defined as more than 10 units per acre middle density development was defined as up to five units per acre and low density development was defined as up to three units per acre. Zoning requirements would vary according to density.
- Mobile homes be looked into as a possible source of affordable housing. The committee said any mobile home development should be guided by strict regulations.

The subcommittee disagreed, however, with the recommendation by the Board of Directors Housing Resource Panel that large older houses should be chopped up into more units. "They felt there was a continuing need for large homes," said Sebestyen.

Sebestyen called the subcommittee recommendations "a good start" toward addressing the local housing shortage. He said the open space and recreation subcommittee should have its "final preliminary recommendations" set by next week.

Two new subcommittees, dealing with utilities and economic development, are scheduled to start up in mid-November, Sebestyen said.

By next February, the recommendations of all the subcommittees should be compiled. They will then face public hearings and the Planning and Zoning Commission will draft the new comprehensive plan probably by next summer.

'O' mark fine with Zinsser

On CCAG poll

State Sen. Carl A. Zinsser (R-Manchester) says his zero rating by the liberal Connecticut Citizen Action Group is not quite accurate. "I think you read that wrong," he says. "I got 100 percent. It depends on how you look at it."

The annual Legislative Index, released Friday, rates lawmakers according to how they voted on legislation backed by the citizen action group, an organization inspired by consumer Ralph Nader.

Nine bills and one amendment were chosen for this year's index, with the focus on hazardous waste, tax reform, energy and employment issues.

Zinsser joined two other local legislators in achieving perfect scores on the index — Rep. Elsie Swenson (R-Manch.), who also had a zero, and Rep. Muriel Yacovone (D-E. Hartford), who scored 100 percent.

Other legislators rating high on the groups' list were state Rep. John J. Woodcock (D-S. Windsor), with an 88, and state Sen. Marcella Fahey (D-E. Hartford) with an 83. Mrs. Fahey represents part of Manchester.

Following party lines, Republican state Sen. Walter H. Joyner ranked near the bottom with a rating of 35.

The legislative index is the most effective means CCAG has of communicating to its membership the positions legislators have taken on issues of concern to them," said Steve Derby, co-chairman of the group.

"People should refer to the index and hold legislators accountable for their votes," added co-chairman Doreen DeBlanc.

However, Zinsser said he has no regrets about his voting record on the bills singled out by the group. "I voted against them and I'd vote against them again," he said. "I didn't think they were in the best interest of the people of the Fourth District."

He said the bills concerning the nuclear industry, which he supports, would mean increased cost for utilities which eventually would be passed on to the consumers.

Zinsser said the index does not take into consideration the broad view of a legislator's record, instead singling out only those bills of particular interest to CCAG.

The results of the index are closely split along party lines.

In the House, 38 out of 82 Democrats scored 100, compared with only two Republicans out of 69. Six Democratic state senators were the only members of that body to score 100.

On the other end of the spectrum, 26 Republican representatives and four Republican senators voted against the Citizen Action Group's position on every vote on the index. One Democrat in each chamber scored zero.

"The number of legislators scoring 100 is a good sign," said Ms. DeBlanc. "It shows that there are conscientious legislators who care about the social and economic issues affecting their constituents."

LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE SOLUTION

ANSWERS TO LAST WEEK'S PRIZEWEEK PUZZLE

- CLUES ACROSS:
- CAPS not cape. There is not the same call for a cape to be of just the right size as there is in the case of CAPS.
 - REJECTION not infection. Since all the effects of infection are undesirable, the clue's reference to "undesirable side effects" suits an REJECTION better.
 - DARE not dark. Apply a DARE can be an intimidating sort of challenge, but a boy doesn't "need" to be nervous about the dark at all.
 - LEGS not lens. A lens broken in halves say, can work fairly well if the pieces are held together in a mount, etc.
 - SURE not turf. The clue would suit grass or fields, etc., more strictly than "turf" say. Expansive SURF beaches deserve comment more than turf, etc.
 - TEN not ten. Since a player could well recover from a couple of bad tee shots, TEN is more fitting.
 - STAR not stay. "STAR at the very top" is a reasonable phrase (not all stars, of course, were at the very top). On the other hand, "stay" tends to miss the point, which is more a question of what it was like to be at the top, rather than to stay there.
 - BID not bid. The need which is to be met by going all in is the main concern. There is nothing like generous BIDDING to bring success at an auction.
 - BLOW not slow. To "BLOW up a dam" that is under construction, yes;
- CLUES DOWN:
- CONCEPT not concert. As suggested, an artistic CONCEPT may be above the heads of ordinary people. On the other hand, the kind of entertainment given by an artist in concert is readily enjoyed by many.
 - BEAR not bear. Bad tidings are usually such sharp surprises that the hearing can't be compared with the effect of the BEARING OF THE NEWS.
 - DANGER not danger. The question of "awareness" (as distinct from appreciation, say, of the artistry of a dancer) links up better with DANGER.

 - DANDY not handy. Such a line present would be more important, appreciated, etc., than is suggested by merely "handy."
 - FULL not full. Since many people find them interesting and impressive, ceremonies are not dull in an absolute sense.
 - TIGHTER not tight. Drawing the ball closer will tighten it, or "make it TIGHTER."

150 guinea pigs up for adoption

Emery Air Freight had a cargo, bound for Canada, that got delayed in transit and ended up at Bradley Field.

The shipment was to be used for research in Canada, but because of the delay it was stuck to the scientists there.

So, the freight carrier was good with the shipment — 150 guinea pigs.

What do you do with 150 guinea pigs? The freight carrier considered killing them, but then had a better idea. Why not call the Connecticut Humane Society?

That they did and, as a result, the Humane Society is putting the little critters up for adoption as pets, according to Frank Intino, director of the animal department.

"They make excellent pets," said Intino. "They're easy to keep, easy to handle and you can keep them in an apartment, because they don't have to go outside. They're especially good starter pets for children."

Intino said anyone interested in giving the animals good homes can come down to the animal shelter at 701 Russell Road in Newington today from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., or on a week day from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Glastonbury man convicted in Portland teen's death

MIDDLETOWN (UPI) — Rodd Morrill, 22, of Glastonbury Friday was found guilty of murder in the 1978 stabbing death of Portland teenager Linda McLaughlin.

The Middlesex County Superior Court jury of six men and six women returned the guilty verdict after about 16 hours of deliberations over a four-day period.

Morrill, who also faces bank robbery charges, showed no emotion as the verdict was read, but his mother, Phyllis Morrill, broke down and sobbed, "Oh my God."

Superior Court Judge Francis R. Quinn set Nov. 2 for sentencing of the defendant, who faces a maximum of life imprisonment.

Morrill was convicted in the death of Miss McLaughlin, 17, whose body was found by two hunters on Nov. 18, 1978, in Portland's Wangunk Meadows.

An autopsy found Miss McLaughlin died of multiple stab wounds and that her throat had been slashed.

In his summation, State Attorney John Rowley told the jury the victim was preparing to break off with Morrill, that she owed the defendant money for drugs and she had told a friend Morrill was "acting crazy" since he left prison.

In deliberations Wednesday, the jury asked that testimony of the seven-week trial given by the parents of both the victim and Morrill be read to them again.

Morrill's attorney, James Wade of Hartford, called three defense witnesses, including two of three state troopers who testified for the prosecution.

The jurors also asked Quinn to repeat his charge to them and define presumption of innocence, burden of proof, circumstantial evidence and murder.

Morrill was arrested more than a year after the slaying and was indicted by an 18-member grand jury in January 1980.

There were no witnesses to the slaying, no weapon was found and the location of the crime was not known.

Morrill's bond of $100,000 was raised to $200,000 and he now faces bank robbery charges.

OPINION / Commentary

A whistleblower Reagan should hire

WASHINGTON—Federal employees who see things going wrong and decide to blow the whistle on their agency realize they won't endear themselves to their bosses in the bureaucracy. President Reagan has promised to protect the whistleblowers who expose waste, mismanagement or outright fraud. I wish success in this venture.

One whistleblower the president might want to listen to is Victor McKay, whose career with the Agency for International Development began back in 1973. McKay saw problems and reported them to his superiors; his reward was to be harassed continually as a "wastemaker" and eventually to be effectively blackballed from government service.

McKay was assigned to work with foreign students whose education in the United States is supported by AID funds. The idea is that these "best and brightest" will go home and put the expertise they have acquired to the service of their own countries.

But McKay discovered early on that many of these foreign students were known as "no-go's." A no-go is a student who is brought to this country to study at AID expense and then refuses to go home. Beguiled by the good life in America, they stay on illegally instead of returning to work for their homeland.

AID officials have for years been assuring Congress that there simply wasn't a significant "no-go" problem. Fewer than 1 percent of AID-subsidized foreign students failed to go home, the agency bureaucrats claimed.

But McKay soon realized that the no-go figure was at least 10 times greater than the official AID estimate. His figures—supported by investigations by the General Accounting Office and AID's own inspector general—show that at least 10 percent, and probably as many as 20 percent, of foreign students brought here under the AID program were not going home.

The whole purpose of the program was being defeated.

The situation disturbed McKay. It not only represented a waste of U.S.

Jack Anderson
Washington Merry-Go-Round

That's like saying there were three pot smokers in Washington last year because only three were arrested," McKay told my associate Don Goldberg. Whether his estimate is correct or not, McKay said, the important point is that AID just isn't interested in keeping track of the no-go population.

McKay, a political appointee in the Nixon administration, was "ruffed" in 1974, under President Ford, but was reinstated after he charged that the elimination of his job was simply a device to silence him. That made him even more suspect, and he was again fired in 1977—on the excuse that a new administration had taken over.

McKay later was hired at the Interior Department's Young Adult Conservation Corps, but was soon fired when his boss found out that he had been telling Congress about the AID mess. He has now taken his loss to the courts.

Guest editorial

The real cost in crime fight

From the Newport (R.I.) Daily News

President Reagan's pledge to redress what he called "the imbalance between the rights of the accused and rights of the innocent" offers problems.

The president forgot the bottom line cost of this proposed war on crime. Without money, such a plan represents nothing more than an emotional catharsis for the president and for most of us who find life in our crowded cities increasingly desperate.

One figure mentioned by President Reagan's own crime advisory group here is $2 billion. That is what former Attorney General Griffin B. Bell and other members of Reagan's own crime task force say it will cost to assist the states in building enough prisons to hold violent criminals not loose. Interesting enough, the economy-minded Reagan concentrated on the needs without the means.

Once of the points on which Reagan concentrated was the so-called "exclusionary" rule, which prohibits prosecutors from introducing evidence obtained illegally. This is a law with which federal law enforcement officials have lived since 1914 and with which state authorities have lived less happily since the early 1960s.

People who have read Bob Woodward and Scott Armstrong's book, The Brethren, can sympathize with lower federal court and state court judges oversensitive to tainted evidence questions. If Woodward and Armstrong accurately reflect the Supreme Court decision process, it is a wonder that lower federal court and state court judges can make any sense at all out of high court rulings.

We believe that one point made by the president — bail reform — bears considerable merit. He proposed tightening bail requirements or even denying them to hardened repeaters charged with new crimes.

One further point. The president called for mandatory imprisonment of persons convicted of gun crimes. He did not speak, however, of a recommendation by his own crime task force for stricter gun controls.

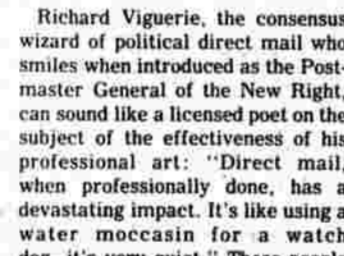

Was the president listening harder to the National Rifle Association than to his own crime task force?

The insidious direct mail threat

Mark Shields
Syndicated Columnist

Richard Viguerie, the consensus wizard of political direct mail who smiles when introduced as the Postmaster General of the New Right, can sound like a licensed poet on the subject of the effectiveness of his professional art: "Direct mail, when professionally done, has a devastating impact. It's like using a water moccasin for a watch dog—it's very quiet." Those people who continue to think of direct mail only for fund raising are, according to Viguerie, making a mistake: "It's really mostly advertising."

On both counts, Richard Viguerie is absolutely right. Political direct mail is neither seen nor counted. Even if you're lucky enough to obtain a copy of your opponent's letter accusing you of treason and truancy, there is no way of finding out how many of the letters were sent or to whom. Customarily such letters attacking the character of the opponent with some "recently discovered" nugget are sent in the last few days of the campaign to prevent any effective rebuttal.

The candidate who learns in adequate time that she has been falsely accused by letter of certain offenses, cannot simply summon that constituency to correct the misinformation. The basic option available to the wronged party is to call a press conference, which means making public the inaccurate charges in order to expose their inaccuracies.

That, of course, is not without risk, and no candidate has any guarantee that any press conference will be covered, let alone that it will achieve the setting straight of the record.

POLITICAL DIRECT mail is morally neutral. It can be of value to legitimate campaigns. Through direct mail, a candidate can deliver a specific message to a specific constituency, such as retired railroad workers or cosmologists.

That makes sense, but the past abuses of political direct mail by individuals and groups—both liberal and conservative—must concern those who witness the declining voter turnout and falling citizen participation as bad signs for the political life of our nation.

In 1980, a particularly sleazy direct mail piece from a New Right political action committee accused Sen. Alan Cranston (D-Calif.) and then-Sen. John Culver (D-Iowa) of responsibility for the fact that "our nation's moral fiber is weakened by the growing homosexual movement—the fanatical ERA (Equal Rights Amendment) pushers (many of whom publicly brag they are lesbians)."

That is not the kind of stuff that inspires or encourages many people to regard politics as an important or honorable activity.

In the last 10 years, American politics has seen the arrival of near total disclosure. We now can learn a candidate's net worth, class standing, white corpuscle count and, more important, who contributed to the campaign and how it was spent.

The same rules of disclosure should be extended immediately to all political direct mail. Richard Viguerie, the Postmaster General of the New Right, heartily agrees. "All of our letters are always available to the media," says Viguerie.

It's time we in the media began reading everybody's direct mail. It could help make the water moccasin an endangered political species.

Why should we support basic research?

By Heinz Valtin

The connection between basic scientific research and its practical application is not always self-evident. Yet scientists who hope for continued federal support of their research are often reluctant to speak about their work. As one scientist who feels strongly that public expenditure for scientific research is fully justified, I would like to explain.

Basic scientific research may be defined as an effort to learn the nature of things; that is, to learn the mechanisms that cause a given observed effect. It involves "knowledge for the sake of understanding," without immediate concern for the possible practical application of the newly gained information.

The field of genetics provides an example. Gregor Mendel, an Austrian monk and naturalist working in the last century, studied various strains of peas because he wished to find out how traits were inherited — what caused a pea, for example, to be yellow or green, round or wrinkled, or its plant to be short or tall. In the process, Mendel defined the laws of inheritance, which were best explained by the existence of what he called "elements," now known to be genes. For a century, thousands of other scientists built on this work. Their contributions, which came from many disciplines and included many other discoveries, are parts of a jigsaw puzzle that, when assembled, showed us how the primary genetic material, DNA, determines the structure of proteins, the building blocks of life. One result of this total effort is "genetic engineering," which may enable us to produce insulin in certain diabetics who cannot make this protein; to manufacture interferon, which may be effective in the treatment of some cancers and to treat a host of other diseases.

This example illustrates a number of features about basic research.

1. The basic research of today is likely to become the new clinical medicine of tomorrow. We must understand the system before we can utilize it logically. The splicing of genetic material that allows us to produce interferon in large amounts became possible only when we understood how genes determine the synthesis of proteins. Similarly, we can institute logical treatment of a disease only when we have defined the mechanisms that cause that disease.

2. A major breakthrough in basic research usually depends on earlier discoveries by numerous workers in many fields. The insight and technical capability that identified DNA as the primary genetic material used knowledge and techniques from botany, physics, chemistry, engineering, mathematics, to name a few. At the time they were accomplished, most of the contributions were probably unconnected and not perceived as being crucial to the breakthrough.

3. There may be a relatively long lag between a discovery and its utilization in a practical application. Therefore, the generation that pays for a given piece of basic research will not necessarily be the direct beneficiary of that discovery.

4. Finding a cure for cancer is not analogous to sending a man to the moon. The latter feat — and a great achievement it was — could be accomplished through a mission-oriented task force because the physical principles involved were fully understood; what was needed was sophisticated technology. Much of that understanding is still lacking for cancer. Therefore, even the most foresighted scientist setting up a task force to solve cancer, could not predict all the areas and bits of knowledge that will be required to reach that goal.

5. Relevance to clinical or other practical problems must not be a prerequisite to basic research. It is possible to do basic research with a practical goal in mind, but if we require that such a goal be clearly defined before a basic project is launched, we will miss out on many important — and, at the time, seemingly irrelevant — contributions. If Mendel and many others had been required to predict the practical applications of their work before they could proceed — or in modern terms, before their applications for research support could be funded — the field of genetic engineering might not yet be dreamed of.

6. Basic research can often make the greatest strides by utilizing simple experimental systems. I doubt that Mendel could have defined the laws of inheritance if he had studied certain traits in man — height, weight, color and texture of skin — that might be determined not only by genes but also by uncontrolled environmental factors such as temperature, sunlight, diet, etc. Similarly, I doubt that the intricacies of DNA could have been unraveled if scientists had not turned from the seemingly simple experimental models of a plant or fruit fly to an even simpler system, such as a single-celled bacterium. This requirement for simple systems makes basic science vulnerable to ridicule, for the titles of some of the most important research projects often sound far removed from the major problems that face mankind. Someone asked derisively, who cares what makes the grass grow green? We all care, because the answers to questions like this lead to major advances in medicine and technology.

There are many other examples, which illustrate that some of the most useful tools in modern medicine were discovered by basic scientists who did not launch their work with that application in mind. Wilhelm Roentgen, a physicist, was studying the propagation of particles when he discovered X-rays. Karl Landsteiner, a pathologist, was exploring fundamental questions in immunology when he learned that there are several types of human blood, a discovery that opened the way to safe transfusions. Marie and Pierre Curie were chemists who discovered radioactive compounds, and they had no idea that these substances would one day be used in the treatment of cancer.

Because such examples are anecdotal and therefore possibly exceptional, Drs. Julius Comroe and Robert Drripps in the early 1970s conducted a more systematic

What is your reaction to the death of Anwar Sadat and what effect will it have on the Mideast?

PAMELA SEELEY, NANCY LAVENDER, Mancheser: "I think it's a tragedy. I think Egypt is about to go through a tremendous visionary period. We don't have to look for problems. It's going to be a time of peace."

SAMUEL GREEN, Mancheser: "I think it's a tragedy. I think the death of Sadat was a sad occasion. It's just going to make everything go up. The prices in oil will go up, and that's going to hurt the poor people."

ROBERT WYHEHEAD, Mancheser: "I think he's probably the greatest leader the world has had in this era. I think his replacement follows his policies and maintains some stability. But I'm worried."

DIANA O'CONNELL, Andover: "He seemed to be a wonderful person. He had a lot of good ideas and did a lot of good things."

BETSY SAYRE, Mancheser: "I think it's really terrible that so many people are getting shot at. No one's going to want to run the country if everybody keeps getting shot."

CLAY HANMEL, Mancheser: "I think it's hard to say what's going to happen, but I think it's a shame that it had to happen."

DAN SMITH, Mancheser: "It will be a big problem, I think, especially with Reagan and the AWAC sale. It's going to affect the AWAC sale to Saudi Arabia."

request from the Windham Zoning Commission to ban the rally entirely, but Town Attorney Howard Schiller withdrew the motion. He said the town would return to court later to seek a court order to prohibit other similar events on the property in the future.

The KKK has held three rallies in Connecticut since 1980. The last two ended abruptly when anti-Klan demonstrators, led by the International Committee Against Racism, unleashed a barrage of rocks and bottles on the marchers.

INCAR plans two protests near the Klan site Saturday, and state police intelligence reports indicate they may attract up to 1,000 people.

Wilkinson, who sat quietly in court until Danahy read his decision, said the Klan had cooperated with state police and called the ruling "a grave injustice to this organization and the people of the community and the state."

"It's amazing to me that the state and the city have never sought an injunction against the perpetrators of the violence, the International Committee Against Racism," he said.

"If there is going to be any problem, it's going to be from them."

"All this is going to do is convince people the Klan is violent," he said. Wilkinson said he said the Klan had never been subjected to such a ruling, other than Danahy's similar decision before a KKK cross burned in nearby Scotland in September 1980.

"We're certainly in the market for an attorney willing to take the state on," he said, "but we haven't been able to find one yet."

Price rise lowest in the past two years

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Wholesale prices rose just 0.2 percent in September — its lowest level in more than two years — in large part because of a drop in new car prices that usually occurs in the fall, the Labor Department reported Friday.

The small increase in prices paid by wholesalers for finished goods last month represents an annual inflation rate of only 2.2 percent, quite a change from the double-digit inflation of last year and early this year. The September figure represents the smallest monthly increase since August 1978, when wholesale prices edged up 0.1 percent, the report said.

Stable food prices and a one-year dealer discount for new cars were largely responsible for the encouraging report.

The 0.2 percent seasonally adjusted figure — which eliminates changes that occur at the same time every year such as normal price movements, seasonal discounts and marketing cycles — follows four months of increases in the 3 percent to 4 percent range.

The slowdown was due mainly to a 3.7 percent decline in prices for passenger cars and a 5.8 percent price decrease for light trucks, representing the once-a-year "liquidation allowance" that automobile manufacturers give dealers as a sales incentive at the end of the model year.

The department said if the "liquidation allowance" had not been figured into the September figures, inflation at the wholesale level would have increased 0.7 percent. That works out roughly to an 8.7 percent annual rate, said Bureau of Labor Statistics economist Andrew Clem.

Consumer food prices at the wholesale level were unchanged in September, following a 0.2 percent increase in August and an unusual 1.5 percent jump in July.

Prices for processed poultry fell 8.2 percent last month following a sharp August increase, and pork prices turned down after no change in August. Prices for sugar, fish and vegetables also fell. On the other hand, prices for beef and veal moved up 3.3 percent in September, following a decrease in August.

Energy prices rose slightly last month after four consecutive months of decline.

The department said natural gas prices rose considerably more in September than in August and gasoline prices continued to fall, but less than in any of the previous four months. Heating oil prices edged down 0.1 percent in September, significantly less than previous monthly decreases.

Fed board rapped

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (UPI) — Three top administration officials Friday criticized the Federal Reserve Board for keeping the nation's money supply too tight and preventing even the least bit of economic growth.

The three — Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and presidential counselor Edwin Meese — carefully avoided blaming Fed Chairman Paul Volcker for the tight money policy that has kept interest rates high, directing their criticism at "other members" of the board.

In a confusing, mixed signal, however, Vice President George Bush told an audience in Washington the Fed is "doing the right thing" and the administration would not try to influence the board's decisions.

Previous criticism of Volcker and the tight money policy by Regan and others prompted Volcker to complain directly to President Reagan.

Battle of unbeaters to East

A's win to sweep

OAKLAND (UPI) — Rickey Henderson snapped an 0-for-9 playoff slump with two singles and two walks, stole a base and scored three runs Friday night in leading the Oakland A's to a 4-1 victory over and a sweep of the Kansas City Royals in the American League West division series.

The A's had only seven hits but Larry Gura and Fennie Martin issued five walks between them and the Royals added three errors while absorbing their third straight loss in the best-of-five series.

In the three games, the defending AL champion Royals scored just two runs and left 24 runners stranded on the bases. In one inning of Friday night's game they had four hits but did not score a run and that typified their play throughout the series.

Rick Langford went 7-13 innings despite soreness in his right elbow and, after giving up two hits in the eighth for a total of 10, was replaced by Tom Underwood, who went 1-3 of an inning. Dave Beard finished up and sent the A's onto the League Championship Series next week against either New York or Milwaukee.

Henderson walked in the opening inning, stole second after two outs and scored on an infield single by Tony Armas to put Oakland in front 1-0. The A's never trailed.

In the third inning, Oakland scored only one run despite three hits, three Kansas City errors and a walk.

Henderson started the inning with a single and apparently was picked off but made it safely to second when shortstop U.L. Washington threw the ball wild past first. Dwayne Murphy dragged a bunt past the mound for a hit and when second baseman Frank White threw the ball away, Henderson scored to make it 2-0 and Murphy went to second.

Coming home with a split, East Catholic boys' cross country team downed host St. Paul, 15-17, but bowed to perennial power Xavier High, 26-33, in HCC competition yesterday in Bristol.

The split leaves the Eagle thincats 4-1 for the season.

East's Steve Kittredge was the individual winner with a 14:06 clocking over a 2.75 mile layout. He was followed by a pair of Xavier thincats before Eagle harriers John Rowe and Ron Adams secured fourth and fifth placements.

Xavier wrapped up matters by sweeping sixth thru seventh placements.

"I was exceptionally pleased with our team performance," remarked East Coach Jack Hull. "The times

Turn back Xavier, 3-0

By Len Auster Herald Sportswriter

One team suffered through formative years in which success was far from prevalent. But its program has grown and matured and success is a byproduct. The other is now growing and suffering — not badly — some growing pains.

That was one way to look at the combatants as East Catholic had control from the start in whipping Xavier High, 3-0, in a battle of unbeaten Hartford County Conference soccer rivals yesterday at Cougar Field.

The Eagles, defending HCC champs, are now 4-0 in the conference and on the verge of the Middleton-based Falcons after six wins and sends them to 3-1 in HCC play.

Three first-half goals, a pair by junior striker Colin Doran who now has seven for the season, were all the Eagles needed. East had a 17-5 edge in shots the first half, beat Xavier to virtually every good and scoring opportunity.

"We were juiced up," remarked East Coach Tom Malin. "You could see it in their eyes after the last game. After the South (Catholic) game (4-0 win) they came to the bench and gave the 'X' sign. Like I said before, the next three games (including Xavier) would determine how tough we may be in the 'tourney,' he continued.

"We hadn't played in 10 days," offered Xavier Coach Marty Ryceczek, "but I'm extremely pleased with our progress. We were supposed to play St. Paul Tuesday but were rained out. And you turn this field sideways and you have our practice field," he motioned towards Cougar Field.

"They beat us to the ball. Obviously they're the best team we've faced. We started out 6-0 last year but on the sidelines I turned to my assistant and noted this brings back some realization. We have to remember this is only our third year. This is where we want to go. We're not there yet," he commented of the East side.

East got the only goal it needed at 4:12 of the first half as midfielder Ed Ansaldo lofted a 20-yard direct kick from the right side into the top left corner of the cage. It was his fifth goal of the season.

"The second half turned into a bit of nonsense with three yellow cards, all on East, and a red card on Doran at the 19:10 mark. Despite playing a man down, East continued the pressure and had a 9-5 edge in shots the second half.

"The second half we got into a kick ball game," Malin admitted, remembering the past. "We now can play soccer game. I think we're a good skilled team and hope it's proven as the season goes along." He replied, not wanting to get into a comparison with Xavier.

"Tuesday against Glastonbury will be another stepping stone to see how good we are," added Malin. "East will host Glastonbury in a 3-15 start.

The victory pegged the Sachems' record at 44-0 overall and 31-0 in the COC. Tech has won four of eight starts with two other games ending in ties. In conference play, the record is 12-2.

PLAY NEWSPAPER BINGO Game No. 3 Starts Monday

Wind helps Indian kickers in shutout

Utilizing a strong wind in the first and third quarters to score a pair of goals in each canto, Manchester High blanked Fermi High, 4-0, in COC soccer action yesterday in Enfield.

The win lifts the Silk Towners 4-2-1 for the season while the loss drops the Falcons 2-4-1.

Manchester's next outing is Tuesday afternoon at unbeaten Wethersfield High in a 3:30 start.

Mike Letourneau worked a give-and-go with Myles McCurry to break in on goal. His shot glanced off Falcon keeper John Cieski and Jay Hedlund, from a scramble in front, was able to push it into the cage at 10:24.

Five minutes later Hedlund took a pass from Mike Roy in the penalty area, worked around three defenders, and fired a 12-yarder. Hedlund at 8:16 of the third period completed a three-goal hat trick, giving him six goals for the season, as another scramble in front set up an opportunity which he cashed in on to the corner of the cage.

Tom Finnegan with his second goal of the season capped the scoring at 12:32 as he took a pass from Hedlund and fired to the upper right corner.

Manchester's next outing is Tuesday afternoon at unbeaten Wethersfield High in a 3:30 start.

Garvey's HR sparks Dodgers

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Steve Garvey cracked a two-run homer to highlight a three-run first-inning and over seven innings to lead Los Angeles to a 6-1 victory Friday over the Houston Astros, keeping the Dodgers alive in the National League West Division playoffs.

Houston leads the best-of-five series 2-1 with the fourth game scheduled to start Saturday at 8:05 p.m. EDT. The Dodgers will send rookie Fernando Valenzuela against Vern Riffe, a 14th game, if necessary, as scheduled for Sunday at 4:05 p.m. EDT.

Davey Lopes opened the first with a walk off Houston starter Bob Knepper and moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by Ken Landreux. Dusty Baker then doubled off the left-field wall, scoring Lopes. Garvey followed with his homer, deep into the left-field seats, giving the Dodgers a 3-0 lead. It was Garvey's second home run of the playoffs. Knepper, 35, during the regular season with a 2.18 earned run average, lasted just five innings, allowing six hits before giving way to Frank LaCorte, who held the Dodgers' hitters for two innings before giving way to a pinch hitter in the eighth. Joe Sambilo, who earned the victory in Houston's 1-0 triumph Wednesday night, was tagged for three runs and four hits after he replaced LaCorte.

Houston scored its lone run in the third when Art Howe led off by hitting a 1-0 Houston pitch into the seats in left field for a home run. Howe opened the eighth with a walk and Houston was replaced by Steve Howe, who got pinch hitter Dickie Thon to fly out and then struck out pinch hitter Gary Woods and Terry Puhl to end the inning.

At the bottom of the eighth, the Dodgers added three runs on four hits off Sambilo. Pedro Guerrero opened with a double but was forced at third on pinch hitter Derrel Thomas' attempted sacrifice bunt. Steve Yeager then singled with Guerrero stopping at second. Bill Russell followed with an RBI single with Yeager taking third.

Pinch hitter Reggie Smith delivered a sacrifice fly to right scoring Yeager and sending Russell to third. Lopes was intentionally walked before Landreux knocked in the Dodgers' sixth run with a single to right. Sambilo was replaced by Billy Smith, who got Baker to ground out to end the inning.

Bob Welch, who was scheduled to start Friday's game before Dodger manager Tommy Lasorda changed to Houston, pitched the ninth inning for Los Angeles.

The Dodgers, who managed just one run in losing the first two games by scores of 2-1 and 11-1 in innings, scored three runs on four hits in Friday's game before Dodger manager Tommy Lasorda changed to Houston, pitched the ninth inning for Los Angeles.

Christenson saves Phils

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Right-hander Larry Christenson, starting for the first time in more than six weeks, saved the world champion Philadelphia Phillies from being eliminated by the Montreal Expos in the third game of the National League East playoffs.

Christenson pitched a complete game, allowing only one run in the best-of-series to nail down their first NL East title, but the Phillies could not beat the Expos, Saturday with a victory.

Christenson, who missed a month of the season with a groin injury and had not started a game since Aug. 24, allowed only one run and four hits and struck out eight in six innings before leaving the game for a pinch hitter, Sparky Lyle. Ron Reed finished up, allowing the Expos one run and four hits over the final three innings.

Mike Schmidt, Gary Matthews, George Vukovich and Pete Rose also played key roles in the Phillies' victory. Schmidt broke out of his playless slump with two hits and also made a sparkling defensive play in the seventh to choke off a Montreal rally. Matthews had three hits and scored twice and Vukovich and Rose each knocked in key sixth-inning skipped into the dugout for an error.

The Phillies, who had been lacking clutch hits throughout the playoffs, could have broken the game open in the fourth. But Christenson's failure to do the one thing pitchers are supposed to do with a bat in their hands — bunt — took them out of a potential big inning.

Bowa led off the inning with an intentional walk to score two runs. Moreland singled and pinch runner Luis Aguayo was sacrificed to second. Fanning then forced Phillie Phanatic manager Dallas Green's hands by issuing an intentional walk to Trillo to bring up Christenson. Green never hesitated and sent up Vukovich, his top left-handed pinch hitter during the regular season. Vukovich greeted reliever Bill Lee with a single to score Aguayo, and after two were on, Rose dumped a single to right to score Trillo.

Schmidt made a game-saving play in the seventh when, after leadoff singles by Terry Francona and Speier, he made a backhand grab of Lyle, stepped on the base and threw to second for a double play.

Schmidt doubled to lead off the bottom of the seventh and scored when reliever Elias Sosa was unable to throw on Matthews' infield hit. Bowa then singled home the Phillies' final run.

The Expos touched Reed for a run in the eighth when Jerry White doubled, took two with Pineros' bloop single and scored on Carter's sacrifice fly.

225 during the regular season and drove in only 25 runs in 96 games.

But, for the first time in the playoffs, the Expos could not hold the lead. Matthews led off the second with a single off loser Ray Burris and moved to second as Keith Moreland grounded a single to center. After Larry Bowa tied the score, Matt Trillo grounded another single to center to score Matthews and Moreland also scored on the rally. Matthews had three hits and scored twice and Vukovich and Rose each knocked in key sixth-inning

Cavanaugh at controls as Pats oppose Jets

NEW YORK (UPI) — The great New England quarterback controversy has shifted to Matt Cavanaugh's favor — for now.

The Patriots, who lost their first two games this season under Steve Grogan, turned the quarterback slot over to Cavanaugh three weeks ago and he finally responded by leading New England to its first victory of the season. Cavanaugh set up four touchdowns and a field goal in a 33-10 romp over Kansas City.

Cavanaugh will be at the controls again Sunday when the Patriots face the New York Jets at Shea Stadium. The Jets, who lost their first three games of the season, defeated Houston two weeks ago and then tied unbeaten Miami last Sunday.

The Grogan-Cavanaugh controversy has been a heated one among New England fans ever since Cavanaugh joined the club out of the University of Pittsburgh four years ago.

"It's a lot better than sitting and watching," said Cavanaugh of his new starting role. "I feel I'm learning every week. I feel I could be throwing sharper and crispier. We have a great offense and I feel I can run."

Cavanaugh has completed 50 of 99 passes for 763 yards and two touchdowns but has had nine passes intercepted, a figure which has him concerned. "The Patriots need to win to keep pace in the AFC East. Miami leads the conference with a 4-1 record and Buffalo is 3-2. The Dolphins and Bills face each other in Buffalo Monday night.

New England has had some of its most productive games against the Jets, winning in recent years by scores of 56-3 and 55-10. The Jets' offense has been quelled, but Cavanaugh has had some of his best games against the Jets, winning in recent years by scores of 56-3 and 55-10. Denver, 4-1, shares the AFC West lead with San Diego entering Sunday's game at Mile High Stadium against inconsistent Detroit and the Broncos' league-leading defense will face a stern test against all-purpose running back Billy Sims.

"Billy Sims may be the best runner we face all season and I don't think that's an exaggeration," says Denver defensive line coach Stan Jones. "He runs, he catches passes and he's just a total football player. There aren't too many better than him."

Denver, only 8-8 in 1980, comes off an impressive season sweep of the Super Bowl champion Oakland Raiders and the Broncos' only blemish is a 13-10 loss in Seattle.

"No way I would have said we'd be 4-1," said Reeves. "But, even being 4-1, I would not have said I have lost to Seattle."

The Lions, who tied Minnesota for the NFC Central Division title last season, looked superb two weeks ago in a 16-0 triumph over Oakland but looked hapless last week after seeing a 10-0 lead evaporate into a 28-10 rout administered by Tampa Bay.

'Rocky Mountain High' life for Denver squad

Although Denver allows only 232 yards and 11 points per game, defensive coordinator Joe Collier is using a psychological tool to help motivate the club for this week's challenge. Pictures of Sims, the No. 3 rusher in the NFL with 477 yards on 114 carries, have been posted on team bulletin boards.

The Lions, however, have problems at the quarterback position. Starter Gary Danielson has a dislocated wrist and is in a cast. Staff Komo started for Danielson against the Buccaneers and was later replaced by Eric Hipple. Each threw two interceptions. Joe Delaney has looked impressive with 312 yards, fifth-best in the AFC.

The NFL's two top-rated passers will be on display in Candlestick Park. San Francisco's Joe Montana is No. 1 in the conference as he tries to stop the 49ers' five-game losing streak to Dallas.

Mike Custer in semifinals

Lanky Mike Custer, Manchester town and Manchester Racquet Club men's singles champion, did mightily well in the Converse Classic last week at the local club.

The 19-year-old (29 on Saturday) knocked off the top seed in the Men's Open Division to gain the semifinals berth in "something."

By virtue of gaining the semis, Custer qualified for the North Atlantic Regionals Oct. 23-25 on Long Island.

Joe's World

Joe Garman

'I blew it'

"Damn it, I blew it." I'd like to have a dollar for every time I've dumbled those words on myself. What gets me, is that this happens when I think I have everything locked up nice and tight, and then I slip up. I cast upstream to where I saw his fin cut the surface once again as he rolled at a nymph. Quickly switching from a fly to a nymph, I cast upstream to him, and on the second cast hooked the fish.

He came right down to me, and when I saw me, I saw him, it was mutual astonishment. That had to be the biggest brook trout I had ever seen. The day before I had hooked, played, landed and released an eight pounder, but this was even larger.

The fish turned and headed downstream with me running along after him, slipping and sliding on the rocks, up, down, with my red head tied to the air and words of encouragement from my buddy Doug Ingram, and the two guides who were with me. "Hang onto him, Joe. He'll go 10 pounds," my guide yelled as I slipped and flopped my way down after that fish.

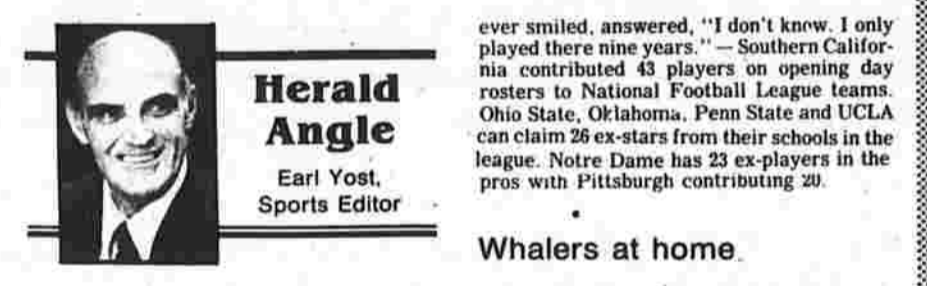

Finally he hit a pool of quiet water, and as I approached the pool, I started gaining on him. At that point, I was a standing right alongside of me, net in hand. He got away. I forgot to take it off. I thought as I slipped the button and turned to pick up the second brook. Forget it. By that time he was long gone, and old sure shot blew the air with "Damn it, I blew it." I was so sure I forgot to take the safety off.

I'm shooting skeet in a team match, and on my way to running a shot, I have broken 6 consecutive birds, am at station number 7 taking my low house bird, supposedly one of the easiest on the tank. With lots of encouragement from my teammates, I casually drop the shell into my over and under, and catch the bird in the wrong barrel. No bang, just a click. The referee came over, had me open, and dum dum me, had dropped the shell in the wrong barrel. Something I had never done before, but there's a first time for everyone. I really blew that one. I take a tip from an old mission blower. Don't count your chickens on the easy stuff. That's when you get taken to the cleaners.

Simmons' bat beats Yankees

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ted Simmons, concentrating on the long ball in a game otherwise marred by Milwaukee's attack on an umpire, helped the Milwaukee Brewers stave off elimination in the American League East Division playoffs Friday night with a 5-3 victory over the New York Yankees.

Simmons smacked a two-run home run in the seventh inning moments after a fan charged third base umpire Mike Reilly. In the eighth, Paul Mauer's home run that was nearly nabbed by Winfield and some sloppy defense by New York allowed the Brewers to produce an insurance run — the Yankees' lead in the best-of-five series to two games to one.

Continues war

CHAMA, N.M. (UPI) — Bobby Unser continued his war with the U.S. Auto Club today, despite that body's action to reinstate him as champion in the 1981 Indianapolis 500.

Though thrilled to regain the Indy crown, his third, Unser angrily criticized the accompanying decision Thursday to fine him $40,000 for passing cars under a yellow caution flag. It was that action which caused Indy stewards to penalize Unser a lap and strip him of the title. The championship was then awarded to runnerup Mario Andretti, who had signed a protest of Unser's alleged infraction.

Ace Cards' ball carrier Set to run over Giants

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — Through five games, Otis Anderson of St. Louis has run for 95 yards but the entire New York Giants team. If history repeats itself, the third-year back will pass Sunday in Giants Stadium. Anderson is averaging more than a yard less per carry than the 4.7 average he compiled in his first two pro seasons, but he figures to get the healthy against his favorite defense. In four career games against New York, Anderson has rushed for 109, 140, 85 and 168 yards and six touchdowns.

The former NFL Rookie of the Year has run for 340 yards this season compared to 258 for the Giants and the Cardinals, 23, come off a 20-17 upset of Dallas. New York, also 3-3, was dominated in a 27-14 loss to Green Bay last week as the Packers held the ball for 41:25 of a possible 60 minutes.

"We'll be facing one of the two best running backs in the league," says New York Coach Ray Perkins of Anderson. "We'll also be facing one of the smartest quarterbacks in the NFL."

New York runners in pre-season — may start at halfback. Rob Carpenter, acquired last week from Houston, will not start but Perkins says Carpenter will see extensive action. "Football, I feel, is basically a game of breaks and we didn't have them last week," says Carpenter of the loss to the Packers. Tri-captain Veteran outfielder Ray Gilha has been selected to serve as a tri-captain with the Eastern Connecticut College baseball team next season.

The Manchester man is the top returning hitter with a .345 average. He cracked out four homers and drove in 34 runs last spring and tied a national college record with six hits against Central Connecticut.

Gilha sat out the 1980 season with injuries.

The 6-3, 195-pound slugger starred at Manchester High before entering ECSC. He played with Moriarty's in the Twilight League several seasons.

Northwest 14-12 winner over East

By Len Auster Herald Sports writer

Both sides made critical mistakes but it was the one which made the most of its opportunities which emerged victorious as Northwest Catholic held off late-charging East Catholic, 14-12, in Hartford County conference football action last night at Mt. Nebo.

The Eagles, trailing 14-0 at one point, rallied a second touchdown with less than 20 seconds remaining on a 15-yard TD aerial from quarterback John Gilbert to Joe Maningas. The latter ripped it out of a defender's grasp in the end zone for the score. A 66-yard toss from Gilbert to Maningas set up the TD. East's attempt at a tying two-point conversion, however, was stopped short as a reverse involving Tim Fesher didn't fool Northwest tackle Sean Hayes, who made the saving stop.

"We wanted him to run it but he just didn't get the corner," a somber East Coach Jude Kelly spoke of the failed conversion bid.

East recovered the second half kickoff, fumbled by Northwest, at the Indian 25. Gilbert, running out of the tailback slot, was headed for an apparent touchdown but lost the handle with Northwest's Joe Lass recovering at the Indian 11.

East came back on its next possession, aided by a pass interference call by Joe Lass, who kept the drive alive, with Sean O'Leary plunging in from a yard out. Gilbert, operating at QB, was stopped short trying to run for an extension.

The Eagles following their second TD recovered an on-sides kick but never got a play off as time ran out for a 14-0 lead.

Celtics win

HARTFORD (UPI) — Larry Bird led off last season's NBA champion Boston Celtics to a 103-84 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers in their exhibition opener.

Bird poured in 15 points in the opening quarter and Kevin McHale added 8 in the second to provide the Celtics with a 47-43 half-time edge. Celtics wing forward Joe Johnson finished with 15 points, while Cedric Maxwell and Robert Parish each added 13 for the Celtics. Erving and Andrew Toney led the 76ers with 24 and 21 points, while Darryl Dawkins added 10.

A crowd of 11,271 attended the game at the Hartford Civic Center.

Sutton recovering

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Houston Astros' pitcher Don Sutton, who fractured his kneecap in game against the Dodgers one week ago, underwent successful surgery Friday morning.

Dr. Frank Jobe performed the surgery at Centinela Hospital. During the two-hour operation, two metal screws were inserted in the kneecap, fusing the broken bone together.

Dick Williams

ATLANTA (UPI) — Dick Williams could turn his dismissal from the Montreal Expos into a financial bonanza.

New York Yankee owner George Steinbrenner has expressed interest in hiring Williams as his manager and Thursday the Atlanta Braves put him at the top of their shopping list after announcing the firing of Bobby Cox.

Neither Steinbrenner nor Braves' owner Ted Turner have been about offering fat contracts to people they want and a bidding war between those two could make Williams baseball's highest-paid manager.

'We'll be facing one of best'

GILMANTON, N.H. (UPI) — When the novel "Peyton Place" was published a quarter century ago this fall, its author Grace Metalious became an outcast in her own town and the target of threats until her death.

"She gave us a lot of unfair, untrue publicity," Mrs. Bryant said. "She took a fact and built a lot of fiction around it."

"The kids at school shied away from us. It was a lonely time," said the Concord, N.H., man who now works as a guard at the New Hampshire Prison.

The book — once a forbidden novel passed around in study halls — has sold more than 10 million copies in at least 10 languages, making it one of the top 100 best sellers on record, according to its publisher, Simon and Schuster.

"Peyton Place" also spawned a movie and a long-running television series.

At the time of the publication, Mrs. Metalious was considered a writer whose subject matter — incest, wife beating and illegitimate children in Any Town U.S.A. — broke new ground.

But the anniversary of the publication has scarcely moved the 1,200 people of Gilmanton, a town about 25 miles south of Laconia. The small community has two general stores, five churches and two post offices.

"So what?" said Donald Cameron, 62. "We read the book. We know the people in it. It's history. Over and done with."

"There's not more or less here because of Grace Metalious," said Sybil Bryant. "The wind still blows."

In the hilltop cemetery where Mrs. Metalious is buried, a cold wind recently whipped the tall, lean trees standing like giant paint brushes dipped in red and orange.

A bare tombstone reads: Metalious, Grace 1924-1964. Mrs. Metalious, who died of alcoholism at the age of 39, left few friends here.

"There's one man who put flowers on her grave. He cares," said Emily Toth, Mrs. Metalious' only biographer. "And there's a woman who was her best friend."

Even after her death, the harassment continued, finally driving away her first husband, George, and her three children.

"There were late night phone calls from anonymous sources saying 'We don't want that bitch buried here,'" said Ms. Toth in a telephone interview from State College, Pa., where she teaches English at Pennsylvania State University. "It was wrong on them."

The resentment came from the "older folks" who preferred to think of their town as "a nice town, which it is," said Mrs. Bryant, a crusty Yankee with short-cropped silver hair.

"I had them a little hankypanky in the back corner, don't air it," she said. "That's no way to make money."

Born and raised in Manchester, N.H., Grace Metalious spent most of her life in Manchester, a desperate poverty," said Ms. Toth. "She wrote for 7 years without publishing anything. She kept a typewriter on her knees because she couldn't afford a typewriter."

She moved to Gilmanton in the 1950s, a few years before the publication of "Peyton Place," the book that made her famous.

"She was very sensitive and generous," Ms. Toth said. "Those qualities are lovable but they were used against her when she got rich. That was part of what drove her to drink. She just couldn't take the pressures of being famous."

"All of a sudden," said Stanley Partell, a clerk at the Village Store, "everybody wanted to get on the hangar. She was making plenty of money and some people wanted to get their hands on it."

Mrs. Metalious wrote three to four novels a year. She was married briefly to T. J. Martin, a divorced Laconia die jockey, and became involved with John Rees, to whom she left her estate.

"As it turned out, she died poor," said Ms. Toth. "She thought there was a lot of money, but taxes and debts bankrupted her."

She was sloppy, eccentric, driven, witty and had bouts of depression, according to those who knew her.

When "Peyton Place" was rejected by a prospective publisher, she "threw a tantrum," Mrs. Bryant said. "I knew the postmistress. The book was rejected three times."

For Karagianis said the last time he saw her at his bookstore in Laconia she was "pretty angry. I didn't even know she was sick. She looked a little puffy but I thought it was from the good life she was living. We all get fat and puffy after awhile, you know."

To a few townsfolk, Mrs. Metalious is still remembered as the one who gave them a bad name. "She gave us a lot of unfair, untrue publicity," Mrs. Bryant said. "She took a fact and built a lot of fiction around it."

At least one character in "Peyton Place" was crafted after someone in Gilmanton: a girl who was raped by her father and later accused of murdering him.

In the novel, the girl was raped by her stepfather because, Ms. Toth said, the editors "insisted it couldn't be her real father."

Purtell said the girl once worked in the Village Store, where one can buy everything from worms and crawlers to ballpoint pens and hamburger.

Most people seem to agree with Christopher Metalious.

I asked her how much time it would cost, and she said $200. I asked her why the doctor couldn't give me only one treatment — I would need a series of 12!

Advice

Chiropractor breaks his patient's temper

DEAR ABBY: I had a back pain in my back, so I picked the name of a chiropractor out of the Yellow Pages and phoned for an appointment.

He spent about half an hour taking X-rays but he didn't even touch my back. He told me to talk to his receptionist about setting up "some appointments." I told him all I wanted was one adjustment to relieve the pain in my back, but he insisted I talk to his receptionist anyway, so I did. He said the doctor couldn't give me just one treatment — I would need a series of 12!

I asked her how much time it would cost, and she said $200. I asked her why the doctor couldn't give me only one treatment while I was there, and she said chiropractors don't work that way. I told her I didn't have that kind of money, and I asked to see the doctor. She said he was "busy," so I started to leave.

She then said, "The X-rays are $25-cash only; we don't accept checks."

I was furious. I threw $50 on her desk and walked out. What I want to know is: Where can a person call or write to complain about this kind of ripoff? It's chiropractors like this one who give the profession a bad name.

MAD IN MICHIGAN
DEAR MAD: There is a State Chiropractic Association in every state. Look in your telephone book under "State of Michigan." Write to the association in Lansing and file a complaint. There are unethical practitioners in every profession, and the ethical ones appreciate it when the unethical ones are reported.

Bell ringer bought

Second Congregational Church, has bought an electric bell ringer for their existing 2,500-pound Meneely Bell, cast in 1889.

The SC-70 electric bell ringer is a development of the I.T. Verdin Co. of Cincinnati, Ohio. The bell ringer consists of a bronze chaper which electronically hits the inside of the bell, creating various bell ringing functions. It will produce the sounds of a swinging bell, tolling bell and also various types of rings at differing intervals, all controlled by an automatic circuit.

Booking mark set

HARTFORD — The Greater Hartford Convention & Visitors Bureau has reported that bookings of future convention business during the month of August were double those of any previous month since the bureau's establishment in 1975.

Bureau sales staff members recorded definite bookings of 37 conventions with an anticipated total attendance of 40,000 persons. In addition, 23 associations made tentative commitments to meet in the Hartford area with an estimated attendance totaling 38,120.

The definite bookings taken in August represent slightly more than $11 million in anticipated future earnings for the Greater Hartford area through convention spending. Because of the high turnover of convention dollars, the Bureau estimates that these bookings will result in about $3 million of added purchasing power for Hartford area residents in future years.

Miller picked

HARTFORD — The Greater Hartford Convention & Visitors Bureau has appointed Cynthia Ann Miller as convention/tourism sales manager. Ms. Miller assumed her new post on Sept. 1.

In her new position, Ms. Miller will be responsible for encouraging group tour business in the Greater Hartford area, establishing contacts with tour operators. She also will represent the bureau and the Hartford area at several travel industry trade shows, and assist bureau member firms wanting to develop tour business.

Ms. Miller is a graduate of Boston College where she earned a bachelor of arts degree in speech communication with a concentration in business. She was the recipient of the Wilbur C. Stable Trust Scholarship and served as senior class chairperson. She was also senior editor of the school yearbook.

In addition, Ms. Miller worked as a marketing and promotion intern in the office of Boston Mayor Kevin White. She assisted the director of marketing in the promotion of city-sponsored programs.

Ms. Miller is a resident of West Hartford.

MIDDLETOWN — Heim Business Forms signed a long-term lease for 8,000 square feet at 70 Tuttle Road, Middletown. The landlord is Coker Realty Inc., Jack and Bud Coker, principals.

Heim Business Forms employs 12 people, operates in all of New England and New York. The additional space was needed to better serve its forms management program.

Jim Wood and Chris Nolan of the H. Pearce Company, Rocky Hill Office, were the sole brokers involved.

Dividend declared

SOUTH WINDSOR — The directors of the South Windsor Bank and Trust Company have declared a 10-cent per share extra cash dividend to be paid to stockholders of record Oct. 1 payable Oct. 30. The extra cash dividend has been declared due to the earnings of the bank during the year 1980 and the results of earnings through the first nine months of 1981.

The bank also announced that earnings for the third quarter ending Sept. 30 amounted to $214,528 with applicable taxes of $59,485, for a net after-tax income of $155,043, which amounted to 73 cents per share. There were net securities losses of $10,386 for a net income after taxes and net securities losses of $144,657, which amounted to 68 cents per share.

Income for the nine-month period ending Sept. 30 amounted to $619,074, with applicable taxes of $161,465, for a net income of $457,609 which amount to $2.15 per share. There were net securities losses of $10,386 for a net income after taxes and net securities losses of $447,203, which amounted to $2.10 per share.

Total assets of the Bank on Sept. 30, were $37,837,700 compared to $33,628,800 on Sept. 30, 1980, an increase of $4,208,900.

Conference set

LITCHFIELD — What every small farmer needs to know about producing farm products will be the theme of the fourth annual Southern New England Farmer's Conference Nov. 7 and 8, at the White Memorial Foundation in Litchfield, Ct.

George A. McCleary, III, agricultural agent with the Litchfield field office of the University of Connecticut Cooperative Extension Service and co-chairman of the event, announced that Oct. 9 is the deadline date for submitting reservations.

The cost for attending the conference is $40 per person for both days and $35 per person for one day only. Checks should be made payable to "SNE Farmers Conference" and sent to McCleary, Farmers Conference, Box 697, Litchfield, Ct. 06026.

The program is being sponsored by the UConn Extension Service, Connecticut Small Farmers Association, the Western Connecticut Farmers' Cooperative and the New England Small Farmers Project.

The conference is open to anyone in southern New England who is involved in farm production for home consumption and for farm markets and roadside stands. Its purposes are to provide practical experience on various aspects of growing agricultural products and to provide opportunities for sharing experiences with other farmers.

Attends convention

HARTFORD — Mary C. Clemente of East Hartford, assistant corporate secretary, Society for Savings, attended the 59th Annual Convention of the National Association of Bank Women, Inc.

"Banking '81: Capitalize on Change" was held Sept. 27-30 at the Hyatt Regency, Chicago. Convention sessions, attended by more than 1,200 bankers, focused on the latest economic, legislative, and technological developments affecting the banking industry and their ramifications for banks and bankers.

NEW YORK — Business is paying increasing attention to the Third World as a marketplace with unlimited potential.

The 130 developing countries already contain 2.4 billion people or 51 percent of the planet's population and make up one-third of its area. By the year 2,000, it is calculated, they will have 57 percent of a global population of 6 billion.

By contrast, only 673 million persons — roughly 16 percent of the world's populace — live in Japan and the western industrialized countries.

These figures indicate that, by the end of the century, there will be 3.5 billion virgin consumers in the Third World and five times as many total customers as in the western industrialized nations.

The term Third World means those countries either not industrialized or not involved in the Soviet or Chinese orbits. It therefore includes Yugoslavia, which is communist but independent and not yet fully industrialized.

The Third World countries have things both the industrialized west and the Soviet and Chinese blocs need — oil, manganese, tungsten, bauxite and copper for example.

Grey Matter, a research periodical of Grey Advertising, Inc., recently published an article about the Third World and U. S. business.

The Grey research points up many examples of arrogance, greed, miscalculation and plain stupidity by the multinationals in their operations. It lists such things as the sale of worn and outmoded equipment at inflated prices, general overcharging for goods and services, prohibiting host countries from reselling manufactured goods to neighboring countries, refusing transfer of technology and taking advantage of lax incentives, then pulling out as soon as the incentives expire.

The developing governments now have retaliated by imposing very stern conditions in multinational operations, Grey said. In general, each new operation must be shown to have a beneficial effect on the host country's balance of payments, it must be fairly labor intensive, it must utilize local resources and it must bring in technology.

The Third World is not yet a viable market for imported consumer manufactured goods, Grey said. "People who cannot afford a loaf of bread are in no position to buy toasters."

In addition to these straight economic strictures, the multinational companies must cope with language, religious and social obstacles, the oft-repeated risk of revolution and the ubiquitous custom of commercial bribery in these lands. There also are the problems created by a staggering lack of reliable information, tremendous shortages of skilled workers and prejudices of both bureaucrats and the people against middle men, plus a general lack of adequate banking and business loan facilities.

Grey listed as the "ten best" of the Third World countries from the standpoint of ready penetration by American multinationals, Mexico, Singapore, Taiwan, Venezuela, Yugoslavia, Argentina, Indonesia, Malaysia, Zimbabwe and Nigeria.

The ten worst, Bangladesh, Nepal, Somalia, Sierra Leone, Benin, Tanzania, Haiti, Uganda, Senegal and Ghana.

Stock prices fall despite good news

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks, which have gotten off to a strong October start, took a breather Friday with prices falling while investors cashed in on recent profits despite some favorable inflation news. Trading was moderately active.

Dean Witter Reynolds was the star of the session, scoring an impressive gain in heavy trading after agreeing late Thursday to merge with Sears, Roebuck in a $607 million cashstock deal. The rest of the list struggled.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a 9.42-point winner, dropped 5.14 points to 873 after seasawing throughout the day. But it finished the week ahead 12.27 points.

Prior to Friday, the Dow average of 30 blue-chip stocks had climbed 54.13 points from its Sept. 24 low of 824 in a strong rally fueled by lower interest rates.

Technical analysts such as Kidder Peabody's Ralph Acampora said, "The market is acting normally. It's had a big run up and now it's pausing. There's nothing unusual about that."
