Two strikes held in Poland

By Ruth E. Gruber
United Press International

WARSAW, Poland — Seven thousand workers occupied a steel mill and parts of an auto plant today in the first strikes-defying government threats to execute strikers under Poland's newly imposed martial law.

There were unconfirmed reports of similar strikes in at least two other factories despite the government's execution threats.

The White House reported today that calm seemed to be prevailing in Poland.

Union chief Lech Walesa, all but a hostage of the new martial law government, was flown to Warsaw for talks with government leaders who were trying to persuade him to appear on national television.

The source, who traveled to Warsaw from Gdansk Sunday, said the birthplace of Solidarity in August 1980, would be a national headquarters.

The source said Solidarity activists still at large in Gdansk, including Union Vice Chairman Miroslaw Krupinski, had asked two representatives from each of Solidarity's 38 regions to come to the shipyard.

Workers at the FSO auto plant in Warsaw said at least two departments of the factory were occupied by workers.

The strikes today came despite an emotional appeal by Roman Catholic Archbishop Jozef Glemp for obedience to the martial law in order to prevent civil war and bloodshed.

A Solidarity source said activists were worried that the military would persuade Walesa to appear on national television.

The source said that Walesa were to appear in a factory as a witness would work was not made under pressure.

In the strike at the Wroclaw plant, a Solidarity member led 1,000 men on the first day to appear for work.

"He is totally alone, he is exhausted. They could use psychological warfare and he could say anything," one source said. "They could make him any promise."

A source from the outlawed Solidarity union said the Warsaw Steel mill where, unlike other factories, union chapter leaders had not all been arrested, would be a "strike headquarters" for the Warsaw area.

Metheney gets the maximum

By Scot French
Herald Reporter

Describing the act as one of "despicable racism," Hartford County Superior Court Judge Milton A. Fishman today sentenced convicted firebombing Charles Norman Metheney to a maximum prison term of five to 10 years.

Metheney, 20, betrayed no emotion as Fishman delivered the sentence. The West Virginia native has been at Litchfield State Prison since his arrest in connection with the Oct. 2, 1980 firebombing of a black family's Manchester home.

"That kind of act is not only reprehensible and life-threatening, but in this particular case, it is evidence of despicable racism," Fishman told the court.

"This kind of behavior can have no place in our society today."

Fishman said the sentence should act as a deterrent "for anyone who might have the slightest inclination for this kind of behavior."

John Byrne, Metheney's court-appointed attorney, asked the court to disregard the public notoriety surrounding the case and consider only the facts of the incident, which have been a source of dispute among the participants. Both Eugene R. Gilliland, 19, and Eric A. Donze, 19, have said that Metheney threw the molotov cocktail. However, Metheney has denied that charge, saying he ran before seeing who threw the bomb.

"Certainly the whole thing was a senseless, foolish thing," Byrne said. "There's no doubt an unfortunate incident has occurred."

However, Byrne asked that Metheney be given a sentence no more severe than that of Gilliland, who is also scheduled to be sentenced today.

Byrne disputed the claim that Metheney had thrown the bomb after being advised to do so by the others.

"I find that approach somewhat difficult to accept and the federal jury that heard the case before found that difficult to accept. What difference does it make who did what? This occurred."

Byrne said the case should not be considered in connection with Manchester's problems surrounding the recently resolved case in which Legal Aid attorneys and the U.S. Justice Department charged the town with racism in connection with its 1979 withdrawal form the Community Development Block Grant program.

None of the victims of the firebombing were present in court at the time of the sentencing.

State's Attorney Kevin McMahon said the explosion caused $16,000 in damages and had caused irreparable psychological harm to one of the children who was struck slightly by the firebomb.

The sentencing brings to a close an episode which clearly rocked a town already reeling from charges of racial

About 350 demonstrators marched outside the Polish consulate in Chicago, Sunday to protest martial law in their homeland. Chicago's Polish community numbers an estimated 600,000, making it the largest Polish community outside Warsaw.

The emotional rally was organized to express outrage, quietly and peacefully, at the "incredible obstructions the communist government has put in front of reformers," according to a spokesman for the group.

Thousands of supporters of Solidarity demonstrated in eight cities across Western Europe to protest the ban on the union. Polish pilgrims wept before Pope John Paul, Austria dropped refugee restrictions and government leaders warned the Soviet Union against intervention.

In Moscow, the Kremlin welcomed Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's crackdown. His speech and details of the restrictions intended "to restore public order and calm in the country" were summarized on Soviet television.

In Communist Eastern Europe, the crisis in Poland was reported without comment — or not reported at all, but maverick Yugoslavia noted Poland must solve its own problem.

In Washington, President Reagan warned the Soviet Union not to interfere in the affairs of its Eastern European neighbor.

After Poland's government declared a state of emergency and imposed martial law Sunday, crowds turned out in protest in New York, Paris, Vienna, London, Brussels, Milan, Rome, Lisbon and Athens.

In the Vatican, thousands of tearful pilgrims heard Polish-born Pope John Paul II plead for a peaceful end to the crisis.

"Polish blood cannot be spilled, because too much has already been spilled ... everything must be done to peacefully build the future of our homeland," he said.

Reagan, returning from the presidential retreat, Camp David, said Moscow has been warned "several times" by "almost all of the Free World" not to intervene in the Polish crisis.

"We've made it plain how seriously we would view any interference" by the Soviets, he said.

A special group of security advisers met at the White House shortly after Reagan returned from Camp David.

Secretary of State Alexander Haig cut short a worldwide tour of American allies taking him to the Midwest and Asia to return to Washington today for urgent talks on the Polish situation.

Low turnout predicted in Tuesday primary

By Paul Hendrie

Republicans in Manchester who are eligible to vote Tuesday. Voting will be conducted in all the usual polling places and the polls will be open from noon until 8 p.m.

Colleen Howe, a Glastonbury businesswoman and the wife of retired hockey star Gordie Howe, picked up some last minute support Sunday from another all-time hockey great, Bobby Orr.

"I haven't made a habit of endorsing people just for the sake of endorsing them," said the former Boston Bruins defenseman. "Colleen is a woman who gets things done. I like the way she goes at things."

Locally, Wallace J. Irish, a member of the Republican Town Committee and a coordinator for the Uccello campaign, predicted the former Hartford mayor will win the primary.

"If Ann Uccello doesn't win, I'd be very disappointed," said Irish. "With such a short calendar, even though Ann hasn't been actively involved politically in recent years, she was always a very, very popular woman and she still has political name recognition."

"The Howe name also has name recognition, but it's not political name recognition."

Irish predicted a very tight race and he said that Miss Uccello.

"I just can't see Colleen that many bases in the district in that race," he said.

Irish said Miss Uccello stronger in the area against the Democratic Secretary of the State, Kennedy.

Locally, violence feared

By Nancy Thompson
Herald Reporter

Local residents of Polish descent said they were not surprised by the weekend's events in Poland — and they will not be surprised if the situation leads to bloodshed.

"I expected it," said Olga Sullivan, a Manchester woman of Polish heritage who visited Poland this summer.

"They're a proud and sovereign people. They have been trampled on too long."

"I think there's going to be bloodshed before it's through," she added.

Father Walter Hysko of St. John's Polish National Catholic Church at 23 Golway St. agreed with Mrs. Sullivan's assessment.

"There's definitely going to be bloodshed because they've been suffering too much," he said.

Father Hysko said he believes the church in Poland is doing the right thing by encouraging the people to go along with the rules imposed under martial law and not go out on strike.

"I would like them to have a sincere meeting of all groups," he said. "I don't think that has happened."

"I feel it's a rather dangerous situation and it needs the cooperation of all the people," he added.

"When people are hungry, when they don't have any work, they will do anything, go to any extreme — even bloodshed," he said. "People don't want to see their children starve."

Mrs. Sullivan agreed that the food situation has contributed to the Poles' willingness to protest activity.

When she was in Poland in June, people had to wait in line for several hours to get food, she said. Often the stores ran out of supplies before people could buy needed goods, she added.

Mrs. Sullivan said she sent four boxes of food and clothing to friends in Poland last week, after she received a letter from them saying the situation had not improved since summer.

"I think they would go along (with martial law) if they weren't starved," she said. "They're a very proud people, but they are trampled on like you wouldn't believe."

"How much standing in line can people take in the cold? There's a limit as to how much people can take."

Jean Vecchio, a former officer of the Polish Women's Alliance, said "All the Polish people (in Manchester) are upset."

Mrs. Vecchio predicted the situation will come to bloodshed. "I think they're going to fight each other — the Poles will fight the Poles, just like in Ireland," she said.

Manchester Town Clerk Edward Tomkiel, who has relatives in Poland, said the church will probably have a mitigating effect on the situation.

Colleen Howe's supporters claim their campaign is building momentum, which they predict will bring Mrs. Howe the Republican 1st Congressional District nomination in Tuesday's primary.

News Briefing

Crisis sends dollar soaring

LONDON (UPI) — The crisis in Poland sent both the dollar and the price of gold soaring today when European foreign exchange markets opened after the weekend.

"News that military rule had been imposed in Poland prompted a nervous and active start on foreign exchange markets today," a dealer for Barclays Bank International said. "The dollar was very firm behind the news but has slipped back from best opening levels after the first hour."

In Frankfurt, the dollar opened sharply higher at 2.315 marks, up from Friday's closing price of 2.257 marks, and in Zurich, it began trading at 1.878 Swiss francs, compared with 1.835 francs Friday.

The U.S. currency opened higher in Paris at 6.800 French francs, against Friday's closing price of 5.746 francs, and in Milan it began trading at 1.239 lire, up from 1.208.56 lire Friday.

Gold began trading at $421.50 an ounce in Zurich and London, up from Friday's close in Zurich of $410.50 and $411 in London.

Blizzards hit Britain

LONDON (UPI) — Blizzards fanned by bone-chilling winds turned Britain into a "great disaster area" today.

From craggy Land's End to the eastern plains it was a tale of blocked roads and railways, power lines felled by the weight of snow and hundreds of towns and villages isolated.

Storms in the English Channel claimed two lives, lifeboats and helicopters rescued 35 people — including four women and children — from the 10,000-ton Ecuadorian freighter, Bonta. The vessel was abandoned and listing at 50 degrees in storm-force winds and driving snows.

One crewman drowned in the rescue attempt and another sailor died when a fishing boat went down near Newhaven on the south coast.

Southwestern England bore the brunt of the snows. Every road over a 150-mile area was blocked and power cuts blacked out scores of communities. Central Wales was at a standstill.

"It's a giant disaster area. With all the elements combined, conditions are as bad as can be imagined," a spokesman for a motoring organization said.

In Wiltshire, the army mobilized its Arctic warfare unit to ferry emergency cases to hospital by snowmobile.

Trash piles up in N.Y.

NEW YORK (UPI) — People who wanted to take a bite of the Big Apple today had to hold their noses first.

Piles of garbage up to 10 feet high were scattered along city sidewalks, some of the more than 90,000 tons of trash that has accumulated since private garbage collectors went on strike 13 days ago.

Rats were feasting on the trash in some places. Tourists posed for pictures in front of it. And one Manhattan restaurant was treating the problem with a festive approach — putting holiday ribbons on it.

The debris, pouring out of tattered plastic bags in many cases, is being stored on rooftops, in basements and backyards and on the streets and sidewalks.

One city official said Sunday some hurried store owners are carrying it away a few bags at a time to places like New Jersey and Westchester County in a kind of "overland express."

Contract talks between Local 813 of the Teamsters union and representatives of nearly 500 private carting companies collapsed early today when a state mediator declared an impasse over an unspecified issue.

The strike has led comedian Henry Youngman to propose the garbage be wrapped as Christmas gifts to encourage thieves to steal it.

Because of the strike, city sanitation crews spent the weekend cleaning up about 25,000 plastic bags filled with garbage and trash that had been lying in the basement of just one commercial building on Broadway.

Rand: Special ed harmful

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Special education programs designed to help poor, minority and handicapped children may in fact disrupt learning, a Rand Corp. study released today said.

Disadvantaged students are pulled out of their regular classes two or three times a day to receive compensatory reading and math instruction and classes for their learning disabilities, the Rand study said.

Instead of learning from the special ed classes, however, the study found that students frequently become confused and were unable to learn because of incompatible teaching methods. In addition, the study said, some minority children in desegregated schools were being inadvertently segregated.

Researchers James Kimbrough and Paul Hill surveyed 24 elementary schools in eight districts across the country to complete the report for Rand, a non-profit think tank.

In some districts, Ms. Kimbrough and Hill said, so much attention was placed on special remedial programs for reading and math that subjects like geography, science and health were not taught.

Migrant Hispanics were most affected by being pulled out of class for special studies, they said.

The Rand report said other students in special education programs were similarly affected.

Producer Sylvio Tabet used endangered species like Bengal tigers and golden eagles in location scenes for his adventure movie "The Beastmaster."

His star, Marc Singer, observed, "Sylvio is also importing another kind of endangered species into film — the script calls for a lot of virgins to be thrown from a pyramid."

Deaf Santa

More than 200 deaf and hearing impaired children in Memphis, Tenn., got to "tell" Santa what they want for Christmas.

E. Leonard Asbridge, a retired newspaper printer who also is deaf, played the role of St. Nick in the Silent Santa program at Libertyland amusement park, which also put on a presentation of "The Night Before Christmas" by a deaf acting troupe.

Using sign language and an interpreter for younger children who had not learned to "sign," Santa took the youngsters on his knee and asked what presents they wanted. The kids wanted dolls, the boys race cars.

Ugly hero

Hal Linden, the only remaining member of the original cast of "Barney Miller," nearly didn't get the role in the first place. The show's producer, Danny Arnold, told TV host John Davidson that network executives fiercely opposed Linden "because he had gray hair, a broken nose, a mustache and was Jewish."

Linden himself said his police lieutenant role has never helped him in real life. The only time he has been stopped for a traffic violation was "by a cop in Utah who didn't watch television."

Carlene Carter, country singer daughter of June Carter and stepdaughter of Johnny Cash, was asked by Forum magazine whether she regrets marrying for the first time at age 15.

"No, I'm really glad," she says. "Because I got this great kid only 16 years younger than me. I have this film — I'm going to be the youngest grandmother."

But she adds, "you get married then either because you're stupid or you're pregnant. Unfortunately I was both."

Not many people can get a standing ovation before they walk on stage but Liza Minnelli did early Sunday. And it was a tough audience, too — show biz professionals at Las Vegas' Flamingo. She sang and danced almost 1 1/2 hours as she belted out songs from "Cabaret" and "New York" and her favorite "Rose."

It was her way of closing a two-week engagement and it made her the first entertainer in recent years to perform in the early morning hours for fellow "strip" entertainers who otherwise cannot see superstars because they themselves are on stage or behind stage at the same showtime hours at other hotels up and down the Las Vegas "strip."

Billy Carter says he still considers Col. Moammi Khadafi a close friend despite reports the Libyan strongman sent an assassination team to kill the president and other top U.S. officials.

But she adds, "you get married then either because you're stupid or you're pregnant. Unfortunately I was both."

During his brother's term as president, Carter worked for Khadafi as a lobbyist to improve Libya's image in the United States and on Capitol Hill.

"My friends in Libya are still my friends," Carter said while in Shreveport, La., for a singer

Biggest moth assault seen

By United Press International

If you thought last year's assault of the leaf-munching gypsy moth caterpillar was bad, next year's onslaught could make 1981 seem like a minor skirmish, Rhode Island environmental officials predict.

And officials say there is little property owners can do to fend off the pesky leaf eaters.

Just-completed surveys of egg masses the insects deposited in the summer show that all or parts of 32 of Rhode Island's 39 cities and towns are heavily infested, said Robert J. Reilly, an entomologist on the staff of the state Department of Environmental Management.

A heavily infested area is one in which there are 500,000 more egg masses per acre.

DEM predicts that up to 300,000 acres will be affected by next spring. Last spring's gypsy moth outbreak was confined to about 50,000 acres in 13 communities in the northern and western part of the state.

The only communities that may escape the brown timeline covering of gypsy moths on trees are Newport, Portsmouth, Middletown, Little Compton, Jamestown, Block Island and Central Falls.

"We are getting at least five calls a day from homeowners who want to know what they can do now," Reilly said. "There's little local officials can offer worried homeowners, he said."

The five-man, seven-woman Superior Court jury today faced the first day of what is expected to be a week-long penalty phase in the trial of the 22-year-old killer, Sarah Ribicoff.

A second defendant in the case, Anthony McAdoe, pleaded guilty to the murder in August in a plea bargain arrangement that spared him the death penalty. He faced sentencing today.

The panel deliberated three days last week before returning guilty verdicts Thursday against Thomas for the slaying of Miss Ribicoff, an editorial writer at the Los Angeles Herald Examiner.

Thomas was also convicted of using a gun and robbery while committing first-degree murder — special circumstances that under California law allow for the death penalty.

During the penalty phase of the trial, the panel will decide whether Thomas will be executed or sentenced to life in prison.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — The same jury that last week convicted Frederick J. Thomas of murdering the niece of former U.S. Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., now decides if the killer should be executed in the gas chamber.

Tomkiel's 25 years

By Scot French Herald Reporter

I want to raise bees. Who do I register with?

The IRS has attached my property. Who do I call?

I need an absentee ballot. Where do I get one?

For 25 years, Town Clerk Edward J. Tomkiel has made it his business to answer questions like these — or at least to help find someone who can.

"I don't think there's any person who has left this office that didn't find an answer or solution," says Tomkiel, 51, who has just celebrated his silver anniversary as the town's chief information officer.

Over the years, Tomkiel has fielded questions ranging from the sublime to the ridiculous.

Where do I get a sales and use tax number? When are they going to pick up the lenses? What hour was I born in?

Yet, Tomkiel answers them all with the patience and good grace of a governmental guru leading his subjects to an informational holy grail.

"The best part of the job is meeting with the public," Tomkiel says in a moment of reflection. "You get a certain joy out of it."

He warmly recalls such incidents as helping an elderly person find some necessary papers, locating lost relatives to deliver bequests, and securing birth certificates for immigrants from as far away as Ireland, Scotland, Poland and the Soviet Union.

It was Tomkiel's role in dealing with the public as an assistant branch manager for Manchester Trust Co. Then the town's only commercial bank, that initially propelled him into the office he has held since Eisenhower was president.

From the beginning of time — or at least the beginning of Manchester — until 1966, the Democrats had been locked out of majority power by the powerful Republican party.

However, 1966 presented the Democrats with a unique opportunity to chase away at the power bloc. Republican Town Clerk Samuel J. Turkington died during the previous term and his son, temporarily appointed to fill the position, was nominated by the Republicans to carry the banner in the next election.

The Democratic Town Committee nominated Tomkiel, a political novice, to run for the town clerk's position. Tomkiel's backers hoped his public exposure as a banker would make him a strong candidate embarrassed by the political nature of what he considers a rather apolitical job.

"I work for the Democratic party because they are the party that nominated me," he says, "but I think my stronger affiliation is with the town of Manchester and the state of Connecticut."

Of the many awards and honors bestowed upon him over the years, Tomkiel is most proud of a Community Service Award from the Chamber of Commerce which describes him as "a true non-political politician."

Tomkiel echoes those sentiments in his own view of the job, displaying an unswerving about the political aspects of the position.

"I hate to be called a politician, but I guess I am," he says. As an elected official, he explains, "You walk the tight rope. I think you relate to the public a little more than a civil servant."

He hastily adds, however, that most civil servants are equally conscientious and that it "depends upon the person. I don't know any other way."

THEODORE R. CUMMINGS, chairman of the Democratic Town Committee, suggests that although the forces of tradition have kept the office elective, the town clerk's position is really political.

"We call Ed everybody's town clerk," says Cummings. "He helps everyone and politics doesn't enter the job."

Yet, Cummings is not about to suggest that the town clerk's position be removed from the political arena, a move which would strip the Democratic party of one of its top ticket attractions.

The Republicans are also acutely aware of Tomkiel's popularity and this year nominated him on their own ticket after unsuccessfully opposing him in the past.

Required homework, curriculum on agenda

The emphasis is on academics for tonight's Board of Education meeting.

The board is scheduled to discuss and possibly vote on a policy to make homework mandatory for all students. Tonight's agenda also includes a presentation from the Manchester High School Faculty Curriculum Committee on proposed changes in the high school curriculum.

The board will meet at 8 p.m. in the administrative building at 45 N. School St.

The mandatory homework policy was introduced to the Board of Education last month. The policy, which was designed by a parent-teacher committee headed by Douglas Townesend, principal of Bentley School, would make specific amounts of homework required for all students.

The amounts range from "occasionally" at the kindergarten level to 50 minutes, four times per week at grade six to one minute of homework for each minute of class time at the high school level.

Some members of the board questioned whether the policy could be applied across the board at the high school level, or whether some students may end up with heavier loads than others who are enrolled in vocational or arts courses.

Manchester High School Principal Jacob Ludes III said the policy contains enough flexibility to apply it to all subjects.

In other business, the board will take up the MHS Faculty Curriculum Committee report, which was first heard last January. Some parts of the report, including an increase in the number of social studies credits required for graduation, have already been implemented.

The report also recommends raising the science requirement by one-half credit and increasing graduation requirements to 18 credits.

In addition, the report recommends increasing the number of science courses available, along with increasing the science requirement, adding a course in health, and reinstating the teaching of Latin in vocational or arts courses.

Other recommendations contained in the report, such as a change in the computation of class rank, maintaining present math and English requirements, and advising college-bound students to take two years of foreign language study, did not require action by the Board of Education.

MHS teacher Lee Hay and Ludes are scheduled to present the committee's report to the board tonight.

Local literacy class planned

Local volunteers are working with the Literacy Volunteers of Connecticut and Manchester Community College to set up a tutoring program.

The two groups sponsored an introductory program on Literacy Volunteers two weeks ago. The guest speaker was Julia Stone, state director of Literacy Volunteers, a private, non-profit organization that trains volunteers to tutor adults in reading, writing and conversational English.

About 20 people attended the meeting, a spokesman for the Literacy Volunteers said. A steering committee MCV and Literacy Volunteers are working cooperatively on a local program.

The Literacy Volunteers program in Hartford has included the Manchester area but, due to the increasing number of students and tutors, a separate program is being set up.

For more information, contact Literacy Volunteers at 236-1466.

Funds misuse probe clears Baldrige

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige may be more prone to fly commercial planes — now that one of his government trips prompted a federal investigation and a tip on disclosure.

Internal investigators cleared Baldrige of allegations he misused taxpayers' money by spending $11,243 to charter a jet for an Arizona meeting with a business group last week.

however, found that would have "precluded" Baldrige meeting evening appointments in Tucson. Disclosure of the inquiry into Baldrige's trip was made in Freedom of Information documents obtained by United Press International.

At the time, Baldrige's spokesman argued charting the plane was necessary because the secretary was required to testify to a congressional committee on the afternoon of Feb. 19, and wanted to be in Tucson that night.

Baldrige also told the internal investigators he needed to take the private flight so he could return to Washington early enough on Feb. 20 to work the following day.

MALCOLM BALDRIGE violated travel rules

Congress winds up session

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The 97th Congress, which gave President Reagan the bulk of his proposed economic recovery program, plans to finish its first session this week and go home for the Christmas holidays.

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker said there was a "slim chance" Congress would close up shop today on a Wednesday or Thursday shutdown date more likely.

Last Friday, Congress completed action on the final "must" bill of the session when it approved a resolution providing interim funds for departments and agencies that have not received their fiscal 1982 appropriations.

Reagan is certain to sign the resolution that cuts $4 billion from the fiscal 1982 budget. Enactment of the measure would avert a repeat of the Nov. 23 temporary shutdown of the government.

Although Congress could have easily adjourned last Friday, Senate and House leaders allowed the session to spill over into this week primarily to pass the fiscal 1982 military appropriations bill.

Baker called the defense measure the "last big item" and it was understood Reagan wanted passage before adjournment.

House-Senate negotiators were set to work out a compromise so the bill could be approved today in the House and, perhaps as early as that, in the Senate.

The Senate voted a record $28.7 billion, $1 billion more than the administration requested.

Despite the difference in the totals, the Senate and House already are in agreement on the go-ahead for the MX intercontinental missile system, the B-1 bomber and the radarless "Stealth" bomber — along with billions for airplanes, warships, tanks, missiles and other sophisticated military hardware.

Another major measure — which Congress would like to adopt but could not put off — deals with Social Security.

The Senate and House are in agreement on legislation that would keep paying minimum Social Security benefits of $122 a month for about 3 million older Americans who would otherwise lose them in March.

The bill also allows the three Social Security trust funds to borrow from each other.

Congress has until March to act, but pressure is coming from the Social Security Administration that plans to send out cut-off notices as early as Jan. 6.

The House must act on the compromise farm bill, approved by the Senate last week, or the 1981 farm act would go into effect Dec. 31, boosting prices beyond current levels.

Daughter-in-law of Sakharov gets exit visa

MOSCOW (UPI) — Andrei Sakharov's daughter-in-law today received the exit visa for which the Nobel Peace Prize laureate and his wife staged a dramatic and defiant 17-day hunger strike.

Lisa Alexeyeva, 26, was handed a green exit visa that requires her to leave the Soviet Union within a week. She also exchanged her internal Soviet passport for a red leather document identifying her as one of the few citizens permitted to travel abroad.

Miss Alexeyeva said she will be leaving for the United States before next Monday, but not before Wednesday of this week, when Sakharov's wife, Yelena Bonner, plans to return to Moscow from Gorky.

Miss Alexeyeva said she was surprised that officials at OVR, the agency that deals with emigration matters, did not strip her of Soviet citizenship on the spot.

"They know very well that I don't intend to return," she said.

It was disclosed earlier that Soviet secret police threatened to force her to a near-comatose Sakharov and his wife during their hunger strike, but the couple now is being nourished back to health with apple juice, grated apples and carrots.

The first eyewitness account of the Sakharovs' health came Sunday from Miss Alexeyeva, who had an emotional three-hour reunion with them in their Gorky hospital room.

Miss Alexeyeva, on whose behalf the Sakharovs began their protest fast Nov. 22, will be going to the United States to be with her husband by proxy, Mrs. Bonner's son.

Miss Alexeyeva and a Sakharov family friend, Natalia Gessa, returned to Moscow after a one-day trip to Gorky to verify reports by the KGB secret police that Sakharov and Mrs. Bonner were recuperating from their fast.

She revealed for the first time that they were nearly comatose when officials took them Dec. 4 from the apartment where Sakharov has lived since his banishment in January 1980.

Sakharov and his wife were put in different rooms in the Semashko hospital and told they would be forcibly fed if they did not end their protest.

But finally, Miss Alexeyeva said, KGB Major Igor P. Ryabinin told the nation's leading dissident on Dec. 8 of the decision to let his daughter-in-law leave the Soviet Union.

They agreed to end the strike as soon as they received independent confirmation, she said.

That came the next day when Sakharov and Mrs. Bonner heard Western radio broadcasts reporting that Miss Alexeyeva had been told by the Moscow KGB she would be allowed to go to the United States.

Since then, Sakharov and his wife have been eating grated apples and carrots and drinking grape juice.

Miss Alexeyeva said they appeared thin, weak and slumped when she saw them — but Sakharov's inner vitality was still with him.

"Sakharov was having his blood pressure taken when we went into the room," Miss Alexeyeva said. "When he saw me, he jumped up out of the chair and wrapped his arms around us, saying 'Lisa, Natalia, my family.'"

Paycheck faces sex charge

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Country singer Johnny Paycheck, whose song "Take This Job and Shove It" became a blue-collar anthem, faced charges today for having sexual relations with a 12-year-old girl in Wyoming last year.

Sheriff Wyman Basinger said Paycheck, 43, was arrested Sunday a few hours after giving a free concert at the Missouri State Penitentiary. He was scheduled to appear in Cole County Circuit Court today to have bond set and discuss extradition.

Paycheck spent the night in the crowded county jail, sharing a cell with four other prisoners, after he was fingerprinted, photographed and booked on a warrant from Natrona County, Wyo., charging him with sexual assault of a minor.

"I can't get too specific, but he had some sexual relations with a female child about 12 years of age, at a home here in Casper," Natrona County Attorney Burt Guetz said.

Asked if the alleged sexual act were voluntary, the prosecutor said: "It would be closer to statutory rape."

Guetz said the home belonged to a Casper resident and the alleged incident occurred last spring. Paycheck performed in Casper in April.

At the jail Sunday, Paycheck agreed to meet with a UPI reporter but refused to discuss the circumstances of his arrest.

Wearing a gray county jail uniform and slippers, Paycheck appeared calm, smoking cigarettes and drinking coffee as he talked. He said he was in the city with seven members of his group, and that, "We had a good concert (at the penitentiary). We had a good one."

Paycheck spent two years in a New Hampshire federal prison on desertion and escape charges in the 1960s. In the lean days before he made a name for himself as a singer and songwriter in Nashville, he was convicted of bouncing checks and theft.

He has spoken frankly in interviews about his troubles with drugs, drink and the law, and singing about them in songs like "Cocaine Train," "Fifteen Years" and "Eleven Months and 29 Days," about a sentence he served for forgery.

His most recent trouble with the law occurred on a plane from Denver to Wyoming that was halted on the runway so Paycheck and a band member could be ejected at a stewardess' request. A Frontier Airlines spokesman said she complained of "physical contact with a flight attendant and indecent language."

"Paycheck" was a question by police about the incident and released.

Patrolman Bob Riebold said two officers from the Wyoming Bureau of Investigation arrived in the city early Sunday to give the warrant to the Penitentiary Department.

Police arrested Paycheck at a Holiday Inn about 6:30 p.m. Sunday, after he arrived on his luxury bus from the penitentiary. Authorities said the arrest was delayed until after the concert, which was closed to the news media and public, to avoid trouble with the inmates at the penitentiary.

The members of Paycheck's group told police that the singer has numerous problems with allegations because of his celebrity status.

They agreed to end the strike as soon as they received independent confirmation, she said.

Citizen involvement key to new town plan

By Lisa Zowada Herald Reporter

Community involvement in the process of updating Manchester's 18-year-old Comprehensive Plan of Development will give the town "a much better product" than the work that might be done by an outside consultant, says Paul Sebestyen, the Planning Department aide coordinating the project.

"We don't want something that will sit on a shelf and never be looked at after it's completed," said Sebestyen. "The Planning Department felt community involvement was vital for the plan."

Comprehensive plans, which are mandated by state law, are usually prepared by a consultant hired by the town. Manchester's current Comprehensive Plan was done in 1963 by a consultant.

As a result of having the plan prepared by an outside party, the 1963 version, Sebestyen said, is not very useful, and consequently was never kept up-to-date.

The revised plan, which must be adopted ultimately by the Planning and Zoning Commission, is intended to guide the town's development for the next two decades.

Sebestyen said he thinks the plan will be "an active document," and hopes to aid that goal by organizing the plan in such a way so that it will be easy to revise.

He added that once adopted, the plan would be updated every three to four years.

Citizen subcommittees, which include bankers, real estate personnel and other interested residents, began meeting earlier this year to prepare reports.

Two subcommittees, open space and housing, have completed their work.

The remaining four subcommittees, including utilities, economic development, community facilities and transportation, are still meeting and should finish their reports soon after the first of the year, said Sebestyen.

After such subcommittee produces its separate recommendations, all will jointly meet to iron out any differences. The Planning Department will then make its recommendations and a complete report should be ready to go before the Planning and Zoning Commission by June.

There will also be several public hearings on the subcommittee reports, Sebestyen said, and a final version of the Comprehensive Plan is expected to be completed by next December.

Sebestyen said having teams of experts studying separate aspects of town development and then having them sit down and resolve the differences will make for a plan which will reflect every interest group in the community.

"It makes for better teamwork, for development that represents what the people want," he said.

Sebestyen said he hopes the plan will be used as a guide by outside developers who decide to build in Manchester.

Sebestyen acknowledged the fact that there will have to be some compromise among the subcommittees before their reports go to the Planning Department.

One subcommittee's recommendation is almost certain to be questioned, said Sebestyen. The open space subcommittee recommended in its final report that a 400-foot buffer zone be required between streams, wetlands and floodplains and development of any kind, a recommendation which the economic development and housing committees are certain to object to, he said.

A town ordinance currently requires a 50-foot buffer zone around streams and rivers.

The open space subcommittee has also recommended that the town-owned gravel pit along Tolland Turnpike and Union Pond, which the town may turn into an industrial park, be retained by the town as open space and not sold.

Other recommendations include the expansion of Case Mountain area through the acquisition of additional acreage along Birch Mountain Road and the adoption of an aquifer protection zone.

The housing subcommittee has also completed its report. The report calls for an easing of zoning and subdivision regulations in order to stimulate more housing.

One family's Christmas tree adventures

Buying the Christmas tree is an annual domestic adventure without parallel. The old-fashioned Christmas cards often show a long figure dragging a fir or hemlock through the snow, presumably headed for home and for universal approval.

Actually the selection should never be entrusted to a single member of the family. Any person who would take it upon himself to make a unilateral decision about what kind, size, and shape tree will be accepted by other family members is out of his mind.

Ideally the choice should result from a consensus among all family members, arrived at in the field and binding for the entire season on all involved. At the very least the job requires a minimum of two, each sworn in advance to defend his mutual choice against all critics even unto the new year.

Our living room, with its wood floor, high ceiling, and sparsely of furniture, gave us over the past years great latitude in tree selection, and the mistress of the house tended to favor trees of great latitude.

Holiday guests are drawn to the house of course by the spirit of the season, but they also come out of impelling curiosity. They want to see how in each successive year we have outdone the extravagance of the last.

THE ONE that sticks in the mind is the tree of 1973. We bought it on the hoof at a Manchester tree farm. My wife spotted it. It towered over her five-foot frame. I walked around it, repeatedly widening my circle each time so as to emphasize its girth.

I felt safe. It had been there so long that I assumed it was a permanent part of the landscape and was sworn to for sale.

"How about this one?" she asked the tree farmer.

"Oh, that's a fine tree, if you have room for it," he replied.

There he set upon it a price so low it was obvious he was eager at last to be rid of it.

He cut it. My saw was too small. As it tumbled, I shouted softly, "Timber!" He grinned. She grimaced. I felt guilty.

We hauled it to the old car and set it on somehow, some of it on the roof, some on the trunk lid, and some trailing behind.

As we drove slowly up Main Street, looking a lot like a gauche float, pedestrians stared unabashed. One smiled broadly.

"Do you suppose we made a mistake?" my wife asked.

"Of course not," I protested. But then I cracked up and she knew I was mocking her.

AS WE DROVE I kept wondering if I would be able to get it through the front door. We pulled into the driveway and a neighbor saw the tree. "Will you be able to get it through the front door?" he asked. I knew then I was going to get it through the door. I found it tight in and old canvas and hauled it in.

I made even more elaborate my usual tree-fixing method. I started with a disk of plywood about 42 inches in diameter. I nailed it lightly to the floor. Then I took the pan I use for changing oil in the car. I nailed a smaller disk of wood to the butt of

Manchester Spotlight

This year will be different. Now we have more furniture and the wood floor is covered with a rug. It would not do to put that big plywood down on the rug and crush the pile. And how would you get all those needles out the rug when the tree is gone?

This problem did not occur to me. My wife explained it with great logic, and small conviction. With the boys come home for the holiday, they will arrive at a consensus. I will abide.

Meanwhile I have put some rocks where they won't get frozen in. And I have set aside the plywood disk and the pan and some wire, which they will arrive at a consensus. I will abide.

They came back with a tree that was lower, far lower. It was, however, just as wide.

It came to be known among our guests as the Hershey kiss tree.

The boys confessed later that they liked the seasonal notoriety brought by our opulent trees and were afraid mother might overreact and pick a puny thing.

Several gallons of water every few hours kept the tree healthy throughout the season and it astonished guests who marveled at the skill we had developed in getting around the open side of it gracefully, the living room being only 14 feet wide at that point.

MY WIFE resolved that we would never again have so big a tree. And in a way we have not. The next year two sons offered to make the selection. She was concerned. Though they were in the winter of their teens, she doubted they had sufficient maturity for the task.

I shared her doubts, but being a father and not a mother, I kept my counsel.

They came back with a tree that was lower, far lower. It was, however, just as wide.

No windfall, maybe a loss

Nothing is definite yet, but General Assembly leaders apparently have decided against instituting a major revamp of the state budget that, incidentally, would have given Manchester a huge tax windfall.

Instead, the Legislature appears to be leaning towards doing something that would result in a small decrease in state funds for the town.

And town officials can't do anything about it except protest any loss of state funds.

They aren't really in a good position to protest the loss of the windfall, because they have worked so long and hard to make J.C. Penney feel welcome in Manchester, and the windfall would have come at the company's expense.

At issue is the $33 million the state pays out annually to Connecticut municipalities as reimbursement for taxes they aren't allowed to charge on mercantile and manufacturers' inventory.

Some members of the General Assembly looking for ways to reduce the pending state deficit of $83 million, have talked openly about ending the $33-million reimbursement and allowing companies to tax inventories once again, as they were able to do until the late 1960s.

This is where the windfall would have come in. Manchester happens to be the location of the company with one of the largest inventories in New England: the 42-acre J.C. Penney warehouse. It is expected to go into operation next summer and will contain many millions of dollars worth of inventory.

By being allowed to tax it, Manchester could have made much more money than it now gets from the state as reimbursement for not being able to tax inventories. This is because the reimbursement formula is an old one, long since in need of revision.

But there would probably be even more opposition from the business community to an inventory tax than there already is to the misnamed unincorporated business tax.

So that's why legislative leaders instead seem to be leaning towards cutting part of the reimbursement, but without allowing communities to make up the difference with their taxing power.

This is typical of the General Assembly's wishy-washy, hurt-everybody-a-little approach to solving the state's budget problems.

If this were a just world, the Legislature would be looking at ways of increasing the reimbursement, but it is unrealistic to expect any such action at a time when the General Assembly is making cuts.

Report holds grim outlook

WASHINGTON — In a chilling, top-secret report, the Joint Chiefs of Staff have warned that the fuse is burning shorter on that great powder keg called the earth.

The nuclear warhead count is up 200 percent over a decade ago, with a 30 percent boost in "explosive power." There has also been a deadly corresponding improvement of 200 percent in "pinpoint targeting."

The Soviets have tested even more frightening weapons. Not only have they "used toxic chemical weapons in Southeast Asia and Afghanistan," but the military chiefs have detected "what we believe to be Soviet activities with deadly biological weapons."

"Even small powers like Vietnam and Pakistan appear to have chemical capabilities," the top-secret report warns, "and if the Soviets seem willing to provide lethal gas to surrogates and allies, it is not inconceivable that you might furnish them with biological agents."

The Soviet objective, declares the report, is "to become the dominant power in the world." The Kremlin expects to achieve this through brute military power.

"It has been largely through the development of military strength that the Soviets have achieved their greatest success," states the report. "In Soviet eyes, military power exists not only for the real possibility of war, but also as a principal means for supporting political objectives under conditions short of war."

The military balance, meanwhile, has tilted ominously in favor of the Russians. This "has had and is having a profound and dangerous effect on world affairs." Consider these grim facts:

Computers have projected the outcome of a nuclear exchange between the United States and Soviet Union. The top-secret results show "that the Soviet Union will have a large advantage in the mid-1980s." Warn the Joint Chiefs. "It is clear that the United States will face a severe challenge in attempting to 'counter Soviet strategic forces growth in the 1980s."

"The Soviets now possess a clear and growing advantage in the ability to kill hard targets." This increases the danger that a preemptive Soviet nuclear bombardment could knock out America's intercontinental missiles.

"The Soviets also have continued to diversify and improve other elements of their strategic offensive structure." The Joint Chiefs contend. Most troublesome, the Soviets "continue to build modern nuclear-powered ballistic missile submarines more quickly than the U.S."

"The Soviets maintain a large strategic defensive force and extensive civil defense program, both of which are far superior to their U.S. counterparts." This has been accompanied by boasting that the Soviet Union could withstand a U.S. nuclear attack. The appalling possibility is that the Kremlin is beginning to look upon nuclear warfare as acceptable.

In theater nuclear weapons — those with short-range and medium-range capabilities — the situation is not good. Both in Europe and elsewhere in the world, "Soviet advances are shifting the TNF (theater nuclear force) balance against the United States and its allies."

— In conventional weapons, the Joint Chiefs' assessment is also gloomy. The U.S. Navy was once unchallengeable. But now: "When all types of ships are considered, the Soviet Navy outnumbers the U.S. Navy by more than 3 to 1." As for our own backyard, the report notes: "Concerns with respect to the Atlantic are particularly acute."

— Even in an area where the United States still has the edge, the Joint Chiefs are worried. "Although generally superior to Soviet airlift forces, U.S. airlift forces nevertheless fall short of needs for some potential contingencies far from the United States" — specifically, in the Persian Gulf area.

— The Joint Chiefs also call attention to the Soviets' success in getting their satellites to shoulder "the Kremlin's aggressive program." The role of Soviet allies in assisting Soviet power projection has increased dramatically in recent years. Cuba has been most notable in this regard. "The top-secret report also notes that North Korea clearly enjoys a substantial numerical advantage" over South Korean forces.

Lawmaker says his cancer in remission

By Jacqueline Huard
UPI Reporter

HARTFORD — Robert Sorenson, the Connecticut legislator who didn't know whether he was going to live or die last spring when he stood up in the House to announce he had cancer of the colon, says he has been granted a reprieve.

Sorenson underwent chemotherapy from January until shortly before Thanksgiving and said doctors told him at the time of the final treatment, "as far as they're concerned, it's in total remission."

It was several months after the announcement in the Hall of the House before tests confirmed the cancerous growth had not spread. Sorenson's decision to discuss the cancer in public was made only after a fellow legislator told him a bill which would allow doctors to prescribe marijuana for patients undergoing chemotherapy was about to fail.

"It was the most difficult day of my 29 years," said Sorenson, who teaches social studies at Jefferson Middle School in Meriden. "But it did two things. It relieved me of the burden of keeping it inside of myself; it felt like having three tons of solid steel lifted off my chest, and it helped other people."

He had firsthand knowledge of the severe nausea the THC element in marijuana is believed to quiet. There were days when he couldn't keep a glass of water down. He also suffered permanent loss of night vision and dropped 65 pounds.

The bill was approved and became law July 1, but the technical requirements doctors have to meet in order to receive federal and state permission to prescribe marijuana almost make the law inoperative.

Ironically, although Sorenson spoke for the new law, he never intended to make use of it. He said he had a personal bias against marijuana but wanted it to be available to those who have to undergo chemotherapy, especially the elderly.

He said the brush with mortality renewed his commitment to his work in and outside of the Legislature.

"Bobby Sorenson was known as a party guy," he said. "My whole outlook changed from, shoot the whole load and let the chips fall where they may, to appreciating each day. It made me realize that we're only here for a short time, so we should make the most of it."

Sorenson is divorced and has no children and said he wouldn't have much time for a family now anyway because of his work at the Legislature. In Meriden schools, and helping other patients going through chemotherapy.

"I always thought of myself as a fairly compassionate person. I became even more sensitive to the people who really can't help themselves," he said.

Rep. Stewart McKinney, R-Conn., has introduced a bill in Congress to create a uniform law allowing the dispensation of marijuana for medical purposes in every state. Thirty-two states now have medical marijuana laws.

A McKinney aide, Paul Hicks, said the bill would make marijuana a Schedule 2 controlled substance to give it legal medical value and would exempt its dispensation from costly and complex Food and Drug Administration regulations.

The proposal, which was introduced Sept. 16 and is now in a subcommittee, also would establish an Office of Supply and Control for the cultivation, manufacture, and distribution of marijuana for medicinal purposes.

Hicks said McKinney became sensitive to the problem during the late Gov. Ella Grasso's and the late Rep. William Cotta's long battles with cancer. Mrs. Grasso died Feb. 5 and Cotta, Sept. 8.

Decision to test Fauliso leadership

Deficit plan goes to caucus

HARTFORD (UPI) — A package of bills and spending cuts designed to wipe out Connecticut's $83 million budget deficit goes before a House Democratic caucus today.

The caucus decision will test the leadership of Lt. Gov. Joseph Fauliso and key Democratic lawmakers, who have lobbied for the package, a modified version of a plan put forth by Gov. William O'Neill last month before he was hospitalized after a mild heart attack.

The package, whose details are being kept under wraps, was developed at leadership meetings, committee caucuses and informal discussions involving key lawmakers and Fauliso, who is filling in for O'Neill as he recuperates from open heart surgery.

"It's going to require compromise on the part of the governor, Speaker (of the House Ernest N.) Abate and practically everyone but there's no alternative," said Rep. Irving J. Stolberg, D-New Haven, co-chairman of the legislature's Finance Committee.

"We urged all sides to give a little," said Sen. Audrey P. Beck, D-Storrs, Finance Committee co-chairman. "No side is going to get what they want."

The plan is likely to include a version of the expanded unincorporated business tax O'Neill proposed to raise $80 million. The new tax would embrace more businesses but tax them at a lower rate than the current tax.

Also included is O'Neill's recommendation for higher gasoline taxes to raise $17 million.

The leadership also has considered spending cuts to give $5 to $10 million, including closing motor vehicle department offices, selling state property, highway crew layoffs and requiring Medicaid recipients to pay small amounts toward their medical bills.

Also being mullied was imposing a sales tax on restaurant meals under $1 — currently exempt from the state's 7.5 percent sales tax.

Pressure is expected from both Republicans and conservative Democrats to substitute more spending cuts for the proposed unincorporated business tax.

Theatrics abound at trial

WATERBURY (UPI) — The trial of two men accused of gunning down three security guards during a 1979 robbery of an armored car garage enters its sixth week Tuesday with the conclusion still several weeks away.

The trial in Superior Court has been marked by courtroom theatrics that have tested the patience of jurors, who are expected to hear from at least 20 more witnesses before the prosecution rests its case.

Donald Couture, 38, of Wallingford and Lawrence "Buddy" Pelletier, 36, of Waterbury are charged with three counts of felony murder each in the slayings and nearly $1.9 million robbery at Purulot Security's Waterbury garage.

The evidence presented so far at the trial has been overshadowed by courtroom theatrics involving state's attorney Francis M. McDonald and John Williams, Couture's lawyer.

Exchanges between the two lawyers have prompted Superior Court Judge T. Clark Hull at times to remissive from the bench at times about his political past as lieutenant governor.

Williams has asked to have the jury excused so many times to argue motions for a mistrial and technicalities that Hull has dubbed the jury's departure "the Waterbury shuffle."

Impatient jurors last week sent a note to Hull, quoting a portion of a child's nonsense rhyme. The judge said he took the note to mean the jury was anxious "to get on with things."

Evidence presented so far by the prosecution has included an M-1 carbine, a sales receipt and nearly $1.9 million in recovered valuables allegedly stolen during the April 16, 1979 robbery.

McDonald has called a string of witnesses, including a shoe store owner, cashiers and grocers to establish that bags of money and coins found in Couture's basement, was stolen from the Purulot garage.

O'Neill to go home this week

HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. William O'Neill is expected to be released from St. Francis Hospital and Medical Center this week and sent home to continue his recovery from open heart surgery, a hospital spokeswoman says.

O'Neill remained in satisfactory condition and was in "cheerful spirits," continuing breathing exercises to clear his lungs.

Colleen Howe (center), a candidate in Tuesday's Republican Congressional primary, skates Sunday at a campaign appearance in South Windsor, helped by two of hockey's all-time greats: Bobby Orr (left) and her husband, Gordie Howe. Ironically, though both men are endorsing primary, they both voted for her, as they're both Canadian citizens.

Small turnout seen

Peter P. DiRosa Jr., the minority leader on the town Board of Directors, also is a backer of Miss Uccello. He made a seconding speech for her at the Nov. 23 nominating convention and this morning he predicted victory.

"I really think Ann Uccello is going to win, although with the holidays and the time factor, there's really no way of predicting the turnout," said DiRosa, who thinks voting will be light.

He said the endorsements of Miss Uccello by key Manchester Republicans — at the convention, 11 of Manchester's 13 delegates voted for Miss Uccello — will help locally, "although she's already fairly well known in the area and she's done well in Manchester in the past, so I think she'll do well again."

When Miss Uccello ran for the 1st District seat in 1970, and lost to the late William R. Cotter, a Democrat, she won the Manchester vote convincingly, taking 2,618 more votes than Cotter and winning all of the seven voting districts the town was then divided into.

DiRosa said Mrs. Howe might do better if she had more time to campaign.

State Sen. Carl A. Zimser, Mrs. Howe's town campaign coordinator, confidently predicted a Howe victory. He brought Mrs. Howe before the Manchester Chamber of Commerce Sunday.

Republican Town Chairman Curtis M. Smith, who is neutral in the primary campaign, since his candidate, state Rep. J. Peter Passas, R-Marlborough, was eliminated at the convention, said he thinks Miss Uccello is the frontrunner, "but we could be surprised in this."

"Mrs. Howe is a very aggressive, very successful businesswoman," said Smith. "If she had more time, I think she would do real well. We could be surprised on this, based on the fact that Mrs. Howe's name is very well known."

Man held
— A Rockville man was arrested Friday at a Broad Street amusement center after he allegedly threatened some youths with a machete.

Police charged Peter T. Orlovski, 19, with threatening and carrying a dangerous weapon after an officer patrolling the area saw Orlovski walking toward a group of boys swinging the 22-inch blade machete.

Orlovski was reportedly angry with the boys after they had exchanged words with a girl at the amusement center.

Orlovski had gone to his car and taken the machete from it and was walking toward the boys swinging it when he was arrested.

Police said they also found a baseball bat inside the car, propped up against the emergency brake as if for "easy access," they said.

the Oakland Raiders and the Philadelphia Eagles have lent their first hand about the perils of parity. Last year's Super Bowl opponents have been swept up in the NFL's new order this year and of the last four participants in the league's title game, only Philadelphia has not been eliminated from playoff competition in 1981.

On Sunday, Philadelphia dropped a 21-10 decision in Dallas that lifted the Cowboys to their fifth NFC East title in six years.

They deserve to be the NFC East champion. We won it last year and we felt we deserved it. They won it this year and they clearly deserve it."

"Right now we are grasping a little bit offensively, but I think if we go back to the original scheme we've always been successful with and quit screwing around trying to be a little fancy with multiple formations and get back to where we can take some people on, we'll be all right."

Danny White's two TD passes and seven voting districts the town was then divided into.

No grounds seen for appeal

A U.S. Justice Department spokesman said this morning that the decision not to pursue the civil rights lawsuit against Manchester is not a sign that the Reagan administration is less committed than past administrations to enforcement of civil rights laws.

Today was the deadline for the government to file an appeal of U.S. District Judge M. Joseph Blumenfeld's October decision that cleared Manchester of racial discrimination charges.

Justice Department spokesman John Wilson said no appeal will be filed. Legal aid lawyers, who argued the case against Manchester along with the government lawyers, earlier announced that they would not appeal.

Bills clinch playoff spot at expense of Patriots

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — The scores couldn't have been more disparate. In one locker room: the players of the winning team were singing in the showers while next door the owner of the losing team was holding court regarding the possibilities of a coaching change.

The Buffalo Bills, winning for the fourth straight time, rejoiced with songs Sunday after a Joe Cribbs-led 19-10 victory over the woeful New England Patriots, a win which clinched a playoff berth for the Bills. Cribbs rushed for 153 yards and gave

'Voice button' may restore speech for cancer victims

NEW YORK (UPI) — People who have lost their voice box to cancer now may be able to use a "voice button" to help them talk, says Dr. William R. Panje, the man who invented it.
The plastic device, now widely available, is inserted by a head and neck surgeon during a 30-minute operation. The bulk of it is in Panje's experience, comes out around $200. The plastic part costs $20.
Nine thousand Americans lost their voice boxes to cancer last year and worldwide it is estimated over 1 million have.
After several hours of speech therapy, the person with a "voice button" can produce a low-pitched sound similar to a male voice," said Panje, director of head and neck surgical oncology at University of Iowa Hospitals, Iowa City.
"I have personally used this procedure in over 60 laryngectomy patients with an 80 percent success rate," he said.
"The majority of these patients, before having the tracheoesophageal puncture and Panje Voice Prosthesis (the voice button) communicated only by writing or moving their lips."
"The device is a dime-sized, one-way bi-lunged valve that is inserted into a hole made between the trachea and the esophagus in the throat."
"The hole is made under local anesthesia in less than 30 minutes in an outpatient unit," Panje said. How is the speech produced?
"The patient, by placing his thumb over his windpipe opening, forces air through the prosthesis into the esophagus," Panje said.
"When the air passes through the esophagus, a vibration develops in the neck region that produces a low-pitched sound."
"The two flanges on the prosthesis keep it in place, while the one-way valve prevents aspiration while still allowing air to enter the esophagus."
Tracheoesophageal speech was developed as an alternative method for patients without voice

Spelunking class explores caves

Fifteen students from Bennett and Iling Junior High Schools participated this fall in a three-day course in spelunking offered by the Adventure Challenge School of Manchester. The course, which means cave, involved caving in Clarksville, N. Y.
During the first night of the course, the students went on a night hike wearing blindfolds, and holding the hands of fellow students, formed a line in order to aid each other on the hike. At the end of the hike the students took off their blindfolds and led the instructors back to the lodge where they stayed in Clarksville.
On the second day the group traveled to Clarksville where they spent the day exploring Ward Cave. Inside the cave the group saw a variety of speleothems (cave formations such as stalagmites, stalactites, flowstone and popcorn) and even a few bats in hibernation.
The group wrapped up the experience on the third day with a ropes course. This course was a series of above ground obstacles including such activities as walking across wobbly logs a few feet off the ground, walking across a wire, also a few feet off the ground, wearing a harness with a belay rope and attempting to get a tire off a tree 20-feet high, to name a few.
The school will sponsor cross country ski clinics on Jan. 9 and 23. Proper cross country technique, along with equipment selection, use and care, and winter safety will be taught while ski touring.
Instruction, leadership and insurance are provided. Students must supply their own equipment. The course fee is $15. For more information call 646-5570.

Courses by Newspaper Work in the future

Editor's note: This is the last in a series of 15 articles exploring "Working, Changes and Choices." In this article, economist Isabel V. Sawhill of the Urban Institute analyzes the impact of government policies and social and economic changes on the workforce of the future. This series was written for Courses by Newspaper, a program of University Extension, University of California, San Diego, with funding from the National Endowment for the Humanities.
Copyright © 1981 by the Regents of the University of California.
By Isabel V. Sawhill
The year 2000 is gaining on us. Almost everyone who will be in the workforce then has already been born.
Thus, as Americans attempt to plan careers, businesses, and families, they are not being unduly "futuristic" when they wonder what work opportunities will exist at the dawn of the second millennium. What kinds of jobs will be available? And in what numbers?
Crystal-ball gazing is risky business. One never knows what unexpected developments may occur, or how people will react to social and economic changes. Nevertheless, one can make some informed guesses based, in part, on existing trends.
Let's begin with what we know about the future with greatest certainty. First of all, apart from some real demographic "surprises" — such as a sudden surge in immigration or a sharp drop in mortality rates — we already know approximately how many men and women will be of working age at the turn of the century.
But the size of the workforce is more difficult to predict: it will depend on how people will divide their time between work and other activities, such as school, homemaking, and leisure. Historically, teen-agers, women and the elderly have been less likely to work than adult men, but these patterns appear to be changing. We cannot assume that the future will repeat the past.
In recent years there has been a large influx of women and teenagers into the job market, while adult men, especially blacks and those over 55, have been working less. Over half of all adult women, including many married women with young children, are now in the labor force. The marked rise in their propensity to work is usually attributed to smaller families, more education, higher wages (which increase the cost of staying home), and the revolution in attitudes toward women's roles.
Men, in turn, are working less because of greater affluence and the availability of more generous Social Security benefits, pensions, and disability insurance.
Whether these trends continue or not will depend on how many new jobs the economy produces, evolving social mores, and shifts in government policy. There is currently no hard evidence to support the belief of "supply-side" economists that reducing people's taxes, and thereby increasing their take-home pay, unleashes a flood-tide of work effort. But government policies can affect the decision of whether or not to work.
For example, retirement decisions often depend on the age at which one becomes eligible for Social Security. That age is likely to be raised in response to the fiscal squeeze a greying America will be putting on the system. This change in policy — together with such factors as greater longevity and continued inflation which erodes people's savings — could easily reverse the present trend toward earlier retirements.
Taking some (although not all) of these factors into consideration, government statisticians estimate that, by the year 2000, the labor force will be almost one-third (about 31 million people) larger than it is today. It will also be older, with the average age increasing from 35 to 38 years as the baby boom generation matures. Finally, it will be more diverse, with much higher proportions of women (because more of them will work) and of minorities (because of higher birth rates among most minority groups).
Education and jobs
What kinds of jobs will be available to this larger workforce? In the past, educational qualifications have been a major determinant of the kind of work one secured, and the educational level of Americans has risen steadily. Since 1960, for example, the average number of years of education of the workforce as a whole rose from 12.0 to 12.6, and the proportion of adults 25 years of age that has completed high school increased from 41 to 68 percent.
But the proportion of 18-to-19-year-olds who are traditionally mover off the country may not be as high as that of the government projects only a marginal improvement in educational attainment in the next 10 years.
Why has the American drive toward ever-higher levels of schooling slowed down? Currently, an oversupply of educated young people has lowered the extra earnings to be expected from attending college and has bumped college-educated youth down the occupational ladder. Over the past decade, for example, the proportion of employed college graduates working in professional and technical jobs fell by 9 percent among men and 16 percent among women. Job opportunities in these occupations simply have not kept pace with the number of college-trained workers.
Moreover, with the exception of a few fields such as engineering and nursing, professional and technical job opportunities are not expected to grow particularly rapidly over the next decade. Clerical sales, and service jobs, on the other hand, are projected to increase at an above-average rate. But these are not the kinds of jobs to which college graduates have traditionally aspired.
Still another significant trend is the decline in unionization since the mid-1960s. Today, only about one-fifth of the labor force is unionized. While there has been a sharp increase in unionism among public employees, this has been more than offset by declines in the private sector.
This trend is partly related to the changing demographic and industrial composition of the labor force: women and educated workers

Questions

1. Upon what factors will the size of the workforce depend in the future?
2. How will the workforce in the year 2000 probably compare with the workforce today?
3. Why has the drive toward ever-higher levels of education slowed down?
4. How will changing family patterns affect workforce trends?

Answers

1. On how people divide their time between work and other activities, on which segments of the population will be entering or remaining in the workforce, and on government policies.

2. It will be one-third larger, older, more diverse.
3. An oversupply of educated young people has lowered extra earnings expected from attending college, professional and technical job opportunities are not expected to increase rapidly in the next decade.
4. Dual-career households will create a greater demand for part-time jobs and flexible working hours and conditions.

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Hollywood types who know everything have always said that a woman cannot combine stardom and motherhood...

Paula Prentiss is a successful wife, mother and actress. "I think that I always wanted a family," she says, "and she also has always wanted to act."

He's a lot like Dick — he can't live anything, he loves soccer and baseball — I don't know how he got to be a Yankee fan — and he came home with a piece of paper about karate classes...

As for Prentiss, all that she can say now is that she is very beautiful.

She says that after she and Dick did "Saturday the 14th" together, they thought, from their work on the film, that it would be OK for Ross to see them. They took him to a screening but he had nightmares for a couple of nights after he saw it.

As for Prentiss, all that she can say now is that she is very beautiful.

Self-service hair care the wave of the future

By Jeanne Lesem
UPI Family Editor

Sales of home permanent kits have more than doubled since 1975, from 14.4 million to a projected 32.4 million by 1982.

Business is booming at a self-service styling bar at a hair dressing salon on Manhattan's fashionable East 57th Street.

Both are signs of the economic times.

Why should a woman pay $6 to $9 to have a stylist blow-dry her hair when she can do it herself for nothing, asks hairdresser Louis Gignac, then answers himself.

"Young working women don't have that kind of money to spend," he said.

"The higher prices are for customers who have hair coloring, the lower, for hair cut customers."

At the self-service bar in Gignac's Louis-Guy D salon, stylists show women how to use lamps, blow-dryers, hair care products and other tools of the trade.

"We always believed women should be able to take care of their own hair," Gignac said in a recent interview. "I want them to look good every day, not just when they go to the beauty shop."

Gignac is consultant to some famous modeling agencies and the author, with Jacqueline Narrows, of the recently published "Everything You Need to Know to Have Great-Looking Hair" (Viking $15.95).

He was ahead of the times with his self-service concept. He said customers and beauty care reporters and editors were unenthusiastic when he established it five years ago.

"The economy was booming then," he said, but he persisted in teaching customers to save a few dollars by washing and styling their hair at home between cuts.

A good cut for short hair should last six to eight weeks, he said. For longer hair, eight to 12 weeks.

Every salon eventually is going to have to use the self-service concept, he added.

He recommends it only for shampooing, styling and coloring.

"Getting good results with do-it-yourself permanents at home is difficult," he says. Before attempting it, he suggests watching a trained expert at your salon.

Regular readers of beauty care articles may remember Gignac as the creator of wash-and-wear hairstyles that need no setting.

"People want a natural look," he said. "It saves time. You don't have to sit under a dryer for two hours."

He said women are much more cautious now about what they use on their hair, after the cancer scare several years ago involving hair dyes.

Bleached blondes are disappearing," he said. "We do a lot of highlights now instead. The chemicals don't touch the scalp at all."

Highlights look more natural and you don't have to do them as often.

The popularity of the natural look apparently hasn't hurt the home permanent business. Within the past year half of all American women ages 13 to 59 have had a permanent, either in a salon or at home, says David N. Ruckert, marketing vice president for Clairol, a hair care products manufacturer.

The women represent all income levels, Ruckert said at a recent news conference announcing the company's first home permanent kits. Two are for treated and two for untreated (uncolored) hair. Two give curly per-manents, and two, body waves. All four products will be available in stores starting in January 1982.

Most home permanents use a chemical called ammonium thioglycolate, said John F. Corbett, Clairol's vice president for technical development. It softens hair so it can be molded into a new configuration and hardened with a neutralizer. It also has an unpleasant odor.

The four new Clairol products, like some of their competitors, use sodium sulfite instead. Corbett said it's much gentler to hair. It has no offensive odor and it softens and reshapes hair at the same time—so there's no need for precise timing to prevent overprocessing, he said.

Even men get permanents. Of 1,095 questioned in a new study, more than 9 percent said they had a permanent, 2.7 percent currently do and 4.5 percent said they would consider getting one in the next 12 months.

Young men and young women with incomes in the $18,000-$30,000 a year range have become a significant new force in a market long dominated by middle-aged women, the study shows.

Almost half the men under 25 and 10.1 percent of men 65 and over said they buy professional hair care products such as shampoo and conditioner at salons.

Your pet may be good for you

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—The pet you own may be beneficial to your health.

A group of internationally known scholars, veterinarians and doctors have come to that conclusion.

Dr. Aaron Katcher, said people have suspected this all along "but it was very gratifying to confirm what people have believed intuitively."

Katcher, a University of Pennsylvania professor, was chairman of the First International Conference on the Human Companion Animal Bond in October in Philadelphia.

Katcher's research found that certain pets provide relaxation and reduce stress, which often is a cause of high blood pressure.

"My own work, finding that looking at a tankful of tropical fish is restful, is not major news," said Katcher. "Anyone who owns fish tanks knows that. But to find out the tropical fish have large influences on blood pressure is news. And we've brought the news together for the first time."

As a result of the October scientific conference, the Penn research team connected to the university's Center for the Interaction of Animals and Society formed the Delta Society of scientists involved in the study of people and pets. It also began work to publish a scientific journal and established itself as a clearinghouse for legislation governing animals, particularly pets.

Among the efforts is to make it easier for nursing home patients to have pets.

"The attachment to animals is regarded as one of the frivolties of modern life," said Katcher. "Some people feel we have less children now and are more divorced from nature, so we keep and pamper pets. We have found the need to form attachment with another species goes back millions of years and has direct biological benefits."

Among the most exciting findings unveiled at the conference, in Katcher's estimation:

• A paper by Dr. Peter Messent of Leicester, England, that people are more socially approachable when walking with animals.

• Katcher called the finding "kind of intuitive, but gratifying because it gives objective confirmation."

• A discovery by a University of California team that infant monkeys raised with dogs, rather than cloth representations of mothers, are better adjusted.

• Katcher said the finding tends to support the oft-held belief that children are better off with pets than toys. That "a biological basis exists for the attachment of primates and dogs."

• Dr. Robert Andryscio's study that documented the "lasting effects and lasting favorable therapy" of allowing nursing home residents to have and play with pets.

• A breakthrough by the World Dolphin Foundation in Key Biscayne, Florida in work with autistic children. The team found a group of autistic children, after several meetings with the dolphins, began to imitate the dolphins' sounds and engage the animals in play despite the children's previous oblivion to their surroundings.

• A confirmation of the both critical and symbolic role of animals in children's lives with the study by Dr. Robert Van de Castle of the University of Virginia that 70 percent of children's dreams are about animals, compared with 9 percent in adults.

Itemizing may lead to IRS tax audit

(First of a five-part series)

As tax strategy in response to the mammoth tax cutting law of 1981, it is almost surely to your advantage to bunch into the remaining days of the year as many deductible expenses as you can — last-minute bills, charitable donations, dependency claims. But if you do this, keep in mind the possibility — if not the probability — that your 1981 tax return will be audited at some time after next April 15.

The Internal Revenue Service will never officially divulge its system for picking your name out of the millions of tax returns filed. But you can safely assume that your itemized deductions often will send out signals that catch the eye of the tax examiners, including the "eyes" of the IRS computers.

Your return's deductions may be seen either as "average" or "above average," depending upon the proportion of your itemized deductions to your gross income. The "average" return is one in which the amount of itemized deductions claimed approximates the average amount claimed by other taxpayers in the same income bracket.

Thus, study with utmost care the following table that Practice-Hall has based on IRS statistics compiled from 1979 returns, the most recent returns available for

INCOME	BUTTONS	INTEREST	TAXES	MEDICAL
$20 to 25	$ 583	$ 8,589	$ 1,899	$ 590
25 to 30	654	2,795	2,953	549
30 to 50	893	3,245	2,746	517
50 to 100	1,793	5,131	5,017	696
100 to 200	4,522	9,146	9,599	1,116
Above 200	25,573	22,462	27,692	1,625

Your Money's Worth
Sylvia Porter

Even though your deductions compare favorably with these averages, you still can be audited. Also, if you have extraordinary deductions, never pass them up because they throw you above the average.

If you claim above-average deductions, just make certain you can prove them as well as all other items on your return (which you may take for granted will be audited as well).

If you're running far below average, take a closer look. You may be overlooking some deductible items.

Another way to check whether you're average on your deductions is to compare your deductions as a percentage of your adjusted gross income with other taxpayers in your income group.

If your adjusted gross income was in the $20,000 to $25,000 range, your total deductions should come to 24.6 percent; in the $25,000 to $30,000 bracket, your deductions should total 22.4 percent; in the $30,000 to $50,000 range, 21.8 percent; in the $50,000 to $100,000 range, 18.4 percent; in the $100,000 to $200,000 bracket, 18.5 percent; and above $200,000, your deductions should total 19.8 percent.

A simple tax rule is to keep the precise data you receive income or pay a deductible item. A single day's difference at year's end can be crucial.

Suppose a payment is due you in late December, but you don't actually get a check in the mail until early January. If you could have stopped by the office or plant and picked up the check, it's December income. But if the delay in receipt was beyond your control, it rolls over into 1982, and becomes January income.

Right now, before 1981 becomes history, is when you must be sure you're not overlooking the possibility of cutting your taxes by the use of income averaging. Say that your taxable incomes for 1977-1980 were as follows: $7,500, $8,000, $9,500, $12,000. Your 1981 taxable income will come to $20,000. Can you use the income averaging?

Add up the four figures for 1977-1980, which gives you $37,000. Divided by four equals $9,250, multiplied by 120 percent brings the amount to $11,100. Since your 81 taxable income of $20,000 is more than $3,000 in excess of $11,100, you do qualify for income averaging.

Officer named

Rosemary C. Clarke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth W. Chadwick of 88 Center St., has been appointed assistant investment officer in the private placement department, investment operations, at Connecticut General Life Insurance Co., a subsidiary of Connecticut General Corp.

Ms. Clarke, a graduate of Storrs College, holds a Master's degree on business administration from Boston University. She joined Connecticut General's investment operations in 1979 as bond analyst and was named senior bond analyst in March 1981. Ms. Clarke is a member of the Hartford Society of Financial Analysts. She and her husband live in Simsbury.

Director picked

HARTFORD — John J. Meehan Jr., of 486 Old Stage Road, Glastonbury, has been named associate executive director of Hartford Hospital.

The announcement was made by John K. Springer, president and executive director of the hospital.

At Hartford Hospital, Meehan has served as an assistant director, responsible for the departments of Ambulatory Services, Chaplains, Medical Records, Medicine, Neurology, OB/GYN, Pediatrics, Pharmacy, Respiratory Therapy, Social Service and the Staff Office.

Veeps named

NORWALK — United Technologies' Norden Systems has named three new vice presidents.

James Hessemer was appointed vice president, controller with responsibility for the financial activities of Norden Systems and its Chemical Systems and United Space Boosters divisions. He joined Norden in 1979 as manager-financial control and became controller in 1979.

Robert D. Jannitsch was named vice president, manufacturing with responsibility for all manufacturing activities at Norden's Norwalk and Melville, Long Island, facilities. He joined Norden in 1963 and was operations manager.

Fred L. Comfort was named vice president, business planning and administration with responsibility for planning, proposal and marketing support areas. He served at Norden for 18 years before being assigned to United Technologies' Essex Group in 1979 as director of strategic planning. A year later, he was named vice president of the company's Automotive Group.

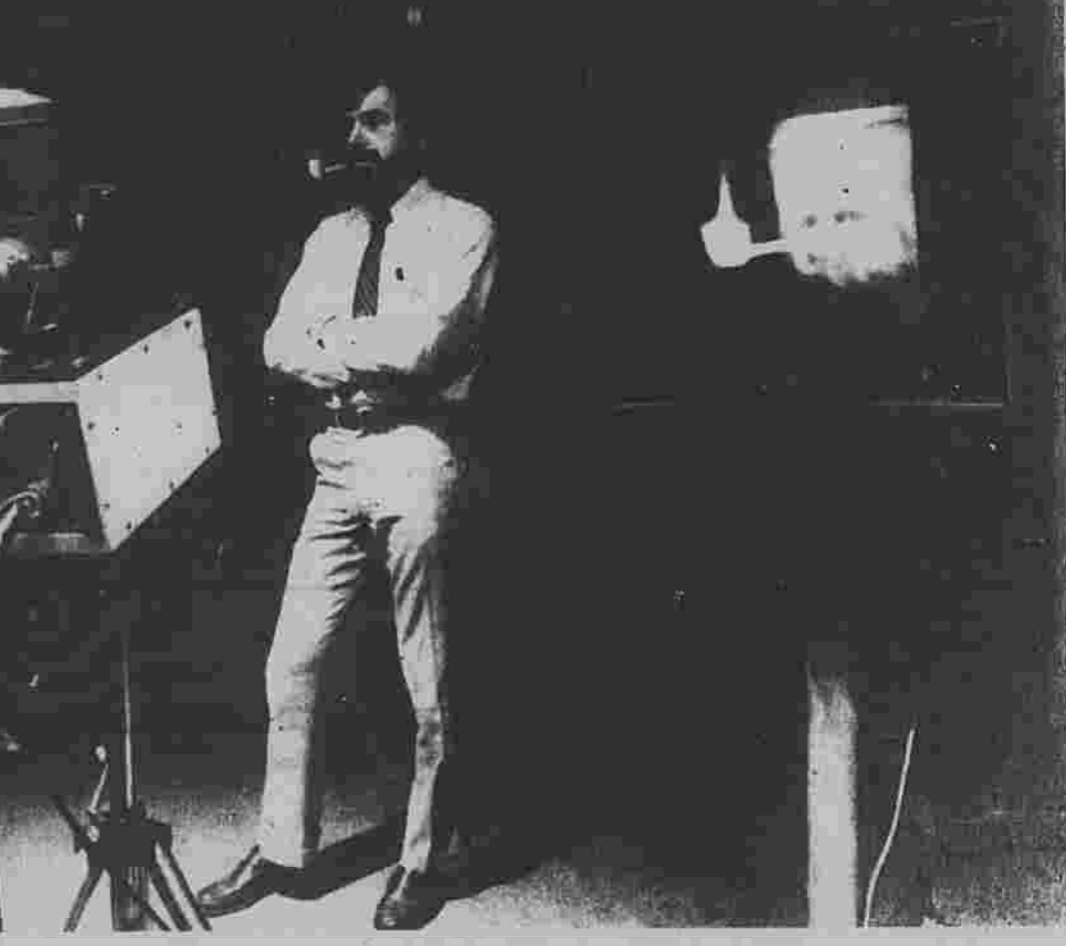

Norden produces military electronic and space systems.

Hot show

Scientist Gary Hughes shows how this experimental camera creates TV pictures of warm objects in total darkness. His skin and lighted pipe look white on the TV screen. Cooler objects, such as his hair and moustache, appear dark. The new device is expected to be used in important uses in medical, industrial and military areas. The heart of the new camera is a solid state imager, about the size of a dime, containing more than 8,000 heat-sensitive elements.

Plans would cut controllers' duties

By LeRoy Pope
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI)—The air traffic controllers union is threatening to drag the issue of government workers' right to strike through 100 separate legal cases throughout the country even though they have lost in the first such case to reach the Supreme Court.

The FAA plan is conceived as voluntary. The airlines would be requested to install equipment that would cost $45,000 to $50,000 per plane and enable the pilots to fly much of the time independent of ground control. The equipment for a small private plane (more small planes than airliners are involved in collisions) might cost only $2,500.

Helms made it clear he was not seeking to preclude private manufacturers from coming up with suitable systems, and said minimum capabilities prescribed by FAA "must not stifle innovation by industry to provide enhanced capabilities and innovative designs." He said an airborne system must be linked to and be an integral part of the total ATC system but must be able to operate independently.

Litchford told United Press International there is no conflict between the ideas for which he has been campaigning since 1971 and the program Helms described called the Threat Alert and Collision Avoidance System (TCAS).

Litchford said there can be no quick solution to the mess created by the controllers' strike and government and industry must devote every effort to making sure it can't happen again.

Although President Reagan has ruled the fired controllers can now apply for jobs as military controllers — which might permit transfer of some present military controllers to the civilian force — Litchford feels that "the original estimate that it will take two to three years to rebuild the controller force to handle the pre-strike volume of plane traffic still stands."

He said the proposed new collision avoidance system will not change this time schedule significantly, since it will take about that long to equip airliners with cockpit control instruments and train the pilots to use them.

But he said the power of the reduced force of ground traffic controllers to paralyze air traffic and force flight curtailment would be wiped out.

The pilots union, the Air Line Pilots Association, has for an active role in developing the proposal for a system of joint airborne and ground traffic control. Generally, the ALPA, which has been noticeably cool in its attitude toward PATCO during the strike, seems favorable to the idea.

Litchford has served as an adviser to the Air Force, the FAA, the Army and NASA. He operates his own consulting engineering business.

More advice for painting

The difference between doing a superb job of house painting and doing an ordinary or poor job depends on having just a little bit of extra knowledge.

This is a round-up of information about exterior painting.

- 1. Paint the outside of your house.
- 2. Your paint job will be only as good as your preparation. In most cases, the preparation of the surface actually takes longer than the application of the paint. Go over the old surface carefully. Use a wire brush and scraper to clear areas where paint has peeled. Wash these areas with a solution of household bleach, then rinse. Wear rubber gloves for this job and protect your eyes with safety goggles.
- 3. Look carefully at surfaces not exposed to weather, such as underside of eaves, ceilings of porches, etc. Prepare these areas by washing with TSP (trisodium phosphate) solution, mixed as directed on container. Again, wear gloves and safety goggles to protect yourself.
- 4. Go around entire house and check caulking. Check every window and door frame. Scrape away old, loose caulking and use caulking gun to apply new sealer to replace it.
- 5. If you find painted areas which have severe cracking or alligating, the surface looks something like an alligator's hide, sand down to bare wood, and apply primer. Caulk was probably so thick a coat of paint, incompatible primer and finish coat, or final coat over undried primer.
- 6. Where rust spots show around nail heads under old paint, scrape old paint off, and prime nailhead with metal primer.
- 7. With preparation finished, paint the house. Fastest method is to use a roller and a brush — brush for corner work, underneath of siding, etc., roller for broad areas. On siding, do the underedges first. On all work, paint in a horizontal direction, working from unpainted area back toward area just painted.

The Eagle brings you a new, better and expanded Tax-Shelter

The Universal IRA.

Everyone is eligible. As of January 1, everyone who works—absolutely everyone—is eligible for an Individual Retirement Account (IRA), even if you're covered by another retirement plan at work. Previously, if your company had a pension plan, you weren't eligible.

Contributions increased. Maximum annual contributions have been increased to 100% of your annual income up to $2,000 or to $4,000 if both husband and wife are working. For married couples where only one spouse is working, the maximum annual contribution has been increased to $2,250.

It's a tax shelter. Aside from the universal eligibility and the high maximum deposits allowed, one of the greatest benefits of an IRA is the tax break it offers. The deposits you make to the account are tax-deductible on your federal income tax return for the year the contribution is made and your interest earned is tax-deferred. You don't pay taxes on the contributions and the high interest you earn until you withdraw your funds at retirement. At that time, you'll probably be in a more favorable tax situation.

No fees. With a First Federal Tax-sheltered savings plan, there are no fees, commissions, or other administrative charges.

High interest. Guaranteed.

An IRA from First Federal Savings earns a high interest, too—money market interest, that's guaranteed over the term of your investment. To give you an idea of how your IRA savings can benefit from the high interest and tax benefit features, consult the chart.

Years of Contribution	Without IRA	With IRA	Tax Savings
10	$22,407	$39,309	$16,902
15	45,512	83,507	40,995
20	72,603	161,397	88,794
25	117,643	298,668	181,025
30	165,055	540,585	355,530

Projections assume a 30% tax bracket and an annual $2,000 contribution left on deposit at an annual rate of 12%, compounded continuously with an effective yield of 12.94%. The annual rate of 12% is a hypothetical rate which First Federal Savings believes is realistic to achieve over the life of the retirement funds. Market rates may fluctuate over the term of the account.

Insured savings. All tax-sheltered savings plans at First Federal Savings are insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, a permanent agency of the U.S. Government.

An IRA...it's a tax shelter, it's a tax break, it's a secured investment.

Beer sales up

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Anheuser-Busch Inc. achieved a 9.8 percent volume increase in sales of its premium Budweiser brand in Connecticut markets during the third quarter of 1981, according to August A. Busch III, president chairman of the board.

Nationally, Busch reported beer volume sales for the third quarter of 1981 of 14.5 million barrels, a 8.3 percent increase compared with 13.4 million barrels sold during the third quarter of 1980.

Sponsor

BLOOMFIELD — Connecticut General Corp. has become a participating sponsor of the Center for Information Systems Research of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology's Sloan School of Management.

CISR explores ways of improving the effectiveness of information-processing tools and techniques available to managers in the private sector and to public policy makers.

Connecticut General's participation in CISR will be coordinated through the research, planning and financing unit of the corporation's corporate information services department.

Is there any evidence that Amway products last longer, save money and do a better job than other products? Have you tested Amway against national brands?

date, we haven't found Amway products to be particularly superior to competing brands, and they're certainly not economical. The employment of friends and neighbors as sales agents provides a special pressure on thoughtful consumers. You'll have to use your own judgment and comparisons of product utility and cost. If the products don't live up to your expectations or up to your friends' sales pitches, don't buy them. After all, your friends don't pay your bills.
