Gasoline prices, sellers' spirits fall

Will the free jelly glass come back as an inducement to buy your gasoline at the corner station or will April's sunshine lure drivers to the highways and to higher prices at the pumps?

A quick survey of Manchester gasoline sellers today produced interpretations at both poles, but no one pretended to know for sure what will happen to the prices that in recent days have been creeping and, in some cases, plunging downward.

Prices yesterday ranged down to $1.17 a gallon for regular gasoline. One retailer said he cut his price by 10 cents in one jump Monday and said he expects to be forced to drop it another 3 or 4 cents in the coming days.

"It changes from one load to the next," he said.

While there was no clear consensus on how far the price might drop, all agreed that it is a buyers' market that does not bode well for the service station operator.

One retailer, now at $1.22 for regular gas, said that from his station he could see a price sign at $1.19. For the three-cent difference, he said, he would hold onto his loyal customers, but if the spread became greater, they would be tempted to the no-service gas pumps attached to convenience stores.

It was that seller who saw a seasonal glimmer of hope. He said February and March are low driving months and business would improve with the promise of spring. He said his profit on self-service gas is now 1.1 cents per gallon, and the lower prices have not increased the amount he sells.

The most discouraging note — or encouraging for the consumer — came from a wholesale distributor. He wondered if the days of free jelly glasses and other signs of strong retail competition would return as the result of the worldwide oil glut.

He said retail prices are dropping faster than wholesale and that the retailer is taking the loss.

"Even the majors are dropping," he said. "The unbranded dealers are going to be killing the majors," he said.

In a footnote to his remarks, he said, "The hottest item we have now is kerosene (for use in heaters)."

Two station operators pointed out that Arco has announced it will eliminate credit cards beginning April 15 and suggested other major oil companies will follow suit.

On the world scene, Britain cut its crude oil price by $4 a gallon this week in a move which could break the OPEC pricing structure.

Mana Said al Otaiba, president of OPEC, said he would call a meeting before the end of the month to halt what was being labeled the "unraveling" of 13-nation oil cartel.

The cut by Britain put its price at $3 below the OPEC base of $34 a barrel.

Jobless rate up Recession deepens

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's unemployment rate returned to the recession peak of 8.8 percent in February — with 9.6 million people out of work and women bearing the brunt of increased joblessness, the government reported today.

There was a jump of 280,000 unemployed Americans over the month, the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said.

The jobless total was 1.8 million above last July's level when the current surge in unemployment began. At that time the unemployment rate stood at 7.2 percent.

The 0.3 percentage point increase in February to 8.8 percent matched December's seasonally adjusted figure.

The department also said the number of persons working part time for economic reasons — those sometimes referred to as the "partially unemployed" — rose by nearly a half million in February to a record 5.6 million. Nearly all of the monthly increase in that category was attributable to persons who usually work full time, the department said.

Every general category of workers experienced an increase in unemployment in February, with adult women experiencing the largest numerical increase — an additional 182,000 out of work — and a 0.4 percentage point increase to 7.6 percent, matching the level for adult men.

Hispanics and teenagers both showed 0.6 percentage point jumps. The rate for teenagers rose to 22.3 percent and for Hispanics to 12.6 percent.

The rate for black teenagers, aged 16-19, rose to 42.3 percent.

Total employment during February was 99.6 million, about the same as the previous two months.

The gloomy figures, indicating the nation is still in the heart of a recession, came as both Reagan administration economic officials and opponents from organized labor anticipated unemployment might go to a double-digit level before easing.

Nicaraguan cited by Haig may have fled

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Military officials said they captured the Nicaraguan man cited by Secretary of State Alexander Haig as a director of rebel forces but refused to comment on reports he had escaped.

Haig told the House foreign operations subcommittee Thursday "a Nicaraguan military man was captured in El Salvador, having been sent there by the FSLN (Nicaraguan Sandinista leadership) to participate in the direction which is so evident of this guerrilla operation from Nicaragua."

But later, CBS News quoted Salvadoran authorities as saying the Nicaraguan cited by Haig escaped when he was taken to the Mexican Embassy in San Salvador to identify a suspected embassy contact with the Salvadoran rebels.

The Nicaraguan was escorted by military police, but as the embassy door opened, he was "snatched away" by someone inside the building, Salvadoran Defense Minister General Jose Guillermo Garcia told CBS. The network quoted an embassy spokesman as denying the story.

Garcia said the Nicaraguan, Legdamis Anaxid Gutierrez, was captured "three or four days ago" after observation by security forces. Gutierrez admitted going to El Salvador for "subversive work," he told CBS.

Pioneer pilot killed in crash

WINDHAM — A prototype motorized hang glider, being tested at Windham Airport by Manchester's Pioneer International Corp., lost power and crashed Thursday, killing its pilot.

The pilot, Martin R. Alaneda, 32, of Salinas, Calif., was taken to nearby Windham Community Memorial Hospital and pronounced dead, state police said.

Hospital officials said Alaneda suffered multiple injuries to the head and other parts of the body.

Spokesmen for the company said this morning that the aircraft, an ultra-light experimental model powered by a 400cc snowmobile engine, was flying at approximately 200 feet when it rapidly lost altitude and crashed.

Pioneer Vice President for Operations Richard Jagoutz said the cause of the accident is not yet known, but a complete investigation is underway.

He said the investigation, for now, is being conducted by the company, not outside authorities.

Jagoutz said it is too early to determine what effect, if any, the crash will have on the development program for the lightweight aircraft.

The accident occurred at about 11:30 a.m. Thursday, according to the Windham Airport manager, who was not there at the time. He said only Pioneer personnel — not airport personnel — were at the airport at the time of the crash.

Alaneda was founder and president of Flight Design, the division of Pioneer developing the aircraft.

A Pioneer statement called him a "well known and highly respected member of the aviation community, involved in the development of new types of aircraft."

"His presence as an inventor, designer and pilot will be missed," the statement continued. "His presence as a man will be irreplaceable."

No other details were readily available this morning.

Wreckage of a Pioneer International Corp. test plane lies at Windham Airport. The pilot was killed when it fell for an as yet undetermined reason.

A State Department spokeswoman said she had "no further details" beyond Haig's statements and declined to comment on whether the Nicaraguan had escaped.

Salvadoran Defense Ministry officials confirmed they captured a Nicaraguan man, but they would not state whether he was a guerrilla. They refused to make any comments on the report of the prisoner's escape.

The U.S. Embassy also declined to comment on the report.

In the capital, guerrillas burned two buses Thursday in their drive to

A look at cinema

DEATH WISH II (R) - Charles Bronson, Vincent Gardenia, Jill Ireland. (Drama) - What has murder, rape, guns and revenge? The answer is 'Death Wish II,' and that's all the viewer needs to know about this tasteless rehash of the hit 1974 film. Bronson is as angry as ever playing the one-man vigilante squad who finds his life and family invaded once again. Although the action is non-stop, this is a pointless, violent sequel that should never have been made. GRADE: B-plus.

MISSING (PG) - Jack Lemmon, Sissy Spacek, Melanie Mayron, John Shea. (Drama) - Lemmon triumphs in this film, which is based on a true story about an American father who investigates the mysterious disappearance of his son in Chile. Directed by Costa Gravas (whose credits include "Z"), "Missing" is a powerfully acted movie that chills, entertains and gives viewers a sense of uneasiness about the world. Although 1982 is still young, it's bound to be one of the year's best. GRADE: A.

NIGHT CROSSING (PG) - John Hurt, Jane Alexander, Doug McKeon, Beau Bridges. (Drama) - This enthralling and moving story is based on the true-life plight of two families who attempt to escape from East Germany via a homemade hot-air balloon. Well-planned and directed, the film has genuine drama and emotion, and most of the camera-work is breathtaking. A worthwhile and suitable movie for all ages. GRADE: A-minus.

CANNERY ROW (PG) - Nick Nolte, Debra Winger. (Comedy) - Nolte plays a baseball pitcher who joins the riffraff of Cannery Row, a sordid area in a former sardine-canning town. The film seems to be aimed at an audience of 10-year-olds, except almost all the characters are prostitutes or whores. This adaptation of two John Steinbeck novels has no plot, almost no action and no credible characters. GRADE: D.

MAKING LOVE (R) - Kate Jackson, Michael Ontkean, Harry Hamlin. (Drama) Zack Ontkean is a young, successful doctor, who although happily married to Claire (Miss Jackson), has homosexual feelings toward Bart (Hamlin). These three actors give sincere performances as strong, mature individuals in this ground-breaking and long-overdue film. Because of the nature of the subject matter, parental discretion is strongly recommended. GRADE: B-plus.

THE SEDUCTION (R) - Morgan Fairchild, Andrew Stevens, Michael Sarrazin. (Suspense Drama) "The Seduction" makes no pretense at being anything other than an exploitation film, designed to show off the acting (and physique) of Morgan Fairchild. Fairchild in her first film. She plays a TV newscaster who is the target of a nut who just wants to love her. The film is very derivative, yet capably made; it's slightly scary, slightly bad taste and very muddled. GRADE: B.

VENOM (R) - Klaus Kinski, Sarah Miles, Oliver Reed, Nigel Williamson. (Thriller) "Venom" is spine-tingling brain candy about a deadly snake on the loose in a London townhouse during a kidnapping attempt. The film is not quite a reptilian "Jaws," but its classy cast and tight editing put it several notches above the standard attack-of-the-killer-bee schlock. You won't want to look at a pair of snakeskin boots after seeing this one. GRADE: B.

ONE FROM THE HEART (R) Frederic Forrester, Teri Garr, Paul Jullia, Nastassia Kinski. (Drama) - On-again, off-again romance between a painfully ordinary Las Vegas grease monkey and an equally ordinary travel agent. Director Francis Ford Coppola has stretched this small, familiar little story into a giant neon and pastel spectacle.

Can Hollywood revive the classic 3-D films?

By David Handler
NEW YORK (NEA) - Observers have been saying for months that the movie business is in really terrible shape. They cite a number of reasons for crippling actors' and writers' strikes, competition from movies on cable, the miserable quality of the prevailing product, the general economic mess. It comes down to this: Movies are costing more to make every day, and fewer people are leaving home to see them.
But no report on the industry's health is quite so telling as the news that Warner Brothers has just re-released "House of Wax," a 1953 Vincent Price film that the studio is calling "The classic 3-D horror movie of all time."
Yes, movie fans, we may be witnessing the return of 3-D, that short-lived, utter-ly silly carnival novelty of 30 years ago. Like Superman's X-ray vision

Ultrasound replaces CT scans

CHICAGO (UPI) - Two University of Chicago doctors using ultrasound in brain surgery, rather than CT scans, liken the procedure to Superman looking into the skull with his X-ray vision.
Dr. George Dohrmann, a neurosurgeon, and Dr. Jonathan Rubin, a radiologist, began using the technique about 1 1/2 years ago. They believe they are among the first surgeons to use it in delicate neurosurgery.
Ultrasound, commonly used for diagnostic purposes on pregnant women and cardiac and abdominal patients, uses sound waves to generate television-like images of internal organs.
"CT scans look into the brain, but they look into the brain in a constrained way - the way a machine looks into the brain," Rubin said. "The ultrasound allows the surgeon to look at it while he's operating, sort of like Superman. He's got X-ray vision right through the head."
Surgeons can guide their way through the brain by holding a transducer, the scanning portion of the equipment, and looking at a nearby video screen showing exactly what is happening.
During surgery a portion of the skull is removed to expose the dura mater, an opaque, fibrous membrane covering the brain. A saline solution is dripped onto the dura mater as a coupling agent. The transducer is covered with a sterile, transparent plastic bag and placed directly on the dura mater to scan the brain.
CT scanners are "huge and would not really fit in most operating rooms," Dohrmann said. Ultrasound is portable and easily functional in the operating room.
The doctors planned to operate on a young woman who had a brain tumor. "It's in such a dangerous location that no one was really willing to get a specimen of it to see what it is," Dohrmann said.
Previously, neurosurgeons relied on pre-operative CT scanning, or computerized tomography, and angiograms to direct them to tumors. But the map-like images only provided reference points for locating the tumor.
"Here's no more looking or guessing. We can see it. So effectively we explore the brain with our eyes prior to opening its protective covering," Dohrmann said.
Ultrasound allows surgeons to view tumors directly as surgery takes place. A computer calculates exact measurements of depth and diameter.
The surgeon then plans the best operative approach at an angle least disruptive to delicate brain tissue, avoiding parts of the brain that control speech and movement.
"Every time the brain is manipulated, it can be dangerous," Dohrmann said. "If it's near a sensitive area, we can move away from that, by tipping the transducer."
The surgeon finds out where the tumor is, "how big it is, whether it's fluid or solid because that doesn't always show up on the CT scan. We can even see tiny cysts and blood vessels," Dohrmann said.

Vows to stick with condos

Builder blasts 'selfish' foes

By Richard Gody Herald Reporter

BOLTON — Larry F. Fiano told the Manchester Herald Thursday he is indirectly responsible for pressuring the selectmen into possibly making a premature decision about condominiums, and further charged that the residents fighting his proposed development don't have "an ounce of reasoning" behind their environmental claims.

Philip G. Dooley has described as the crux of the entire proposal. FIANO SAID he'll continue to pursue the development, "having gone through this type of thing before in other towns. I firmly believe that what I'm doing is right for the town, and for the region — creating affordable housing."

But not one has come to me and told me their concerns. Fiano said the need for affordable housing is evident nationwide. "There's a definite need out there. That's all I'm trying to provide." Fiano cited several news articles that have been publicizing the need for housing — housing not for low-income people — just plain housing.

A group of local residents has formed what they call the Bolton Environmental Association to combat the proposal. Fiano said the environmental concerns of the residents are really a screen for their own "selfish" interests, which he said stem from the psychology of "wanting to be the last one in the neighborhood."

Meanwhile, opponents plan to meet tonight

By Richard Gody Herald Reporter

BOLTON — The Bolton Environmental Association's first meeting is tonight at 7:30 at the United Methodist Church, and from all indications it should be well attended, despite fears that the selectmen's recent push for a moratorium on all condominiums will cause people to think such a meeting is senseless.

When he applied, Fiano said he expected opposition, especially since he was met with many foes when he put in the apartment complex on South Road about 10 years ago. His expectations did not go unfulfilled.

A day after news about the proposal was out, some residents met in the area to discuss the selectmen's meeting to urge them to check into the proposal. Then the organization formed, and again last Tuesday, more residents went to another selectmen's meeting to reaffirm their earlier points.

Mrs. Sawyer said the association hopes to determine by tonight's meeting "how many people are willing to fight it, and to what degree. Do they want to fight on the amateurish level, as a local neighborhood fight, or on the professional level, as in the courts?"

CALDWELL OIL, INC. 1.119 c.o.d. 649-8841

The man checking the oil at the service station in Independence, Mo., doesn't appear to be all that different from any other gas sta-

That man at the gas pump is a millionaire twice over

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (UPI) — The man at the pump doesn't appear to be all that different from any other service station owner pumping gas, but Arlo Essex is a millionaire twice over — at least on paper.

When Getty Oil Co. promised to build Essex a new gas station, he took the offer seriously. When the promise fell through, he took Getty to court.

A federal court jury in January awarded Essex $2.17 million of the $8 million he had asked for in his suit. The decision is on appeal. It may be years before any money is realized from the suit.

In the meantime, things remain about the same for Essex, 57, who has been in the service station business for 25 years. He still comes to work about 7:30 a.m. and leaves about noon every day, and his wife, Leona, comes in once a week to do the books.

There are no signs directing customers to the white, concrete block service station. Essex said the publicity hasn't brought any more customers to his six-pump, six-bay service station. Like before, Essex has one service man, one mechanic and one gas attendant.

"Nothing's changed," Essex said. "We haven't got anything yet and we don't know when or what I'll get. We don't want to make plans for something we don't have."

Gene Graham, Essex's lawyer, said it could be as long as two years before the case is closed.

Whether or not he will stay in the business if he gets his millions is hard to say, said Essex.

"I'll give it a real good look," Essex said. "I don't have a guarantee on any gas supplies from one day to the next month I would like to see my employees stay employed. I would hate to turn them out."

Essex's troubles with Getty Oil began in 1971, when he moved from a service station he was satisfied with to a different location at the request of the oil company.

"I was making a good comfortable living," Essex said about his first location. "We were able to give the children an education and had no problem paying our bills."

The new station, however, brought him problem after problem. The roof and gas tanks leaked, the sewer line was stopped up and there was a minimal amount of lighting in the building. Essex also said the gas tanks were dispensing water and the oil company was selling him gasoline at prices higher than it charged other dealers.

Week after week, Essex said, oil company representatives would promise a new station. Several times he passed up and nothing materialized. So Essex bought the station from Getty and sued.

"If we stay here, we'll have to remove the place," he said. "It needs a lot of attention."

DEAR ABBY: Jerry, the guy my best friend, Anita, has liked for years, asked me out last week. I turned him down because I didn't want to hurt Anita. Being the close friends we are, I told Anita that Jerry had asked me out but I turned him down. She said I should have accepted, but I got the feeling that she was really glad I didn't.

It's a sticky situation. What are your thoughts on this, Abby? CONFUSED

DEAR ABBY: I'm scared! All this sudden interest in reuniting natural parents with their children gave up makes me very uneasy. You see, I gave up a child for adoption years ago, and I do not want to be "reunited."

Even you are advertising ALMA — an agency that "matches" adopted children with their natural parents. Why?

will never find you. But be assured that the only agencies I recommend are those that reunite parents and children only if all parties are agreeable.

DEAR ABBY: Lately I have become very self-destructive in my sleep. Kicking the walls has gone on for quite some time, but just recently I woke up with a black eye, a bruised jaw and a swollen lip! I was really embarrassed to go to work looking so beat up. When I explained that I did this to myself in my sleep, nobody believed me.

My dad keeps teasing me about getting a straightjacket.

Splitting milk lactose: End result is similar

DEAR DR. LAMB: My husband, who is 67, is a diabetic. I am a borderline case. We would like some information about Lact-Aid. I have received a sample but haven't used it as it converts lactose in milk into sugar. I am wondering if there is enough sugar in the Lact-Aid to warrant not using it.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I have Crohn's disease. Can you tell me what causes it? I have severe low abdominal pain which at times really makes me sick. When the cramping is at its worst it causes me to have chills and nausea. The diarrhea usually lasts only three to four days. The constipation can make me feel as bad as the diarrhea.

When the cramping is at its worst it causes me to have chills and nausea. The diarrhea usually lasts only three to four days. The constipation can make me feel as bad as the diarrhea.

DEAR READER: For the benefit of other readers, Lact-Aid is an enzyme preparation you can put in milk and it will digest the milk sugar lactose into its two single sugars, galactose and glucose.

At birth we all have a similar enzyme in the small intestine that digests milk sugar and does exactly the same thing. Unfortunately, 10 to 20 percent of adult Anglo-Saxons and as many as 80 percent of other ethnic groups do not have enough lactase enzyme in the intestine to do this. These people develop milk intolerance which causes symptoms similar to a specific food or worse. If you are one of these people, you are allergic to milk intolerance since you have gotten Lact-Aid. Lact-Aid can be gotten from the Searle Company, P.O. Box 110, Pleasantville, N.J. 08222.

The lactose in milk is sugar. It is a disaccharide of galactose and glucose (called a disaccharide). Table sugar is a disaccharide of glucose and fructose. You will not get any more glucose from milk after using Lact-Aid than a diabetic without milk intolerance will get from ordinary milk.

In other words, if your diet allows you to use milk in conjunction with diabetes there is no reason why you can't use Lact-Aid. It really doesn't make any difference whether lactose is split by an enzyme in your intestine or split by an enzyme added to the milk before it is used. The end result is the same. The question about milk in general for diabetics is how rapid you absorb single sugars (double sugars are not absorbed and that is what causes the bowel symptoms).

To give you more information on milk intolerance I am sending you The Health Letter number 72, Milk Intolerance: Good and Bad. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me. In care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Few Chicago cab drivers know where they're going

CHICAGO (UPI) — Jump in a cab in Chicago, experienced city dwellers say, and you may never reach your destination.

Karen Pettite, the city's consumer affairs commissioner, said Tuesday the recent influx of immigrants who have obtained chauffeurs' licenses has triggered a rash of complaints about cab drivers who can't speak English and who don't know where they're going.

The city Tuesday is releasing its 12,000 licensed cab drivers in an effort to weed out those who don't know their way around town.

"What if you want to put your mother or elderly aunt in a cab and send her home in the city, to the doctor, say?" Ms. Pettite asked. "She may not know where she's going, so the driver better."

Ms. Pettite said her office gets about 2,500 complaints a year about cabs and recently the focus has

McDonald's performance falters

Profit gain not as big as it looks

You know that old magician's trick — now you see it, now you don't.

That's an illusion ... which can even be applied to a company's sales and earnings report; in other words, what you think you see, you don't.

Take, for example, McDonald Corp.'s performance in the fourth quarter of '81. The kingpin of the fast-food chains reported a 17 percent profit gain on a 12 percent sales increase. That's a pretty darn good showing, considering the recessionary climate. But then, judging from the hefty institutional holdings of McDonald's shares, Wall Street has come to expect a lot from this well-regarded growth company.

However, if you speak to the folks at E.F. Hutton, a hard-nosed analysis of '81's fourth quarter shows they weren't nearly as mealy as they looked. Moreover, and here's what's disturbing — the results raise the possibility that McDonald's may have fallen prey to a shrinking growth rate that may not be that easy to reverse.

The fella who did the analysis, Michael Culp, Hutton's enterprising fast-food specialist, tells me the "poor quality" of McDonald's fourth quarter earnings only tends to reinforce his view that "the company's shares represent dead money for the balance of '82."

DEAR ABBY: I'm scared! All this sudden interest in reuniting natural parents with their children gave up makes me very uneasy. You see, I gave up a child for adoption years ago, and I do not want to be "reunited."

DEAR ABBY: I'm scared! All this sudden interest in reuniting natural parents with their children gave up makes me very uneasy. You see, I gave up a child for adoption years ago, and I do not want to be "reunited."

percentage of sales. And this in turn put the pressure on operating income.

SO OPERATING INCOME — one of the chief barometers of measuring a company's performance — only rose a little over 4 percent (from $115 million in fourth quarter '81 to $120 million in fourth quarter '82). Culp points out — and rightly so — that such an increase is not what growth companies are all about ... and that in McDonald's case, it was a big disappointment. To cut the mustard, McDonald's should have achieved a 15-20 percent gain in operating income, Culp says.

But what about that imposing 17 percent gain in fourth-quarter net income ($61.2 million in '81, vs. $52.4 million in '80)?

Judging from Culp's analysis, this performance — based on how it was achieved — was about as appetizing as a burnt Big Mac.

For starters, he points to a lower tax rate in the final quarter of '81 than in '80's fourth quarter — thus reducing the profit gain to just 15 percent.

Included in '81's fourth-quarter results was $6 million of non-recurring income from a meals-tax refund and the repurchase of debentures. Knock this out and the profit increase is whittled away again to just 8 percent. But wait, the performance was not even that good. Culp tells me I strip away a number of other non-recurring items — namely, foreign currency translation, gains on sales of restaurant properties and interest expenses — the real profit advance shrinks to a mere 4 to 5 percent.

The sad fact is, says Culp, that McDonald's reports a 17 percent profit increase and the institutions smile and say, oh well, another 17 percent gain. And in fact it's really only a paltry 4 to 5 percent rise. When it comes, he adds, is not buying McDonald's for just a 4 to 5 percent earnings gain.

THE ANALYST'S negative assessment of McDonald's is not just confined to last year's final quarter, but to early '82 results as well. And as a result of what he sees, he predicts a flat first quarter for the company.

Culp points out that McDonald's, in last year's final quarter, but to early '82 results as well. And as a result of what he sees, he predicts a flat first quarter for the company.

Culp points out that McDonald's, in last year's final quarter, benefited not only from that hike in menu prices, but from generally favorable weather as well. But in January, he says, the weather was awful and there were no new price boosts. Accordingly, January, he says, has to be a big problem, and, in fact, McDonald's, he tells me, has already acknowledged that "January was a difficult month."

Since Hutton itself is projecting a "go-nowhere" stock market in '82, an investment in McDonald's at this juncture makes no sense, as Culp sees it, because its shares, at the very best, figure to be a lackluster performer for the balance of the year. A company with uncertainties is not what you want to own in an uncertain environment, he adds.

What does McDonald's chief Fred Turner think about all of this? He doesn't want to talk about it. Apparently, when Hutton talks, McDonald's doesn't care to listen.

South has best business climate

By LeRoy Pope
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK — It has taken over 100 years for the South to overcome its Civil War defeat — at least insofar as the climate for manufacturing is concerned.

Some historians have argued for years that the South lost the war only because its slave economy was inefficient compared with northern free labor; and that made its industry too costly. Of course not everybody accepts this argument.

The latest survey of the Chicago-based national accounting firm, Alexander Grant & Co., shows that five of the 10 states with the best economic climates for manufacturing today were members of the Confederacy. Only one — Kansas — was in the Union during the war and it had just joined. The other four then were western territories.

The top 10 on the list are Florida, Texas, Colorado, Kansas, North Dakota, Mississippi, New Mexico, Arizona, Louisiana and Georgia.

On the other hand, New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Connecticut and the other states that furnished the sinews of war for the Union are way down on Grant's 1981 list.

Grant rates the 48 contiguous states (Alaska and Hawaii are not rated) on 22 factors in five categories: state and local government fiscal policies, state regulated employment costs, labor costs, labor availability, and miscellaneous factors, including the cost of energy and environmental control and population density.

The results show considerable variation. Rates per hour ranged from $5.44 in Mississippi to $9.52 in Michigan. Low wages, of course, contribute to a good climate for manufacturing from the point of view of employers and investors. The national average was $7.13.

Percentage of the work force unionized ranged from 6 percent in North Carolina to 29.2 percent in New York.

Vocational education enrollment was surprisingly low, an average of only 0.93 percent of the population enrolled and the highest percentage was only 5.69 percent in Arizona.

One surprise was that Virginia had the largest losses of time due to strikes — 1.26 percent. The national average was only 0.14 percent.

The value added per dollar of production payrolls was highest for Louisiana workers at $5.24 and lowest in the automobilemaking state of Michigan at $2.95.

Energy cost was lowest in Louisiana by $1.59 per million BTUs and highest in Connecticut at $4.44.

New Jersey, Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Connecticut had the highest population densities and Louisiana the lowest. The figures were 979.1 per square mile in New Jersey and only 4.8 in Wyoming.

And did you know the factors, the Grant survey rated the states not only on their present levels but on the degrees of changes, growth or decline, in these factors in recent years. Changes in state taxes and changes in per capita debt and in overall state expenditures thus expanded a comparative "strong influence on the final ratings.

California benefited in the ratings because of the big — 21.5 percent — drop in its total tax bill per $1,000 of personal income following the voting of the much-discussed Proposition 13.

Nebraska had the largest per capita debt, $2,933. The average for most states was around $1,400.

In brief

Bid opening set

The town will open bids at 11 a.m. March 25 on a drainage project that results from the relocation of Pleasant Valley Road in connection with the development of Backland Industrial Park.

The work involves a drainage outfall, and the installation of it will complete a job begun about three years ago and held up, partially, because of problems with obtaining permits.

Information for bidders will be available soon at the Office of the Director of General Services in the Municipal Building.

Rates down

HARTFORD — Interest rates appear to be trending downward and a compromise on the federal budget may be pending which would cut spending in defense and entitlement programs, according to Advent Inc., stock and bond broker in Hartford.

If the compromise becomes a reality, it could mean a sustained stock and bond market rally.

The stock market is presently two-tiered, Advent said. While oil prices continue to decline and energy-related stocks continue to slump, retailers, utilities, banks, drugs and food stock continue to show strength, the brokers said.

Wins award

J.H.C. Construction Inc. of 104 Hilliard St., Manchester, has received an award for being second in 1981 sales volume in the Northeast Region from Odyssey Building Systems Inc. of Avon, Mass.

The presentation was made to J.H.C. representatives Ken Carney and Roger Cottle at a recent convention at the Cerromar Beach Hotel, Puerto Rico, sponsored by Odyssey.

Booklet offered

HARTFORD — A new booklet offering information on alternatives open to savers is available from the Better Business Bureau of Greater Hartford.

"Tips on Saving" describes different ways to save, with information on savings accounts NOW accounts, all-savers certificates, certificates of deposit, money-market certificates, and retirement plans.

A special section of the booklet offers advice on ways to invest money, with information on stocks and bonds, mutual funds, money-market funds, Treasury bills and U.S. savings bonds.

Furnaces, water heaters, air conditioners — and, to a lesser extent, refrigerators and clothes dryers — account for more than 90 percent of the energy used in the home. How can you cut down on that energy usage?

One thing you can do to help is to buy energy-efficient appliances. Instead of spending $610 on an 18.4 cubic foot Tappan 95-1870 refrigerator-freezer that will cost $7.06 a month to operate (based on 1979 Consumer Reports tests and an average electricity cost of 5.6 cents a kilowatt hour) you could spend $569 (a $179 saving) on a 17.2 cubic inch Whirlpool top-freezer model (EHT1718K) that could cost you 30 percent less to operate.

The Department of Energy (DOE) was going to set minimum standards for appliance energy efficiency, but Energy Secretary James B. Edwards withdrew the proposed standards for "further study" last year.

The Reagan administration has made it clear that it opposes the standards altogether.

If you rent, you probably don't even get to choose the appliances you use. The landlord usually purchases the major appliances and

Buy energy-efficient appliances to save the renter generally pays the electric bill. If you rent, you may be paying unnecessarily high utility bills for energy-inefficient appliances that your landlord purchased.

The federal government is also cutting back on other programs to encourage energy conservation, including assistance to low-income people to weatherize their homes and regulations requiring utilities to help their customers conserve.

And if you're poor, you probably spend about 25 percent of your income on energy. If you are middle- or high-income, you probably spend about 10 percent, just under 10 percent.

In many cases the poor live in houses that could benefit from insulation, storm windows and other measures. But the DOE's weatherization assistance programs, described as "the principal effort to help poor people meet the costs of rising energy prices," has been substantially cut.

Tax seminar set

HARTFORD — The real-estate tax advantages of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 will be the subject of a one-day seminar on April 23, under the auspices of the Hartford Architecture Conservancy and the Connecticut Historical Commission, in cooperation with the Connecticut Trust for Historic Preservation and Connecticut Preservation Action.

Keynote speaker will be Abura Anthony, who will give an overview of ERTA '81. He is vice president of policy and planning for the National Trust.

Anthony will be joined by James Wisner, President of CG Management Resources of Connecticut General Life Insurance Corp. Wisner will speak on partnerships and syndications as they relate to rehabilitation projects and profits. James Buech of the Greater Boston Community Development Corp. will show how non-profit organizations can benefit from the new tax incentives. In addition, slide-illustrated case studies of two successful Connecticut rehabilitation projects will be presented.

Entitled "New Tax Incentives for Old Buildings," the seminar will take place on the grounds of the Connecticut General Life Insurance Co. in Bloomfield. Reservations and questions should be directed to the Hartford Architecture Conservancy, 130 Washington St., Hartford 06106 — or by calling 625-0279.
