Former higher tar smokers applaud MERIT as "Best-tasting low tar I've tried."

Can a low tar cigarette provide the taste incentive to switch smokers from higher tar brands? Research proves MERIT can.

Taste Debate Ends.

Nationwide survey reveals over 90% of MERIT smokers who switched from higher tar are glad they did. In fact, 94% don't even miss their former brands.

Further Evidence: 9 out of 10 former higher tar smokers report MERIT an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

MERIT Landslide.

In addition, extensive unmarkedpack tests confirm that MERIT delivers a winning combination of taste and low tar when compared with higher tar leaders.

Confirmed: The overwhelming majority of smokers reported MERIT taste equal to-or better than-leading higher tar brands.

Confirmed: When tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking-is MERIT.

Representatives of Manchester and the Mattabassett Sewer District failed yesterday to Kleinschmidt viewed the ash in August at Matagree on terms under which the town would concover for the town's landfill.

Town Attorney Kevin O'Brien said today new meeting has been scheduled. The town administration has been given Tuesday deadline to work out an accord with Mat tabassett. The Board of Directors set that deadline when it chastized General Manager Robert B. Weiss Monday for not having insisted on formal, binding agreements from the district.

The lack of such agreements is blamed for the excessively wet fill, and the poor quality of much of it, that Manchester has received from Matabassett since deliveries began in early winter. Yesterday's meeting was at the home of Weiss, who is confined to bed as the result of a back in-

At the meeting were Weiss; George A. Kandra, Manchester's director of public works; Steven Werbner, acting assistant general manager; Gregory Abrahamian, executive director of the ssett district; O'Brien for the town, and attorney Brian Gaffney of New Britain for the O'Brien declined to comment on the talks, but said there was room for reasonable men to differ. One issue is how much the town will charge the district for undesirable material it receives beyond what the Board of Directors bargained for last summer.

THE TENSION between Weiss and the board is chiefly over the informality procedures of the administration used in dealing with Mattabassett for delivery of the cover material.

It was sparked, however, by reports that

New virus may bring epidemic

By Charles S. Taylor United Press International

ATLANTA - A new strain of Asian flu virus is developing - an event that could mean an upcoming major epidemic - but scientists said today there was no evidence yet of increased outbreaks. The national Centers for Disease Control said the strain, dubbed A-Shanghai, represents an antigenic "drift" from previous A-type flu Dr. Karl Kappus of the CDC's virology division said such changes in flu viruses sometimes presage major influenza epidemics in the United States and other parts of the world, because populations have little natural immunity to a new virus. Despite the virus change, however, Kappus said preliminary information about AShanghai suggests the current flu vaccine, which probably will be recommended for next year, will continue to be protective against all known active strains of flu.

Von Bulow jury still deliberating

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) - The Claus von Bulow attempted-murder jury, seven men and five women who put in five hours deliberating Thursday arrived 25 minutes early today and got down to work for the second day. The jury arrived in a red bus at the Newport County Courthouse at 9:05 a.m. and walked a few feet in a light rain to a side door. A court attache said jury members had gone directly to their deliberation room.

They were sequestered in a motel Newport County. The judge, who had their welfare at dinner Thursday night, was not in the courthouse when they The jury, which had been sworn in on

Feb. 1, was deliberating in a small room with a 12-foot-long wooden table, 22 big wooden armchairs, and 142 exhibits, which promised to keep them busy. Among the chief exhibits was a syringe and a hypodermic needle that had been found to bear traces of insulin and barbiturates. The Danish aristocrat defendant, who married an American heiress 15 years ago, is accused of twice trying to kill her by injecting her with insulin.

Prayer decision to be appealed

LUBBOCK, Texas (UPI) - School officials said they may appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court a lower court's decision rejecting the district's policy of allowing oluntary prayer on school grounds. The Lubbock Independent School District's policy of permitting voluntary student religious gatherings before and after classes had been upheld by U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodard. However, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans reversed Woodard Thursday, ruling the practice violated the First Amendment's ban on etablishment of an official religion.

Blaze ruins house

A fire caused by a smoldering cigarette tossed in a wastepaper basket destroyed one room and caused heat and smoke damage to other rooms in an Arch Street rooming house Thursday.

About 15 people live at the rooming house at 14 Arch Street. About half of them were at home when the fire started at 1 p.m. The fire apparently began when

Sandra Barker, 26, emptied an ashtray into a wastepaper basket in her closet. About five minutes later. Miss Barker said she heard something and opened the closet door and found the whole closet in Joyce Catalina, who lived on the second floor of the house, as did Miss Barker, was crocheting when she heard Miss Barker's screams, ran to her room and saw the flames. Ms. Catalina alerted the other residents of the house to the fire. Barbara Emerson, a first floor resident, called the fire department.

Manchester Fire Chief John Rivosa said Miss Barker's room and all its contents were destroyed by the fire. Part of the attic above her room was also damaged, he said. The rest of the house received heat, smoke and water damage, Rivosa said.

Rivosa said the fire was under control about 35 minutes after the firefighters had arrived on the scene. He said the fire had the potential to be much more serious than it was.

"We did a terrific job stopping that one," he said. Fire department personnel were on the scene at the house until 5 p.m., Rivosa said. No estimate of damage was available Friday morning. The home was owned by Harold Balch, bystanders said.

Miss Barker, who said she has lived in town all her life and is a 1973 graduate of Manchester High School, said she planned to stay with her grandmother

Two organizations said Thursday night they would consider legal action to block the town from instituting a Paramedic plan recommended by assistant health director Ronald Kraatz.

Representatives of the Eighth Utilities District, attending a meeting of the Emergency Medical Services Council, questioned Kraatz's proposal to put the paramedics in the town fire departnent. They said that taxing residents of the Eighth District. which has its own volunteer fire department, to provide paramediwould also subsidize the town fire

SOME MEMBERS of the public cited a referendum in the November election, when voters approved up to $309,000 for a paramedic program. The program at that time was described as the EMS proposal operating out of the hospital. Thomas Landers said the town has a moral responsibility to go with that plan, or go back to the public

Candidates breaking tradition

WASHINGTON - Everyone knows that if you're planning to run for president in 1984, it helps to raise money for other candidates during the midterm election campaign. But, instead, Sen. Gary Hart is supplying Democrats with position papers on national defense, the economy and energy.

Hart doesn't expect other Democrats to swallow his ideas whole, but he does want to establish long before 1984 rolls around that he does have some thoughts on national directions. "I think this is going to be a year when ideas matter." he says. Everyone also knows that it you're planning to run for president in 1984, it helps to move around this year and get yourself better known to the voters. The one thing they seem to have in common is this conviction that 1984 is not a year to, as the cliche has it, fight the last war.

THIS DOESN'T SUGGEST that everyone running is trying something different. Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale is doing all the orthodox things - speaking for other can didates, running a PAC, showing possible. In his position as the Similarly, Sen. Edward M Kennedy is doing the expected thing by concentrating this year with only occasional diversions on his re-election campaign in Massachusetts, although he also has a PAC in place. If you are as well known as Ted Kennedy, that is all that is required.

But the fact that Glenn, Askew and Hart are operating their campaigns in somewhat unorthodox ways reflects a widespread consensus in the Democratic Party today - the contest for the nomination is not only wide open right now but likely to develop along somewhat un-

Babysitting

Employees and employers see different sides of the issue

By Susan Plese

"I was supposed to go to this lady's house to meet her child. She said that her ex-husband would bring the child over. I waited for three hours. She never even left any numbers, so finally I started calling all the numbers on her memo board, and I found out that the child was at a sister's house.

Dawn Logan, 493 Adams St., tells that story as evidence of parents' inconsideration to sitters. But gripes of their own

One of our sitters was dropped off by a whole carload of people," says one mother. "I thought nothing of it, until we arrived home and found the sitter crying. My daughter told me that the car full of people had come back, the sitter had allowed them in the house, and they

BABYSITTERS ARE those people who let us take time off from the kids on the weekend. Whether it's linner out, an evening with friends, a quick movie, an important meeting, or a day at the office, the babysitter as become an increasingly important commodity. They are usually female, though a significant number in this enlightened age are male. They feed dinner to a noisy table-full of children, they give baths to wriggling charges, they read bedtime stories, and mes they even wash the dishes and clear toys off

They are in charge of a few precious lives for a few short hours, and they work for wages that would make factory workers in underdeveloped countries cringe. (Going rate in Manchester is $1.25 to $1.50). So what is the nature of the sitters' delicate relationship with parents? What do parents really think about their shitters? And what would sitters tell parents if they had a chance?

MATT PAGGIOLI "They tell you to keep an eye on the kids and then they run and climb all over things - they take advantage of you."

things like a toilet that doesn't flush or the child who sleepwalks, scaring the life out of the sitter. It's more the garden variety of gripes. "One kid I was aking care of fell and cut himself, but the parents didn't tell me where the band-aids were," Kim Pascarelli of 22 Crosby Road says. "It took me about a half hour to find

"I HATE IT WHEN they don't tell me where things are, too," Michelle Lovett of 74 Wedgewood Drive adds. "Like the diapers. The 2-year-old wet and I didn't know where the diapers were, Luckily, (he) knew where they Most parents, used to the care as you're going to sit for one kid and when you get there, there's five," John Zak, 626 Center St. adds. Money, in fact, is a universal complaint, judging from other more experienced sitters who were contacted an hour for a family of small children. On one occasion when the parents arrived home and checked the clock, week. she had been there for three and three quarters hours. "She gave me $4 and asked for a quarter in change,"

BUT THAT'S NOT as bad as the people who don't pay at all. A surprising number of kids recount times Dayl Graves says one of her pet peeves is sitters who when parents "forgot" to pay or "didn't have change." leave a mess after them or dirty dishes in the sink. Don

FLORENCE SHEILS ..."I had a sitter once who didn't want to change diapers, and I didn't find out until I got home that night."

"It never happened to me," Amy Burgess of 41 Fern-dale Drive says, "but it happened to my sister. She But sitters, too, have their woes. When the Herald never got $5 owed her. The people said they would give it visited a babysitting class taught by Laura Boutilier at to her later but they never did. She went back for the Illing Junior High School this week, the town's newest money several times but they never had it, so she never "I like to be told ahead of time what I'm going to be paid," she continues. "I charge $1 or $1.50, and I like them to tell me that when I sit for the first time." Another ex-babysitter, now in college, expressed her frustrations with parents "who had enough money to go to a movie," but didn't have enough money to pay her.

Another universal complaint is about the behavior of some children. Matt Paggioli sums it up by saying "they (parents) tell you to keep an eye on the kids and then the kids run and climb all over things — they take advan-

Most parents, used to the care and feeding of babysitters, try to leave some special food for a teen caught with a case of the munchies. But, Kim Pascarelli But what about the parents? What kinds of things trouble them the most? Parents gripes come under the heading "The Things One girl, now in college, says that she used to sit for $1 Babysitters Don't Do." Florence Sheils of 406 Keeney St. uses a sitter for her two small children about once a na Mlodzinski, 35 Dover Road, agrees. "I don't like coming home to a bigger mess than when I left." Mrs. Graves also complains about the general lack of common sense, especially when it comes to answering the door. "Even if the girl were home alone and not with our child, it wouldn't be smart to open the door." But she balances that criticism with an anecdote. She said that one time when she was gone and the sitter was in charge, her brother-in-law came to the door. "The sitter wouldn't let him in, even after he gave her a bad time. I was so proud of her. She was only in the sixth grade, so it shows you don't have to be older to

Laura Boutilier teaches babysitting, and she also uses their services. She sprinkles her lectures with accounts of little problems she herself has experienced with

"I WOLLD SAY that my biggest complaint is with sitters who aren't interested in the kids - they talk on the phone or do their homework, and don't interact with

Mrs. Boutilier teaches her students to bring special activities with them to share with the smaller children - games puzzles, small toys, Another mother, who asked not to be identified, said that her most serious problems came when she used a professional babysitting service before she moved to Connecticut. "They sent some fruitcakes." she says.

"I came home one night and found the sitter, an old woman, asleep on the couch with the doors all open. It took a struggle to awaken her. IT ALL BOILS DOWN to a couple of very important issues. The babysitters ask to be treated with consideration. The want to be paid promptly and fairly, and they want to have reasonable assurance that the kids will Parents, on the other hand, want sitters who listen and heed instructions, who pay attention to the children,

It's doughnuts, pizza and laps all night long

By Barbara Richmond

Herald Reporter The Manchester High School swimming pool will be a busy place tonight with students in and out of the pool and pizzas and donuts being served from 9 p.m. to about 8 Saturday morning.

The occasion is the annual Swim-A-Thon sponsored by the Instructors of the Handicapped — a group of dedicated Manchester High School and other area high school students who spend every Sunday for eight months of the year, teaching swimming to retarded and handicapped people.

equipped pool for use by the handicapped. The idea of the pool was conceived about 20 years ago. About four years ago plans were drafted for a barrier-free instructional pool to be built adjacent to the Manchester High pool at a cost of about $200,000. This ambitious group of students has run two major fund-raising events each year. The organization is in its 26th year and the prime money makers are a bake sale and the swim-a-thon. Janet Locke,

The event is to raise money toward the building of a specially public relations officer for the group, said that in the past the swim event has raised up to $3,000. "But it may not be that much this year because there are fewer instructors. We really need more The instructors have been getting sponsors for the event during which each instructor must do at least 100 laps in the pool, during the marathon event. They can do more laps if they wish and the can do the laps anytime they wish but someone must be in the po-

In between the swimming and the pizza and donuts, those who have the energy can play volley ball or basketball and dance as there will be music piped in all night. Spectators will be allowed in until 11 p.m. and then the doors will be locked.

Linda Weiss is president of the group. Other officers, besides her and Miss Locke, are: Jennifer VanDyne, vice president; Heidi Cloutier, business secretary; Debbie Coombs, corresponding secretary; Bob Fitzgerald, treasurer; Andy Halpryn, and Suzie Hebert, male and female sergeants-at-arms. By Vernon Scott UPI Hollywood Reporter HOLLYWOOD - With few exceptions, the world of movie music - songs and scores for films - are the province of men and, according to one distaff composer, a closed corporation. Carol Connors, who wrote the lyrics to "Gonna Fly Now" for "Rocky," also has contributed music to "Looking for Mr. Goodbar," "Dressed to Kill." "The Earthling" and other films. The petite (4-foot-111/2) brunette says the Hollywood music industry is anti-female.

Carol admits most men are incurable romantics. more so than women, but insists that does not give them exclusive domain over romantic movie scores. BUSINESS / Classified Is Saudi prince involved in scandal?

Payoff allegations fly in takeover bid

Arabian royal family — one involving reported hidden payoffs of about $1.5 million a year — are contained in an affidavit that's been obtained by a team of investigators employed by Brunswick Corp., the subject of a spirited takeover bid by West Coast conglomerate

The affidavit, The Chicago Tribune has learned, charges that Prince Turki Ibn Abdul Aziz, the former Saudi deputy minister of defense and aviation and the brother of Crown Prince Fahd, has been a substantia and hidden beneficiary of an exclusive medical supply contract between Arab-owned Al-Fassi Trading Corp.

 Under this agreement, Al-Fassi supplies all medical equipment and supplies to Whittaker Saudi Arabia Ltd., which is 51 percent owned by the conglomerate; the other 49 percent is held by an Arab investor The health care services business has been the big spark behind a sharply rising growth rate for Whittaker and the biggest chunk of it comes from Saudi Arabia. Last year, for example, Whittaker generated about 17 percent of its $1.7 billion in sales and more than half of ts operating profits from its Saudi activities. BRUNSWICK ATTORNEYS, apparently loathe to get involved in a mud-slinging contest, have kept its affidavit under wraps. But one source privy to it tells me it's a statement given by Jorge F. Ciccone, a former official of the Al-Fassi Trading Corp., who worked for the firm in its Century City, Calif., offices between 1976 and secretary of the corporation and a personal adviser to Fassi. The other owner was Mohammed's father Sheikh Shamsuddeen Al-Fassi

The younger Al-Fassi is Prince Turki's brother-inlaw; the elder Al-Fassi is the prince's father-in-law. In his affidavit, Ciccone alleges that Prince Turki is the controlling figure at the Al-Fassi Trading Co., and, in fact, gets 75 percent of all of this company's income.
