

Average stockholder plays second fiddle

This is about one of the biggest disgraces in corporate America—the ongoing rape of the stockholder. And the sad fact is it'll just go on and on.

Example: Last year, Standard Oil of California made a ploy to acquire Amex Inc., the big natural resources company, for $78.50 a share. Amex shareholders were never given a shot at saying "yes" or "no." The Amex directors simply said "no" ... and that was it. Today Amex's share is selling at around $28.50.

Or how about Grumman Corp.'s rejection of a $45-a-share bid from LTV? Grumman's management even went so far as Ok'ing in the use of pension fund money to buy the company's own shares in the effort to block the deal. Today, Grumman's shares are trading around $22.50.

offer and arbitrage activity associated with takeovers that the only time they shout "foul" is when they end up losing money.

ONE MAN intimately involved in the takeover game, William Chatlos, argues that stockholders are being "cheated and deprived" on a wide-scale basis. A former partner of proxy solicitor Georgetown & Co., where he helped shape takeover strategy—he's now a consultant in the field—Chatlos roasts management for its lack of responsibility to its shareholders.

It's outrageous, he tells me, that today's management operates on the theory that it's their sole function to create wealth through rising earnings and dividend payouts—"and that some third party God or the stock market will convert it all into rising stock prices."

The whole idea, as Chatlos sees it, went out the window in '80 (the top of a huge and highly speculative bull market) when the economic structure of the marketplace changed. Specifically, he's talking of a new market structure. Specifically, he's talking of a new market structure. Specifically, he's talking of a new market structure.

WHAT DOES IT all mean? According to Chatlos, corporate management must undertake the responsibility for a better market price for its company's shares; it can no longer simply say—"Oh well, I've done my very best to improve earnings ... and so therefore I've done my job."

CONVERSATIONS WITH SOURCES in the merger and acquisition field unearth a lot of pros and cons on the propriety of certain takeover deals. But specific disturbing trends clearly emerge. Chief among them:

In too many cases, the directors of a takeover target are ignoring their fiduciary responsibility (although they've headily deny it) by bowing to management's wishes and rejecting big premiums over the existing stock prices.

Many of the best minds in the legal profession are so busy divvying up the spoils from tender offers, suits and what-have-you that they are closing their eyes to the repeated and mounting injustices in the merger and acquisition game.

The better brokerage houses are so involved in pursuing the big bucks from investment banking, tender cases where companies fight a takeover and entice a higher bid (either from the same wooer or a new one), invariably the ultimate takeover price is considerably higher; in some cases, he says, it'll run 40 to 50 percent higher.

I'M NOT ABOUT TO TAKE issue with Flom (whom I like and respect), but I wonder how convincing a case he could make to shareholders of a slew of companies that rejected takeover bids and whose stock prices are now much longer.

I'm talking about companies like Woolworth, which turned down $35 a share from Brascan in '79 (the stock's now around 17 1/2). Or Zapata, which last year rejected a $36.50-a-share offer from Occidental Petroleum (the stock's now around $18).

You know, it would be great if the choice of a takeover was ultimately left to the discretion of the shareholder—but then, that would strip corporate management of the ability to perpetuate its own interest regardless of the rights or wrongs of the matter. On second thought, I take it all back; I don't want you to think this column is written by a dreamer.

Cost slowing for salesmen on the road

NEW YORK — After a decade of rises and three years of rapid advances in the various market areas of the United States, keeping a sales force on the road is slowing.

Sales & Marketing Management Magazine, in its annual survey, found the rise in the costs of lodging, food, drinks and automobile rentals in 80 metropolitan centers probably will dip below 10 percent this year. The increase last year was 12 percent, and that in 1980 was 14 percent.

The current declaration is all in lodging and auto rental, falling because of slowing inflation and the recession. The cost of lodging will jump about 9 percent this year, however, compared with a rise of 4.8 percent in 1981, the magazine said.

To give an idea of what it means over the long haul, S&MM noted the weekly cost of maintaining a salesperson on the road had climbed from $220.45 in 1972 to $655.25 in 1981. In this period, meals rose least — from $61.25 to $137.25, auto rental from $104.20 to $304 and lodging from $84 to $214.

In addition to calculating the cost of keeping people on the road, the S&MM annual survey keeps track of the steadily rising cost of making a sales call.

This is more complicated because it involves five different types of salespersons and must include their varying salaries as well as varying customs and growth in these costs slowed, however, in about the same proportion last year as the cost of keeping sales people on the road.

The average cost of a single sales call in 1981 ranged, though, from a low of $44.40 for a service salesperson to $89.80 for a call by a sales engineer.

The survey of the costs of keeping people on the road indicated the rise in hotel room rates this year will ease to 17.5 percent from 17 percent last year and auto rentals will rise only 8.5 percent against 12.6 percent last year.

The variation in the costs of maintaining salespeople and in overall selling costs in the various market areas of the United States is large. The two most expensive, New York and San Francisco-Oakland, are 50 percent above the national average.

The New York index is $144 a day and San Francisco-Oakland $152. Dayton, Ohio, the least expensive market, is $77.

The other most expensive markets are Washington $147, Chicago $140, Los Angeles $135, Boston and Miami each $126, and the Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Paterson, N.J., areas each $122.

After Dayton, Wichita, Kan., New Bedford and Fall River, Mass., Akron and Canton in Ohio, Omaha, Neb., Memphis, Tenn., Jersey City, N.J., Des Moines, Iowa, Jacksonville, Fla., and Springfield, Mass., were the cheapest areas.

One of the most important cost items for salespeople, of course, is the price of a good dinner for two with drinks and wine at a first class restaurant. The S&MM survey found this cost highest in Washington at a median of $110.30, against a national figure of $92.73. New York at $109.10 and Philadelphia at $101.20 were next. Miami, Houston and Chicago were the only other cities with costs above $100, the national average; Minneapolis at $82 was the cheapest followed by Detroit and Cleveland at $83 each.

VD increasing among teens in Manchester

By Nancy Thompson
Herald Reporter

Veneral disease is increasingly showing up in young teenagers from the Manchester area, several health professionals told the Advisory Board of Health Tuesday.

Representatives from Planned Parenthood, the Manchester Memorial Hospital VD Clinic and a nurse in private obstetrics-gynecology practice said they have begun to see more 13, 14- and 15-year-olds with veneral disease in the past year.

Penny Russman of Manchester's Planned Parenthood office said routine tests uncovered eight cases of gonorrhea, adding, "Most have been young teenagers."

Irma Meridy, a nurse in private practice, said her office had treated two young teenagers last year who had gonorrhea. "That's a first," she said.

The health professionals were invited to the Advisory Board of Health meeting by Dr. Alice Turek, acting chairman of the board and the town's health director. All cases of veneral disease must be reported to the health director, and Dr. Turek said she was alarmed by the increase in gonorrhea among young teenagers.

MS. RUSSMAN said the number of clients seen by Planned Parenthood, especially the number of young clients, has increased dramatically in recent years. In 1979 when the clinic started, it saw 144 patients, of which 44 percent were between 15- and 19-year-olds.

In 1981, Planned Parenthood saw 3,000 patients — a 100 percent increase over 1980. Of those, 53 percent were under 19 and 30 percent were under 17.

"What the research shows, nationwide, is that kids are becoming sexually active at a younger age," Ms. Russman said. "That is apparent in the patient profile in Manchester."

Dr. Turek said, "It isn't that we're having an epidemic of gonorrhea among young people. It's just that so many are exposed, the number of cases are going up."

THE HEALTH professionals stressed the need to educate children to the responsibilities and the consequences of having sex.

"They have to accept that veneral disease is a side-effect of having sex with multiple partners," Ms. Russman said.

Helen Bristette, a nurse with the Manchester Memorial Hospital VD Clinic, said she recently talked with a 15-year-old girl who had one Fallopian tube and an ovary removed because of gonorrhea. She brought in her partner to be tested. He had no symptoms, but tests showed he had gonorrhea.

"This was a 15-year-old boy," Ms. Bristette said. "Where do we go from here?"

MS. BRISSETTE said she is concerned about teenagers in outlying towns who cannot get to the clinic for treatment. She said she sees junior high-aged youngsters who are brought in by older friends or by their parents, but is afraid there may be many more who have no transportation to the clinic.

Mrs. Meridy cited the health risks to young teenagers giving birth. The mothers' bodies are not yet fully developed, she said, so there are risks to both the babies and the mothers' lives.

The health professionals blamed an emphasis on sex in the media and peer pressure for the younger age of sexual initiation, although Ms. Russman added that many of the youngest teenagers she sees have other problems.

"Morally, the whole situation, has shifted enormously," she said. "I was looking for a virgin for a panel and I couldn't find one — or anyone who would admit it."

THREE RIFLES AND AMMUNITION ... found in Cheney mill this morning

Police find arsenal in man's mill room

By Lisa Zowada
Herald Reporter

A report of a small of smoke early this morning led police to the discovery of a man living in a room of a former Cheney warehouse on Pine Street with his own small arsenal, which included five rifles, one shotgun, nine knives and hundreds of rounds of ammunition.

Earlier, police had responded to a call from the same area of the sound of firecrackers or gunshots, but found nothing.

The man, Daniel Brookman, 25, later admitted to a nurse at Manchester Memorial Hospital, where he was taken for a psychiatric examination, that he had been walking around the street earlier, firing one of the rifles. "To get someone to listen to him," police said.

Brookman, who told police he had been living in the room for five to six weeks with permission from the owner, will be transported to Norwich State Hospital today, a hospital spokesman said.

A police report listed the name of the owner as Kibbe Gerstein.

Police responded along with the Town Fire Department to the report of the small of smoke at about 5:30 a.m. Firefighters had to break into the room where Brookman was sitting under a sleeping bag.

Police said the fire was confined to the couch. Brookman told police he had started the fire with a cigarette. Police said he appeared unconcerned about the smoldering couch when they entered the room.

Chances good armory stays

Chances look "pretty good" for the Manchester Armory to remain open, state Sen. Carl A. Zimser said today.

Zimser said he had spoken to members of the subcommittee of the Legislature's Appropriations Committee, which is considering a recommendation to close nine National Guard armories, including Manchester's, and they indicated they will recommend only one or possibly two armories be closed.

Zimser said a bill to close armories in West Hartford and Wallingford would probably be put forth because those communities have expressed interest in acquiring the armory buildings.

"The subcommittee has come to the determination that the cost savings to the state of Connecticut will not be significant from closing all nine armories," Zimser said. "Besides that, what do you do with the building once it's closed?"

ONE POLICE report said Brookman was wearing a military camouflage outfit and the room was covered with various pieces of military camouflage attire.

Another report said a scope-sighted M-1 carbine, loaded with a live round in its chamber and eight rounds in the magazine, was found. All the guns were taken to police headquarters.

One officer who had been at the scene said Brookman had 300 to 400 rounds of ammunition for each of the rifles he had.

BROOKMAN'S admission to Norwich raises a question because three days ago another Manchester man, who allegedly tried to hang himself in his jail cell and was deemed a possible threat to himself and a neighbor, was refused admission to the state mental institution because it was full.

Clifford A. Mason, 35, of 869 Main St., was taken back to police headquarters from the hospital and kept there until his presentation in court Monday for breach of peace and two other charges.

Mason was released after his appearance on a written promise to appear in court again on March 29.

Brookman said he is not suicidal and knotted his shirt around his neck as if he was going to hang himself only to get the attention of police.

Anne Morse, public information supervisor at Norwich Hospital, defended Brookman's admission despite the hospital's being very crowded, while not taking Mason, saying the hospital admits patients "based on clinical judgment."

"We have to have a decision to admit on what appears to be a drastic need for hospitalization. It's a matter of degree," Ms. Morse said today.

Brookman was charged with second degree reckless endangerment and reckless burning, police said.

Youths slain in West Bank

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Two Palestinian youths were shot to death today and an Israeli soldier was stabbed by one of the youths, military sources said. New strikes and demonstrations engulfed the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Military sources said a Palestinian youth armed with a knife accosted two soldiers on patrol in the West Bank town of Jenin. The youths stabbed one soldier and the other soldier opened fire, shooting the youth to death, the sources said.

The wounded soldier was taken to Afula Hospital in serious condition, the military sources said.

In an earlier incident a Palestinian teen-ager was shot and killed, from bullets apparently fired from a civilian in the West Bank town of Hebron. Demonstrations, some of the worst since 1976 in the occupied territories, extended today from Rafah in the Gaza Strip to Hebron in the southern part of the West Bank. The military slapped a curfew on Rafah.

The disturbances, now a week old, erupted after Israel dismissed the elected mayor of El Bireh in the West Bank, dissolved his council and replaced it with a Jewish committee.

Four Palestinian youths have been killed and at least 10 wounded in the confrontations — most of them tire burnings and rock throwings in West Bank towns and refugee camps.

Although today was the official end of the general strike called by Arab mayors, merchants kept their stores shuttered in East Jerusalem, where the strike was almost complete, Israeli radio said.

Large parts of the West Bank were occupied today by Israeli forces during wildcat actions of storekeepers.

In Rafah, Israeli soldiers fired tear gas, dispersing youths who burned stones and set up roadblocks of hurled tires in the town of $5,000 Palestinians.

The radio reported rock throwings in Ramallah, Nablus, Jericho, Nablus and Bethlehem and said Israeli security forces entered the refugee camp of Khan Yunis to quell disturbances.

Israeliis seize guerrilla unit

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Israeli troops captured a three-man Palestinian guerrilla force in southern Lebanon today after the Palestinians tried to infiltrate Israel.

A military announcement said the guerrillas, armed with Soviet-made Kalashnikov rifles, were spotted in northern Israel and were pursued into southern Lebanon and captured.

The announcement said the guerrillas were seized 3 miles north of Kibbutz Hanita in the western Galilee region of northwest Israel.

The reported infiltration repeated an attempted incursion of 15 months ago, when Israeli forces killed five guerrillas near Kibbutz Hanita.

The military announcement did not say what faction the guerrillas belonged to.

The incident is the first since two months ago when Israeli forces discovered three mines planted by guerrillas infiltrating from Jordan.

Israel warned at the time that it would not tolerate infiltration from any Arab country and said the cease-fire on the Lebanese border carried guarantees against Palestinian infiltration from Arab nations.

Begin wants to call November elections

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin survived a dramatic tied no-confidence vote but said in an emotionally charged Cabinet meeting he wants new elections in November.

Immediately after a 58-58 standoff vote Tuesday night in the Knesset, Israel's parliament, that signaled disapproval of Begin's handling of trouble in the occupied West Bank, the prime minister summoned his Cabinet in an emergency meeting to offer to resign.

Justice Minister Moshe Nissim said if Begin's ruling coalition does not attract new support after the April 25 Sinai withdrawal, "The government will not be able to function and new elections are inevitable." Ma'ariv newspaper reported.

Protests against Israel's use of force in the West Bank spread to the Gaza Strip Tuesday and the U.N. Security Council scheduled an emergency session today on Arab demands the violence must end.

The tense Knesset vote came a little over a month before the April 25 Sinai withdrawal. "The government will not be able to function and new elections are inevitable," Ma'ariv newspaper reported.

Had Begin resigned and become head of a caretaker government until new elections, it might have delayed the withdrawal of Israeli troops from the West Bank.

The no-confidence vote, introduced by the opposition Labor alignment, Communist and centrist Shinui parties, was triggered by Begin's handling of unrest on the annexed Syrian Golan Heights and the occupied West Bank of Jordan.

Analysts speculated Begin's threat to resign — as well as the Cabinet's rejection of his offer — were intended to bring dissidents in his coalition into line. Government officials denied comment.

It was the first time Begin did not win in six confidence votes since his reelection June 30 with a razor-thin one-vote majority for his Likud bloc coalition.

Answering rock-throwing youths with gunfire, Israeli troops have shot and killed two demonstrators and wounded 15 since a general strike on the West Bank began Thursday to protest the government's dismissal of an elected Arab town council.

State funds Center job

HARTFORD — The state has come up with the money to the long-awaited realignment of the Main Street-Center Street intersection in Manchester will be able to proceed.

This was revealed at a meeting Tuesday afternoon between the state Department of Transportation and representatives of the Capitol Region Council of Governments.

There had been considerable uncertainty about whether the state would find money for a number of top priority transportation projects, including the one in Manchester. But DOT officials, as expected, revealed they could transfer whatever was needed from other accounts.

OPINION

Anti-nuke drive is a local issue

The international movement for a nuclear arms freeze is alive right here in Manchester, and the Board of Directors can expect to be asked to endorse the freeze soon.

A local organization, with its roots in the Unitarian Church's peace fellowship, is forming to work for local support for the atomic weapons freeze, said organizer Pat Egan of 50 Marion Drive, a salesman.

Egan said the organization consisted mainly of himself, but he was confident it would quickly grow.

He said the aim was to push the directors to support formally the freeze. Plans also might include petitioning for a townwide referendum on the question, he added.

Support for a bi-lateral ban on new nuclear weapons has been spreading like wildfire. Town governments in several Connecticut towns, like Lyme and Old Lyme, already have endorsed the freeze. Town meetings throughout New England, including the majority of town meetings in relatively conservative New Hampshire and Vermont, have backed the freeze.

Manchester Spotlight

By Paul Hendrie — Herald Reporter

The Connecticut General Assembly overwhelmingly approved the resolution, the Senate vote was 33-1.

BUT WHY SHOULD international relations be any business of local governments, anyway? And what good would it do for Manchester to tell the U.S. and Soviet governments to stop building nuclear weapons?

"It's only at the local level that we're going to be able to get Congress and the administration going on this," said Egan.

If there was any lesson the Vietnam War clearly taught, it was the price of letting foreign policy be developed without public scrutiny. Only when the public woke up and the outcry grew loud enough did this government stop sending Americans to Indochina, to kill and be killed. In this case, the stakes are even higher and the impact of public opinion is particularly important. Public opinion both in this country and Europe has forced U.S. President Reagan and Soviet President Brezhnev to adopt at least the rhetoric of disarmament, as each tries to present himself as the peacemaker.

It's clear that Manchester would have virtually no chance of surviving an intercontinental nuclear war, considering the town's location just miles from Pratt & Whitney, an inviting target.

So, the nuclear arms freeze is just as much the business of Manchester and its officials as water rates, leaf collection and the town budget. Egan said a townwide referendum might be a good way to bring the issue to the townpeople. While the object would, of course, be to get the referendum approved, that would be almost secondary to the educational value, he said.

Egan attended workshops last weekend on strategies for promoting the arms freeze resolution in Connecticut towns. Bolton is considering such a resolution.

WHAT IS especially interesting about the mushrooming nuclear freeze movement is the disparity of its supporters. This movement has been making inroads in some of the most conservative areas and it is not composed strictly of the traditional elements of the peace movement.

Part of the appeal is that the resolution calls for bi-lateral disarmament. Conservatives can feel comfortable about the resolution because it also calls on the Soviet Union to stop building nuclear weapons. Loyal Republicans don't see it as a condemnation of their president, but a call to both sides.

"What's for nuclear proliferation?" said State Sen. Carl A. Zinzer, R-Manchester, when asked why a Republican like himself voted for the resolution. "It would be great to see if they could have that same petition and circulate it in the Kremlin, too."

Obser who oppose Reagan are uncorruptible with his aggressive brand of foreign policy. They like the resolution because it demonstrates to the administration the public's commitment to peace.

IN THE CAPITOL, the arms freeze resolution is just starting to find its way to the towns.

It's good to see Manchester people getting involved. With all our local problems, we sometimes lose sight of the bigger issues and what we can do about them.

It would be good, too, to see the Board of Directors act favorably on the resolution. Manchester likes to see itself as a town that stands up for its rights, and isn't afraid to confront big issues.

Let's see the town confront perhaps the biggest issue of them all.

The Opera Orchestra, which had previously used the West Point band and had been promised its services for "Rienzi" as long ago as December 1979, asked Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger to reconsider. But Cap stuck to his guns.

On Jan. 22, only a month before "Rienzi" was to be performed at the Kennedy Center in Washington, Weinberger wrote the orchestra group:

"Common ownership of the Defense establishment dictates that its resources be committed to support of events and activities of common interest and common benefit, and that the Department should not do for one what it cannot do for all."

While they were at it, the brass hats also called off the scheduled participation of the Navy "Sea Chanters."

Opera Orchestra officials were livid. The orchestra is a non-profit organization, with funding from the National Endowment for the Arts and an honorary board of government officials. It is hardly a "commercial venture," they maintain.

FURTHERMORE, orchestra officials pointed out in Mailgrams to Weinberger and the White House that the West Point band had performed at a commercial, profit-making event in New York's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel last November and December. The U.S. Marine Corps band had also taken part in the politically tinged celebration of Gov. Charles Robb's inaugural in Richmond, Va., last Jan. 16-17.

"They were quoting the Bible to us and then they had the arrogance to turn around and interpret the rules as they saw fit," orchestra official Carl Abraham complained to my reporter Jeff Nesbit.

The opera group appealed to Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., but he couldn't get past the stage door. "Once the denial was made, they really stayed firm," an Addabbo aide reported. "They didn't budge an inch."

The Opera Orchestra is contemplating a lawsuit against the DOD. As for the apparent misuse of the West Point band and the Marine Corps band on the other occasions, Pentagon officials said those responsible for the "indiscretions" would be formally reprimanded.

Footnote: "Rienzi" was performed on schedule to wild acclaim, with a pickup brass band replacing the West Point cadets. And there was, after all, one military musical group participating: the Coast Guard Academy's "Singing Idiots." In peacetime, the Coast Guard reports to the Department of Transportation, not to the Pentagon.

Pentagon aiming at orchestra

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon brass, evidently desperate for a triumph in these trying times of peace, have found someone to cash around: the Opera Orchestra of New York.

Though a bunch of long-haired musicians is hardly a match for the Pentagon, peacetime generals, like beggars, can't be choosers. So when officials of the Opera Orchestra recruited the West Point Marching Band for a production of Wagner's "Rienzi," the generals reacted as if a common private had sneaked into the Flag Officers Mess.

Reaching deep into its formidable arsenal of regulations, the Pentagon pooshahs found one that restricted military units from supporting "commercial ventures." So the West Point band's scheduled appearance was canceled forthwith.

The Opera Orchestra, which had previously used the West Point band and had been promised its services for "Rienzi" as long ago as December 1979, asked Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger to reconsider. But Cap stuck to his guns.

Manchester now has 12 districts

GOP try to derail vote plan fails

By Paul Hendrie
Herald Reporter

Town Republicans Tuesday night tried to derail the Democrats' proposed voting district plan — consisting of 12 districts — with a last-minute revelation that the Democratic Registrar of Voters already had commissioned the punching of computer cards, to accommodate the change.

The GOP disclosure didn't work, though, and the Democratically-controlled Board of Directors voted 6-3 along party lines to approve the 12-district plan.

Republican Town Committee member Louis Kocis charged the public hearing on the voting districts was a waste of time, because the results were pre-announced.

"The entire thing is a sham," said Kocis. "It's my understanding that the IBM cards for this new voter district plan are already being punched."

Kocis said afterward he thought it was presumptuous for Democratic Registrar Herbert J. Stevenson to begin preparing computer cards before the directors had acted.

Stevenson confirmed the computer cards already being punched. He said forward, however, that the calendars for primary challenges to party convention delegate slates — which will be selected tonight — forced him to have the cards prepared.

"They could be changed just as easily (if the board rejected the 12-district plan)," said Stevenson. He claimed it would not have cost the town any more money to abort the preparation of the computer cards. If the board had not approved the Democratic plan.

DEMOCRATIC Town Chairman Theodore R. Cummings formally presented the Democratic plan. He said the addition of two new voting districts to the current 10 would cost about $1,700 more per election, but he claimed that would be a worthwhile expense if the extra districts made voting more convenient, and increased turnout.

"I don't think there has been evidence offered that this would get more people out," replied Republican Town Committee member Geoffrey Pfeiffer, who presented the GOP's alternative 10-district proposal.

Pfeiffer argued the GOP plan would accomplish the same goal of making voting convenient without spending the extra cash.

Stevenson implied the Republicans never bothered to get involved in a bipartisan effort to change new district lines. "I recall sitting down 10 years ago with the Republicans to work this out," said Stevenson. "I did not have that same opportunity this time."

Stevenson implied the Republicans never bothered to get involved in a bipartisan effort to change new district lines. "I recall sitting down 10 years ago with the Republicans to work this out," said Stevenson. "I did not have that same opportunity this time."

REPUBLICAN Town Chairman Curtis M. Smith had charged earlier in the day that the Democrats displayed "arrogance," because they would not try to find a compromise plan once the GOP had unveiled its plan.

Democratic Mayor Stephen T. Penny came to the Democratic registrar's defense by pointedly asking Republican Director Peter P. DiRosa Jr., "Does the Republican registrar endorse the Republican plan?"

"I don't know," replied DiRosa. Even Smith has criticized his own GOP registrar, Frederick E. Peck, for failing to join the redistricting effort. Republican Town Committee members drew the GOP plan without their registrar's help, they said.

One citizen, who said he was an independent voter, expressed dissatisfaction with the partisan approach to redistricting.

"One of the problems most people have is they believe the political system is a closed institution," said Milton Perlman of 3 Sanford Road.

Penny said the Democratic plan would make voting easier for him. "It galls me to drive by the Nathan Hale School, to vote at the Martin School," said Penny. "Now, I have a stronger motivation than most people to vote for myself."

Despite the debate, the Democratic plan was approved, as everyone had expected from the beginning.

In Manchester

How to tell when spring is here

So you think spring hasn't come to Manchester yet? Here are some signs.

1. Take a walk down East Center Street about 6:30 p.m. Hear the sounds of the kids playing after supper?

2. When you get up Thursday morning, listen. Listen hard. Those are the sounds of car-dinals.

3. Take a walk around Union Pond. Count the crocuses.

4. Look at the outfits walking into Manchester High School in the mornings. Count the khaki jackets.

5. Notice the mail carrier. Isn't there a new spring in his walk?

6. Take a walk down Main Street. How many times does a sign invite you inside to buy seeds?

7. Count the joggers out running at Manchester Community College. There should be at least six times as many as three weeks ago.

8. See the tag sale ads starting to reappear in the Manchester Herald?

9. Have you noticed that the business is off at Manchester Memorial Hospital's employee cafeteria? That's because everyone's out walking on their lunch hour again.

10. Count the number of garden rakes in evidence on Church Street on a Saturday morning. Multiply that number by the number of husbands working on their cars.

See what we mean?

stage director Lee Hay, with plenty of help from choral director Penny Dalent and orchestra director Karen Krinjak.

Anyone who has any doubts about "the younger generation" should just sit in the auditorium of Manchester High School late some afternoon. These young thespians are putting their energies into this production, and they deserve our support.

It's too easy nowadays to dismiss the young. We guarantee after a night of "Babes in Arms" most will come away with a brand new perspective.

You'll also have a good time. Isn't that what musicals are all about, anyway?

One thousand area business leaders, whose names were obtained from the Chambers of Commerce in the towns of Manchester, East Hartford, and Glastonbury, were invited to visit New Hope Manor on the evening of March 4 to tour its classrooms, residential and counseling facilities, and meet the teenage residents.

Out of 1,000 RSVP invitations sent out, a grand total of two people responded. On the evening of March 4, not one person came.

One can imagine the disappointment, the discouragement, the young girls felt when it at last

Non-happening

To the Editor:

We would like to comment on a "non-happening" — the New Hope Manor open house which was scheduled for March 4, which encompasses accredited classroom instruction, individual/group/family clinical therapy, and low cost of them has gained confidence, respect and caring from this program.

One cannot listen to the news or read the paper without being faced with a tragedy or crime resulting from drugs or alcohol. It is a sad reality that must be faced and constructively dealt with — we cannot ignore this problem and its negative impact on society.

New Hope Manor is responding. We had hoped that others would care. Community support is critically needed for us to continue.

Fine behavior

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to share an experience with the readers of the Manchester Herald. We hear and say much about the young people of today but we seldom praise them. Last Wednesday I had the privilege of accompanying a group of 9th graders from Bennett Junior High School under the supervision of Miss Marsha Gunther to see Greek drama at the Hartford Stage Company.

It was a marvelous experience. These teenagers were wonderful. Their behavior was perfect (not once was it necessary to speak to them). Their knowledge and appreciation of Greek literature were impressive.

They were polite. They were neat. They were respectful to their teacher. I could go on and on. It was a wonderful experience to be with a group of happy, well-behaved young men and women.

They should be proud of themselves. They were a joy to be with.

'Babes in Arms' worth going to

Those who remember the Mickey Rooney-Judy Garland classic "My Funny Valentine" should be right at home with Manchester High School's production of "Babes in Arms."

It's a time-honored story: a bunch of kids start working as lowly apprentices in a run down straw hat curcuit summer theater on Cape Cod. They end up watching the curtain go up on their own show on Broadway.

In between, there's plenty of comedy, romance and laughs that will keep audiences Thursday, Friday and Saturday rolling.

The kids have been working for weeks on the production, which is under the direction of

Parties caucus tonight

By Paul Hendrie
Herald Reporter

The Republican Town Committee leadership will stay out of the competition between GOP candidates for statewide office — at least for now.

But the Democratic Town Committee leadership is expected to push tonight for endorsement of incumbent William A. O'Neill for governor and U.S. Rep. Toby Moffett for senator.

Both parties caucus tonight to choose delegates to the various state and area conventions.

In addition, the Democrats will elect party officers, and there should be no surprises there. Chairman Theodore R. Cummings, who has already served 10 two-year terms, is expected to be returned to office unanimously, just as his Republican counterpart, Curtis M. Smith, was earlier this month.

Republican Town Vice Chairwoman Donna R. Mercier said no candidate endorsements by the town committee are anticipated. She said that she and Smith will not run an endorsed slate of delegates, but will leave it up to the town committee.

"We've both felt that the delegates should be able to choose their own candidates," said Mrs. Mercier. "We won't be running our own slate of delegates. Delegate nominations will come from the floor."

Smith agreed no town committee endorsements of statewide candidates were predicted. "It's way too early for that," he said Tuesday night. "Things will be different across town, at the Democratic caucus."

Along with Cummings, the other party officers are expected to be re-elected tonight. They are: Vice Chairwoman Dorothy Brindamour, Treasurer Paul Phillips and Secretary Mary Leduc.

'Rape shield bill' heads for House

By Bruno V. Ranniello
United Press International

HARTFORD — Judges could bar the use of a rape victim's past sexual conduct as evidence in a rape trial under a bill on its way to the Connecticut House for consideration.

The Legislature's Judiciary Committee voted 23-0 to approve the so-called rape shield bill Tuesday despite lengthy arguments over the constitutionality of provisions included in the amended measure.

The committee, lacking dozens of measures under a Friday deadline to act on legislation, also killed by a single vote, 13-12, this year's version of a perennial effort to establish a merit system for selection of judges.

The rape shield bill would prohibit the use of a rape victim's prior sexual history except where the defendant proved to the judge the evidence was relevant and had a bearing on the case.

It was this issue that led to a legal tug of war between Rep. Alfred Oronzo, D-New Haven, and the committee's House chairman, Rep. Richard Tulsiano, D-Rocky Hill.

A key amendment would allow a close pre-trial hearing to protect the victim's privacy should the judge rule the evidence was not admissible.

Oronzo asked if the information submitted by a defendant at the pre-trial hearing could be used by the prosecution even if it was ruled inadmissible.

After a half-hour of unsettled debate, several committee members suggested the bill be put off until clearer language could be adopted to guarantee approval.

However, Rep. Rosalind Berman, R-New Haven, pushed for a vote on the matter, arguing the proposal was constitutionally sound. Mrs. Berman said the measure was patterned after legislation already in effect in 46 other states.

The committee also voted 13-12 to reject the latest effort in a long and fruitless attempt to reform the state's long-standing tradition of having the governor appoint judges.

The amended bill submitted by Sen. Clifton Leonhardt, D-Avon, would establish a special commission under state law to select judicial candidates for consideration by the governor.

Red tape irks teacher so Yale gives up grant

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — A Yale University mathematician's refusal to comply with federal restrictions has forced the university to reject a $30,000 research grant, officials say.

Serge Lang, a mathematician and outspoken critic of the paperwork the Federal government requires of recipients of research grants, had received approval from the National Science Foundation for the grant to study number theory.

He told Yale officials he would certify he had spent the grant correctly but would not prepare or sign an effort report that would account for the use of his research time.

Deputy Provost Charles Bockelman said he understood the researcher's position, but it did not reflect the university's position and the grant could not be accepted.

"We cannot accept the grant, in my view, if in fact the conditions aren't met, which to us means him (Lang) signing an effort report," Bockelman said. "We have sympathy and understanding of his position, but there is no institutional approval of his position."

The federal accounting rule, known as "A-21," requires a professor who receives federal research money to file effort reports showing the percentage of time spent on research, teaching, advising and other activities.

Universities submit the reports to federal auditors in order to receive reimbursement in the amount of the grant.

We'll help you with Individual Retirement Answers for your own Individual Retirement Account.

With new law changes, in effect since January 1, 1982, everyone who earns income can open an IRA. You not only build for the future but enjoy tax benefits. And now defer taxes each year that you save. But everyone's financial situation is different; your retirement goals are different; and so are your questions. That's why the Savings Bank of Manchester has written a straightforward, comprehensive source of IRA information. For you.

Whatever questions you may have about IRAs, we'll help you find your answers. Here are samples of the questions and topics that your Individual Retirement Answers handbook covers.

William Barnum is 61 years old, and is covered by a pension plan at the company where he has worked for 21 years. Under the new tax laws, he could now also open an IRA. Should he?

William stands to benefit a great deal from opening an IRA at his age.

Though he is probably close to retirement, an IRA would give him the opportunity to shelter from income tax up to $2,000 per year ($2,250 if he has a non-working spouse) each year that he continues to work. That money, plus the interest it has earned, will then be available to supplement his pension plan when he does retire.

Since William is already over 59½ years old - the minimum age for claiming IRA benefits - his IRA will have the additional value of instant liquidity, as William can choose to withdraw funds at any time without penalty.

Martin Juarez has reached age 70½. He has had an IRA for several years. He needs advice on how to begin withdrawing funds from his IRA. If he continues to be employed, what is the best plan for him? If he leaves his employment?

Of course, much depends upon his specific circumstances - how much he is earning; his tax bracket; the likelihood of his continuing to work full-time; the possibility of part-time work; and his personal needs and desires.

Since in Martin's case, he would probably prefer to leave as much as possible of the investment in the IRA to earn interest, he would want to spread out the withdrawals over his life expectancy, or if he is married, over the life expectancy of himself and his wife. This he may do.

He may also purchase an annuity, available at SBM's Life Insurance Department, and receive payments over his lifetime and that of his spouse, if that is his choice.

At any time, however, he might want to have the option of withdrawing larger sums, and unless he is in a plan, such as an annuity, which does not permit this, he should be free to do so.

June and Jim Wilder are both employed, with a joint income of $50,000. June had her own IRA before marriage, since she was not covered by a company-sponsored retirement plan. Jim was not eligible before, but is now eligible for his own IRA and also wishes to set up a spousal IRA for June.

Since they plan to begin a family and June plans to become a full-time homemaker, they feel this is the best way to save for their retirement years. May they do this? And is it the best plan for them?

Jim may not open a spousal IRA for June while she is earning wages. While she is still working, June should contribute as much as possible into the IRA which she has begun and Jim should do the same with his IRA, so they may reduce their taxable income by the maximum amount allowed (up to $2,000 each). When June becomes a full-time homemaker, then Jim can set up a spousal IRA for her. If June goes back to work, either part-time or full-time, she may again resume contributions into her IRA and build for her retirement, or plan a systematic withdrawal after she is 59½.

David Parish changed jobs, and received a $15,000 distribution from his pension plan which he rolled over into an IRA on July 1, 1978. He opened the account at a bank in New York. He moved to Connecticut and heard that a money market fund would give him a greater return on his investment, so he withdrew the funds and transferred the IRA to a money market fund in January, 1982. While the return has been satisfactory, the service has not been, and later in the year he wishes to transfer the IRA to the Savings Bank of Manchester. May he do so?

He cannot roll over the funds again if it is still within the one-year period allowed. However, David can still make the change if the money market fund is willing to transfer the funds directly to the Savings Bank of Manchester. If they are not willing to do so, however, David will have to wait until January, 1983 to make the rollover himself.

Nancy Taylor has read a lot lately about how IRAs can allow people to retire as "millionaires." She's also read that if interest and inflation rates continue to climb at a high of 12% or more, a million dollars won't be worth what it is today. What is a realistic expectation for Nancy to have about her IRA investment?

First, any projected interest rate is merely a working example and not an actual guarantee for the future. In the chart below, SBM uses a fairly conservative figure of 10% to illustrate what you can reasonably expect from your IRA. We do this because we don't want our customers to be deluded by misleading information that makes you think you'll be "on easy street," with very little effort. We believe this 10% interest rate and resulting accumulation is much more meaningful and realistic. The most important thing to remember about IRAs, however, is that setting up your IRA in a systematic way and contributing the maximum contribution on a regular basis is the best way to a secure retirement.

IRA Earnings - Based on $2,000 deposited yearly
Age when you start plan	Your Total Contributions	Your Total Compounded Accumulation at age 65
25	$80,000	$1,176,249.60
35	60,000	413,558.82
45	40,000	136,833.17
55	20,000	36,429.33

This chart is based on a $2,000 deposit on January 1st of each year. It assumes a daily compounded annual percentage rate of 10% with an effective annual yield of 10.67%. Of course, this does not mean that SBM offers lower rates than other institutions. The actual interest rate paid throughout the life of your plan may be higher or lower and amounts may vary considerably from the above examples. Amounts shown are projections and are not guaranteed. The law requires substantial interest and tax penalties for withdrawals from an IRA prior to age 59½.

Whatever your questions are, we have the answers. Our 40 page handbook gives you all the facts you need to know about IRAs. It tells you when and how to qualify for an IRA, as well as how to choose and set up a funding vehicle. In the back of the book is a worksheet so you can discover for yourself what your particular IRA answer is.

Of course, the banking counselors at the Savings Bank of Manchester are always available to help you with any problem you may have. We think the best way to start thinking about an IRA, though, is with all the facts. So send for our free handbook, Individual Retirement Answers, by filling out the coupon below. The board of directors Tuesday night approved a proposal to combine the personnel supervisor's job with the vacant assistant manager's position.

Although the assistant manager is identified in General Manager Robert B. Weiss' job description as the person responsible for promoting affirmative action, the personnel supervisor's job has argued that the description is not strong enough.

Republican Director Peter D. Dirosa said Tuesday that the job combination is intended as a temporary move, until budget constraints ease.

Dirosa said Tuesday that the job combination is intended as a temporary move, until budget constraints ease. And Democratic Director Stephen T. Cassano said that the job description was consistent with those of other area towns.

Weiss said that approximately 60 percent of the new position would relate to personnel matters.

Personnel Supervisor Steven R. Werber, who has been handling both jobs since last year, is considered a likely candidate for the permanent assistant manager's job.

Meanwhile, the board tabled until April 8 a motion on an affirmative action plan for town hiring.

Board of Health gets complaints

Doctor says health spa filthy

By Nancy Thompson Herald Reporter

The American Health Fitness Center is "boldly and contemptuously" disregarding standards of cleanliness, a local psychiatrist charged in a letter to the Advisory Board of Health.

Dr. Donald L. Shapiro, head of Manchester Memorial Hospital's out-patient mental health treatment center, said in his letter, "I have found American Health Fitness Center in Manchester to be unusually dirty and improperly maintained."

The agreement came after a lengthy executive session Tuesday night in Cromwell and a two-week long debate in Manchester over whether the district would be allowed to continue bringing sludge to Manchester.

There is joy in Sludgeville. The Mattabasset Sewer District voted Tuesday to accept a verbal agreement requiring the district to pay Manchester an additional $200,000 to accept the remaining 100,000 cubic yards of sludge from the Cromwell plant.

The agreement came after a lengthy executive session Tuesday night in Cromwell and a two-week long debate in Manchester over whether the district would be allowed to continue bringing sludge to Manchester.

Dr. Turek said it was useless to get the management merely to repair one small segment of what is wrong each day based on one or more complaints you might get each day about that particular segment, he wrote.

Most important of all is the general condition of filthiness which concerns me... Floors in the shower are covered with hair, dirty pooled water and chunks of soap, all of which are expressions of inadequate maintenance of ordinary standards of cleanliness," he wrote.

"I believe it is simply appalling that the management can continue to operate in defiance of what would be reasonable public health standards."

It was in extremely poor taste to launch such an attack at the very end of the meeting called by the 911 situation, with invited guests from outside the political realm.

Streaking Celtics near club record

CHICAGO (UPI) — Streaking a popular fad a decade ago, it's back. But this time the participants are wearing green and white uniforms with the word "Celtics" emblazoned across their jerseys.

Tuesday night, the Boston Celtics ran their unbeaten streak to 16 with a 110-103 triumph over the Chicago Bulls. The Celtics will try to equal the club record tonight when they host Cleveland.

Behind Cedric Maxwell's 29 points and Larry Bird's 27 points, the Celtics won for the 23rd time in 24 contests. The two players combined for 18 points, Maxwell getting 10, in the third quarter as Boston built its 13-22 half-time lead to 90-84 after three quarters.

"I've been in a slump, but tonight I got back in the groove," said the 6-foot-8 forward who had been held to just 17 points in the last few games.

Bird entered the contest with 7-11 left in the opening quarter with the Celtics down 17-12. But before the first quarter ended he had eight points and two assists and the clubs were tied 30-30 entering the second quarter.

Hornsby was tough man: Naktensis

Rogers Hornsby is in baseball's Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y., and on Sunday, May 2, big Pete Naktensis will become a Hall of Famer, one of a number of former standouts to be inducted into the Greater Hartford Baseball Hall of Fame.

Naktensis, born in Aberdeen, Wash., spent his early years in Hartford but for the last quarter century a resident of Manchester, once played for Hornsby during his pro pitching career.

"He was a tough cookie. He had a rule for everybody, except himself, and he had signals for everything at the ball park. He made it as tough as possible. Hornsby didn't want the players to do any thinking for themselves."

"I recall one day in Baltimore. I was new with the club and was shut out for one in the last of the ninth and the Orioles had runners on second and third base. I was waved in from the bullpen and retired the side."

"I felt pretty happy about the way things turned out and expected the manager to congratulate me but he was not around. He wasn't even in the dugout or clubhouse."

"Later I learned that Hornsby would stand in the dugout steps until the last out and then sit on the bench with his arms crossed in the dressing room and many times would be dressed and gone before any of the players would come into the room. He could hardly wait until a game ended so that he could rush back to the hotel and bet on one of the horses at Santa Anita."

Although a great player, Hornsby was a bust as a manager. "He was too tough on his players and demanded that they copy his style," Naktensis said.

During the 1938 season, the southpaw pitcher who came out of Hartford High and flashed at Duke University before landing in the major leagues, played under Connie Mack with the Philadelphia Athletics.

Naktensis, who was a part-timer with the Eastern Leaguers for home games at Baileys Stadium.

While with Hartford, pitching only in home games during the 1943 and 1944 seasons, while working a shift at Colt's, Naktensis won 18 of 21 decisions, helping win the pennant in '44.

Martina only top ranked in elite field of eight

NEW YORK (UPI) — It won't be quite so simple as showing up at the pay window Sunday and walking off with $100,000.

But it also may not be quite as difficult as it could have been.

With a $300,000 women's tennis championship beginning this morning at Madison Square Garden, Martina Navratilova found herself as the only woman among the world's top five ranked players in the elite field of eight.

Inasmuch as she has won her last five tournaments, a string that has carried her through 24 consecutive matches, Navratilova rates as the overwhelming favorite. It's a situation which doesn't exactly please her.

"It's a very important tournament, but obviously it would mean more if Chris and Tracy were here," Navratilova said. "Their presence would give it more significance with the media and on the computer."

"But I'm here to do my best and win it regardless of who plays. If you have trouble getting psyched up in New York then you're in trouble."

Second seed Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia, making her first appearance in this championship, was due to meet West Germany's Sylvia Hanika in the second match, followed by Navratilova against Betina Bunge and third seed Barbara Potter against Anne Smith.

"I'll just have to win it without them," Navratilova said. "It's frustrating without them here because I don't want to take the easy way out, but I'm not going to worry about it."

Kathy Jordan, coming off the first big tournament victory of her career on Sunday in Boston, was scheduled to open the double elimination tournament at 10 a.m. EST against Australian Wendy Turnbull, the woman she conquered in the Boston final.

"It doesn't matter who I play, I feel I have a chance," said Jordan, who also is entered in the doubles. As for the possibility of anyone stopping Navratilova, Jordan said, "She is beatable, but it just hasn't happened yet."

Press important

Crum ignored advice with Louisville five

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — What will happen when a team like No. 7 Georgetown with a good pressing defense meets a 21st-ranked Louisville, whose full-court press has a similar reputation for effectiveness?

"Maybe it will come down to who handles each other's press the best rather than who's pressing the best," suggested coach Denny Crum.

"Our defense is the key," said Thompson. ... "I hope there's an advantage in having players back from the 1980 tournament," Crum said.

Cooney, sporting a beard, said the delay is harder mentally. ... "I wish it had never happened. The pressure (mentally) is off now. I just want to fight."

Herald Cookshelf

You don't have to be a health nut for this one

By Barbara Richmond Herald Reporter

"The Natural Healing Cookbook" by Mark Bricklin and Sharon Claessens, published by Rodale Press of Emmaus, Pa., is a gem. Even those of us who aren't tuned into natural foods should give this one a try. The book contains chapters about a healthier heart, better digestion, slenderizing naturally, the anti-cancer diet, healthier teeth and gums and many more similar topics.

But the recipes are what matters. The great majority can be used by all readers, and in addition there are special recipes and dietary programs for helping specific problems such as overweight, insomnia, and hearing problems.

The book is distributed through Prevention Magazine. To make the recipes, one doesn't have to have any elaborate equipment or exotic ingredients, which makes the cookbook even more valuable in these days of high prices.

The recipes are written in easy to understand language and call for whole grains, beans, nuts, seeds, vegetables, cheeses, fruits, herbs, spices and such. Did you ever cook with Ager-ager? Sounds like an exotic ingredient doesn't it? It's actually a vegetable gelatin made from sea algae and is available in health food or Oriental food stores.

The book really promotes the use of garlic and onion, noting that these two common foods have a similar protective effect against blood fats and clotting. A sampling of the recipes follows:

Molasses Pancakes

- 1 cup whole wheat flour
1/2 cup bran
1 tablespoon Lecithin granules
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 1/2 to 1 3/4 cups buttermilk
1 tablespoon medium unsulfured molasses
2 egg whites, beaten

Place the dry ingredients in a large bowl, breaking up any lumps and stirring until combined. Add buttermilk (more or less, depending on the thickness desired), the molasses and egg whites. Cook on a lightly oiled, hot skillet. Pancakes can be served with fresh fruit.

Macaroni salad

- 1 cup whole wheat macaroni
1/2 cup peas
2 stalks celery chopped
1/2 green pepper, chopped
1 tablespoon sunflower oil
2 tablespoons tomato paste
1 teaspoon basil
1/2 teaspoon oregano
1/2 teaspoon marjoram

Half-fill a large saucepan with water, bring to boil and add macaroni, return to a boil and cook only until macaroni is still firm to the bite, about 4 to 5 minutes. Drain. In a smaller pan, bring a small amount of water to a boil and add the peas. Simmer until crisp-tender, about one or two minutes. In a serving bowl combine celery and pepper with macaroni and peas. Blend vinegar, oil, tomato paste and seasonings and pour over macaroni salad. Toss to combine. Chill before serving.

Mingles, gaining influence, are changing the way we eat

By Jeanne Lesem UPI Family Editor

Mingles are changing the way America eats at home and away. That's right - mingles. Government statisticians coined the word to describe singles living together as a household, says Joan Black Bakos, editor of Restaurant Business magazine.

"They can be mingling for fun, economy or companionship, or any combination thereof," Mrs. Bakos added in an editorial in the trade publication.

Their numbers now are so large they constitute a special marketing group, she said.

In an interview, she said sharing living quarters gives them more disposable income and many are spending it on restaurant meals and fancy take-out fare.

The gourmet retail shops really cater to households when preparing a meal every day is not realistic.

Mrs. Bakos said, "We now have households where the kitchens are - Sausage sandwiches, specialty breads, even croissant sandwiches with French-style, crescent-shaped pastries instead of bread rolls."

"I think you'd eat breakfast (at home) if someone cooked it for you," she said. "Trouble is, there's no one home to cook."

More disposable income also pays for more vacations and weekends away from home and sports and theater outings, Mrs. Bakos said.

This, in turn, leads to more restaurant meals at all hours of the day and night, she said.

Liquor service has changed completely. More and more (restaurant patrons) order what I call dessert drinks - pina colodas, strawberry daiquiris, drinks with ice cream in them.

"Young people are not drinking the way their parents did. They don't really like the big jolt of alcohol you get from a martini."

"You see after-dinner drinks being offered as a separate course now," she said.

Bars where you can order fine wines by the glass are slowly catching on, she said. People who are not heavy drinkers and will not order a whole bottle of expensive wine apparently are willing to spend $6 to $8 a glass to taste it.

Gourmet retail shops are thriving in big population centers with many two-job couples, she said.

"By and large ethnic cuisine sells well. People who are very, very busy tend to cook quickly at home."

This leads to a yearning for long-cooking, down-home food from one's childhood - chicken with gravy or chicken fricassees, for example.

"Every now and then I yearn for a turkey dinner, but there are only two of us at home to eat it," she added. "The big Sunday roast is (also) a thing of the past."

"If people really want very fine meals that take time to prepare, they go out."

"They used to eat out for special occasions. Now they eat out so frequently that it is no longer a treat in that sense. They eat out to save time or because they're tired or their lifestyle is hectic."

Supper menus are coming back, she said, thanks to young mingles in major population areas who go out late in the evening for food and entertainment.

She said supper fare may range from crepes and steak sandwiches to almost any kind of egg dish, chicken a la king, soups, pasta dishes made with fresh noodles

Zypha Bread

- 3 well-beaten eggs
2 packages yeast
1 cup warm water
1 tablespoon sugar
1 cup milk (scalded)
1/2 cup sugar
3 tablespoons lard
2 tablespoons butter
2 teaspoons salt

Mix the yeast, warm water and sugar together and let stand. Take the cup of scalded milk and pour over the sugar, butter, lard and salt mixture. Add two cups of the flour to the milk mixture and mix well.

Add the three well beaten eggs; beat all together. Add yeast mixture and about 5 cups flour, one at a time, beating well with a heavy wooden spoon. Grease bowl and turn dough, coating well. Set aside and let rise until double (about 2 hours).

Punch down and knead 10 minutes. Let rest 10 minutes. Divide into six portions. Braid 3 portions together for each of two loaves. Place in greased pans and let rise until double. Before baking, brush with beaten egg, plus 1 tablespoon milk. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes. Brush with sugar water while still hot (1 tablespoon sugar in 2 tablespoons hot water)

Marinated Carrots

- 2 pounds carrots, sliced
1 medium onion, thinly sliced
1 green pepper, cut in strips
1 can tomato soup
1/2 cup oil
1 cup sugar
1/2 cup vinegar
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

News for senior citizens

'Strike Up the Band' is in full production

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Senior Center. It appears on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

By Gloria Benson Activities Specialist Hi, everyone! Our show "Strike Up the Band" is really in full production now and sounding better every week. Tickets are beginning to move but we still need more effort on the part of the seniors to sell them.

We are spoiled, you know, because we are used to playing before a full house. Seniors who have helped in the past to set up the stage scenery, please contact Howard Miller. They plan to set up on Monday morning at 9 a.m. on April 19. Needed are miniature Christmas lights. This Sunday, the rehearsal will start at 2 p.m. with the chorus meeting between 9 and 5 p.m.

I love to hear our orchestra rehearsal on Thursday mornings but miss two of our regular players. Our popular drummer, Art McKay, has to eat well and sensibly. To compound the dilemma, a wealth of advice is spread forth daily from the media about what or what not to eat. How can you be sure that you are choosing and preparing the best foods for yourself and your family?

WE REALLY DON'T know what an "ideal" diet may be for everyone, though nutritional research is continuously gathering more precise information concerning specific nutrient requirements. What is known, however, is no one single food suffices to provide all the nutrients necessary to insure an adequate diet. Most foods contain more than one nutrient, but your body needs about 40 different ones to stay healthy.

Despite prosperity, we remain nutritional ignorants

Editor's note: March is National Nutrition Month. Mary G. Sucholet is a registered dietitian who works as a clinical dietitian at Manchester Memorial Hospital.

By Mary G. Sucholet Registered Dietitian

As Americans, we enjoy the most abundant and heterogeneous marketbasket of food the world has known.

With all our "nourishment prosperity," however, we remain a nation of nutritional ignorants. Perhaps our fast-moving, ever-changing social climate is partly responsible. As more women enter the workforce, nourishing home-cooked meals are becoming vestiges of a more leisurely past. Supermarkets are filled with convenience items designed to shorten food preparation time.

Many nutritious foods generally are regarded as inexpensive means of feeding a hungry family — peanut butter and fresh fish, for example — are now considered luxury foods due to exorbitant price increases.

All of this leads to confusion and anxiety when a sincere attempt is made to eat well and sensibly. To compound the dilemma, a wealth of advice is spread forth daily from the media about what or what not to eat. How can you be sure that you are choosing and preparing the best foods for yourself and your family?

WE REALLY DON'T know what an "ideal" diet may be for everyone, though nutritional research is continuously gathering more precise information concerning specific nutrient requirements. What is known, however, is no one single food suffices to provide all the nutrients necessary to insure an adequate diet. Most foods contain more than one nutrient, but your body needs about 40 different ones to stay healthy.

By grouping foods into categories, each category generally comparable in major nutrients, a checklist may be made as an aid to planning a sound diet. A "well-balanced" diet is one in which a person's total food intake for the day includes several servings from each food category.

Though the total servings vary with a person's own requirements for calories and/or nutrients, the variety of foods eaten daily should include selections from: 1) Whole-grain and enriched breads, cereals, and grain products — to supply energy, B-vitamins, iron, and fiber.

2) Meats, poultry, eggs, legumes, and fish — for protein vital to maintain muscle mass and tissue. Don't go overboard, however — most of us consume much more protein than what we actually require. Keep the meat portion of your meals moderate.

3) Milk, cheese, and yogurt — providing the calcium hard to obtain from any other food. Babies and teenagers are not the only ones needing this mineral — adults require calcium to maintain strong bone structure to rally against the degenerative changes of later life.

4) Fruits — to supply vitamins A and C, but particularly to provide a natural sweet taste. Buy them in season, enjoy the summer's bounty, but appreciate the technically-advanced methods of food preservation enabling us to savor the "just-picked" flavor of fruit all winter long. Choose them for desserts and snacks rather than the expensive, sugar-laden confections offering little else than calories.

5) Vegetables — supplying B-vitamins (vitamins A and C if brightly-colored) and lots of satisfying, good-for-the-digestive-tract, fiber or "roughage." Steam them lightly or enjoy them raw for best nutrition.

6) Fats, oils, and nuts — necessary for satiety (to keep us from feeling hungry a half hour after a meal!) but all the food groups, use them sparingly.

Residents speak out at hearing

By Richard Cody Herald Reporter

BOLTON — The Zoning Commission was thrown a curve Tuesday as most residents at a public hearing came out against mobile homes. Last fall at the two prior hearings, the sentiment seemed the other way. "Last fall we had a generally warm reception for the idea of mobile home parks," commission Chairman Philip G. Dooley said at the meeting, after residents had begun tearing into the proposed regulations and the concept of such housing in Bolton. "The intent is basically to provide an opportunity for more affordable housing. That's the main thrust."

after the meeting the commission will re-group. "We'll do what we always do," he said. "We'll meet and talk about it."

THE COMMISSION proposed the regulations as a follow-up to two hearings last fall which were sparked by Charles J. Minicucci Jr.'s application for expansion of his park, the Anderson Trailer Park on Route 44A, from five to 19 mobile homes.

Because residents at the hearings last October indicated they felt the then proposed regulations were too liberal, with eight to 10 homes per lot, the commission rejected Minicucci's proposal until more adequate regulations could be developed. The tone of the prior hearings was at least divided, and probably leaned toward acceptance of such housing in Bolton.

The new regulations propose four homes per lot.

BUT THE 40 residents Tuesday, a number that matched the largest hearing

Bolton trailer park plan blasted

last fall, were unequivocal in their views. "Why the hell would Bolton want to see a bunch of mobile homes now?" one resident asked. "I don't want to see another damn trailer in Bolton."

South Road resident and attorney Jose A. Ramirez and finance board member Morris Silverstein, among others, attacked the specifics of the regulations themselves, especially the idea of restricting the homes to only adults.

The commission had proposed adult parks last fall, but was advised this might be illegal. Dooley said Tuesday night the commission still intended to restrict the use of the parks to adults, but to put this not into the regulations but into the park policy.

Silverstein said, "This might cause you some legal problems."

Ramirez was more exact. "I offer to represent for nothing the first mobile home operator who challenges this. Why not put it (the adult restriction) in the regulations? Why back door it?"

Bolton finance board plans minimal hikes

BOLTON — The finance board will propose a "minimal increase" in the budget to the early April hearings. Vice Chairman Raymond A. Ursin said Tuesday night.

The board wrapped up its suggested budget at a special meeting Tuesday, but a bottom line has yet to be figured out.

"There's no bottom line yet. Jim (Dimock, board clerk) should have that done by today," Ursin said.

In putting the finishing touches on the budget, the board agreed "definitely not unanimously" to keep a new center school roof in the budget. This is estimated at $109,000, and Ursin said some members had reservations about putting a "first-class roof" on a building that has an uncertain future.

The center school building has been offered by the school board for town

Bolton GOP favors Weicker for Senate

BOLTON — In one of its rarer moments, the Republican Town Committee endorsed Lowell P. Weicker for U.S. senator Tuesday night, the same night he lost a Fairfield election to challenger Prescott Bush.

The committee does not usually endorse candidates, and in keeping with this did not make the endorsement binding on the delegates elected the same evening. "It's been a long time since we've endorsed anybody," one member said after the meeting.

Committee Chairman Lawrence A. Converse III said the committee picked Weicker over the other candidates because "he's a proven winner. He's the one that can win this time."

Converse and Vice Chairman William Felhing were picked as delegates to the

DEP requests study

SOUTH WINDSOR — The state Department of Environmental Protection has asked the K-F Brick Co., which wants to convert from natural gas to coal power, to study the problem of ash emission. If the DEP approves the firm's application to use bituminous coal as a permanent fuel source, William McGee, chief hearing officer for the DEP, has asked the firm if a pollution control device could be installed to reduce stack discharge. In addition, he wants to know how much such a device would cost, and whether the firm could reduce emissions further by burning the coal at a higher temperature or burning a different type of coal.

Residents who live near the brick company on Route 5 have expressed concern about the increased air pollution due to coal burning.

According to the DEP, the firm now sends a ton of ash into the air each year. With coal, said to be a cheaper alternative, the firm would emit approximately 61.5 tons of ash each year.

Storage tank explodes

EAST HARTFORD — A welder working at a Texaco Inc. gasoline tank on Riverside Drive was badly burned Tuesday when the tank exploded and sent him toppling into smoke and flames. He was taken to the hospital with serious burns to his face, neck and hands, and sustained burns to his throat and lungs from inhaling burning gases.

Commission revived

GLASTONBURY — The Town Council Tuesday approved a narrow range of issues to go to a charter revision commission in time for a referendum in November.

Less than three years ago, the council tried unsuccessfully to revise the town charter. This time, the commission will be asked to provide for an elected Town Plan and Zoning Commission that would be the final zoning authority.

Presently, the zoning commission has final authority over local planning functions and over subdivisions. Zoning changes, however, must go to the Town Council for approval after being reviewed by the zoning commission. The double review procedure has been criticized as inefficient.

Layoffs for 25 teachers

EAST HARTFORD — Robert Frasher, assistant superintendent for personnel services, said Tuesday that 25 tenured teachers probably will be laid off in September because of staffing reductions proposed in the $26.8 million school budget for 1982-83.

The layoffs mark the first time that experienced teachers will be affected. Teachers become tenured in their third year, and Frasher predicted that teachers with five to seven years of experience will be in the latest layoffs.

The 25 teachers will be notified of the layoffs in mid-April. On March 15 the school system notified 43 non-tenured teachers that they were out of a job. Five of those teachers have been rehired because of staff adjustments.

Ina Sternoff, president of the East Hartford Education Association, said that the union will monitor the layoffs to ensure that they are fair. State law gives teachers the right to be told the reason for dismissal to request a hearing.

Indian art to be shown

DENVER (UPI) — An exhibit of nomadic Plains Indian art is scheduled for the Denver Art Museum from April 21 through June 12. Most of the articles are drawn from the museum's own 16,000-object collection of Native American art. After closing in Denver, the exhibit will travel to museums in Edinburgh, Scotland, Vienna, Paris, Toulouse, France, Boston, New York and San Francisco.

Bridge

There is a difference here. Today you are playing against a strange pair in a duplicate tournament. The only thing you know about them is that they aren't experts. Still, even a non-expert pair is likely to recognize that spades is the key suit in the event that you show the queen of clubs and the queen of hearts.

In a similar situation, British expert Terence has suggestions for you to take an unusual method of getting information.

It wasn't the first diamond run to his ace. Then, after some slight thought he led his jack of hearts.

West had a slight problem before playing the four spot. Now Terence came back to his hand with the queen of clubs and led the jack of spades.

This time West had another slight problem. Terence went up with dummy's ace and eventually finessed against East's queen.

It wasn't that West was unethical. The hesitations were very slight, but Terence decided that if West held the queen of spades he would have acted the same way in spades as he had in hearts.

Supermarket Shopper

Why is P&G an innovator?

Procter and Gamble was founded by William Procter and James Gamble in 1857. Today it is the nation's largest manufacturer of supermarket products.

Among its best-known brands are Ivory Soap, Tide, Crisco, Crest and Pampers.

How does Procter and Gamble handle its promotional offers? During a recent visit to Cincinnati, I explored that question with Robert Wehling, the company's division manager for general advertising.

SHOPPER: Who creates your coupon and refund promotions?

WEHLING: The idea for a promotion can come from the executive that manages a particular brand or from the advertising agency that represents the brand or from our sales management people or from my general advertising group.

SHOPPER: How long does it take to plan a promotion?

WEHLING: A cents-off bag was a learning experience. We ran into problems because the demand for the bag was heavier than anticipated and we had only one source of supply. This situation caused us to re-examine our fulfillment procedures and we made some changes.

SHOPPER: I sent for the sports bag and after trailing several weeks began to worry whether my order had been received. Then I got your post card telling me that there would be a delay. We returned really appreciate this kind of consideration.

How do you know that the fulfillment companies are sending out your refunds promptly?

WEHLING: We set up a group within our own office, and during the offering period we each send in several refund requests.

SHOPPER: When some problems first arose, the companies were sending out your refunds promptly?

WEHLING: We set up a group within our own office, and during the offering period we each send in several refund requests.

How much more will you and I volunteer?

The value of the time and cash Americans volunteer to worthy causes ranging from free meals to drug rehabilitation already tops $11 billion a year — more than the total output of many industrialized nations. But President Reagan obviously believes we can do a lot more and suggests that the huge gap caused by the drastic federal budget cuts in social-welfare programs can be bridged by our increased "volunteerism."

Be realistic, Mr. President!

A total of 84 million Americans volunteered an estimated 2.4 billion hours ($64.5 billion) for the year ended last October, according to a recent study by the Gallup Poll for the Independent Sector, a non-profit coalition of voluntary agencies, foundations and corporations.

An additional $47 billion in cash is estimated as the contribution of foundations, corporations, fraternal organizations and individuals to help support some 800,000 community projects. Among these: hospitals, churches, museums and charities, as well as major national organizations such as The Red Cross, Salvation Army, the American Cancer Society and national disease telethons.

A survey of top corporations by the Conference Board showed that the corporate community has little enthusiasm for the president's proposals to transfer to private industry the burden of financing canceled or curtailed programs. Says E. Patrick McGuire, executive director for the organization that polled 427 U.S. corporations on the issue, corporate executives have no plans for a massive infusion to tax-deductible contributions to meet social and cultural needs: 40 percent of the companies said they'll encourage employees to do volunteer work — but not on company time and not at company expense.

To put it bluntly, there will be no step-in "volunteerism" to bridge the gap in social-welfare programs sharply cut by budget reductions.

Reagan initiated the "volunteerism" program last September and in his State of the Union message said that 38,000 corporations and private organizations were working on social programs and thousands more Americans have written the White House asking how to help.

On the opposite side, the New York City Partnership, a group of major corporations headed by David Rockefeller, plans to build or renovate 30,000 housing units in New York City and to provide some 15,000 summer jobs for young people.

Also on the positive side, the Benevolent & Protective Order of Elks, with 1.6 million members, donated nearly $20 million to charity and millions of hours in community service in 1981. Raymond Y. Arnold, the grand exalted ruler, told the president that Elk lodges will provide increased "volunteer dollars and time" and at least an additional million dollars for community needs.

And that's about "it" for any upsurge in volunteerism.

The United Fund reports that contributions last year were the best since 1966 but at this time, "there is no direct correlation" between the president's appeal and the increased giving.

The American Red Cross hasn't seen any change in volunteer activity since September, although it doesn't compile figures until June 30.

The National Conference of Catholic Charities has "no feel" since last year for voluntary levels, but statistics aren't in yet and "it's too early to tell."

The Council on Jewish Federations "can't sense, at the moment, a great increase or decrease in volunteerism," but the council does not "see a lot of people suddenly responding."

The American Association of Fund-Raising Councils feels that Reagan's call for increased volunteerism has not been a factor in its records.

The Foreign Agricultural Trade Advisory Committee (FATAC) urges all local Kiwanis Clubs to survey community needs and "now there's just more to supplement" than before.

To whom were you appealing, Mr. President? To a nation already contributing $11 billion a year in volunteer efforts? To US?

The Consumer Price Index, before seasonal adjustment, showed a price of $283.40 for the government's sample "market basket" of goods and services that cost 100 in 1967.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average rose 13.25 points to 876.87, with much of the gain coming in the final hour of trading. The Dow now has picked up 30.82 points in the four sessions.

Deputy Press Secretary Larry Speakes said President Reagan "hopes the money markets will see what we are trying to do... the budget and cut in inflation."

Richard W. Rahn, chief economist of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, recommended the administration take advantage of the decline in consumer prices by freezing federal cost-of-living adjustment payments.

But Jack Carlson, chief economist and executive vice president of the National Association of Realtors, characterized improvements in the Consumer Price Index and the earnings report as "merely an adjustment to the weather-related loss of working hours and production in January."

TEMPE, Ariz. — Rogers Corp., a leading manufacturer of engineered electronic components and materials, recently held a marketing and technical conference involving personnel from Rogers and its major international associates in electronic interconnection products.

Fed nixes bank purchase

HARTFORD (UPI) — The Federal Reserve Board has rejected an application from Hartford National Corp. to acquire the Mattatuck Bank and Trust Co. of Waterbury, Hartford National says.

The rejection was based on the effect the proposed acquisition would have on competition in the Waterbury banking market, said Robert L. Newell, chairman and chief executive officer of Hartford National.

Newell said Hartford National Corp., parent firm of the Hartford National Bank, would "make a decision on how to proceed after thoroughly studying all alternatives, including the possibility of appeal."

Newell said Tuesday that Hartford National was "of course disappointed" by the Federal Reserve Board decision.

"We believe our proposed acquisition of Mattatuck would enhance competition in the Waterbury area and provide new and improved banking services to both consumers and businesses," Newell said in a statement.

"Considering the almost daily announcements of bank mergers plus the rapid growth of financial services offered by non-banks, we feel there is a real need to provide strong and aggressive competitors in all bank markets," he said.

GM to keep the savings

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. is likely to keep the predicted $3 billion it will save in concessions from the United Auto Workers to boost its profits rather than lower car prices, industry analysts say.

At the same time Tuesday, the UAW and Rockwell International Corp. announced a plan to merge with $500,000 in government money that will retain about 400 laid off autoworkers from Michigan and Ohio for jobs in the aerospace industry.

Rockwell is expected to hire up to 25,000 workers for work on Long-Range Combat Aircraft at its various locations around the country.

David Eisenberg, auto analyst for the New York brokerage firm of Sanford C. Bernstein & Co., said GM would rather keep the
