

Expert: Ignore conventional thinking

Commodities risky investment

A nervous, fidgety Victor Niederhoffer, the Brooklyn-born son of a New York City policeman, suddenly rose from his chair, headed out of the conference room where he was chatting last Wednesday morning and explained apologetically: "I've got to make a phone call; I want to see how much money I lost."

Dan Dorfman

Syndicated Columnist

IF THIS IDEA doesn't excite you, Niederhoffer has another one. You put up $2,000 to buy a sugar contract expiring at year-end '82. You've essentially bought $14,000 worth of sugar. Sugar is currently a little over 10 cents a pound, way down from its high of around 50 cents a pound. And keep in mind that at least 90 percent of all commodity houses are bearish on sugar (which is in heavy oversupply).

Niederhoffer will never forget his 27th, which was on Dec. 10, 1980. That was the day his firm had its biggest loss ever — $2.5 million. Interest rates were dropping at the time (which is bullish for metals because it makes assets more attractive). In addition, there were strikes all over Poland, and Richard Zeckhauser, an NCZ partner and a professor at Harvard, had told him the best minds at Harvard were convinced that it was only a matter of time before the Russians would respond with a harsh militaristic response. And so, with this "double play" going for him, a confident Niederhoffer took a big position in metals.

WHAT WENT WRONG? "Too many people thought exactly like me, and bought on conventional wisdom," Niederhoffer recalled. "And when the metals failed to rise, investors dumped like crazy and the metals got slaughtered. Niederhoffer says he learned a big lesson from that experience — namely, that probabilities have a way of not materializing, especially when you're out on the limb and need them the most."

LATER IN THE MORNING, NCZ took some partial profits, which helped it recoup part of a $500,000 loss it had sustained on Monday. Niederhoffer was thoughtful as the part of Niederhoffer to close out the entire gold position — at least not at that moment.

My philosophy is that you never exit fully from a position unless it goes against you," he says. "You ride the winners... to make up for all the losers. And if some of the skeptics warm up to gold because they don't want to miss the current action, you could see it at $500."

A former assistant professor of finance at the University of California and an economics major at the University of Chicago, the 38-year-old Niederhoffer is one of the numerous swingers in probably the riskiest roller-coaster investment game around — the often explosive and volatile commodity futures market.

IN LINE WITH HIS pro-against-the-crowd strategy — the overriding view is that most commodities will continue to decline in price because we're in a deflationary environment — Niederhoffer takes the opposite tack; he thinks commodity prices could be headed back up again this year.

People have been bearish so long (since December of '80) that they forget that things can also go up... and that's when you get your biggest rises, he says.

Citing the upcoming congressional elections, Niederhoffer observes that forces in an election year are always more on the inflationary side than on the side of solving long-term problems. In effect, our commodities expert is suggesting that the administration, Congress and the supposedly non-political Federal Reserve will pep up the economy to reduce unemployment.

AND NOW FOR THE BAIT — and it's succulent. Niederhoffer hopes if his scenario is correct, you can make close to $3,000 — maybe even more — on that $2,000 over the next six months.

Budget talks recessed as battle continues

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan says he is willing to "go the extra mile" to obtain a bipartisan budget plan, but House Speaker Thomas O'Neill says he sees no indication of that willingness.

Budget negotiators recessed talks late Tuesday after meeting for about three hours in what Republicans earlier had said would be a final session to come up with an alternative to Reagan's embattled spending plan.

Aides said they would meet again this week, possibly late today. Before congressional leaders conferred with White House chief of staff James Baker to try to come up with a plan that would keep the 1983 deficit below $100 billion, Reagan telephoned O'Neill to "express hope" differences could be resolved.

It was the first contact between the two men since the negotiations began three weeks ago. Afterward, Reagan told an informal Rose Garden news conference reaching agreement on a bipartisan budget package is so important, "I personally am prepared to go the extra mile" to achieve it.

O'Neill said at his own news conference later he was happy Reagan "had taken the first step" of admitting the need to change his economic program, but added, "I can't see that they have changed any of their policies whatsoever."

Said O'Neill, "They're talking about many things, but we don't see any give. I haven't any indication they're (budget negotiators) closer together. I have no indication as to what the extra mile was."

O'Neill said he would meet with House Democratic leaders today to discuss the progress of the negotiations, and if necessary, "come up with our own plan" before hammering out any differences with the Republicans.

Congressional sources said defense spending for the next fiscal year could be cut up to $20 billion below the level originally proposed by Reagan. The Washington Post reported today.

The Post said budget director David Stockman has presented to negotiators a proposal indicating spending by the Pentagon might be cut $5 billion below what Reagan first requested for fiscal 1983, $9 billion in fiscal 1984 and $14 billion in fiscal 1985.

Each $1 reduction in actual defense spending amounts to a $4 reduction in Congressional appropriations; thus the $5 billion spending cut for fiscal 1983 would require a reduction of about $20 billion.

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker has said Congress will begin writing its own budget resolution, which could lead to numerous floor fights, if the negotiators fail to produce a compromise agreement this week.

Although against any retreat from the third year of his record tax-cut program, Reagan indicated he may be willing to revise the package. O'Neill said he would like to see a budget package that "immediately cuts off the third year" of the individual income tax cut scheduled for July 1983 and includes a surtax on higher income people. Reagan adamantly opposes changing the tax cut, but has indicated he may be willing to accept a surtax.

Drug holds promise for fat, impotent men

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Fat, impotent mice became slender Don Juans despite a steady diet of sweets when given a drug being tested at Temple University for treatment of chronic overeat-ers.

The study, conducted by Dr. David L. Margules, found the drug naloxone depressed the appetites of male laboratory mice and caused them to burn up more calories. This prevented them from becoming overweight even when they overate.

In addition, Margules found naloxone heightened the sexual interest of male mice previously suffering from stress-related impotence.

"This drug has been shown to turn them into studs," Margules said Tuesday.

Tests results on female mice were inconclusive, he said.

Margules, a psychology professor at Temple University, believes the drug works by blocking the body's release of morphine-like substances known as endorphins that slow the metabolism and prevent calories from being burned.

Endorphins, produced by the brain and pituitary glands, appear in abnormally high levels in overweight mice, Margules said, lending support for the hypothesis they are related to obesity.

In the study, mice were fed steady diets of cookies and sweets to blot them. Then they were administered the drug.

"Even though they were still able to eat sweets, they didn't get fat," Margules said.

The drug, patented by DuPont Corp., has been used outside of the United States for treatment of morphine addiction. It has not been approved for use on humans in the United States, Margules said.

"Because we believed there is an addiction to food in obese people, we thought this drug would be a good tool," Margules explained. "It has to do with the whole problem of addiction and the feelings of well-being people get when they eat."

The sexual effects of the drug also are promising.

The Bluffs Elevator Co. of Council Bluffs, Iowa, lies in ruins after an explosion and fire Tuesday that killed five men and injured 23 others in the Midwest's worst grain blast on record. A spokesman for AGR Inc., Des Moines, owner of the elevator, said damage could be as high as $10 million.

N.Y. policeman says arrest in CBS slayings a mistake

NEW YORK (UPI) — Kentucky police "goofed" by arresting the man a small army of FBI agents was tailing in hopes he would lead them to the killer of a federal witness and three CBS employees who came to her aid, authorities say.

The man, Donald Bowers, 46, Keansburg, N.J., was to be returned to New York today from Frankfort, Ky., where he has been held since his arrest Monday, his lawyer, Robert Morgenthau said.

Officials said FBI agents in seven cars and a small plane followed Bowers from New Jersey to Kentucky, hoping the man would lead them to the killer. But they said a Kentucky State Police officer arrested Bowers thinking the van he was driving was stolen, ending the FBI dragnet.

The New York Daily News reported today authorities believe the surveillance that could have led to the killer was bungled.

"They really goofed," the News quoted a New York police officer as saying.

Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau said Bowers is not the "prime suspect as the shooter at this time" and the News reported Bowers was the "linger man" who pointed out the witness to the killer or the "wheel man" who drove the getaway van in the April 15 slaying.

Other officials denied any foul-up in communications between local police and the FBI.

Bill Cheek, spokesman for the FBI in Kentucky, defended the state police, saying, "The Kentucky State Police did all we asked them to do — no more, no less."

Kentucky FBI Chief James Yelvington and Kentucky State Police Commissioner Marion Campbell said in a prepared statement state police pulled over the van at the request of the FBI.

"Although a follow-up check later revealed the van no longer was being sought as stolen, the KSP by then had determined Bowers also was a wanted fugitive," the statement said.

Police sources said Bowers, 5-6 and 200 pounds, did not fit the description of the killer who shot to death the four people on a desolate rooftop garage on Manhattan's West Side.

One of the four killed was Margaret Barbera, 36, a federal witness in an investigation of a $5.5 million scheme to defraud a finance company.

The other three were CBS employees who apparently tried to come to her aid.

Koreans battle for 4 hours

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — North Korean troops trying to stop at least four of their comrades from defecting touched off a four-hour gun battle today with South Korean troops in an eastern sector of the truce line dividing the two Koreas.

The firefight, in which the four known defectors were either killed or wounded in the no-man's land between the lines, came five days before the scheduled Sunday arrival of Vice President George Bush on a five-nation Asian tour.

A Defense Ministry spokesman said at about 2:25 a.m. local time four North Korean soldiers were seen trying to defect to the nearest South Korean border guard post under cover of darkness.

North Korean troops fired about 50 tracer bullets to pin down the would-be defectors, and North Korean loud speakers along the border broadcast orders to "halt on the spot" eight times, according to the spokesman.

North Korean guard posts fired more than 800 rounds of automatic weapons and machine-gun fire, including two rounds from Zhum recvolvers guns, the spokesman said. The South Koreans said they returned defensive fire.

At about 5:25 a.m. there was a mine blast on the northern side of the 2.6-mile-wide Demilitarized Zone along the border that is heavily mined, apparently set off by the defectors after three hours of crawling south.

After daybreak the bodies of the four men were seen on the ground about 650 yards from the border, either dead or wounded from the blast, the spokesman said.

The battle 50 miles northeast of Seoul ended more than four hours after it started, a spokesman for the South Korean Defense Ministry and the American-led United Nations Command said.

U.S. Navy Rear Adm. James G. Storms, UNC senior delegate to the Korean Military Armistice Commission, sent a protest to the North Korean side three hours after the incident.

Storms said North Korean troops fired "hundreds of rounds of automatic weapons and machine-gun fire," many directed at Southern guard posts.

He said the UNC is continuing to investigate the clash and told North Korea it will be informed of findings as well as "measures necessary to resolve this severe violation."

Deng to purge political foes to tighten grip

PEKING (UPI) — The official Peoples Daily newspaper said Tuesday Vice Chairman Deng Xiaoping will purge political foes from the Communist Party in a move Western diplomats said was aimed at tightening his grip on power.

The announcement came less than a week after Deng, who already has political allies in most top government posts, appointed two more supporters to key positions in China's Communist Party Central Committee.

The developments were aimed at removing diehard leftists who rose to power during the 1966-77 Cultural Revolution under the late Mao Tse-tung.

Western diplomats said the developments were an attempt by Deng to reinforce his grip on power, but their significance in terms of China's relation with the West was not immediately clear.

Announcing the purge, the official Peoples Daily said bureaucrats still in power after supporting Deng's political enemies during the Cultural Revolution "must be removed" from the Communist Party.

Deng's enemies "must never be promoted," it said. Conversely, officials who sided with Deng during the those years will have priority in gaining promotions, it said.

"The selection and promotion of cadres must first be based on their political performance," the newspaper said. "We must see whether they are politically reliable."

At the instigation of the "Gang of Four" led by Mao's widow Jiang Qing, Deng was purged and marched through the streets in disgrace during the Cultural Revolution.

Jiang is now in jail serving a suspended death sentence and her faction has been purged, but "remnants" of her supporters still hold positions of responsibility.

About half of the 39 million party members joined during the Cultural Revolution and many have entrenched themselves in the bureaucracy.

The moves preceded the ratification later this year of a new constitution which may introduce the post of state chairman to China's bureaucracy.

Earth satellite detects decrease in sunshine

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An Earth satellite detected a slight decrease in sunshine between February 1980 and last August, possibly contributing to this past winter's severe conditions, the space agency says.

If so, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Tuesday, it would be the first direct observation "of a cause and effect relationship between the sun's energy output and changes in Earth's weather and climate."

NASA said Dr. Richard Willson, a physicist at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, Pasadena, Calif., found a persistent decrease of a 10th of 1 percent in the total amount of the sun's energy reaching Earth.

"This is a small change in the total energy output of the sun, but has great potential significance for the Earth's fragile ecosystem," Willson said.

NASA said it is believed a 1 percent decrease in radiation from the sun reaching the Earth could lower Earth's global mean temperature by more than 2 degrees Fahrenheit.

The information came from NASA's Solar Maximum Satellite, launched in February 1980 to monitor solar radiation during the peak of the solar output that occurs every 11 years.

The satellite suffered a control system problem for 10 months which kept some of its instruments from operating as planned.

The satellite, however, is designed to be retrieved and repaired by space shuttle astronauts and NASA is tentatively planning to carry out such a space repair mission on a shuttle flight late next year.

"The rejuvenated satellite would allow scientists to observe a wide range of solar phenomena in a different part of the solar activity cycle and sustain solar irradiance monitoring with the precision required for climate studies," NASA said.

The fifth largest planet in the solar system, the Earth has a mass of 6 sextillion, 588 quintillion short tons.

Health costs $162 billion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans spent $162 billion, about 9 percent of their income, on medical care and health insurance in 1980, according to government statistics reviewed by the Health Insurance Association of America.

By contrast, consumers spent $46 billion, or 19 percent of their income, on food, including alcohol, and $272 billion, or nearly 17 percent, on housing.

Household operating expenses represented almost 13 percent of personal income, transportation about 13 percent, clothing, jewelry and accessories almost 7 percent.

Big star nears explosive death

WASHINGTON — A massive star 9,000 light years away in the Milky Way has shown signs it may be heading toward an explosive death "soon" that would be so bright it could be seen in broad daylight.

Dr. Kris Davidson of the University of Minnesota said in a National Science Foundation report released Tuesday the stellar explosion could occur any time — next week or 100,000 years from now. Either would be soon by cosmic standards.

The star is Eta Carinae — the largest star in the Milky Way and one of the most massive known in the universe. It is called a unique blue supergiant and has more than 100 times the mass of our sun.

When it blows up, astronomers said it would release an enormous burst of energy — light equal to billions of suns and lasting a matter of weeks.

Such an explosion, called a supernova, is believed to occur when a star has used up all its available fuel and collapses. The last supernova to occur in the Milky Way was observed in 1604.

Scientists have never seen a star before it turned into a supernova. Although there have been suggestions radiation from relatively nearby supernovae millions of years ago may have been responsible for climate disasters or mass extinctions on Earth, Dr. Nolan Walborn of Cerro Tololo Inter-American Observatory in Chile said Eta Carinae is too far away to affect the Earth.

He said, however, when it explodes, it should appear from the Earth four or five times brighter than Venus at its brightest. That would make the supernova visible in daylight.

Eta Carinae is in the sky of the Southern Hemisphere and can be seen only from Florida and Texas in the United States, grazing the southern horizon.

Davidson, Walborn and Dr. Theodore Guill of the Goddard Space Flight Center, Greenbelt, Md., said the key clue to the Eta Carinae's likely fate was the discovery of glowing hot gas spewed out from the star 150 years ago contains much more nitrogen than expected.

Davidson said the nitrogen had to be produced by a particular set of nuclear reactions at the core of the star, and this happens only after a star has been around for a while. The nitrogen then had to make its way to the star's surface and wait to be ejected into space. This, he said, "tells us the star already must have lived through much of its possible life."

Although scientists discuss the star's fate in the present tense, Eta Carinae's distance from Earth means the light astronomers now are seeing from the star actually originated 9,000 years ago. It may already have exploded, but astronomers would not know it until the radiation reached the Earth.

OPINION

How Haig created Sandinista fiasco

WASHINGTON — The full story can now be told of how a 19-year-old Nicaraguan made a world-class monkey out of Secretary of State Alexander Haig. Incredible as it may seem, Haig was largely responsible for his own humiliation.

Jack Anderson
Washington Merry-Go-Round

Though Washington officials would like to forget it, most of the world remembers the carefully staged appearance of young Orlando Jose Tardencilla at a State Department press conference on March 12. The Sandinista stripping was supposed to be living proof that Nicaragua was aiding and abetting leftist guerrillas in El Salvador.

Instead, of course, he told the world — live, on network TV, thoughtfully arranged by his American coaches — that his confessions incriminating the Nicaraguan regime had been wrung out of him by torture and were pure horsefeathers.

It was a bad day for Haig and his hardliners. All hands responsible for the fiasco attempted a hasty disengagement.

The State Department, caught red-handed, could only stammer and stammer in embarrassment. The CIA at first piously proclaimed its innocence of any involvement in the pathetic affair. When the absurdity of this line became obvious, the spokes judiciously leaked a secret document to a trusted reporter, which tended to show that Tardencilla's interrogation by CIA experts had been painstakingly thorough.

THE TRUTH of the matter is: American intelligence people knew about Tardencilla almost as soon as he was captured in January 1981. Not only that, but some State Department officials greeted his confessions with open skepticism. "His story was a little shaky," one diplomatic source recalled. "That whole thing sounded phony."

What particularly turned off State Department people was Tardencilla's claim that he had received guerrilla training in Ethiopia. This made no sense: Nicaragua and Cuba have ample training facilities for El Salvador-bound guerrillas. Why send recruits all the way to Africa?

Eventually, the youth's supposed confession was filed and forgotten, as it should have been.

But early this year, Haig began claiming the United States had proof positive that the Sandinista regime in Nicaragua was deeply involved in El Salvador. He was challenged by Congress and the press to produce the "smoking gun."

It was at this point, apparently, that someone remembered the young Nicaraguan prisoner, whose confession so neatly matched the Haig theory of Sandinista involvement in El Salvador's civil war.

Fortunately for young Tardencilla, his Salvadoran captors had never quite given up hope of exploiting the confession they had extracted under torture. So they kept him alive against the day when his bizarre tale could be turned into useful propaganda.

My reporters Jon Lee Anderson and Lucette Lagado reached Tardencilla by telephone in Nicaragua, where he is now a national hero. He told them what happened next.

EARLY IN March, he was visited in his solitary prison cell by an American official. Tardencilla said the American told him he could either come to the United States and tell his story or be left to rot in jail.

The 19-year-old soldier, eager to improve his lot, told the interrogators what they wanted to hear. He guessed at specifics and came close enough to satisfy them. So his interrogators proudly presented the young Nicaraguan as the "smoking gun" that their boss so desperately needed. And it blew up in Al Haig's face.

Footnote: According to Radio Havana, Tardencilla was recently in Cuba to attend a communist youth congress. He was hailed as a hero.

Violence rising in S. Africa

WASHINGTON — U.S. analysts are worried by new indications that the South African government has nearly given up hope of finding a political solution to its racial problems.

It has gone largely unreported here that the South African Parliament is considering — and seems certain to approve — legislation that would effectively double the size of the country's armed forces.

All white male South Africans now are required to serve two years of active duty in the military after they leave school.

They must put in another 340 days of active duty over the next eight years; during the first five years of this period, they may be sent into what the South Africans call "operational areas" — that is, combat zones.

The new legislation would require South African soldiers to serve 720 days spread over 12 years after their initial two-year hitch. Thereafter, they would have to spend 12 days a year in a sort of national guard until they reached age 60.

South Africa now has about 95,000 troops on active duty and about 400,000 more in the pool of ready reserves. The legislation would increase the active-duty force to about 250,000 and the ready reserves to about 800,000.

This military buildup has the full backing of the government of Prime Minister Pieter Botha. Defense Minister Magnus Malpas says that the new plan is made necessary by the increased possibility that South Africa will be forced to fight a conventional war against one of its black-ruled neighbors.

THE SOUTH Africans believe that they alone are thwarting a Soviet plot to take over southern Africa. Malan said recently that South Africa faces a Soviet-led "total onslaught" against the country. The Soviets have moved up their timetable for domination of southern Africa from 1990 to 1985.

But analysts for the U.S. State Department and CIA see the military buildup as a sign that the South African government thinks it can remain white control of the country only through the use of force and is therefore preparing for a long siege.

South Africa is continuing to fight the black nationalist SWAPO in Angola and Namibia. SWAPO is primarily in Namibia. SWAPO is also using Angola as a staging and training area, and last August the South African armed forces made a major incursion into Angola to destroy guerrilla bases. Sources here expect another such incursion, possibly in early summer.

Meanwhile, black political unrest is growing rapidly within South Africa itself. The South African government is being challenged by the guerrillas of the African National Congress. Political violence is clearly increasing within the country although the government attempts to play down these incidents.

Sources here estimate that the guerrillas launched at least 20 command-style attacks on various government installations last year — almost three times as many as during 1980. The African National Congress is thought to have only about 2,000 trained guerrillas, but its support is growing rapidly among the black population.

WHITE POLITICAL unrest is similarly on the rise. Support is building for the new far-right, ultra-nationalist Conservative Party of Andries Treurnicht, who is known as "Dr. No" for his unwavering opposition to change in the South African policy of strict racial separation. The party has already picked up the support of 35 members of Parliament.

The basic tenet of the party is opposition to Prime Minister Botha's proposals to grant some share of power within the country to non-whites — more specifically, citizens of mixed or Asian ancestry, but not blacks.

House passes measure allowing Long to retire

HARTFORD (UPI) — The House has passed a bill that would allow deposed state police commander Donald J. Long to retire with full benefits once the legislation became law.

The bill, approved Tuesday, must also be passed by the Senate, and would take effect immediately upon being signed by the governor.

It would allow a commissioner or deputy commissioner of public safety, who has served 20 years as a state policeman, to retire before reaching age 47 if his administrative position was "terminated, abolished or eliminated."

Gov. William O'Neill stripped Long of his position as commander of day-to-day state police operations because of his handling of a March 1981 Ku Klux Klan rally in Meriden that erupted into violence.

Long, who is 45, has fulfilled 29 years service with the department.

Rep. Eugene Migliaro, R-Wolcott, a sponsor of the amendment, said critics were wrong to accuse supporters of "trying to push Long out."

"It's just the opposite," said Migliaro. "We want out to help him."

If Long wanted to stay he could, said Migliaro, who was told, however, that Long was "reluctant to leave because he'll lose his benefits."

repeated calls for help from the local force.

Long remains as commissioner of public safety but his authority as state police commander has been shifted to the deputy commissioner, now Col. Lester J. Forst.

Technically, Long is responsible for the department's administrative business. For all practical purposes, though, he is in limbo.

The provision was attached as an amendment to a bill allowing owners of the Plainfield dog racing track to hire people other than police officers to direct traffic at performances. It was approved 78-68.

Services held for 4 victims

NEWINGTON (UPI) — The four victims of a bloody weekend shooting spree have been laid to rest while the man accused of killing them remained behind bars facing a possible death sentence.

Funeral services were held Tuesday at St. Mary's Church for Mrs. Wood, her mother, Patricia Voti, 65, of New Britain and Mrs. Wood's daughter, Elisa Wood, 15. Mrs. Wood's ex-husband, Steven Wood, was held in lieu of $50,000 bond in connection with the slayings Saturday in West Hartford.

"We are confused, perhaps wondering why it had to happen," Rev. Donald French said during the service. "There is shock within us and yet, maybe, even anger — anger that such a thing could happen."

"We cannot pretend that it didn't happen. But we must look forward. We cannot allow ourselves to be tortured by the question why," he said.

The three were later buried at St. Mary's Cemetery in East Hartford. Services were held Tuesday in Windsor for Troie. Wood will be presented in Hartford Superior Court Friday. Prosecutors said they will ask a judge to revoke Troie's bond.

Wood is charged with four counts of murder and one count of capital murder. Conviction on a capital murder charge can carry a death penalty.

Defense attorney Thomas Nadeau said Wood would plead innocent by reason of insanity.

An affidavit filed Monday in West Hartford Superior Court indicated Wood confessed to the slayings. The affidavit also states Wood told police he intended to kill David R. Chozick of West Hartford.

Wood blamed Chozick for introducing Mrs. Wood to Troie, the affidavit states.

Chozick is president of David R. Chozick Realty Co., where Mrs. Wood worked, and of Plastic Supply Co. Inc. in Wallingford, where Wood was treasurer and part owner.

The Hartford Courant reported Mrs. Wood's divorce lawyer, Douglas S. Ebenstein, said Mrs. Wood had told him two occasions when Wood sexually assaulted her daughter.

Papers filed by Mrs. Wood in court while seeking the divorce also state Wood tied up Mrs. Wood and her daughter on Sept. 13, threatened them with a gun and fired a shot into a wall of their West Hartford home.

Republicans: Income tax looms

Legislature approves $3.19 billion budget

By Bruno V. Ranniello
United Press International
HARTFORD — Legislative Democrats have delivered a $3.19 billion election-year budget they labeled balanced and lean but which Republicans branded deficient and a prelude to a state income tax.

Final action on the 1982-83 budget came Tuesday in the Senate where the controlling Democrats overrode Republicans on a straight party vote of 22-15.

The budget, about $20 million more than the one Gov. William O'Neill proposed in February, was the same version approved after a 12-hour session in the House last Thursday.

O'Neill has stated he could go along with a $2.19 billion budget including the $7.8 million, or 3 percent, increase in welfare benefits added by lawmakers.

Sen. Philip Robertson, R-Cheshire, chided Senate Democrats for calling the budget balanced, despite a number of one-shot tax increases totaling $140 million.

The state will be faced with a loss of $140 million after next year, something he said the Democrats were ignoring until the elections were over in November.

There will be no way to raise that revenue after the gubernatorial elections, then with a state income tax," said Robertson.

He also accused the majority of ignoring human needs in rejecting several amendments to provide care for the elderly and disadvantaged

"You (Senate Democrats) have mislaid priorities in approving this budget."
— Sen. Philip Robertson, R-Cheshire disadvantaged children and to use $20,000 from the governor's contingency fund to continue the Breakthrough to the Elderly program in 38 communities.

Also rejected were GOP attempts to raise $100,000 for crisis intervention teams and $300,000 to hire state inspectors for state construction projects. Proponents said the inspectors were needed to free up stalled projects that could cost the state an additional $5 million to $8 million.

The House had voted 81-69 to approve the budget much the same way it was approved by the Appropriations Committee.

House Democrats rejected GOP efforts to cut $5 million in higher welfare cuts and reduce the state contributions to the teacher's retirement fund by $4 million.

But Republicans did strip $1.8 million from the University of Connecticut budget with the difference made up by nearly doubling tuition for out-of-state students.

Two amendments would have deleted $33 million in projected revenue from the unincorporated business tax and $55 million in anticipated funds from the gross receipts tax on oil companies.

Senate Majority Leader Richard Scheller, D-Essex, condemned the Republican tactics, charging the majority party was trying to repeal taxes without showing the services to be cut.

"This is the worst charade I've seen in my eight years in the legislature," said Scheller.

The Senate also defeated Republican efforts to transfer $2 million from general school grants to towns to the state program to assist school children.

"You have mislaid priorities in approving this budget," he said. Republicans waged a futile battle to challenge the package, which is 7.9 percent higher than the current budget. Seven of their amendments were killed and they discarded two more without voting, one of which included a $25 million laundry list of tax cuts.

Workfare change goes to House

Bill requiring state to create jobs OK'd

HARTFORD (UPI) — The state would be required to create job slots to help cities provide work to able-bodied welfare recipients under a proposed amendment to the workfare law.

The Senate Tuesday night approved the amendment to the workfare bill and returned the matter to the House where stiffer penalties for workfare violators had been drawn up earlier this month.

The workfare program requires towns to set up and phase in work programs for up to two-thirds of their able-bodied welfare recipients in order for them to continue receiving assistance.

The bill approved by the House on April 1 dealt with penalties for people who failed to report to workfare assignments.

But the Senate amendment proposed by Sen. William DiBella, D-Hartford, sought state involvement in the program that he called a "working success."

DiBella said his amendment was meant to have the state make a commitment "in something they're already involved in. Simply, what we want is for more people to have jobs."

The Senate also approved and sent to Gov. William O'Neill a bill to close a loophole in the state's tax on the gross earnings of oil companies, providing the state with another $10 million.

An effort by Sen. Frederick Knous, D-Clinton, to repeal the controversial oil tax that was enacted in 1980 lost on a close 18-17 vote. Knous sought to have the tax end on July 1, 1983.

The Senate also approved and sent to the House a bill that would prevent people convicted of crimes from reaping a profit from their crimes.

The bill would require that any profits from a broadcast or written account of a crime be subject to a civil suit that could be filed by a crime victim or the victim's family for up to five years.

Whatever money remained would be turned over to the state's victim retribution fund.

The workfare amendment would require the state to develop positions in state agencies for the placement of up to 12 percent of the workfare recipients in cities with more than 100,000 population.

If the Department of Income Maintenance failed to establish the positions, cities with the required number of recipients would not be denied reimbursement for the 12 percent.

The amendment was initially defeated on a 17-17 vote but was revived and eventually approved on an 18-16 vote.

As amended by the House, a recipient who refused to report for work under the law would face up to 30 days cutoff of benefits. A second refusal would lead to a 60 day suspension of payments and a third violation, 90 days of lost assistance.

Budget forum mixed

Coventry taxpayers want both more, less

By Lisa Zowada
Herald Reporter

COVENTRY — The Town Council Tuesday night received mixed messages on its proposed $6.6 million 1982-83 budget with taxpayers telling councilmen to cut down the 11.94 percent increase but at the same time restore town positions and improve services.

The council will meet tonight to discuss the suggestions and complaints of the residents, who filled the Coventry High School auditorium for a public hearing on the budget.

At the start of the more than three-hour hearing, residents voiced little opposition to the proposed $6,646,730 budget, which includes an increase of 11.1 percent for education and a mill rate of 29.7. This mill rate means if your home is assessed at $40,000, you'll pay about $1,180 in taxes next year.

Residents told the council, which presented the budget in detail, that there should be money in the budget to improve road maintenance. They also said the eighth officer on the police force, which the council had earlier cut from the police budget, should be restored.

Several residents said they were concerned that without the eighth officer, who was lost through a resignation last year and whom the council decided to cut from the budget, Police Chief Gary Sousa might be working too much overtime in order to save the town money.

Sousa, who is on salary, told the council he works between 60 and 70 hours a week. One resident, J. Donald Edwards, of Grant Hill Road, said that last Easter Sousa answered a complaint on his own time so another officer wouldn't have to be called in and paid triple overtime pay.

"I am personally concerned about the number of hours this man may have to put in because we can't give him an adequate staff," Edwards said.

Taxpayers also told the council that plans in the proposed budget to repave 3.8 miles of road in town were inadequate and that many roads were in need of oiling.

BUT AS the hearing was winding down, several residents rose to tell the council they opposed the budget and that should not be fooled by the lack of vocal opposition.

Former Councilman Robert E. Olmstead warned the council that the "silent majority will turn down" the budget.

"I urge you desperately to cut back on this," he said. "Don't just run this up the flag pole. My thought is that they (the taxpayers) will tear down the flagpole."

Joyce E. Carilli, head of the Coventry Taxpayers Association, gave the council a letter opposing the proposed budget and then read it aloud.

Ms. Carilli, who said her views did not necessarily reflect those of the taxpayers' association, called the budget "excessive" and said the "Town Council is not in tune with the citizens who want a reasonable budget."

She said the Board of Education had become an "employer first" and suggested its budget be cut from $4.45 million to $3.85 million. The general government budget should be cut from $1.77 million to $1.60 million, she said.

RESIDENT WILLIAM Miller told the council that it "can't be everything to everybody." Miller, who said he is retiring this year, said "I feel like the other Gray Panthers around here, that you are putting your hands too damn deep into my pockets."

On April 12 the council approved the $6.6 million budget by a 5-2 vote split along party lines, with the Republicans voting against the proposal.

The council will meet at 7:30 tonight in the Board Room at Town Hall.

Bolton may use funds for ball field, garage

BOLTON — Selectmen are proposing to spend $50,000 in federal money to put a ball field at Indian Notch Park and to begin plans for a new town garage.

At a meeting today they also pointed $2,750 for a gas tank for the town garage, and $3,000 toward a new radio for the police cruiser.

A hearing on the proposals is scheduled for Monday at 8 p.m. in the Community Hall.

In trying to decide how to spend the $47,000 that is available in federal revenue sharing money, the selectmen put off plans for a new or renovated fire station. At a hearing last week, Norman Press, president of the fire commission, asked the selectmen to consider spending money for a feasibility study on the existing fire station. He asked for $12,500 to study the possibility of renovating the building instead of building a new one.

Building a new fire station is an idea that has been kicking around town officials for several years, but has been put off primarily because of the expense.

The selectmen said Tuesday night they felt the town garage was in worse shape than the fire station, and therefore that was the one to deal with first.

FIRST SELECTMAN Henry P. Ryba also said renovating the existing fire station would be like

"patching up an old pair of shoes. It's an all wood building, and it doesn't have the width and it doesn't have the height."

Selectman Carl A. Preuss, who is a member of the fire department, said fire officials suggested fixing up the old station because they assumed a new building would be hard to sell to taxpayers. "The economic climate has changed in town," he said.

"People are more dollar-conscious. The people may not want to shell out for a new building."

At the hearing last week, $15,000 was slated for the new ball field, but selectmen raised the amount to give the project enough money to almost complete it by this fall. Selectman Aloysius J. Ahearn said he supported the idea because it would give that side of town its first ball field. "I think it's a very worthwhile project. If we don't take a step to do something now, it'll never get done," he said.

A SUGGESTION last week to put a drainage field at the green in front of Bentley Memorial Library was turned down after Ryba said it might interfere with future plans to drain Bolton Center Road.

The selectmen ignored the Republican Town Committee's recommendation to put money into plans for renovating the town hall and a study of the possibility of turning the Center School Building into a fire station and a town garage. Republican Press said, "Personally, I do believe it merits discussion."

"Peaceful" colors popular

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — People who are buying interior paint for their homes this year are expected to lean toward so-called "peaceful" colors, according to one expert.

"In our annual survey of custom color consumer preference, off-whites and shaded neutrals are still prime favorites, but the new range of tranquil blue colors is beginning to show a noticeable gain in popularity," said Bonnie Bender, manager of color marketing for Pittsburgh Paints.

One color making a comeback, she said, is green, which has generally been out of design favor for more than a decade. "This time, though," she said, "the increasingly popular greens are those with more of a majestic blue-green character, rather than olive or yellow-green, that associate with the timelessness quality of color in the universe."

Blues gaining in favor are soft muted shades and "also gaining are the muted mauves (moderate purples), subtle taupes (brownish grays), dusty roses, and plum tones.

There are five restaurants in Bolton.

Fiano argued that the food inspector should be treated as a town service, and picked up by town taxpayers. Selectman Carl A. Preuss said, "I see it as a business expense. Why should the homeowner subsidize a business?"

The selectmen didn't raise suggestions of raising restaurant fees Tuesday, but may have set the stage for such action by changing the town ordinance concerning permits to give the board more control over the fee system.

On the solar energy ordinance, the only exemptions before Tuesday night were for heating. Now, exemptions can be granted for solar electric and different types of heating systems, too.

Right now, restaurants pay $1 for a permit to sell food.

Suggested fees have been between $25 and $55 per quarter for each restaurant, depending on the seating capacity.

There are 31 archdioceses of the Roman Catholic Church in the United States.

LOOKING TO BUY A NEW HOUSE OR CONDOMINIUM?

LOOK FOR THIS SYMBOL!

This unique symbol is your assurance that the home you are considering to buy is special. It's a home with energy efficiency built right in. It's an ideal combination of gas heating, gas appliances, and energy conservation measures throughout. All these features add up to lowering your energy use, lowering your annual operating costs, too. Making this award-winning home more affordable in the long run. Think about it. Affordability over the years. It's an important fact to consider right from the start. A fact many people overlook. But with this symbol, you'll be guided in the right direction.

Not every home qualifies. To merit the distinction of being an Energy Efficient Affordable Gas Home, your builder or developer had to make an extra effort. And make sure that either thermal or storm windows were included; and there's insulation in ceilings and walls; and that the entire house has been weather stripped and/or caulked. A setback thermostat and flow restricting showerheads are also musts. This symbol says you are getting all the benefits of clean, dependable natural gas, too. Not only for energy efficient heating, but for water heating, as well.

There are many other factors to consider when making a decision as important as buying a home. But energy efficiency today, surely is at the top of everyone's list. So look for this symbol and feel confident. That you are looking at a new house or condominium in which energy efficiency has been given the top priority. It makes good sense today. It will make even better sense tomorrow.

MacLeish dies; poet-playwright

BOSTON (UPI) — Poet-playwright Archibald MacLeish, winner of three Pulitzer prizes for his verse and drama and one of the most distinguished poets of the 20th century, died Tuesday night. He was 89.

MacLeish, who would have been 90 next month, died at Massachusetts General Hospital. He was brought to the hospital March 20 from his home in Conway, Mass., suffering from an undisclosed illness.

The first of the three Pulitzers came in 1933 for the poem "Conquistador," the second in 1937 for "Collected Poems 1924-1935" and the third in 1958 for the verse play "J. B.," a modern version of the Bible's Book of Job.

He also won a host of other awards, including the National Book Award, the National Medal for Literature and Bollingen Award.

MacLeish, a Yale and Harvard-educated lawyer who served as an assistant secretary of state during World War II and was a founder of the U.N. Educational and Scientific and Cultural Organization, was a professor of English at Harvard University for 23 years.

He was a soldier, a gentleman farmer, a television dramatist — but most of all he was a poet.

"Certainly he was one of the half dozen major poets of the last 40 years, in England or America," said W. B. Yeats, a Harvard professor of English. "And he was also unusual in combining his poetry writing with being what you might call a man of affairs. He knew the whole world of government."

He was the top writing professor at Harvard University and also lectured at Amherst College and Cambridge University in England. He retired from Harvard in 1972, but continued to lecture.

MacLeish was known for his tremendous drive. He rose early because he couldn't sleep after the cross start talking. His wife once said he would now the lawn longer and faster than anyone else.

He once said "I could hardly remember when he started to write. The only thing I remember is what I really mean — my delight in the marvelous things language could do."

His published verse before 1933 included "The Hamlet of Archibald A. MacLeish." His other works included "Poetry and Experience," "The Human Season: Selected Poems 1925-1972," "Scratch: A Play," "Riders on the Earth," and "Songs for Eve."

MacLeish is survived by his wife Ade, 89, his son William of Woods Hole, Mass., his daughter, Mary Grimm of Kensington, Md., a sister, Isabel Campbell of Geneva, N.Y., nine grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Albert W. Naczkowski, 71, of 38 Lockwood St., died Tuesday at his home. He was the husband of Catherine M. (Shea) Naczkowski. He was born in Rockville and had lived in Manchester most of his life. He retired in 1956 as head of the boiler room at a mechanical firm in Manchester and at the time of his retirement he was employed by the A&P of Manchester. He was an Army veteran of World War II, a member of the American Legion and DAV Post 17, both of Manchester, and was an original member of the Manchester Fine Arts Group.

Dealer: 'lemon' bill a turkey

Enhancing the dealers' profits in the eyes of the consumer by giving it, in effect, a money-back guarantee.

Attracting out-of-state car buyers who want the security that the "lemon bill" would provide.

Carter, however, looks on the lemon bill as just another paper tiger for consumers who want to fight "big business."

"You don't really think that General Motors is going to give you a new car, do you?" he asks rhetorically. "The major car companies are losing billions of dollars a year. Do you think they're capable of absorbing the cost of the lemon law?"

What will happen if the bill is passed, says Carter, is that the cost of car manufacturers will add the cost of compliance to the sticker price of their automobiles.

RICHARD MEEK, executive director of the Connecticut Automobile Trades Association, says the nation's car manufacturers would probably challenge in court a consumer's demand for a refund or new car. The consumer would then have to hire a lawyer to pursue a case that could be litigated for years, because manufacturers would stall as long as they can to prevent a settlement.

"I think it will take a lawsuit every time (a consumer demands retribution)," Meeks says. "And the dealer will be sued also, even though he has no control over the actions of a manufacturer."

Even if the cost of complying with the law were passed on to consumers, Woodcock says, "if they

COLLINS Johnston, general manager of Dillon (Ford) Sales and Services on 319 Main St., says the problems of consumers who are stuck with lemons can usually be resolved by negotiations with the dealer. "We'll do our best to resolve the problem here. Why would we want unhappy customers?" Johnston says.

Woodcock, however, says the dealer shouldn't have to "bear the brunt of making the consumer whole again" in the case of a car that has defects in its manufacturing. "The idea of the lemon bill is to make the auto industry more accountable," he says.

Even if the cost of complying with the law were passed on to consumers, Woodcock says, "if they raise the price of new cars by $100 to get rid of all the lemons, it's worth it."

WOODCOCK'S bill faces a tough battle in the Senate, where auto industry lobbyists will be fighting hard to kill it. If passed, the lemon law would be the first of its kind in the country.

Woodcock predicts that "auto dealers' negative reaction to the bill will cause a backlash in the state Senate. If (the dealers) can't back up their opposition with rational, sound argument, if they try to walk all over the consumer, their cries of protest will fall on deaf ears."

Fall injures sign worker

A detailed lease between the Town of Manchester and the Little Theater of Manchester over renovation and use of Cheney Hall was approved by the Board of Directors Tuesday night.

The directors also passed an ordinance setting up an eight-member board to arbitrate disputes growing out of the lease and to resolve rental disputes. It will also supervise the restoration and renovation, but the chief responsibility to day-to-day operation of the hall will fall to the Little Theater of Manchester.

The lease, for five years at $1,000 a year, requires LTM to mount at least two theatrical productions each year on recommendation of the general manager.

After the commission is in place, the terms will be for three years. The lease and the commission will be to arbitrate disputes growing out of the lease and to resolve rental disputes. It will also supervise the restoration and renovation, but the chief responsibility to day-to-day operation of the hall will fall to the Little Theater of Manchester.

Detailed hall lease approved

A detailed lease between the Town of Manchester and the Little Theater of Manchester over renovation and use of Cheney Hall was approved by the Board of Directors Tuesday night.

The directors also passed an ordinance setting up an eight-member board to arbitrate disputes growing out of the lease and to resolve rental disputes. It will also supervise the restoration and renovation, but the chief responsibility to day-to-day operation of the hall will fall to the Little Theater of Manchester.

The lease, for five years at $1,000 a year, requires LTM to mount at least two theatrical productions each year on recommendation of the general manager.

After the commission is in place, the terms will be for three years. The lease and the commission will be to arbitrate disputes growing out of the lease and to resolve rental disputes. It will also supervise the restoration and renovation, but the chief responsibility to day-to-day operation of the hall will fall to the Little Theater of Manchester.

Fee hike to have little impact

A 10 percent increase in tuition approved Tuesday by the Board of Directors of the Little Theater of Manchester will have a little impact on students at Manchester Community College, the school's president said today.

"I don't think it will have a profound effect," said William E. Vincent, MCC president.

But he added, "Most of our students are at the lower end of the income scale and any increase is a burden."

Vincent said proposed cuts in financial aid probably will affect the students more.

The 10 percent tuition hike was approved last month by the Board of Trustees of Community Colleges in its second vote on the subject. The trustees had originally rejected the increase by one vote. The hike will bring the annual tuition charge at MCC to $830.

Vincent called the increase "inevitable."

"Even that 10 percent doesn't keep up with the escalation of costs in education," he said.

He noted that the Legislature's Appropriations Committee has committed $200,000 of the money from the increased tuition to the community colleges. From that money, Vincent said, MCC will get one data processing instructor and some equipment.

The Board of Higher Education Tuesday approved 10 percent tuition increases for students in the state colleges and state technical colleges, as well as the community colleges. The increases take effect in September, start of the next academic year.

The higher education board approved the increases despite protests from at least two members who criticized the Legislature for not putting up more state money for the schools.

The higher charges were approved by a 10-1 vote, with the dissenting vote cast by board member Betty Tiant, who is also secretary-treasurer of the Connecticut State Labor Council, AFL-CIO.

Mrs. Tiant voiced concern that the state was starting to price higher education out of the reach of many students, but also conceded the board had few options in light of the Legislature's current posture for funding higher education.

Mark Minberg, a University of Connecticut law student who represents students on the board, said he voted for the increases under protest and also criticized the Legislature's appropriations for higher education.

Under the board's action, tuition for state residents attending one of the four state colleges as a full-time student will be increased by $44 from the current annual charge of $460.

Tuition for state residents attending one of the 12 community colleges as a full-time student will be increased by $30 over the current $300 a year and by $39 over the current $281 at the five state technical colleges.

Last year, tuition increases ranging from 12 to 25 percent were approved by the boards of trustees for the state colleges, community colleges and technical colleges.

The Board of Higher Education also voted Tuesday to increase the per-credit fee for students in the evening division at the UConn School of Law from $56 to $75 for the 1982-83 academic year.

Each had a pair of blows to lead Manchester's nine-hit effort.

Hall also took the jayvee tilt, 6-1. Chris Regan took the loss for the 2-1 young Indians. He allowed only one earned run and four hits in five innings.

Hill hurls MCC to victory

Both Post runs were unearned.

The Cougars got all the runs he needed in the top of the third inning. Freddy Caro doubled in the run, Willie Gonzalez scored another on a base-loaded walk and Darryl Morhardt played two more on a two-run triple for a 4-0 lead.

MCC added three more in the fourth on an RBI single by Scott Carone and a two-run safety by Caro.

Manchester counted its final three markers in the fifth on an infield error and run scoring singles by Doug Sarant and Scott Carone.

Carone and Caro each had two hits to pace the Cougars' seven-hit attack. Caro had three RBI's.

Post falls to 1-8 with the loss.

PEOPLE PHIL ROURA TOM POSTER EXCLUSIVE!

FBI taking bad rap says veteran agent

When it comes to public debates, the FBI likes to keep silent. But one of its top agents in the country let loose for People Exclusive in a rare interview.

Kenneth J. Walton, a 16-year veteran who has worked on the biggest FBI cases in 12 regional bureaus, says the FBI taking a bad rap on Watergate and Abscam. "The media sometimes think that Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein broke Watergate when it was the FBI that did it," insisted Walton. "The only people who are really upset over the FBI are the persons who have been convicted."

"You would get the impression that Watergate was solved by Woodward and Bernstein, but it's a misconception by the media and journalism schools. It's not factual."

"It makes me feel that Watergate makes a good book," said Walton, who is now deputy director of the sprawling New York regional office. "Watergate was solved by the FBI because the FBI refused to stop its investigation. So Watergate, in our opinion, is not a stigma. Watergate is an example of the FBI doing exactly what the American taxpayer wants it to do."

Abscam is the same thing. The people complaining the most are those who have been convicted. And many of those convicted in Abscam have high media profiles, and they are attacking the FBI, but we have not responded," Unit now.

Walton is regarded by many friends and foes of the Bureau as an example of the "new FBI image," which the Bureau is building by being young, personable and communicative agents.

"Despite the conception by some that the status of the FBI has fallen, we have well over 800 qualified applicants for every single job vacancy on every level in the FBI," said Walton. "If you want to describe it as the new FBI, you could not describe that we're doing more of our effort now to organized crime and in 10 divisions of legitimate business, unions, the garment industry. If the public waits 18 months to two years, you will see significant announcements because we have a million of organized crime for the first time."

Walton and other FBI officials can deny it, but it's a fact that they are now more responsive to the media, probably because of the "new image" they want to project.

The new FBI is also striving to improve its relations with local law enforcement officials who feel the feds too often like to take charge of cases involving bank robberies and terrorists.

"There has been an increase by women in bank robberies, for what reason we don't know, and they're dressed both as men and women," Walton said. "When I was in Detroit, the bottom fell out of the job market in the auto industry, and the bank robberies just skyrocketed. Bank robberies tend to be tied to the economy. To have a continuing average of 800 bank robberies in New York City in a year and have a 75 percent conviction rate of bank robbers speaks of a problem affected by the economy."

Movie directors thrive on B'way

By David Handler
NEW YORK (NEA) — It seems like every big-name director in Hollywood is draining his swimming pool and moving here to make a giant splash in the theater.

William Friedkin, "The Exorcist" and "The French Connection," is scheduled in this season on "Dust for Dust," a two-part English drama with Anne Bancroft and Max Von Sydow.

Louis Malle, director of the critically acclaimed "Atlantic City," mounted a new play by John Guare starring Ben Cross of the Academy Award-winning "Chariots of Fire."

Robert Altman, the quirky and sometimes masterful director of "M*A*S*H" and "Nashville," engineered Ober's Broadway bow in "Come Back to the 5 and Dime, Jimmy Dean, Jimmy Dean."

Karel Reisz, who helmed "The French Lieutenant's Woman," directs Sam Waterston in two new one-act plays by John Guare — due mid-April.

Meanwhile, Joan Micklin Silver, the New York based director of the films "Head Over Heels," "Between the Lines" and "Hester Street," has just launched an off-Broadway musical entertainment called "Maybe I'm Doing It Wrong."

The show is a drawing from 23 songs by the very talented by the composer/lyricist Randy Newman.

This is Mrs. Silver's second theatrical stab — last season she put on a popular comedy about four teenagers growing up in the '60s, called "Alban."

The return to musical is not only the theory of sailing but will also be involved in all aspects of the operation and maintenance of the schooner.

The course fee of $180 includes boat charter, instruction, transportation to Mystic, leadership, insurance and food. It's open to anyone 15 and older.

Registration with a $50 deposit is being accepted at Adventure Challenge, Box 1011, Manchester. For more information call 647-1514.

A pre-course meeting will be conducted May 24 at 7 p.m. at the West Side Recreation Center, Cedar Street.

Chicken lovers can rejoice

By Susan Plese Herald Reporter

Chicken lovers rejoice. Authors Maria Luisa Scott and Jack Denton Scott have collaborated on a little $3.95 Bantam Books paperback called "The Chicken and the Egg Cookbook..."

Several unusual dishes pair chicken with eggplant, and chicken is used instead of the more traditional (and more expensive) lamb in a few Greek recipes.

Zabaglione

6 egg yolks 5 tablespoons superfine sugar pinch of salt 6 tablespoons Marsala Combine all ingredients in top of a round-bottomed double boiler...

Chicken with 25 Cloves of Garlic

2 three-pound chickens, cut up 25 large whole cloves of garlic, peeled 1/4 cup olive oil 1/4 cup dry vermouth 3 leeks (white part only) thinly sliced 8 sprigs parsley 2 teaspoons salt 1/2 teaspoon pepper 1/2 teaspoon dried tarragon 1/2 teaspoon dried rosemary

Braised lamb is economical

There are less expensive cuts of meats to select when shopping that will help ease the food budget. Many classic recipes are made with such cuts, but they do need longer cooking time than the top-grade meats.

Will there be enough food?

Continued from page 15 I can't help seeing what one man is buying. A quart of oil and a whisk broom. I wonder if any of these items can be thawed or frozen now than once, or is there any need to preheat the oven before hand. There seem to be more items in the store not to eat than to be eaten.
