Argentina denounces 'trick' Britain extends blockade

By United Press International

Britain extended its naval blockade of the Falkland Islands to within 12 miles of the Argentine coast Friday and warned it might bomb Argentina's mainland air bases if a last-hope peace bid fails.

Argentine military spokesmen denounced the new blockade as a "trick" to justify an expected assault and indicated Argentina would ignore it.

Britain also announced it was speeding up the dispatch of reinforcements for the 40-ship South Atlantic fleet, flying in 20 more Harrier fighters-bombers and sending several more destroyers and frigates.

While Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government stressed it wanted a peaceful settlement, it appeared to be marshaling Britain's military might for a long, all-out war over the Falklands.

A British Defense Ministry spokesman said the 200-mile blockade zone around the Falklands was being more than doubled and extended to within 12 miles of the Argentine coast. Any Argentine ship or plane found within the blockade zone will risk being attacked, he said.

"Because of the proximity of Argentine bases and the distance that hostile forces can cover undetected... the (British) government fears that any Argentine warships or military aircraft which is found more than 12 nautical miles from the Argentine coast will be regarded as hostile..."

IN BUENOS AIRES, a military spokesman branded the blockade announcement "a trick to justify a possible submarine attack on our ships."

Another military official said with scorn, "We will respect the new blockade just like we respected the old one."

A Foreign Ministry spokesman added the British announcement was "very bad" for peace negotiations currently under way at the United Nations, where Argentine Deputy Foreign Minister Enrique Ros arrived for talks with U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

The U.N. plan appeared to falter when in rapid succession:

- Argentina gave advance warning it would not give up sovereignty over the Falklands.
- Britain warned it might bomb air bases on the Argentine mainland and invade the Falklands to reclaim its former colony by force.
- British officials disclosed that 20 more Harrier jets would be flown to the Falklands, rather than sent by sea as originally planned.

Government sources said the Royal Navy also planned to dispatch more destroyers and frigates armed with Sea Wolf anti-missile missiles to counter Argentina's deadly Exocet — the French-made missile that disabled the destroyer HMS Sheffield on Tuesday.

IN LONDON, the Defense Ministry said the blockade was being extended because of the cover a cloud front converging on the Falklands could give to Argentine jets.

"Because of the proximity of Argentine bases and the distance that hostile forces can cover undetected, particularly at night and in bad weather, the government

Von Bulow gets 30-year jail term

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — Claus von Bulow was sentenced to 30 years in prison Friday for twice trying to murder his heiress wife with insulin injections that turned her into a "sleeping beauty," but he may be free on $1 million bail pending an appeal.

Von Bulow, 55, showed no emotion as Judge Thomas H. Needham sentenced him to 10 years on one count of attempted murder and 20 years — the maximum — on a second count involving the insulin shot that plunged his wife Martha "Sunny" von Bulow into an irreversible coma.

The sentences are to be served consecutively, and von Bulow would have to serve 10 years before becoming eligible for parole.

Needham continued von Bulow's $500,000 bail until next Friday when it will be upped to $1 million. If the financier cannot prove by noon on that day he can provide the required 10 percent cash for the higher bail, he will be sent to the state Adult Correctional Institutions in Cranston.

The Danish-born jet-setter was ordered to remain in Rhode Island until the accounting was complete.

The gallery in the packed courtroom audibly sighed when the judge announced the 10-year sentence on the first count.

"Quiet in the courtroom!" a court deputy told the crowd, which stayed hushed when the second sentence was read to von Bulow, who sat quietly with his daughter, Costima, 15, at his side.

Von Bulow said "no comment" when asked about the sentences as he was leaving the courthouse with his lawyer Herald Price Fahringier. A crowd of about 200 cheered him on as the defendant left in a yellow cab.

Prosecutor Stephen Famiglietti said Needham to sentence the bail, holding financier to a maximum of 40 years for the "cold-blooded, cold-hearted, calculated and premeditated" attempts on his wife's life.

"He has not shown any remorse at all for these heinous crimes," the prosecutor said. "Taking all of that into account, the state feels it has no alternative but to recommend maximum penalty for both offenses."

"If this defendant does not go to jail... it is message that any married man can kill his wife," Famiglietti said.

Fahringier said von Bulow had shown "no remorse, your honor, because there is no guilt."

Von Bulow, who did not testify at his 47-day trial, continued his silence and declined to address the court before sentencing.

Opponents sure I-84 dead

By Richard Cody Herald Reporter

"I-84 is dead" is the chant coming from environmental groups throughout Connecticut in the wake of Rhode Island's decision to cancel its plans for linking an already completed portion of I-84 in Manchester to I-86 in East Hartford aren't expected to be affected by the Rhode Island decision. Funding is in place and all legal hurdles have been cleared.

A federal highway official said Friday Rhode Island's decision "diminishes" the chances of putting I-84 across eastern Connecticut, but a state DOT spokesman said the state will continue with designs and can foresee no trouble in completing the $560-million highway from Bolton Notch to Route 52 in Killingly, then on to the Massachusetts Turnpike.

But the environmentalists are claiming that the highway plans the possibilities of running the highway either north or south of the Situate Reservoir.

Instead, Gurruly said his people should study the environmental impact an expansion of Route 6 will have and forget the interstate.

Rejects blame for unemployment Miffed Reagan calls Demos obstructionists, demagogues

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, in a fighting mood, called the Democrats "obstructionists" Friday and accused them of "demagoguery" for blaming the continuing recession and spiraling unemployment on him.

After riding bicycles and a white polo shirt, the president took a few perky shots at the Democrats as he crossed the South Lawn toward his helicopter to go horseback riding on the Marine Base at Quantico, Va.

Told that he was not in tune with his much vaunted, "bipartisan spirit," Reagan grinned broadly and said: "The only bipartisan spirit I have is with a horse."

The power to stimulate the economy is "in the hands of the Democrats, he contended. "It's just that they're being obstructionists about it."

Reagan rejected blame for the 9.4 percent April unemployment — a post-World War II record — announced earlier in the day by the Labor Department. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., called the jobsless "Ronald Reagan's bread line."

"No, they can't blame it on our policies," Reagan said. "And I can tell them how they can turn that around."

"Remember those are the seasonally adjusted figures that have been used," he said. "But if they want to turn that around, let the Democrats in the House and Senate join in adopting the budget that was passed out of the Senate Budget Committee and let us get that spending down."

That would lower unemployment, bring down interest rates and end the recession, he said.

Reminded that critics say his policies "hurt the poor," he shook his finger, raised his voice and said, "I have a single word for that — and that is demagoguery — because at no point have we ever cut the budget below what they were the previous year. And this is not cut below the previous year, it represents a 1 percent increase over the previous year."

"If you want to tell the Democrats again," he said emphatically, "there is one way to get this economy back, and it's in their hands. It's just that they're being obstructionists about it."

Reagan defended the administration proposal to slash $40 billion from Social Security and, responding to Democratic charges that benefits will be cut, he said, "They know better, and that is demagoguery again. I will guarantee everyone getting Social Security that they will get every penny."

News Briefing

Hinckleys talked out of hospital for John

WASHINGTON (UPI) — John W. Hinckley's parents convinced him months before he shot President Reagan to go to an institution for drug therapy, but a psychiatrist talked them out of the idea, his mother testified Friday.

John Hinckley, under questioning by a prosecutor at her son's trial, said Dr. John Hopper adamantly resisted sending him to a mental hospital or any other institution — insisting that would "make a cripple out of him."

She said Hopper took this unrelenting position despite acknowledging that Hinckley, then 25, "thinks like a 14-year-old."

Hinckley has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity to the March 30, 1981, shooting of Reagan and three other men, and faces a life sentence if convicted.

His mother talked in a controlled voice as she wound up two days of sometimes emotional testimony that left her sobbing on the witness stand Thursday.

Billy Graham arrives in Moscow

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Rev. Billy Graham arrived in the Soviet Union for the first time in 23 years Friday on a Christian campaign to ban nuclear weapons — a task he said was too important to be left to politicians.

"I was born, reared and educated in America and I am a loyal citizen of America," the evangelist said.

"But I also consider myself a member of the world community with responsibilities not only to one nation but to the whole human race."

The evangelist told an airport news conference there had been opposition to his trip from some U.S. officials, but he refused to identify them.

While Graham, 61, was en route to the Soviet Union from Paris, Western diplomats in Moscow said his visit was likely to serve Soviet interests.

Diplomatic sources admitted U.S. officials had expressed concern about Graham's possible appearance at a Soviet-sponsored conference of "Religious Workers for Saving the Sacred Gift of Life from Nuclear Catastrophe."

Carragher sworn assistant adjutant

HARTFORD (UPI) — Lt. Col. John Carragher of Newton was sworn in by Gov. William O'Neill Friday as assistant adjutant general and will now hold the rank of brigadier general.

Carragher, 46, a Hartford native, was appointed assistant by Maj. Gen. John Gore of East Lyme, now adjutant general. Adjutant Gen. John Freund recently retired.

Carragher graduated from the University of Connecticut in 1955 with an associate degree in political science. He joined the Connecticut Army National Guard in 1958 and was commissioned a second lieutenant in 1964.

He served with the First Battalion, 160th Infantry, for 14 years. In November 1980 he was named commanding officer of the First Battalion, 102nd Infantry Battalion with headquarters in New Haven and was promoted lieutenant colonel.

Two quit race in 6th District

HARTFORD (UPI) — Sen. William Curry, D-Fairfield, became the torchbearer of the "progressive" crusade for Congress in the 6th District Friday when his two closest rivals withdrew and gave their support to him.

William Willis of Salisbury and State Sen. Clifton Leonard of Avon, during an emotional news conference, said they had concluded there was room for only one liberal in the campaign.

"I feel it is important to have a single progressive candidate," said Leonard, 33, who was moved to tears as he endorsed his "good friend" Curry, 30.

Turkish diplomat buried in Boston

BOSTON (UPI) — Turkish diplomat Orhan Gunduz, assassinated by an Armenian terrorist bent on avenging a 70-year-old massacre, was buried Friday in Islamic ceremonies blanketed by massive security precautions.

Experimental drug kills acne bacteria

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A still-experimental drug found "unbelievably successful" in treating severe acne holds down the guilty bacteria long after the drug's use has been discontinued, a researcher reported Friday.

Dr. James Leyden of the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine said the drug, a vitamin A derivative called 13-cis-retinoic acid, is expected to be approved by the Food and Drug Administration later this year for use in patients with very severe acne — about 5 percent of all acne patients.

Leyden said about 500 people have been treated with the drug so far in the United States. Their acne was so severe that some considered suicide.

"All of these people who have been treated, with very few exceptions, have had either a prolonged remission or an actual cure," Leyden said.

Old roller coaster is for sale

BRISTOL (UPI) — How do you say goodbye to a roller coaster?

The family that owns Lake Compounce Amusement Park — regarded as the oldest such facility in the nation — has been considering several offers to sell the 137-year-old attraction.

But a family spokesman said Friday that while he would miss the park's antique carousel, it would be harder for him to part with the last roller coaster operating in Connecticut.

"Ours is a classic," J. Harwood Norton, president of the group that operates Lake Compounce, said proudly in describing the park's "wildcat" roller coaster built in 1927.

Firm to make nerve gas

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (UPI) — Union Carbide, which said earlier this week it was getting out of the defense business, is considering a proposal to begin manufacturing a chemical ingredient for nerve gas, officials said Friday.

The proposal was made by a company that has been asked by the Defense Department to consider bidding on a contract to manufacture 5 million pounds or more of a chemical component of nerve gas. The deadly gas would be dropped from planes in 750-pound bombs.

The proposal was sent to selected chemical companies after the Defense Department received little response to an advertisement in December soliciting bidders for the production of another type of nerve gas.

Chinese warn Bush of obstacles

PEKING (UPI) — Vice President George Bush had a tough round of talks Friday with Chinese officials who warned him that U.S. arms sales to Taiwan posed "serious obstacles" to Sino-American relations.

Greeted by about 200 Chinese schoolchildren waving garlands and bouquets of flowers on banner-draped Tiananmen Square, Bush went to Peking's cavernous Great Hall of the People and gave Vice Premier Wan Li a letter from President Reagan for Communist Party leader Hu Yaobang.

Weather

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — John Downey, defeated in a key delegate primary earlier this week in New Britain, has apparently decided to drop his bid for the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination, it was reported Friday.

The New Haven Register said "usually reliable Democratic sources" said Downey would announce within the next few days that he was dropping his challenge to Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., for the Senate nomination.

The newspaper also quoted the unnamed sources as saying Downey would make it clear he had no plans to seek the Democratic nomination for Congress in the 3rd District unless there was "a complete change of heart."

Downey had said he was reassessing his Senate candidacy following his loss to Moffett in a primary Tuesday to select New Britain's delegates to the party's nominating convention.

The New Britain primary was viewed as important to Downey's candidacy because he spent his childhood years in New Britain and became the state's largest in the 8th Congressional District, which Moffett now represents.

Lawton will be condos

By Paul Hendrie Herald Reporter

The Lawton Gardens apartments, at 14 and 16 Lawton Road, will be converted to condominiums by a partnership including John A. DeQuattro, according to papers filed Friday with the Town Clerk.

The two brick and wood two-story buildings contain 29 units. Each unit has five and one-half rooms.

The condominiums will be called "Lawton Gardens Condominiums."

Tenants will be notified by a letter, dated Friday and included with the legal documents filed with the town.

According to tenants contacted Friday afternoon by the Manchester Herald, tenants had not been told in advance of the intended conversion.

However, the letter to the tenants said that current tenants will be given the option to buy their present units.

"Our present intent is to sell only to tenants who wish to own their own units," the letter said. "No one will be asked to leave as a result of this conversion at the present time."

Neither the letter nor the conversion documents said how much the condominiums will sell for. There were no spokesmen available for comment at DeQuattro's J.D. Real Estate Co. on Friday evening.

Landlords who wish to convert apartments to condominiums are required, by law, to file the conversion documents and wait 180 days before beginning. The letter to the tenants said current apartment residents can purchase their units during the first 90 days of the notice period.

The proposed-by-laws for the condominiums include a provision requiring each unit to be occupied by the unit owner.

Unit owners would form a condominium association, to manage common facilities.

DeQuattro, one of the area's biggest landlords, has been especially active in recent years in converting apartments to condominiums.

Firemen test air packs in special smoke drill

By Raymond T. DeMeo Herald Reporter

They crawl hands and knees through a mist of coal-black smoke. You can't see, so you feel your way along the walls, hoping you won't slip in the wrong place. The sticky blackness swallows you up. You see your hand for a second through a glimpse of light that comes through a keyhole. Then back into the void.

Groping your way through a smoke-filled house, in a Town of Manchester firefighters drill, gives you a taste of the firefighters' lot in life. It isn't pleasant.

Mention that to firefighters, though, and they'll chuckle at your naivete.

"You ought to see what it's like when the ceiling temperature is 1,000 degrees and you've got burning things falling on your head," says Town Fire Captain Robert Bycholski, head of the department's training division.

BYCHOLSKI supervised the smoke drill this week at an empty two-family house on Hayes Street. The house is one of a block of three owned by Manchester Memorial Hospital and scheduled to be demolished to expand the hospital's parking lot.

The house wasn't actually burning. Bycholski lit smoke bombs inside to simulate fire conditions.

The purpose of the drills was to get firefighters used to wearing scuba tank-like "air packs" while fighting indoor blazes. The air packs allow firefighters to breathe pure air through a pressure-sensitive regulator while fighting smoke fires.

Town firefighters are required to wear breathing equipment when entering smoke-contaminated buildings as a result of a department order issued on Feb. 11.

It's traditional for some of these guys to be smoke-eaters," he says. "I guess it fits in with a kind of macho image. There's been a lot of resistance (to the air packs)."

Bycholski looks at it this way: "If a firefighter goes into a fire without an air pack, he's going to be good for all of 30 seconds. He'll end up in the emergency room. As far as I'm concerned, it (the air pack) is more important than coats, helmets, boots, everything."

THE AIR PACKS are not problem-free. One disadvantage is the weight of their tanks. Most of the tanks the town fire department owns weigh 36 pounds, Bycholski says. "It's tough to go down a hallway swinging an axe and jerking a hose when you've got 36 pounds on your back," he says.

The department recently purchased several newer tanks, made of fiberglass instead of metal, that weigh only 22 pounds, he says.

Another problem is the tanks' limited air supply. Each is supposed to contain 30 minutes of air, but if a firefighter is working and breathing hard, his air might run out after as little as 15 minutes, Bycholski says.

Once three-fourths of the tank's air is used up, an alarm sounds. "As soon as the alarm goes off, the firefighter shouldn't have to worry about running out of air. It's only when something unplanned happens that problems occur."

"There are still a few bugs to be worked out," said Bycholski, obviously chagrined, after the incident.

Bycholski says the company that makes the air packs is trying to develop a tank that will keep firefighters breathing longer, but doesn't weigh so much that it's cumbersome.

Smith raises new charges of irregularities in primary

New charges of irregularities during last Tuesday's Republican primary were raised Friday by Robert J. Smith, a member of the State Election Commission. Smith challenged the party-endorsed moderator delegates.

Smith said he witnessed the moderator and election officer of the District 2 polling place fail to read out publicly the results from the back of the machine, once the machine was closed.

Smith said election laws require the moderator to look the machine promptly and read out the results. Instead, Smith charged, the officials, "went behind the machine and there was some whispering."

"This was completely improper and unprofessional," he said.

But Smith said he did not even know the name of the District 2 moderator. Republican Registrar of Voters Frederick E. Peck said the District 2 moderator was Mary Beth Comp.

Mrs. Comp could not be reached Friday evening.

Smith also said supporters of the party-endorsed slate were improperly loitering at polling places, though he said he did not personally witness that occurring.

Smith said he told Chief Moderator J. Winthrop Porter of his allegations. He said evidence of other alleged irregularities was being collected and would be passed along to Porter.

Smith said members of his slate intend to pursue their allegations of impropriety.

Peck said it is Porter's job to decide whether charges of irregularities should be filed with the State Election Commission. Porter could not be reached.

Earlier in the week there were accusations that a supporter of the endorsed slate was campaigning within 75 feet of a polling place — something that is not allowed — and that a checker improperly gave advice on how to vote to a voter.

These charges were denied. The accusers, so far, have not pursued these charges.

The Malone slate favored U.S. Senate candidate Prescott Bush and challenged the slate selected by the Republican Town Committee. The town committee slate won easily.

Forum set on rebuilding Vernon Street

A June 9 public hearing has been scheduled to consider plans to reconstruct a 620-foot stretch of Vernon Street.

Town Engineer Walter J. Senkow on Friday posted a map in the Municipal Building, detailing the work to be done.

The project has an estimated price tag of $1.7 million, Senkow said.

He said the office did the engineering work, but the state would fund the project. It would be up to the state to select a contractor to do the work, Senkow said.

"This would involve more than just repaving," Senkow said. "We're going to tear it all up and rebuild it, so people can travel the road at a moderate rate of speed."

The engineering work is an early stage in such a road project and would have to be approved before other stages of the project could begin.

Money for highway projects like this one may be harder to come by in coming years, because the federal government has been cutting back on its interstate highway trade-in program.

"That program allows states to use money allocated to cancelled interstate highway projects for other road work."

Public Works Director George A. Kandra has pointed to the stretch of Vernon Street as one of the worst roads in Manchester.

Board to null fire equipment funds request

The Board of Directors will be asked at its meeting Tuesday to authorize the Town of Manchester Fire Department to spend $21,953 in the current fiscal year for equipment.

The requests were originally in the budget proposal for next year but were dropped when General Manager Robert B. Weiss suggested buying the equipment this year to save money if funds were available.

Included in the equipment are a fire alarm truck at $14,500; hose at $1,200; a base radio at $1,399; breathing apparatus and cylinders for the apparatus at $2,250; and a hydraulic ram and hydraulic cutters (auto rescue tools) at $2,604.

The $14,500 for the alarm truck is a dealer's estimate. The fire department says the cab and body of the present truck are rusted and the vehicle uses oil excessively.

The directors will meet at 8 p.m. in the hearing room of the Municipal Building.

HARTFORD (UPI) — The state Department of Environmental Protection reported moderate air quality across Connecticut Friday and forecast good air levels for Saturday statewide.

Wonder how budget affects you?

By Alex Girelli City Editor

One day recently Alan Lamson, planning director, had the counter in his office lined from end to end with packets to send to various town departments. They are applications to the Planning and Zoning Commission for various things.

Lamson said they represent about 100 proposed units of housing. Already there are approvals on the books for 1,455 units of housing and not many of them are under construction.

"That does not count the 1,200 units which have been given preliminary approval in Buckland Commons, a vast project on which construction has been put off for awhile."

It looks as though all the developers want to be ready to go if the interest rates drop. Then they can catch the rates at their low point and plunge into construction.

If that happens, there might be a flurry of construction activity in town as developers compete to get to the hungry housing market.

Meanwhile those packets constitute a mess of paper work for departments of the town government.

Across the hall from the planning office, the Building Division is grinding out permits and has a backlog behind it.

While few permits are being sought for new residences, commercial building seems to be going fast.

Friendly Ice Cream Co. for instance, has just applied for its new restaurant on Spencer Street. J.C. Penney is in the last stages of construction on its distribution center.

Beyond that is the succession of pools, toll sheds, added rooms, and second bathrooms, perhaps evidence of a stay-at-home-and-enjoy-the-house trend?

Despite lag in construction, PZC stays deluged with applications

Manchester Community College will sponsor an open house for women returning to school on Monday from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. in the Women's Center on the Bidwell Street Campus.

The program will be jointly offered by the Office of Special Student Services and the MCC Women's Center and is free of charge.

The program is designed to assist women who wish to return to school by explaining the processes of admissions, registration, course selection and career planning.

A coffee hour will be followed by presentations by several members of the Student Services Division, who will explain the enrollment procedure. Individual counseling will follow.

OPINION

Aged court is rough on the aged

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Supreme Court has one thing in common with the Kremlin. Both are overpopulated by obsolescent curmudgeons, who are vested with an arrogance and arbitrary power. They tend to regard the untreatable of the aged and afflicted as an intolerable affront. The "nine old men" of Franklin Roosevelt's era have been replaced by Snow White and the eight coddlers. Snow White is the youngest; Sandra Day O'Connor is 52. The next in physical age, William Rehnquist, is 57; but in other ways, he is the oldest of them all. The majority are in their 70s.

000 a year. A chief justice can do the same and draw $98,800 a year. Whenever justices retire, they can count on a pension worth at least half of their salary — more than enough to put them in the upper crust of American wage earners.

90 PERHAPS it's not surprising that members of the court find it difficult to relate to the problems of aging Americans. Five decisions since 1969 concerned forced retirement because of age; the court ruled against senior citizens in four of the cases. Three of four Social Security cases decided against the elderly petitioners. In two other cases involving health issues, the old folks wound up losers. And in still three other rulings, involving pension rights, the elderly again lost every time.

William Rehnquist, 57: For 3;

MUCH HAS BEEN written about the "imperial presidency," and the fact that election as chief executive automatically guarantees that the man will live like a millionaire for the rest of their basic rights. The justices live in a privileged world of their own, isolated from the fears and hardships that beset most Americans as they grow older. Unlike the rest of us, Supreme Court justices need never worry about being thrown out of their jobs or forced to rely on their children or the welfare agencies to stay alive.

All of them can't be right

WASHINGTON — An old story has it that 10 economists in a white-walled room could not reach a consensus as to the color of the walls. One might be persuaded of the truth of that story by the contradictory economic prognostications circulating here as the Congress and the Reagan administration battle over the fiscal 1983 budget.

Conservative economists — the so-called "supply-siders" — fear that the administration is wavering in its support of their theories. So they have offered a barrage of new reports designed to prove the correctness of their prescription of economic recovery through massive tax cuts.

IN CONTRAST, moderate economists who are classified these days as "traditionalists" and who include many in the Treasury Department and the Office of Management and Budget — are saying that the nation's chief economic problem is continued high interest rates resulting from huge prospective deficits.

THE PAIR — Charles Schultz, former chairman of the Council on Economic Advisers, and Barry Borowitz, former director of the Office of Management and Budget — say that the only solution lies in substantial tax increases and spending reductions, including big cuts in the proposed deficit budget.

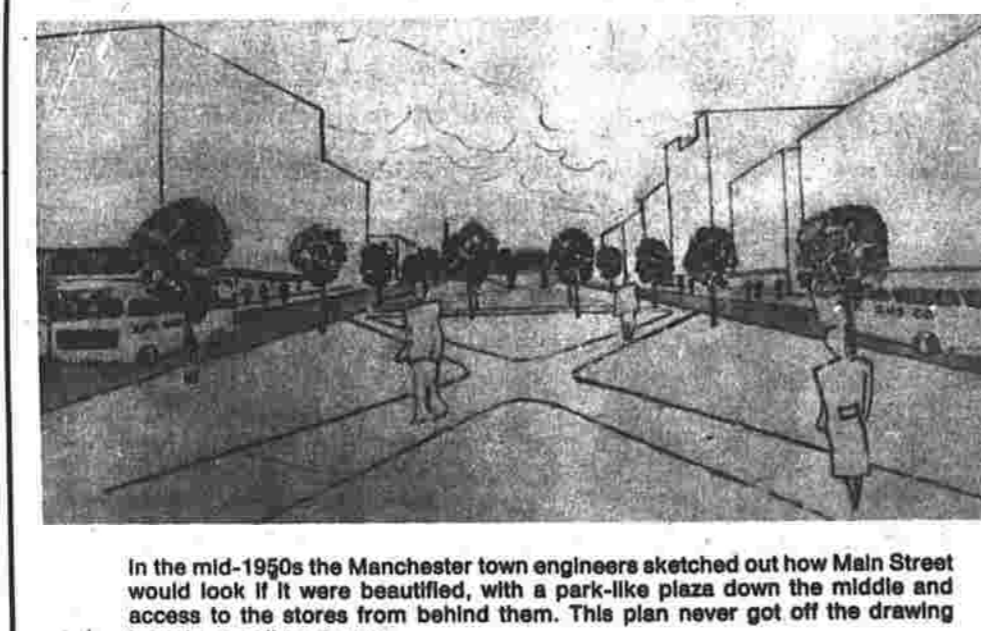

As a result of a natural process that allowed us to simply pluck a needed or desired item from an abundantly generous tree. Each of these offending objects could have, I contend, been useful, efficient, and pleasant to use. Each, in brief, could have been an asset rather than an irritant — or a disaster — depending on the circumstances — in daily life.

where its own craftsmen once designed and manufactured them. However, the physical plant and much of the equipment in it has deteriorated. The president of the firm's parent company said it was out-dated and poorly used and because of that it made more sense to move the whole shebang south, purely as an efficiency move.

Well, that's progress, we suppose, and progress is a twin to time in that both connote forward movement. But it is also something that is seldom accomplished without pain. Like the passage of the years, it leaves scars, and ages those who feel its effects.

In the mid-1950s the Manchester town engineers sketched out how Main Street would look if it were beautified, with a park-like plaza down the middle and access to the stores from behind them. This plan never got off the drawing boards, needless to say.

Praised to be usefulness

The following was written by Lee Hall, the president of the Rhode Island School of Design.

As and so it will cause no comfort at all to the Seth Thomas workers, who will be long and idle, that, as a business decision, the closing of their plant makes sense — to the proprietors, anyway. They are not likely to be pleased at the price which they will pay for progress.

100 pints is their goal

On May 25 if Manchester residents hear the bell ring at North United Methodist Church on Parker Street, they will know that the Red Cross Bloodmobile collected 100 or more pints of blood that day, at the church.

THE BLOODMOBILE is their goal because to collect 100 pints of blood at any of the regular bloodmobile visits. Orrin West of the church, said, when not if, the 100 pint mark is reached, he will ring the church bell. In days gone by the church bells rang to announce any happy event, he said.

Most liberal economists said that the president's estimate was much too low in light of last year's corporate tax cuts and some of his own economic assumptions. They predicted a deficit of about $120 billion.

Green maintains innocence, placed on rehab program

The executive director of the state Human Rights and Opportunities Commission maintained his innocence of shoplifting charges Friday, even as a Manchester Superior Court judge placed him on an accelerated rehabilitation program. Arthur L. Green, of 121 Lenox St., was accused of taking two cans of deodorant without paying on April 9 from the Stop and Shop supermarket at 283 W. Middle Turnpike. He admitted in court Friday that he left the store without paying for the deodorant, but he said it was a mistake. Green's attorney, Phillip Steele of Hartford, said his client did not realize that the cashier failed to charge him for the deodorant. "Mr. Green will not give up the presumption of his innocence," said Steele. "He has chosen, therefore, to seek an accelerated rehabilitation dismissal of his case as a practical compromise."

Under accelerated rehabilitation, Green will have to appear in court again on Sept. 7, to have his case formally dismissed, Steele said. He said the program makes no other demands on Green. Steele said accelerated rehabilitation is unique in the legal system, because it does not require a plea of guilt or innocence. Steele said Green "would like to have had his day in court," but agreed to accept the accelerated rehabilitation to avoid further damaging publicity. Green has said he has received three notices since the shoplifting charges were raised. The Rev. Christopher Rose, chairman of the State Human Rights and Opportunities Commission, appeared on Green's behalf Friday. Rose said the commission fully supports Green and is confident his effectiveness with the commission will not be damaged. Green's admission that he did not pay for the deodorant, said Assistant State Attorney General Cornelius Shea, who had said earlier the public has a right to know whether Green took the deodorant.

Zinsser unofficially kicks off campaign

By Paul Hendrie
Herald Reporter

First term state Sen. Carl A. Zinsser, R-Manchester, stopped just short of announcing his candidacy for re-election Friday night, but he left no doubt about his plans. "I'm leaning heavily toward running," Zinsser told supporters at a fundraiser at the Country Club. "I'm quite honestly hoping to do it, because I enjoy it a lot." Zinsser unofficially kicked off his campaign by calling in a big gun as the featured speaker, Senate Minority Leader George "Doc" Gunther. Everybody agrees that Zinsser will face tough competition in his re-election bid. His likely opponent is Manchester's Democratic Mayor Stephen T. Penny. Ironically, Zinsser claimed he has made it possible for Penny to run. "Ted Cummings (Democratic Town Chairman) owes me a vote of confidence, because if it wasn't for the reapportionment bill that went through the Senate, he couldn't run the candidate he wants to run against me."

referred to former Secretary of Transportation Neil Goldschmidt's letter that says Connecticut cannot go forward with construction of the highway unless Rhode Island approves I-84. Or, states the letter, until Congress approves it. "And don't think some of our people aren't going to get working on our congressmen," Mrs. Walton said. "I doubt very much they (state DOT officials) would get specific congressional approval without any justification for the highway," said National Wildlife Federation attorney David G. Burwell Fritav from Washington. Burwell said the Interstate system, according to the way the laws are written, makes it necessary for each segment of the highway to link two urban areas. He said killing it does not qualify as an urban area. "It's illegal to stop at a Killigly," he said. "If (the highway) was to come out at a principal urban area."

Millstone said his group will consider further litigation.

Panel told cost of education shifted to local communities

HARTFORD (UPI) — Connecticut is a frugal state but it has transferred to local communities the heavy burden of education costs, an University of Connecticut economics professor said Friday.

UConn professor William A. McEachern made the assessment before a special tax reform study panel appointed by the governor. The panel also was given figures that showed a drastic reduction in state employee salaries. Wages for state employees, excluding teachers, ranked Connecticut among the top 10 states in 1970 but had fallen to the bottom 10 just a decade later.

The information was among a batch of statistics examined in the first working meeting of the bipartisan Commission on State Revenue and Fiscal Policy. The panel, which is being chaired by Senate Majority Leader Richard Schneider, D-Essex, will deliver its findings to the Legislature next January. The panel of business, labor and social leaders and legislators will examine the spending and tax collecting operations of the state.

"Connecticut is really a frugal state compared to other states over the decade and I don't see us as going to hell in a handbasket," said McEachern, who is heading up research for the panel. The first chore of the panel will be to examine current state spending and see "just how efficient the state is spending the money it does collect," McEachern said. "We must give the spending side

In Brussels, Belgium, sources at a NATO defense ministers' meeting said Britain cashed in on a U.S. pledge of military assistance by asking for the loan of a mid-air refueling tanker plane that would give its Vulcan bombers on Ascension Island the range to hit air bases on Argentina's southern coast. Neither side was very optimistic about a U.N. peace plan.

She answered his want-ad

They met on Friday, married on Monday

By Rhea Talley Stewart
Special to the Herald

They saw one another for the first time shortly after 5 p.m. on Friday. At 8:30 a.m. on Monday they were married. Hans Lerch of 85 Benton St. and Dora Sandor of Budapest, Hungary may hold the record for whirlwind courtship in Manchester, if not in the country or state. They may also hold the record for the briefest honeymoon. Just 36 hours after their April 19 wedding in the home of the officiating justice of the peace, "Bibi" Swenson, Hans drove Dora to a Greyhound bus for the first leg of her journey back to Budapest. But there she will only wind up her affairs before settling down on Benton Street as Mrs. Lerch.

THIS THUNDERBOLT of romance was so unexpected to Hans Lerch that on Easter Sunday he gave a potted lily to a local lady. Next day came the letter that changed his life... but let's start at the beginning of the story of Hans, 55, and Dora, 43. Lerch speaks with the accent of his native Germany. He is still a West German citizen, although he has lived in the United States since 1955 and has been a machine operator at Cheney Mills for 24 years.

He still likes Oktoberfests, Bavarian dances, and sauerbraten. His first wife, Joanna, who had a dressmaking business in Manchester, was German, too. She died in August, 1980, and the widower decided he wanted a second wife from the Old Country. So he ran an advertisement for female correspondence — object: matrimony — in a German magazine printed near Bonn, West Germany called Frau Action which means "Contemporary Woman."

"I only cost me 23 cents for the postage," he recalls, marveling at his good luck. Cupid was Dora Sandor's uncle in Cleveland, although uncle did not intend things to turn out as they have. When he sent Dora a round-trip ticket to visit him, he had an altogether different prospective in his good luck.

"Some ladies are too small. Some are too big. This one was married to a doctor. This one, I think, is a Communist because she sent me one letter from Moscow..."

MR. AND MRS. LERCH TOAST FUTURE she's going to move here

Lovers often say vaguely and extravagantly, "She is a girl in a million," but Lerch can say literally of his Dora that she is a woman in 320. That is the number of responses that his ad brought. About 80 of the ladies sent photographs. The bridegroom spread out the photos of the 319 losers on a table. They are very of attractive women. Some are downright beautiful. One 25-year-old had posed in leather pants besides her motorcycle. Another young beauty posed with two small children.

husband for her. This was an engineer five years younger than herself. She looked him over and decided she wanted to see in person, her pen pal from Manchester, Conn. SO ON EASTER MONDAY and letter arrived from Cleveland, and after a phone call from Hans Lerch, another letter announced that Dora Sandor would be arriving at Bradley Field, on April 16. When Mr. Lerch picked her up that Friday, he had his first glimpse of her. Although she had described her appearance, she had never sent a photograph. A blonde with a chic hair style, she called him at work to say, "Ja." Quitting time was 4 p.m. Shortly afterward they were at Town Hall. Ms. Sandor had the idea that a certificate of intent to marry would get her back into the United States, but Town Clerk Edward Tomkiel explained that Connecticut does not issue such documents. But the wife of a permanent resident, the couple figured, would have no trouble entering. Judge William E. Fitzgerald granted a waiver of the four-day waiting period. Bibi Swenson was called, and at 8:30 p.m. the newlywed Mr. and Mrs. Lerch were slipping champagne in the Swenson recreation room.

Those Totalphones are totally obnoxious

I wish there were such a person as Ma Bell. I'd let her call me up sometime, then I'd put her on hold while my Total-phone let me take another call. It would be sweet revenge for all the times people call me up, interrupt what I'm doing, and then say, "Oh, would you mind waiting, another call has come in." I do mind waiting. Ma Bell, I mind waiting so much that next person who tries Totalphone me may end up getting totaled. At the very least I plan to hang up. Ma Bell, didn't your mother ever teach you any manners? Don't you know it's impolite to leave someone waiting like that? Especially when they didn't make the phone call in the first place, but you did?

background noises people apologize about when they call. Frankly, I'd take two kids having a knock-down, drag-out, fight-to-the-death over those little blips that bring conversation to a stop. Ma Bell, if there's one mother I'm not sending a Mother's Day card to, it's you. First you encouraged us to start using those stupid answering machines. I've finally gotten to the point where I don't turn eight shades of red talking into the phone which says things like "I'm sorry I can't come to the phone now..." And then you total me with built-in impoliteness. Tell me whose life could be so important that they can't take a busy signal for what a busy signal means and call back later? It's simply not polite to interrupt. To butt in. And Totalphone lets people do that. Ma Bell, when your kids were little and you were trying to carry on a conversation, didn't they sometimes pull at you? And you'd say, like all others say, "Now, don't interrupt now. Mother is talking." So why'd you go and let a phone gizmo do that? You're making us a nation of buttiniks. Some Totalphone totals are worse than others. Ever been on a long distance phone call, say, with the Ma Bell of Russia, and your extremely important as I am. Frankly, Ma Bell, I'd rather spend my hard-earned rubles on other objects which tell the world how important I am. Objects which do not make me stop what I'm doing and what I'm thinking so I can explain to another person that I can't talk to them now because I have another person calling me. Which allows me to say to yet another person that I can't talk to them either, because this person called me first. Ma Bell, that's probably another lesson your mother never taught you. In this life it's first come, first served. Not first come, first totalled.

Days of natural milk are gone forever

You never know who's watching when you write a column. Several weeks ago I wrote that one reason people aren't drinking as much milk as they used to is because milk isn't as good as it once was. It occurs to me to come back to this subject because last week at the Knoxville World's Fair there was an exhibit by someone called Dairymen Inc. They were showing how they're producing milk processed at such a high temperature that it can be stored for long periods anywhere, without refrigeration. If the world of the future is going to serve me milk that can be kept for a long time out of the icebox, I won't have a glass, thank you. Is this really what the world is waiting for? I personally like ice cream that melts and milk that turns sour after a reasonable period of time.

THE WORDS "NATURAL" and "organic" have been overused in advertising. That's because advertisers recognize that almost anything that comes to us direct from nature is better than something we've concocted with the help of manmade chemicals. They know we know it, too, so they pretend their product is "natural."

Well, those days are gone forever. The average quart of milk today is about as natural as Gatorade or a thick shake at McDonald's. Almost all the good, natural foods that we've ruined, have been ruined because some giant corporation in the food business wanted a product that was easier to handle and had a longer shelf life in the stores. THERE ARE SURPRISINGLY good commercial ice creams on the market. The bad ones have too much air and too many stabilizers in them. These ingredients, along with preservatives allow ice cream to be mistreated by truckers and kept longer by store managers. If the ice cream is good, they have to treat it carefully and sell it quickly. They don't like that. Tomatoes were ruined by the companies that didn't care much what a tomato tastes like as long as it could be picked by a machine or packed and shipped in a crate without being crushed. Bread isn't any good in this country because the big bakers undercook it to keep the moisture content high. Water is heavy and by law a

Couples like checking food prices together

By Martin Sloane
Can husband and wife really find happiness together in the supermarket aisles? Some readers say, "No!" But others have written glowing letters of opportunity to help me plan our meals and he believes that food shopping makes him a better consumer.

Advice

Mom, daughter quit together

DEAR ABBY: One week ago today I GAVE UP CIGARETTES FOR GOOD. It's got to be the hardest thing I have ever done, but I've got it lived this time.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Why? Because my mother and I quit together. This is my chance to do something very important for someone I love very much, and I know if I stick to it, so will she.

DEAR DR. BLAKER: I live in New Jersey and want to join a group where families of prisoners get together and help each other with their problems. My husband has been in jail for three years and I am looking for a self-help group.

Thank you for an appropriate letter for Mother's Day. I agree that giving up a child for its own good is the ultimate in selfishness. God bless those mothers who die in order to buy a gift.

DEAR CHILD: A red carnation is worn to signify that one's mother is living. A white carnation signifies that one's mother is deceased. There should also be an identifying flower worn by those mothers who chose motherhood by raising a foster child, adopting a child or raising a stepchild. And a special place in heaven waits those mothers who chose an "imperfect" child, knowing that physically or mentally handicapped children have not only special needs, but also require a super-abundance of love, understanding and patience.

Treatment must continue

Your Health

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB: Would you please give me some information about pernicious anemia. I am 77 years old and have to go to the hospital for blood transfusions. The doctor says I am not able to manufacture my own blood. I also get vitamin B-12 shots and take folic acid.

DEAR READER: Tonsils are just large lymph glands. They are there to help act as a barrier to infections that are carried in the air. Sometimes they do become the seat of a chronic infection and are better removed but it is very rare that taking out tonsils eliminates throat infections. You may have a lowered body resistance that is unrelated to tonsils. It is unrelated to tonsils. It is unrelated to tonsils. It is unrelated to tonsils.
