Britain sends more troops

By United Press International
Britain sent 3,000 more troops to the South Atlantic today aboard the luxury liner QE2 and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Cabinet met to decide how much longer to give U.N. peace talks before ordering a full-scale assault to retake the Falkland Islands from Argentina.
Parliament announced it would hold a full debate on the crisis Thursday. The emergency meeting, called by the opposition Labor Party, will be the fifth full House of Commons debate since the Falklands crisis erupted April 2.
In the South Atlantic, bad weather prevented the task force from engaging in any military action, the Ministry of Defense said.
On Tuesday Britain said a frigate fired on an Argentine vessel believed to be a tanker in the channel between the two main Falkland Islands.
But an Argentine military spokesman today denied any vessel was sunk.
"We did not have any ship in the channel," the spokesman said. "We have no information they hit anything. Britain does not have control of the channel."
Mrs. Thatcher and her war Cabinet — Defense Secretary John Nott, Foreign Secretary Francis Pym and Home Secretary William Whitelaw — met at Number 10 Downing Street to discuss strategy, which could include allowing the U.N. talks to go on for another three days. Today marked the fifth day of U.N. peace efforts.
Following the two-hour meeting, Pym said: "There were some developments overnight which hold out some promise of progress."
"We are continuing to work with all intensity at the U.N.," but he warned that "many difficult problems still remain." He said British hopes have been raised "several times before only to be dashed."
U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar reported Tuesday "some progress" in his continuing negotiations with Britain and Argentina but admitted a diplomatic solution remained remote.
British Defense Ministry spokesman Ian McDonald said there was no military action in the Falklands defense zone, due largely to bad weather.
In the past 24 hours, the task force has not reported any further engagement. Ships of the task force have continued to enforce the total exclusion zone, patrolling the waters around and between the islands.
He said anti-submarine patrols are being maintained despite bad weather — high winds and thick fog — including patrols by Nimrod surveillance aircraft.
As legendary Gurkha warriors and other elite British regiments prepared to board the luxury liner

QE2 in Southampton, England, British warships 6,000 miles away Tuesday sank a suspected Argentine tanker ship during a third consecutive day of bombardments.
Reporters with the fleet said British destroyers and frigates were sweeping bays, harbors and inland channels in a massive sea dragnet to cut supplies to the 2,000-man Argentine occupation force on the disputed islands.
In London, sources said the British fleet also had orders to find and destroy two German-built Argentine submarines believed lurking in deep-water inlets. The submarines pose a major threat to the two aircraft carriers heading Britain's 60-ship naval task force to the islands.
U.N. peace talks entered their fifth day today with Britain pressing Argentina to drop its demand for ultimate recognition of its sovereignty over the islands.
Argentina has insisted negotiations on the Falklands must lead to Argentine sovereignty over the 149-year-old British colony it invaded April 2.
Informed sources in London said the government of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher had decided to give the talks four more days but warned it still was not ruling out military force to retake the islands.
"These negotiations will take a little time. But the fact we are

Directors surprised and angered

Blacks still feel left out of hiring plan

By Paul Hendrie
Herald Reporter

Two members of the town's black community surprised the Board of Directors Tuesday night by saying they remain dissatisfied with the just-drafted minority hiring plan, because they feel excluded from the process.
That angered Democratic Director Stephen T. Cassano and his Personnel Subcommittee. Cassano said he thought the group had an affirmative action plan acceptable to all.

The plan was made final Monday, at a joint meeting of the Personnel Subcommittee and a Human Relations Commission subcommittee.
Frank J. Smith, of 93 Ferguson Road, said a network of the town's black citizens has been one of the most successful sources of minority applicants for town positions in the past. But he said the affirmative action plan fails to include this network.
"If you can do it without us, fine," said Smith. "If you want us, you're going to have to ask us again. We want to work with you, but we have not been included in the process. We expect you to deliver in the required time."
"I would only ask that members of the board take this whole issue somewhat more seriously than some of you have in the past," added Rubin Fisher, a member of the Human Relations Commission.
"Until about 9:15 this evening, I thought we were in total harmony," said Cassano. He questioned the plan of continuing to work with the Human Relations Commission subcommittee on affirmative action. "I am extremely disappointed at some of the comments."

"I am really at a loss to find out what he (Smith) is talking about. The idea that we would have marches really doesn't provide a good working relationship," added Cassano, referring to earlier threats by Smith that failure to satisfy the black community would result in large civil rights protests in town.

Smith's comments also produced a backlash from Vincent T. Kelly, of 34 South Adams St. Kelly, who is white, was identified during last year's Community Development Block Grant trial as someone who made public statements that could be considered racially offensive during that controversy.
Even the town's defense attorneys had a point not to defend statements by Kelly or another white resident, John A. Tucci, during the trial.

"To me, I can't go along with all this," Kelly said Tuesday. "I can't go along with these people always threatening me. Are we going to hire, or are we going to allow some outside people to come in and pressure us? We've got qualifications and if they've got qualifications, we're going to hire them."
Cassano defended the plan, which applies to all professional, clerical, service and maintenance, police and fire openings.
The recruitment process would include minority news media and referral agencies, the Human Relations Commission and Intercultural Council and minority colleges and professional programs. Five families — instead of the current three — would be considered equally, making it that much more likely that minority candidates would be considered.

Little Phone Book is big pain for merchants

By Raymond T. DeMeo
Herald Reporter

Steve Laramie rues the day he gave $337 to a salesman from an organization called the Local Yellow Pages last November.
Laramie, manager of Tommy's Pizzeria at 200 E. Center St., thought the money would buy him a half-page advertisement in a local business directory that would be printed and distributed to Manchester residents on or about Feb. 1. That's what the salesman told him, he says.
So far, the only thing it has bought him is a hard time.
Laramie says the salesman, who identified himself as Peter Merson, offered him what seemed like an enticing deal on an advertisement Merson said would be published in a pamphlet called the Little Phone Book of Manchester.
He says Merson offered him 50 percent off the list price of $984 if he paid in advance and an additional 30 percent off if he paid cash.
Laramie says he's never seen or heard from Merson since the day he placed the order.
The promised director has never appeared. Persons claiming to be Laramie's representative, say it will be published, but have different ideas about when (see related story below).
Laramie's receipt doesn't say he's entitled to a refund if the company misses its planned publication date. So it looks like he's stuck.
"I'm getting raked good," he says bitterly.
LARAMIE IS not the first merchant to run into problems with the Local Yellow Pages, a Latham, N.Y.-based company with a local office in East Hartford. (The company is not affiliated with the Bell System Yellow Pages.)
The company's sales representatives came to town a year and a half ago, soliciting advertisements for a directory, eventually published last year, called the Little Yellow

Phone Book of Manchester.
Despite the name, the directory wasn't really local. It included listings of businesses from all over Greater Hartford.
This irked some advertisers, including Collins Johnston, general manager of Dillon Ford at 219 Main St. Johnston advertised last year, but says he would never buy space in the directory again.
Antonio's Pizzeria and Family Restaurant at 956 Main St. also purchased an advertisement in last year's Little Phone Book of Manchester. But a spokesman for the restaurant says he never received a copy of the book. "I never even knew it came out," he says.
Nancy Nasiff, of Salem Nasiff's Studio and Camera Shop at 639 Main St., says a Local Yellow Pages sales representative who solicited her business for the last directory "never really made it clear that he wasn't from the telephone company."
The Nasiff's didn't purchase an advertisement in the directory.
Anne Flint, president of the white resident, John A. Tucci, during the trial.

"To me, I can't go along with all this," Kelly said Tuesday. "I can't go along with these people always threatening me. Are we going to hire, or are we going to allow some outside people to come in and pressure us? We've got qualifications and if they've got qualifications, we're going to hire them."
Cassano defended the plan, which applies to all professional, clerical, service and maintenance, police and fire openings.
The recruitment process would include minority news media and referral agencies, the Human Relations Commission and Intercultural Council and minority colleges and professional programs. Five families — instead of the current three — would be considered equally, making it that much more likely that minority candidates would be considered.

STEVE LARAMIE PAID $337 but he's never seen his advertisement

Weiss asked Smith to give him recommendations on a further mechanism to involve the black community. Smith said he would produce those recommendations today.
Once this hiring plan is adopted, a "phrase three" affirmative action plan will be prepared. That would include a comprehensive review of all personnel rules, Cassano said.

Solidarity leaders begin hunger strike

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — The official Polish media today said authorities will strike further action against diplomats who meet with unofficial sources. Earlier, the government ordered the expulsion of two U.S. diplomats.

In a separate development, Solidarity leaders interned at Warsaw's Białołęka prison said they will begin a hunger strike Thursday aimed at the lifting of martial law and the beginning of dialogue between the authorities and the people.

At the same time, the official Communist newspaper Trybuna Ludu said the authorities want dialogue but not "with the enemies and opponents of socialism."

ACLU blasted on Klan case

ATLANTA (UPI) — Civil rights leaders blasted the American Civil Liberties Union for representing the Ku Klux Klan in a federal lawsuit today beginning trial, calling the KKK a "group of vigilante murderers" with no constitutional rights.

The ACLU said it reluctantly agreed to represent the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan in a suit against the west Georgia town of LaGrange, where the Klan has twice been refused a permit to hold a march and rally Saturday.

U.S. District Judge Ernest Tidwell scheduled hearing in the case today.

"The issue to us is not the point of view held by the speaker or group that wants to hold a demonstration, but whether or not in our country, the city or state can decide and choose who can or cannot hold a protest or march along the sidewalks," said Gene Guerrero, executive director of the state ACLU.

"I think the ACLU is looking at it from a constitutional standpoint, but I'm looking at it from a moral standpoint," said state Rep. Tyrone Brooks, D-Atlanta, who called the Klan "a group of vigilante murderers."

Lawyer: money was for church

NEW YORK (UPI) — Money in a bank account in the name of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon did not belong to him but to the evangelist's church, a court judge ruled today at the church leader's tax evasion trial.

The money in Moon's bank account represented contributions from the Japanese and European Unification Churches to the American branch and was brought to the United States for church purposes, defense attorney Andrew Lawler said Tuesday.

Judge Gerard Goettel of U.S. District Court in Manhattan was to instruct the jury today on the charges against Moon.

The panel of 10 men and two women was expected to begin deliberations later in the day.

Moon, 52, who lives on a $625,000 estate in suburban Westchester County, is accused of failing to report on his income tax returns from 1973 through 1975 the $150,000 in personal income he is said to have obtained as interest on a $1.6 billion bank account in his name.

N-plant shutdown to cost $1.6 billion

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — The proposed shutdown of the Maine Yankee nuclear power plant will cost electric users in the state at least $1.6 billion over 10 years in higher rates, a report says.

A referendum question on the November ballot would close the plant in 1987. Voters defeated a similar question in 1980 by a 3-2 margin.

"The choice is going to be either keep Maine Yankee or pay the price," said Gordon Weil, director of the state Office of Energy Resources, which conducted the cost study released Tuesday.

"Before this study, many people implied that someone you could shutdown Maine Yankee and given enough time could replace it with other sources of electricity just as cheaply. This report shows that just isn't so," Weil said.

The report said given projected energy demands and prices for replacement power in the future, electric prices will climb approximately 21 percent with the phase-out and shutdown of Maine Yankee.

Miners' bodies pulled from cave-in

SUPERIOR, Ariz. (UPI) — Searchers battling the same unstable "muck" and sand that caved in the roof of their coworkers, pulled out the bodies of two miners who had tried to rescue the third from a collapsed, 3,600-foot copper shaft.

The two, pulled from the mine Tuesday afternoon, were identified as foreman Joe Cassaro, 47, of Mesa, Ariz., and Joe Granillo, 25, of Queen Creek, Ariz. The two men were trapped when sandfall from the roof fell in on the No. 9 shaft of Magma Copper Co.'s mine Monday night.

They had gone into the shaft to help George Michael Martinez, 39, of Superior, who was buried by a sudden shift of sand from the roof of the mine tunnel. Other workers brought Martinez's body out of the mine Monday night.

Frank Harris, a Magma spokesman, said efforts to recover the two other bodies were hampered by unstable ground conditions.

Iran, Iraq battle in air

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Iran and Iraq today reported aerial dogfights over the disputed southern frontier where Iran reported its troops were within three miles of the last major Iranian city remaining in Iraq.

An Iranian military communique, reported by government-run Tehran radio, said three Iraqi planes were shot down in the dogfight. Iraq said one Iranian plane was shot down.

Iranian and Iraqi military communique made no mention of ground fighting, but a ranking Iraqi officer dismissed as futile a 13-day Iranian offensive to recapture Kharamashah, the largest port town in Iran's oil province of Khuzestan. It is the last major city occupied by Iraq.

The Iranian offensive has pushed back Iraqis from the strategic Karun river and closer to their post-war frontier. Iraq has pulled back some of its troops from the region, but said the move was strategic.

Kate loves Robert

Kate Mulgrew, who played Mrs. Columbo in TV's "Kate Loves a Mystery," is about to become Mrs. Robert Egan.

The actress, who also appeared as Kate Ryan in the soap opera "Ryan's Hope," announced she will marry Egan, associate director of Seattle Repertory Theater, this summer or fall in her home town of Dubuque, Iowa.

They met last fall when she appeared in the Rep's production of Lillian Hellman's "Another Part of the Forest." She is now performing with the company in the title role of Shaw's "Major Barbara." After the final performance Sunday, she plans to close up her New York apartment and move to Seattle.

Egan also teaches at the University of Washington and at Stanford.

It will be the first marriage for both.

Graceland revisited

When tourists get to tour parts of Graceland — Elvis Presley's Memphis mansion — for the first time starting in June, things won't be exactly as he left them.

Priscilla Presley, who was divorced from the rock star in 1973, is supervising the redecoration of Graceland for the tourist trade.

A major change — according to Newsweek magazine, the all-red rooms designed by Linda Thompson, Presley's live-in girlfriend, will be repainted white and blue. That's how they looked when Priscilla was mistress of Graceland.

"We are preserving it the way Elvis loved it," Priscilla said.

G&S for PBS

PBS has a little list — of 12 Gilbert and Sullivan light operas that should make the 1984 television season a delight.

There will be Vincent Price and Keith Michel in "The Gondoliers," Joel Grey in "Yeoman of the Guard," Clive Revill in "The Sorcerer" and Tony Randall in "Trial by Jury."

Also on the cast list are William Conrad, Peter Allen, Peter Marshall and Willard Bramble in works such as "Pirates of Penzance," "The Mikado," "H.M.S. Pinafore," "Iolanthe," "Gon-

PRISCILLA PRESLEY... redecorating Graceland

Quote of the day

Luciano Pavarotti is no Johnny one-note and nothing in his life except music, but it is always on his mind.

The tenor enjoys tennis and horseback riding, for instance, but "the brain is always in the music."

Pavarotti told Dave Marsh on WCBS-TV's News At Five: "... if you ask me when I have free time for myself, I'm telling you I'm going to have free time for myself the day I don't sing anymore."

Rita's check?

Ann Lukacs and her husband bought 200 books for $2 in 1964. Mrs. Lukacs was moving some of them to make way for the painters at her Valhalla, N.Y., home last week when a check for $25,000 made out to Marguerite Haymes fluttered to the floor. That was the real name of Rita Hayworth when she married Dick Haymes in 1953.

Mrs. Lukacs said when she bought the books she was told they came from a Greenwich, Conn., home where Haymes and Miss Hayward had lived. One problem — the check is dated 1950, three years before Miss Hayworth became Mrs. Haymes.

The actress, 63, was institutionalized last year for premature senility.

Glimpses

Renee Taylor and Joseph Bologna will write the screenplay for the new movie, as entitled, to be directed by and starring Burt Reynolds... Sylvester Stallone will attend a May 15 party at New York's Studio 54 celebrating the May 28 opening of his new film, "Rocky III"... Engelbert Humperdinck will appear at Carnegie Hall from June 11-13... Vittorio Gassman is in Paris to promote his autobiography, "A Great Future Behind Me"... Wonder what he says about Shelley Winter's?... Also in the book promo line, Deborah Harry will be in London May 18-24 to push her new book, "Making Tracks".

Florence Nightingale, the British nurse who founded modern nursing, was born May 12, 1820.

On this date in history:

"In 1922, the magazine 'Radio Broadcast' commented: '... the rate of increase in the number who spend at least part of an evening listening to radio is almost incomprehensible.'"

In 1937, George VI was crowned King of England, succeeding his brother Edward, who abdicated to marry American divorcee Wallis Warfield Simpson.

In 1948, Soviet authorities announced the end of a land blockade of Berlin that lasted 329 days and whose effects were neutralized by the famed "Berlin Airlift."

In 1975, the White House disclosed a Cambodian gunboat had fired upon the U.S. cargo ship "Mayaguez" in the Gulf of Siam and forced it into a Cambodian port.

A thought for the day: American clergyman Fletcher Dole said, "Good will is the mightiest practical force in the universe."

Elderly day care at Bentley seen filling need

By Paul Hendrie Herald Reporter

Mrs. Y is 90 years old and lives in Manchester. She is confused. She was in a convalescent home, but now lives with her daughter and son-in-law, who must work a split shift, because she cannot be left alone.

Her daughter and son-in-law do not want to send her back to a convalescent home, but the split schedule is disrupting their lives. They would like a place where Mrs. Y could go for the day, but there isn't one.

James Sullivan of the Jefferson House — a group affiliated with Hartford Hospital — said Mrs. Y is a real Manchester resident who could take advantage of the elderly day care center planned for the Bentley School building.

The Board of Directors Tuesday night approved the leasing of space in the soon-to-be-closed school to Jefferson House, as well as to the Sheltered Workshop, Crossroads of Manchester Inc. and the Board of Education.

Sullivan said the Bentley facility would be the first elderly day care center east of the river. He estimated that 60 to 70 elderly would be served, but since not everybody would come all the time, there would be 20 to 25 clients daily.

The goal of the center is to provide an alternative to convalescent homes for the frail elderly.

Sullivan said the center would provide rehabilitation services to elderly who could improve to the point where they no longer needed the help. He said maintenance services would be provided to other elderly people, so they would not slip further and require institutionalization.

Sullivan stressed the program would require no town funding. Clients who could pay would be asked to contribute what they could and Jefferson House — which is privately endowed — would make up the difference.

Among the services that would be offered would be specialized recreation, bathing for physically handicapped, remedial therapy, reality therapy and counseling both to the families and the clients.

There also would be nutrition services and health monitoring, supervised by a registered nurse, Sullivan added.

He said the service would be personal; there would be one staff person for every seven clients.

Sullivan and several directors toured the Bentley building prior to Tuesday night's meeting. Sullivan showed the directors the current kindergarten room in the school, which would house most of the day care center with few alterations.

He said co-occupancy of the Bentley building with the other service groups is an exciting concept because it could encourage contact between the elderly and the young which he said helps both groups.

The directors Real Estate Committee now will work out leases with each of the agencies.

Unofficial hearing planned on arms freeze resolution

By Paul Hendrie Herald Reporter

There will be a public hearing in town this month on the proposed bi-lateral nuclear arms freeze resolution, but it will not be an official Board of Directors hearing. That compromise was proposed Tuesday night by Mayor Stephen T. Penny, who told colleagues he shares concerns about nuclear proliferation, but remains uncomfortable with the idea of the Board of Directors involving itself in national issues.

Democratic Director Stephen T. Cassano, the resolution's sponsor, agreed to the unofficial hearing, but he chaired by a yet-to-be-chosen moderator. But Cassano still placed the nuclear freeze resolution on the directors' business meeting agenda for June.

question as we're ever going to deal with."

But Penny said people concerned with other issues, such as abortion, see their issues as equally important. He said it would be difficult for the board to take a stand on the nuclear issue, then ignore others.

"I have to agree," said Republican Director William J. Diana. "Where will it end? Will we have school prayer on the agenda next month?"

Penny said he will identify a moderator for a public hearing and schedule one before the June meeting. How the board will follow up the hearing will be discussed further in June.

THE NEWLY formed Manchester Nuclear Arms Freeze Coalition and the Manchester Area Conference of Churches asked the board to consider a nuclear freeze resolution.

The resolution, similar to the one approved this year by the state General Assembly and by a number of municipalities around the country, would call on the Soviet Union and the United States to freeze nuclear weapons at an equal level.

Most of the directors shared Penny's concern that action on the freeze resolution would open the door for other special interest groups seeking board action on national issues. Penny said that would clutter the board's agenda and that the directors were elected to deal with local — not national — issues.

Penny said if the public hearing produced enough interest in a freeze resolution, it might be appropriate to schedule a referendum next fall, so townsmen could directly make their feelings known.

But he said he remains opposed to the directors' speaking for the town on a national issue.

CASSANO SAID he thought it would be proper for the board to act on the freeze resolution.

"I think there is a different factor here, in that the state Legislature has adopted a resolution and has encouraged towns to do the same," said Cassano. "We can't make national policy, but we can provide a recommendation."

Cassano also noted that he and other directors represent the town on state and national issues through the Connecticut Conference of Municipalities and other organizations. So, Cassano said, there is a precedent.

"Sometimes we get so bogged down in trivia that we can't make a change," he said. "This is as serious a

Board OKs hiring pension consultant

The Board of Directors Tuesday night agreed to allow the Pension Board to spend up to $5,000 to hire a consultant for advice on whether to invest town pension funds in the Bennett housing project.

The Pension Board is being asked to use pension funds to finance the mortgage for conversion of the former school building to 45 elderly housing units.

If the project fails for any reason, the Board of Directors would guarantee the $5,000 payment.

If the project succeeds, the consultant — Community Development Corp. of West Hartford — would pay the $5,000, by absorbing the cost in the rental charges.

Meanwhile, Democratic Director Stephen T. Cassano said his Real Estate Committee will meet within the next week and should come up with some concrete cost estimates for the Bennett project.

He said a presentation then will be made to the Pension Board.

The Pension Board has retained attorney Karl Fleischmann as its consultant. Construction on the Bennett project is tentatively slated to begin in July.

Crossroads plans fund-raising walk

Crossroads will hold a walk-a-thon June 5 to raise money for United Cerebral Palsy.

Laurie Bianchi, a recreation therapist with Crossroads, said the walk-a-thon will be organized by teenagers participating in Crossroads' programs. The event will be sponsored by the Connecticut Alcohol and Drug Abuse Commission and Manchester Community College.

The walk-a-thon will cover a 6.5 mile loop, beginning at the upper parking lot of MCC, continuing along Wehrell Street to Kenney Street, Bush Hill Road, Hilltown Road and back to MCC.

Participants will be asked to get sponsors who contribute a certain amount of money per mile walked. Ms. Bianchi said the organizers hope to get prizes donated from the business community for the walkers who raise the most money.

Brochures giving details of the walk will be available around town. Ms. Bianchi said, or interested persons can contact Crossroads at 647-2322 for more information.

The walk-a-thon is one aspect of a community service program funded by a grant from the Connecticut Drug and Alcohol Abuse Commission, Ms. Bianchi said. The other programs are a wall mural which will be painted on the Mutual Heating Building next week and a leadership course at Manchester High School.

The goal of the program is to develop leadership abilities and responsibility among the youths who participate, Ms. Bianchi said. Organizing the walk-a-thon will be a practical experience for the youths who were involved in the other two projects, Ms. Bianchi said.

Main Street wins road unpopularity poll

Herald readers cite Manchester's poorest streets

By Alex Girelli
Herald City Editor

Main Street won the unpopularity contest for badly surfaced roads in Manchester in an informal poll conducted by the Manchester Herald.

It was mentioned by almost all those who phoned in suggestions for the top 10 badly surfaced roads.

Many people added North Main Street to the list. It appears likely most of those callers were referring to the stretch of Main Street north of the Center.

Main Street is a state road and the state is ready to resurface it after the town has completed its water work excavation and the contractor has made permanent patches in the street. The work should be done by mid-summer.

At this point the patching over the water line excavation is temporary. That will be pulled out and replaced with permanent patching when all the excavation is completed.

Money for that resurfacing, $200,000, was in the state budget for the current fiscal year and has been carried over to the fiscal year that begins July 1.

HERE ARE the other roads in the top ten:

- Oakland Street. That is a state road and is not scheduled for resurfacing in the spring program.

- Broad Street. That is a town road and Public Works Director George A. Kandra said one block between Woodland and Chamber Street needs work.

- East Center Street. Water work was done on this town street. Some of it has been permanently patched and work on more permanent patching is in progress.

- Adams Street. Bids for a new bridge over the Hockanum River will be invited this summer and the work will be done before fall.

- Center Street. There is more water excavation work to be done on this town street. When it is completed the contractor will replace the temporary patch with permanent patching material.

- East Middle Turnpike. Not many callers complained about this street, but Kandra puts it on the top of his list of problems. He says it needs to be reconstructed along almost its whole length. He says it has no drains, it twists and turns, its width varies, it's out of elevation, and it's heavily traveled.

- Porter at Pitkin. Kandra sees a problem at that intersection and another on Porter between Adelaide Road and Oak Grove Street. There an old excavation has settled and it will be taken care of, Kandra said.

- Woodland Street. Kandra sees a problem on Woodland between Main and Joseph streets.

- Parker Street just north of Middle Turnpike East. That one is not on Kandra's map of street problems. He said he would look it up.

TO THE public list, Kandra wants to add a few of his own. Some of them were mentioned by callers but were not among the top vote-getters.

The Kandra additions were New State Road, Tolland Turnpike, Hillstown Road, Vernon Street and Westland Street.

Vernon Street is bad from Lyall Street to the town line, in Kandra's view, and should be reconstructed. The state will hold a public hearing on June 9 on that reconstruction project. Like Adams Street, it would be done with turnback funds, money not used for highway projects and turned back to states.

Kandra made it clear he will do something about Westland Street. That needs drains because springs cover the road with water in the winter and cause an ice problem. It is hard on equipment and takes a lot of man hours to keep it safe, Kandra says.

In the past, Penny said, Connecticut had been deficient in putting leverage on Congress and on the state's congressional delegation to get available money. The officials who went to Washington Tuesday "were received very favorably" by the congressional representatives, Penny said.

"They were encouraging in that, now that we have been discovered, we should fare better," Penny said. He added that Mrs. Kennedy is working hard to obtain trade-in money for the state.

Trade-in funds are unspent Interstate highway monies that can be reallocated for other highway projects. Plans to demolish four buildings at the corner of Main and Center streets and realign the intersection in Manchester will be funded partly with trade-in funds.

Construction on the realignment of the Main and Center streets intersection should begin this summer, the state Department of Transportation has told the town.

DOT announced it is now advertising for bids for the construction.

Demolition of the four buildings on the south side of the intersection is now under way. One is already down. Officials hope demolition will be completed by the autumn.

Funding for the intersection reconstruction and the demolition of the buildings was approved in March, after a period of uncertainty about funding availability.

The project will be financed with federal Interstate trade-in funds. The trade-in program allows states to use money allocated for since-abandoned highway projects.

That trade-in money was in short supply this year in the state.

Thomas O'Marra, Manchester's zoning enforcement officer who represents the town at Capitol Region Council of Governments Transportation Committee meetings, said there may be a new method in the future for distribution of the trade-in funds.

O'Marra said state transportation officials told the CHCOG Transportation Committee Monday the federal government is considering distributing funds to the states on a formula basis, rather than on the current competitive basis.

"This should indicate that we (Connecticut) would receive a larger appropriation than in the past," O'Marra said.

But he cautioned that nothing is certain yet. He pointed out that Congress is considering an appropriation of $650 million nationally in trade-in funds, while the Reagan administration wants to make $150 million available.

"That's still quite a bit of room for compromise," he noted.

Drainage, good base key to good streets

A street is only as good as its base, says Public Works Director George A. Kandra. "If you don't have a foundation, you don't have a street."

And you can't have a good street if you don't have good drainage, Kandra says. There are miles of Manchester street with no storm sewers.

Water, coupled with an inferior base, will start potholes growing.

Storm drains and street reconstruction are both expensive undertakings, which may explain why more have not been done over the years. The town did complete a lot of storm drain work that stopped street flooding in a number of places, Kandra says a good deal more that could be done.

The pothole season is also the street-sweeping season and town crews tackle both jobs at the same time. If the streets are not swept promptly, sand builds up in the gutters and is washed into catch basins, hampering drainage.

Excavations for utilities can cause problems, especially when backfill is not compacted enough and settles into a depression.

Here Kandra sees inspection as important. "Inspection can't be taken too lightly. We have to live with the condition after the inspection."

Town looks for funding from feds

Mayor Stephen T. Penny met with members of the state's Congressional delegation in Washington, D.C., Tuesday, in a search for federal highway funds.

Penny met with officials of the Capitol Region Council of Governments, mayors George Dagen of East Hartford and Thurman Milner of Hartford, other area officials and William Lazarek, deputy commissioner of the state Department of Transportation.

They met with 1st Congressional District Representative Barbara B. Kennelly and the staff of the subcommittee on Transportation of the House Committee on Appropriations.

The purpose of the trip was to discuss Interstate trade-in program and to try to increase the amount of money Connecticut gets in the program.

Road fix-up list secret

These two pages of information on Manchester roads was originally scheduled to include a list of the roads Public Works Director George Kandra hopes to be able to resurface this summer with the about $100,000 that is available in town aid funds.

Kandra was completing last-minute revisions of the list Tuesday and he discussed it with General Manager Robert Weiss at a 3 p.m. meeting.

On Tuesday night, Mayor Stephen Penny appointed a subcommittee of the Board of Directors to monitor road repair. The subcommittee consists of Directors William Diana, James Fogarty, and Arnold Kleinschmidt.

This morning Kandra said he has been told not to make the list public. The board does not have a copy of the list.

Penny said this morning the list constitutes a report to Board of Directors and courtesy demands that the board have a copy of it before it becomes public.

The Herald's position is that the list is not a report to the directors, but an administrator's answer to a question posed by the press in behalf of the public.

Moreover, state freedom of information law says almost all documents in the possession of public officials are public information.

Good luck if you sue over pothole damage

When the king of England built roads for his subjects in the old days, those subjects traveled on the roads at their own risk. If they got hurt, it wasn't the king's fault.

Now the taxpayers build the roads and they are not quite so invulnerable as the king was, but it is still difficult to collect from them if you knock your front end out of alignment on a pothole.

The Legislature has softened somewhat the harsh law we inherited from the king's England, and the tendency seems to be to keep changing the law a bit in favor of the hapless motorist. But basically the balance is tilted toward the taxpayers.

That's the way attorney Malcolm Barlow sees it, and he is something of an expert on potholes.

Barlow made his first serious study of potholes when he was a reporter on the Herald. He wrote a story about potholes as almost every reporter does at least once in his career.

That heightened his awareness. Now Barlow is one of the attorneys for the town and one of his assignments is pothole claims. He rejects most of them. "Our position is that we are not negligent in letting the pothole develop."

BARLOW SAYS this is the worst year he has seen in a number of years. He has been the town's pothole lawyer for about three of those years.

Basically the law says it is the duty of the driver to avoid the potholes. Unless the town is negligent in not repairing the pothole in reasonable time, it is hard to win a case against it.

It is not impossible, however. Last year a judge found against Barlow in a case in which three cars hit a pothole on Porter Street near Butternut Road. All three accidents happened on the same rainy night.

Witnesses said it was impossible to see the pothole because of the play of light on the wet road surface. That case was complicated by the fact that the town had done some work on the road. The excavation had been filled, but the rain undid it.

Barlow took the stance that the town had not been negligent. The judge disagreed.

MOST OF the claims, if they get to court, go to small claims court before a judge or referee, because the claims are normally for small amounts.

This year none have gone to trial.

There are about 100 claims a year and a few are settled, but most are rejected.

RAIN, the joker in the Porter Street pothole cases, is one of the villains. Barlow said a heavy rain followed by a sharp freeze will always produce a number of claims within a short time.

The claims that grow from the water-line excavation are not handled directly by the town. They go to whatever insurance company insured the contractor who did the work.

That's the story on claims. If you have one, good luck.

How we encouraged the Argentines

Donald Graff

Syndicated Columnist

Now that the Falklands crisis has become the Falklands war, a brief review of American involvement is in order.

It did not begin with Alexander Haig's brief intense but ultimately unsuccessful effort at shuttle diplomacy. Far from it. The beginning, it might in fact be argued, predates the swearing into office not only of the secretary of state but every other member of the Reagan administration.

To pick a date, any date, let's start in November 1980, when globe-trotting banker David Rockefeller stopped off in Buenos Aires and delivered himself of some personal opinions of considerable interest to local listeners.

Among other things, he complimented the military junta on its stabilization of Argentina—in itself an interesting observation for anyone of Rockefeller's professional qualifications, considering that even the Argentine economy was picking up speed in its downhill run under the inept and corrupt direction of the generals.

MORE IMPORTANT, Rockefeller shared his thoughts on the immediate future. In a clear and negative reference to the human-rights policies of the outgoing Carter administration he assured his listeners that the incoming president would not seek to change the world to suit his own preferences but would deal with it "as it is."

Now, David Rockefeller held no official position, a fact of which his listeners were certainly well aware. But all other things considered, it is understandable that he found an attentive audience in the generals.

Any doubts that their reading of that initial message might have been too optimistic might have been removed by the official signs of a new and warmer order in U.S.-Argentine relations that rapidly followed.

Gen. Leopoldo Galtieri, now president but then still merely commander of the Argentine army, paid an official visit to Washington in August 1981.

About the same time United Nations Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, she of the distinction between authoritarian and totalitarian governments and the importance thereof to U.S. foreign policy, visited Buenos Aires on a Latin American tour.

IN FACT, traffic on the Washington-Buenos Aires route could only be described as brisk well before Haig's shuttling, with Thomas O. Enders, the very high-profile assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, among the more frequent travelers.

All this energetic coming and going appeared to be bearing fruit in Central America with reports earlier this year that Argentina was prepared to play a key role in a multinational Latin military force that would work with Washington in combating insurgenies in the region. Reports that Washington did not seriously seek to disavow.

This brings us to April 2 and the Argentine occupation of the disputed Falkland Islands, placing the United States in a diplomatically excruciating bind between its North Atlantic and hemispheric obligations.

That did not, however, deter ambassador Kirkpatrick, who would be seeking for the United States in U.N. deliberations on the Falklands crisis, from keeping an engagement as guest of honor at an Argentine embassy dinner, to the reported immense relief of the Argentines.

Now that the Haig shuttle has been grounded and Washington has made its disagreeable choice of the traditional ally over the prospective useful new friend, the Argentine generals are said to be in a state of shock. As they see it, they were led down a disastrous garden path.

They may have a case.

A Soviet woman's struggle

WASHINGTON—Most Soviets who want to leave their homeland belong to the oppressed side of communist society. But I can now report the case of a woman from the Soviet upper crust who is so desperate to emigrate that she will begin a hunger strike next week in hopes of forcing the Kremlin to let her go.

The woman's name is Tatyana Yershov. She is 29 years old and the daughter of the Red Army. Her father, Ivan Yershov, is chief of staff of the Soviet Union's civil defense program.

Tatyana is a gray-eyed, dark-haired beauty who was raised in the lap of bourgeois luxury that is available to families of the Soviet hierarchy. The general and his wife live in a large, luxurious apartment in Moscow and own two dachas, one in the Moscow suburbs and the other in the Black Sea resort area.

Yershov has a chauffeured limousine at his beck and call, and his wife also has a car available—a true mark of distinction in the communist aristocracy. In short, if ever a Soviet citizen should be content with her situation, it would be a pampered general's daughter like Tatyana Yershov.

But when she was 18, Tatyana made a serious mistake: She fell in love with Edward Lozansky, a Jewish physicist. They married and had a child.

AS THE YEARS passed, Lozansky became increasingly disillusioned with the restrictive Soviet system. Then he was fired for dissenting with Andrei Sakharov, the dissident physicist, in less than the officially required terms of hostility. He was out of work for two years.

Lozansky's influential father-in-law volunteered to help in getting an exit visa. But the general persuaded Lozansky that he must first divorce Tatyana. It was only a technicality, the general promised, a paper divorce that would be rectified when he sent his daughter and grandchild out later.

Gulled by Yershov's assurances, Lozansky left Russia and came to the United States, only to find that the general had lied to him. Yershov had no intention of letting Tatyana and the child leave the Soviet Union. He used his political clout, not to get Tatyana permission to leave Russia, but to keep her there.

That was in 1976. Since then, Tatyana has tried desperately to leave the Soviet Union and join the father of her child. She applied for an emigrant visa on her own, and was promptly kicked out of the graduate program at the Zelinski Institute of Organic Chemistry.

From Washington, where he now lives, Lozansky did what he could to get his family out. He even wrote an appeal to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, to no avail.

"Tatyana's despair is clear in a letter she managed to smuggle out of friends in this country. My associate Lucette Lagrado has seen the letter.

"On May 10 I will begin my final hunger strike, which will continue until my daughter and I receive permission to emigrate," she wrote.

Her father "refuses to sign the papers releasing me from any material obligations toward his retirement," she wrote. This is a reference to one of the official reasons Soviet authorities have given for not letting Tatyana emigrate: She must stick around to take care of her father in case his pension isn't large enough to support him in his old age.

That, of course, is a bucket of warm porridge. In the first place, the Soviet constitution obligates the state to take care of the elderly.

Prospects grim for budget plan

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Prospects for a budget compromise again were grim today following staunch bipartisan opposition to the inclusion of Social Security reductions in the fiscal 1983 spending plan.

In another setback for President Reagan Tuesday, the House Republican leadership opposed the Senate Budget Committee plan that would require $40 billion in unspecified "savings" in Social Security over the next three years.

Senate GOP leaders, as a way to persuade their members to vote against a Democratic amendment that would put the chamber on record against Social Security cuts, hammered out compromise language that will be introduced today.

The compromise would have the Senate deal a decision on Social Security cuts until Reagan's task force makes its recommendations. WASHINGTON (UPI)—Adjustments "absolutely necessary" to keep the fund solvent.

Last Thursday, the Senate Budget Committee approved the budget plan that was immediately embraced by Reagan and attacked by Democrats. This package was adopted after Reagan's plan was formally rejected by the panel.

It would raise $90 billion in taxes over three years, including the $40 billion in unspecified Social Security "savings," a three-year freeze on domestic spending programs and most increases in government benefit programs other than Social Security, a one-year freeze on federal and military pay and a minor reduction in the increased military spending.

The split within the GOP left in tatters Reagan's contention only irresponsible Democrats oppose his plan. It also left the budget process stalled in a maze of alternative plans, none of which has enough support for passage.

Amid the backdrop of tangle party lines, the House Budget Committee planned to begin work today on its Democratic alternative outlined by Chairman James Jones this week.

The White House criticized the Jones plan as "the same old Democratic plan of tax, tax, tax and spend, spend, spend."

Jones' budget projects a deficit of $10.9 billion in 1983, compared to deficits of $106 billion in the GOP alternative.

Reagan had attempted to exert political pull on the budget debate Tuesday by promoting "a shopping list" of suggestions from maverick House Democrat Phil Gramm of Texas, and appealing to leading businessmen to join his effort to "hold down government spending."

Reagan imposed quotas when world sugar prices dropped below 9 cents a pound and U.S. tariffs permissible under international agreements could no longer be raised high enough to protect the domestic sugar price set by the 1981 farm bill.

Blaze destroys cathedral, five blocks in Fall River

FALL RIVER, Mass. (UPI)—Hot solder dropped by repairmen renovating Notre Dame Cathedral may have sparked a fire which erupted Tuesday afternoon, destroying the 90-year-old church and razing or severely damaging 33 surrounding buildings, officials say.

Only one minor injury was reported in the spectacular blaze which erupted Tuesday afternoon. Elaine Fournier, 19, walked along Pleasant Street late in the afternoon with a cardboard box of dishes she had retrieved from her parents' apartment. Her father's Pleasant Street funeral home also was hit by the fire.

"A wake was in process," she said with tears streaming down her cheeks. "But my father grabbed everybody and carried the body out."

Firefighters from 34 fire departments in Massachusetts and Rhode Island saved dozens of other buildings were by wetting them down with hoses as cinders carried by brick winds landed on rooftops and ignited brushfires on lawns.

The blaze was contained by 5 p.m. Power to the area was cut off in a ten-block area to guard against another flareup and Mayor Carlton

Viveiros ordered the city housing authority to prepare emergency shelter for homeless residents.

Viveiros toured the site late Tuesday and said besides the church, officials determined that 33 other buildings — mostly triple-deckers — caught fire, leaving most totally destroyed. Seven stores were lost in the blaze.

Dozens of other buildings in the area suffered minor damage from cinders, water and smoke. Telephone lines were also toppled and burned.

"This was the most disastrous event to our community" in recent memory, Viveiros said. "It was a devastating thing, a major, major fire."

State Fire Marshal Joseph A. O'Keefe said the blaze "was a firestorm just like Lynn," which was swept by a fire last November that did $70 million damage.

Fall River Fire Chief Louis Shea estimated damage to the church at $10 million and $3 million to the surrounding buildings.

Siblings: Hinckley troubled

WASHINGTON (UPI)—John W. Hinckley Jr.'s sister, Diane, says the only time she saw him happy was when he played with her 4-year-old son, whose picture was in Hinckley's wallet the day he shot President Reagan.

Hinckley's brother, Scott, said the 26-year-old assailant lost his sense of humor by the time he was 12 and fell into deep depression in the year before the attempted assassination.

Facing their now notorious brother in court Tuesday, Scott Hinckley, 31, president of the family oil company, and Diane Hinckley Sims, 29, a mother of two painted a portrait of an isolated child who grew up in a world far different from theirs.

They said they finally decided, three weeks before Hinckley shot Reagan, their brother's depression was so deep the best place for him was a mental hospital.

Defense lawyers called Hinckley's family to testify at his trial in an effort to build their case that he was insane when he sprayed bullets at the presidential party on March 30, 1981, wounding Reagan and three others. Hinckley's father, Jack, was scheduled to testify today. After prosecutors complete cross-examination of Mrs. Sims.

Hinckley's brother and sister each testified they had no idea he was consumed with fantasies about actress Jodie Foster, that he owned guns or that he had stalked Presidents Carter and Reagan.

Mrs. Sims, a Dallas housewife, said, in high school her brother John never went to dances, never had a date and never brought friends home.

She said she didn't invite John Jr. into her circle of friends because "I was involved in things like cheerleading and choir — those things wouldn't have been of great interest to John."

Scott Hinckley, president of Vanderbilt Energy Corp. of which he is chairman, said he never inquired about his brother's depression — not even when he was in one of his father's oil and gas family Christmas gatherings three months before the shooting.

Mrs. Sims said her younger sibling was "extremely shy" and had few friends after a family move forced him to change schools in sixth grade.

Praise be for Whiton Library

Whiton Memorial Library will be celebrating its 50th anniversary Saturday.

There's going to be an open house and tours of the building. Guest authors will be at a special coffee hour from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. And at 2 p.m. a musical duo called "Peanut-butterjam" will entertain for kids and grown ups.

Go to your possibly can. Salute a fine staff and a fine library. Quietly and with little fanfare or complaining, Whiton Library has served the north end of Manchester for half a century. We owe it a great deal.

Libraries these days are often the first places to be scrutinized carefully when budget time rolls around. In recent years Whiton has faced severe cutbacks in both staff and library budgets; despite this, it has carried on in the proud way which is her tradition.

This is a friendly library. For proof, just stand at the checkout counter some time and listen to the number of patrons that librarians greet by name.

Stand at the stacks some time and watch a librarian find just the right book for an elderly patron who can't see the catalogue numbers.

Or sit at a table some time and eavesdrop on the conversation between the librarian and a sixth grader who wants to do a report on "France."

These are patient, dedicated professionals who work at Whiton; they know their job and their enthusiasm is contagious. Whiton was first dedicated in 1932.

It was named after its first director and major benefactor, Dr. Francis Whiton.

In those days architects favored ornate oak woodwork for the insides of libraries.

As you tour Whiton this Saturday you'll notice that the trend is very much in evidence. Over the years the oak has darkened and matured; it has a warmth and a familiarity about it that is very much a part of the spirit of Whiton.

And, finally, Whiton is a nice place to sit and read. And isn't that what libraries are all about? Good libraries, anyway. Happy half century, Whiton.

Big success

To the Editor:

In May of 1981, a group of dedicated volunteers began one of the largest fund raising drives ever conducted in the greater Manchester area.

The $3 million Prescription '84 Fund Drive, held to help defray some of the expenses associated with Manchester Memorial Hospital's $24.5 million expansion project, seemed like a massive undertaking at the time. But through the untiring efforts of the division chairmen and their hard-working volunteers, this goal was reached and then surpassed in less than a year.

This campaign was truly a community endeavor, as individuals from all walks of life in the greater Manchester area joined together to assure the success of this vital project.

Recognition must go to all those who served as members of the Campaign Cabinet.

They were responsible for organizing their respective divisions and for recruiting the volunteers they knew could get the job done.

Without their dedication, the building fund would not have obtained the fantastic results it has. A deep personal thank you goes to William R. Johnson, chairman of the Advance Gifts Division, whose extraordinary efforts on behalf of this campaign have produced a remarkable total of $1,415,000 from his division alone.

Chemical data to be released

HARTFORD (UPI) — Berlin residents who claim they have been sickened by odors from the StanChem plant have won a key round in their efforts to learn what chemicals are used by the company.

The state Freedom of Information Commission voted 5-0 Tuesday to require StanChem to release a list of toxic chemicals used at the Berlin plant where fire-retardant paints and fire-proofing materials are made.

However, the commission stayed the effective date of its order until at least May 28 to allow StanChem to appeal in court and there were indications the company would pursue that route.

The firm's refusal to disclose information on toxic chemicals has been the focal point of a dispute with Berlin residents since 1980 when the Connecticut Citizen Action Group filed a complaint with the commission.

The CCAAG said families were sickened by fumes and odors from the plant and argued the residents should be allowed to know what substances were used at the plant.

However, company officials argued that disclosing the information would make public their trade secrets. They also denied the pollution charges, saying the company has spent thousands of dollars to eliminate any odors.

In reaching its decision Tuesday, the Freedom of Information Commission rejected a claim on behalf of the Department of Environmental Protection that release of the material was exempted from the FOI Act.

Both the DEP and Berlin Health Director Ludmil A. Chotkowski have StanChem chemical lists and were charged in the FOI complaints with refusing to release them.

The commission also rejected claims by StanChem attorney James Wade concerning whether or not some of the complainants actually had obtained a list of the chemicals in question from Berlin town officials.

If StanChem appeals the commission's decision, a judge could stay the order that the information be released until all legal remedies were exhausted, which could take months or longer.

Sen. William Curry, D-Farmington, who filed a subsequent complaint with the commission over the StanChem situation, hailed the FOI decision as a victory for all Connecticut residents.

Court ruling upheld Ex-teacher loses fight to regain job

HARTFORD (UPI) — A former teacher in the Stamford public school system has lost a court battle to win back the job from which she was terminated nearly a decade ago.

The state Supreme Court upheld a ruling by Bridgeport Superior Court Judge Kenneth J. Zarrilli that denied Eileen Cahill's request for an injunction ordering the Stamford school board to reinstate her.

The Supreme Court's unanimous decision Tuesday also rejected an accompanying appeal by the Stamford school board that challenged a jury's award of $24,130 in damages to Ms. Cahill as a result of her dealings with the board.

Ms. Cahill, a tenured teacher who taught biology at Ripponway High School in Stamford, took a sabbatical leave with approval from school officials in 1969 to take courses in library science.

When she returned to work, she was offered positions as a librarian or science teacher at schools other than Ripponway but rejected the positions. She was terminated from the school system for unrelated reasons in August 1971.

Bolton Zoning Commission must now decide on the condominium request

Bolton condo proposal now in hands of the zoning panel

By Richard Cody
Herald Reporter

BOLTON — The town's first condominium proposal now rests in the hands of the Zoning Commission members who will decide what to do with it, save any dollars, within 60 days.

The end of the third hearing Tuesday wrapped up formal public participation in Lawrence F. Fiano's zone change request, and the 150 residents present went out as they came in a month and a half ago.

They took the proposal for a 96-unit complex at South Road and Route 44A to task for the third straight hearing, saying the Environmental Review Team's report shows the proposed development cannot be put on those 53 acres.

But while the opponents were saying the report shows it is impossible to put the development in, Fiano's son and attorney, Lawrence A., was saying the report backed every "suspicion" his people had about the land. He said that with proper engineering and careful planning, the development is an appropriate one for the site.

"We know there are problems out there, and we're going to work to solve them," the younger Fiano said.

He also indirectly criticized the opposition group, the Bolton Environmental Association, saying its members "haven't contracted our experts." He added that the petitions the group submitted, signed by about 600 residents, shouldn't be a swaying factor in the decision.

The BEA Tuesday for the first time brought in its own expert, Fred Johnson, an engineer from an apartment building in East Hartford, who testified the development does threaten the environmental security of the area, and said no decision should be made without further research.

"It appears there needs to be a little more homework done," he said.

"I think it would be wise to do that prior to a decision, he said, "to make sure the approval is not premature."

South Road attorney Jose Ramirez, who is representing about five local residents and has vowed to go to court if the zoning change request is granted, quoted several areas of the report that list problems with the site.

He said the report notes a potential danger in that the entire development is located in the watershed of the Hop River calls the area an "unfavorable site" for such a development.

Later, the younger Fiano quoted a few things from the study that supported his claims.

Ramirez said "I don't think that there is anything in here that supports a zone change... what it says is 'Let's go out and do further studies.'"

The ERT's report had been eagerly awaited in this issue, and in general, it says the 96 units are too large for the area, but with proper and costly site work and engineering, a multiple dwelling complex could be built.

The report does point out that the area has water troubles.

Several residents urged the board to turn down the request at least until the Planning Commission has completed the updating of the 1971 Town Plan of Development.

This is expected to be completed sometime next winter.

"I think the Planning Commission should be in this first and foremost," said one resident. "I think we're putting the cart before the horse."

NEW YORK (UPI) — One-third of all how-to books to reach consumers this year will be sold through home centers and other building materials outlets, says Bruce King, national account manager for a major publisher of such volumes.

A report in National Home Center News, a bi-weekly trade publication, quotes King as saying many titles will sell more than 150,000 copies each this year. "The more basic the subject matter, the better the seller," he adds.

The best seller to date is on fireplaces, one leading how-to publisher told the News.

Wood attorney to challenge legality of state death penalty

HARTFORD (UPI) — An attorney representing murder suspect Steven J. Wood says he will challenge the legality of Connecticut's death penalty in the case.

Wood, 42, is charged with fatally shooting his ex-wife, her boyfriend, her mother and her daughter in West Hartford April 17. He faces four counts of murder and one count of capital murder, lodged because the incident involved multiple killings.

Michael Sheldon, a University of Connecticut law professor, formally joined two public defenders in Wood's case Tuesday. Sheldon said he would have a "major involvement" in a battle to overturn the state's death penalty.

He declined to specify how the law would be challenged, but said the 1980 act could be overturned "for a host of reasons."

Sheldon pointed out constitutional problems in the original capital reiny act in 1979 while representing a man convicted of killing a Plainville police officer.

Trial Judge David M. Shea, now a state Supreme Court associate justice, agreed the only law improperly prohibited convicted killers from presenting evidence in their favor that might earn them a life sentence instead of the death penalty.

The death penalty law was amended by the Legislature the next year.

Bozzuto has majority?

HARTFORD (UPI) — Richard Bozzuto claims more than 56 percent of the delegates to the Republican State Convention are siding with him or leaning his way as he seeks the party's gubernatorial nomination.

To illustrate his claim to support from 528 delegates, Bozzuto brought delegate leaders from Hartford, New Haven, Waterbury, Norwalk, New Britain, and 10 other towns to the Capitol Tuesday to announce their endorsements.

The chairman of delegations to the July 23-24 state convention said they weren't speaking for all of their delegates — about 200 — but said their endorsements did mean many of their members felt the same way.

Bozzuto said the 526 delegates he was counting on were either committed to him or strongly leaning toward supporting him.

The former state Senate Republican leader also said he would be announcing other endorsements in the 75 days left before the convention.

Union spokesman William Myerson called the settlement "a tremendous victory" for the workers.

Myerson said the contract offered "tremendous" gains in wages and benefits for the private school's union workers.

He said wages for the lowest paid workers will increase 50 percent over a 2 1/2 year period, while the highest paid workers will see a 30 percent jump in their pay.

Workers OK contract with Oak Hill School

HARTFORD (UPI) — Newly organized union workers at the Oak Hill School for the blind have overwhelmingly approved a contract, averting a strike threatened for Wednesday.

The contract was the first for 260 teaching assistants, child care and kitchen and maintenance employees who joined District 1199, New England Health Care Employees Union, last November.

The settlement was reached after 23 hours of bargaining that ended Tuesday morning. It was approved on a 158-1 vote by the rank and file Tuesday night.

Five measures cleared Committee. He said he feels police should only stop cars with "probable cause."

The proposal would give state police and local communities power to authorize "intoxication control" roadblocks.

Chairman Frank Fiorenza, D-Providence, said the roadblocks might get a rough ride in his House Special Legislation of 9 p.m. and 3 a.m.

Andover board delays cuts

ANDOVER — The school board is going to wait to see what happens with the drive for another town meeting before deciding what to do with the $39,000 cut its budget received May 1.

Meanwhile, the selectmen have scheduled a special meeting to consider the about 70 signatures calling for the special meeting and a reconsideration of the cut. The meeting, First Selectman Jean S. Gasper said this morning, will be Thursday, at 7:30 p.m., at the Town Office Building.

Residents at the annual meeting cut the school budget by a 20 to 28 vote, and it didn't take some residents, mostly parents, a day to start petitioning for a special meeting to rescind the action.

Needing only 20 signatures to make the selectmen consider holding the meeting, the residents came in with more to convince the chief executive board that there was enough widespread interest, one resident said.

The selectmen do have discretion in the decision, as state statute says the drive can be denied if it is deemed illegal, improper or frivolous.

The school board Tuesday held off deciding where to take the cut from, board member Nancy Hegener said this morning, until a decision is reached about the special town meeting.

Finance Board member Susan Looze, who made the motion for the cut at the town meeting May 1, said then the thrust of her cut was to remove the part-time psychologist, the part-time reading consultant, the physical education teacher, and to cut the time of the music teacher and the art teacher.

The school board can take the cut from other places, though, and keep those positions intact.

Coventry Demos back budget, arms freeze

COVENTRY — The Democratic Town Committee Tuesday voted to endorse the 1982-83 budget and the nuclear arms freeze resolution, the items on the agenda for Friday night's annual town meeting.

Committee member Bruce Stave said the committee voted to endorse the budget as it will be presented at the town meeting. The $6.47 million budget includes $4.4 million for education and $1.74 million for general government.

Stave said the committee unanimously approved the nuclear arms freeze resolution. The resolution, proposed by the Coventry Peace Study group, calls on the United States and the Soviet Union to stop further development and deployment of nuclear weapons.

The Town Council has endorsed the resolution.

The committee also tabled a motion to support Gov. William O'Neill for re-election in November. The committee member who had put the motion on the agenda was absent Tuesday night.

At its April 27 meeting the board voted to start school Sept. 8, a week later than a committee of parents and teachers had recommended. School will then end on June 17, instead of June 3 and could get out as late as June 24 if all four snow days need to be made up.

Thursday's meeting will be held in room 18 of Coventry High School and will begin at 7:30 p.m.

The board will also consider adopting the proposed 1982-83 school year calendar.

Educators must cut $45,000 from budget

COVENTRY — The Board of Education will have the task of trimming $45,000 from its budget when it holds its regular meeting Thursday night.

The cuts will have to be made and the new budget adopted by the board in preparation for Friday night's annual town meeting.

On April 21 at a special meeting, the Town Council decreased the bottom line of the board's budget to $4.4 million as part of $213,991 in cuts to the entire 1982-83 budget.

The board will also consider adopting the proposed 1982-83 school year calendar.

How-to titles best sellers
NEW YORK (UPI) — One-third of all how-to books to reach consumers this year will be sold through home centers and other building materials outlets, says Bruce King, national account manager for a major publisher of such volumes.

A report in National Home Center News, a bi-weekly trade publication, quotes King as saying many titles will sell more than 150,000 copies each this year. "The more basic the subject matter, the better the seller," he adds.

The best seller to date is on fireplaces, one leading how-to publisher told the News.

HARTFORD (UPI) — The Southern New England Telephone Co. has filed with state regulators with a proposal that would do away with the dime phone call.

The Department of Public Utility Control has refused similar requests four times in the past, but company officials are hopeful things will be different this year.

O'Neill signs penalty bill

HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. William O'Neill signed a bill today to penalize welfare recipients who are eligible for jobs or job training under the welfare program but refuse to work.

There's already a law to deny welfare benefits to welfare candidates who don't register for jobs or refuse to accept jobs or training. But, as the rules read, they're eligible for benefits as soon as they register for aid.

The new law, which goes into effect immediately, sets penalty periods — 30 days the first time a General Assistance recipient refuses to work, 60 days for a second refusal, and 90 days for a third refusal.

Two charged in vandalism

Police say they charged two men with criminal mischief in connection with the vandalism of a towel and soap dispenser in the men's room of David's Restaurant at 336 Broad St. Tuesday.

Police charged Mark Blouin, 18, of South Windsor, and Joseph L. Pereira, 19, of Vernon, after the manager at David's notified police of the alleged vandalism at 11:06 p.m.

Blouin was also charged with possession of less than four ounces marijuana, police say. They say he was also charged with a third count of criminal mischief when, in custody, he allegedly tore his blanket into strips and tied it to the bars of his cell.

Both men appear in Manchester Superior Court on May 24.

Little Phone Book is big pain for merchants

Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce, says several merchants complained last year that Local Yellow Pages directories were circulated late, and not circulated at all to some homes in Manchester.

Similar complaints from merchants throughout the Hartford area have been received by the Better Business Bureau of Greater Hartford, says Joanne Zak, the BBB's manager of operations.

Ms. Zak says the BBB has contacted Sheldon L. Hart, president of Local Yellow Pages, advising him of the complaints. She says he has not responded to the letters.

"He (Hart) doesn't want to cooperate. We're not getting answers from the company," she says.

Sheldon Hart, formerly of West Hartford, is the past president and chairman of the National Telephone Co., which he founded in the early 1970s. The company filed for bankruptcy in 1975.

Because Hart has refused to answer complaints, Ms. Zak says, the BBB has given the Local Yellow Pages an "unsatisfactory business report."

She says the state Department of Consumer Protection has asked to see the BBB's file on the company. A DCP spokesman would neither confirm nor deny that the department is investigating the company.

Ms. Zak says the BBB is soliciting complaints from merchants who've had experiences with the Local Yellow Pages. "We don't know how many complaints are out there," she says.

Better Business Bureau in Springfield, Mass., and Providence, R.I., where the Local Yellow Pages also operates, have their own litany of complaints about the company's practices.

William C. Webb, president of the Springfield BBB, says he just wrote a letter to company president Hart, based on complaints from three merchants who, like Laramie, paid $250 for ads in a directory that has never been published.

Webb says the Springfield office of the Local Yellow Pages has been characterized by constant turnover among its managers. "You'd talk to one (manager) now and another the next time," he says.

The Providence BBB, in a report drafted last May, advises businesses that call for information on the Local Yellow Pages to obtain written confirmation of publication dates from company sales representatives.

It also recommends that businesses obtain specific details on the size of the directory's circulation and its method of distribution.

STEVE LARAMIE didn't know about Local Yellow Pages' track record when he paid his money to its salesmen last November. But he says he soon found out what kind of company he was dealing with.

Once the promised publication deadline came and went, he tried calling Merson, the salesman, Hart's company's East Hartford office. He says he called six times. Each time, he says, a voice identifying itself as an answering service offered to take a message.

After receiving no response from Merson, Laramie says he called and asked for the person in charge of the office. "Again, he says, a receptionist took his name, but his calls were never returned."

Laramie also tried calling the advertising firm he paid for last November? She said the directories will probably be published by Webprint, an Abilene, Texas, firm. The Texas firm is used, she said, because it can print 6 x 9 size directories, an "unusual size" for most printers, she said.

Harry Lichtenbaum, an estimator at Allied Printing Service of Manchester, says he is actually a "fairly standard size" that working with him is capable of working with.

THE HERALD called Hart's office two days after the conversation with his "secretary" and asked to speak to Joanne Shields, a woman who identified herself as "one of Mr. Hart's secretaries," said she'd "never heard of Joanne Shields."

The first woman called back the same day. She said she'd second woman was "new" at work. "She knows me as Bobbi," the woman said.

The Herald then called Local Yellow Pages' East Hartford office and left a message with the answering service. "Did the person who claimed to be a sales representative, 'Dick' returned the call a few hours later."

He said he didn't know why a spokesman from Local Yellow Pages headquarters had contradicted his claim of when the directories would be published.

"Two to three weeks, that's what management told us," he said.

The Eagles added two runs in the second and four more in the third. In the latter inning, Cindy Granato singled, Martha Barter reached on a fielder's choice and both rode home on a two-run triple by Grimaldi. The latter scored on an RBI single inside the third base bag by Pam Cunningham.

A walk to Freshell error on a grounder by Michelle Leavitt jammed the sacks. Consecutive singles by Granato and Liz Palmer plated the other markers for a 6-0 bulge.

South scored twice in the fifth while East plated its final tally in the bottom of that inning.

She Evans was the winning pitcher for East. She went 4 1/3 innings to up her mark to 4-1. She walked three, fanned two and allowed two hits. Mary Wrobleksi went the final 1 2/3 innings and hurled one-hit ball in relief.

School bus rolls EAST HAVEN (UPI) — A school bus carrying students to a local parochial school overturned Tuesday, injuring at least six youngsters.

Police said the bus, carrying 35 to 40 students of St. Vincent de Paul's School, overturned on Thomason Street about 8 a.m. The cause of the accident was not immediately known.

Police said six students were taken to the Hospital of St. Raphael. A spokeswoman for Yale-New Haven Hospital said officials had been told some youngsters would be taken to their emergency room.

None of the injuries was believed to be life threatening, police said.

Local Yellow Pages' main office in Latham, N.Y. Again, he says, an "answering service" offered to take a message, and have a representative contact him. He says he was never called back.

"A couple of weeks ago," Laramie says, he received a call from a person who identified himself as a company representative. The person wouldn't give his name, Laramie says.

Laramie says the alleged representative told him that salesman Merson had left the company. He says the person told him that he, the representative, also planned to quit the company that very day.

Laramie says the voice over the phone advised him to contact the Better Business Bureau and the State's Attorney's Office.

Will Steve Laramie ever see the advertisement he paid for last November? She said the directories will probably be published by Webprint, an Abilene, Texas, firm. The Texas firm is used, she said, because it can print 6 x 9 size directories, an "unusual size" for most printers, she said.

Eaglettes finish first in HCC track meeting

Securing top honors at the Hartford County Conference (HCC) Girls' Championship Meet yesterday at St. Joseph was East Catholic.

The Eagles took team honors with 123 points followed by St. Paul's 108 points. Merit placed third with 98 points followed by Northwest Catholic 90, South Catholic 22 and St. Thomas Aquinas 2.

Two, two-run frames and a four-run third-inning powered East Catholic past South Catholic, 9-2, in HCC girls' softball action yesterday at Nike Field.

The win avenged the Eagles' only loss in conference play and pegs them 4-1 in the HCC and 8-2 overall.

East resumed conference play today against Merit High at 3:15 at Nike Field.

East plated a quick two runs in the first inning to assume control. Teri Grimaldi walked and scored on a long RBI triple by freshman Sue Wallace to lead rightfielder. She scored on an RBI single by Michelle Freshell.

The Eagles added two runs in the second and four more in the third. In the latter inning, Cindy Granato singled, Martha Barter reached on a fielder's choice and both rode home on a two-run triple by Grimaldi. The latter scored on an RBI single inside the third base bag by Pam Cunningham.

South scored twice in the fifth while East plated its final tally in the bottom of that inning.

She Evans was the winning pitcher for East. She went 4 1/3 innings to up her mark to 4-1. She walked three, fanned two and allowed two hits. Mary Wrobleksi went the final 1 2/3 innings and hurled one-hit ball in relief.

School bus rolls EAST HAVEN (UPI) — A school bus carrying students to a local parochial school overturned Tuesday, injuring at least six youngsters.

Police said the bus, carrying 35 to 40 students of St. Vincent de Paul's School, overturned on Thomason Street about 8 a.m. The cause of the accident was not immediately known.

Police said six students were taken to the Hospital of St. Raphael. A spokeswoman for Yale-New Haven Hospital said officials had been told some youngsters would be taken to their emergency room.

Bourne's play leads Islanders to Stanley Cup

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — Bob Bourne is like the wristwatch that can be mistaken and still come up ticking. He might even have better timing.

"I was suffering in the season but now I feel good," Bourne said Tuesday night after leading the New York Islanders to a 6-4 victory over the Vancouver Canucks and a 2-0 lead in the Stanley Cup finals. "Confidence is the whole thing."

Bourne, mentioned as possible future trade bait early in the playoffs, continued his remarkable post-season play by setting up a short-handed goal by Billy Carroll and scoring a power-play goal himself.

His speed also helped draw two penalties, putting the Islanders, shooting to become the first American team to win three straight Cups, in command as they enter Game 3 of the best-of-seven series scheduled for Thursday night in Vancouver.

"The goal that hurt us was Bourne's," Vancouver coach Roger Nelson said, referring to the power-play goal that tied the score 3-3 just 32 seconds into the third period. "It picked them up and it certainly didn't help us."

It certainly didn't. Just 47 seconds after Bourne scored, Dwayne Sutter gave the Islanders a 4-3 lead and, even though Gerry Minee tied it 4-4 for Vancouver at 2:27, Bryan Trottler snapped the tie with a power-play goal at 7:18.

"Our power play won the game in the third period," said islander coach Al Arbour. "But it took us too long to get going."

Bourne's most spectacular play occurred in the first period while he killed a penalty. He stole the puck along the boards, launching a 2-on-1 with Carroll. He pulled the defense, then slid the puck to Carroll for an easy tap.

"Everything fell into place," said Bourne, whose 16 playoff points makes him fourth on the team. "When you do something good early, you feel good all night."

Despite Bourne's early strike, the Canucks rallied to take leads of 2-1 and 5-2. The pressure of killing penalties, however, hurt them.

"We are going to have to be smarter and not be suckered into so many stupid penalties," said Nelson. Referee Ron Wicks called 23 penalties in an attempt to minimize the holding and ill-feeling that dominated Game 1. The Islanders turned one of them into the game-winning goal.

At 4:37 of the third period, Vancouver winger Tiger Williams became involved with Islander goalie Billy Smith.

Williams received a doubleminor and Smith a single and on the ensuing power play, Trottler scored taking the puck on an unusual bounce off the boards behind the net and whipping a sharply angled 15-foot shot past Vancouver goalie Richard Brodeur.

"We planned it that way," Trottler kidded, referring to the funny bounce. He added more seriously, "We had our chances on the power and we took advantage." Williams felt less happy about the sequence.

"Smith instigated it," said Williams. "He was after my eyes when I was down. It should have at least been even."

Now, with two games in the Pacific Coliseum, the Canucks hope to make the series even.

"If we come back 2-2, the pressure is on them," said Nelson. The Islanders' Clark Gillies disagreed.

"Vancouver has the problem now," he said. "We're solving their system and, while we don't like playing it, we can play that way and beat them."

Sugar Ray should listen to advice

Never, since the very first day he leaped on a pair of boxing gloves, has Sugar Ray Leonard gotten so much advice.

Good, well-meaning advice.

At least, that's what all those giving it to him honestly believe. He's getting advice from a partially detached retina as you are. You have to be crazy to fight again.

Do you know what it means to undergo surgery for a partially detached retina as you did, Sugar Ray? Purely and simply, it means permanent blindness in the eye could result from further damage caused by blows. Ray, 24, 5'6", has the best eyesight he has ever had in his life.

They don't tell you that, do they? Samuel Garfield, a leading New York ophthalmologist who has seen detached retinas for more than 30 years. "I can assure you if that type of surgery ever was performed on me, the last thing I'd even consider would be taking another blow to the eye."

Yet, the chances are Leonard will consider it, not because of anything so silly as money, but because of something as indefinable and intangible as the electric excitement of prize fighting—the skill, the competitiveness of it, and the self-satisfaction it affords someone to be as good as he is. And how could anyone who is not, ever possibly realize the abysmal frustration that would eat at a 29-year-old Sugar Ray Leonard anytime he turned on the TV set to watch a fight or attend that Golden Gloves tournament he runs for kids?

Someone like Harold Weston would know all about that, though. Maybe Harold Weston would know it better than anyone else, even though he was never a world champion like Leonard.

Weston is the matchmaker for Madison Square Garden now, but he was a top-ranked welterweight until he underwent surgery, just as Sugar Ray did, for a detached retina three years ago after he was kayoed by Thomas Hearns.

Weston loves to fight. He didn't quit because of the operation he underwent. He quit because of money.

"They offered me $1,500 for a fight after I got out of the hospital," he says. "I thought it was a disgrace to me. I was only 28 and still ranked one or two by both the WBC and WBA, and that was all they would pay me. I told them to forget it. I wasn't going to be used the way I saw so many other fighters used before me."

Yes, Harold Weston has an opinion about whether Sugar Ray Leonard should fight again. He does not express personally and considers him a friend.

"I wish I could sit down with Ray, just him and me," he says. "I could tell him stories. I know Ray and I like to express some things to him. I'd tell him not to fight again."

"Ray is like me. He's stubborn. You have to give him a reason. But I can tell him why he should never fight again and I'll betcha after I did, he'd say, 'You know, Harold, I'm not gonna do it.'"

Harold Weston concedes now, after the eye is all healed and he feels much better, he might say he's gonna fight again just for the fact people are telling him not to do it. He's like Muhammad Ali in a sense. He wants to show he can do what everyone says he can't. But what a mistake it'll be if he does."

Harold Weston would not be probably a fighter with a detached retina without realizing he had one.

Some state athletic commissions are tougher than others in the physicals they give fighters. The California commission has the strictest. The word is, a fighter with an eye problem, don't take him to California.

In Sugar Ray Leonard's case, he shouldn't even apply for a license to fight again in any state.

What for, when he has the best license in the world to win at everyone and quit while he's way ahead.

Blue-chip runner

Weather's anxious to sign best offer

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — The calls came early and often, but for Robert Weather's was a blue-chip runner in what everyone figured would be the Year of the Running Shoe.

Weather, a second-round draft pick of the New England Patriots, has set to sign a contract with the team. But he already has rejected several offers which came his way, offers from agents before his senior year at Arizona State.

"I figure I had contact with about 25 or 30 agents," Weather said Monday at Schaefer Stadium, where he arrived for a rookie camp. "I was promised a car, and anywhere from $800 to $1,200 a month. It's really tough, especially if you've never seen that kind of money before."

"It's almost like a gift from God," he continued. "Just sign here and get it. You get offered nice salaries, money. But you know in the end you'll have to pay back, probably with interest."

Weather said he and others were warned to stay away from "certain guys, everyone knows who they are." He eventually settled on a local agent, Jim Palaflita, not because of what he said, but because of what he didn't say.

"Jim was different, he didn't tell us bad things about the other guys. He only talked about himself, and he waited until the season was over," Weather said.

"All the agents say 'I can do this for you, I can turn your year into a million or whatever.' They tell you how they can invest it for you, how they can help you with your money," he said.

Weather's stories are not unusual, he said, and he feels athletes should like himself are more susceptible to an agent's pitch.

"I think they (agents) go to black athletes because most of them don't come from wealthy families and that the money and the cars will mean a big thing to them," he said.

"The white athlete may not come from a wealthy family either, but most of them aren't in that same situation."

Weather grew up in Fort Pierce, Fla., and he made a premature visit home in the middle of his junior year at ASU. From January to May 1981 he left school to take care of his mother, who was in and out of the hospital with kidney troubles. He took a job as an assistant track coach at a local junior high school

Bird advises Celtics to forget first game

BOSTON (UPI) — Larry Bird wants to forget Game 1 and he thinks his Boston Celtics teammates would be better off to do the same.

The Celtics, winners by 40 points in Sunday's opener over Philadelphia, host Game 2 tonight against the Piers in the Eastern Conference championship series.

Despite Boston's lopsided win in Game 1, a 121-81 verdict, Bird says everyone will forget the effort should Philadelphia emerge with a victory in Game 2.

"Right now I have to put it behind you and go to the next game," said Bird, giving an accurate description of the feelings on both sides. "But if they win here, it will give them the home-court advantage. And everyone will forget about the first game."

The home-court advantage, on the surface at least, does not loom as critical as it used to. "But if they win here, it will give them the home-court advantage. And everyone will forget about the first game."

And while Philly also needs improvement, they also could benefit if the Celtics returned to normalcy in Game 2.

"When you win a game this way, it's just human nature to start believing you won't have to put on as much effort the next time," said Philadelphia's Julius Erving, who didn't expend much energy Sunday in a 12-point, 27-minute outing. "But that's their problem. Let's see how they handle it Wednesday."

Lakers two games up but Spurs confident

By Jeff Hassen
 UPI Sports Writer

Somehow you get the idea the Los Angeles Lakers spend little time worrying about defeat.

"It's hard to tell us, or convince us, we're going to lose," Norm Nixon said Tuesday night after scoring 22 points in the Lakers' 110-101 victory over the San Antonio Spurs in Game 2 of the Western Conference best-of-seven championship series. The Lakers led the series, 2-0.

"We're unanimous about this year and our championship year is that we're relaxed and other teams aren't," Nixon said.

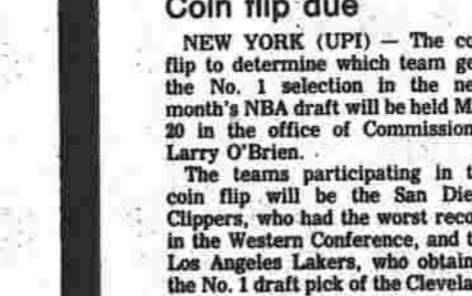

The third and fourth games will be played in San Antonio Friday and Saturday.

Jamaal Wilkes also scored 22 points for the Lakers, who have won six straight playoff games. Magic Johnson added 21 points, 11 rebounds, nine assists and five steals while Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had 19 points, 12 in the first half.

Laker forward Kurt Rambis led all rebounders with 15, eight in the first period.

"You never know what's going to happen," Nixon said in explaining his team's game plan. "You just experiment and see what's going to go."

The Spurs, who led briefly, pulled to within four points with four minutes left but went cold for the rest of the game, missing six of their last nine field-goal attempts while scoring just five points.

NEW YORK (UPI) — It's only fitting the United States Football League's first major league game was held in the "Hunt Room" of the 21 Club.

The NFL, still smarting from last Friday's jury decision supporting Oakland owner Al Davis' proposed relocation to Los Angeles, has another postgame spat with the Cleveland Cavaliers, who had the poorest mark in the East.

Injury inx next for Yankees

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — Victorie have come hard for the New York Yankees this season and even when they manage to win a close game over their heads.

Tuesday night, it wasn't owner George Steinbrenner who dampened their spirits but the injury bugaboo. Dave Collins' one-out sacrifice fly center brought home Ken Griffey with the winning run in the eighth inning, giving the Yankees a 3-2 victory over the California Angels.

In victory, however, the Yankees lost catcher Rick Cerone, who suffered a chipped fracture on his left thumb while tagging Don Baylor out at the plate in the fourth inning, for three to six weeks.

Newly acquired first baseman John Mayberry also was forced out of the game after being spiked on the left toe during a collision with Tim Lincecum.

The Yankees already have starting centerfielder Jerry Mumphrey and starting third baseman Graig Nettles on the disabled list.

"I was just starting to hit the ball, too," Cerone said, dejectedly.

The Yankee catcher said he suffered the thumb injury when he attempted his slide against the ground after tagging Baylor.

"He didn't hit me that hard," Cerone said. "All I can remember is lead you get flat. All you're trying to do is put the ball over the plate and you're not that sharp."

Eagles top Aquinas

Tight contests have been few and far between for the East Catholic Eagles last season in '82. Eagle Coach Jim Penders wonders how his nine 11th eventually react to a nail-biting situation.

"Overall, except for one outing, I'm still wondering."

The Eagles were in another runaway victory, whipping HCC 10-0 at St. Thomas Aquinas, 16-9, yesterday in New Britain.

The win lifts the Eagles to 5-2 in the conference and 9-3 overall. Aquinas adds to 0-7, 1-9 with the loss.

Penders remarked, "I'm not complaining but 8-3 but I hope we don't get into bad habits which happens when you're involved in runaways."

"You can become complacent and in a tight game things can go against you quickly. I'm thinking we made four errors and had errors of commission. Those things happen in a runaway but are magnified in a tight game. Hopefully we will execute in tight games."

East may have an opportunity to lead off today as it visits Windsor Hill in a 3:15 start. "Tomorrow and Saturday (versus South Catholic)

Trade overshadowed Twins' win over Sox

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Doug Corbett has been the talk of American League towns the last few days so his presence in the last few days as soon as his name was called.

"I heard my name in every city that we've been in," Corbett said. "Just a couple of days ago, I heard it in this city. I knew what was coming."

The Twins' ace reliever was traded Tuesday along with veteran infielder Rob Wilfong to the California Angels for minor-league pitcher Steve Largent.

Minnesota tied the score at 4-4 in the fifth inning on a double by Wneager, an RBI single by Mitchell and a double by Castino. Dwight Evans scored triple drive in the final two Boston runs in the eighth inning.

Errors plague Tech

Chesney Tech baseball team in 1982. And more mistakes yesterday against Rocky Hill continued to compound the Beavers' woes as they dropped a 9-5 verdict to the Techsters at the Technem's diamond.

Eight of the nine Terrier markers were unearned.

"We've made something like 48 errors in 11 games," Tech Coach Rick Busick cited. "It's tough to come from behind, but the errors and become depressed. It puts extra pressure on them. Some are now timid and afraid of making errors."

The Terriers, 4-6 in the conference and 4-7 overall, played four unearned runs in the first. Leadoff batter Chuck Gosage reached on an error. The next two batters were retired but four consecutive hits followed the incident, including a home run by Denny Weidlich and Mark Wright. Cheney, 2-7 in the COC and 2-9 overall, struck back for two runs in the bottom of the first. Tom Eaton and Brian Beley drew free passes and pulled off a double steal. A Paul Norbert bouncer to Eaton and Cal Goltberg's RBI single to left broke the home.

Ricky Hill, however, came back with three runs and two unearned in the third for a 7-2 bulge. It added two runs in the sixth while Cheney countered with a pair in the seventh. "The errors are really discouraging, but I can't do much about them when they start," a frustrated Busick stated. Cheney had six errors against the Terriers.

Tom Kaminski, 2-3, took the loss for Cheney. He yielded nine hits, Weidlich and Wall Gorkowski each had two hits for Rocky Hill.

Goltberg and Ron Schulz each rapped two singles for Cheney.

Tim Raines can sure use his speed to steal second base, but he hasn't quite learned how to play it.

Raines, who broke into the majors last year in the outfield but who in the infield this year, turned a slow grounder by Jim Wohlford into a two-run single in the eighth inning, helping the San Francisco Giants to a 5-4 victory over the Montreal Expos.

Jack Evans on third base and Jarrell Collins on fourth base and Clark Clark on second, Wohlford bounced a hit-and-run grounder to Raines. Raines was slow making the play at first, allowing both runs to score in a three-run sixth inning for the Giants.

"I ran hard," Wohlford said. "I guess he (Raines) was nonchalant on the play but I ran hard to beat out that single. The two runners played heads-up baseball and Clark especially deserved a lot of credit for the way he ran."

Montreal manager Jim Fanning, who decided to switch Raines to second base earlier in his career, admitted that the experiment may have cost him the game.

"It will take Raines a while to get used to playing second base," said Fanning, who has been slow to move to improve at that position but I think he could have been a little more aggressive on that hit by Wohlford."

Clark hit a solo homer in the fifth inning to tie the score at 1-1 and also doubled home a run in the sixth.

"I'm swinging the bat good now," said Clark. "In the past years, I haven't been ready or prepared, but this year I had a good spring training and I like coming to the park. I'm away from myself compared to other seasons."

National League

Cubs 6, Braves 4
 At Philadelphia: Ivan DeJesus' two-run single sparked a four-run fifth inning, giving the Phillies their eighth victory in the last nine games. Pete Rose moved ahead of third and scored three runs and Gary Matthews had three hits and knocked in two runs for the Phils.

Cardinals 5, Reds 1
 At St. Louis: George Hendrick drove an RBI home run and a single to pace the Cardinals. Steve Murawski raised his record to 3-2 by defeating the Reds for the first time in his career after seven losses.

Astros 4, Pirates 2
 At Houston: Phil Garner hit a two-run homer to highlight a three-run eighth inning for the Astros, helping Nolan Ryan win his third game. It was Houston's fifth victory in six games against Pittsburgh this season.

Puleo hurls Mets' shutout
 NEW YORK (UPI) — His career consists of only six major-league starts but if his outings are any indicator, Puleo will be a very busy man in the years to come.

Puleo, a 27-year-old right-hander who came to New York for Mark Berman's Mets last season, pitched a shutout Tuesday night to lead the Mets to a 6-0 victory over the San Diego Padres.

"I was the first complete game and the first shutout of Puleo's career and that made Manager George Bamberger a happy man." "Charlie was just as happy because he's getting the ball over the plate now," said Bamberger, whose Mets climbed above the .500 mark. "You know I love those complete games. I'm a believer in complete games. If we have 50 complete games, we'll have a good pitching staff."

Dave Kingman complemented Puleo's pitching by driving in four runs with a double and his 12th homer. Kingman now leads the majors in homers and RBI with 30.

Puleo, 4-2, allowed singles in the

Banker sees recovery beginning this summer

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (UPI) — The national economy will begin recovering this summer and Massachusetts' high technology industry should also reurge from a temporary decline by then, First National Bank of Boston chief economist James Howell said Tuesday.

"The U.S. economy should start turning around this June. The economy is far from dead in the water," Howell told newsmen executives at the 26th annual United Press International awards banquet here on Wednesday.

Howell also said he expects Japanese companies to begin making inroads into Massachusetts high tech industry by the mid-1980s. That industry has helped the state resist a national recession, but recently has softened with reduced corporate profits.

Howell said he's basing his optimistic prognosis on two generally overlooked economic indicators: average hours in a work week and the industrial production of consumer goods.

Both categories, he said, will begin to show continuous growth and will coincide with a $3 billion tax cut and $12 billion Social Security cut of living increase that should spur consumer spending.

Howell estimated 60 to 65 percent of that combined $45 billion infusion will be spent by consumers, most before the end of this year. But he said early next year there will be a reversion to irregular economic periods of growth and stagnation.

Howell also said the unemployment rate will continue to increase this year, and the prime rate could reach 18 percent by next spring because of the Federal Reserve Bank's insistence on keeping interest rates high.

"You will be able to track, month by month, the recovery," he said. Howell said there will be simultaneous good and bad

Hungry burglars and floating car join Aetna claims

HARTFORD (UPI) — Hungry burglars, a car that floated away and a garage door that seemed to operate with a mind of its own figured in the more unusual claims handled last year by Aetna Life & Casualty.

The giant insurer every year compiles claims it considers unusual or funny, leaving out the names and localities involved.

The 1981 list released Tuesday included a claim from a woman policyholder who, after a fender bender, decided to have her damaged car in a ditch and walk home.

When she returned the next day, a rainstorm had flooded the ditch, and floated the car into a pond 15 feet from the shore. The woman needed a tow truck and rowboat to retrieve her vehicle.

Another car case involved an automatic garage door that seemed operated by itself.

The recalcitrant door repeatedly came slamming down on the family car no matter what commands it received by remote control.

The owners finally decided to disconnect the automatic opener rather than subject their car to further abuse.

Another claim was submitted by a Midwest couple who were the apparent victims of some "eat and run" burglars.

The couple returned from a weekend trip to find their home burglarized. The burglars didn't touch silver or jewelry but ransacked the refrigerator. The couple reported three dozen eggs, two pounds of bacon and orange juice missing.

Also taken from the kitchen was a loaf of bread and an old cast iron frying pan.

The "eat and run" burglars did find the time to swipe a small color television set.

Another claim was filed by the operator of an electronic game room after an irate customer put his fist through a video screen.

The customer became upset when his spaceship was destroyed by a meteor shower and decided to carry out his own version of "The Empire Strikes Back."

Maybe the IRS should send congratulations

A friend phoned me the other day in a state of near-panic. A few days after putting his 1981 tax return in the mail, along with a very large check for additional tax due, he received a long form letter from the Internal Revenue Service requesting that he appear at the IRS office for an examination of his 1980 return.

The terms of the letter were standard, but frightening to my nervous friend. He was asked to bring, among other things, "all books, journals, ledgers and summaries concerning income, expenses and deductions; all bank statements and canceled checks; all savings account passbooks; all investment records; all loan records; all purchase invoices for capital items such as real estate, automobiles, personal property; all records of sale of real estate and other property; records of all non-taxable income; all records of contributions, use of an office in the home and business entertainment expense."

"What did I do to deserve that?" my friend cried.

What he had done is dramatically change his financial life for the better in 1980. He left a salaried job and went into business for himself. The business prospered, and he made more money than he had ever made in a single year. In the same year, he came into a small inheritance, also sold his home at a substantial profit and reinvested the proceeds in a new home.

Your Money's Worth Sylvia Porter

When I heard all this, I wasn't surprised that my friend had received an IRS call for a tax examination. The drastic change in his income picture had flagged the IRS computers to churn out an examination notice, so my nervous friend will now have to prove that he paid all the tax that was due.

But since that panic call from my friend, I've been dreaming.

Here was a situation in which a man, never before in trouble with the IRS, had made a lot more money and sent a lot more in tax payments in one year. Yet the only notice taken of this upturn in his fortunes by the IRS was a demand that he come into the office with all his books and records.

What if the IRS had instead congratulated the taxpayer for earning more and thus paying much more in taxes?

Suppose my friend had received a letter from the Internal Revenue commissioner somewhat along these lines:

"It was a pleasure to note from your 1980 tax return that you managed to increase your net taxable income by 40 percent over the year before and that your payments to IRS also went up by roughly the same amount. Your additional tax payment will help the federal government pay for school lunches throughout the academic year for 200 youngsters, or for one warhead for an intercontinental ballistic missile to protect our country from foreign aggression."

"We are delighted that you had so good a year and send you our best wishes for continued prosperity."

Or suppose that Mary Smith, star salesperson in an insurance company, is selected over 200 other candidates to become the national sales manager. Her tax return the following year indicates her very large jump in salary, bonuses and other compensation. Wouldn't a letter from the secretary of the Treasury mentioning her promotion be nice? Even if it added:

"All of us here at the Treasury are delighted that you are doing so well in your chosen field. Your taxes will help reduce the federal deficit and in turn help curb inflation and achieve lower interest rates."

It wouldn't be expensive to program the IRS computers to pick out good news as well as news that arouses the suspicions of tax collectors. Valentines are as easy to print as audit notices. And perhaps we would all feel better about tax compliance and less likely to try to cheat.

Why not try it, Commissioner? Or am I really just dreaming?

Stanley Marcus turns to consulting

By Bruce B. Bakke UPI Business Writer

DALLAS — From his magnificent office 48 stories above downtown Dallas, Stanley Marcus looks out over the city and contemplates the Dallas-Fort Worth is now the center of commerce, of industry, of style for a huge area of the south-central United States.

No one is more responsible for the area's rise in influence than Marcus, now 77 and still voting creative and thought-provoking ideas at a pace that challenges the imagination.

Marcus headed the superquality Dallas department store of Neiman-Marcus for 26 years during which it expanded from its Dallas roots to other major metropolitan areas and became a national pace-setter.

Marcus still is chairman emeritus of Neiman-Marcus, which was merged in 1969 with Carter-Hawley-Hale Stores Inc. of Los Angeles. He served as a consultant for the chain and several other firms. In addition, he makes about 25 speaking appearances a year and does a daily syndicated radio commentary broadcast over 60 stations.

HE ESTIMATES he spends two thirds of his time traveling.

In an interview he was asked how and why he continues to keep such a pace at an age when many would be content to stay home tending roses.

"First of all, I feel like I'm 77. I feel like I'm about 65," he said with a smile. "I have good health and that enables me to keep a pretty fast pace. It enables me to serve 15 clients in a new (consulting) field."

... speech made by Marcus in Atlanta five years ago to an organization of shopping center developers took him into the new field.

"I said most shopping center developers didn't realize that people ate or, if they did, they thought all they ate was fast food or pizzas," Marcus said.

He presented his theory that shopping centers should offer, in addition to fast food, a variety of decent restaurants.

"As a result, several shopping center developers called me and said, 'Tell us how we should do it.'"

Marcus took part in the planning of shopping centers in Miami, Fort Lauderdale, Oklahoma City and Washington, among others, and now is a consultant to Dallas developer Raymond Nasher's large North Park development in Houston.

ONCE INTO the shopping center consulting business, Marcus began what he calls "orchestrating the tenant mix." He preaches that a successful shopping center has an interesting mix of businesses that use one another to attract shoppers, even if the developer doesn't get the maximum rental from each.

"One of the greatest problems developers of shopping centers have is to keep from boring customers to death. And you can bore them to death if they all look so much alike," he said.

Shopping center restaurants should not be hidden in the corners, Marcus tells his clients. They should be centers of attention.

He deplores the rapid spread of "syndicated formula restaurants" throughout the nation. "I think we need a mix of eating experiences," he said.

Thanks, all, for the party

This is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Senior Center. It appears on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

By Gloria Benson Activities Specialist

Hi, everyone! May I say thank you for the lovely party we had Thursday at the Army and Navy Club in honor of my retirement. I am grateful to the staff, the hospitality committee, and especially to Annabelle Dodge, committee chairman, and Russ Nettleton for arranging the party, and Ernie Irwin who emceed the affair.

This is a busy time. Our Big Week - Monday, we had our card party with about 112 in attendance. Thank you's go again to the Paul Deas and Russ Nettleton and especially our good friends Mary and Ed McKeever.

Tuesday night is the sports banquet but this is being written earlier in the day, you will have to wait until the next column to hear who won the trophies.

Wednesday will be the trip to Lake Waramaug. I am sure it will be an enjoyable day for all that attend.

On Thursday we thank all our volunteers and especially Mr. and Mrs. Senior Citizen for the Year. Guess who that will be? Hi, everyone!

On Friday we will have the anniversary ball and the price will be only $5. Tickets will be available at the door.

I want to congratulate Joe and his workers for the great job they did in raising vegetables and flowers plants for sale. They are extremely healthy and quite a bargain for just $1.25 a container. So drop by the center and pick yours up before they are gone.

Remember, we are raffling off a beautiful clock made by Larry Lound and Ed McKeever. They are 3 for $1 or 50 cents each.

Remember, the Fishing Derby to be held at Sauter's Pond on May 28 starting at 6 a.m.

Our Legal Aid will be here on May 29 from 10 a.m. to noon so call in for an appointment.

Also, our birthday party for the month of May will be on 26th so call in with your name.

Pinch scores for Monday May 10 are Ed Hinde, 609; Ann Husarik, 588; Vincent Borello, 589; Mary O'Brien, 569; John Gally, 569; Helen Silver, 567; Edith O'Brien, 565; Margie Reed, 560; Elsa Linhardt, 560; Carl Popple, 558.

I want to thank a few of our members who are show people who raise rabbits as a hobby," Peifer said. "We put on some 1,400 shows a year."

About 34,200 of the association's 35,000 members are American, he said. The other 800,000 are scattered through practically every other country in the world.

"Only about one animal out of 10 is show quality," he added. The rest are either kept as pets, eaten by the breeder's household, sold as meat or sold to commercial laboratories for scientific use.

"We can only guess at how many rabbits are being raised," Peifer said. "But he urges caution on anyone contemplating rabbit breeding as a commercial venture."

Price and supply competition from imports are stiff, demand is small compared with other meat sources and marketing problems can be difficult, he says.

Both Bigbee and Peifer said most rabbit consumption in the United States is on the coast, where populations include many people of European heritage whose native cuisines feature rabbit.

Bigbee's advice to people who want to try raising rabbits:

"Peifer, a retired meat cutter and supermarket operator, is optimistic about overcoming that attitude.

He said he thinks economic conditions to improve it in a year and Americans will finally accept rabbit as meat, while rabbit raising continues to increase slowly.

Rabbits can be a rare raising food experience

By Jeanne Loesem UPI Family Editor

When economic times get tough, meat is in short supply, people start eating more rabbit.

In the past 12 months, membership in the American Rabbit Breeders Association has increased 25 percent.

Peifer attributes a great deal of the growth to people raising a few rabbits in their back yards to put more meat on the table," says Ed Peifer, the association's executive director.

"During every year, rabbit raising increased greatly in the United States," he added in a telephone interview from association headquarters in Bloomington, Ill.

"Three does and one buck can produce enough meat to supply all the protein needed by a family of four," Peifer said.

When a feed company surveyed rabbit breeders about two years ago, he added - "Less than 1 percent knew about the association or belonged to it," although the group is 72 years old.

Rabbit breeding in the United States is largely for show, Peifer said.

Commercial breeders are estimated at only about 10,000 - a figure that includes thousands of backyard breeders who sell a few rabbits on an irregular basis.

"Eighty-five percent of our members are show people, university poultry specialists and extension agents for recommendations."

The specialists and extension agents are especially good sources of advice about backyard operations and youth projects, Bigbee says.

There are about 50 breeds available mainly for show and for others, meat and fur. And don't mistake rabbits for hares. They are both lagomorphs - leaping animals - but rabbits are generally smaller than hares, have shorter legs and ears and are quick and elusive.

Few cities have ordinances against raising rabbits in backyards, Peifer said. "Our big, big problem is that Easter bunny. It's like saying you're going to have dog for supper. It's like eating a pet."

Peifer, a retired meat cutter and supermarket operator, is optimistic about overcoming that attitude.

Garden book full of good things to do

By Barbara Richmond Herald Reporter

A cookbook for when your garden explodes - that's "Too Many Tomatoes, Squash, Beans and Other Good Things." It's a long title but it's full of good things to do in the summertime when the garden you thought was so small produces enough to feed an army.

The book, with its attractive cover with large lettering and appetizing looking vegetables, sells for $15.95 in hard cover and $7.95, paperback. It was written by Lois M. Burrows and Laura G. Myers and published by Harper & Row.

In their introduction to the book the authors say, "It may seem trite to point out that a can of mushroom soup and a few frozen onion rings are not fine complements for snap beans freshly plucked from the vine."

"THE BOOK makes things easy for the cook in that a chapter is devoted to each vegetable conducive to backyard gardening. The introductory text to each chapter includes general information, a brief summary of growing requirements, calorie, carbohydrate, and food value information, and detailed instructions for harvest, storage and cooking."

The authors give plenty of valuable tips about fresh vegetables besides how to use them in recipes. For instance, they caution against picking the vegetables and then letting them sit while you tend to weeds and watering. They say the vitamin content begins to deteriorate as soon as the vegetable is plucked from the

Kites are for all seasons

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) - Dozens of brightly colored kites danced across the misty blue sky, the wind turning the taut strings into a gigantic celestial violin. The combination of Mother Nature's wind and man's kites transformed the sky into a spring symphony for "Art on a String, Music on the Wing." "I can't tell you what they're worth, but some of them - like the large kite from the Parthenon in Nashville."

More than 100 kites, from 80-foot-long orange dragons to ominous black sharks, adorned the walls and ceiling of the columned copy of the mighty temple of the Greek goddess Athena.

The opening included a live concert featuring original music by Jack Tamul of Jacksonville, Fla., and an outdoor kite festival in treelined Centennial Park.

The kites were made by members of the Windance Society. During the concert, microphones were attached to kite lines and the sound of the kite string singing in the wind was broadcast along with Tamul's synthesizers.

The festival was open to the public. Children as small as Jake Harris, 4, took to the skies with homemade kites.

"I've been making kites since I was 2 years old," the young Harris said, tugging on his string to make his kite climb.

Among the kites on display were rare World War II aerial target models, huge NASA parafalls, fighter kites and kites of war, a 26-foot-long centipede, 3 1/2 inch miniatures that really fly, winged box kites, a catamaran that sails on water and flies in the air, man-lifting kites and lighted night kites.

Glenn Ford reviews amazing career—and talks of old pals

The sun was rising over Hawaii's Diamond Head volcano as Glenn Ford and his wife, Cynthia, sipped their breakfast coffee in the Hilton Hawaiian Village and reviewed his amazing career for PEOPLE magazine.

The nation's future worried the 66-year-old veteran of World War II's Battle of Midway. And he revealed publicly for the first time that he had also served as a colonel in Vietnam with the Third Marines.

Glenn Ford and wife Cynthia. Reminiscing

"Yes, I served two 60-day tours of duty in Vietnam in 1968. I was a briefing officer, and I was in some hot spots — Da Nang, Monkey Mountain, the Rock Pile, Chu Lai, Pleiku, Quang Tri. I don't like to talk about it."

"How do you justify 55,000 lives lost in Vietnam? You'd like to see that," said Ford. "That's why I'm concerned about Central America. We've had enough wars. Nobody wins a war."

He does like to talk about the friends he's made in Hollywood, but it pained him to discuss his best friend, William Holden. "We were friends for 35 years," he said. "He was best man at my wedding (in 1977). When he died I had a heart attack. We were going with Stefanie (Powers), of course. He thought the world of Stefanie. At the house, for example, she called and his eyes lit up. Stefanie is coming."

"The sad thing was that Bill and I were going to do another film together. It was a Western, 'Dime Novel Sunset,' and we were supposed to start it later this year in Tucson, Nov. I don't think I could do it with anybody else. It's sad."

He mused at the thought of what another close pal, Errol Flynn, might have said about allegations that he was a spy during World War II. "He liked to embellish gossip, so he probably would have been the first to say that's true. I can't believe it," moaned Donna. "I haven't felt this

And then there was John Wayne. "Duke and I are the only people who have starred in over 220 films. I remember going to his hospital room and him saying, 'Pilgrim, there's the two of us to left.' And I said, 'Aw, Duke,' and cried a little. And he said, 'Well, Pilgrim, maybe we'll get to do a lot more trails together.' A week later he was dead.

Ford, a shy and gentle man, was clearly ticked at what has been written about Judy Garland. "She had tremendous loyalty to her friends. That's why I get angry when I read all that crap about her. She was a beautiful girl. Like Mel Tormé's book on her, 'The Other Side of the Rainbow.' I think there's no excuse to write that type of garbage. Oh, I wish she were still alive so she could write a rebuttal to what Tormé has written."

Ford intends to write a book of his own. Cynthia, 33, said she has kept a diary since 1946. "It is brutal, it's very emotional, really gut feelings."

But, says Ford, "They want me to make the book) judicially. There is so much I know about Judy and Rita Hayworth and all my friends. I'm not going to be cruel to these people. This book will be warm."

Just like the author.

What is Michael Jackson doing? He's making a new solo album—K.M.R.R., Milwaukee, Wis. Jackson's living in Los Angeles and working seven days a week, writing and recording an album that will be out in July. He's also doing a cut with ex-Beatle Paul McCartney, who has been a frequent collaborator. No time for fun. Right now it's all work.

Are actors David Carradine and Robert Carradine related?—S.S., Colorado Springs, Col. Yep, they're brothers. And their brother Keith is just as multi-talented. They are the sons of veteran character actor John Carradine, who must have made more B movies than anyone else. Carradine is an old Shakespearean actor who was never given the accolades he deserved. The family has always been close. No jealousy between them. The father and sons form a mutual admiration society.

Frank Langella starred on Broadway in "Dracula," but I haven't heard much about him lately. Tell me everything about him.—R.W., New York City. Langella is doing "Amadeus" on Broadway now. Born Jan. 1, 1940 in Bayonne, N.J., he started acting in Pennsylvania's Pocono mountains resort area while still in high school. Before he began concentrating on his acting career, he spent a year playing guitar and singing with a troupe that trekked through Europe. He stands 6 feet 4 inches, and has long, wavy hair, Ruth, whom he wed five years ago. He also played Dracula in the movies, but he prefers the stage.

When Hilton throws a party, he goes for broke

When hotel mogul Barron Hilton throws a party, it lasts an entire week. And he doesn't hesitate to bring along some of the biggest names in Hollywood, like Cathy Lee Crosby, Richard Dawson, Glenn Ford, Robert Stack, Hugh O'Brian, Audrey and Judy Landers, Donna Dixon and Christopher Atkins.

A Hilton, one of the world's richest men, three times the gaikiki to inaugurate his new $100 million, 35-story Tapa Tower at the company's Hawaiian Village complex on Waikiki Beach in Honolulu.

But don't ask Dixon, the star of TV's "Bosom Buddies," to go on any more sailing trips. The poor dear got awfully seasick during a three-hour catamaran ride to Pearl Harbor, and lost more than her Southern California "I can't believe it," moaned Donna. "I haven't felt this bad in years." She recovered, however, in time to attend the parties. Dawson, meanwhile, was happily presenting his 19-year-old son, Gary. There are no feuds in his family. Atkins, who scored with Brooke Shields in "The Blue Lagoon," said he'd just returned from Australia where he made his second film. "I'm in love," said the 21-year-old blonde from Rye, N.Y. "She's an Australian actress. The moment I saw her I fell head over heels."

Stack and his beautiful wife, Rosemary, who've been married for 27 years, were renewing old ties with the island. That's where they had their honeymoon. But the star of "Task Force" eschewed the surf to play golf.

Crosby? She just looked beautiful. O'Brian? He just kept jogging. It was that kind of a week.

Newcomer is zooming to the top

By Vernon Scott
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD — A restless English beauty, disenchanted with her comfortable life in Oxfordshire, moved to New York City briefly, then came to Hollywood less than two years ago to become a star.

She is Rachel Ward, a dark-eyed, six-footer who hoppedscotch to a co-starring role with Burt Reynolds in "Shirley's Machine" and will soon be seen with Steve Martin in "Dead Men Don't Wear Plaid."

"I've always been restless," Rachel said carelessly in a refined British accent. "I was 17 when I left England. I had romanticized America and Hollywood. I arrived in New York with $1,000, no personal friends and no prospects for work. I moved in with a friend of my mother's."

I did some modeling but I don't have a model's figure. I'm too busty, so I did face and cosmetics commercials. I also took acting lessons.

"When I began to feel comfortable in New York, I became restless again, as I had at home in Oxfordshire. It's unhealthy to become cozy. You can't progress in your life that way."

"You get lazy and lose your drive. When a person becomes complacent, she gets sidetracked from her goals."

"Acting was what I wanted and I had to make a total commitment. I was in the picture. This is where take three years training or I'd be just another pretty face at cattle calls."

"I came to Hollywood on an impulse. I saved enough money from modeling to live for 18 months. I had no trouble finding an agent or getting a job. In less than a month I had a role in a horror picture, 'Three Blind Mice.'"

The poised, self-confident Rachel soon thereafter was cast in another low budget thriller, "Night School."

"I never dove any acting before," she said. "They were the biggest steps I could take at the time with no previous experience. You've got to take chances and stick your neck out. My timing couldn't have been better."

"In the back of my mind somewhere I long to be comfortable and content, but for the moment all is risky. I love to put myself out on a limb."

Rachel's big break came last year when Reynolds was searching for just the right leading lady in "Shirley's Machine," an adventure drama which he also would direct.

After months of interviewing beautiful actresses, Reynolds began the picture without a leading lady. In October 1980, Rachel auditioned for the world's No. 1 box office star. Nothing came of it.

Reynolds went to Europe seeking a new face because the character is killed off half-way through the film. Reynolds felt audiences wouldn't believe that an established star would be murdered that early in the picture.

"Burt and I talked for two hours, but he thought I was too young to start with," Rachel said. "Then he called me back for a reading at Paramount. He gave me the script and then I did a short scene. He was impressed. Acting is his business simply because his best friend, Ray Berwick, wants it that way."

Berwick, who trained all those killer seagulls for Alfred Hitchcock's classic terror film, "The Birds," and who would have seen eye-to-eye parrots helping the blind right now if the establishment would allow it, is a perfect partner as far as Boomer is concerned.

"I felt myself sinking some time ago," Berwick said. "I cut it out when I was 12 and gave it to a girlfriend who needed it more than I did at the time. She said it helped her make the right decision. It helped me, also, later on."

The boy asked them they would lift him up so he could see too. They lifted him and he peered down at the water below. He saw his own reflection. "But that's me!" he exclaimed. The gypsy chief replied, "Now you know who God lives in. You are looking at the place where God lives on earth."

BOOMER'S READY FOR HIS COFFEE AND DANISH ... actually the canine actor doesn't drink coffee

Berwick likes birds, too

Boomer's trainer a whiz with animals

By Kenneth R. Clark

NEW YORK — With his napper tucked neatly beneath his chin, the star of "The Birds," sat up straight in his chair and turned his attention to the coffee and Danish hotel room service had been kind enough to bring him for breakfast — but it was all an act.

Boomer — a shaggy dog of uncertain ancestry and cosmic IQ who earns about $5,000 a week when he is working — is fond of Danish when he can get it, but he doesn't drink coffee. Acting is his business simply because his best friend, Ray Berwick, wants it that way.

Coupon savings pay for family vacations

By Martin Sloane

What do couponers and refunders do with the many hundreds of dollars they save each year?

Family outings and vacations rank high on their list of spending priorities.

"My sons help me refund because all the refund cash goes into a family jar. We use it to go to the movies, play miniature golf and do other things that we can enjoy as a family," says Jan Williams of San Jose, Calif.

Diana Baker from Canton, Ga., says that her refund savings look her family to Six Flags Over Georgia. Disney World is her next goal, and she has already started to put aside money for a trip to the World's Fair in Knoxville, Tenn.

Janet Brooks of Orchard, Ky., also plans to take her family to the fair with her refund savings.

It seems as if many refunders will be visiting Knoxville. Perhaps we should all wear "I'm a Refunder" buttons so we can meet between exhibits to trade refund forms.

Patricia Knott of Astoria, N.Y., tells me through college didn't allow it. Two years ago I decided to set aside some of my refund money for this very special trip.

"Last fall I had saved enough for the airfare. My husband couldn't believe it. 'Let's go,' I told him — and he went. It was such a wonderful experience that words can barely describe it. But without my coupons and refunds it might not have happened."

What do you do with your refund?

If you are like Helen Childs of Jonesville, Mich., you are investing your savings in the stock market. "Between refunds and stocks I now have a very intriguing hobby and more fun than I've had in a long time," she says.

Will there be enough food in the future?

NEW YORK (NEA) — Will there be enough food for all of us in the future? "Good times and good food today don't assure us that it will always be that way," says Agriculture Secretary John Block in the 1981 Agriculture Yearbook.

These are some of the problems to be solved: The loss of prime farmland; the leveling off of agricultural productivity; soil erosion; diversion of agricultural resources from producing food to meeting energy requirements; water and soil pollution; and food shortages elsewhere in the world.

The 1981 Yearbook — titled "Will There Be Enough Food?" — provides a wealth of information about U.S. food production for our country and our trading partners.

Some chapters are of particular interest to the consumer: "Food, Famine and a Realistic View," "A World That's Fed Better Than Ever Before," "U.S. Agriculture and World Security," "Ways That We'll Continue to Be Well Fed" and "The Land and Water Squeeze on our Food."

A total of 44 authors contributed to the book. Most are specialists from the Agriculture Department and state land-grant universities. Some are optimistic about the future of American agriculture; others are not.

Two of the authors predict that world dependence on the United States for agriculture supplies is likely to increase significantly.

But a number of writers say that developments on the frontiers of science may boost farm productivity in revolutionary ways.

The 1981 Yearbook may be purchased for $7 at government bookstores across the country or from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Be sure to use a check or money order if you order the book by mail.

Oatmeal-nut cookies travel well, fit into diet

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Brown-bagging is a way of life for millions of Americans. For some, taking lunch to work is a daily ritual. Others brown-bag occasionally.

Aside from the usual range of sandwiches, brown-baggers enjoy cottage cheese, fruits, strips of vegetables, hot soup and a sweet or two.

Oatmeal-nut or raisin-bran cookies travel well and fit into the brown-bagger's diet quite well, too. They're also good to have on hand for after-school snacks for youngsters to eat with fruit juice or milk.

Oatmeal-Nut Cookies
3 cups quick oats
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1/4 cup real mayonnaise
1 egg
2 teaspoons vanilla
1 cup chopped walnuts
In medium bowl, stir together oats, flour, cinnamon and baking soda. In large bowl with mixer at high speed, beat sugar, mayonnaise, egg and vanilla 2 minutes. Rub walnuts speed to knead into mixture until well-blended. Stir in walnuts.

Raisin-Bran Cookies: Follow recipe for Oatmeal-Nut Cookies. Omit oats and walnuts. Use 3 cups bran cereal and 1 cup raisins.

Bake in 350-degree oven 10 to 12 minutes or until lightly browned. Immediately transfer to wire rack. Cool. This kitchen-tested recipe makes about 4 dozen cookies.
