DAVID NEIL SMITH LED INTO COURT TODAY... swears at news photographers

Man, facing other charges, charged with Bolton rape

By Richard Oody
Herald Reporter

State Police today arrested an ex-convict they believed raped and tried to murder a Newton woman in Bolton May 28.

He had been free on bond while awaiting trial on two other sexual assault charges dating to 1981. David Neil Smith, 30, of 9 King Court, East Hartford, was charged with criminal attempt to commit murder, first-degree sexual assault and first-degree kidnapping in connection with the May 28 incident.

Smith is also awaiting trial in Hartford Superior Court on charges stemming from two attacks on women, one in East Hartford and one in West Hartford, within a six week period last summer.

These happened, police said, while Smith was apparently out on bail from a three-year prison term for sexual assault crimes. He was released from Somers Prison last Christmas Eve.

Police sources said many local police departments are being notified about Smith because of his possible connection with other sexual assaults.

Windsor police arrested Smith for rape in that town last summer, but he was acquitted of the charges. Police said the woman in the Windsor rape had been brutally treated by the attacker.

State Police Wednesday apprehended Smith, who works as a glazier in West Hartford at the Stanley Wiesen Co. and obtained a warrant this morning.

Smith had been free from the town 1981 charges by posting the $25,000 real estate bonds, a Hartford court spokesman said today.

Smith was being held on $100,000 and was expected to be arraigned today.

As he was escorted into court this morning, he tried to break free from police and attack photographers.

The recent charges Smith faces come from a brutal sexual assault on a 29-year-old Newton woman on Camp Meeting Road in Bolton, police said.

Police said the woman was picked up by the suspect while she was hitchhiking on Interstate-84 in East Hartford en route to Manchester.

The suspect drove through Manchester into Bolton and at about 5 p.m. forced the woman into the woods off Camp Meeting Road, where he choked her until she was unconscious. Police said they believe the woman was raped while she was unconscious.

The charges Smith faces in West Hartford are numerous police said today. They have to do with a June 19, 1981 attack on a 27-year old woman, in the presence of her 7-year-old daughter, in a shopping center parking lot.

Police said Smith was apprehended while fleeing from this crime.

This attack came three days after a rape in East Hartford that Smith is also charged with.

several areas as rivers and streams fell below flood stage and volunteers were pitched in to help with the recovery effort.

"We've had all kinds of volunteers," said Robert Nattress, the state police resident trooper in Essex, which with 50 homes destroyed was one of the areas hardest-hit by the floods.

"We've had youth groups involved actually going into the homes to help the people clean up," Nattress said Wednesday, adding that the overnight curfew that had been in effect Monday and Tuesday in Essex was lifted Wednesday.

Israel is ready for cease-fire

By United Press International

Israel forces warned they would storm Beirut today, but an official said Israel had achieved most of its military goals and would accept a ceasefire if Syrian forces stopped attacking Israeli troops.

The possible cease-fire bid came as Israel said its jets shot down eight more Syrian jets and one helicopter over eastern Lebanon, bringing to 38 the number of Syrian planes downed since the fighting began Sunday.

In Jerusalem, a senior Israeli official said Secretary of State Alexander Haig was expected to arrive in Israel Friday for talks with Israeli leaders to arrange for Israeli acceptance of a cease-fire urgently requested by President Reagan.

"This means we'll have to get it all over with today," one Israeli military officer said, referring to the troops' mission of destroying Palestinian guerrilla headquarters, training camps and supply centers.

The senior Israeli official, who asked that he not be identified, said Israel has "no intention whatsoever of occupying anything in Beirut."

"We could have agreed to the cease-fire even now, but the Syrians are still endangering our ground forces and we have to defend them," he said.

But in order to complete their offensive against the Palestinians the Israeli troops must enter guerrilla-occupied West Beirut and threatened to do so in leaflets dropped on the capital from Israeli planes.

The Israeli military command also confirmed that seven Syrian jets were shot down Wednesday in addition to the 23 already destroyed.

The command said the latest air battle, over eastern Lebanon, came during a clash between Israeli troops and Palestinian-Syrian forces. The Israeli planes took on the Syrian jets as they attacked Israeli positions.

But another Israeli official said the air battles resumed because the Syrians tried to move in replacements for 19 surface-to-air missile batteries knocked out of action in raids Wednesday.

Reagan, in his message to Begin, also demanded the withdrawal of Israeli invasion troops from Lebanon.

In leaflets dropped over the capital, Israel warned its invasion forces were far superior in men and weapons and will take Beirut "no matter what the price." With its forces poised on the outskirts of the capital, Israel vowed "in a short time we will take over the city."

The warning that the Israelis had large numbers of infantry, paratroopers and air forces "allocated for the city of Beirut," was directed to the commander of the Syrian brigade in Beirut — apparently to avoid war with Syria — but it contained no advice for the terrified civilian population.

Israel invasion forces had bombed Palestinian positions on the outskirts of Beirut earlier after overrunning their remaining strongholds outside the Lebanese capital.

Waves of Israeli bombers swooped down today to pound PLO positions south of Beirut International Airport, 4 miles south of the capital, and the nearby Bourj al-Brajneh and coastal Hazzi Palestinian refugee camps.

In the fifth day of its massive air, sea and land invasion, Israeli armor reportedly was at Khalde today, 2 miles from the airport and only 6 miles from Palestine Liberation Organization headquarters in the capital.

An estimated 25,000 Israeli troops controlled most of southern Lebanon and its air force was commencing the largest aerial battle since World War II.

Israel said it destroyed all Syrian surface-to-air missile batteries in eastern Lebanon and shot down 23 Syrian fighters sparking fears the Lebanon invasion could lead to a fifth Middle East War.

Israeli forces moved on Beirut from the south and east to within a few miles of their Lebanese Christian allies north of the capital, raising Palestinian fears of a pincer to "annihilate" their forces.

As panicked residents of Beirut took cover in fear of a final Israeli assault, PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat met Soviet Ambassador Alexander Soldatov for the second day Wednesday and pleaded for "all friendly, peace-loving and Muslim states" to aid the Palestinians.

British suffer 'blackest day'

By United Press International

Britain said it suffered one of its "blackest days" of the Falkland Islands war from an Argentine air attack but Buenos Aires admitted today British forces may have established a second beachhead despite the blow.

The British Ministry of Defense said only that early reports from Tuesday's fierce fighting "indicate a number of killed and injured," but defense sources said they understood casualties were "substantial."

In what they termed "one of the blackest days for the task force" since Britain moved to retake the Argentine-occupied islands in the South Atlantic, 8,000 miles from home, the sources said the 4,470-ton supply ship Sir Galahad was believed sunk.

Officials declined to comment on an Independent Television News report in London that 39 of Sir Galahad's 68-man crew were missing.

However, the British Ministry said despite the attacks, British troops secured a major beachhead at Fitz Roy, 17 miles southwest of Stanley's estimated 7,000-man Argentine garrison.

Argentina said it had driven off the landing attempt, but today said it was trying to determine if the British "may have succeeded in its attempt to disembark" to establish a beachhead at Argreable Bay, next to Fitz Roy.

Britain insisted its 9,000 ground troops encircling Stanley were "ready to go forward" for the final assault on the Falklands capital.

In Buenos Aires, President Leopoldo Galtieri vowed on the eve of today's "Falklands Day" celebrations — used for decades to push its claim to the islands — "Argentina will not capitulate."

Sir Galahad was one of four ships Argentina claimed to have hit in Tuesday's fighting. London news reports said it was bombed in a lightning raid British radar failed to detect.

In fierce low-level air assaults in three separate locations, Argentina's jet fighters also slightly damaged the supply ship Sir Tristram in Fitz Roy Bay, London newspapers said today.

The attacking jets also may have sunk a small landing craft in Choiseul Bay and apparently inflicted light damage on the frigate HMS Plymouth off Falkland Sound.

The defense ministry flatly denied Argentine claims it sank the 2,000-ton frigate Plymouth, saying it suffered only minor damage.

Argentina also said troops repelled a new British air attack on Stanley and Argentine planes bombed British troops on Mount Kent, which overlooks the main — and possibly the last major — Argentine garrison on East Falkland.

State readies estimates to seek disaster aid

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International

HARTFORD — Gov. William O'Neill summoned state agency heads to a meeting today to compile damage estimates that will be used to win federal aid to help victims of flooding that devastated parts of Connecticut this week.

O'Neill laid the groundwork Wednesday for the meeting with the commissioners by sending a telegram to the White House informing President Reagan that the state would seek a "major disaster declaration."

"Connecticut is in dire need of assistance, and I am counting on you to review my request favorably and to provide all appropriate federal assistance to the citizens of Connecticut," O'Neill said in the telegram.

Meanwhile, efforts to clean up the devastating flood damage continued and progress was reported in housing, food, clothing and medical care for flood victims.

In hard-hit Essex, officials had collected $3,000 by Wednesday afternoon on the first day of their effort to raise $50,000 to assist flood victims.

State officials awaited word from federal assistance, private efforts were launched to raise money to help people whose homes were damaged or even washed away during the three days of heavy rain.

Connecticut Division of the American Red Cross announced an emergency disaster appeal to raise $150,000 to provide temporary housing, food, clothing and medical care for flood victims.

Cathedral guard beaten, robbed

HARTFORD (UPI) — A security guard at St. Joseph's Cathedral, the same church where a night watchman was murdered two months ago, was beaten and robbed and was hospitalized today.

Richard McCann, 27, was in stable condition at St. Francis Hospital, an Medical Center with bruises and cuts on his head and multiple bruises on his arms and chest.

Police said McCann was checking the church basement about 5:15 p.m. Wednesday when he saw a man in his late teens standing near a far wall. As McCann led him out, the assailant grabbed his nightstick, beat him, and stole his wallet.

No arrest has been made although police said they had a suspect in mind.

Panel levies fines in Bridgeport vote

HARTFORD (UPI) — Former Mayor John Mandanici, his son, two campaign aides and seven Bridgeport area businessmen have been fined by the State Elections Commission for violating campaign contribution laws.

The commission said the businesses contributed $3,600 to "People Concerned About Bridgeport," a special campaign committee set up in violation of a state law prohibiting a candidate from forming more than one campaign committee.

The purpose of the committee, according to documents filed with the commission, was to generate negative publicity about Mandanici's campaign opponents. Mandanici was defeated by Republican Mayor Leonard Paolotta.

Mandanici was fined $500 for helping to establish the committee and for soliciting two corporate contributions.

His son, former state trooper John Mandanici Jr., and a former campaign aide, Mario Testa, were each fined $500 each for soliciting corporate contributions.

Congressman won't back budget

HARTFORD (UPI) — The two Republican members of Connecticut's congressional delegation probably will vote against all federal budget proposals, including the GOP budget.

"I'm a moderate at heart," said first term Rep. Lawrence DeNardis. "I'm trying to find a place where we can keep spending down without hurting anybody."

Rep. Stewart McKinney said he was worried about the prospects of no budget at all, but said he probably will vote against all three budgets today — the Republican, Democrat, and Reagan plans.

The Democratic proposal is "obscene, moronic," McKinney said. "The deficit is mind boggling and the same for the increase in taxes."

School officials study bias claim

HARTFORD (UPI) — Despite complaints to the state, Hartford school officials are studying claims schools with high minority enrollments get less money, says Hartford School Superintendent Hernan LaFontaine.

"I already sent a letter to the school board on Monday indicating exactly what we are going to do about the report," LaFontaine said Wednesday.

Guatemalan grabs presidency in coup

GUATEMALA CITY (UPI) — Gen. Efraim Rios Montt became sole ruler of Guatemala following an apparent army coup that ousted two fellow members of the fledgling military junta.

Montt said Wednesday he assumed the presidency, which was a previously vacant, at the army's urging.

"In this transcendental moment for Guatemala, I assume the weight of governing only on my shoulders," Rios Montt said Wednesday at the National Palace in a statement announcing his elevation to the presidency.

The ousted junta members, Gen. Horacio Solonzo and Col. Francisco Gordillo, flanked Rios Montt as he announced to the Cabinet his consolidation of power. The Cabinet apparently was not informed of the move beforehand.

Rios Montt, a born-again Christian, pledged after coming to power in a March 23 bloodless coup that he would never assume the presidency. He originally promised that he would be only a caretaker ruler.

White House Executive Secretary Ann McClinton returned to her alma mater, center city Katharine Gibbs School in Philadelphia, this week to deliver the keynote graduation address and a congratulatory letter from her boss's boss: "Your graduation marks a joyful milestone, and Nancy and I are delighted to share in that joy with you and your friends."

Miss McClinton, a 1973 Gibbs graduate, has been executive secretary in the White House through the administrations of Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford, and Jimmy Carter. She now works for Robert Carleson, special assistant to the president for policy development.

Remember Lindsay?

New York cabbies sure do. Mention the name of John Lindsay — who hasn't been mayor since 1973 — and they still rant.

But Lindsay apparently has had enough of life as a public figure — well, not quite.

In an interview taped for broadcast Thursday on WCBS-TV's "News at Five" Lindsay says the only thing that would get him back into politics would be "if somebody asked me to be U.S. secretary of state, partially on the grounds I couldn't do worse than the mob that's been there for the last 125 years."

Mideast fight overshadows NATO summit

By Helen Thomas
UPI White House Reporter

President Reagan has written to Prime Minister Menachem Begin demanding an immediate Israeli cease-fire and withdrawal from Lebanon "to help bring the bloodshed to an end," the White House said today.

Speakers said Reagan said in his personal message to Begin, "We have asked all parties with any influence there to help bring the bloodshed to an end."

The president squeezed time into a busy summit day for urgent consultations on the deteriorating Middle East crisis with Saudi Arabian Foreign Minister Prince Saud al Faisal. Speakers said Saud requested the meeting.

Saud flew to Bonn today, talked with West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, and thousands of protesters began pouring into Bonn Wednesday night and demonstration organizers said they expected a total of 200,000 to attend today's rally.

The protesters massed at five points in the German capital to prepare for the march to a city park located directly across the Rhine from the Bundestag, the West German Parliament where Reagan was enthusiastically received Wednesday.

Thousands protesting

Among the flags for the first time was that of Spain, which was excluded from membership when NATO was founded in 1949 because it was then ruled by the late Francisco Franco and was not a democracy. Free elections were restored in 1976.

Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, the host of the meeting, opened the session by saying, "I defend freedom, above all to preserve peace — as President Reagan yesterday said in this very place — the peoples of the North Atlantic alliance have united."

Reagan brought the West German Parliament to its feet a few hours after his arrival Wednesday, saying "Europe's shores are our shores. Europe's borders are our borders."

Reagan was expected to outline to his NATO partners the proposals unveiled in his Bundestag speech for mutual reduction of NATO and Warsaw Pact ground forces to a total of 700,000 men each and their combined ground and air force personnel to a level of 900,000 men each.

Budget showdown due

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Republicans and Democrats lined up today for a possible final budget showdown, knowing failure to pass a spending plan would raise the federal deficit and likely worsen economic conditions.

President Reagan, in the middle of a 10-day European trip, may call Capitol Hill in an effort to whip up support for the Republican plan, the White House said.

The $765 billion GOP plan would cut several social programs and, supporters say, produce a deficit of $99 billion — just under what has become, in some congressional circles, the psychological $100 billion barrier.

NATO declaration condemns Soviets' rigidity, aggression

By Barry James
UPI Senior Editor

BONN, West Germany — NATO members have approved a sweeping declaration reaffirming the founding principles of the alliance and condemning the Soviets for rigidity and aggression, NATO sources said today.

"Our objective is to prevent war and while safeguarding democracy, lay the foundations for an enduring peace," said the declaration to be issued by the 16-nation NATO summit in Bonn.

"None of our arms will ever be used except to reply to an aggression," the declaration pledged. "We shall respect the sovereignty, the equality, the independence and the territorial integrity of all countries."

Addressing the Democrats and jabbing his finger toward their side of the aisle, Michel said, "I'm confident a budget will pass, if we don't get diverted by some people who just want everything to go down."

Democratic Leader Jim Wright of Texas rose to his feet and denied the accusation.

"I will tell the gentleman from Illinois, I don't want everything to go down. I don't care who is blamed or who gets credit," Wright said. "I think we should avoid the (economic) disaster."

"It is generally agreed by economists, lawmakers and the administration unless Congress passes a budget, the deficit will rise, possibly up to $182 billion — keeping up interest rates and preventing an economic recovery."

Technically, Congress does not have to pass a budget and the government does not need one to function. Congress could still appropriate funds, but without a budget there would be no mechanism to restrain funds.

Two weeks ago, the House defeated all eight budget proposals brought before it and adjourned in the early morning hours without passing a spending plan.

If both the GOP and Democratic plans are voted down, the House would then consider — and likely reject — Reagan's initial budget with its projected deficit of $122 billion.

Last month, the Senate defeated that plan and passed a plan backed by the administration. That version has a projected deficit of $116 billion. If the House approves a spending plan, a House-Senate conference committee would work out the differences between the two measures.

Assistant GOP leader Trent Lott of Mississippi told reporters the alternative to rejecting all three budget proposals "is chaos."

And, he said, he doubted the House would take another crack at passing a budget if it failed today.

Nuke foes threaten blockades

NEW YORK (UPI) — Peace advocates threatened to blockade the U.N. missions of the world's major nuclear powers, saying the action would be taken because there has been no progress toward disarmament in 30 years of negotiations.

The threat of civil disobedience represented the first potential crack in the harmonious planning between city officials and organizers of week-long series of anti-nuclear demonstrations keyed to a U.N. conference on disarmament.

The organizers said Wednesday more than 1,000 people would resort to civil disobedience during the "Blockade the Bombmakers" protest Monday at the United Nations.

The action would follow by two days an anti-nuclear rally Saturday expected to draw up to 500,000 protesters. The demonstration is coinciding with the U.N. Special Session on Disarmament.

New York City Police Commissioner Robert McGuire did not say how police would deal with the threatened U.N. blockade, but was to meet today with reporters to outline police plans.

Organizers in Canada said Wednesday the U.S.-Canadian border crossing at Peace Arch Park would close for several hours Saturday for a rally expected to draw 50,000 people.

The rally at the border crossing, about 30 miles south of Vancouver, British Columbia, is timed to coincide with the New York demonstration.

Organizers in Vancouver, working with their counterparts in Seattle chose the park on the British Columbia-Washington border for the demonstration because "it is a symbol of international peace and cooperation," rally chairman Frank Kennedy said.

In calling for the blockade in New York, organizers said, "Women and men from all walks of life are resorting to civil disobedience because after 30 years of negotiations, those in power have failed to take concrete steps towards disarmament."

The organizers included the War Resisters League, a pacifist group, and other peace organizations.

Mother Teresa tells grads to stay chaste

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — Nobel prize winner Mother Teresa urged Harvard University graduates to retain their virginity until marriage and condemned abortion as "the greatest evil."

The 72-year-old Roman Catholic nun received a standing ovation Wednesday after her address at Harvard's usually festive Class Day ceremonies, but some students privately questioned the relevance of the virginity plea to the liberal Class of '82.

"Virginity is the greatest gift a man and woman can give to one another," the diminutive Albanian told 20,000 students, parents and guests.

The audience was the largest for a Class Day address in the 16-year history of the event, which is held the day before commencement exercises at the nation's oldest university.

Mother Teresa, who won the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize for her decades of work with the "poorest of the poor" in Calcutta, called abortion "the greatest evil."

"Children are the teachers of love and the most beautiful creations of God," she said. "One of the greatest tragedies is aborting because a woman is afraid of having to feed and educate one more child."

"Those who so fear having a baby that they choose abortion instead are 'the poorest of the poor.'"

The solemnity of the speech was in a sharp contrast to the traditional mood of Class Day, which is marked by picnics, parties and celebrations.

Mother Teresa sat quietly under the huge crimson and white canopy as student speakers joked about their college years. One who preceded Mother Teresa talked lightheartedly about sex, saying, "We know about it, we talk about it and we have sex like everyone else."

Mother Teresa, founder of the Missionaries of Faith order, was selected Class Day speaker after actor Alan Alda of the MASH television series and Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor turned down their invitations, citing previous commitments.

At one point, a dozen Indian orphans adopted by New England families held up a sign saying, "Hello Mother Teresa, from your kids," and then ran to her and hugged her on the podium.

"It was a nice speech," commented graduating senior Christina Munoz afterwards. "She doesn't allow for mistakes."

Robert's son kills self

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Evangelist Oral Roberts' oldest son — who never joined his father's ministry and was convicted last year on a drug charge — died of an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound through the heart, officials say.

A memorial service open to the public was scheduled today at Christ's Chapel at Oral Roberts University for Ronald David Roberts, who apparently shot himself in the chest Wednesday, police said.

Ronald, described by a family friend as a "good kid" who got involved in drugs, was the oldest son of Oral Roberts and the second child of the television evangelist to die at age 37.

His daughter, Rebecca Nash, 37, was killed along with five other people in a 1977 airplane crash near Anthony, Kan. The crash led to a lengthy civil suit that resulted in a recent $8.5 million settlement.

Rep. Thomas J. Hanahan, D-Michigan, a major ERA opponent, called for the vote, saying, "I'm tired of listening to all of the con games on this issue."

Other Democrats pleaded with Hanahan to withdraw his motion, but three more states must approve the measure by June 30. ERA backers have concentrated last-ditch efforts on Illinois, North Carolina, Oklahoma and Florida.

Illinois House votes down ERA voting rules change

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — A proposal to help passage of the Equal Rights Amendment was defeated in the Illinois House, prompting anti-ERA forces to hail the amendment's death.

Rep. Thomas J. Hanahan, D-Michigan, a major ERA opponent, called for the vote, saying, "I'm tired of listening to all of the con games on this issue."

Other Democrats pleaded with Hanahan to withdraw his motion, but three more states must approve the measure by June 30. ERA backers have concentrated last-ditch efforts on Illinois, North Carolina, Oklahoma and Florida.

Last week the North Carolina Senate voted, 27-25, to kill the measure and Wednesday's procedural vote in Illinois gave the STOP-ERA movement cause for celebration.

The amendment, however, is still officially alive in Illinois, the only northern industrial state that has not ratified ERA.

The Illinois procedural vote blocked a crucial rule change that would have required a simple majority for approval rather than a three-fifths majority.

Rep. Susan Catania, R-Chicago, a staunch ERA supporter, refused to concede defeat, although she said, "We're exactly where we started. We have to continue to work for a chance for majority rule."

STOP-ERA Leader Phyllis Schlafly, in the gallery at the time of the vote, proclaimed the death of the 10-year effort to pass the amendment.

"They don't have the vote and what happened today shows that they don't. Why would it be called again? They have done what the people of Illinois want, which is to defeat the ERA," she said.

Also watching the vote were six of seven women in the 23rd day of a fast for ERA. Hungerstriker Shirley Wallace did not travel to the Capitol, saying she feared her fainting spells would make her look like "a fool."

Ms. Wallace and Sonia Johnson, 46, a Mormon excommunicated for her support of ERA, were treated at a hospital earlier this week after they collapsed.

"I never saw such a bunch of little children in all the days of my life," Ms. Johnson said after the vote. "It was appalling. They attacked people personally and called them names."

"I haven't seen anything like this since I was in seventh grade."

Police suspect murder ring of 300 slayings

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Bernard Barton Hunwick, a handsome, friendly man, lives the good life — with a vast wardrobe, a high-powered sports car, a racing boat and parrots on the patio of his $250,000 house.

He financed all that, police contend, by running a murder-for-hire ring that may have carried out as many as 300 contract killings in the East and Midwest since 1977.

The 37-year-old husband of a one-time Playboy Bunny was in jail without bond on charges of murder, kidnapping, attempted murder and armed robbery.

This guy was a professional — one of the biggest hit men in the nation today," said Broward County detective Sgt. Dale Adams. "He employed four or five other hit men. We are linking him directly to organized crime."

Adams said Hunwick had been linked to murders in Boston, Indiana and New Jersey.

Hunwick was arrested in his $250,000 home in an affluent section of suburban Plantation shortly before midnight Tuesday.

"Shock is the best way to describe my reaction," said one neighbor who asked not to be identified. "There were just cars coming and going, but nothing abnormal. He was a very friendly person."

Adams said Hunwick and his wife, who ran a fashion boutique, had moved to the neighborhood only a few months ago.

"One time when they had a party there were a lot of expensive cars," said another neighbor. "And they had parrots on their back patio."

A search of Hunwick's lavish canal-front, two-story home with swimming pool turned up an arsenal of weapons, including two "hit kits" containing automatic handguns, silencers, handcuffs and brass knuckles, detectives said.

Investigators reported they found lists containing names of prospective victims — residents of Lafayette, Ind., Boston and south Florida. The lists contained detailed descriptions of each person and his lifestyle, but authorities declined to reveal the names.

A high-powered rifle and 2 pounds of plastic explosives also were in the home, Adams said.

He said Hunwick, a 6-foot-1, 200-pound, "good-looking guy," employed "debt collectors" who actually were "free-lance hit men."

"He was very professional, he covered his tracks very well," Adams said.

Adams said a single botched job led them to Hunwick.

On May 19, Alan Chafin, 34, was abducted from a Broward County bar, shot five times and left for dead.

"Unfortunately for Hunwick, the guy he shot five times lived — it was a miracle, but he lived. Before that, no one was able to pin him (Hunwick) to a homicide, because he was such a professional," Adams said.

Armed with his description, police found an informant who led them to Hunwick's house.

"He spent many like there's no tomorrow. He had every toy money could buy."

OPINION

Thanks, but I'll just take water

Donald Graff
Syndicated Columnist

On the way to the latest reports on the Falklands and other contemporary disasters, we were sidetracked the other day by a glimpse of the future under a Chicago deli line.

It was an inside page of the Wall Street Journal, whose columns often have as much to say on the business of life as they do on business life, and the subject was the state of the restaurant's art as displayed at a convention of the National Restaurant Association.

The emphasis at the event was on the efforts of restaurant operators to keep profits fat in a lean economy, frequently by serving less. That is not likely to come as news to anyone given the innovative ways of going about it.

technology into kitchens is one. For example, the electronic device complete with digital readout developed for attachment to a meat slicer. It is guaranteed to curb a worker's inclination to be too generous with the portions — a worker, we can only say, who can't be employed in any of the establishments we have patronized recently.

More spectacular by far, however, is the computerized bar. The liquor supply is out sight, locked away in a room "under management key." Drink orders — 1,200 possibilities — are punched into a keyboard. The computer does all the rest — blending a precisely measured drink, delivering it to the customer via dispenser tubes and simultaneously spitting out the bill.

The manufacturers don't mention what effect such lightning-speed service might have on customers, but they guarantee it gives managers total control of their bar operations. No more on the house, or heavy hands pouring those that aren't.

AND THE BARTENDER? In the restaurant's future, clearly a job for Pac-Man, there is the real money-saving focus is on what goes into the menu — or in some cases, what doesn't.

Take the latest in french fries, constructed — and that is the word — from potato pellets to which water is added to make a dough that is cut in strips to be fried in an automated operation with a capacity of 500 servings an hour.

And what are potato pellets? What results, the manufacturer explains, when the original potato is taken apart and reconstituted minus "the things that aren't very good."

If that answers one question, it raises another: Why? And then there are almost-mock-crab sticks that do contain 15 percent of the real thing. The rest is processed fish protein of a more plebeian origin.

They are the creation of a Japanese company that also makes imitation scallops and is working on lobster and shrimp. Almost everything, it would appear, except imitation customers, and it could be that they've even got a good start on that without knowing it.

There's more, but this is more than enough food for a couple of thoughts. Such as if it's true that we are what we eat, the restaurant of the future could really give us something to worry about.

Or to put the Chicago experience another way, having been over into the future of food, we've come back hungry.

VA boss won't cut his fat

WASHINGTON — The man who is tightening the screws on the nation's veterans evidently feels that budget cuts don't apply to him. Veterans administration boss Robert Nimmo has been squandering the taxpayers' money on personal perquisites and creature comforts.

"We have to cut the fat where the fat is," Nimmo has told reporters. But evidence gathered by my associate Jack Mitchell suggests that a lot of the VA fat is located in the administrator's own office.

The word has already leaked out Nimmo is tight with veterans but generous to himself. In fact, both the General Accounting Office and the VA's own inspector general are looking into allegations of impropriety — and possible illegality — in Nimmo's operation.

THE INVESTIGATORS are checking, for example, on broadcast reports that Nimmo spent $46,000 to redecorate his private office suite, apparently in defiance of President Reagan's direct order to all federal agencies against such refurbishing.

The economy-preaching Nimmo allegedly has spent official funds remodeling an elevator for the exclusive use of himself and his top aides. And GAO sleuths are looking into reports that Nimmo used a government car and chauffeur to travel to and from his suburban home — which not only flouted regulations but cost the taxpayers an estimated $8,000 in overtime for the chauffeur.

Nimmo's travel habits should also be scrutinized. He has made frequent trips to his home state of California — often flying first-class. On one occasion, he allegedly commandeered a military plane for his return trip to Washington.

His congressional liaison chief, Fielding Cochran, flew off with other Reagan officials to Rome in the middle of a bitter battle over Capitol Hill over the VA's $24 billion budget request.

NIMMO MIGHT be forgiven some of his lordly ways if he were in fact bringing tight, no-nonsense management to the agency he heads. Unfortunately, this doesn't seem to be the case.

Of five top officials named to key administrative posts just months ago, two have quit and a third has been relieved of his original duties. Nimmo's first No. 2 man, Alan Clark, quickly departed because of friction with the boss, and White House sources have confirmed that the current deputy, Chuck Hagel, has submitted a tentative resignation and wants to leave within 60 days.

A big part of the problem, according to insiders, is that Nimmo stubbornly refuses to let decisions be made at the staff level. Yet the VA boss, a wealthy former California legislator, seems more enthusiastic about his sun and his golf game than about his official duties. He reportedly was playing golf on the afternoon in March when the Vietnam Veterans Memorial was dedicated a few blocks from his Washington office. Meanwhile, he rejected suggestions that VA funds be allowed to attend the ceremony on the grounds that it was conducted during business hours.

The resulting administrative chaos at the VA has caused Nimmo, a World War II veteran, to be roundly denounced by virtually every veterans group, whose Washington representatives usually try to play down their differences with a VA chief.

Footnote: Nimmo declined to be interviewed. In fairness, it should be noted that the administration's cutting efforts would inevitably generate hostility toward the agency head who must enforce them. But Nimmo's lackadaisical attitude toward his job was illustrated by his admission to Congress that he has never had a conversation with the president devoted exclusively to veterans' affairs.

Violent chain hard to break

In a courtroom in Washington, the parents of John Hinckley sit as their son is tried for the attempted assassination of the president.

In another courtroom in Vermont several months ago, another similar scene was taking place, as the sordid story of another young man unfolded. Both cases, one celebrated, the other only a bit less so, illustrate the awesome power of the family in the development of the adult. Hinckley's parents ask themselves, "What did we do wrong?" They say, publicly, that all they wanted for their son was for him to "be happy."

But there is no glimpse into the private life of that family as it was growing. There's no indication of what went wrong to cause a young man to live out his life in fantasy, and finally to stalk a president.

But in Vermont, where two teenagers were tried for the rapes, torture, and eventual death of one of two 12-year-old children they attacked on their way home from school, the message is very clear.

The sins of the father have been visited upon the son, and the results have been terrifying. One teen, only 15 when the attacks occurred, could not be tried as an adult. The other, 16 at the time, was convicted and sent to prison.

The crime was horrible, and the graphic accounts of the children's ordeal shocked the entire nation. But the 16-year-old's life as a young man made the eventual outcome seem almost inescapable. Social workers refer to it as the cycle of abuse. It's what happens to the children of parents who were abused themselves as children. Abused children learn abuse at the knees of their parents; they learn of no other way to deal with the frustrations of life and parenthood. And they, in turn, abuse their children. The cycle remains unbroken until someone intervenes.

In the Vermont family, the father raped both his daughter and son. He in turn was abused as a child. In such a deprived environment, is it any surprise that his son grew up angry and violent?

Is it any surprise that he worked out his anger and impotence on the innocent bodies of two little girls? He told them they would know what it was like to "die like a pig," as he raped and stabbed and tortured them. "What went wrong?" people ask. It is only too obvious. Born and bred into a home where violence and disrespect ruled, where there was no understanding of the problems involved, where there was no attempt to help, he had no chance.

The little girl he killed had less of a chance, and her family had been permanently deprived of her. But what is even more criminal than the original crime, is that the cycle of abuse will continue. That young teen will be eligible for parole in plenty of time for him to have children. Their legacy is horrifying.

What about beekeepers' rights?

To the Editor:

How many times have we been told by the big corporations that it's safe and it won't hurt us? How many times have the same companies quieted the little man who protested against their poisonous products or drowned him out with their costly advertising propaganda so he would be categorized as an alarmist?

J.J. Rodale started publishing Organic Farming and Gardening in May, 1942. Prevention was his other magazine and over the years he pointed out the dangers of chemicals and told his readers how to garden and eat properly with methods that harmonized with nature. He was criticized by the establishment for spreading the doctrine that "the world is a biological organism, not a chemical laboratory."

It took 25 years for Americans to realize that Mr. Rodale has been right all those years and was not a leader of faddists, as spokesmen for the chemical companies and medical doctors had been saying. DDT was finally banned, the truth about other chemicals once accepted as harmless made the headlines and people started reading labels on the products they bought.

Packaged food labels started advertising in eye-catching ways — all natural, no additives, no sugar etc. There was an absolute need to accommodate the consumer who wanted food that wasn't contaminated with junk!

Sevin is junk! It is industrial waste that will raise havoc with the natural balance of nature that we as humans depend so much on. We are already hearing of the careless use of this chemical by inconsiderate, lazy and ignorant people. It is very obvious they would spend more time researching a color television than finding out the pros and cons on Sevin. All that matters is that it kills. Yes, it kills bees also!

John Muzikevik is a beekeeper and a neighbor not far from where I live. I have never met the man but I feel for him because a neighbor of his sprayed Sevin and it killed his bees. Not only did his bees die but he took a financial loss that I'm sure he only will have to absorb.

As far as I'm concerned his rights as a taxpayer citizen were trespassed upon. His property was

Stacked? No

To the Editor:

I am tired of hearing the Coventry Taxpayers Association cry that something is stacked when it doesn't go its way. The group makes every effort to stack things in its favor.

How? Group members distribute inaccurate and misleading information immediately before a referendum vote, leaving no time for anyone to present with accurate information. And they discourage attendance at our Annual Town Meeting by inaccurately publicizing that no vote will be taken on the budget then.

They do not tell you that only those present and voting at a legally assembled town meeting have the right to make that decision.

Now they are crying that a Charter Revision Commission which doesn't even exist yet may be stacked. In fact, the previous Town Council appointed two of the CTA's current officers and one of its sympathizers to the last seven member Charter Revision Commission. If anything, that commission was stacked in favor of the CTA when you consider the size of the CTA membership list.

When will the CTA realize that it does not represent the views of all the taxpayers in Coventry, despite its claims to the contrary? I'm surprised it didn't cry that last November's election was stacked after it lost so badly.

destroyed and he has been inconvenienced. What was done to him is basically the same as if someone had cut down his trees or broken his windows. Who is going to protect his rights or the other beekeepers in this state? Does the law of this state do him justice?

Just for the record, here are the facts. The Italian honey bee is not an aggressive stinging insect that attacks people like some of the members of the wasp and hornet families. Honey bees are intelligent creatures that live in a well organized social structure and we could learn a lot from them.

Plants do not reproduce like animals simply because they are stationary. Some plants can be pollinated by wind but many rely on the honey bee, bumblebee, and other insects.

Honey is another way in which we benefit from the honey bee. Honey and white sugar are both sweeteners, but white sugar has no nutritional value and honey does! Mr. Rodale warned his readers about white sugar long ago and just in the past few years the media of communications has repeated Mr. Rodale's words!

Did any of you readers out there ever read "Silent Spring" by Rachel Carson or wasn't it the type of soap opera that interested you?

O'Neill disturbed by Shedd's handling of error

HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. William O'Neill says he was upset over the actions of state Education Commissioner Mark Shedd in handling an error in calculating state school aid payments to municipalities.

O'Neill said Wednesday he was "very disturbed" over Shedd's actions and said the commissioner "would be in very serious trouble" if he were directly accountable to the governor.

O'Neill, however, declined to say whether he was satisfied with the state Board of Education's disciplining Tuesday of Shedd over the latest error in calculating aid to towns.

It was the second reprimand of Shedd within a year by the Board of Education. Shedd was fined a part of his salary last year because of a $29 million error in calculating school grants.

Shedd was under fire for failing to disclose the latest error, involving a mistake in counting welfare students, which had been going on since 1973.

In other matters, O'Neill signed into law several pieces of major legislation, vetoed a tax on New York commuters and said he has no present plans to convene the Legislature to deal with the flood disaster.

O'Neill said he planned to send to President Reagan today the actual assessment of the millions of dollars in damage from the weekend floods.

The governor said at the bill signing ceremony he would "not hesitate" to call a special session of the Legislature if more funds are needed, but "I do not plan to do so at this time."

Meanwhile, House Speaker Ernest Abate of Stamford, who is challenging O'Neill for the Democratic Party's nomination for governor, called on O'Neill to call a special session "immediately."

O'Neill spoke during ceremonies signing a variety of bills into law. They included creation of a special state commission to assist Vietnam veterans in dealing with social and medical problems caused by Agent Orange and other defoliants.

Another bill signed by O'Neill further restricts the state's investments in South Africa as a protest to that country's segregation policy.

The law directs the state Treasurer to divest as soon as possible, investments in any company doing business in South Africa and to no longer invest in any stocks or obligations of such institutions after July 1.

Another bill extends the protection provisions of the condominium law for five more years. The new version of the law eliminates the income limits for persons 62 or older who are protected from eviction in proposed condominium conversions.

O'Neill vetoed a bill that would have raised $16 million by taxing some 40,000 New Yorkers who commute to Connecticut jobs. O'Neill said he did not want a "border war" with neighboring states and felt the tax was unconstitutional.

Whalers draft skilled performers

HARTFORD (UPI) — The Hartford Whalers sought young players who were good skaters and skilled at their positions in the 1982 National Hockey League draft. Bob Crocker, the team's assistant director of hockey operations says.

Left wing Paul Lawless, who played junior hockey last season with the Windsor Spitfires, Wednesday was the Whalers' first selection in the NHL draft in Montreal.

A Whalers spokesman said Lawless, the 14th player selected in the draft, was "a scorer and he has speed" but might need a year of minor league seasoning before playing full time in Hartford.

"I'm not sure I'll make the team this year, but I don't really care. Lawless said in a telephone interview from Montreal. "My weak point is my defensive play. My strong point is my skating. I have no problem there."

Lawless, who turns 18 next month, played in 68 games for the Spitfires, scoring 24 goals and picking up 25 assists.

Lawless, 5-foot-11, 181 pounds, was one of 11 players drafted by the Whalers, who did not have a 10th-round selection.

Defenseman Mark Paterson, 18, 5-foot-11, 176 pounds, was Hartford's second-round selection. He played for the Ottawa 67's last season, scoring four goals and picking up 14 assists.

Hartford's third-round choice was defenseman Kevin Dineen of Denver University. He scored 10 goals and had 10 assists.

"We drafted on the basis of skill," Crocker said in a telephone

Oddsmakers favor champion Holmes

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Otago champion heavyweight boxing Larry Holmes should win Friday night's title fight hands down. A handicapper for unbeaten challenger Gerry Cooney is afraid Holmes might win the fight thumbs up.

Holmes, 38, who is 6-foot-4, is an 85 favorite to successfully defend his crown against Cooney, the top-ranked challenger with a 25-0 record and 21 knockouts, in the bout in a parking lot at Caesars Palace. Cooney said Wednesday he's "had lots of fights in parking lots, but one of his managers said there could be another one against Holmes."

"We're concerned about thumping tactics used by Gerry Holmes," said Dennis Rappaport, Cooney's co-manager. "We have seen accusations of thumping after Holmes fought Scott Leedom after he fought Mike Weaver and after he fought Earnie Shavers. Shavers wound up with a detached retina after fighting Holmes."

"Let me say that if he (Cooney) is thumped and the referee does not rigorously enforce the rules, this will become an alley brawl. We'll tell Gerry to keep him off if he has to. We'll get down as low as we have to go."

Eddie Futch, Holmes' normally docile chief trainer, turned tiger after the accusations.

"Larry Holmes is a fair fighter," Futch said. "I don't know why Mr. Rappaport would bring this up. I don't ever remember Larry ever doing anything illegal. He is a good fighter and he knows his trade."

Futch then made some charges of his own.

"This seems to be a preamble to the use of elbows and forearm and other tactics described by Mr. Cooney's style," Futch said. "They're trying to make excuses before the fight. I don't think this line of talk does any place in a conference."

Ray Arcel, the 64-year-old trainer who also works in Holmes' corner, also was angered by Rappaport's claims.

"This is a throwback to the old days," said Arcel, who has been in boxing since 1917. "Boxing is the art of defense—it's hit and don't get hit. Larry Holmes is a masterful boxer. I have been involved with boxing for quite a long time, and other lads who describe Mr. Cooney as being in the corner of hundreds of fighters. I never accused any of them of foul play or anything. Accidents happen but very few skaters and skilled at their positions.

—Defenseman Randy Cameron, 16, 6-foot-3, 195 pounds, who played for the Winnipeg Warriors, scoring three goals and picking up six assists in 68 games last season.

Dineen, a son of former NHL player Bill Dineen, also "possesses tremendous skills and competitiveness," Crocker said.

"This is the first time we've gone into the draft with a philosophy of looking for good skaters and skilled players," he said, "and we feel we accomplished that goal."

However, he said, the Whalers' 17 draft picks "are just prospects and might fall flat on their faces. Only time will prove how good they will turn out."

The Whalers' eight other selections were:

—Defenseman Ulf Samuelsson, 18, 6-foot-1, 181 pounds, who played at the Cornwall Royals, scoring 3 goals and picking up four assists in 50 games.

—Center-left wing Martin Laine, 19, 6-foot-2, 187 pounds, who played at Djurgardens, Sweden. Last season, his statistics were unavailable.

—Defenseman Randy Cameron, 16, 6-foot-3, 195 pounds, who played for the Winnipeg Warriors, scoring three goals and picking up six assists in 68 games last season.

GERRY COONEY ALL SERIOUS while working on speed bag in last training session fighters would deliberately try to thumb an opponent. Accidents happen, but you can rest assured that nobody who boxed Larry Holmes has been thumbed. I have never heard reports like that."

Arcel then leveled his own blast at Rappaport.

"I think it's unfair for Mr. Rappaport to make these accusations, but you have to forgive Mr. Rappaport because he is not truly an experienced boxing man," Arcel said. "You don't hear Victor Valle (Cooney's trainer) saying things like this. No man in the boxing game who has any experience would make a statement like that. I'm ashamed that he would say it."

"This is a young, strong, ambitious fighter with power in his left hand. He also has learned to use his right hand. He should be a better fighter than in the past because the biggest prize in boxing is ahead of him—the heavyweight title. He has the equipment, but we feel we can nullify that equipment."

Cooney said he was ready for his biggest test.

"This fight means everything to me," the 6-foot-6 challenger said.

"My strength is building up now and I feel ready."

Cooney also admitted he was a bit nervous.

"You've got to be realistic," he said. "I'm a human being and anyone would be nervous right now. I can say I'm glad the fight is here. I've waited and trained a long time. Now, it's time to fight."

Asked for a prediction on when the fight would end, the power-punching Cooney said quietly, "The first chance I get."

Valle said the usually affable Cooney changes dramatically when he steps into a ring.

"Gerry is a tough kid. He's very hard. He did a lot of hard work in his life. He's very intense in the ring. He changes from a human being to a beast. I can see it in his eye."

Holmes remains an 85 favorite. The New England Patriots, who along with Baltimore had the worst record in the NFL despite owning the league's fifth highest payroll, signed No. 1 draft choice Kenneth Sims to a four-year contract Wednesday which may in time make him the highest paid player in team history.

Sims' deal, negotiated by his agent, Will Stewart, features a $1 million signing bonus, a loan from the Patriots at nominal interest.

Girls finally finalists

Thoughts Aplenty
Len Auster,
Herald Sportswriter

One 'monkey' has finally been lifted off the Manchester High girls' softball program. Indian editions repeatedly had pounded on the door that granted entry to the state Class LL championship but could make no headway.

Well, Tuesday afternoon at roughly 5 o'clock in Meriden, the Silk Towners not only showed in the door but also cracked it wide open with a 10-7 win over North Haven. That moved the locals into the state championship (H Friday night at Raybestos Field in Stratford) at 8 o'clock.

"It was very frustrating personally," replied 10-year Manchester Coach Mary Faignant, speaking of not gaining entry to the finals, "but we finally have the monkey off our back. It's a feeling of relief."

The Faignant/Manchester record has been nothing short of sensational the past five campaigns. Going into the championship with the three-year win-loss total stands 85-21 with five Central Connecticut Interscholastic League (CCLL) titles secured. The 1978 '80 and '81 clubs were Class LL semifinalists while the '79 crew achieved the quarterfinal round.

But neither Manchester nor Faignant, until Tuesday, had ever earned the right to play at Raybestos Field.

Now they have and with every intent of coming home a winner. "I hope it doesn't take four tries in the finals," quipped Faignant, following the win over North Haven.

There's one thing making a state final. The important aspect to remember is to perform.

Both sides foolish

There is a distinct lack of intelligence shown by both the state umpires' board and American Legion in their current disposition. The arbiters refuse to give Legion contests this summer because of Zone Seven's insistence on underwriting an agreed upon pay scale. The Legion refuses to bow down to the umpires' demands that only state approved umpires be employed.

SNAPU.

And so who gets it in the end? The youngsters, naturally. Who cares about them, right?

There is a simple solution, if one wants it. The State Legion should deem any and all Zone Seven contests illegal. The arbiters should not go without criticism, as well. The umpires, who've been known to be blind on the field, have shown their poor vision of if they've used the youngsters as a wedge to get their demands met.

Legion baseball players statewide should not be penalized by the action of a select group. Norwich, if anyone, should suffer the consequences. The umpires' board's decision to refuse to work games shows their shortsightedness.

With the dispute there seems to be the question of who really cares about the game.

Old foe

The Indians' foe in the finals is Southington High, defending champ and three-time titlist. The Knights also won the '78 and '79 crowns. Southington in '78, '79 and '80 eliminated the Silk Towners in post-season play.

Southington took the '78 quarterfinal by a 14-6 count, banging out 14 hits. It scored six times in the sixth to break a 6-0 deadlock. The Knights the following season took a 6-1 duke behind Irene Mach's two-hit pitching. And a year ago Southington scored four times in the sixth to break a 4-3 semifinal triumph.

How does Faignant feel about facing Southington again? "That's fine with us," she responded. "We figured we made it to the finals they'd be the other team. We've encountered them so often in recent years we would like another crack at them," offered 10-

One's perfect while the other has that intent in mind.

Defending state Class LL girls' softball champ Southington High is 3-for-3 in title games while Manchester High will be making its first appearance in a final when the pair clash Friday night at Raybestos Field in Stratford at 8 o'clock.

The Blue Knights, who ousted Manchester a year ago in a semifinal, advanced to the '82 championship with a 4-2 10-inning decision over Norwich.

"Larry is a disciplined fighter. He does what he has to do. He respects Gerry Cooney as a fighter and will do what it takes to win," said Valle. "Larry is a young, strong, ambitious fighter with power in his left hand. He also has learned to use his right hand. He should be a better fighter than in the past because the biggest prize in boxing is ahead of him—the heavyweight title. He has the equipment, but we feel we can nullify that equipment."

Cooney said he was ready for his biggest test.

"This fight means everything to me," the 6-foot-6 challenger said.

Curtin, along with her hill work, has swung the biggest stick for Manchester with a .413 batting average and 24 RBI. Senior captain and third baseman Karen Wright swings a .381 stick with 18 RBI followed by junior centerfielder Patti Wojnarowski (.338, 14 RBI), junior rightfielder Toby Brooks (.321, 11 RBI) and sophomore shortstop Jen Kohut (.319, 14 RBI).

Faignant believes Southington has a slight advantage, having been to Raybestos before. "They've been there and have a feel for the game. But I feel we can overcome that disadvantage," she states. Piazza isn't as positive. "It may be to our advantage having been there before with the hoopla and the fans. It's an advantage to us a little bit as far as nerves. But it may be against us in that it's nervous about repeating," he temperes.

"Having a good pitcher and defense, sometimes we get complacent. We score 3-4 (runs) early and figure that's enough."

Leadoff slicker Ann Ringrose, the only senior starter, is hitting at a .345 clip for Southington with younger sisp Lin Ringrose (.309) and a team-leading 19 RBI. Sophomore Paige Kopca and junior Donna Lebel are hitting .375 and .370 respectively for the Knights. "I'm super," advised seven-year

Moriarty's rally to win, gain Twi lead

Single runs in the sixth and seventh innings emboldened Moriarty Bros. to get past Langan VW, 4-3, in Twilight Baseball League play last night at McAliffes Park in East Hartford.

The win lifts the Gas Housers to 1-1 and atop the Twi standings with eight points. Langan, which suffered its first loss to slip to 3-4, shares second place with Society for Savings, each with six points.

Brewers have faith in Kuenn

NEW YORK (UPI) — Milwaukee Brewers players think they now have a good chance to win the American League East title with Harvey Kuenn leading them. They love him. What's more, they're completely relaxed around him, the same as they were under George Bamberger.

Kuenn never has looked for any special treatment because he has an artificial leg. He kids about it and so do the Brewers. Shortstop Robin Yount, congratulating Kuenn on being named manager before he took over the team for the first time last week, said to him, "With our luck, there'll be an argument in deep center field with an umpire tonight and it'll take you all night to get back." Nobody laughed louder than Kuenn.

And nobody got a bigger lift out of a single victory, his first in a month, than Tom Seaver did in beating the Mets last Friday night. The Red Sox 37-year-old right-hander, who was 4-2 last year, is 2-6 now and had just about reached the end of his rope trying to figure out what was wrong. Enemy hitters say he has gone to throwing the splitter at times. Oh, no, Tom Seaver, the All-American boy. "There goes the last of my illusions..."

Yankees manager Gene Michael glows every time he talks about Lou Pinella, his 37-year-old outfielder who looks like a better hitter now than he was at any previous point in his career. "He has been as good, if not better, than anyone we have for the times he has gone to bat," Michael says. "He does so much more than just hit. He knows how to run the bases and how to keep his momentum..."

Sims satisfied with Pats' pact

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — The New England Patriots, who along with Baltimore had the worst record in the NFL despite owning the league's fifth highest payroll, signed No. 1 draft choice Kenneth Sims to a four-year contract Wednesday which may in time make him the highest paid player in team history.

Sims' deal, negotiated by his agent, Will Stewart, features a $1 million signing bonus, a loan from the Patriots at nominal interest.

Peeters traded for McCrimmon

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Philadelphia Flyers finally broke up their three-goal logjam Wednesday when they traded Pete Peeters to the Boston Bruins for defenseman Brad McCrimmon.

The Flyers announced the deal for McCrimmon after the two prize defensemen in the NHL draft — Gord Kluzak and Gary Nyland — were traded to the Bruins.

resentment talking about how times have changed, but his feelings are obvious even though he laughs when he expresses them.

"In 1965, I got absolutely nothing when I was named MVP in the Stanley Cup playoffs," he says. "One year later, they attached a new car to the award. I'm always one year too late." Don't believe that. If you ever saw Jean Beliveau play, then you know he was NEVER late for anything...

Look for the new U.S. football League to name George Allen, John Ralston and Red Miller as three of its new coaches in the near future. Even with the two-year TV contract it signed with ABC, the USFL has a good future. Each of the league's 12 teams can expect to lose something like $6 million a year for the first three years, and if it can hold out that long, the USFL can then think about merging with the NFL the way the AFL did...

Harrison Dillard, the former Olympic hurdler and sprinter who worked with the Yankees on their running last spring, says there are faster players than Willie Randolph in both leagues but no one has any better running technique. "He has what we call an easy, economical style," Dillard says. "That's what enables him to cover as much ground as he does." Dillard isn't sure at all that hurling champ Renaldo Nehemiah, who has been signed by the San Francisco 49ers, will make it as a wide receiver with the NFL club. "He hasn't played football since he was in high school," Dillard says. "He would be laid off the game five years. That's quite a while. I've got some strong doubts about whether he'll make it or not in pro football."

Nolan tough once he got started

By Mike Tully
UPI Sports Writer

Like the Baltimore Orioles, Joe Nolan just needed a little while to get started. Well, maybe a long while.

"It's about time I started hitting," Nolan said Wednesday night after hitting a three-run homer and singling in another run to help the Orioles complete a three-game sweep of Milwaukee with an 8-3 victory.

"It feels good to contribute," continued Nolan, who entered the game hitting .148. "I was struggling. I still am. One game doesn't take you out of it. But you have to walk before you can run."

Nolan looked like he was doing handstands. He stalked the Orioles to a 3-0 lead in the second when he tagged starter Moose Haas, 3-3, for his first homer of the season. His blast over the right-field wall followed a walk to Jim Dwyer and a single to Cal Ripken.

The heavy hitting represented the biggest dividend paid by Nolan since he was acquired in spring training two minor leaguers.

"I don't feel a part of the team when I come here and start off with a bad streak," Nolan said. "I've never been off to such a poor start in my life. I had to huck back-to-back 300 seasons so I know I'm a better

Maine triumphs in World Series

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — Maine's Mark Sutton slapped a two-run triple to center field in the seventh inning to make up for an earlier error and lead Maine to an 8-5 triumph over Stanford in the College World Series Wednesday night.

It was the second straight game in which Maine, 34-13, eliminated a West Coast qualifier. The Black Bears Sunday sent Cal State-Fullerton packing with a 6-9 win.

North Stars land top prize Brian Bellows

MONTREAL (UPI) — It took some fast wheeling and dealing, but the Minnesota North Stars managed to hook the prize they sought at the NHL amateur entry draft — and the prize is just as pleased as they are.

The North Stars sent defenseman Brad Palmer and minor-league Gary Dave Donnelly to the Boston Bruins Wednesday in exchange for "draft considerations," which allowed them to pick pre-draft favorite Brian Bellows, a high-scoring right winger with the Kitchener Rangers of the Ontario Hockey League.

The Bruins, using the pick they acquired in the deal that sent Dwight Foster to the Colorado Rockies, made Gord Kluzak, a 6-foot-4, 200-pound defenseman, the first overall choice of the 252 players selected in the draft, leaving Bellows to the North Stars.

Minnesota, selecting second overall as a result of a trade with Detroit, picked Bellows, a 5-foot-11, 194-pounder who played 47 games for Kitchener last year.

Bellows, who had been touted as the top choice for two years, was not disappointed at being chosen second in the lottery.

"Minnesota was the team that wanted me and I wanted to go there," said the 17-year-old native of St. Catharines, Ont. "I think Boston had to go with who they thought was best, and they thought that was Kluzak."

Bellows registered 45 goals and 52 hits.

Baltimore chased Haas with a five-run sixth. Ken Singleton led off with a single and, with two outs, Dwyer walked. Both scored on Ripken's second double of the night.

In completing the sweep, Baltimore won its fifth straight, a feat that does not surprise manager Earl Weaver.

Royals 8, Twins 3
At Minneapolis, Amos Oltis hit a three-run homer and George Brett drove in two runs with a double and triple as Kansas City extended its winning streak to eight games. Paul Splittorf, 5-4, dealt the Twins their 15th loss in the last 20 games.

's 5, White Sox 4
At Chicago, Tony Armas hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning, snapping a 2-2 tie and helping Oakland break a five-game losing streak. The loss was LaMarr Hoyt's first at Coniskey Park after 18 straight victories. Matt Keough, 5-7, pitched the last 1 2/3 innings to pick up his fourth complete game of the season.

Mariners 4, Rangers 3
At Arlington, Texas, Richie Zisk struck out Manny Castillo from second base with one out in the 11th for the Mariners. Ed Vandenberg, 4-1, pitched the last 1 2/3 innings to pick up the victory.

Blue Jays 5, Angels 4
At Toronto, pinch hitter Al Woods' RBI groundout with none out in the ninth capped a two-run rally for the Blue Jays. Woods' bases-loaded bouncer made a winner of Jerry McLaughlin, 3-3, who pitched the final inning, and dropped Doug Perranico to 1-4.

Pirates 2-3, Indians 1-3
At Detroit, Toby Harrah belted a tape-measure, two-run homer in the eighth inning to tie the score 3-3. The game will be resumed on Aug. 24.

In the opener, Jerry Turner cracked a two-run homer in the seventh and Jack Morris pitched a seven-inning, two-run game.

assists for 33 points during the Ontario Hockey League's regular season and played a major role in the Rangers' Memorial Cup triumph.

Bruins' general manager Harry Sinden maintained Kluzak was his first choice all along.

"There were many good players I had to sort out," said Sinden, who was reported to have arrived at the NHL's June Congress this week with sweaters bearing the names of the Bruins and Florida Winter Hawks' defenseman Gary Nyland.

"There was a split in the Boston high command, but not in the end. The native of Clinton, Maine, said the injury he had in college checked out, it was Kluzak all the way."

Kluzak, a gangly but mobile defenseman, was limited duty at Billings last season because of torn ligaments in his left knee. The native of Clinton, Maine, said the injury has completely healed.

He played 38 games with Billings in the Western Hockey League, scoring nine goals and 24 assists for 33 points while accumulating 110 minutes in penalties.

Bellows was one of 60 players from the Ontario Hockey League chosen in the annual draft and Kluzak was among 16 picked from the western circuit. As well, the 21 NHL teams chose 36 Europeans, 37 players with U.S. high schools, 29 with U.S. colleges, 19 from 21 junior 17 players from the Quebec Junior

Teens find self-control in faith

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the 19-year-old Texas "boy" who "tested his manhood" by getting two girls pregnant, let me tell you about another 19-year-old boy's test of "manhood":

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

He has been my special friend almost two years. Six months ago, he asked me to marry him. He talked to my father, explaining that because of our ages (I'm 18), finances and college ahead of us, it will be some time before we can marry. We are normal teen-agers with the same desires as other kids and very much in love. Many miles separate us, and we see each other only once every six weeks, but we have stayed with our commitment to keep our relationship pure and holy. His test of "manhood": When he is tempted to go beyond a kiss, he has me

DEAR ABBY: About that woman who was constantly using a breath-freshener spraying publicly and in mid-sentence: I worked with two women who did that. I later learned that both were party drinkers.

This can result in acute discomfort, tooth decay, inability to eat, swallow or talk, as well as difficulty in wearing dentures. Mouthwashes containing various saliva substitutes are being used by increasing numbers of these people. While this should be done in private, it is obviously not always possible.

Arthritis is a puzzling disease

DEAR DR. LAMB: I have rheumatoid arthritis and I was taking gold shots with good results until I broke out in a very bad rash. I am 29 years old with two children. I still cannot accept the fact that this condition can cause so much pain. Now I am taking the new drug penicillamine and am hoping for good results. I have taken it for three months. undergo unexplained spontaneous remissions, sometimes for long periods. Such remissions may not be related to any medicines at all. That makes it hard to tell if a medicine is doing what you want it to do or not.

Gold has proved to be a very good aid in many cases that can't be managed adequately by more conservative measures. And penicillamine is also used in those cases in which other conservative treatment has not produced satisfactory results. It is not for everyone. It can affect the bone marrow's ability to produce white blood cells and that is what your doctors are watching in your case. If it is too toxic for the body, then it should be discontinued.

Rheumatoid arthritis is not the same as osteoarthritis, which is common in people in later years. It is an inflammatory process as explained in The Health Letter number 4-11, Rheumatoid Arthritis, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10101.

You are young and I'd like to give you some encouragement. Each year new discoveries about rheumatoid arthritis are being made. Recently, studies suggest that some cases may be caused by a virus that can be isolated. These and other studies suggest that the day will come when rheumatoid

You are young and I'd like to give you some encouragement. Each year new discoveries about rheumatoid arthritis are being made. Recently, studies suggest that some cases may be caused by a virus that can be isolated. These and other studies suggest that the day will come when rheumatoid arthritis can be treated effectively without using strong drugs. And there may one day even be a vaccine to prevent some forms of rheumatoid arthritis. DEAR DR. LAMB: I'm concerned about wrinkles. My neck looks like crepe paper. I'm a female, 59 years old, 4 feet 11 and weight 105 pounds. I can't take estrogen because of cancer I had several years ago. What can I eat or take or rub on to help? I don't drink except a little wine now and then and do not smoke.

DEAR READER: You may get some help with a moisturizer technique. Trapping moisture in the skin area that bothers you may plump it out and make the wrinkles less noticeable. There is no better moisturizer than petroleum jelly, also known as petrolatum, and one common brand is Vaseline.

DEAR READER: I'm not surprised. He is used to one of kind mother and all of a sudden, without any explanation, he has another kind. Not only that, but since you are now doing less for him, he may think he has done something wrong to cause this change.

Too old for school?

DEAR DR. BLAKER: I have just finished my first year of graduate school in social work and I am about to register for an intensive summer term. For some reason — I think it's the money — I can't get myself to send in the registration. Sometimes I wonder whether it is really very smart to try to become a professional woman at the ripe old age of 32. There are so many young people out there who would benefit more from this wonderful education I am experiencing because they live to use in helping people. But that is really beside the point. Why do you think I'm stuck in a midstream?

Ask Dr. Blaker
Karen Blaker, Ph.D.

DEAR READER: Your doubts about whether or not you deserve a graduate education are probably getting in the way of your registration for that intensive course. A master's degree in social work takes two years and you have already completed one. You are about to make a commitment to a summer term that will take you more than halfway toward the degree. At that point, you no doubt would finish up. So this is really the last time you could logically pull out. I would encourage you to continue toward your goal. It is never too late to build for the future. This is your only opportunity to succeed in this way. And we only pass this way once. Good luck.

DEAR DR. BLAKER: I hate to admit it but I have been an over-protective mother to my 16-year-old son and now I am living to regret it. I am still very close to him but I am beginning to see that he is not as mature as other children his age. I have started to change my behavior a bit. For example, I no longer make his bed but expect him to keep his room clean. My problem is that my son doesn't understand this change and feels angry and rejected by this new state of affairs.

The camp is offered free of charge to 50 Manchester children, ages 6 through 11, who are referred by social workers. Bus transportation is provided.

Daily activities include arts and crafts, games, songs, sports and swimming. Field trips are planned, along with other special events.

In order to operate, the camp relies on contributions from the public. Careful planning has kept the cost of the camp at $1,500 for the two-week period, camp officials said. They said the churches in the conference help keep the cost down by providing the snacks and hot lunches for the campers and staff.

Residents are asked to consider sponsoring a child for one week with a $15 donation to the camp, or for two weeks with a $30 donation. Checks can be dropped off at the MACC office in St. Bartholomew Church, or mailed to P.O. Box 774. Contributions will directly benefit the children. The camp director and the entire staff are all volunteers.

GETTING READY FOR GRADUATION CEREMONIES
Mrs. Cornish surrounded by nursery students

Cornish is retiring from nursery school

By Barbara Richmond
Herald Reporter

Fathers didn't take much part in the YWCA nursery school when Marianne Cornish of 79 Harlan St. started there 20 years ago.

Mrs. Cornish, who will be honored at a reception at the Y on Sunday on the occasion of her retirement, says dads hardly ever came to parents meetings.

"When I started you hardly ever saw a father. Now they are just as involved as the mothers, and they participate actively in the program," she says.

The YWCA nursery school was one of the first in town. It has been in existence for almost 30 years. When the school first opened, it operated five days a week and the same children were involved for the five days. Now it's divided into two groups — one that attends two days a week and one for three days.

"I have been responsible for 52 families and children and it used to be just 22," Mrs. Cornish says.

"We started out with absolutely no equipment, except for some crayons and tables. Now, 20 years later, we have what I think is one of the best-equipped nursery schools around," she added.

Of course, the crayons and tables are still important props for any nursery school. But added to that are other things like mini-sized furniture for playing house and all kinds of games. The children even get to do some cooking.

Her love for children and her love of working with them has also led Mrs. Cornish to do volunteer work at Luz Children's Museum. She also volunteers at the Veterans Home and Hospital in Newington.

Her plans for the future include doing a lot more in the arts and crafts. "I have a loom and plan to be doing a lot of weaving and other things I haven't had the time to do over the past 20 years," she says.

During the time she's been director at the YWCA, she has also been a partner in a craft business called "Flowers Cut to Last."

Mrs. Cornish would love to greet former students and their parents, at the reception on Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Y, 79 N. Main St.

Pet of the week

Sweet King needs a home

"King," a male shepherd crossbreed estimated to be about 8 weeks old, will be ready for adoption Friday. The puppy is at the town dog pound where he was brought after being picked up on East Center Street by Dog Warden Richard Rand.

Rand, who makes up names for the dogs at the pound, said he almost named this puppy "Boots" because he has four white spots. He said he has the markings of a shepherd except for the four white paws.

Rand said King will probably turn out to be a medium-sized dog. He has a sweet disposition and is very friendly.

Last week's "Adopt a Pet" was adopted, as were two others. Rand said he had to put two other dogs to sleep because no one claimed or adopted them.

Nine dogs were at the pound on Tuesday. Among the nine is a blue-eyed, black and white dog that appears to be part Pekinese, a shy black poodle which seems to have a problem with one eye, a cute beagle, one that appears to be a golden retriever and part setter, and a black Labrador retriever.

Rand said all seem to be well behaved.

Rand advertises the dogs when they are picked up and the rightful owner has seven days to claim them. Anyone wishing to inquire about King or any of the other dogs should call him at the pound, 643-8545, or at the Manchester Police Department, 646-4555.

KING IS LIVELY HANDFUL

New drug shows promise for arthritis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A pharmaceutical company reports some encouraging, although inconclusive, evidence indicating a new drug may go beyond relieving symptoms of rheumatoid arthritis, one of mankind's most mysterious and painful diseases.

At a news conference Wednesday sponsored by Pfizer Inc., doctors said two independent tests of the anti-inflammatory drug piroxicam (Feldene) suggest it may inhibit factors believed to have a role in the progression of the illness.

Dr. James Goodwin of the University of New Mexico School of Medicine reported piroxicam reduced the body's level of rheumatoid factor, a complex protein formed in many people with the disease, when the body's immune system turns against itself.

Dr. Steven Abramson of the New York University School of Medicine found the drug suppressed the production of a substance that is an important factor in joint and tissue destruction.

"These data are very encouraging and allow the possibility Feldene may ultimately be found to interfere with the progression of the disease," said Dr. John Jeffers, Pfizer medical director.

"However, it is necessary to state that neither Feldene nor any other non-steroidal antiinflammatory agent has yet documented interference with the progression of arthritis in man."

Eli Lilly and Company recently announced a new antiarthritis drug it developed, celecoxib (Celebrex). It is undergoing extensive long-term human studies to see if it might retard the disease process in rheumatoid arthritis.

Preservative replaces rare enzyme in infants

BOSTON (UPI) — The preservative that keeps meat and soft drinks fresh may also restore health to children in danger of death or coma because of a rare enzyme deficiency that allows poisonous waste products to build up in their blood, it was reported today.

Twenty-six infants received sodium benzoate in their formula to compensate for missing liver enzymes that normally would have combined waste products into excretable form, researchers at Johns Hopkins University reported in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Twenty-two were still alive at least five years after treatment, said Dr. Mark L. Batshaw. If they had received conventional treatment most would have died before the age of 2.

"These children previously would go into a coma, and most would die in the newborn period," Batshaw said. "Those that survived had to be put on such a restricted protein diet that most of them didn't do well either — and in fact all of them died before the age of 2."

The infants were born without one or more of the four liver enzymes which convert unused amino acids, the components of protein, into waste products that can be filtered out by the kidney.

The syndrome, known as hyperammonemia, affects one in 25,000 to 30,000 newborns.

Virus cited in ear infections

BOSTON (UPI) — One of the most common childhood diseases, infection of the middle ear, can be caused by certain viral ailments that resemble colds, medical researchers reported today.

The study, conducted by the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, means doctors may have to pursue a new approach to treatment — attacking the virus diseases before they cause otitis media, doctors wrote in articles in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

Otitis media, first recognized by the Greek physician Hippocrates, is an inflammation of the middle ear, the chamber just behind the ear drum.

Symptoms include earache, fever and sometimes discharge. Temporary hearing loss can occur. If the infection always recurs, doctors are unsure if the ailment has long-term effects.

The cause of the disease has been debated for years — whether it is bacterial, viral and how much it is related to other ailments.

Hepatitis-cancer link found

BOSTON (UPI) — French researchers added more weight today to growing evidence that a type of hepatitis virus may help cause liver cancer, the top cancer killer in the world.

All 20 alcoholics suffering liver cancer in the study also had hepatitis DNA in their liver cells, the French team reported in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Viral hepatitis can cause a flu-like illness leading to liver failure. An estimated 200,000 people contract hepatitis B each year. Researchers recently developed a vaccine against the virus.

The 30 French patients were carriers of hepatitis B — meaning they were infected with the virus over long periods of time, but didn't suffer symptoms of hepatitis disease.

Only eight of the 51 cancerfree alcoholics in the study showed evidence of hepatitis infection, the French team wrote.

The study was conducted by a genetics unit of the Institut National de la Sante et de la Recherche Medicale and Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique, two national science agencies with which the French team has been established by other researchers, including Dr. David Shafritz of Albert Einstein Medical School in New York.

COMPOSITE OF ASSAILANT
... police want this man

Police seeking another man in Bolton rape

Though having arrested today a suspect they believe to be responsible for several rapes in the area, police are still searching for another man who, with an accomplice, sexually assaulted a 16-year-old Manchester girl Memorial Day weekend at the Manchester Drive-In in Bolton.

Police have released a composite photo of the drive-in assailant, the man they intend to charge with the crime of first-degree sexual assault.

Wednesday afternoon police apprehended a man they said was responsible for several rapes in the area, including one in Bolton Friday, May 28, less than two days before the one at the drive-in.

David Smith of East Hartford was served a warrant today. Police say they don't believe Smith was involved in the drive-in attack.

In describing the attack at the drive-in, police said the girl had gone to a three-minute showing with a few friends. After midnight, the girl went to the restroom alone, and after exiting was jumped by two men, dragged into a car and raped for 15 to 20 minutes.

The suspects then fled. Police have described the main assailant as a white male, age 19 to 21, six feet tall, and 200 pounds. He has a hefty to muscular build, chubby cheeks, fat lips, a pointed nose, no facial hair, acne on sides of the face, and long straight dirty blonde hair three to four inches below shoulder length.

The accomplice is a 17- or 18-year old white male, about five-foot five inches, a medium to chubby build, and has light brown hair feathered back and shoulder length.

The vehicle police are looking for is a full-size four door sedan, possibly blue, with door grom molding on the side of the doors and white pin striping running the length of the side of the vehicle above the below the molding.

Anybody having any information about the suspects or the incident is asked to call State Police barracks at 643-6604. All calls will be held in confidence.

Keenan resigns
Andover board
after 14 years

ANDOVER — Dennis Keenan, a 14-year member of the school board, resigned this week to the regret of the rest of the board.

"He's been a very good board member," board Chairman Beatrice Kowalski said Wednesday. "I hate to see him go off. He was very good with the special education programs."

Keenan said Wednesday he's been wanting to quit since last fall, but held off in order to help through the budget process.

Firm goes to court over new assessment on Coventry buildings

COVENTRY — Coventry Corners Assessor, owner of buildings on Route 31 in the center of town, is appealing in Tolland Superior Court what it calls a "grossly excessive" revaluation assessment. It is the first property owner to do so.

The writ said town assessors valued the property at $203,043 and by applying the assessment factor of 70 percent, assessed the property at $142,130.

Paul Litman, the Bloomfield attorney representing the plaintiff, said United Appraisal, the firm which did the town's mandatory 10-year revaluation, had dropped the assessment between $50,000 and $60,000 on the request of Coventry Corners Association before the owner went before the Board of Tax Review.

The board upheld the appraisal from United. Litman said Wednesday he didn't want to say what he thought the assessment should be. He said the reasons for wanting a lower assessment are based on the fact that the land has water and septic problems, which lower its value.

The town was served papers Wednesday. Roland C. Green, chairman of the Board of Tax Review, said Wednesday he wanted to review the property before making any statements.

Problems with the revaluation work done by United Appraisals, which have been labeled "clerical errors" by town officials, resulted in over 400 complaints on assessments to the tax board that had to be reviewed by May 31.

The board completed its work on time but Green said Wednesday night he is "the first to admit we didn't do as good a job as we might have," adding that time pressures and errors by United Appraisal exacerbated the problems. He said he expects further appeals.

William and Edna Kralovich, honored to be citizens of the year.

Grange honors two

ANDOVER — Grange 76 has presented William and Edna Kralovich, of Gilead Road, with this year's Andover citizens of the year award.

The two, said grange member Mary Boudreau at the presentation this week, "have given much of themselves to the community."

Kralovich, an Andover native and farmer since his childhood days, has been a member of the Andover Volunteer Fire Department for 40 years, a member of the Zoning Board of Appeals, the Tolland County Farm Bureau for 25 years, the Soil and Water Conservation Committee and the Democratic Town Committee.

Mrs. Kralovich, born nearby in Rockville, came to Andover in 1956 as a bride, and assisted her husband on the farm while being an active and longtime member of the Auxiliary Fire Department.

Also this week the grange elected officers. The Master is Pauline Hudak, the Overseer, John Hutchinson; Lecturer, Mary Boudreau; Steward, Stanley Sroka; Assistant Steward, Dorothy Gussler; Lady Assistant Steward, Mary Palmer; Chaplain, Rachel H. Stanley; treasurer, Ann Anderson; secretary, Elaine Ward; gatekeeper, Richard Wood and Ceres, Beatrice Kowalski.

The Pawmona is Ida Speer, the Flora, Grace Henshaw.

On the executive committee for one year is Christine Covell; for two years, Howard Stanley, and for three, Doris Hutchinson.

The Democratic governor, who is seeking election to his first full term, also rejected claims by supporters of the bill that the revenue was needed to balance the state's $3.18 billion budget for the upcoming fiscal year.

"I certainly didn't count on it," O'Neill said of the revenue involved. In his veto message, O'Neill cited a 1975 U.S. Supreme Court decision striking down a similar tax imposed by New Hampshire on Maine commuters.

He also said a similar attempt by New Jersey, which the Connecticut bill was modeled after, "is currently struggling through the New Jersey courts toward a very uncertain future."

Voting law change urged

HARTFORD (UPI) — Democratic mayoral registration to be written primary to then-Mayor George Athanson by 94 votes and filed suit charging irregularities in the voting.

Attorneys for Milner, Athanson and the city agreed to settle the suit by holding a new primary. Milner won the second race in October and was elected mayor of Hartford in November.

The commission previously fined five city Democrats, including Juanita Giles, wife of state Rep. Abraham L. Giles, for mishandling absentee ballots. No further disciplinary actions are planned by the commission.

Here're tips on picking encyclopedia

In 1982 alone, more than 1 million American families will buy encyclopedias—still largely in their homes from sales representatives, despite a growing trend toward purchases in bookstores, shopping centers, theme parks, other over-the-counter outlets. The books range from single-volume reference works priced $10 to $100 to multivolume sets costing as much as $1,000 or even more with leather bindings.

At the latter extreme, the purchase of an encyclopedia is likely to involve one of the largest single outlays a family will make after a home or a car. Yet this, often a once-in-a-lifetime purchase, is not easy.

There are two main types:

- 1) A specialized encyclopedia concentrating on a specific subject area, such as art, sports, science, music. In the field of music, for instance, your choices range from the one-volume Harvard Dictionary of Music (cost, $25) to the 20-volume Grove's Dictionary of Music and Musicians ($2,000). What you do will depend on how much you want to know and, of course, on how much you want to spend.
- 2) General-interest encyclopedias are designed to provide the answers to questions in their schoolwork. Adult references suitable for college students are Encyclopaedia Britannica, Encyclopaedia Americana, Collier's and Academic American.

Your Money's Worth
Sylvia Porter

With the present "knowledge explosion"—knowledge doubling every 10 years or so—it is now more important than ever before for people to have some access to knowledge they can readily retrieve and understand," says Charles E. Swanson, Britannica's president.

Factors to consider in choosing your encyclopedia (most major multivolume sets are generally not sold in stores) include:

- Authority: Nearly all reputable encyclopedias identify their editors, advisers, consultants and contributors, together with their credentials, usually in the first volume, and all but the shortest articles are signed. Spot-check names in fields in which you may be an expert.
- Accuracy: Study articles on several subjects you know something about—a favorite sport or hobby or your profession—to see if the information is factually correct, as well as sufficiently comprehensive.
- Up-to-dateness: Check the latest copyright date on the back of the encyclopedia's title pages. Do not confuse with printing dates, which may or may not indicate any significant revisions. Some encyclopedia publishers issue supplementary annual yearbooks, available at a small extra charge.
- Also consider: clarity of writing style; quality and reproduction of illustrations, photographs, maps, charts, other graphics; ease with which you can find facts through index and cross-references.

Be sure the sales representative shows proper identification; be wary of any salesperson who pretends to be conducting a survey.

Even after you've signed a contract, you can still change your mind. A Federal Trade Commission rule covering in-home sales mandates a three-day "cooling off" period during which buyers of goods costing $25 or more may cancel their contracts. Be sure you get two copies of a "Notice of Cancellation" form. This is vital protection for you!

Phoenix buys firm

HARTFORD — Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Co. has agreed to buy a controlling interest in Burgess & Leith Inc., a Boston brokerage firm.

The agreement makes Phoenix Mutual, the 2nd largest insurer in the U.S. with $4 billion of insurance in force last year, the first Hartford-based insurance company to move into the retail securities business.

Phoenix Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Robert Jackson and Albert Moore, chairman and chief executive officer of Burgess & Leith, said Tuesday Phoenix will buy 51 percent of the brokerage in cash.

The purchase price was not disclosed, but Jackson and Moore said one half of the money paid by Phoenix will be added to Burgess & Leith's capital base, which now stands at $1.7 million.

Dividends cut

WILTON — Directors of Emery Air Freight, citing the need "to conserve cash," Tuesday slashed the regular quarterly common stock dividend to 12 1/2 cents from 25 cents a share.

The reduced dividend payment will be made August 13 to shareholders of record July 30.

Director elected

HARTFORD — The board of directors of the Ten Eighty Corp., owner of radio station WVIC-AM and WVIC-FM, elected Robert E. Patricelli its newest member.

Patricelli is executive vice president of CIGNA Corp., recently formed through the merger of Connecticut General and JVA corporations.

Patricelli's father, the late Leonard J. Patricelli, began a business career with WVIC in 1929 and served in a variety of executive capacities, including chairman of the Ten Eighty Corp., a position he held at the time of his death in January.

Marriott Personnel Director Donald Meaney says the hotel will have openings for all types of jobs, including waiters and waitresses, desk clerks, porters and housekeepers.

Job seekers may fill out applications at the hotel's employment center at 1867 Farmington Ave. in Farmington starting June 14. Office hours there are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 9 a.m. to noon on Saturdays.

All hiring decisions are expected to be made by July 2, Meaney says.

Galbraith knocks Reaganomics

By Raymond T. DeMo
Herald Reporter

WEST HARTFORD — Reaganomics is a confused self-contradictory economic policy that hurts worst the people who support it the most.

That was the message of John Kenneth Galbraith, the Harvard economist and pundit who spoke at the University of Hartford Wednesday night.

Galbraith decried the "supply side fantasy" that tax cuts for the wealthy will spur investment and saving. The real purpose of supply side economics, Galbraith said, is to reward the businessmen who helped get President Reagan elected.

The Reagan administration's tax incentives, combined with a monetary policy that discourages investment, aren't helping the U.S. economy, Galbraith said. They are just making the government poorer.

A monetary policy that forces high interest rates, meanwhile, is "punishing" the small and medium-sized businesses who supported Reagan in the 1980.

Galbraith's speech, part of a UofH summer business seminar called "New Directions in Economic Policy," came one night after a talk by Paul McCracken, one of Reagan's economic advisers and a disciple of the economic faith that Galbraith criticized.

McCracken told his audience that more and greater tax incentives will make business boost its spending and spur greater economic productivity.

But Galbraith said that kind of economic philosophy only works in a free market economy, where unrestrained competition prevails. It's inadequate as a solution to today's economic ills, he said.

Canceled contracts threaten regional dairy

BOSTON (UPI) — Two major supermarket chains have canceled contracts with a key milk supplier, raising fears the dairy will go out of business and enable New England leader H.P. Hood to expand its share of the market.

Dudley, Mass., under court-ordered protection from creditors since 1980, has relied on Stop & Shop and Star Market for approximately 75 percent of its business. The chains cited "quality problems" and "business reasons" for ending their relationship with the ailing firm.

Dairy industry officials said Charlestown-based Hood has been attempting to increase its market share through aggressive price competition. "We know there has been a wholesale price war going on," said a spokesman for the state Department of Food and Agriculture.

The agency is investigating whether any wholesalers have been selling milk at less than cost, a violation of state law.

Hood now controls the majority of the market with its chief competition coming from Deary, Garelick Farms of Franklin, Mass., West Lynn Creamery in Lynn, Mass. and Mosher Farms of Ellington, Conn.

Hood spokesmen were also unavailable for comment.
