It'll be wet for month

By United Press International

Forecasters say wet weather may continue in Connecticut for as long as another month but a trend towards drier conditions is developing.

"It's our feeling that the kinds of patterns that have led to the rainy conditions over the past few weeks won't go away overnight," said long range forecaster Robert Livezey at the National Weather Service Climate Analysis Center in Camp Springs, Md.

He added, though, "We envision a trend away from the wet weather over the next 30 days" in Connecticut and the rest of the Northeast.

"In fact, I'm pretty sure it won't last another 30 days."

"But exactly where it's going to end, I don't know."

This has been the wettest June on record in Connecticut. By Wednesday, 11.7 inches of rain had fallen this month, the National Weather Service at Windsor Locks said.

The rain caused extensive flooding last week, claiming 12 lives and destroying hundreds of homes and businesses. Officials have estimated the damage at between $750 and $900 million.

The previous June record for rain in Connecticut was set in 1972 with 9.85 inches. Normally, Connecticut averages 3.53 inches of rain in June.

The 30-day forecast also calls for temperatures 1 or 2 degrees below normal.

Meanwhile, a meteorologist at the Talcott Mountain Science Center in Avon said Wednesday there was no evidence the cloudy weather was caused by a volcanic cloud from an eruption earlier this year in southeastern Mexico.

Meteorologist Jim Brihan said it was true the cloud was spreading northward, but "the trick is as it gets further from its source, it spreads out and the effect of blocking sunshine diminishes."

"There is no proof yet this eruption is causing any kind of weather interruptions," he said.

He doubted the Northeast would see a repeat of the legendary "year without a summer," which occurred in 1816 when "garbage" from a volcanic eruption in the South Pacific darkened the sky for months.

Livezey attributed the recent rainy weather to a strong and broad upper-air trough. He said the trough creates low barometric pressure, which causes air to rise, expand, cool and condense.

Spending, too Personal income up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The personal income of Americans climbed by 0.7 percent in May, the most in six months, while personal spending went up 1.3 percent, the most in nine months, the Commerce Department said today.

Personal income went up at an annual rate of $16.6 billion last month, reaching $2.5 trillion or $2,546 billion, more than twice the increase of April.

The personal spending increase of 1.3 percent was the steepest increase since August's 1.5 percent climb.

The figures show spending actually outpaced income by a far wider margin after income and property taxes and government fees were subtracted. The disposable income of Americans — that available to spend — increased only 0.2 percent for the month, after going up 0.7 percent the previous month and 0.6 percent in March.

Since consumers spent more money there was less available to save, and the savings rate appeared to sag to 5.2 percent of the nation's spending money. The official figure is reported only with a one-month lag and was 5.8 percent in April.

The spending increase is considered a necessary ingredient for economic recovery by many analysts. The savings rate, last year made a top priority by the Reagan administration in pressing for tax reductions, has now faded in importance, since the ailing business sector is in no position to use investment funds to expand capacity according to any "supply-side" scenario.

The income figures were not adjusted for inflation because the month's inflation rate will not be measured by the Labor Department until Tuesday.

But April's 0.7 percent increase in disposable income was reduced only slightly, to a 0.6 percent increase, by that month's modest 0.2 percent increase in the Consumer Price Index.

For GOP nomination Bozzuto claims lead; Rome scoffs

By Paul Hendre Herald Reporter

The two leading candidates for the Republican gubernatorial nomination continued to argue this morning about who is winning the convention delegate sweepstakes.

Candidate Lewis B. Rome, a Bloomfield attorney, this morning released the names of 228 delegates he said are supporting him for the nomination and insisted he leads his chief opponent, Richard C. Bozzuto, who on Thursday announced the backing of 300 delegates.

Bozzuto predicted he would win a first ballot victory, a feat that requires 407 votes at the state convention. There are a total of 923 delegates.

Fisher replied that Bozzuto's announced 300 already is almost 33 percent of the delegates, with five weeks to go.

"To go along with Lew's figures, we'd have to be stilled," Fisher said. "If Lew has 40 percent, why doesn't he announce it? Why would you want to still be 74 behind? They're trying to catch up, but they can't do it."

ROME SAID, in addition to the 228 supporters named this morning, he would release the names of a "substantial" number of additional supporters next week.

Rome also claimed to have support from a number of delegates

Guerrillas won't end the battle

By United Press International

Israeli gunners shelled Palestinian refugee camps and guerrilla positions on the edge of Beirut today and a leftist guerrilla leader vowed to make the struggle for control of the capital "a real battle."

"Lay down our arms? Impossible," said George Habash, leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a Marxist-oriented faction of the PLO.

Rejecting a reported plan by U.S. envoy Philip Habib to have the guerrillas lay down their arms in exchange for a partial Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon, Habash said the Israeli invasion on the United States.

"Let me tell you the aggression is 100 percent American. Vietnam told the Americans 'you can never destroy our will.' We are the same, our will can never be destroyed," he said at a press conference in guerrilla-controlled West Beirut.

Habash said the Palestinian aim was to make Israeli losses as high as possible.

"We are starting to make the battle of Beirut a real battle."

Attempting to prevent an all-out Israeli assault on Beirut, Habib met with former Lebanese president and rightist leader Camille Chamoun, while former Prime Minister Saeb Salam held parallel talks with Lebanese socialist leader Walid Jumblatt.

Israel pledged Thursday to maintain its cease-fire in Lebanon, but state-run Beirut radio said Israeli artillery fired at guerrilla positions around Beirut international airport, in the nearby Palestinian refugee camps and the mountains east of the capital.

In New York, Secretary of State Alexander Haig conferred with visiting Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin on the situation in Lebanon.

Before meeting Begin, Haig said Israel's occupation of Lebanon presented an "opportunity" to correct the country's instability — and

Graduation is tonight for Tech

The 104 students of the Howell Cheney Regional Vocational Technical School Class of 1982 will graduate at ceremonies beginning at 6:30 this evening in the school auditorium.

The main address will be given by state Sen. Marcella Fisher, D-East Hartford, who is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Secretary of the State.

Donald Barnard, the top-ranked student in the class, will give the valedictory address.

Abraham Glassman, representing the state Board of Education, will present the diplomas. Other speakers will include Lawrence E. Terardi, the school's director; Gerald Blanchard, head of the Guidance Department; and the Rev. John White from St. Bernard's in Rockville, who will give the invocation and benediction.

'Weekenders' debuts

Want to know what's going on around town this weekend? The Manchester Herald's brand new Weekenders column on page 9 today will help you decide.

This weekend, for instance, you've got three separate strawberry festivals to choose from, with the splashiest — er, juiciest — being the Kiwanis Club and Downtown Merchants' first annual strawberry festival. It'll be happening at the Forest Street municipal parking lot and the fun begins at 10 a.m.

Baskets of fresh strawberries at bargain prices, along with enough strawberry shortcake to make the entire town of Manchester go on a diet, will be featured. And don't forget all the baked goods the Manchester Senior Citizens will be selling too.

Lefties suffer more pains

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Left-handers have more headaches, stomach pains and thyroid problems as well as tougher time learning, a Harvard Medical School scientist says.

His research showed southpaws make up 15 percent of the population and their brains are different in size from those of right-handers.

Dr. Norman Geschwind said the frequency of auto-immune diseases — which include some types of arthritis and diabetes — was 250 percent higher among left-handers. Such diseases occur when the body's immune system attacks healthy tissue instead of warding off invading organisms.

Left-handers also are more likely to have learning disabilities and gastrointestinal disorders such as ulcers, thyroid problems and lupus, Geschwind told reporters Wednesday at the annual meeting of the Endocrine Society.

"There is an increased number of left-handers among patients with all the well-studied developmental learning disabilities," Geschwind said. "These disorders, which are more common in boys than girls, include dyslexia, stuttering, delayed speech, autism, hyperactivity and the Tourette syndrome."

Geschwind said he and Dr. Peter Behan of Scotland conducted a study of 500 men and women with an equal amount of left-handers and right-handers before making the conclusions to be published in the fall in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

The neurologist said there was growing evidence the link between left-handed males and certain ailments is related to testosterone, the male sex hormone.

HAIG AND KIRKPATRICK LISTEN TO REAGAN striking similar poses despite disagreements

Reagan talks tough in first U.N. speech

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — In his first address to the United Nations, President Reagan came out swinging against Soviet aggression and for genuine arms control. Key congressmen praised his tough talk Thursday, but a former arms control negotiator said he was disappointed by the speech and said the Cold War chatter was "inappropriate."

The president told the U.N. Special Session on Disarmament Thursday that the United States is not "merely words," and that "mere words" are required if the superpowers are to lay down their arms.

"My countrymen learned a bitter lesson in this century: the scourge of tyranny cannot be stopped with words alone," Reagan said, attacking Moscow for its "record of tyranny," "ruthless repression" and "communist atrocities."

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and Ambassador Anatoli Dobrynin listened impassively and did not join in the polite applause at the end.

Reagan made no mention of Gromyko's pledge to the 157-nation

Argentina gives Britain safe passage for POWs

By United Press International

Argentina, acting within hours of the ouster of President Leopoldo Galtieri, today gave two British ships safe passage to bring 5,500 war prisoners home from the Falklands, British government sources said.

The decision was the first major step by Argentina toward a full cease-fire with Britain since Argentina six months ago and briefly giving the nation unprecedented unity as president, army commander and head of the junta.

British government officials said the Argentine armed forces he entered in 1982.

Under the military succession, Interior Minister Gen. Alfredo Storno becomes interim president while the junta, in consultation with military officials, picks a permanent successor.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher met with her Cabinet to discuss the Argentine safe passage offer apparently to one of few generals uncaught by the Falklands debacle.

Government sources said the junta may pick a

LEOPOLDO GALTIERI had no backing as Galtieri's permanent successor, or choose Air Force Commander Basilio Lami Dozo, whose forces bore the heaviest losses but also raised Argentine spirits with daring raids.

Unmanned spacecraft search for mystery object in space

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (UPI) — Two unmanned spacecraft speeding near Uranus and Neptune may soon reveal whether a 10th planet, a black hole, or a dark star pulls the planets 600 miles off course each year, scientists say.

Data going back to Galileo shows Neptune and Uranus are regularly pulled by their predicted orbits by gravitational force — but the cause of the deviation has never been determined.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Ames Research Center said Thursday its scientists last summer began approaching the problem with data from Pioneer 10 and 11, the most distant man-made objects in the solar system.

Data analysis will begin in October and an answer might come in three years, NASA said.

They said a large, dark star type object perhaps as big as the sun and perhaps 50 billion miles beyond the outermost planet could produce the orbital shifts in the two planets. A vastly larger black hole twice as far away also is consistent with the findings.

Or, the scientists say, the pull of an undiscovered planet-sized object perhaps 5 billion miles beyond the Pluto-Neptune orbits also would explain the phenomenon.

Pioneer 10 and 11 are now traveling on the solar system's opposite sides. The Pioneer closest to the mystery object should feel its pull more than the other. By comparing their escape trajectory, the scientists hope to calculate something about the size and location of the mystery body.

Dr. John Anderson of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory said the object was more likely to be a passing star too dark to be seen, than to

In Iran, Khomeini carnage goes on

WASHINGTON — The young woman, covered in a tan shawl, entered my office and, in broken English, nervously asked where to leave a packet of information. I took it, thanked her, and she quickly left.

Lee Roderick

names of the killers are different but the results are very much the same.

For 16-year-old revolutionary Mariam Ghodsi-Maab, for example, there couldn't have been much comfort last October in the fact she had lived to see the Shah overthrown. On Oct. 8 she joined the Shah in death, with a co-came "as a result of receiving 8 bullets in the thorax, 8 bullets in the hand, and a single one in the head. Execution was carried out by the court of revolution."

The story of Mariam Ghodsi-Maab is repeated daily in Iran, with Amnesty International reporting that in January alone, 225 persons were executed. Some are mutilated first, others have blood forcefully taken from them for transfusion to wounded Iranian guards, and many of the women are raped.

"The total number of victims since the beginning of the '79 revolution exceeds 4,000 and includes women and even children," says Amnesty International. Others put the figure as high as 13,000, with several times that number now in prison.

ONE EYEWITNESS to the barbarism told Le Monde, the French newspaper, that the infamous Evin prison in northern Tehran "was designed to accommodate 1,200 inmates, but continues today close to 10,000." Cells meant for 11 persons are said to contain 70, who take turns sleeping two hours at a time while some stand.

Needless to say, other aspects of Iranian society are faring similarly under the mindless fanaticism ruling the country. University professors, engineers and physicians are fleeing Iran, with more than a third of its physicians reportedly gone when they are most needed to handle outbreaks of cholera and malaria.

The all-powerful Committee Against Corruption invades homes in search of such outlawed items as chess sets or playing cards, alcohol, recording of "irreligious" music, or even fashion or knitting magazines considered improper.

THE ECONOMY has ground nearly to a halt and millions are without work. The promise of land reform has faded, and Iran imports far more food than it did under the Shah, who was accused of "stealing" agriculture. Iran is exporting only a small fraction of the oil it did prior to the revolution, and its currency is worth about 15 percent of what it was before then.

In short, Iran is a country in shambles, ruled by boasts in human form who sacrilegiously carry out despicable acts in the name of God.

Iran reinforces a lesson which, often stripped of religious overtones, has been repeated over and over in recent years — in Cambodia or Kampuchea, Vietnam and Nicaragua to name a few places.

That lesson, it seems to me, is that violent revolution very rarely leads to a happier, more prosperous society. More often, it whets a thirst for vengeance and power which result in considerably more misery than under the ousted regime.

This is a lesson very much on the mind of the Reagan administration as it seeks to stabilize admittedly less-than-ideal governments in El Salvador and elsewhere, should they fall to violent insurgents, what would follow for their people almost surely would be worse.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

What's next in Mideast

WASHINGTON — Within hours after the Israeli invasion of Lebanon, the State Department threw together a "crisis task force" of its top Middle East specialists to give President Reagan and his foreign policy advisers the answer to the big question: What will happen next?

Based on their years of expertise in the arcane business of linking cause and effect in the tumultuous Middle East, the analysts produced their best estimate of the likely turn of events. One of these estimates, stamped "Secret," was shown to my associate Dale Van Atta.

The report breaks down the "soothsayers' conclusion into short-term and long-term possibilities. In appraising the clarity of the experts' crystal ball, it is important to remember that these are the forecasts the White House relies on to plan U.S. responses to the fast-moving situation in this vital part of the world.

LET'S SEE what the crystal ball revealed. First, the short-term predictions, which were made 10 days ago.

"Israel will expand the 'Free Lebanon' corridor nominally controlled by Major (Saad) Haddad's militia to include, at a minimum, the Litani River and Beaufort Castle. Most of the population, largely Catholic, will be driven out, as in 1978."

"It is unlikely that Israel will allow United Nations peacekeeping forces in the expanded Haddad corridor, nor is it likely that the United States will contribute to the forces will maintain troops in Lebanon under the circumstances."

"Syrian forces are unlikely to seriously engage Israel, except in demonstrative air intercepts, unless Israeli forces penetrate Bekaa Valley. Even demonstrative actions have potential for escalation, of course."

Other estimates warn that full-scale Syrian intervention might well occur if local Syrian commanders elect to attack the wide-ranging Israeli troops; in this situation, the entire Syrian army could be dragged into the conflict. And because the Syrians are no match for Israeli forces, this leads to the most ominous short-term prediction of all: "In the event of a serious threat to the Syrian government, direct Soviet intervention becomes a distinct likelihood."

NOV FOR the long-range predictions in the secret report: "Israel will continue to supply arms to Phalangist (right-wing Christian) forces in the North. The combination of increased Phalangist military strength, the weakened Palestinian position and the influx of refugees to the North is explosive, and many reignite the civil war."

"Much depends on the restrictions placed on Haddad's forces after the main elements of the IDF (Israeli Defense Forces) have withdrawn. In the past, Israel has encouraged Haddad's unprovoked attacks on Lebanese civilian targets as a means of increasing popular resentment against the Palestinians."

"European frustration with the American initiatives in the Middle East will probably result in a renewed European initiative."

Koontz seeking contract

COVENTRY — Republican Town Council member Roberta Koontz will ask the council at its meeting Monday to prepare a contract between the town and the town attorney to clarify which party has the right to name a temporary attorney to act in his absence.

At that meeting Mrs. Koontz asked Town Manager Charles McCarthy for a clarification of the town attorney's position after it had been learned that the town's attorney Daniel Lamont had recommended that attorney Russell Potter Jr. of Willimantic be appointed temporary town attorney in his absence to help the Board of Tax Review with some revaluation matters.

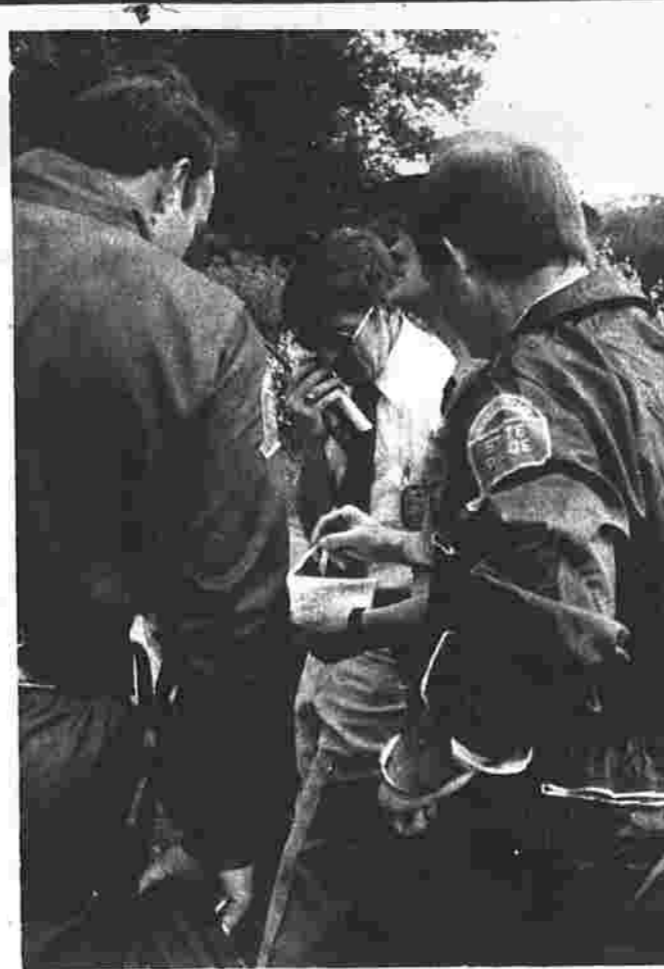

McCarthy, according to the minutes of that meeting, recommended that the law bring Potter in right away because the revaluation is in progress.

McCarthy said according to the minutes, that he trusted the opinion of Lamont in his choice.

But Mrs. Koontz pointed out that there was no agreement with the town attorney on how the matter of appointing an acting town attorney would be handled.

"My only concern," she said, "is that the Town Council provide the necessary contract that will protect and provide the legal interests of both the town attorney and the people of Coventry."

Monday's meeting begins at 7:30 p.m. in the board room of the Town Hall.

Awards given

HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. William O'Neill has presented Youth Action Awards to students and staff from seven schools, including four that had been honored previously under the program.

O'Neill said the Governor's Youth Action program, now in its sixth year, has drawn students from around the state into programs to help the needy, the disadvantaged, the elderly and children."

The first-time winners honored Thursday were Berth High School and the Jared Elliot School of Clinton.

The schools that won awards previously and were honored again were Amity Regional Junior High School of Orange, DePaulo Junior High School of Southington, Point Beach School in Millford and Tolland High School.

Two-hour manhunt results in capture

State police searched a wooded area of Andover for two hours Thursday before tracking down and arresting a man who had escaped their custody earlier.

Gary Webber, 26, of Lakeside Drive, was apprehended about 1 p.m. and charged with escaping from police custody, police said.

State Trooper Richard Clark arrested a man who had escaped their custody earlier. Clark and State Trooper Paul Trochard tried to apprehend him on a warrant for failure to appear in court.

About 25 police officers, aided by dogs, assisted the search for Webber in the woods around Hebron and School roads.

Webber was apparently handcuffed when he bolted from police custody. Clark apparently tried to restrain him by grabbing the back of his shirt. When Webber broke free, Clark fell on a stairway and suffered the dislocated shoulder.

Clark was admitted to Manchester Memorial Hospital, where he is reported in satisfactory condition.

Disaster assistance centers opening today in six places

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International
State and federal officials made final preparations for today's opening of six disaster assistance centers that will provide Connecticut flood victims with loans, grants and other services.

Federal officials have been in Connecticut since Tuesday to plan the relief program, which begins in full force with the opening of centers in Essex, Hamden, Milford, Naugatuck, New London and Norwich.

The federal officials moved into the state following President Reagan's decision Monday to declare the state a disaster area because of the floods, which caused an estimated $276.6 million in damage.

On hand at the centers will be officials from a battery of state and federal agencies ranging from FEMA "reservists," called in to work in disaster recovery projects, to officials from various state agencies.

Federal officials will visit the towns to make specific damage inspections and later to conduct reviews as rebuilding work progresses, Doyle said.

FEMA also announced the schedule Thursday for traveling teams that will go to the state's counties without disaster assistance centers to provide information and take applications from people affected by the floods.

The first two-day stop for the traveling teams will begin June 21 in Killingly with other two-day stops scheduled for Storrs, West Hartford and Torrington.

Under the disaster declaration, the federal government will provide individual assistance programs to flood victims statewide, including loans and individual grants.

Quakes cause no damage

EAST HADDAM (UPI) — State and local police say the 100 minor, shallow earthquakes detected in the Moodus section of East Haddam caused no damage.

Police said they received many telephone calls from area residents who reported feeling the earthquake which was detected Thursday by seismograph instruments at Weston Observatory in Weston, Mass.

Vladimir Vidler, a geophysicist at the Weston Observatory, said in a telephone interview that more than 100 earthquakes were recorded in Moodus. Only four, however, were strong enough to be felt or heard, he added.

The earthquakes at Moodus "are nothing unusual," Vidler said. "Historically, Moodus is an active area for earthquakes," he said. "Why we don't know. That's why we are continuing our study of the area."

Since June 14, many earthquakes have been reported in Moodus, an Indian word meaning "sounds from the earth," said Vidler.

However, they were too weak to be felt or heard by area residents.

The first of the four strongest tremors Thursday was recorded at 4:02 a.m., measuring 2.0 on the Richter scale. Two were felt at 10:14 a.m., the first measuring 2.2 on the Richter scale and the second 3.0. The fourth tremor was recorded at 11:29 a.m. and measured 2.3 on the scale.

Vidler said the earthquakes centered at Moodus ranged one to two miles in depth, compared to the 20-mile depth of the majority of earthquakes worldwide.

He said earthquakes probably will be recorded at Moodus for the next few days or weeks.

Embarrassment could be avoided

Attorney Richard Dyer has brought up an interesting point about the filing of tax liens by the town.

The town is apparently locked into a legal position under which it has no choice, when it files a lien against a property for which taxes are delinquent, but to file that lien in the name of the person who owned that property on the annual assessment date before the tax became due.

The result of that state requirement is that the records, at least to those who are not aware of the technicalities involved, appear to indicate that a person has defaulted on a tax when, in fact, the default may have been that of a subsequent owner.

The entire question can be dismissed easily. One can take the cold attitude that people should understand the complications involved and not ascribe to any person any moral failure when a legal instrument is filed on the land records.

The lien, after all, does constitute an encumbrance on the property itself. Anyone who has

Skip Day isn't a joking matter

To the Editor:
My letter is in response to Ms. Angle's article in the Saturday, June 12 Manchester Herald. In her article Ms. Angle extolled the virtue of Senior Skip Day and appeared to defend those parents who signed fraudulent excuse notes.

I am not writing this on a occasional day away from school. As a teacher I am concerned about what we are teaching our children.

Nostalgia aside, Ms. Angle is defending parents' lying for their children so that they can avoid the consequences of their actions and thereby teaching their children to lie.

As a teacher at Manchester High School I believe this lesson has been taught all too well. In almost all instances when I catch students red-handedly violating school rules they lie. It is a rare student who accepts the consequences for his or her actions and tells the truth.

Perhaps other parents do not share my admiration for the character trait of integrity, but parents who teach their children to manipulate situations by lying should not be surprised when their children lie to them.

Of equal or perhaps even greater importance is another lesson parents teach their children when they lie for them. That lesson is that it is possible to avoid the consequences of one's actions. Every day I deal with students who are attempting to avoid the consequences of not doing their homework, skipping school, smoking in school, at lunchtime. I believe that we do our children a great disservice if we persuade them that throughout life they will be able to avoid consequences.

I often see students drive too fast, carelessly, and sometimes under the influence of drugs. Have we taught them that they will be able to avoid the consequences for such actions?

Teachers are not the only people who teach, and subject matter is not the only thing that children must learn. We must all, teachers, society, and parents, be aware of what we are teaching and we must teach our children well.

A deplorable article
To the Editor:
Adele Angle's last feature story concerning her nostalgia over Senior Skip Day in last Saturday's Manchester Herald was totally inappropriate to say the least. Her article was not entertaining, it was deplorable.

When the Herald had already published a news item concerning PPrincipal Ludes' comments about the absences and the cover-up excuses, her presentation was completely out of order.

In addition, there was a subsequent article in Tuesday's paper which reported PTA support of Mr. Ludes' position. The sentiments she expressed undermined the authority of the principal, of the Board of Education, and of the parents who did not write excuses.

She is entitled to her personal philosophy, but for the Herald to publish the opinion of a staff person in this situation was offensive.

I could say much more about the

What are ties good for?

By Susan Pleso
Herald Reporter
Bow ties, string ties, wide ties, narrow ties. Knit ties, silk ties, designer ties, plain ties. Ties that clip on and ties that have to be tied. They're the perennial favorite for daddy on Father's Day - that's what you buy him when you're not sure about anything else.

What ELSE are ties good for? They are good for covering up the place where a button is missing on the shirt front. They're good for ripping off your neck when you're irritated, and they're good for loosening when it's too warm. You can tell a man's mood by the way he handles his tie.

You can also use old ties for Halloween costumes. The only trouble is that Halloween costumes only use one tie at a time, and that's hardly an efficient way to use up 86 of them.

MADRID, Spain (UPI) - Argentina's players, depressed at the news from home and grieving at the loss of loved ones in the South Atlantic, must raise their game substantially against Hungary today or lose their world soccer title.

Argentina opened defense of the title it won at home four years ago with a 1-0 defeat against Belgium last Sunday and today faces a team that whipped Honduras 10-1 to set a Cup scoring record.

The last 24 hours have changed the spirit and morale of the team. The talks and time we have spent with the players have had their desired effect.

When a reporter asked Menotti if he thought a victory, which would keep Argentina alive in the tournament, would boost the spirits of the folks back home, he snapped: "Any Argentine who could feel happy at this time because of a team win a soccer game should be put in a mental institution," adding, "We are here to play soccer and are mentally and physically ready to do that."

Despite Menotti's brave words, some players are deeply upset at the news from home - Argentina's surrender to the British in the Falkland Islands earlier in the week and the island and political unrest that followed.

Shipper Daniel Passarella echoed the feelings of some players when he said, "We are broken-hearted. But the Hungarians don't expect their opponents to lay down and play dead, and Menotti has promised,

Cubs rolling in high gear

"I guess hitting is contagious," said Buckner, who has 12 hits in his last 19 at-bats, with eight RBI. "Early in the season it was cold, now I'm relaxed and much more comfortable up there."

As an experiment, the Cubs moved up the starting time of the game by 90 minutes to 3:45 p.m. The change did not affect the attendance (9,290) or Buckner's routine.

"I got up the same time I normally did," Buckner said. "I'm still seeing the ball well."

"We're seeing saw it well, too, but not well enough."

"We not beat today, but I saw a lot of positive things," said Montreal manager Jim Fanning. "Frank White and Jerry White played well filling in."

Phillies 4, Pirates 3 At Pittsburgh, Gary Matthews led off the 11th with his second solo home run of the game, enabling Philadelphia to break a five-game losing streak.

Reds 4, Giants 2 At Cincinnati, Cesar Cedeno drove in two first-inning runs with a double and Charlie Leibrandt pitched seven strong innings to pace the Reds.

White Sox 11, A's 7 At Oakland, Tony Bernazard drove in four runs and Steve Kemp added three RBI to pace a 16-hit attack that enabled the White Sox to complete a three-game sweep of the A's. Bernazard, who committed three errors, greeted reliever Bo McLaughlin with a bases-loaded triple in the third inning. Jeff Newman homered for Oakland.

Rangers 5, Mariners 1 At Seattle, Buddy Bell went 3-for-5, including a bases-loaded double, to spark the Rangers. Rick Honeycutt, 27, scattered eight hits for the win while Gene Nelson, 3-8, was the loser.

Brewers 3, Tigers 2 At Detroit, shortstop Alan Trammell's error with two out in the 11th inning enabled Ned Yost to score from third base and lifted the Brewers. Loner Dave Tobik, 2-1, struck out the first two batters after taking over for Dan Petry at the start of the 11th, and Yost launched a triple to the flagpole in left center.

Beg Oglue was walked intentionally and Gorman Thomas' soft liner handoffed Trammell and glanced off his misdirection into right field as Yost scored the tie-breaking run. Mike Ivie and Lance Parrish homered for Detroit.
