Earlier winters expected
Volcano causing weather changes

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The sulfuric cloud thrown up by Mexico's Chicon volcano is blocking up to 10 percent of Earth's sunlight and will probably cause an early winter in the Northern Hemisphere this year and next, NASA scientists reported today.

The cloud from the April 4 eruption now forms a thick band around the middle of the Earth and is partially blanketing out the sun from Texas to the equator, said Dr. Brian Toon of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

He said the cloud has cut off 5 to 10 percent of sunlight reaching Earth and this is expected to cool the surface of the Northern Hemisphere by an average of 1 degree Fahrenheit, he said.

"Some areas will probably experience temperatures cooler than normal, with early frost this fall and next fall," Toon told UPI in an interview. "It is potentially significant for farmers living in areas with short growing seasons in the United States, Canada and Europe."

Toon said the April eruption of Chicon was "clearly the biggest atmospheric event to happen in the Northern Hemisphere since 1912."

The 1912 eruption of Mt. Katmai in Alaska was blamed for making the summer of 1913 "the coldest summer on record in Northern Europe."

John DeLaisi, a specialist in atmospheric physics with the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration in Boulder, Colo., said the Chicon cloud now forms a thick solid belt circling the Earth in an east to west direction from the equator to the 30th parallel, which cuts through Texas, Louisiana and Florida. Patches of cloud have been detected farther north.

"At first it was in blobs that were spreading out, but now it seems to be remaining in a steady belt around the Earth," DeLaisi said in a telephone interview.

Both scientists said the cloud is moving higher into the atmosphere rather than falling, but neither could offer an explanation.

"The bottom of the cloud doesn't seem to be moving lower," said Toon, although there is a little drip of large sulfate particles about 10 miles up.

He said the main body of the cloud is 15 miles above Earth and the peak altitude is about 18 miles.

Beirut bombing stepped up
Lebanese leader resigns his post

By United Press International

Waves of Israeli warplanes bombarded Beirut today and fierce fighting raged in the mountains east of the Lebanese capital between Israeli and Syrian forces. Lebanon's prime minister offered his resignation, saying he could no longer work effectively under the pressure of Israel's "blackmail."

"What is happening is an international conspiracy against Lebanon. I cannot work under this massive military escalation, this blackmail," Prime Minister Chieff Wazzan told reporters after leaving the presidential palace in the Israeli-occupied town of Baabda outside Beirut.

Lebanese government sources said President Elias Sarkis had not decided yet whether to accept Wazzan's letter of resignation.

"The situation looks bleak," one Arab diplomat said, noting that it would be hard to find a replacement for the prime minister, who by law must be a member of Lebanon's Sunni Moslem community.

"The question is whether Sarkis can find a replacement under these circumstances," the diplomat said, referring to the "political mess" caused by the Israeli invasion.

A few hours earlier, the leader of Lebanon's leftist alliance quit the Council of National Salvation set up by Sarkis in an attempt to arrange a political settlement preventing an all-out Israeli assault on Beirut.

"The council has turned into a company of morticians whose task is to bury the Lebanese and Palestinian peoples," leftist leader Waid Jumblatt was quoted by the Christian-run Voice of Lebanon radio as saying.

The air strikes against guerrilla and civilian areas of Beirut were some of the heaviest since the start of the Israeli invasion June 6, which has turned into the longest war since the Jewish state was founded.

"The dead are in scores and many more are wounded. The intensity of the air strikes is preventing rescue work," said a military source watching the bombardment of west and south Beirut, where 6,000 Palestinian guerrillas were under siege.

After attacking West Beirut, the Israeli warplanes streaked to the mountains east of the capital to hit entrenched Syrian positions, reporters in the area said.

On the ground, Israeli tanks and troops fought Syrian soldiers and Palestinian guerrillas in a string of villages around Bhamdoun, 16 miles east of Beirut.

Israel severed the Beirut-Damascus highway that runs through Bhamdoun Thursday, isolating the Syrian soldiers in the west from the main Syrian force in the eastern Bekaa valley.

Syria said it had pulled two battalions out of the western mountain town of Alep, which was virtually cut off by Israeli ground advances from three sides.

Syria also said it shot down two Israeli warplanes over the Bekaa but the report was not confirmed by Jumblatt, who on Thursday asked

Decision a civil liberties landmark

Court cracks down on book bans

By Robert Sangeorge
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court, curbing the power of local school boards to remove books from libraries and classrooms, ruled 5-4 today parents and students can file suit to challenge the banning of such books.

The decision in the landmark censorship case is a major victory for a coalition of civil liberties, educational, religious and labor groups that urged the justices to severely restrict the authority of school officials to arbitrarily ban books they find objectionable.

The high court cleared the way for a trial in a dispute over a New York school board's move banning nine books from libraries and use in school courses.

Writing for the court, Justice William Brennan declared, "Local school boards may not remove books from school library shelves simply because they dislike the ideas contained in those books and seek by their removal to prescribe what shall be orthodox in politics, nationalism, religion or other matters of opinion."

Although the justices generally voted 5-4 on the case, the decision was badly fragmented. Only Justices Thurgood Marshall and John Paul Stevens joined fully in Brennan's opinion. Justice Harry Blackmun joined in most of it, and Justice Byron White filed a statement concurring in the judgment.

The dissenters were Chief Justice Warren Burger and Justices Lewis Powell, William Rehnquist and Sandra Day O'Connor.

Leading the dissenters, Burger accused the majority of setting forth a "lavish expansion going beyond any prior holding under the First Amendment." He accused the majority of attempting "to impose its own views about what books must be made available to students."

Turning the tables on Phil Donahue

By Adele Angle
Focus Editor

HARTFORD — What else do you ask the number one syndicated talk show host in America?

You ask him when he and Mario Thomas are going to have a baby.

Phil Donahue leaned back slightly in the bar stool he was perched in at Gaetano's at the Hartford Civic Center, but otherwise seemed unfazed.

"We're not upset by that question," he said, looking straight at the questioner through a pair of fashionable gold-rimmed glasses.

"But you know," he said, adopting that silky fatherly tone his TV viewers love, "it's really important to keep some things private."

Yeah, right, Donahue.

The man who recently brought us the most graphic film ever shown on TV of a live birth underwater also said if he was to say he and Mario would like to have a baby, people would be starting at "Mario's tummy" all the time.

And we wouldn't want that, would we?

He was dressed in a gray business suit and red-and-dark-blue-striped tie, just about the same uniform he wears on the TV talk show seen in more than 200 cities nationwide. He is on Channel 22 at 9 a.m.

Some wise-acre in the room asked him if he wasn't a bit embarrassed that people were paying $15 to hear him that evening.

"I have two feelings about that," he answered. Number one, he said, he makes no money from these appearances. It all goes to his loyal, true blue staff.

And, secondly: "This is still America, and you don't have to come."

Anyone who's a Donahue watcher

Judge to decide Haitians' fate

MIAMI (UPI) — A federal judge says he will decide today his plan for the release of nearly 2,000 Haitian refugees from detention camps because attorneys were unable to reach a settlement.

U.S. District Judge Eugene Spellman said he would advise lawyers of his decision but without announcement until Tuesday so appeals can be drawn up.

When attorneys for the refugees and the Immigration and Naturalization Service failed to reach a compromise on the matter Thursday, Spellman announced he would decide it himself.

Although the judge said he will give opposing lawyers a copy of his decision today so they can start appeals, he forbade attorneys and their clients to release information on the decision.

"Between now and 10 a.m., June 29, this court is going to exercise its inherent power to pay all lawyers and all clients," Spellman said. "In the view of this court, whatever First Amendment rights there are, are to be refrained from being engaged in between now and then."

Draft opponents plan protests

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Draft opponents, anticipating the first indictments for nonregistration, are planning demonstrations in 100 cities as soon as any grand jury in the country indicts anyone for failure to register.

Justice Department spokesman John Russell said between 150 and 200 names of those who could be indicted have been sent to U.S. Attorney's Offices across the country.

At a Thursday news conference, Barry Lynn, president of Draft Action, a national antidraft group, said the demonstrations could accomplish two major objectives.

"First, they will symbolize the strong moral support for those men who have refused to register," he said. "Second, they can educate specific groups of Americans who can play a vital role in effectively bringing about the abolition of draft registration itself," he added.

Soft bifocal lens is approved

BOSTON (UPI) — More people than ever before can wear contact lenses—even if they need bifocals.

A new soft bifocal contact lens the federal Food and Drug Administration approved last week for marketing has joined two other bifocal types to help eliminate the need for glasses with two-lens contacts.

But the bifocals, made by pharmaceutical giant Schering-Plough, Bausch and Lomb and CIBA-Geigy, aren't for everybody.

"Very frankly, the many people can't tolerate the flare and the blur that go along with them," said Dr. Robert Koetting, a St. Louis optometrist and former head of the contact lens section of the American Optometric Association.

"Doctors recommend having one placed on eye before having a pair fitted so patients see what they're getting into," said Koetting, who has investigated new lenses for some of the companies.

Church officer raps 'pressure'

HARTFORD (UPI) — The chief executive officer of the United Presbyterian Church says the State Department tried to pressure some ministers into not attending a nuclear freeze conference in Moscow.

Stated Clerk William Thompson criticized the "reprehensible act," saying clergy and members of their churches should be free to travel overseas. He was one of six United Presbyterians who attended the Moscow conference.

Thompson said Thursday the "citizens of the Soviet Union are in many ways more like us than people of any other country I've visited." He said Soviet citizens had a great concern for peace, apparently caused by the deaths of 20 million of their countrymen during World War II.

Thompson, attending the church's 194th General Assembly, also defended a court brief he filed supporting the tax-exempt status of Bob Jones University in Greenville, S.C.

He said he had the power under the rules of the church to interpret the intent," said Koetting, who has investigated new lenses for some of the companies.

Pay-up time

Mississippi authorities gave country singer George Jones until today to cover a $737.50 worthless check he wrote to pay fines for his March 30 arrest involving drunken driving. He was charged with driving under the influence, driving without a license, possession of alcohol and reckless driving.

Monroe County Chief Deputy Pete Shook, who said Jones was "totally bombed" when he was arrested, said the check written by Jones was returned "account closed." He said representatives of the singer promised to wire money. It should have arrived Tuesday.

Shook said if the check doesn't come in today, he will file charges.

In addition, Jones faces a July 14 hearing in Franklin, Tenn., on another DUI charge.

Working woman

Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis isn't anyone's stereotype of Tilly the Toiler. But back in 1979 Mrs. Onassis explained why she went back to work in a cover story for Ms. magazine.

The magazine, celebrating its 10th anniversary, contacted their past cover personalities and got this word from Mrs. O: "Not long ago my mother-in-law said to me with the bemused tolerance with which she views the changing world: 'Dear, in my day no woman would work if she didn't have to, but now all of you want to have jobs.' Today women rightly seek expression in work, and most of society recognizes that right."

Nice to Raquel

Everybody has been so nice to Raquel Welch, who takes over Lauren Bacal's role in the hit Broadway musical "Woman of the Year" on June 29.

Well, almost everyone. Miss Bacal reportedly is less than thrilled with the critical enthusiasm that greeted Raquel's performance when she substituted in the role a few months ago. Miss Bacal has kept publicly silent on the subject, but Miss Welch parted the curtain a crack while being interviewed on WNBC-TV, New York's Live at Five.

Doctor: Exercise helps vision

BOSTON (UPI) — Few things are harder on the eyes than long hours of close work such as studying or typing and reading at a computer video terminal.

Not surprisingly, such work is considered a cause of the tremendous increase in cases of nearsightedness since World War II.

But there are exercises you can do to reduce the chances you or your child will be needing glasses permanently or a new lens prescription after long stints of close work, one optometrist said.

Athletes, too, can benefit from exercising their eyeballs, said Dr. Arnold Sherman, chairman of the sports vision section of the American Optometric Association.

Optometrists recommend people doing close work look up every 15 minutes and stare into the distance for 15 seconds.

"Unfortunately, many offices don't have windows, so we just ask people to stand up and change focus from the near point, about 12 inches, all the way out to distance, at least 50 feet," he said.

Another set of "vision calisthenics" can be used to prevent eye strain and astigmatism is focusing on an object nearby, then quickly changing to an object far away and alternating for a few times.

Such exercises are in widespread use in China, said Sherman, a clinical optometry professor at the State University of New York.

The AOA says at least 40 percent of Americans are nearsighted. The condition can have genetic causes, especially when it begins in childhood; but when it begins in college, Sherman said, its cause is environmental.

Tall ships cause no problems

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — City officials had braced for the worst during the five-day visit of the tall ships, but the vessels' first full-day in port went smoothly and few problems were reported.

Thousands of people streamed into the city Thursday, but police had no accurate count of how many. Visitors waited in line up to two hours to tour the majestic sailing ships from 12 countries, which had made their dramatic entry into Newport Harbor the day before.

Police crew members dressed in crisp uniforms welcomed them aboard in weather as bright as the brass which gleamed on the decks.

Many were families with wide-eyed children who gazed at the masts soaring into the air above them. They were impressed by the rigging, the crumpled sleeping quarters and even the library where cadets studied their lessons.

Some of the visitors had travelled for hours to view the windjammers and dream about an era more than a century ago, when they were frequent visitors to the seacoast city.

"The whole thing was breathtaking and just about the most beautiful thing I'll possibly see in my whole life," said Cathy McShane of Bethlehem, Pa.

The city put its new traffic and parking plan in effect at 8 a.m. Thursday and morning ticketing and towing illegally parked cars.

The party's 1980 nominee, former President Carter, is off fishing in Canada.

But the 1984 aspirants — former Vice President Walter Mondale and Sens. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, Gary Hart of Colorado, Fritz Hollings of South Carolina, John Glenn of Ohio and Alan Cranston of California — all are doing their fishing in Philadelphia and trying to reel in party support.

MHS honor grads off to UConn

Former boat people find smooth sailing here

By Nancy Thompson Herald Reporter

Dan and Thuy Le think of themselves as pretty average. They don't see anything special in the fact that they both graduated last week from Manchester High School with honors, when a few years ago they couldn't even speak English.

In all they will begin to fulfill one of the dreams which propelled them from Saigon, Vietnam, to Manchester. They will both attend the University of Connecticut to study engineering.

The Les said their father's desire for them to have a college education was one of the reasons he sent them out of Saigon, on a dangerous journey across the sea in small boats. After the Communists took over South Vietnam in 1975, education focused on political rather than academic subjects and most young men were sent into the Army instead of college, Dan Le said.

"We didn't have a belief in the Communist fight," Dan Le said. "My father didn't want us to give our lives for it. He said we could either die in the city or take a chance on dying in the ocean."

Le said Saigon changed completely when the Communists took power. "When you go to school, the Communists keep an eye on you," he said. "You can't trust no one in school or your neighbors or even your family. I lost all friends because you can't really trust people."

Le said his father was sent to a concentration camp because he had worked for the South Vietnam government. His mother had never worked, so Le and his brother worked on the black market to support the family.

"Step by step you get crazy to get out," he said. DAN LE was the first of the family to leave Saigon, along with his cousin and older brother, about four years ago. The trip was arranged by his cousin, who spent about a year getting ready for the escape, purchasing a fishing boat and learning how to use it.

Le left Saigon with the others and spent six days in the jungle, waiting to go out to the boat. While waiting, they could not cook or move about for fear that the Communist soldiers would find and shoot them.

By that time, I have imaginations of James Bond," Le said. "It was very complicated and very scary. If you get caught, you are shot."

There were 40 people on the 32-foot boat. Le escaped out. There was no extra food or water because the Communist soldiers watched for fishermen who were stocking up in preparation for escape, he said. After two days at sea, they ran out of food. After four days, the engine died and they could only drift with the currents.

It was another nine days before a Japanese fishing boat stopped and picked them up. The captain, a Korean, helped them because he had family in Vietnam.

THUY AND DAN LE CAME TO MANCHESTER FROM SAIGON ... both graduated with honors from Manchester High School

With money sent by relatives in Manchester, they left the camp and joined them here, Miss Le said.

THE FIRST MONTHS were very difficult, the Les said. They knew no English and felt lost. The friend who had sponsored Dan left for California about two months after he arrived in Manchester.

Dan Le started school at Bennett Junior High School. Part of his day was spent in English as a Second Language classes and part in regular classes.

"Math class was my favorite because you didn't have to listen," he said. "You just had to know X and Y. School was hard because he had no friends and didn't understand what was going on, Le said. That summer he had a job in the town Highway Department, made his first friend, who taught him American culture, and studied English five hours a day.

His first year at Manchester High School he spent part of his time in ESL classes and part in regular classes. "After I got better, I got to hang around with the kids and learn idioms," he said. That year he made friends and learned "the way how to party and how to have plans and how to play sports."

They Le had a more difficult time adjusting. Le was taken to a refugee camp in Japan, where he stayed for a year. Conditions at the camp were good and the refugees were allowed to work and earn money, he said. He worked in a Sony factory and sent the money back to Saigon. After a year, he and his relatives came to Manchester, where his cousin had a friend who sponsored them.

THUY LE's story was slightly different. By the time she left Saigon with her mother in 1979, escape by sea was common and semi-legal. They paid the government — with money sent by Dan — for space on a small, overcrowded boat.

They almost died on the trip, Miss Le said. Their first day out, they hit a storm. Later Thai pirates boarded the ship and took all their valuables. They came ashore on Thailand, where they spent eight months in a refugee camp that was "just like a prison," Miss Le said.

The camp had 4,000 refugees and was about the size of Manchester High School, Miss Le said. Each person had a space about the size of a sofa and no one was allowed to leave the camp.

PAT SIMMONS SHOWS SHEET MUSIC ... to kindergarten students at Waddell

Kindergarteners close year on wings of music

By Nancy Thompson Herald Reporter

Anita Sutton's kindergarten class at Waddell School put together raspberries and beats and other ingredients Monday to make "musical soup."

The recipe for the dish came from Pat Simmons, who gives private lessons in music appreciation and piano preparation to children beginning at age three.

Mrs. Simmons, who teaches one of the students in Mrs. Sutton's class, paid a special visit to the afternoon kindergarten class as part of the school's Party Day, marking the end of the school year.

Mrs. Simmons started off by asking the children to make raspberries, a buzzing sound made by blowing air out of the month while holding the lips loosely together.

"When you see the lips shaking, that's called a vibration," Mrs. Simmons said. "That's what causes a sound. So music starts with a vibration." All sounds, however, are not music, the class agreed after making various animal noises.

Mrs. Simmons pulled out a giant soup bowl and began to add the ingredients necessary to make sounds into music. "The first ingredient we need is something called pitch," she said, explaining that pitch is whether a sound is high or low.

Using a battery-operated computer organ, Mrs. Simmons had the students make up a song. Each student selected two pitches, or notes. The organ stored the notes in sequence in its memory and played them back in order as a song.

"To truly make these sounds into a song, however," Mrs. Simmons explained the second ingredient needed is tone. She played the same notes on the computer organ, a piano and a recorder and the students described the differences in tone, noting that the recorder has an airy sound, the piano has a pounding sound and the organ sounded electric.

The next ingredient was loudness, Mrs. Simmons said. "When you see the lips shaking, that's called a vibration," Mrs. Simmons said. "That's what causes a sound. So music starts with a vibration." All sounds, however, are not music, the class agreed after making various animal noises.

Zoning change proposed to allow conversion of homes to offices

Under present zone regulations you can build an office building in a Residence C zone, but you can't convert a house in that zone to total office use.

Arthur Joel Janenda has proposed a change in regulations that would permit conversion of Residence C houses to office uses and the Planning and Zoning Commission will conduct a hearing on the proposal July 12.

Under the change the conversions would be permitted as special exceptions provided the house is not enlarged, its exterior appearance is not changed, no merchandising is in the building, the use is restricted to offices, and adequate parking is provided as required by the existing regulations.

Janenda cited the conversion of houses near the Superior Court building in Hartford to law offices as an example of how it might be possible to preserve residences that have become uneconomical for residential use.

It is possible under current regulations to establish offices in a Residence C zone house so long as part of the building remains residential, Janenda said that is sometimes not feasible.

Manchester may get eligibility for flood aid

If Gov. William A. O'Neill and Congresswoman Barbara B. Kennelly have their way, Manchester will be included in the federal disaster area declared following the heavy rains and flooding that wrecked havoc earlier this month.

The disaster area now includes four of Connecticut's six counties. But Greg Everts, a staff person from Mrs. Kennelly's Washington office, said Thursday the Federal Emergency Management Agency is being asked to include Hartford and Tolland counties in the disaster area.

Inclusion in the disaster area will allow towns to collect from the federal government three-quarters of the costs of storm damage to public property.

Also, an assistance center will be opened today and Saturday at the former Plant Junior High School, 17 Whiting Lane, West Hartford, for individuals and small businesses who suffered storm damage. People can find out there if they qualify for low-interest federal loans or other aid.

In Manchester the amount of damage to public property was $10,000, Everts said. Towns in the area which suffered extensive damage were Glastonbury, at $300,000, and Hebron, at $210,000.

Most of the damage in those towns involved roads and bridges, he said. In Manchester much of the $10,000 cost is represented in overtime pay for town workers who cleared culverts during the storm and in pay for work done to clean up debris after it.

There was not much physical damage. General Manager Robert Weiss later said that extensive storm run water done over the past 10 years stood the town in good stead.

Total cost of estimated damage to public property in Hartford and Tolland counties was $943,746, Everts said.

"Originally, they didn't think the damage in the two counties was too bad," said Everts, explaining why Hartford and Tolland counties were excluded from the original disaster area.

Southern portions of the state were especially hard hit. It's up to the Federal Emergency Management Agency to decide whether to extend the disaster area which was declared by President Ronald Reagan.

The Connecticut Transit Company has announced that it will discontinue all bus service to and from the Pioneer Industrial Park because of insufficient ridership.

The service cutback, effective Monday, will eliminate the 6:30 a.m. downtown service from downtown Hartford to Pioneer and International Inc. and the 3:40 p.m. inbound trip from Pioneer to Hartford. Only two people used the bus according to a Department of Transportation spokesman.

The Pioneer route is one of six that the Department of Transportation has earmarked for elimination. State Transportation Commissioner J. William Burns says cuts will affect "only 8 percent" of Connecticut Transit's riders, while saving the DOT about $150,000 annually.

Presidential immunity rule bitterly divides high court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court's landmark ruling that presidents cannot be sued for their official actions provoked angry dissenting justices to say the decision is a "throwback" to the old notion that the king can do no wrong.

The bitterly divided court, in a 5-4 ruling that is likely to be debated for years, concluded that Richard Nixon and any other president are immune from civil suits — even for deliberately violating the rights of citizens.

The historic decision on the doctrine of presidential immunity is a victory for Nixon and a defeat for the Pentagon "whistleblower" Ernest Fitzgerald, who was fired in 1969.

Justice Lewis Powell, writing for the majority, argued that giving chief executives such blanket immunity "will not leave the nation without sufficient protection against misconduct."

"There remains the constitutional remedy of impeachment and adding there are other 'formal and informal checks' on presidential action."

"The president is subjected to constant scrutiny by the press."

"Vigilant oversight by Congress also may serve to deter presidential abuses of office."

"A desire to earn re-election, and 'a president's traditional concern for his historical stature.'"

The outcome sparked outrage among four dissenting justices, who charged the ruling threatens the Constitution's most basic principles by placing the president "above the law."

Led by Justice Byron White, they argued, "Attaching absolute immunity to the office of the president places the president above the law. It is a reversion to the old notion that the king can do no wrong."

Fitzgerald, now 55, said he was fired by Nixon and his aides in retaliation for revealing multibillion dollar aircraft cost overruns.

Following a 13-year legal battle, he was reinstated at the Pentagon this week and the Air Force assessed $200,000 in legal costs he piled up fighting to get his job back.

A Nixon spokesman said the former president, who now lives in Saddle River, N.J., would have no comment.

White's dissent was joined by Justices William Brennan, Thurgood Marshall and Harry Blackmun, the only one of Nixon's four appointees on the court to vote against him.

Fitzgerald told a news conference, "The ruling regarding Mr. Nixon ought to frighten anyone who loves liberty."

In their key conclusion, the majority declared presidential immunity "is rooted in the separation of powers under the Constitution."

The doctrine divides the government's authority among the president, Congress and the courts, and lays out a system of checks and balances.

Argentina to lift ban on political activity

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — The Argentine army's hand-picked president, Reynaldo Bignone, pledged to lift the military government's six-year ban on political activity Monday and hold elections by early 1984.

In a four-hour closed-door meeting seeking support from the leaders of most Argentine political parties, Bignone pledged to restore party freedom on the day he is inaugurated — July 1.

"I believe that, finally, we're on the road to democracy," said Carlos Costin, president of the moderate Radical Party, following the meeting in the Argentine Congress, which has not met since the military seized power in 1976.

Permission to use the building for the meeting was grudgingly granted by the military regime to Bignone, a retired general handpicked by Army commander Gen. Cristiano Nicolaides.

His appointment followed the ouster last week of President Leopoldo Galtieri, who resigned under pressure from his military junta partners in the wake of the country's defeat in the Falkland Islands war.

"He (Bignone) has said that on July 1 the ban on politics will be lifted," said Enrique Vanoli, another Radical Party politician.

Vanoli said Bignone pledged to hold elections that will return the country to democratic rule by 1984 and sooner if possible.

Douindo Bittel, the Peronist leader, said the meeting was one of "high patriotic spirit."

As the politicians arrived for the meeting, about 50 people outside the building had chanted, "Power to the people, military to the barracks!"

Bignone, 54, was named to become president Tuesday over the opposition of the Argentine navy and air force — a split the politicians said they attacked during the meeting.

The air force and navy, who had shared the military government for six years, dropped out of the governing junta when the army insisted on appointing Bignone instead of a civilian president.

Bignone's presidency is reported questioned even by sectors of the army, and top-ranking generals held a "tumultuous" meeting Wednesday to discuss his rule, military sources said.

Bignone also is encountering stiff resistance from civilian opponents.

The launch of a Soviet Soyuz spacecraft Thursday from Russia's central Asia spaceport raised to five the number of people now in orbit.

Its crew, Frenchman Jean-Loup Christen, 43, and two Soviets, commander Vladimir Dzhanibekov, 40, and Alexander Ivanchenkov, 41, headed toward a rendezvous today with two cosmonauts aboard the Soviet Salyut 7 space station.

They are scheduled to return to Earth July 2, two days before Matiny and Hartfield land.

The shuttle's countdown was interrupted as planned Thursday night for 14 hours to give technicians time to service the "secret" military payload secured in the shuttle's cargo bay.

Although public documents revealed it as an infrared radiation sensor testing future airplane and missile detection technology, Air Force officials said it, and all future military shuttle cargoes, are classified secret when linked to the shuttle to keep the Soviets guessing about their nature.

"I believe that it's absolutely essential that we do everything we can to prevent any adversary from learning in any specific way what we do and how well we do it," said Lt. Col. James Jacoby, deputy director for advanced technology at Air Force headquarters.

The Soviet Soyuz and Salyut missions demonstrate the diverging paths the American and Russian space programs have taken in recent years.

ATLANTA (UPI) — Gladys Christopher was waiting for an early morning bus in a placid part of town when down the street came a cavalcade that might have turned Tucson to stone.

In the vanguard was a large, hairy and screeching ape, hurtling directly at Mrs. Christopher. Behind her a pair of police cars with their blue lights flashing and their sirens wailing, "saying over their loudspeaker that there was a wild ape and to get out of the way."

"I turned and started to run but the animal jumped on me and threw me to the ground," Mrs. Christopher said Thursday. "It just attacked me."

It was the last hurrah of Susie the chimpanzee.

Susie, a well-known escape artist, has gotten considerable light for her antics for her past breakouts from the Siam Zoo Pet Center. But this time the 4-foot-tall, 140-pound ape turned ugly, attacking five people and was finally shot five times by a policeman. Her owner called it murder.

Mrs. Christopher, whose age was not revealed but who had required 10 stitches, had a somewhat different view.

"Being attacked by a monkey is not the thing you want to happen to you, especially in the mornings," Mrs. Christopher said primly.

Space shuttle crew heads to Fla. for Sunday launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The fourth crew of the space shuttle Columbia spent its last night in Houston before heading to the spaceport for a launch Sunday that will put two Americans, a Frenchman and two Russians in orbit at the same time.

Astronauts Thomas "Ken" Mattingly and Henry W. Hartfield were scheduled to land at nearby Patrick Air Force Base late in the afternoon today in separate jet trainers from their homes in Houston.

The countdown for their 11 a.m. EDT blastoff on the shuttle's final shakedown cruise rolled along smoothly. Forecasters said a frontal system headed toward the Cape should have passed by launch time and good weather was expected for the start of the seven-day mission.

Panel cuts programs for the poor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The GOP-led Senate Finance Committee has agreed to cut programs for the poor and elderly, but adjourned until next week when Democrats will seek to restore unemployment compensation to veterans.

The panel Thursday began trying to implement the budget plan approved the day before and took the first step by approving $2.7 billion in Medicare and Medicaid program reductions.

The cuts are slightly below the amount required by the budget plan, but its three-year savings projection of $15.2 billion is more than the blueprint requires.

Democrats, led by Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey, objected to a committee effort to tighten rules that bar discharged servicemen from returning to private life on unemployment compensation rolls.

"I think it's unfair and it's a slap in the face to people who have served their country," Bradley said of the ban that was implemented as part of last year's record budget cuts. "What we did last year was a big mistake."

Sen. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., moved to restore the veterans' eligibility for unemployment compensation.

When it appeared the proposal might be approved, Chairman Bob Dole, R-Kan., adjourned the meeting and promised to take it up next Tuesday.

The law was changed in 1981 so servicemen who left after their tour of duty without enlisting were treated like citizens who voluntarily quit jobs — they were barred from unemployment benefits.

The Senate Wednesday passed the $770 billion fiscal 1983 budget plan, approved the previous day by the House.

The votes ended a five-month budget battle on Capitol Hill, but immediately began a new one — on winning agreement to specific budget cuts and tax increases to conform with the budget plan's guidelines.

In beginning the process Thursday, the Finance Committee voted 15-6 for a package of changes — many of them requested by President Reagan — that affect beneficiaries and providers of the subsidized health care programs for the elderly and the disabled.

It also agreed to several eligibility and benefit changes totaling more than $700 million in Aid to Families with Dependent Children, the principal welfare program.

Feminists plan new rights fight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The president of the National Organization for Women, conceding the fight for the Equal Rights Amendment has ended in defeat, says it's now time to begin a different kind of fight for equality for women.

"We are at the end of one type of campaign and at the beginning of another," said Eleanor Smeal, announcing plans to combat sex discrimination by business interests.

Several members of Congress have said they plan to reintroduce the amendment and begin anew the process of ratifying it. But Ms. Smeal said her organization — a leader in the failed ratification effort — will not push it now.

"We will not again seriously pursue the ERA until we've made a major dent in changing the composition of Congress, as well as the state legislatures" to include more women and men who support the goal, she said.

She said NOW will direct its immediate efforts to the electoral process and to fighting with boycotts and other political and economic means — sex discrimination in business.

"The fight for equality for women will go on, stronger than ever, until justice is ours," she told a crowded news conference Thursday.

London subway workers strike in prelude to national walkout

LONDON (UPI) — Railwaymen struck London's subway system today in a prelude to a nationwide rail strike Monday that threatens to bring chaos to the capital and disrupt industry throughout the country.

The city's 1 million daily underground riders gritted their teeth for a fifth consecutive day of virtually no subways, smothered, overcrowded buses and a dearth of taxis.

A spokeswoman for London Transport said at the midnight strike deadline that officials would not know if any of the 14,000

National Union of Railwaymen subway workers would turn up for the morning rush hour.

"We will just have to wait and see how badly service is hit," she said, adding that some service might be provided by management and 2,000 train drivers who agreed Thursday to return to work today.

The midnight stoppage by 14,000 NUR workers came after 30 members were suspended for refusing to obey new work schedules. Their suspension Monday set off a four-day slowdown that reduced London's seven subway lines to a crawl.

Friday's walkout set the stage for a nationwide strike over pay against British Rail ordered by the NUR leadership, but without widespread support from the rank-and-file.

BR has offered a 5 percent raise linked to increases in productivity. The NUR has refused to link any pay increase to performance.

NUR member Christine Fraiser said at a meeting of 500 unionists in York, northeast of London, "It's madness to strike. Everyone we speak to is worried about the effect and we would sooner have a job than a pay rise."

As the three dragged the bags into a wooded area, the plane turned around and took off.

Kaufman said the pilot, Robert Humeston, 47, flew the plane to nearby Long Island-MacArthur Airport in Bohemia, N.Y. Agents followed him and arrested him at his home in Sayville.

Humeston carried two loaded guns but offered no resistance, officials said.

The other three suspects were identified as David Silvergeld, 45, an ex-lawyer from New York City; Brian Monaghan, 43, a New York City restaurant owner; and Fernando Alzate, 37, of Medellin, Colombia.

Four arrested in big drug bust

NEW YORK (UPI) — Federal drug agents arrested four men and found $200 million in cocaine in the largest seizure of the drug in the Northeast.

Customs spokesman Michael Kaufman said three men were captured early Thursday in Mastic, N.Y., during a police chase from Brookhaven Airport, where they had loaded the cocaine from a plane into a station wagon loaded with a sub-machine gun, two 9mm pistols, three hand grenades, tear gas, garrotting wire, knives and daggers, authorities said.

The pilot of the plane was arrested later at his home.

The arrests were the culmination of a 10-month investigation, Kaufman said, and more were expected.

Authorities said the 610 pounds of cocaine was wrapped in plastic bags and newspapers and worth $200 million.

The drugs arrived at the airport aboard a twin-engine Cessna aircraft from South America, Kaufman said. As the plane taxied down the runway, Kaufman said, waiting Drug Enforcement Administration agents saw eight duffel bags tossed from it. Three men jumped from the craft.

It costs so little, is worth so much

The stage is set for another round of debate on Project Concern, the busing program that brings Hartford students to Manchester schools.

The Hartford Board of Education voted earlier this month to eliminate the program except for those students who will be in senior high school next fall.

The Manchester school administration is recommending that the Manchester Board of Education allow the Hartford students already enrolled in Manchester schools to complete their education here with no charge for tuition. The students would have to provide their own transportation, however.

On Monday night, the Board of Education will take up that suggestion. There are indications that board members will not be the only ones to be heard on the subject. A school official said he would not be surprised if the public, particularly opponents of the program, turn out at Monday's meeting.

Fifteen years ago, when the program was first instituted,

Manchester Spotlight

By Nancy Thompson — Herald Reporter

Manchester voters went in an advisory referendum allowing Project Concern. The school board, however, voted the opposite way and the program went forward.

Since that time, school administrators say, there have been no major problems with the program or the students.

According to school administrators, the cost to continue the program for students already in the schools will be minimal. Project Concern students will be placed only in rooms where there is space, so no additional teachers or equipment are necessary. Superintendent of Schools James P. Kennedy estimated the cost of supplies for those students at $57 per pupil per year.

The Hartford school system used to pay tuition for the students who attended Manchester schools — $600 per student. If the students become a permanent part of the Manchester school population, the schools will receive approximately $626 per year in state aid per student.

THE COST is so small and the returns for middle-class white students are so great, I know that from my own experience.

When I started grade school, four blocks from my house, about 100 percent of the students were white. The only exception I can think of was a half-Japanese boy whose last name was Grebinski, the contribution of his non-Japanese father.

When I graduated nine years later, one-third of my class was black. Unlike the kids who started kindergarten there, they rode to school on city buses.

The sudden infusion of new students was somewhat traumatic for the school and the neighborhood. But looking back, the tension isn't what I remember. What I remember is the people, the friends who shared out of the sea of black faces who got off the buses.

I remember a quiet, studious girl with large dark eyes who giggled in the same tones as my friends and I — over the same subjects, and, in time, of the same groups.

I remember another girl, quite the antithesis of the first, whose life revolved around becoming a member of the "Matadors," a street gang, and who told me about a life that had no room for homework and crushes on high school boys and the other things I thought were important. We were alien to one another, but rather than being alienated by our differences, we learned from them.

AND I REMEMBER a boy who quickly took his place as class clown. He could make anyone, even the teachers, laugh. But there was one time when no one laughed, when he was the only boy to show up on class day without a jacket and tie, because he didn't own one.

We didn't even laugh when he was a teacher's jacket in the class picture. It was too big, but the important thing was that he didn't look different from everyone else.

There are lessons you learn from books and lessons you learn from people. The cost of a few books and paper and pencils should not keep Manchester's children from having the chance to learn everything that they can.

Threat of the depths

WASHINGTON — Aside from the possibility of a massive Argentine air strike, the British had three "wild cards" to worry about in the Falkland Islands — the enemy's marines, Salta, San Luis and Santiago del Estero.

The Salta and the San Luis, built eight years ago in West Germany, are equipped with the same deadly Tigerfish torpedoes the British used to sink the Argentine cruiser General Belgrano. The Santiago del Estero, though, is a relative antique built by the United States before 1945, has a range of 12,000 miles between refuelings and constitutes a major threat to the British invasion fleet.

The British concern over the Argentine subs was shared, though with a certain detachment, by U.S. military officials. The Pentagon has spent millions trying to make sure the United States has sufficient and sophisticated anti-submarine warfare weapons to protect our fleet from Soviet undersea marauders.

THE FULL NATURE of the submarine threat is detailed in a series of secret and top-secret Pentagon and CIA documents shown to my associate Dan Van Atta.

The Pentagon estimates that the Soviet Navy now has 71 nuclear-powered submarines of various types that are also armed with nuclear weapons. They are considered to be the prime undersea threat to the United States.

In addition, the Soviets have 285 attack submarines carrying conventional weapons, and can count on each from the Poles and Bulgarians. Thus the U.S. and NATO forces have a total of 364 Sovietbloc subs to worry about.

To combat them, the Allied anti-submarine forces has a total of 1,045 fixed-wing aircraft and helicopters, with an additional 149 in reserve. These sub chasers carry a knockout punch: nuclear depth bombs. They can be delivered by either planes or helicopters.

In addition, the U.S. arsenal includes an anti-submarine nuclear rocket, called Asroc, which is fired from surface ships, and a similar sub-to-sub rocket called Subroc. However, the Subroc nuclear rocket is technologically obsolete and will be phased out by 1989.

These nuclear torpedoes and depth charges, of course, cannot be used in any limited war. For their use would surely touch off a nuclear exchange that could escalate into a holocaust. With this in mind, the Pentagon must also look to its conventional anti-submarine weapons.

But this in turn leads to another problem, as a Pentagon document points out: "Because individual kill probability tends to be low in conventional anti-submarine warfare, it could take as long as three months to bring the Soviet submarine threat under control in the Atlantic and the Pacific. During those months, if typical estimates are valid, we could lose as much as 15 percent of U.S. and allied reinforcement and resupply shipping, while the Soviets could lose up to 70 percent of their submarines.

And it seems unlikely that either side would put up with such severe losses without resorting to nuclear weapons.

What do CIA agents do in their spare time? Go to spy movies, of course. A sign posted in the lobby of CIA headquarters in Langley, Va., promoted "The KGB Connection" — a flick that supposedly tells all about the Kremlin's spy outfit. Employees were urged to attend the hush-hush screening.

Who speaks for saving Project?

When the Board of Education takes up the question of allowing Project Concern students who want to do so to remain in Manchester Schools, there may be some residents other than the Board of Education members who favor it.

But if the letters to the editor that have been written to the Manchester Herald are any indication, there won't be many of them. Not one letter supporting the move has been received.

And if the public pronouncements made on the subject are a guide, the Board of Education is on its own. The Human Relations Commission met last week and the topic was not broached.

Since one of the issues is whether the students who come here from Hartford and the students who live here will continue to have the benefit of each other's influence, it would seem to be a proper matter of concern for the Human Relations Commission, which has not been reluctant to make its feelings known on other topics recently.

The same can be said of leaders of the town's black community. Equal opportunity, after all, is not simply a matter of who will be considered and hired for what job. It is, at its foundation, a question of whether anyone will have his choices narrowed as a result of his color, sex, or ethnic origin.

It would seem appropriate for black leaders in Manchester to say something on the subject of Project Concern publicly, preferably at the meeting of the Board of Education.

And it is not a question of whether white dominated suburban schools are intrinsically superior to inner city schools. It is now a question of whether some students from Hartford who have made an investment in and a contribution to the Manchester schools will be permitted to decide whether they want to stay here.

Their presence has a far greater influence, in the long haul, on equal opportunity, than the selection of a top administrator in town government who is a minority member.

The number of black citizens in Manchester has increased. Their number is now put at 400 and, while there is no easy way to prove it, some who have moved to Manchester recently may have been drawn by contact with Project Concern students.

It has been suggested that a political voting bloc if it necessary to do that to achieve an objective.

They don't have to form a bloc, however, to have a say on the subject of the students. They can articulate their feelings on the matter individually. Opponents will.

Why should we subsidize city?

To the Editor:

Over the past 15 years some national educational leaders have complained about the gross failures of the federal and state governments' social engineering programs which have been foisted upon the general public and the educational establishment at tremendous cost and waste of taxpayers' money.

One of the local expensive social-educational programs appears to be the Hartford Project Concern program. Less than 3 percent of Hartford's public school students were based at high tax cost to suburban towns and enrolled in the suburban schools at a low tax cost tuition fee. Additional tax money were made available for special teachers and aides, plus extra services.

In the meantime, more and more federal and state tax monies were being poured into Hartford's public school system for all types of special social-educational programs while Hartford's school board could not or would not fund enough tax monies for books and other essential educational tools for all of their students.

How can the Manchester public school system afford to teach the Project Concern students for only $600 each, when it costs about $2,000 for each Manchester student to be educated in the same schools? Don't all the students, Manchester's and Project Concern's, receive the same education, have the same educational facilities — if so, why the cost differential?

I would like to suggest that Manchester's $2,000 per student cost is more than subsidizing the $600 tuition cost per Project Concern student. Once again the educational and financial arrangements for the Project Concern program appear to be the customary rip-off to the taxpayers who are paying the bill being presented by the federal, state and local political social engineers. Manchester's Board of Education at its next public meeting on Monday, should be asked by the taxpayers who are already burdened by excessive tax increases — why the Manchester school system should underwrite the "tuition-free" costs for the 60 students from Hartford's former Project Concern program. Hartford voted to eliminate the program in order to retain more federal and state funding for the benefit of all students in the Hartford school system. Now comes our esteemed school superintendent and suggests that we taxpayers pay the cost of tuition for these 60 Hartford students to continue to attend our schools.

Again, why should Manchester's taxpayers pay for Hartford's students when the funds are available to the city of Hartford's school system from the state and federal treasuries?

A football casualty?

To the Editor:

Within the past few weeks the city of Hartford with its estimated $1.3-million city surplus chose not to appropriate public tax funds which would be needed in order to continue the city's Project Concern educational program for the 1982-83 school term.

Subsequently, Manchester's taxpayers are being asked by the local Board of Education to continue to support the Project Concern program with "free tuition" funding for about 60 Hartford students at a cost of $36,000.

I wonder if the Project Concern program is not yet another example and casualty of the social-political football game?

Case in point: The Hartford Board of Education gave up Project Concern for "economic reasons" (one being that Hartford "would

Free-loading, high-living stepson too much for him

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are 62 and 63 and just retired. This is a second marriage for both of us. Her 24-year-old son by a previous marriage is living with us. He has a good job, but I like to live high. He has a $25,000 sports car, a $1,200 health spa membership and plenty of money for ski trips, but he can't pay his mother the $25 a week he agreed to pay her for living at home, getting meals when he wants them and all his laundry done. My wife even has to pay his telephone bill. This was bad enough, but when she had to pay his income taxes, I hit the ceiling!

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

When I was going through this, but in my grief I couldn't stand to see her so happily married, so I told her that her husband had somebody else, too. I'm sure she didn't believe me, but she didn't get mad at me, and it was never mentioned again. However, after that we drifted apart, and now we rarely see each other unless we meet accidentally on the street or in a store. I am now happily married to a fine man and the lie I told keeps bothering me. I miss the friendship we used to have.

This is really getting to me. Should I break down and tell her the truth? Or just try to start the friendship all over again and not mention it?

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago my husband, whom I loved very much, left me for another woman. I was heartbroken. Had a dear friend who was very supportive of me beautiful and have been trying to find out who wrote it, but have had no success. I hope you not only think it's worth sharing with your readers, but will help me find the author.

ON YOUTH

"Youth is not entirely a time of life — it is a state of mind. It is not wholly a matter of ripe cheeks, red lips or supple knees. It is a temper and a quality of the imagination, a vigor of the emotions.

"Nobody grows old by merely living a number of years. People grow old only by deserting their ideals. You are as young as your faith, as old as your doubt; as young as your self-confidence, as old as your fears; as young as your hope, as old as your despair.

Thoughts

Fundamentalists would have us believe that Scripture can be our guide in all circumstances. Surely it is true that the Bible can give us wise counsel in most instances. But what do you do when contradictory counsel is found in different verses? I was involved in just such a case that ultimately had to be resolved in court.

Mr. Cohen died leaving a widow and three sons. The distraught widow took some small comfort in the fact that she owned two cemetery plots and some day in the future she would again be at her husband's side when she herself died. Then, to her dismay, she learned that her husband's will indicated he wanted to be cremated, but that the cemetery, like almost all Jewish cemeteries, would not accept for burial the ashes of a cremated body.

Mr. Cohen's survivors faced a conflict of several moral imperatives — all of them supported by religious tradition. First, the responsibility to honor one's father, presumably by fulfilling the terms of his will. Secondly, to honor one's mother, to do all in one's power to lessen her grief. Third, the Jewish dictum forbidding cremation.

The final decision was not unanimous. Tomorrow's Thoughts will detail their decision-making process.

Ask doctor to change drug which causes constipation

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am now 79, and was troubled with constipation most of my life until I followed your suggestions about. By taking two heaping teaspoons of bran mixed with regular cereal on a daily basis, I have not needed a laxative for three years. It has been wonderful and I feel great.

But alas, now my doctor prescribed Norpace, 150 mg, to correct a heart problem and immediately the constipation returned. I have increased the bran to three heaping teaspoons per day, which has helped some, but the stool is still too hard and not too regular. Also there is quite a bit of straining required.

Should I increase the bran even more or do you have any other suggestions? The heart specialist who prescribed the Norpace always seems too busy and phone calls are taken, relayed and answered by his nurse.

New England Relays on weekend

By Earl Yost Sports Editor

Stage is set for the seventh annual Manchester Community College promoted New England Relays Saturday and Sunday.

Men and women of all ages will be displaying their talents in the 66-event two-day spectacle starting Saturday morning at 9 o'clock at Manchester High's Pete Wigren Track.

Events are listed up to 4:45 including the National 56-pound weight throw competition starting at 2 o'clock.

The scene will shift to the MCC campus Sunday morning for the start-and-finish-of the Connecticut 10-Kilometer Championship race.

JOHN WARD ... defends javelin honor will be shooting for an all-time record of 10 triumphs against the likes of veterans Al Hall and Bob Backus, two ex-Olympians, and Bill Borden of Southern Connecticut, the best of the young weightmen.

Cecil Hopp, a pretty Stanford University distance runner and national champion, will share the spotlight with former Ireland Olympian Mike O'Shea and ex-Brown University cross country standout Tom Ratafiec and Bob Clifford. The latter, coming off an injury, capped the 12-mile run the past two years and is a well-known marathoner who got his start running at East Catholic High.

One young man who thrilled onlookers two years ago when he tossed the javelin 62.56 meters as a high school (Rockville) entry is John Ward. Last year, the Central Connecticut State College athlete added the Men's Open title with a toss of 221 feet, 8 inches.

Prizes will be awarded the top three places in each of the Open Sub Masters, Master and Grand Sub Divisions for both men and women. Among the 60 awards will be a trip to the 1984 Summer Olympic Games.

One contestant the first day will also win a trip to the Olympic Games, the names being drawn at random. Thanks to a generous financial contribution from United Technologies, and another from Travelers Insurance, the relays are free of charge.

All that's needed for success is good weather.

ED BROWN ... seeks triple

There, the lady once known here as "Little Miss Moffit," is Pam Shriver, seeded seventh and breathing no harder after her straight-set win, headed the Center Court action against Kathy Rinaldi. Thirteen other seeded players were scheduled for action.

Thursday's sudden sunshine did wonders for the quality of play. Some sparking tennis saw the exit of No. 5 women's seed Hanna Mandlikova, 16th seed Evonne Cawley and eighth seed Mima Jausovec.

But the sunshine day fittingly belonged to one of Wimbledon's most beloved players, Billie Jean King.

King had the court of honor for his strenuous four-set win over stubborn John Alexander of Australia. But the crowd's heart and the whole day's honor was on Court 14, in the center court's shadow.

When I hit 100 it makes me very tired," the 38-year-old veteran chirped after her 63, 6-2 win over Switzerland's Claudia Pasquale. "But I'm not tired."

"I guess that's a contradiction, but I'd be wonderful if I lasted this long."

Wimbledon gave her a 1977 Wimbledon Centennial commemorative plate, yet it seemed hardly enough. The plate Billie Jean King really wants is the golden one handed to the women's singles winner on a hopefully sunny Saturday eight days from now.

At Robertson, Kathy McConnell stroked four hits, Linda Chapman, Speedy Pemberton and Enes Goungos three apiece and Claudia Sweetland a pair for Anderson's. Ginny Roback had two of Pub's eight safeties.

Bob & Marie's Pizza placed three runs in the sixth for an 8-6 come-from-behind win over Trash-Away at Robertson. Mike Going zipped out four hits and Kenny Goldberg, Paul Miller, Rob Vogt, Barry Bernstein and Bill Tedford two apiece for B&M. Bill Chudzik, Jeff Miller, Greg Pearson and Jay McConville each had two blows for Trash-Away.

B.A. Club applied the whitewash brush to Turpin's Turf, 9-0, at Nike. Craig Carpenter, Reliever Judy Van Deere and Dan Fagan each tipped two hits for B.A. while Greg Holmes had a pair for Turpin's.

Ward hit came up with an 11-run fifth inning en route to a 15-4 drub over the Elks at Pagan. Ken Lee and Jeff Nickerson each stroked

Sun finally shines on Wimbledon court

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Jimmy Connors bent to bounce the ball before serving on Wimbledon's center court and went right with shock.

Connors turned and peered in amazement at the sun, making almost its first appearance of what until that moment, had been a dismal Wimbledon championship.

From that turning-point moment, not only the sun but the tournament itself came to life.

Summer flowers, courts actually, were busy. Wimbledon clicked through a jammed schedule as if it happened every day. Even the crowds came back — 30,159 paying customers — the biggest through all weeks.

Friday's weather forecast of "rain at times" hardly dampened spirits a bit, though exactly that sort of climate made the tournament's first three days a misery.

Top women's seed Martina Navratilova, hardy winded by her 6-3, 6-3 victory over Beth Norton Thursday, hoped for equal sunshine for her match with John Javorski.

Medics came up with 10 runs in the third frame to top Nichols Tire, 10-6, at Buckley. Scott Ebroe and Tom Conkin each had two hits and Ron Cole and Chris Carlson hit 2-12. QD clinched the International League title.
