This is how the rich avoid paying taxes

Every year, scores of super-rich Americans earn $200,000 or more, yet pay no federal income taxes whatsoever. Hundreds more earn just as much and pay only a token amount of taxes.

How do these and other high-income tax avoiders get away with it? Just received an advance copy of the Internal Revenue Service's latest report on high-income tax returns, and the pages of statistics paint a startling picture of tax avoidance among the wealthy. Because of the time it takes to compile such a detailed report (the study covers taxable year 1979, but the figures are just as or even more) relevant today. Some of the findings:

FACT: Only about one in every thousand taxpayers is eligible for membership in the IRS' unofficial "high-earners club." To join, you must earn $200,000 or more — only 93,731 taxpayers made it in 1979. Average income for high earners that year: An astounding $388,563 (and probably higher this year).

FACT: About 35,000 high earners — a full 40 percent of the club's membership — paid about the same portion of their earnings to the IRS as a moderately successful wageearner or businessman earning one-fourth to one-half as much annually. These high earners know how to avoid tax rates that reached 70 percent in 1979. (Today the super-rich get the benefit of the new tax law that puts a 50 percent ceiling on tax rates.)

So — what sort of hanky-panky could possibly allow someone earning $388,563 in 12 months to pay little or nothing in taxes?

For starters, a high-income tax-avoider doesn't depend on a 40-5 salary for a living. It's almost impossible to run up a massive amount of deductions to offset a large salary. Indeed, among members of the high-earners club, the average salary was about $144,000, or only about 36 percent of all the income they earned, according to the study.

FOR ALL OTHER taxpayers — the vast majority of Americans who can only dream of membership in the high-earners club — wages and salaries comprise over 85 percent of total yearly earnings. Dividends from corporations, on the other hand, hold almost limitless potential for generating tax deductions. Once upon a time, Congress decreed that sitting in an armchair reading the stock pages of the daily newspaper is just as productive an activity as running an active trade or business. (The year was 1939 and a Depression-weary nation needed investors.) Home office expenses, brokers' fees and transportation to and from shareholders' meetings became deductible. Some hold armchair investments attempted to deduct the cost of the armchair! For taxpayers earning $200,000 or more in the IRS study, almost 20 percent of their total income arrived in the form of dividends.

For all other taxpayers who may own just a few shares of this-or-that company, just over 2 percent of income consists of dividends.

LIKEWISE, high-income taxpayers get involved in a wide range of exotic activities such as venture partnerships and development deals that produce massive tax deductions. Some of these arrangements generate $3 or $4 in tax deductions for every dollar of investment.

The IRS has a name for these schemes: abusive tax shelters. Over 240,000 tax shelter cases are now pending before the IRS.

One of the latest suspects: Attorney General William French Smith, whose interest in a 1979 oil and gas venture is now being investigated by the IRS. Just as members of the high-earners club don't make their money the conventional way, they don't rely on the most traditional types of itemized deductions, either. For the average citizen, the following deductions have the most effect on a tax return: Home mortgage interest, state and local taxes, medical expenses. For members of the high-earners club, however, these deductions are usually much too small to reduce their sky-high income.

INSTEAD, high-income tax-avoiders resort to a number of rare credits and deductions — notably investment interest expenses, casualty losses and the foreign tax credit. Of the 70 high earners who paid no taxes at all in 1979, 31 of them wrote off 70 percent or more of their income taxes by way of the foreign tax credit alone (a credit for taxes paid to foreign governments, usually indicative of significant offshore investments). Another 19 or so wrote off the rest of their taxes with an investment interest reduction (i.e., a deduction for interest paid to banks and other lenders for money that is subsequently invested by the taxpayer to earn still more income).

All of this must be brutally offensive to you, the average taxpayer, who sees the IRS taking a huge bite out of each paycheck week after week. But it's only half the story. Thousands of taxpayers earn well over the $200,000 high-earner's cutoff each year but aren't included in the club because membership is restricted to those with a high adjusted gross income, that is, income that is first reduced by a number of "adjustments" rather than deductions or credits.

ONE CAN DROP OUT of the high-earners club entirely simply by cheating. Businessmen and gangsters alike salt away, by some estimates, hundreds of millions annually in unreported income. Just by failing to report all their income, these cheaters live rich and file a pauper's Form 1040. Congress is currently considering tough new laws to combat this flagrant abuse.

More sophisticated tax avoiders do not depend on such clearly illegal schemes to shelter their income. However, for a person involved in a trade or business, all business-related expenses are so-called "above the line" adjustments that are subtracted from gross income before arriving at adjusted gross income. This is the most common way that high earners with $200,000 or more in gross income escape membership in the high-earners club.

A personal car becomes a company car... A spare bedroom is transformed into an office... Meals, hotels and cruises become notorious "T & E" (travel and entertainment) write-offs, all in the name of business.

ONE SCANDAL currently brewing involves a national marketer of home-care products that sells to customers through independent distributors, usually by door-to-door house calls. Dealers have allegedly been told by representatives of the parent company that they can deduct the cost of family dinners as business conferences and that the cost of dog food can be written off as part of "security expenses." The IRS has instituted a special screening program to locate and investigate independent distributors involved with this company.

Does the IRS cover this vital area of tax abuse in its latest report? Unfortunately, no. Until 1981, the IRS based its entire statistical and audit system on the concept of adjusted gross income, which, as I reported above, fails to recognize the flagging that keeps 300 many high earners out of the $200,000-and-up club. Only in 1981 did the IRS switch to a new system based on total positive income — TPI. This new system measures income before business-related deductions are factored in, and is better at spotting such abuses as the padded expense account than the old system.

If reports on high-income taxpayers — reports that are required to be made annually by federal law to keep tabs on cheating — are based on the TPI system in the future, there will be many times the number of members in the high-earners club as the current report reflects. Then perhaps you'll really set off the fireworks as you, the taxpayer, begin to realize what the rich are getting away with.

Reagan to Begin: Stop the shelling

Derby determination

Israeli and Palestinian guns were silent today as the sixth cease-fire in the 36-day war appeared to hold, but severe strains emerged between Washington and Israel over negotiations for a PLO withdrawal from Lebanon.

The cease-fire was declared Sunday night after the heaviest shelling of the war killed at least 75 people and buried scores of civilians under rubble in both east and west Beirut.

ABC News reported today that President Reagan sent a stern letter to Israel's Prime Minister Menachem Begin telling him to stop shelling Palestinian positions and blocking movement of food and water to west Beirut.

ABC, quoting State Department sources, said Reagan also told Begin the United States may have to talk directly to the Palestine Liberation Organization — a move that would give the guerrilla organization de facto U.S. recognition.

In Tel Aviv, a senior Israeli official said the military would respond to any and all Palestinian provocations and would not tolerate a war of attrition.

Israel's Foreign Ministry Director-General David Kinchev told Beirut radio to meet with U.S. envoy Philip Habib and protest the slow pace of his negotiations to remove the 6,000 PLO guerrillas trapped in west Beirut, said the official, who asked not to be identified.

"There are not good signs coming out of Beirut concerning the PLO," the official said. "They don't want to evacuate Beirut, they want to remain and are using every tactic, political and military, to delay," the official said.

But President Reagan said Sunday there was reason for "optimism" that a settlement could be reached to avert an Israeli invasion of Beirut.

Reagan, speaking to reporters aboard Air Force One, denied Habib Lebanon's presidential palace was hit by 30 shells in west Beirut, Israeli gunners hit an ammunition dump in the Bir Hassan area, sending flames shooting hundreds of feet into the air.

Officials said shells hit the Soviet, Kuwaiti, Libyan, Chinese and United Arab Emirates embassies and set fire to the residence of the French ambassador.

The Palestinians fired round after round of Soviet-made Grad missiles into east Beirut and also bombarded the coastal road packed with cars full of people returning from the beaches in the Christian-controlled

Debate opens today on balancing budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Members of Congress nervous about large deficits are giving close attention to a proposed constitutional amendment backed by President Reagan that would require a balanced federal budget.

The Senate scheduled its first round of debate on the measure for today, while Reagan arranged a Rose Garden ceremony to relate his own support for the proposal.

Despite the strong support the proposal enjoys on the surface — 61 senators and 218 House members are listed as co-sponsors — it faces a possible barrage of amendments in the Senate that leaves its fate uncertain.

"It will probably be easier to pass in the Senate than in the House," said an aide to Senate Republican leader Howard Baker of Tennessee. "But passage here is not a foregone conclusion."

To become part of the Constitution, the measure must be passed by two-thirds of each chamber and subsequently ratified by 38 states.

As recently as last week, the proposed amendment requiring a balanced budget and limiting tax increases appeared assured of passage in the deficit-conscious Senate.

But various members, including Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., a co-sponsor, were considering possible amendments to try to either strengthen or weaken the measure, whose chief sponsor is Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah.

"I didn't think this last week, but I think now there's a chance this may not pass the Senate," said an aide to Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y.

Domenici is "concerned" with the Hatch resolution and is considering offering "rectifying amendments," a staff aide said.

"We don't think it will work right now," the aide said of the Hatch resolution, because Domenici feels it places a "bias on increasing taxes."

Balanced or surplus budgets were the norm from 1789 to 1932. The

Parades celebrate victory

HARTFORD (UPI) — More than 1,000 people paraded through the predominantly Italian South End of the city Sunday to celebrate Italy's World Cup soccer victory.

The crowds carried large banners, American and Italian flags and decorated motorcycles along Franklin Avenue in a proud salute to the Italian team that defeated West Germany 3-1 in Madrid, Spain.

Many of the Italian-Americans had jammed the small coffee shops that dot the wide avenue to follow the game on television and seconds after the game ended, poured into the streets to celebrate.

"We're No. 1" while other carried banners, wore T-shirts and caps in red, white and green, the Italian colors.

Many in the crowd said they could smell victory with the Italian team's first goal in the first 57 minutes and were sure of it when Italy made it 2-0 just two minutes later.

"All the world thought we were beat," said one reveler.

Zinsser says he won't get personal

By Nancy Thompson Herald Reporter

Incumbent state Sen. Carl A. Zinsser emphasized his record today as he officially announced his long-awaited candidacy before a group of prominent Manchester and Glastonbury Republicans.

In his remarks, delivered in the Manchester Municipal Building hearing room, Zinsser, 44, concentrated on legislation he has introduced during his first term in the Legislature and on criticism of the state Democratic administration.

He avoided any reference to his opponent, Manchester Mayor Stephen T. Penny, the only announced Democratic candidate for the 4th Senate District seat.

Penny, by contrast, had directed the remarks during his announcement last month against Zinsser's conservatism.

SPEAKING TO reporters after the official remarks, Zinsser said he plans to campaign on his own record rather than raising Penny's record as a three-term mayor of Manchester.

"I do not want to have this election get into a personality contest," Zinsser said. "If others choose to take the low road, I can't stop them."

When Zinsser and Penny were both elected to the town Board of Directors in 1979, the debate between the two was often heated. In that 13-person race, Penny finished first, with Zinsser a close second.

Zinsser said he spent $15,000 on his 1980 campaign for the Senate, adding, "It will probably take more."

In his remarks, Zinsser emphasized a need for fiscal conservatism in the state government.

"For two years the Democratic-controlled Legislature continued to spend more and more of your money and increase your taxes," he said, noting that fiscal year 1982 ended with a $46-million deficit.

"There is no way that (governor) Bill O'Neill can govern the state of Connecticut without raising taxes," he continued. "The Democrats do not know how to subtract — only add and multiply."

Zinsser cited legislation he has introduced to change the funding formula for state aid to education, remove the party lever from voting machine, and impose penalties on persons who use chemical sprays to committing crimes. None of the bills were successful.

Zinsser said the job of state senator "means more than just voting on legislation during the ses-

Zinsser says he won't get personal

"It means helping people, regardless of their party affiliations or their social status, when they have problems," he said. "If their cause is just, then I am pleased to assist them in any way I can — from introducing legislation for a gentleman in Bolton to permit three-wheel vehicles on the highway to helping young people from Glastonbury to get their passports to assisting a mother on AFDC."

"These don't make headlines, but they're a very big part of the job, for these cases become a part of the record — a record that I am proud to run on."

News Briefing

Storms bring hail, wind

Thunderstorms from the Rockies to the East Coast dumped golf-ball-size hail in Colorado and stirred up violent winds that uprooted trees in Alabama. Residents of Watertown, Wis., put away their canoes today once the remnants of weekend deluges trickled away.
The mercury soared well above 100 degrees in the southwestern deserts of Arizona and California Sunday, Lake Havasu City, Ariz., sizzled at 114 degrees; Bullhead City, 113; Buckeye, 112; Phoenix, 112; Gila Bend, 112 and Yuma, 111.
Palm Springs, Calif., reported 111; Imperial, 110; Thermal, 110; Blythe, 110 and Needles, 110.
Thunderstorms doused the southern and central Rockies and neighboring sections of the High Plains. Merino, Colo., was pelted by hail as a thunderstorm moved through the area southwest of Sterling.
The cloudy, wet weather also caused temperatures to drop from the 90s to the 80s during the late afternoon from Lubbock, Texas, to Las Vegas, N.M.
A flash flood warning was issued late Sunday for Midland County, Texas, where slow moving thunderstorms threatened to cause high water on roadways and in low-lying areas.
East of Abilene, nearly 3 inches of rain fell in slightly more than an hour in western Callahan County near Dudley. Small hail was reported in the Brownwood area.

Dollar drops; gold climbs

In London, the pound opened up against the U.S. currency, selling for $1.755 against Friday's closing price of $1.72.
On Paris markets the dollar dropped to 6.84125 French francs at the opening against 6.92875 last week. In Zurich it sold for 2.09125 Swiss francs, down from 2.1185 last week.
"The dollar dropped because the official lending rate in America fell to almost 13 percent," said one Swiss banker. "The lower interest rates resulted from a bigger-than-expected fall in the U.S. money supply."
On other European markets, the dollar opened in Frankfurt at 2.4610 German marks against 2.46075 last week, while in Brussels it traded for 31.10 Belgian francs against 31.50.
The dollar bought 1,379.50 Italian lire in Milan, down from 1,386.20 at Friday's close.
The dollar suffered one of its steepest drops this year against the Japanese yen, closing at 252.95 yen Monday, compared to last week's close of 257.15 yen.

Fonda's condition better

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Actor Henry Fonda was in improved condition at Cedar-Sinai Hospital today and may be released in a few days, a spokesman said.
Fonda, 77, was undergoing treatment for a urinary tract infection and adjustment of his heart medication. He won this year's Oscar for best actor for "On Golden Pond," which also starred his daughter, Jane Fonda.
Fonda was "very awake and very alert" during the weekend and visited with his wife, Shirley, spokesman Larry Gauth said. "Everything's showing improvement," he said.

Did they film 'Chessee'?

LOVE POINT, Md. (UPI) — A woman whose husband videotaped something resembling the Loch Ness monster swimming in Chesapeake Bay says the experience was like seeing a UFO. Without the film, nobody would believe them.
Robert Frew, his wife, Karen, and some Memorial Day guests watched the creature swim by the Frews' home in Love Point on the bay's Eastern Shore. Frew first watched it through binoculars, then used his videotape camera to film it for three minutes.
"The first time we saw it was about 7 feet long and had a round head about 10 inches in diameter," Mrs. Frew said Sunday. "It dove down and when it came back up we saw it was about 20 feet long. We were staring at each other saying, 'What the hell is this?'"
"It was like seeing a UFO. If there hadn't been a lot of people with us and we didn't have it on tape, we probably would have thought no one would believe we saw this thing," she said.
Mrs. Frew suspects the creature was Chessee, a seldom-seen feature of Maryland legend that inhabits the Chesapeake.

Designer won't attend

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The architect of the controversial Vietnam veterans memorial said today it is doubtful he will attend the dedication ceremonies scheduled for Veterans Day because of planned changes to her concept.
Maya Lin, who as a Yale undergraduate submitted the design for the memorial that was chosen over 1,400 other entries, is unhappy with changes being pushed by veterans groups.
Ms. Lin's design is a simple, black V that bears the names of all known Vietnam fatalities. Officials of the memorial fund have agreed to accept the addition of an American flag and a sculpture of three soldiers to meet veterans' criticism.
Ms. Lin, appearing on NBC's "Today" show, said the competition for the memorial design took three years and her design was unanimously approved by "every single legal governmental board."
But, she said, "two days before you're supposed to be issued a ground-breaking permit, you have political machinations that end up with additions of flags and statues at the last minute. What you've got are two different memorials being built, one that went through a competition and one that was sort of power-played on..."

Guests flee fire in hotel

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hundreds of guests fled a smoky hotel fire in Manhattan's theater district that caused minor injuries to at least four people, officials said Sunday.
The fire at the Milford Plaza Hotel was confined to a room on the 8th floor of the 28-story hotel. It was reported at 3:10 p.m. Sunday and was brought under control in about 15 minutes, fire officials said.
The occupant of the room, who was not identified, suffered a hand injury and smoke inhalation. Three other people, including a police officer who suffered smoke inhalation, were treated for minor injuries, a police spokesman said.

Britain sends POWs home

LONDON (UPI) — Britain will send home the last 593 Argentine prisoners of war from the Falklands war after receipt of messages indicating Argentina accepts an end to fighting in the South Atlantic, the Foreign Office said today.
The decision followed receipt of the latest message from the Argentine government through the Swiss Embassy in Buenos Aires, said the Foreign Office.
The text was not made public, but a Foreign Office spokesman said, "We are now satisfied that Argentina accepts that hostilities are at an end."
Britain sent a formal message to Buenos Aires at the end of last week. Argentina's reply was received Sunday.
Britain already had repatriated more than 10,500 Argentine prisoners.
The last prisoners are aboard a British merchant ship off the Falkland Islands in the South Atlantic.
All are senior Argentine officers, including Gen. Mario Menendez, former commander of Argentine forces on the islands who surrendered with all his troops June 14.
The government earlier said it would hold the remaining 593 prisoners until Argentina confirmed officially it considered the hostilities ended.

U.S. security criticized

MANNHEIM, West Germany (UPI) — A West German newspaper today criticized U.S. military security for allowing a soldier to take an M-90 tank on a wild drive through Mannheim before plunging it into the river, where it drowned.
The soldier was identified as Pvt. Charles F. Keister, 20, of Berwick, Pa., a member of the 8th Brigade of the 8th Infantry Division.
German police said it was a miracle that only four people were injured. Damage was estimated at $400,000.
"It is an image that makes you fearful," said an editorial in the Rhein-Neckar Zeitung.
"A young soldier, whose motives may be personal, takes a combat-ready, heavy tank and drives through a densely populated city," the newspaper said Saturday's incident in which the tank rammed a crowded streetcar, damaged 11 cars and sent people in a pedestrian mall scattering for cover.

Voting is brisk in India

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — More than half of India's lawmakers cast their votes today in the first two hours of polling for the nation's seventh president, expected to be a supporter of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.
Zail Singh, 66, a former freedom fighter and loyal follower of the prime minister, was considered a shoe-in candidate.
Opposing him was Hans Raj Khanna, 70, a former Supreme Court justice put up by opposition parties after he failed to persuade Mrs. Gandhi to agree on a consensus candidate.
In the first two hours of voting ending at noon local time, returning officers said 630 of the 752 members of Parliament had cast their ballots, including Mrs. Gandhi and most of her Cabinet members.

Engineers' strike firm

LONDON (UPI) — Striking locomotive engineers today spurned British Rail's back-tower appeal, dis-rupting service for 1.4 million passengers throughout Britain for the second straight week.
The board of British Rail scheduled a meeting Tuesday to decide whether to completely shut down the national railroad and furlough another 200,000 employees in what could be a prolonged walkout.
"Service is obviously very, very, very much reduced. It is not a good service by any stretch of the imagination," said a spokesman for British Rail.
Talks completely broke down, with the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen standing firm in opposition to British Rail's plan to eliminate the 8-hour workday and substitute flexible work shifts.
Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said the move was necessary to upgrade the railway, which loses $500 million a year despite an $1.5 billion government subsidy.
A spokesman for British Rail said about 10 percent of the railway's 15,000 daily trains were running Monday indicating that about 600 engineers broke the strike and reported for work.

Junior derby race won by girl again

For the sixth straight year, a girl captured the junior championship in the Soap Box Derby races sponsored by the Town Fire Department.
Laura Martin, who was sponsored by DeRosa Auto Sales, won the junior division for racers aged 10 to 12. Thomas Lamta, sponsored by the Donwell Co., won in the senior division for ages 12 to 15.
The races were held Saturday on Brookfield Street.
According to Robert LeDoux, no boy has won the junior division title since the first department began holding the races six years ago.
"Whether the girls are more mature at that age or are better able to use their weight, I don't know," said LeDoux, the assistant director for the program. "No boy has cracked the bubbly yet."
In the senior division, boys and girls have split the title equally, he said.
About 600 people turned out to watch the races under sunny skies, LeDoux said. There were 25 contestants in the junior division and 14 in the senior division.
According to LeDoux, the race cars usually take about five months for the racers to build — with help from their parents. The junior cars are almost identical, he said, while the rules for the senior cars allow more modifications in body type and suspension.
Most of those who race in the junior division are veterans of the state junior division, he said. The two winners will now go on to national competition in Akron, Ohio. LeDoux said the fire department gives the winners each a $400 check to help pay expenses at the nationals. The winners spend a week in Akron, he said, participating in many activities in addition to racing their cars.

Heat didn't deter bargain-hunters at sidewalk sales

By Raymond T. DeMeo
Herald Reporter
The sometimes-stilling heat didn't deter the crowds of bargain-hunters who descended on sidewalk sales on Main Street and at the Manchester Parkade last week.
Some merchants said this year's were the best sidewalk sales ever.
"It was just crazy out here," said Bernard Agter, owner of Regal's Men's Shops on Main Street.
Short sleeve dress shirts for $5 and $7 LeVos were the big sellers at Regal's sidewalk stand, Agter said. The store saw its biggest crowds on Thursday, the first day of Main Street's sale. He also did good business on Saturday, the sale's final day, he said.
Michael Dworkin, owner of Liggett's Flexi-Pharmacy at the Parkade, says this year's was "one of the best sidewalk sales we've ever had since we've had sidewalk sales."
The Parkade's sale lasted from Wednesday through Saturday. "People were coming out for the bargains," Dworkin said. "On Saturday, I thought so many people would be headed for the beach, but instead they came and bought."
Gus Harry, owner of the Adam's Apple gift shop at the Parkade, said response to this year's sale was "good, excellent." The weather didn't help much, though. It was pretty uncomfortable for employees to stand outside.
Mike Boyle, owner of the Mary Lewis Shop on Main Street, reported "about a 40 percent increase in business" at this year's sale compared to 1981.
He said Main Street's merchants should consider lengthening their sidewalk sale to include Wednesday, to better compete with the Parkade's sale.

Suburban schools won't share costs of Hartford busing

Representatives of suburban school districts have rejected a proposal to share transportation costs for Project Concern students with Hartford, a Manchester school official said today.
William E. Deakin, assistant superintendent of schools for administration and personnel, said representatives of the suburban school districts involved in the Project Concern busing program last week with officials of the state Department of Education.
The state proposed the suburban schools split the cost of transportation with Hartford, and reduce their tuition by half. Manchester's Board of Education has agreed to waive tuition for any Project Concern students who want to continue in the school system.
Deakin said, however, that cost-sharing for transportation is not an acceptable solution.
"We're not in a position to do this," he said. Most school districts could not find the money to subsidize busing for the fall, he said.
Manchester officials have estimated it would cost more than $30,000 to continue to bus Hartford school children to Manchester.
A spokesman for the state Department of Education said officials are trying to work out a compromise which would allow Project Concern students to stay in the suburban schools. The Hartford Board of Education has eliminated funding for the program in grades one through nine, allowing only students in senior high to stay in the suburban schools.
Meanwhile, Deakin said parents of six Project Concern students have notified Manchester officials that they want to have their children continue in Manchester schools. The parents will be responsible for the cost of transportation.
Deakin said the schools have sent letters to the parents of all Manchester Project Concern students, notifying them that the students may attend the schools next year. He said he expects more parents to take the schools up on their tuition-free offer.

Band shell finally gets nice weather

The weather finally has become favorable for the Manchester Bicentennial Band Shell and the firms are taking full advantage of it.
An estimated 3,500 persons came out Saturday night to see four bagpipe bands parade, play in mass formation and then as individual groups in the band shell.
Ann Jan Angello treated the audience to some Irish step dancing and gave a short talk on the custom.
William Frank Taggart, a member of the original 1914 Manchester Pipe Band, was on stage for the ceremonies. He is 89 years old.
The participating bands were the Manchester Pipe Band, St. Patrick's Pipe Band, plimix Temple Highlanders Pipe Band and the Stewart Highlanders Pipe Band.
The audience contributed $25 at the freewill collection. The proceeds will be used for future programs at the shell.
Sponsors of the band festival were Lydall Inc., Manchester State Bank, the Savings Bank of Manchester and the Band Shell Corp.

Hearing set today on eviction of cafe

A Hartford Superior Court hearing is scheduled today on the state Department of Transportation's bid to evict Carrie Nation's Cafe from the Old Fellows building, which is scheduled to be demolished this year as part of the Main Street realignment project.
Carrie Nation's the Old Fellows building's last remaining tenant. Its principal owner, Dean Rosow of New Britain, has stated that the bar has no definite plans to relocate, despite the DOT's demolition plans.
The DOT filed papers in April seeking a court order to evict Carrie Nation's, Assistant Attorney General Robert Pelgrig charged that the bar's owners have remained in the building unlawfully despite reasonable notices to move out.
The DOT took the Old Fellows building by eminent domain last year. Three other buildings it acquired at the same time have already been demolished for the pending realignment of Main and Center streets.
In May, the DOT awarded to the Arbro Corporation of Cromwell a $226,504 contract to complete the realignment. It also agreed to pay Arbro $699,000 to demolish the Old Fellows building.

The "Whorehouse" is open.
More than 1,000 formally attired people attended the benefit premiere of the movie version of "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas." Among them were Dolly Parton, who plays Miss Mona the brothel's madam, and Burt Reynolds, who plays the sheriff in the adaptation of the Broadway hit.
Miss Parton dressed in a sequined yellow outfit and billed herself as the "Yellow Rose of Texas" while Gov. Bill Clements gave her a certificate making her an official Lone Star star.
Also on hand were Jim Nabors, actor Charles Durning, Amanda Blake, "Gunsmoke's" Miss Kitty, and singers Jerry Reed and Mel Tillis.

Palace break-in Scotland Yard has promised a thorough look into the "security breach" at Buckingham Palace where a burglar got in early last Friday. Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip were home at the time. Police arrested the man.

"A man was arrested and charged with burglary. He was found inside the palace. It happened ... before dawn," a Scotland Yard spokesman said. "He was not armed. We believe there was no political motive."
Prince Charles, Princess Diana and their infant son have a palace of their own so they weren't involved.

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Pilots of the doomed Pan American jetliner that tore through a neighborhood killing 153 people probably heard two warnings of violent wind shifts but decided to take off anyway, a federal investigator says.

MOTHER CONSOLES DAUGHTER ... New Orleans memorial service

Patricia Goldman, vice chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, said Sunday the "wind shear" alerts — warning ground traffic of sudden shifts in wind direction and speed — were issued approximately six minutes before the ill-fated Pan American World Airways 727-200 became airborne Friday.

She said controllers broadcast the first alert at 4:01 p.m. and the second one minute later. However, pilots on Pan Am flight 759 decided to take off during a heavy thunderstorm and about two minutes after leaving the runway they smashed into a Kenner neighborhood, spraying a two-block area with debris and deadly flaming jet fuel.

Reagan, back at work, seeks support in Lebanon crisis

By Helen Thomas UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, following an 11-day California vacation, is back at the White House today seeking support from world leaders in resolving the crisis in Lebanon.

Reagan said, "Well, I think our goals have always been the same. Lebanon wants again a central government and all foreign troops out of the country and assurances by the way of the Lebanese government of safety at the Israel border."

Israel forces invaded Lebanon last month in an effort to settle a dispute with the PLO. The Israeli radio report said the deadline was Aug. 1.

OPINION

We must let our leaders know...

(Manning Smith is associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and professor of chemistry, Bucknell University, Lewisburg, Pa.) This is one in a series of articles the Manchester Herald is running on the nuclear arms race.

By Manning Smith
There recently appeared in the New Yorker Magazine three very compelling essays on nuclear war by Jonathan Schell entitled "The Fate of the Earth." This has now been published as a work by Alfred Knopf and is available in most book stores.

It is important to realize on the outset that while the control of nuclear arms is a political problem, it is not a problem that lends itself in any way to partisan politics, national or international. It makes little sense to criticize the Republicans who are now in power or the Democrats who were in power or the Soviets or the French or the British or anyone else.

The past behavior of any of the principal actors on the international stage can perhaps inform us on what to do. Neither the Soviet government nor the American government, the two super powers with nuclear bombs in quantity, seems able to reduce the peril.

As Schell writes, "the machine of destruction is complete, poised on a hair trigger, waiting for the button to be pushed by some misguided or deranged human being or for some faulty computer chip to send out the instruction to fire. That so much should be balanced on so fine a point - that the fruits of 4.5 billion years can be undone in a careless moment is a fact against which belief rebels."

It is indeed curious that it has taken us so long to become aware of the real danger to our planet and our species. Some criticize Schell's language; yet we are compelled to ask what kind of vocabulary can describe the death of 100 million people in a day? The dangers are dangers in frightening people, but there is even greater danger if we ignore the reality.

As we all know, in 1945, our country exploded an atomic bomb at a test site in New Mexico. The war with Japan was brought to a sudden close by the two bombs that were dropped a few weeks later.

This country's genuine attempt after World War II to bring nuclear arms under international control failed. At that time, there was no immediate threat, for we had only begun the production of weapons and materials, there were no stockpiles. Undoubtedly, the production of dably, the production of bombs was still small. Since that time the number of bombs has grown, mainly in the United States and the Soviet Union. It is estimated by Schell that there are 50,000 nuclear warheads in the world possessing the explosive equivalent of 20 billion tons of TNT. How does one reduce such a number to anything the ordinary person can understand? It's like talking about the national debt. It is roughly equivalent to 1,600,000 Hiroshima bombs. This far exceeds the explosive power needed to destroy life upon this planet.

Pennsylvania went through a frightening time when Three Mile Island had its near miss. That accident, had it gone to a conclusion, would have rendered much of Pennsylvania uninhabitable, to say nothing of killing outright many people near the site. It would have spread radioactive debris far beyond the borders of our state. A nuclear exchange between Russia and the United States would devastate the land masses of these powerful countries far more than the worst scenario at Three Mile Island could ever have done to Pennsylvania.

It is time to help political leaders understand that we insist on the immediate opening of a dialogue to reduce and eventually eliminate nuclear weapons.

Bugging the Oval Office

WASHINGTON — Some fascinating stories can now be told about the bugging of the Oval Office. Every American president since Franklin Roosevelt secretly recorded at least selective Oval Office conversations. My associate Bob Sherman has dug into the technical aspects of the story and has turned up some unpublished historical tidbits.

There was a historical showdown, for example, between President Lyndon Johnson and Sen. Robert Kennedy in early 1968. It was before the New Hampshire primary; Johnson was still planning to run for reelection, and Kennedy was thinking of challenging him. He asked for a private meeting with the president. LBJ gave a terse order to Jack A. Albright, head of the White House Communications Agency: "Let's record the meeting."

"We put in one microphone," recalls Albright, now retired. "It was hidden in the table. It should have worked beautifully. Except it didn't."

Albright later figured out why. "KENNEDY HAD BROUGHT A briefcase into the Oval Office, and kept it in his lap throughout the 30- to 40-minute meeting. 'We weren't listening, of course,' Albright explained. 'All we could do was record. When we tried to play it back, all we got was a 'tuzzzzzzzzz.'"

Kennedy, no stranger to White House bugging, had carried a jamming device in his briefcase. When LBJ heard the bad news, Albright recalls, he drawled: "That son-of-a-b..."

The first White House bug (unless it turns out that Abe Lincoln had his secretary eavesdropping over the transom with an ear trumpet) was FDR's fairly elaborate "Sound on Film" device. Invented by John R. Kiel of Evanston, Ill., it used 35-millimeter movie film and occupied a floor-to-ceiling booth built by the Secret Service in a basement room beneath the Oval Office. The president had it installed as protection against being misquoted by reporters during the 1940 campaign.

The microphone was hidden in a small bronze lamp on FDR's desk, almost literally under the noses of reporters leaning over to catch the president's words. The politician's friends, family and millions of Americans came through unusually clear.

The equipment apparently wasn't used after 1946. It was still in place when Harry Truman moved in five years later. Truman tested it a few times, but evidently didn't like the device. Only 10 hours of Truman conversation exist, all but 30 minutes before 1946, the year after FDR died. The 30-minute exception was recorded in 1947.

LYNDON JOHNSON, whose fascination with electronic gadgetry was legendary, used John Kennedy's rather primitive dictabelt recording system for awhile, but soon replaced it with a 24-hour recording system designed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Eventually, Johnson had bugs installed in the Cabinet Room and the president's lounge as well. He also ordered telephone taps (known as "Charlie Browns") put in his bedroom, the situation room and his office at the LBJ Ranch.

The Cabinet Room bugs were a nightmare for Albright. There was no way to pick the strongest signal. "We put mikes in about eight locations around the table," he recalled. "Every time someone sits down at one end of the table and coughs, and a guy pounds his pipe on the table and another guy is scribbles an ashtray and another is rubbing his beard, every one of those sounds comes through."

To solve the problem, the engineers tried voice-activated mikes. But these worked only in one-on-one meetings — with someone other than Bobby Kennedy, that is.

No decision soon in Fiano's lawsuit on Bolton zoning

BOLTON — Don't expect a court decision before winter on Lawrence F. Fiano's appeal of the Zoning Commission's decision to not grant him a zone change on South Road.

"That's the word from Lawrence F. Fiano, who has been representing his father in the issue that the estate of this year developed into one of the most controversial ones in this town's history.

The attorney said today the sheer mass of the information — transcripts from three long public hearings along with several reports from various sources — will cause a long decision. He said he didn't expect a hearing on the appeal for six months, much less a decision from the judge, who will have to plow through all the documents.

Fiano applied in January for a zone change of about 50 acres from R-1 to R-2, with the intent of putting 70 up to 90 condominiums — a type of housing that would be new to Bolton.

The proposal drew sharp criticism from the community, and the zoning board turned down the request.

"THE ATTORNEY said today the basic point in the board's decision he is contesting is that members 'disregarded the evidence presented to them by qualified individuals.'" He had had a few persons with experience in the housing business testify at the hearings to the appropriateness of the zone change.

The majority of the board members, when making their decision last month, said the zone change didn't fit in with the board's comprehensive plan of development.

A COUPLE of the members also thought a muddle in the regulations would make approval of the 90 units automatic on the granting of the zone change. This is something all the members said they wanted to avoid, because they said they felt 96 units were too many.

The chairman of the board, Philip G. Dooley, said it was this point that caused him to vote against it, though he said later he felt multiple housing would be a good use for the land in question.

The younger Fiano said today he didn't think the regulations meant what the members thought they did on this issue. He said he felt during the hearings that the zone change was a "gimmie," and that the real battle would be over the number of units.

"The zone change is not a change of use, just a different type of construction," he said, because the use would still be residential.

"There's no basis for their reasons as far as I can see it," he said. "I think that they made the wrong decision. We can't afford to sit there with that property for a year."

Under state statute, the zoning board doesn't have to re-hear an application for a zone change on that property for one year.

Madera-Flores is being held on three counts of arson-murder and faced more similar charges.

The Journal-Inquirer of Manchester Friday said in a story by its associate editor, William Johnson, that Madera-Flores worked as a volunteer at a social service agency in Hartford in 1976, when Johnson covered the agency as a reporter for the now-defunct Hartford Times.

After the newspaper folded in 1976, Johnson himself became a volunteer at the Revitalization Corps in Hartford's depressed North End and worked alongside Madera-Flores.

Three die in crashes in state

By United Press International

Three young men died in separate highway crashes and at least one person drowned in weekend accidents in Connecticut.

In another fatality, a National Guardsman on weekend duty in East Lyme died when he became pinned beneath a payloader that overturned.

In highway accidents, Francis Michon, 17, of Preston, died when his motorcycle and a car collided head-on on Route 82 in Montville about 11:45 p.m. Saturday. The car then struck a second vehicle. The other driver was not injured, police said.

Richard P. Myers, 21, of Vernon, was pronounced dead at 1:47 a.m. Saturday after a car driven by his brother, Charles Myers, 27, went out of control and struck a tree on East Main Street in Vernon.

Clay Green, 23, of Milford, died Sunday about 12 hours after his truck went off a curve on Route 118 in Harwinton.

Green died after being taken to John Dempsey Hospital in Farmington.

A New Britain man drowned Saturday night in the Connecticut River after he and some friends decided to go for a swim near the Hartford Yacht Club in Glastonbury.

The body of Larry Condon, 28, was recovered from the river off Portland Sunday afternoon.

Pic Frantz R. Mackie III, 18, of Moosup, died Saturday when the payloader he was driving hit a bridge abutment, flipped and landed in a creek.

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Milwaukee police hope to catch a nationwide dragnet for a Connecticut prison escapee suspected of gunning down one of their fellow officers.

Authorities were scheduled to meet with local law officials today to present evidence indicting Patrick John O'Shea as the would-be killer of Brookfield Police Sgt. Lewis Tyler.

"We don't anticipate any problems obtaining a warrant for his arrest," Lt. Jerry Wiesmuller, a Milwaukee police detective, said Sunday.

Tyler, 38, a 15-year veteran of the force, was shot once in the head Friday night after a high speed chase that began in the plush suburban community and ended on a Milwaukee city street.

Tyler underwent immediate surgery, but remained in critical condition Sunday.

The warrant was to be issued today for O'Shea, 42, who fled last November from the Danbury, Conn., prison where he was being held for the murder of a police officer in Massachusetts.

"What the warrant means is that this guy can be arrested any place in the country," Wiesmuller said. "But really, it doesn't matter all that much. This is just another in a multiple list for this guy."

"He could be arrested on any other number of charges."

man voluntarily committed himself to Norwich State Hospital, a state mental institution, in 1976 or 1977 after he tried to commit suicide.

Johnson wrote that Madera-Flores tried to slit his wrist at the coroner's headquarters and was stopped by another volunteer. The wound was superficial but at that point, Madera-Flores suffered a seizure and was rushed to a Hartford hospital.

Soon after, he signed himself into Norwich Hospital for the first time, Johnson wrote.

The suicide attempt came after Madera-Flores was arrested for stealing a friend's car and spent a weekend in jail, Johnson said.

Madera-Flores was in the hospital for about a month, then returned to Hartford. In the following months, Madera-Flores' seizures became "more serious," Johnson wrote, and he was more often to take his medicine, the article said.

He again checked into the hospital, the article said.

Gloomy news for Cheney Hall

The volunteers trying to save historic Cheney Hall received unpleasant news last week. They learned that their goal of restoring the 115-year-old structure may be beyond them.

The bearer of bad tidings was Francis Conti, he town's chief building inspector. He toured Cheney Hall with structural engineer William Bayer, and reported later that the damage to the brick walls was much more extensive than had been expected.

Most ominously, Conti refused to say whether he thought the building could even be saved. Of course, if you spend enough money, any building can be saved, but we're talking here about a project that is to be done with donations at a time when many different fund drives are competing for a dwindling pot of money.

Nobody ought to dismiss lightly the commitment of the many, including members of the Little Theater of Manchester, who have spent long hours cleaning the interior of Cheney Hall and getting the fund drive off the ground. But there's a limit to how much can be done without a massive infusion of money.

The Cheney Hall fund drive has had a decent start, with perhaps as much as $8,000 already available. The drive also can draw from a $100,000 line of credit made available by six local banks.

But that's a far cry from the $500,000 that originally was given as the cost of restoration — a figure that always seemed

Credit where credit is due

To the Editor: It was exciting to read the Manchester Herald's article on the two Vietnamese students Dan and Thay Le. They have both done extremely well and deserve the credit given to them for adapting so fast to their new land and their perseverance to achieve excellence.

Little was said, however, about their many teachers and supporting staff who had a great deal of patience and understanding and who continue to have patience and understanding with the many Asian students in our school system.

One teacher in particular stands out as exceptional, Dan and Thay's first English as a second language teacher, Norman Racicot. He spends countless hours of his own time ironing out problems, taking the students on trips to places of interest, introducing them to American customs and foods, and is the true surrogate father.

The Asian people in this town are delightful. None are rich, but they are a reminder of yesterday when families in America were large and close-knit and yet there was always room for that extra plate at the table. Norman Racicot and the sponsors of these families can be congratulated for their loving support of our town's new Americans.

Arson suspect was patient in several mental hospitals

By United Press International
The man charged with setting the July 5 Waterbury tenement fire that killed at least 11 people had been a patient in a number of mental hospitals since 1976, various sources said.

Authorities in Waterbury said David Madera-Flores, 27, had spent several months in a Massachusetts mental hospital in 1978 and a published report said the suspect was a patient in a Connecticut mental hospital twice in the late 1970s.

The fire that raged through two apartment buildings last Monday claimed at least 11 lives, including seven children from one family. Their parents have not been found and are presumed dead, police bringing the death toll to 15, police said.

Police, advised by Springfield, Mass., police that Madera-Flores had a criminal record and the state's attorney's office confirmed the suspect had been released in 1978 from the Northampton, Mass., State Mental Hospital.

Madera-Flores is being held on three counts of arson-murder and faced more similar charges. The Journal-Inquirer of Manchester Friday said in a story by its associate editor, William Johnson, that Madera-Flores worked as a volunteer at a social service agency in Hartford in 1976, when Johnson covered the agency as a reporter for the now-defunct Hartford Times.

After the newspaper folded in 1976, Johnson himself became a volunteer at the Revitalization Corps in Hartford's depressed North End and worked alongside Madera-Flores.

Stagehands reach accord

HARTFORD (UPI) — A tentative agreement has been reached between the city and stagehands at the Hartford Civic Center, ending a labor dispute that had threatened the staging of the Republican State Convention.
The agreement was reached at 8 a.m. Sunday after a marathon session that began 24 hours earlier.
Neither side would comment on the agreement that must be ratified by the workers and the City Council.

How to inspect a used car before buying

By Jan A. Zverina United Press International NEW YORK (UPI) — Some tips on how to inspect a used car from brochures of the National, Hertz and Avis car rental agencies, whose interest is in resale of cars they have used:

- Examine a car on a good day, never at night or in rain.
Check for blistered or mismatched paint and for rust. Either may indicate previous damage.
Look at the car from all angles. Stand back to see if it is level. Inspect closely along panels for ripples which may indicate inferior bodywork.
Bounce the car at each corner, listening for squeaks. The car should bounce once. If it continues, this may indicate worn shock absorbers or other suspension parts.
Check all glass for cracks or minor scratches. Look near window moldings for rust which could indicate water leaks.
Check the condition and operation of exterior lights.
Look inside. Use your nose. A damp, musty smell could indicate the car has leaks through the windows or from the floorpan underneath the carpets.

Wife's sex budget makes mate question her balance

DEAR ABBY: This is going to be a "first" for you. Vera (not her real name) and I have been happily married for nearly two years. Vera is 24 and I'm 23, and we enjoy a healthy, normal sex life. About six months ago she asked me if I would mind "paying her" every time she had sex with me. Now, don't get me wrong, Vera is a nice girl from off a farm, and she really doesn't need the money because she works and so do I. She doesn't ask for much — just a few dollars. She says it makes her feel like a "wicked" woman and that "turns her on," so I go along with her little game. I suppose I shouldn't complain because this hasn't hurt our sex relationship. If anything, it's improved it. If I don't have the cash, she lets me charge it. She won't take a check. She wants to see the cash. Have you ever heard of anything like this before? Do you think Vera is bonkers? Or am I, for going along with her?

Sinuses have little to do with her loss of hearing

DEAR DR. LAMB: My mother-in-law is very hard of hearing. She blames it on her sinuses. I know that when the weather is humid she is worse and you have to shout to make her hear you. She never talks about this condition. I don't know if she is vain and thinks it is a symptom of getting old, or what. We just can't talk to her about it, as it is too uncomfortable.

Your Health Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

We would like her to get a hearing aid or see a doctor, but she thinks nothing can be done. She takes Dristan everyday and that unplugs her head a little but she is still hard of hearing. Please advise us on what we should do. It is very hard on everyone when you have to shout all the time to make her hear you. She doesn't know all the things she is missing out on, as she pretends to hear what you are saying rather than to say, "What?" all the time.

DEAR READER: Many people are unaware that they have a hearing loss. The change is so gradual that it sneaks up on a person. Of course if you have an acute condition it may not be so gradual. Sinuses have very little to do with loss of hearing, unless you have an allergy or inflammatory condition that also involves the ears or causes fluid to accumulate in the middle ear.

Social Security

Will I need new number?

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the Social Security Administration in East Hartford. If you have a question you'd like to see answered here, write to Sal Anello, Social Security Office, 657 Main St., East Hartford, 06108.

QUESTION: I plan to get married this summer, but I plan to keep my maiden name and just add my husband's last name to mine. Will I need a new Social Security number?

ANSWER: You will need a new Social Security card, but not a new number. We will issue a card showing your new name as you plan to use it; you keep the same Social Security number all your life.

QUESTION: My doctor has referred me to a physical therapist for treatment of a back injury I recently received. I go to the therapist's office for treatment. Will Medicare pay for this?

ANSWER: Medicare medical insurance can help pay for physical therapy services you receive from an independently-practicing, physical therapist in his or her office or in your home if the treatment is prescribed by a doctor. But, the maximum amount medical insurance can pay for these services starting Jan. 1, 1982 is $600 a year. The medical insurance payment would be less than $400 if charges for these services are used to meet part or all of your $75 deductible.

QUESTION: Up until now, my mother lived alone in an apartment. Because her health is failing, I've convinced her to come live with us. How will this affect her SSI payments?

ANSWER: If an eligible person (or couple) lives in another person's household and receives support and maintenance in kind from that person, that basic SSI amount is reduced by one-third. This reduction takes the place of counting the dollar value of the support and maintenance as income. Your mother should notify Social Security of her change in living arrangements.

QUESTION: My family doctor sent all my medical records to Social Security when I applied for disability benefits. Why am I being sent for another medical examination?

ANSWER: Apparently your medical records did not contain sufficient or recent enough information to permit the State agency that determines disability to arrive at a decision.

Students warned about 'who's who'

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — High school students about to start their senior year are being warned about unscrupulous publishers who want them to pay to be included in a worthless "Who's Who" directory.

Arkansas Attorney General Steve Clark said that while students are told they are being honored for their achievements in school, most publishers are using flattery to cheat students out of their money.

Many students, especially next year's seniors, are told at this time of the year they are among a select group of students included in a directory of honor students. Clark said the "select" group often consists only of the students who are willing to pay to have their names included, he said.

Thoughts

I love to hear stories of how God has helped people to deal with seemingly impossible situations. There's the story of Steve. Things are not quite all together yet, but he is on his way. Life has dealt Steve blow after blow. He lost his wife and son because of his drinking problem. He drifted from job to job. But one day he came to himself and he decided to be responsible for himself. He quit drinking and he reclaimed his faith in God which he had had long ago. He still does not have a job that has any future but he has plans to get some training. Even though he is in mid-life it is not too late to begin again.

I believe that once you have surrendered yourself to Christ, He patiently waits for you to repeat once again and turn to Him. At the same time He never really lets go of your life, but the minute you begin to realize the wrong path you have been following, He grasps you and sets you on course. Now Steve is not finding his new life easy, but he is learning to depend on God for everything and I just know that the angels are rejoicing in heaven that one lost sheep has been found. Tender-handed teammates received $1,500 to be split among 10 members, 500 spokeswoman Joyce Gardella said.

We'll help you with Individual Retirement Answers for your own Individual Retirement Account.

With new law changes, in effect since January 1, 1982, everyone who earns income can open an IRA. You not only build for the future but enjoy tax benefits. And now defer taxes each year that you save. But everyone's financial situation is different; your retirement goals are different; and so are your questions. That's why the Savings Bank of Manchester has written a straightforward, comprehensive source of IRA information. For you.

Whatever questions you may have about IRAs, we'll help you find your answers. Here are just a sample of the questions and topics that your Individual Retirement Answers handbook covers.

Charlie Abbot has income this year from a number of sources: Wages as a bookkeeper for a local restaurant—$15,000

Earnings as a part-time carpenter (self-employed)—$2,000 Interest income from an inheritance—$3,000

He has never had an IRA, but has heard that he is eligible for one. What are his options?

Since Charlie's earned income for this year is $17,000 (the $3,000 interest income is not earned income, and therefore is ineligible for IRA consideration), he may open an IRA and contribute the maximum $2,000 for this year. Assuming he earns at least $2,000 in subsequent years, he may continue to contribute the maximum each year (providing the regulations are not changed).

In addition to his IRA, Charlie could set up a Keogh plan with his self-employed earnings as a carpenter. Under the new regulations, he can contribute 15% of his

$2,000 self-employed earnings to the Keogh plan this year. The maximum annual contribution allowed in a Keogh is $15,000 or 15% of self-employed earnings, whichever is less.

Lois Harding is 40 years old and has had an IRA for four years. It now contains $6,500, all of which she currently has in a 2 1/2-year Certificate of Deposit at the Savings Bank of Manchester. Her CD matures in one year. She was in an automobile accident recently which left her completely disabled. As a result, she needs the IRA money and would like to withdraw the entire amount. May she do so? Are there any penalties?

Because she is totally disabled, there are no penalties whatsoever for withdrawing the funds. When she withdraws any of the funds, however, she will be required to pay income taxes on that amount in the year in which she withdraws it.

Stacey Devito is an 18-year-old girl who has been earning money for the past two years working part-time in a local department store. So far this year she has earned $1,000 and she now has $1,000 in her savings account. Her father has been talking her about setting up an IRA with at least half of the money, but she thinks it's too early for her to think about a retirement fund. "That's for old people, not for kids!" Is Stacey right? Is it possible for her to set up an IRA?

It is not only possible for Stacey to set up an IRA for herself but it's also a good idea. If one of her goals is to be financially independent, this is the best time for her to get started. Retirement may be for older people, but preparation is for young people. Stacey could put $500 into an IRA and be able to watch it grow rapidly into her own personal nest egg for the future. If she gets into the habit of making yearly contributions as early as this, she will achieve her aim painlessly.

Whatever your questions are, we have the answers.

Our 40 page handbook gives you all the facts you need to know about IRAs. It tells you when and how to qualify for an IRA, as well as how to choose and set up a funding vehicle. In the back of the book is a worksheet, so you can discover for yourself what your particular IRA answer is.

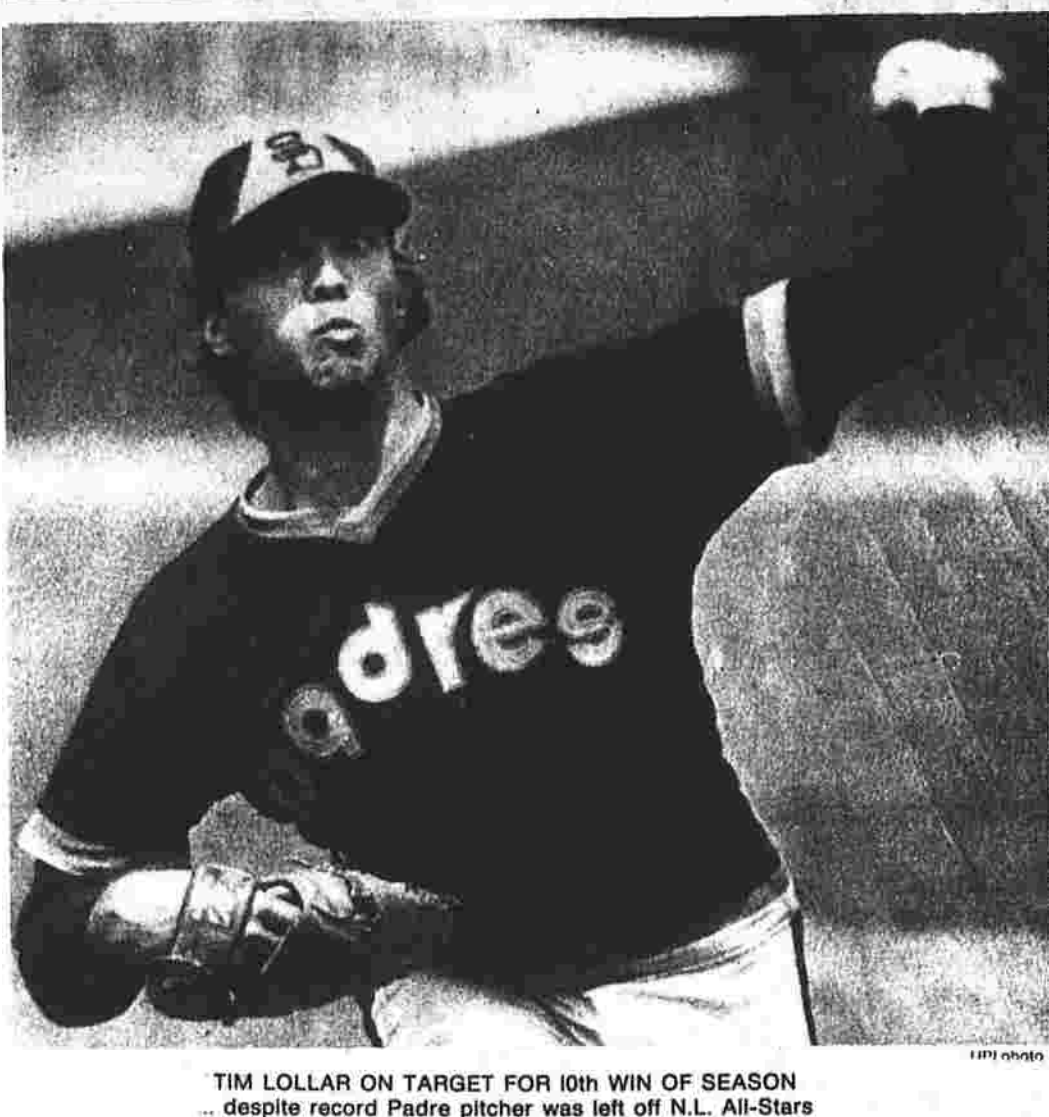

Of course, the banking counselors at the Savings Bank of Manchester are always available to help you with any problem you may have. We think the best way to start thinking about an IRA, though, is with all the facts. So send for our free handbook, Individual Retirement Answers, by filling out the coupon below. Or call us at 646-1700.

The law requires substantial interest and tax penalties for withdrawals from an IRA prior to age 59 1/2.

TIM LOLLAR ON TARGET FOR 10th WIN OF SEASON despite record Padre pitcher was left off N.L. All-Star

Lollar passed up but true All-Star

By Fred McMane
UPI Sports Writer

The National League, which hasn't made very many mistakes in the All-Star Game over the last two decades, seems to have made one glaring error already this year.

That was the failure of manager Tom Lasorda of the Los Angeles Dodgers and NL President Chuck Feeney to select pitcher Tim Lollar of the San Diego Padres to the 26-member squad that will meet the American League at Montreal Tuesday night.

"Lollar isn't an All-Star, then who is?"

The 26-year-old left-hander won his 10th game in 12 decisions Sunday and hit his third home run to lead the Padres to a 6-2 triumph over the Mets at New York.

Lollar, who also had a single in batting average to .296, gave up seven hits in eight innings and piling hits in the third inning and an infielder out in the fourth.

"Lollar has fun out there. He's a free spirit and he's even more fun than Bill Lee," said Padres Manager Dick Williams, who once managed Lee when the eccentric left-hander pitched for the Expos.

"When I came here, coaches told me that Lollar didn't get much of a chance last year and didn't develop his control. You could see he's throwing strikes now."

PIRATE PITCHER TWO FOR TWO Southpaw stopped Atlanta for second victory Sunday

So, how come Lollar wasn't selected to the All-Star team?

"They could have picked five of our guys," said Williams, naming Lollar, shortstop Garry Templeton, catcher Terry Kennedy and outfielders Ruppert Jones (the lone Padres player chosen) and Sixto Lezcano as possible choices. "But I'm not going to criticize the manager. He was going to make someone unhappy no matter what he did, so I guess he decided to take it all out on us instead of getting five different teams mad."

The Padres, perennial losers in the Western Division, earned their 30th victory at the All-Star break by shelling starter Mike Scott, 6-7, for nine hits in 3-13 innings. Templeton drove in three runs for the Padres with a triple in the third inning and an infielder out in the fourth.

Elsewhere, Philadelphia edged Los Angeles 4-3, San Francisco nipped Montreal 3-7 in 10 innings, Pittsburgh defeated Atlanta 3-1, Houston beat St. Louis 4-2, Pittsburgh topped Atlanta 5-1, Cincinnati, after nipping Chicago 6-5 in 13 innings in the completion of a suspended game, lost to the Cubs 9-2.

Phillies 4, Dodgers 3

At Philadelphia, errors by shortstop Bill Russell and third baseman Ron Cey helped the Phillies score three unearned runs in the third inning and defeat Fernando Valenzuela. Bob Dentner singled in the decisive run to break a 3-3 tie in the fourth. The Phillies

'Lowly' Twins clout Red Sox

BOSTON (UPI) — The Minnesota Twins, trying to shake the wretched title of "lowly," clouted the Boston Red Sox Sunday 7-5.

"We're starting to deserve respect," said Twins' second baseman John Castino, who at 27 is one of the few veterans on the team. "Three weeks ago we didn't deserve respect."

Those remarks came following Gary Gaetti's two-run homer and seventh-inning RBI singles by Tim Lander and Gary Ward that boosted the Twins and knocked the Red Sox out of first place — by 402 percentage points — in the American League East.

With the Twins trailing 3-1 in the sixth, Lander singled with one out and one out later, Gaetti blasted starter John Tudor's first pitch into the left-field screen. He, his 13th homer of the year and second in two days to tie the score at 3-3.

In the seventh, with All-Star reliever Mark Clear, 6-4, on the mound, Ron Washington led off with a single, went to second on a passed ball and advanced to third on Dave Engle's fielder's choice. Lander then followed with a single to tie the score Washington and Ward singled home Engle to make it 5-3.

Minnesota scored twice in the ninth. Engle reached on Glenn Hoffman's error and Lander and Ward

'We never knew what we could do. Now when I see guys go up there I know what they can do. The team believes more now that it can win and that makes a big difference.'

— Twins' John Castino

singled to load the bases. Engle scored on Gaetti's sacrifice fly and Lander scored on Castino's single.

"We never knew what we could do," Castino said. "Now when I see guys go up there I know what they can do. The team believes more now that we can win and that makes a big difference."

But at the start of the game, it was the Red Sox who got the jump, reaching on Brad Haven's 5-6, for a pair of runs in the first. Jerry Remy led off with a single and went to second when Jim Rice walked. Tony Perez RBI single scored Remy and Rice went to third where he scored on Wade Boggs' infield out.

Minnesota closed to 2-1 in the third when Washington doubled and scored on Kent Hrbek's RBI single. Boston pulled to 3-1 in the fifth when Dwight Evans singled to right, raced to third when right fielder Tom Brunansky misplayed Evan's hit and scored on Rice's rouncing single to center.

"I didn't do anything spectacular today. Mark Clear to me is still one of the best pitchers in baseball," Clear, who in eight of his last 12 appearances has failed to hold his lead, took time to pinpoint his problem.

"I was hanging curves because I was throwing too hard. I wasn't giving them time to break," he said. "I can't worry about it because I can't take it back. I have no excuses whatsoever. I went out there, I went as hard as I could and they got a lot of hits off me."

Clear, however, is not concerned with his slump.

"In the last few games, I haven't done the job when I've come in, but I'm not worried about it," he said. "I'm going to battle this thing through and the team is going to keep on battling. We've won 49 games at the All-Star break and we're a good club. We'll be right there at the end."

Minnesota's Ron Davis, who picked up his eighth save, thinks Clear is better than he gives himself credit for.

"I didn't do anything spectacular today. Mark Clear to me is still one of the best pitchers in baseball," said Davis.

Climb to top began in Mid-June

Brewers reach top on home run spree

By Joff Hasen
UPI Sports Writer

The climb began in mid-June for the Milwaukee Brewers and reached its pinnacle on the last day before the All-Star break.

Now Gorman Thomas concerns himself with the notion that his teammates will begin to beat on their chests at the top of the mountain shouting, "We're No. 1."

"I don't fear any of the other teams. If I fear anyone, it's ourselves," Thomas said Sunday after belting his league-leading 22nd homer in the Brewers' 8-6 victory over Kansas City at Milwaukee that lifted the Brewers into first place in the Eastern Division. "We've gotta keep our heads down and our goals in mind."

Milwaukee was on top in the early days of the season but returned to the pack and trailed by 7 1/2 games by late May. Impressive power surges led Sunday's belated Brewers back.

"We've come back from such a large deficit," said Fred Maddux, who hit his second three-run homer in as many games. "We've overcome a lot of adversity and I think that's going to give us confidence."

Ted Simmons and Charlie Moore also homered for the Brewers, who trailed 1-0 in the fourth when Thomas belted a long blast into the center-field bleachers. In the fifth, with Milwaukee trailing 2-1, Don Money singled, Moore doubled and Cooper Simmon hit his 14th homer.

After Robin Yount reached on an error and was forced by Cecil Cooper, Simmons hit his 14th homer of the year off starter Larry Gura, 10-5, to give Milwaukee a 6-2 lead.

Moore, 25, worked 6-3 innings before giving way to Rollie Fingers, who allowed the last three Royals runs to gain his 18th save.

The guys have been playing so well for seven weeks, they deserve three days off to go fishing, play golf and spend time with families," said Maddux.

When Kuan replaced Buck Rodgers during the Royals' rough stretch.

Kuenn's counterpart with Kansas City, Dick Howser, drew comparisons between the two teams.

"Milwaukee is a very good team, but they've had their ups and downs," Howser said. "That's the way it goes in this game. They're in a position to win their division and so are we."

The Royals left one game behind first-place California in the West with the loss.

In other games, California nipped the New York Yankees 2-1, the Chicago White Sox crushed Toronto 16-7, Minnesota topped Boston 7-3, Baltimore beat Oakland 8-7.

Curtain call for Downing after homer beats Yanks

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — Reggie Jackson's natural at-batting curtain call but his teammate, Brian Downing, could use a replay of the final scene.

The California Angels' piker-faced left-fielder is from the old school, which holds that the only time a player comes out of the dugout is to take the field.

"But after Downing drilled a 12-pitch over the right-field wall to open the eighth inning Sunday, lifting the Angels to a 2-1 victory over the New York Yankees, the raucous crowd of 44,884 demanded he come out of the dugout for a curtain call.

Downing obliged, sheepishly, and later explained why.

"I'm just not the demonstrative type," he said. "It goes back to when I was playing in Chicago [for the White Sox]. It really hurt our team and I got out of control. In 1977, we were winning a lot and we

Formal's win pair, lose one in weekend tourney action

Two victories in three starts were achieved by Formal's in Connecticut Class A Fast Pitch Tournament action last weekend in Danbury.

The locals got off to a brilliant start Saturday with a 1-0 decision over the West Haven Corsairs.

Nancy Aramin hurled one-hitter to notch her fourth win of the campaign against two losses.

The lone tally came in the third inning when Lynn Wright singled and rode home on Marcy MacDonald's triple.

Striders hold unique race for membership

Team of Dick MacKenzie, Nancy Fish and Dave Prindville set a club record in the second annual City Striders' 3K1 mile, 110-year-old relay race yesterday.

"Each team member had to be mixed (male and female) and the total ages of the three runners had to add up to 110 years or older."

Each team member ran a one-mile relay leg and their times added together determined the placement.

The winner's time was 7:18.

Second place went to the team of Ray Parr, Janit Romayko, Jim Kaiser in 18:56 with Karen Saunders, Dick Don, Gerry Coulter third in 19:00.

Following the race a handicap contest was staged.

Top 10 placements and their times were: Ray Parr 4:47, Mike Saimond 4:59, Dick MacKenzie 5:00, Rick Parr 5:08, Gerry Coulter 5:13, Don Roy 5:31, Karen Saunders 5:43, Don Stralons 5:49, Bill Schwarz 5:51, Dave Prindville 5:53.

They're hits as managers

By Harvey Greese

He may or may not prove to be a winning manager. But Harvey Kuan is already different from most of his contemporaries. He is one of the few current big-league managers who had a successful playing career.

When Kuan replaced Buck Rodgers at the Milwaukee helm this season, the Brewers were mired in the second division of the American League East, but in Kuan's first 20 games the Brewers won 14, including seven in a row.

Legion edges Rockville, 3-2

Good pitching was the order of the day as Manchester's American Legion baseball team scratched by Rockville in a Zone Eight clash Saturday at Mortary Field.

The success up the Silk Town record to 8-4 in the zone standings and 10-8-1 overall while Rockville was losing for the 10th time in a dozen starts.

Tonight, Manchester treks to Moosup for an exhibition game.

Brian McAuley for Manchester and Rockville's Mike Zak were matched in a pitching battle for six innings before Doug Walsaker came on in relief to work the final inning and get credit for the win when Manchester snapped a 3-3 deadlock with a run.

Zak allowed seven hits, walked four and fanned three. McAuley was reached for five hits. He issued three walks and struck out one.

The visitors got on the scoreboard in a hurry, getting their two runs in the first inning when Dennis McCoy homered after two were out. Jeff Johnson, walked, and went to third on Frank McCoy's single. Johnson took third from where he scored on an error.

Manchester came back in his half of the first inning to score one run.

Bill Masse singled leading off and moved up a base when Chris Peterson was safe on an error.

Masse was cut down at home when he tried to score on Tim Wianieski's roller but Bob Piccin followed with a single to score Peterson.

The score was knotted in the second when Tim Fogarty led off with a double and scored on Masse's two-

Buffalo Tavern fourth Greenwich wins softball tourney

Coming out best in the fourth annual Manchester Women's Softball Slow Pitch Classic last weekend was P.J.'s of Greenwich.

The downstarts posted a perfect record in gaining the title.

En route to the crown, Greenwich downed BestWay of Williammatic 5-0, Suburban Sports of Long Island 7-0, Buffalo Tavern Tavern of Manchester 9-0 and Debra's of Lynn, Mass., in two tilts, 6-4 and 11-7.

In the title game Sunday at Fitzgerald Field, Debra's jumped off to an early 7-1 lead before P.J.'s rallied for five runs in both the third and sixth innings to wrap up the decision.

Horvath medalist in club qualifying

Club president Len Horvath heads a list of four former champions from qualifying play last weekend to match play competition next weekend in the annual Club Golf Championship at the Manchester Country Club.

Horvath gained medalist laurels with a 36-hole score of 74-72-166. The top 15 score qualified.

Match play starts Saturday with the second round Sunday, the semifinals July 24 and the finals July 25.

Besides Horvath the successful qualifiers in the field 15 (16 including defending club John Herdic who was exempt) are Woody Clark, Stan Hillinski, and Sherry Ferguson, Manchester, and Steve Clark, Greenfield.

Kennedy is the reigning Seniors Division champ. First round pairings: Herdic vs. Kennedy, Horvath vs. Willis, Downey vs. Prior, Hillinski vs. Kaye, Carl vs. Holmes, Denz vs. Annulli, Evolvech vs. Greenfield, Matava vs. Ferguson.

Flight B winner was Tom Lowery with Bob Copeland runner-up while Bill Leone captured the C Flight with Jim O'Rourke second best.

QUICK QUIZ — Since 1970, five Hall of Famers have managed in the major leagues. Can you name them?

QUIZ ANSWER — The five Hall of Famers who have managed in the major leagues since 1970 are: Ted Williams, Eddie Matthews, Yogi Berra, Bob Lemon and Frank Robinson.

SPORTS TALK: Ralph Houk

Interviewed by Robert Patton

Ralph Houk, an ex-New York Yankee catcher (1947-54) has managed the Boston Red Sox for the past two seasons. He also managed the Yankees (1981-82 and 1986-7) and the Detroit Tigers (1974-78).

They say the American League East is as evenly matched this season as it has been in a number of years. Do you feel that's true?

"I think it's going to be a real close race. It was last year. I can't see any reason why it wouldn't be this year. I don't think Cleveland has improved. Certainly Toronto has, but I don't think he's gotten better than he was last year."

It's too early to know how the races will really be. The bench strength has got to come into play, and the depth of the pitching staff. It looks like it should be a real good race. But you really can't tell about that until you get into, probably, September.

Do feel good about the depth of the Red Sox?

"We've got better depth than we had last year. We've got Wade Boggs who led the International League in batting last year and can play either third or first. We're carrying an extra shortstop, something we couldn't do last year because we had too many DL's around there. We've been able to replace them with a third catcher and an infielder, plus Wade. So, naturally that gives us more depth."

Is there a new identity on the Red Sox?

"No, not really. Of course, I wouldn't know about that because last year was my first year with them. We were certainly competitive last year with a mixture of veteran and younger, mature players."

The veterans are guys are like Yaz (Carl Yastrzemski), Tony (Perez), Rice, Miller and Evans. Our younger players are more of the type that have been up here before — like Lomasoff, Hoffman, Stapleton and Remy.

"Of course, our catching staff is quite young. Altonson has been the All-Star catcher in Triple A, and then Gedman came along. Between the two of them they've done an outstanding job."

Our pitching staff is quite young. And if they come through for us, we should be able to stay right in there. We really haven't gotten the pitching yet that I think we should get out of Ojeda, Hurt, Tudor and Rabney. Our bullpen was pretty good last year, and adding Aponte this year makes it even that much better.

Do you think the bullpen has been the main reason for your success this season?

"Our bullpen has been very effective. But I don't think it's been any one thing. I think it's been our defense as well as our bullpen. Moving Stapleton to first base — he's outstanding there — closed up our infield. Of course with a veteran-type catcher that we have, they always play good but our infield has been playing good. It's been our defense and pitching, and I would have to say hitting all that through the lines. We haven't had anybody that has been that hot with the bat. But everybody has done their part."

Do think Carl Yastrzemski will ever slow down? He's 42.

"He'll be a great shape. He's one of the real superstars of the game. He's still got very fast reactions at the plate and good eyes. And he knows how to hit."
