It was week for bull, waves, 'doghouse'

A funny thing happened in Wall Street the other day. Three signs lit up. To the left — Bear Street. To the right — Bull Street. And straight ahead — the "Doghouse Fund."

If you bear left, beware of the waves. They're saying the market's going down big in November, so get out while the getting is good.

If you bear right, beware of the waves. They're saying the market's going down big in November, so get out while the getting is good.

That SOS comes from one of the hottest stock market callers around — John Goddess, the 56-year-old publisher of The Master Indicator, an investment newsletter out of West Palm Beach, Fla., that comes out 24 times a year.

The letter is 16 years old and has about 3,500 subscribers.

Goddess makes his market judgments by following wave sequences, that's right, wave sequences.

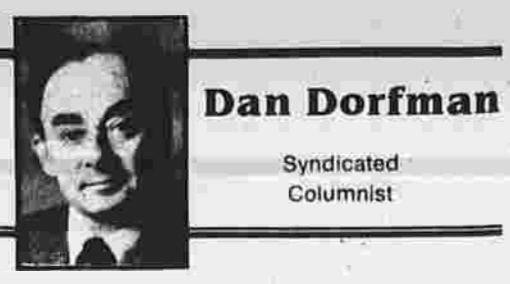

In effect, he applies his own interpretation of the Elliott Wave Principle. A branch of the late R.N. Elliott, it's based on the theory — developed from massive research — that all bull markets, for example, are based on five up-and-down moves, in waves, up, down, up, down, up.

Goddess's latest reading of the waves: hurricane weather ahead for the market that's going to send the Dow skidding about 10 to 15 percent to the 870-880 range before the end of November.

HE SEES EVEN BIGGER LOSSES in certain individual stocks, including several current market leaders. Accordingly, he's recommending the purchase of put options — a bet on lower stock prices — on the following names: IBM, Hewlett-Packard, Digital Equipment, McDonnell-Douglas, Alcoa and Loral.

Obviously his strategy is rife with risk, given the current bullish environment. But based on his hot hand, he clearly merits a respectful hearing.

For example, last Dec. 4 with the Dow at 892.69, Goddess issued a sell recommendation on the market. It was a good call. The Dow proceeded to drop nearly 100 points to 795.85 by March 17. At that time, Goddess reversed himself and flashed a buy signal. He was right on the money again as the Dow rose to 969.20 by May 7. And at that stage, Goddess said sell following which the market fell again.

What makes all three of these calls so spectacular is that they all came, would you believe, on the exact day the market hit both its top and bottom during these periods.

On Aug. 17 — with the Dow around 831 — Goddess flashed a buy. While he didn't catch the exact bottom (in the 770-780 range), it was nevertheless an excellent market call as the Dow subsequently shot above 1,000.

Well, a little over a week ago, Friday, Oct. 22, to be precise, our man went negative on the market, declaring: "This is the top — sell stocks now."

TEMPORARILY, AT LEAST, he came out looking like an absolute whiz when the Dow, on the following Monday, plummeted over 36 points for its second biggest one-day loss ever.

Who knows? I'm no surfer, but maybe the waves are the thing to watch.

If Bear Street's not for you, then you might want to give some thought to Bull Street.

And there you'll meet Marty Zweig, the single best stock market performer among the newsletter writers in '81 and again in '82.

His stock selections in the semimonthly Zweig Forecast shot up almost 30 percent last year, while the leading market averages fell around 9 percent. In the first nine months of '81, Zweig turned in a nifty gain of over 20 percent, vs. a 1.7 percent drop in the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index.

In an interview the other day, the harassed 40-year-old Zweig, one of the nice guys in the cut-throat investment business, told me the bull market remains strongly in force despite the recent explosion. In fact, he sees another 150-point rise in the Dow which he expects over the next four to eight months — before the market is struck by its first 100-point or 100-point correction.

Though basically a technician, Zweig points to the prospects of still lower interest rates as the chief reason for his continuing bullish sentiment.

"The economy's horrible and the Federal Reserve has to loosen further," he says.

Zweig observes that Fed chief Paul Volcker spilled the beans a few weeks back when he publicly stated that people should forget about the Fed's money supply targets (a reference to the allotment of credit in a defined range).

VOLCKER IS NO LONGER fighting inflation, but a declining economy, and that's bullish, Zweig says.

He figures the prime rate (the rate at which banks lend to their best customers) has the potential to drop to 8 percent by early '83; it was around 12 percent at press time.

Asked to name his six favorite stocks, Zweig chose Coleco Industries, Piedmont Aviation, Bairco, People Express, Elscint and Computer Data Systems.

I know you're panting to hear about the "Doghouse Fund." Well, it's a concoction of 10 companies put together by a savvy Wall Streeter. The common ingredient? "81 earnings won't be particularly good. If not down, profits could be up a bit. But in any event, they'll be sharply below previously high levels. In addition, there's no guarantee of an '84 recovery; you may just have to wait till '85.

If you're about to say not for me — think again. On Oct. 11, the creator of the "fund," Ray DeVoe, the investment strategist at Legg Mason Wood Walker, put out the list of the 10 companies with a warning to clients about their lackluster earnings prospects. And he dubbed the list the "Doghouse Fund."

So what happened? Over the next two weeks, the market dropped a bit. But in the very same period, every one of those supposed "dogs" ran up in price — averaging a whopping 21 percent gain.

HERE'RE THE NAMES (plus their two-week price gains): Avon Products, 8 percent; Caterpillar Tractor, 14 percent; Chase Manhattan, 22 percent; Datapoint, 57 percent; Halliburton, 27 percent; Pittston, 25 percent; Schlumberger, 22 percent; Standard Oil of Indiana, 11 percent; U.S. Steel, 17 percent; and Xerox, 11 percent.

DeVoe is especially negative on Xerox and U.S. Steel. He feels Xerox's impending acquisition of Crum & Forster, a large insurance company, is a clear admission by the kingpin of the copiers that its major business is no longer competitive. And in the case of U.S. Steel, he points to — among other things — the substantial earnings dilution (15 percent on a per-share basis) from its acquisition of Marathon Oil.

DeVoe's view of the sharp price advance of the "Doghouse Fund": "These companies, based on their '83 prospects, are overpriced and make no sense as investments at this time. And at some point, the earnings will have to justify the stock prices."

DeVoe didn't spell it out, but his message is obvious: If the earnings don't come through, watch out!

Question: Is the performance of the "Doghouse Fund" documenting a rousing new bull market (with total disregard to company fundamentals)? Or are we witnessing another outburst of investor lunacy? Your guess is as good as mine, maybe we ought to check with the waves.

IN BRIEF

Evans joins UTC

William Evans, a Manchester native, has joined United Technologies Building Automation as manager of product development.

Evans had been employed for the past two years as product manager for MFC Powers in Northbrook, Ill. Before that he has held many sales and marketing positions with Honeywell, Inc. mostly in California.

Evans is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Evans of 24 N. Elm St. He was a 1959 graduate of Hartford High School. He had done undergraduate work at Minot State College, Minot, N. D., and has a marketing degree from the University of Hartford. He will be relocating from the Chicago area to Manchester soon.

Stock prices up in active trading

By Frank W. Slusser
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK — Stock prices surged in active trading at the outset today in a continuation of its pre-election rally that has pushed the Dow Jones industrial average well over the 1,000 level.

Investors apparently were confident that Republicans won't get cloistered in today's balloting and more certain that interest rates will fall again in the near future.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which gained 13.98 points Monday in a rebound from last week's 39.74-point drubbing, was ahead 9,022 to 1,014.72 at 10:30 a.m. EST.

Advancing issues were routing decliners by a 2-1 margin. Volume at the 30-minute mark amounted to about 15.73 million shares.

Monday's New York Stock Exchange volume totaled 75,530,000 shares, down from the 74,830,000 traded Friday.

Michael Metz of Oppenheimer & Co.

called Monday's rally "one of those mystery sessions. The price increase could have represented possible insurance against election results."

Several analysts said late polls showing the Republicans would not lose as many seats in Congress as originally forecast sparked some late buying in blue-chip issues.

Wall Street observers said, probably won't react too much to the results unless the GOP scores a severe setback that would damage the administration's economic policies.

The biggest factor in Monday's rally was the continuing investor belief the Federal Reserve will cut the discount it charges member banks for loans and that will spark a reduction in other interest rates.

The bond market has rallied the past two sessions on those hopes, which have been around for about three weeks.

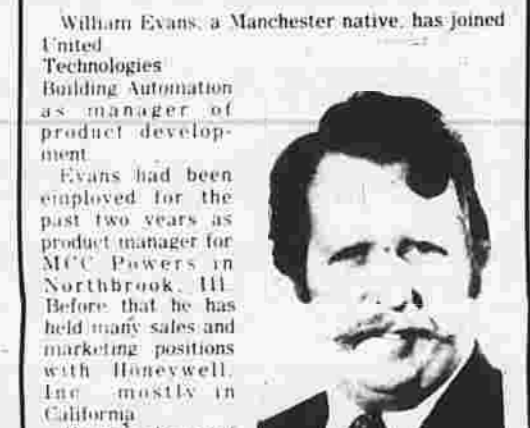

Many reason the Fed was reluctant to act before the election.

Fundraiser picked

Drew Lawton of Manchester has been named a loan executive for the fall fund drive of the United Way of the Capital Area.

Lawton is a management associate for the employee benefits division of the Aetna Life & Casualty Co. His job will be to contact local businesses and their employees to solicit donations for the United Way.

The United Way of the Capital Area supports 66 charitable agencies in a 21-town area that includes Manchester.

Fuel cell activated

VERNON — Space-age technology has begun powering telephone communications in Vernon. Northeast Utilities has activated a 46-kilowatt fuel cell at a Southern New England Telephone Co. switching station as part of a research project.

Designed and built by United Technologies Power Systems Division, the electro-chemical energy system will supply more than half the electricity needed for telephone service to 20,000 SNET customers in the Vernon-Rockville area.

The fuel cell, which extracts energy from natural gas, will also supply a large portion of the building's heating needs.

The $66-million onsite fuel cell project is supported by the United States Department of Energy, the Chicago-based Gas Research Institute and 23 participating electric and gas utilities. The 46kw unit, a product of 15 years of research, is a scaled-up design of the fuel cells which provide onboard power for space vehicles.

A fuel cell operates on the same principle as a battery; however, unlike the conventional battery, its source of energy comes from natural gas. A fuel processor in the unit extracts hydrogen from the gas, as the hydrogen passes over an electrode, electricity, heat and water are produced.

The Vernon fuel cell is the second of 40 units to go into service in the United States.

DPUC grants SNET $89 million rate hike

HARTFORD (UPI) — Southern Connecticut Telephone Co. has been tentatively granted an $89 million rate hike, boosting an average consumer's monthly bill 12.3 percent and allowing the utility to earn a bigger profit.

The decision by the state Department of Public Utilities Control, scheduled to be formally adopted in two weeks, also rejected SNET's bid to double the 10-cent coin phone charge but approved a new pay per call plan.

If formally approved, the company's 12 million Connecticut customers will notice the increase in their bills by the end of November.

The exact effect of the rate increase on various classes of customers was to be disclosed when the increase is formally approved.

The company had asked for a $128 million rate hike that would have increased the average residential

Contract awarded

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Navy Monday announced the award of a $29 million contract to General Electric Company's Aircraft Engine Business Group at Lynn, Mass.

The contract will provide long lead funds for 41 F404-GE-400 engines for F-18 aircraft of the Australian Air Force.

Aetna buys investment firm

HARTFORD (UPI) — Aetna Life and Casualty and Federated Investors Inc. of Pittsburgh has acquired Federated, an investment management services firm, for $210 million.

Under the terms of the acquisition announced Monday, Aetna acquired about 44 million shares, or about 87 percent of Federated's outstanding shares, in a merger involving a tax-free exchange of 1.25 shares of Aetna common stock for each Federated stock.

An Aetna spokeswoman said the transaction was valued at $210 million based on the $38.25 closing price of Aetna's stock last Friday.

Aetna is the nation's largest publicly owned insurance diversified financial services organization with assets of more than $40 billion.

Federated provides cash management services to about 1,450 bank trust departments, as well as regional brokerage firms and affinity groups.

The company also provides some 350 banks with "sweep" facilities which enable them to automatically invest customers' excess checking account balances in money market funds.

The transfer will be made with a formula based on Federated's earnings in 1981, 1980 and 1987 and the average price-earnings earnings multiple of Aetna's stock during 1987.

Dollar slips in European marts

LONDON (UPI) — The dollar slipped on Europe's money markets today in slack trading as currency dealers awaited the outcome of the mid-term elections in the United States.

The dollar fell everywhere as trading resumed after the All Saints holiday shut the Brussels and Milan markets Monday. The Paris market was closed for a two-day break and resumes trading Wednesday.

In Frankfurt, the dollar slipped to 2,545 marks from 2,570 and in Zurich it fell to 2,185 Swiss francs from 2,201 Monday.

In London, the pound opened at $1.855 compared with $1.8625 Monday night.

In Brussels the dollar opened easier at 51.05 Belgian francs compared with 51.55 at close of trading Friday.

In Milan, the dollar opened at 1,438.75 lire down from 1,470.65 Friday night. The weekend close was artificially high because dealers hedged against possible developments over the long weekend, a financial analyst said.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 275.10 yen down from 278.10 Monday night.

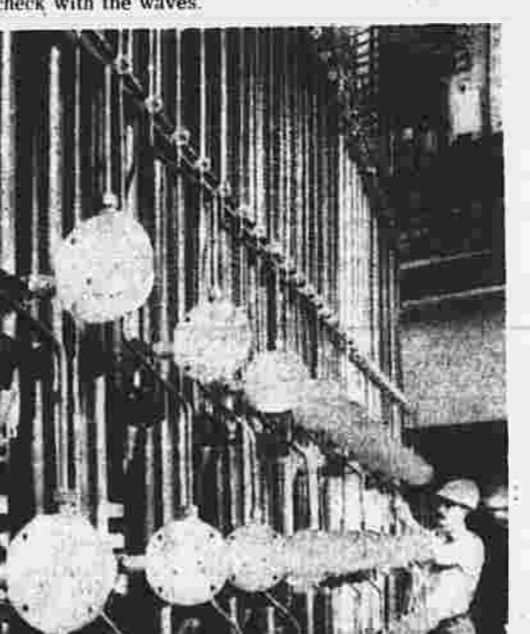

Hambleton to head Sears store

Sears, Roebuck and Co. has appointed Peter H. Hambleton as general manager of its Manchester retail store.

Hambleton, 39, is a 14-year Sears veteran. He began his career as a part-time sales person in Nashua, N.H. He progressed through management positions in Nashua, Middletown, N.Y.; Auburn, Mass.; Philadelphia, Pa.; and Leominster, Burlington and Boston, Mass. His most recent assignment was men's apparel merchandise manager for the company's Boston area group of stores.

He is a native of Nashua and a graduate of New Hampshire College with a degree in business administration. He has been active in the Westford, Mass., Citizen's Advisory Committee on Health Education and was senior warden of St. Mary's Episcopal Church.

He and his wife Diane have two daughters, Deborah and Amy. The family plans to relocate to the Manchester area in the near future.

Town, state in step

Manchester marched in step with the rest of the state Tuesday night, voting to send Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill back to the governor's mansion and Republican Sen. Lowell P. Weicker back to Washington.

The voters split their tickets in the local General Assembly races, too, reelecting Republican Rep. Elsie L. "Biz" Swenson in the 13th District, but upsetting Republican Rep. Walter H. Joyner in the 12th District.

Incumbent state Sen. Carl A. Zinsser, R-4th District, lost Manchester, but won re-election by making up the difference from elsewhere in the five town district. He defeated Mayor Stephen T. Penny.

Democratic Probate Judge William E. Fitzgerald won a handy victory over Republican challenger William J. Diana, a town director. Rep. J. Peter Fuscas, R-55th District, was re-elected. Democrat Donald F. Bates was elected in the 9th Assembly District.

Incumbent Democratic Congressman Barbara B. Kennelly beat Republican opponent Herschel A. Klein in town 12,858 to 6,837, as he won an easy victory district wide. Manchester resident Daniel Landierin, the Libertarian candidate, lost badly.

Incumbent Democratic High Sheriff Patrick Hogan won Manchester 9,236 to 8,792 over Republican challenger Connor Ferrante. Hogan won re-election.

The referendum calling for a nuclear arms freeze won by nearly a 3-1 margin, 11,264 to 4,261.

The big upset was in the 12th Assembly District, where Democratic Director James McCavanagh beat two-term incumbent Joyner 4,201 to 4,853.

The race in the 12th District went down to the wire with Mrs. Swenson beating Democratic challenger John W. Thompson by just 79 votes.

In the 4th Assembly District, Manchester's Democratic Mayor Penny won Manchester by 997 votes, but that was not enough to offset a 1,394 Zinsser victory in Republican Glastonbury.

Fitzgerald beat Diana by 1,157 votes in what had become the most hotly contested local race in the last week.

Carl A. Zinsser embraces his wife, Ellen, Tuesday night after learning that he has won the 4th Senatorial District race. Zinsser, the incumbent Republican, outpolled Democratic Mayor Stephen T. Penny by 435 votes in the district, which includes Manchester, Glastonbury, Bolton, Columbia and Hebron. Story on page 3.

Unaffiliated decide election

By Paul Hendrie and Nancy Thompson
Herald Reporters

"The unaffiliated voters decided this election," Theodore Cummings Jr., a Democratic party worker and the town chairman's son, summed up Tuesday night.

"That apparently was an accurate assessment, as each party had cheers and tears on election night. The surprise was Democratic Director James McCavanagh's victory over incumbent Republican Walter H. Joyner in the 12th Assembly District. McCavanagh was always given a chance of winning, though Joyner remained the favorite. But as soon as the results started coming in, it became clear that McCavanagh would win rather easily.

"We campaigned hard and we did everything well," said McCavanagh. The reason for his victory probably wasn't much more complex than that. He raised and spent more money than Joyner. He advertised heavily and Cummings Jr. said, he made three drops of literature.

The downfall of 12th District Democratic candidates in the last two elections has been the issue of consolidation of the Eighth Utilities District with the town Fire Department.

McCavanagh successfully convinced the Eighth District he was on his side. He credited his victory, in part, to "hanging around the [Eighth District] Fire House."

"I want the people of the 12th Assembly District to realize they have a friend in a Democrat," said McCavanagh.

JOYNER SAID McCavanagh is a "popular guy." Other Republicans speculated that Joyner may have been hurt by the failure of supporters in the Eighth District to turn out a leaflet supporting Joyner and opposing McCavanagh. In the past, such material has appeared at homes in the Eighth District on the day before the election.

Wallace J. Irish Jr., a Republican town committee member and a former Eighth District official, disagreed. He said Joyner ran a "clean campaign." He said Joyner ran a "clean campaign."

"How can that hurt him?" Irish said.

He added, "The Democrats let the voter registration numbers campaign for them."

Status quo marks state vote returns

By Mark A. Dupuis
Herald Staff International

HARTFORD — Connecticut Democrats held onto to most of what they had on the state level but came up short in efforts to increase their holdings on the national scene in a busy state of statewide election contests.

Democratic Gov. William O'Neill won election to a full term while his party apparently also retained his 4-2 lead in the state's U.S. House delegation and increased its holdings in the Legislature.

But Republican Sen. Lowell Weicker put down a stiff challenge to Democratic Rep. Toby Moffett to win reelection to a third term and the GOP picked up the only congressional seat where an incumbent didn't seek reelection.

Despite the national attention drawn by the Senate contest between Weicker and Democratic Rep. Toby Moffett, the overall election turnout, based on unofficial figures was near if not the lowest for a statewide, non-presidential election in the past decade.

Unofficial figures put the turnout at about 65 percent, short of the 68.6 percent level recorded in the last statewide, non-presidential election in 1978 and far short of the 86.7 percent in the 1972 presidential election.

At the top of the state ticket, O'Neill, a tavern owner from East Hampton, won election to a full term over former state Sen. GOP leader Lewis Rome of Bloomfield by an official margin of 171,771 votes, or 53 percent to 37 percent.

Weicker, who squeaked into the Senate in a three-way race 12 years ago, put down a stiff challenge by Moffett by an unofficial margin of 46,650 votes, far short of the more than 224,000 vote edge by which he won in 1976.

While Democrats failed to take the Senate seat, they did make gains in the Legislature, picking up five seats in the House to take an 87-64 edge and apparently holding on to their current 23-13 edge in the Senate.

Democratic candidates also held onto the state's undersecretary positions, which in most cases tend to be decided along the same line as the gubernatorial contest.

Democratic Lt. Gov. Joseph J. Paolino of Hartford won reelection on the same ballot spot with O'Neill and incumbent Democratic Treasurer Henry E. Parker of New Haven and Comptroller J. Edward Caldwell of Bridgeport won reelection.

Town's results charted

Charts at right show how Manchester voted Tuesday in each of the town's 12 voting districts in all the contests.

70 percent of voters turn out

Seventy percent of Manchester's voters went to the polls yesterday to cast ballots in the state election. Of the 27,875 who were eligible to vote as of Oct. 19, 19,947 cast ballots for a total of 70.4 percent.

The percentage was actually a bit lower however because by yesterday the number of eligible voters had climbed to 27,949.

The lowest percentage was in Voting District 11 where only 66 percent voted. The highest was in District 5 where 78 percent voted.

Here is the breakdown by district: District 1, Robertson School, 67 percent of the 2,354 eligible voted.

District 2, Bowers, 73 percent of 2,230.

District 3, Buckley, 73 percent of 2,368.

District 4, Martin, 70 percent of 2,345.

District 5, Senior Citizens Center, 78 percent of 2,476.

District 6, Nathan Hale, 69 percent of 2,407.

District 7, Waddell, 71 percent of 2,321.

District 8, Verplank, 68 percent of 2,291.

District 9, Keeney, 71 percent of 2,281.

District 10, Manchester High School, 68 percent of 2,559.

Close victory overwhelms Swensson; win brings faint

By Nancy Thompson Herald Reporter

The margin of victory was narrow, but the thrill was overwhelming for state Rep. Elsie L. "Biz" Swensson, R-13th District.

Mrs. Swensson - who had privately conceded defeat - fainted upon finding out that she had retained her seat by beating Democratic challenger John W. Thomason by fewer than 100 votes.

Her triumph came almost two hours after the polls closed Tuesday. The delay was caused by mechanical problems with two voting machines in District 4.

Down by 235 votes before the district reported, Mrs. Swensson appeared resigned to a life without the Legislature.

"I've accepted defeat," Mrs. Swensson said as she waited for the results at Republican headquarters in the Watkins Building on Main Street.

"Now if they make me win, I'll get all emotional," Mrs. Swensson gently chided her son, Joseph Swensson Jr., a local builder.

"If you'd worked harder for your mother, I would have won," she said. Seconds later, however, GOP town Chairman Curtis M. Smith came over to Mrs. Swensson with the District 4 results in his hand and gave her a congratulatory hug before publicly posting the results.

"I couldn't have," said Mrs. Swensson. "I won." "I don't want to throw up all over everybody," she added, and slid to the floor in a faint.

After she regained consciousness, Mrs. Swensson was helped to her feet by her son to receive the congratulations of other party members.

It was said William J. Diana, the unsuccessful GOP candidate for judge of probate, a victory "worth waiting for."

MRS. SWENSSON was the sole successful candidate at Republican headquarters Tuesday.

Carl A. Zinsner, who held onto his seat in the state senate, had his own headquarters a few blocks away.

To the surprise and disappointment of most of those at GOP headquarters, incumbent state Rep. Walter H. Joyner lost his seat to Democrat James R. McCavanagh in the 12th district.

Early in the evening, before the votes came in, Joyner and Republican officials - were confident about his chances for victory. Joyner referred to McCavanagh as "kind of a marshmallow."

Joyner said then he was not happy with the campaign.

BIZ SWENSSON RECOVERS faint when she learned she won

When it became apparent that Joyner would lose to McCavanagh, however, he was quick to acknowledge defeat. As McCavanagh won, so too did the Democrats soon as the last numbers from the assembly district were posted in Republican headquarters, Joyner was out the door on his way to the Democratic site to offer his congratulations to McCavanagh.

Joyner said later he hadn't "any idea" why the Democratic site to offer his congratulations to McCavanagh.

"Jim's a very popular guy," Joyner said. "What I don't want to throw up all over everybody," she added, and slid to the floor in a faint.

"I don't know, I'm not a political analyst," he said. "I did everything I should have done. The numbers of greater Democratic voter registration speak for themselves."

Joseph Swensson Jr. had a simple explanation for his mother's victory.

"She won on love," he said. "Everybody loves her."

Mrs. Swensson, however, attributed her victory to hard work, organization and friendship.

"Win or lose, Mrs. Swensson said she planned to be at the Capitol for a 9:30 a.m. committee meeting today.

"Tomorrow morning," she said Tuesday, "come hell or high water I'm going."

Her husband, Joseph Swensson Sr., reflected, "It just proves a good woman can beat a good man."

can I tell you? I said all along it was a horse race." Joyner said he used the same campaign strategy he has used in previous years, but "it just didn't work."

Other Republicans speculated, however, that he may have been hurt by lukewarm support from the Eighth Utilities District, which makes up most of the assembly district.

Joyner said he will now have time to spend with his family, particularly mentioning their house in New Hampshire.

"I'll still get up at 5:30 in the morning," he said. "I do every day and I will tomorrow."

REPUBLICAN candidate for Judge of Probate, William J. Diana, said he planned to sleep late today.

"I'm tired from campaigning," he said. "Other than that, I feel fine."

Diana - who was obviously keyed-up at the beginning of the evening before results began to come in - would not speculate about the reason for his defeat.

"I don't know, I'm not a political analyst," he said. "I did everything I should have done. The numbers of greater Democratic voter registration speak for themselves."

Connecticut Legislature

Demos keep Senate margin and boost edge in House

HARTFORD (UPI) - Democrats did well Tuesday in races for the Connecticut Legislature, retaining their 10 seat majority in the Senate and boosting their edge in the House by five seats.

The retention of Democratic leadership in both chambers will make it a lot easier for Gov. William O'Neill to push through his programs and proposals at least for the next two years.

Unofficial election results showed Democrats keeping a 23-13 majority in the Senate while in the House, the 42-49 margin enjoyed by Democrats increased to 27-64.

Democrats have controlled the state house since 1972. However, there were some election day casualties among Democratic leaders in the House.

Assistant House Majority Leaders Chester W. Morgan of Vernon lost to Republican Robert E. Hurd and Peter Rosso of Berlin lost to Republican Lorin Dickinson by only 38 votes.

Other House Democrats who lost were Naomi Otterness of Leyard and Joseph Farriselli of Branford. In the Senate, most incumbents won re-election. But Democrat Frederick Knous of Cromwell narrowly lost to Republican Kenneth T. Hampton of Haddam.

New faces in the Senate include Rep. Joseph Harper of New Britain who replaces Nancy Johnson, the winner in the 6th District congressional race.

Also, Democrat John B. Larson of East Hartford who will occupy the seat of Democratic Sen. Marcella Fahey who failed to win the nomination.

A new Republican face in the Senate will be Anne P. Streeter, the former mayor of West Hartford, who will replace Clifton Leonhardt, an unsuccessful congressional candidate.

How to campaign vs. an incumbent

Editor's note: Rep. J. Peter Fuscas won re-election Tuesday to the 55th Assembly District. The following is a satirical piece, "The Fuscas campaign guide against incumbent Legislators," which he provided the Manchester Herald with early this week.

By J. Peter Fuscas

RULE 1: No one can be in two places at the same time.

TRUISM 1: If a legislator introduces a lot of laws he has to support their passage through many different committees and at many different public hearings. Chances are that they will conflict with assigned committee meetings and public hearings.

ATTACK 1: First nail the legislator for introducing too many bills. Then attack his poor record of attendance at his own committee and public hearings.

Be sure to point out that only one out of his 10 laws ever survived.

TIP - neglect to mention that's the average.

TRUISM 2: If a legislator has a near perfect voting and attendance record on the floor of the house, in committee, and at public hearings, you know he's working day and night.

ATTACK 2: First nail him for not introducing many bills and then nail him for not holding district meetings. Finish by accusing him of being out of touch with the people.

TRUISM 3: If a legislator holds a lot of district meetings, chances are he'll miss many of his public hearings or he'll miss votes during night sessions.

ATTACK 3: First nail him for campaigning when he should be at the Capitol. Then follow up with his disrespect and disregard for the law that requires every bill to have a public hearing.

Never lie to the press. Just follow this guide and you won't have to!

Then expose how many votes he missed.

TRUISM 4: A legislator tries to balance his time between committee meetings, public hearings, district meetings, and introducing legislation.

ATTACK 4: Nail him for being mediocre in everything he does and only living up to his responsibilities.

RULE 2: You can't be all things to all people. A legislator votes 1,000 times a term. There has to be at least 10 bills that make him look cruel, inhuman, insensitive or contradictory. Find them and nail him.

you won't have to!

ADDITIONAL TIPS:

TIP 1: Legislative scheduling. If you are on one committee it will never meet. If you are on two committees they meet the same day. If you are on three committees, all the important votes are taken the same day at the same hour. Remember, no legislator has less than two committees.

TIP 2: Business vs. labor. If you vote against labor, they'll support your opponent. If you vote against business, they'll contribute to your campaign.

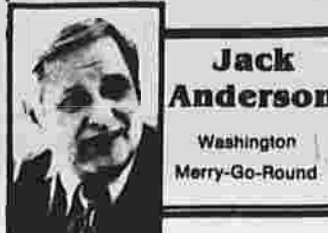

Good luck! and remember, the General Assembly met practically full time since January '81 until 4 months ago, and everything the legislator has done since then can be passed off as plain politics.

RULE 3: Being a good legislator doesn't necessarily mean you're a good politician. When a good legislator votes against a bill with popular emotional content because it is legally flawed, poorly drafted, confusing, and/or unenforceable, you've got him every time!

RULE 4: Misrepresentation can be the better part of valor. If a legislator has a favorable voting record on many issues of public concern, TAKE his positions and then demand to know where he stands - a few days before the election.

RULE 5: Never lie to the press. Just follow this guide and

Taking credit wrongly

WASHINGTON — The front-line troops in President Reagan's war on waste and fraud in the federal government are the investigators who work for the various inspectors general.

They are dedicated, savvy professionals who can follow a paper trail through the bureaucratic jungle and nab corrupt or extravagant officials in their swivel chairs. But sometimes these investigative infantrymen are painfully embarrassed by self-serving superiors sitting comfortably at their rear echelons.

TAKE THE CASE of Richard Campbell, recently retired, who worked for the inspector general at the Environmental Protection Agency. In a progress report to Congress for the period April-September 1981, Campbell claimed credit for the indictment and conviction of two EPA employees and one ex-employee for cashing in $700 worth of phony travel vouchers.

"We devised a plan to arrest the former employee upon presentation of the false voucher and payment," the I.G. report boasted, adding proudly that "assistance was obtained" from the Federal Protective Service, a police arm of the Environmental Protection Agency.

My associate Tony Capaccio tracked down the case file on the phony travel-voucher scheme and then read the EPA's proud claim that Leonard Hernandez, the criminal investigator who handled the case for the Protective Service.

According to Hernandez, the arrest of the ex-employee on May 1, 1981, was accomplished without any help from the inspector general's office. Of the inspector general's office, Hernandez said, "They did no planning of the arrest. They didn't know how to do anything." He said the inspector general's office did little beyond providing information on the former employee.

GOP holds line in New England

By Steven W. Syre
United Press International

New England Republicans, their ranks ruffled but not tattered, came out of a dangerous mid-term election with no major losses and one victory over a Democratic incumbent that could prove important to President Reagan.

Incumbent Democrats generally won with big margins throughout the region Tuesday. But incumbent GOP senators in Vermont, Rhode Island and Connecticut all survived the storm - barely.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., swamped Republican Ray Shamie, a millionaire businessman and political neophyte. With 96 percent of the precincts reported, Kennedy drew 82 percent of the vote - enough to keep a shine on his image as a possible presidential contender in 1984.

In the region's 24 congressional races, two Republican incumbents lost. One other Republican was in a tight race. Democrats held a 16-9 advantage going into the election.

In New Hampshire, Republican John Sununu edged Democratic Gov. Hugh Gallen by 13,000 votes - or 51 to 47 percent.

Sununu, who stuck close to Reagan's guns through his campaign, could use his position to marshal much support in the state for the president next year - keeping that advantage from a Democratic candidate. New Hampshire holds the nation's first presidential primary.

Gallen was perceived as a supporter of former Vice President Walter Mondale, a likely presidential candidate in 1984.

The governor's office was retained for the Democrats in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Maine. Republican Gov. Richard Smalling was re-elected in Vermont.

Connecticut Sen. Lowell Weicker, a maverick Republican often at odds with the White House, edged liberal Democratic Rep. Toby Moffett by a 51-46 percent margin.

Moffett, one of the strongest voices in the House on environmental issues, lost by 66,000 votes.

In Vermont, Republican Sen. Robert Stafford squeaked past liberal Democrat James Gustafson, who won by a 51-46 percent margin, his held every major elective office in the state over the past three decades.

Freshman Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., enjoyed an early lead in the campaign, but barely defeated Democrat Julius Michaelson. He led by fewer than 9,000 votes with virtually 100 percent of the precincts reporting.

In Maine, Democrat George Mitchell swamped GOP Rep. David Emery, holding a 61-39 edge with 94 percent of the precincts reported, to retain the Senate seat he took over when Edmund Muskie became secretary of state in the Carter administration.

Rep. Margaret Heckler, R-Mass., the senior woman in the House, was defeated by a surprisingly lopsided 59-41 percent margin by freshman Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., in the reappointed 4th District.

Democrats lost the Connecticut seat Moffett had held. Republican Nancy Johnson defeated William Curry in a close contest - 52 to 48 percent - between two state senators.

Democrat Bruce Morrison was the apparent upset winner over Rep. Lawrence DeNardis, R-Conn., one of the House's leading Gypsy Moths, in the state's 3rd District. With a recount on the horizon, Morrison won by 801 votes.

HARTFORD — Maverick Republican Sen. Lowell Weicker, a thorn in the side of the Reagan administration, survived the "toughest race" of his political career to defeat liberal Democratic Rep. Toby Moffett.

Weicker, who squeaked into the Senate in a three-way race 12 years ago, won re-election to a third term Tuesday with a 51 percent to 46 percent victory over the liberal, four-term congressman.

Weicker, a Mystic millionaire who has spent much of his political career criticizing his own party, defeated Moffett by an unofficial 46,600 votes, far short of the 224,856 vote edge by which he won a second term in 1976.

"Toby Moffett's a class act. That's the best and toughest opponent I've had," said Weicker, his shirt sleeves rolled up as he addressed supporters at a downtown Hartford hotel.

The victory kept intact Weicker's unbeaten string dating back to 1962 when he was first elected to the Legislature and dealt a serious setback to the political ambitions of Moffett, a rising star among Democratic liberals.

Weicker, 51, attributed his victory to being in the middle of the political spectrum. A fearful Moffett, 38, said Weicker was a "very tough customer" and urged his young supporters not to be disillusioned by his loss.

"Politics is about winning, losing and public education as well," said Moffett, who cried in his wife's arms while appearing before supporters at the Polish National Home in downtown Hartford.

Weicker, who voted against President Reagan more than any other Republican senator, admitted the battle with Moffett was tough. "It was the toughest race I've ever had," he said.

Weicker pointed to his campaign theme of being an independent voice in the Senate - which has given him the label of a maverick - in assessing his victory.

"America doesn't belong to the left of the Democratic Party any more than it belongs to the right of the Republican Party, it's right in the middle and I think that message pretty clearly this evening," he said.

The close race between Weicker and Moffett dealt a rebuke to the New Right in Connecticut in that Conservative Lucien F. DiFazio, who had run on a platform of devotion to Reagan policies, won only 3 percent of the vote.

Unofficial results from the state's 169 cities and towns gave Weicker 57,824 votes, or 51 percent, to 49,154, or 46 percent, for Moffett, and 29,124, or 3 percent, for DiFazio.

DiFazio, a Wethersfield lawyer who ran unsuccessfully for other offices as a Democrat and Republican, was chosen to run for the Senate by a group of conservatives backed by the National Conservative Political Action Committee.

DiFazio entered the Senate race after conservatives found themselves without a candidate when Prescott Bush Jr., brother of Vice President George Bush, dropped a challenge to Weicker for the GOP nomination.

The Senate race was one of the most expensive in Connecticut, with Weicker and Moffett having raised and spent an estimated $2.25 million and Bush having spent $1 million in his effort to oust Weicker.

Moffett passed up a chance to run for the Senate two years ago, yielding to then-Democratic Rep. Christopher Dodd, who went on to victory. Moffett faced a brief challenge for the Democratic Senate nomination this year from John Downey, a former CIA agent who spent 20 years in a Chinese prison.

In Manchester

Some managed to resist tide

A first look at the results of the election Tuesday suggests that in Manchester, as in most of Connecticut, it is a Democratic year.

That makes the victory of Rep. Elizabeth Swenson in the 13th House District all the more remarkable. It is a tribute to this Republican's popularity that she was able to squeak out a victory over a strong Democratic candidate, former Mayor John W. Thompson.

Mrs. Swenson won big in the Republican 4th voting district and topped all other GOP candidates (except for Sen. Lowell Weicker) in the other sections of the 13th. Like Weicker, she clearly was the beneficiary of tough Democratic ticket-splitting.

Another beneficiary of ticket-splitting, apparently, was GOP probate candidate William Diana. He lost, but not by as big a margin as most Republican candidates.

Was Diana's comparatively good showing due to his popularity as a long time member of the Board of Directors? Or did his attacks, late in the campaign, on his opponent, William E. FitzGerald, narrow the incumbent's victory margin?

FitzGerald and Mayor Stephen T. Penny say the defeat of Diana proves that "gutter politics" failed. If so, their assessment can't be proven by the election results. In fact, it could just as easily be argued that Diana's attacks were a case of too little, too late.

Mayor Penny proved more popular in Manchester than Republican Sen. Carl A. Zinsser. Clearly, Zinsser's strong showing in Glastonbury gave him his victory.

But there is a puzzling aspect to Penny's showing in the 13th House District. He did better than most other Democrats in Republican strongholds, and slightly worse than other Democrats in Democratic voting districts. At the very least, this suggests that he was the focus of a lot of ticket-splitting from both sides. It might also mean that his reputation as a fiscal conservative endeared him to some Republicans and turned off some Democrats.

Penny wasn't hurt badly in the Eighth District, despite his reputation there as one who would just as soon consolidate the district into the rest of the town. His showing in the Eighth was as good as elsewhere in Manchester.

The most clear-cut beneficiary of the Democratic sweep was Director James McCavanagh, who upset Rep. Walter Joyner in the 12th House District. This is basically a Democratic district. It also includes a great deal of the Eighth District.

McCavanagh, unlike the two previous Democratic candidates for this House seat, never was accused of favoring consolidation. If he had, would he have won anyway in this Democratic year? That's another of those unanswered - and probably unanswerable - questions.

Keep up wall

To the Editor:

It's very unfortunate that the recent musical at MCC derives its title from a familiar superlative. The name of the show seems to have been unfairly used by local critics.

Much to my dismay, the subtleties of the dramatic and musical direction of this fine production has been overlooked. "The Fantasticks" in my opinion, is a small delicate work, a musical that could only be held together successfully by directors with a keen sense of discrimination.

I believe that Charles Piese and Karen Krijnak are this intelligible. They are both sure-fire material.

The story was treated as carefully as it should have been. The quiet approach achieved by all hit its mark - the heart. How very easy it was to sit back and absorb such a sensitive rendition of this very beautiful theatrical production.

In "real" life the cast of thousands rarely, if ever, appears. We can't expect that approach to "The Fantasticks."

David Kennedy, El Gallo, could have blown the critics out of the auditorium had he wished to do so. His use of vocal control is to be complimented, not criticized. Jennifer Joy's voice is beautiful but she cannot be expected to sound or act like she is 30. She's not even 20 yet.

The number that the boy, girl and fathers sing together is complicated and busy. To have omitted some of the notes would have been sloppy or careless: That did not occur. This difficult piece was well performed.

Subtlety eludes us if we are not good listeners. Perhaps "The Fantasticks" has a lesson for all of us. I suggest that the players and directors keep the wall up to protect themselves from the critics. In spite of all that has been said, certainly the fine talent involved in "The Fan-taasticks" has proven that you can accomplish more with less.

What use?

To the Editor:

I write in response to Lisa Zowada's recent review "The Fantasticks" as presented by MCC. I should point out that, although I am a member of MCC's theatre faculty, I had nothing to do with "The Fantasticks"; thus I am not an "interested party."

I do not intend to argue with Ms. Zowada's criticisms of the performance, wrongheaded though I think some of those criticisms are. Instead, I would like to examine the chief function of a drama review.

In a daily newspaper, the purpose of reviewing a play is to describe and evaluate it so that readers can decide if they want to see it. Since a review should appear well before the play's last performance, the reviewer is obligated to see the earliest possible performance.

I find, however, that Ms. Zowada attended the last performance, and her review did not appear until the following Tuesday, three days after "The Fantasticks" had closed.

Of what use, then, is Ms. Zowada's scathing, after-the-fact review? Does it help readers to decide whether to go see "The Fantasticks"? No. Does it help the director and the performers? No - not nearly as much as a private letter would have done. What good, then, to anyone (save Ms. Zowada) is the review?

I believe that the Manchester Herald should seriously re-examine its policy on dramatic criticism. Used responsibly, reviews of local plays can be of real value to the community and to the players. Used otherwise, nobody profits.

Be careful

To the Editor:

Frost on the windshield usually signals the time to begin winterizing motor vehicles for most people. Anti-freeze seems to be on sale throughout the area.

Do-it-yourselfers should be very careful to avoid spills when adding anti-freeze to car or truck radiators. A spill can kill dogs or cats who find the poisonous chemical sweet-tasting.

To avoid a needless tragedy in your yard or neighborhood, be sure to wash down any spills. Watch for puddling that results from overflowing. When the engine heats up, the radiator liquid expands and overflows.

Also, keep in mind that a parked car's warm engine is a magnet for cats trying to escape the cold. Take the time to chase animals from these dangerous hiding places by honking the horn or pounding the hood before starting the engine. A little bit of effort can save a life.

HOW THEN, did the inspector general's claim of credit wind up in the report to Congress? A curiously frank message slip dated July 31, 1981, gives the answer. It was from James Conn, an official in the inspector general's office, to Ellis Cannady, the EPA inspector in the case.

"Dick (Campbell) wants to meet with us," Conn wrote his colleague. "At the meeting, he wants us to advise how he can get credit for three arrests, three indictments and three convictions based upon your work on the GSA cases. No use arguing. His mind is made up. Your 'arrest' etc. will be published in the annual report no matter what."

In obvious disgust, Conn concluded: "Hell. Don't ask me. I work for him too."

And so it was that the EPA's I.G. office took credit for someone else's "collar" so that a bureaucrat could look good to Congress.

When Conn's note was read back to him, he said, "Obviously, I have no comment." Campbell said that since his office gave an "assist" on the arrest, it was proper to take credit. An EPA source viewed it differently, saying, "It was a case of one-man egomania. That's clearly what it was."

Footnote: This is not the first time that the EPA's inspector general has stirred up controversy. The current inspector general, Mickey Novick, has been accused of whitewashing several investigations, and Rep. James Scheuer, D-N.Y., had formally called for his resignation. Novick, incidentally, was not at EPA when the arrest records were fudged.

Bolton vote was clincher in narrow Fuscacas victory

By Richard Cody and Jeff Weingart
Herald Reporters

Both agreed the 55th Assembly District race was won and lost in Bolton.

"Bolton's the one that did it for me," Republican Peter Fuscacas said after learning he had won a second term in the state General Assembly. "Bolton is the only town in the whole district that has more Republicans than Democrats."

"Bolton was the killer, no doubt about it," Daniel J. Moore, the Democratic challenger, said moments after hearing he had been narrowly defeated by Fuscacas.

Fuscacas, after being down by almost 200 votes when the Hebron results came in first, won in the end by 292. He took Bolton, a town that voted — to no surprise — Republican down the line, by 292 votes.

It was the clincher, and the mood at both headquarters when the results came in reflected it.

AT THE Republican campaign headquarters in Marlborough, Fuscacas was down by about 40 votes before Andover and Bolton called in. Then the call from Bolton came, and Fuscacas began showing the victory grin. "It's not over yet," he said, though his expression revealed that he wasn't seriously concerned that the results from Andover, a small town, would sway things.

At the other camp, it was different. Moore was stunned when hearing about the Bolton tally, and almost immediately called Fuscacas and conceded.

Andover didn't prove to be a maker of a breaker, and came in 464 to 433 for Moore.

"He's a very young man and he's got a very bright future," Fuscacas said after hanging up from talking with Moore. "When you're 25 you have a future in front of you. When you get to be my age, a defeat could be the end," he said. Fuscacas is 41.

Moore in fact came closer than expected. Taking Hebron, where he focused his campaign, by 1,131 to 972, and losing in the third district in Manchester by only 825 to 781, it appeared at the Republican headquarters that Fuscacas was in trouble.

Until, of course, the Bolton results came in.

Marlborough, both candidates' home town, went for the incumbent by 1,074 to 974.

THE 55TH District campaign was one held mostly door-to-door. It lacked any serious charges and counter charges, though Moore attacked what he called Fuscacas' invisibility to the constituency.

It was Moore's first run for state office. Fuscacas won the seat in 1980 over Bolton resident Aloysius J. Ahern, who was the incumbent.

"I thought it was going to be close," Fuscacas said. "This is Billy O'Neill country."

Moore had said he hoped to gain some momentum from incumbent Gov. William A. O'Neill, who was expected to glide into a full term. "But hard work paid off. I'm glad to be back," Fuscacas said. "I'm going to be holding district meetings on proposed legislation. I'd like to see people come forth and give proposals for legislation."

"Moore said he was disappointed with the results in his home town. 'I should have won Marlborough. I should have worked harder there. I don't think we could have done any better. We did the best job we could have.'

"I feel choked up because people worked so hard. I didn't think I would lose. I've got nothing planned. 'We will be back.'

Moore was clearly shocked by the loss. His eyes were watery as he addressed his supporters at the headquarters in Hebron. After talking briefly with reporters, he withdrew into a back room.

Preuss regains judgeship

By Richard Cody
Herald Reporter

Norman J. Preuss, after eight years away from the job of probate judge for Andover, Bolton and Columbia, ran away with victory Tuesday over incumbent Democrat Valdis Vinkels of Andover.

The election was another episode in the Preuss-Vinkels rivalry that has been going on for eight years. Preuss held the position for 12 years until Vinkels took it away from him in 1974. Preuss took it again, by only 24 votes, in 1978.

Preuss won this year's race in Bolton, his hometown, by gaining a huge margin of 446 votes. The final tally was listed unofficially as 965 to 549 in Bolton. Andover went as expected for Vinkels by a 503 to 392 margin. Columbia, which made the difference four years ago in the race, gave no sharp endorsement this time. It went for Preuss by a vote of 74 to 71.

"Bolton was very good," Preuss said. "They're always good to me."

Bolton voted Republican down the line, and was credited with giving the margin of victory to incumbent Rep. J. Peter Fuscacas in the 55th Assembly District.

Preuss said after the victory hour when in Columbia paid off this year. He also said the large turnout in Bolton helped him.

About 70 percent of the voters turned out in that town.

"What can I say," Vinkels said. "It's a platitude and that's it. The voters have spoken and that's it."

Vinkels, an attorney, said he tried to stress during the campaign that he is better qualified for the job. But he said Bolton made the difference.

He said he didn't know if he'd be back in four years to run again.

Prague sweeps 8th District towns to defeat Blakeslee

By Jeff Weingart
Herald Reporter

Democratic Edith Prague swept all five towns in the new 8th Assembly District to win her bid against Republican Russell G. Blakeslee of Lebanon for a seat at the state capitol.

Mrs. Prague called the victory "phenomenal."

"I'm so excited I'm beside myself," she said. "It's so wonderful that we won. So many people worked so hard. We started at point zero."

Mrs. Prague did unexpectedly well in Blakeslee's home town of Lebanon, winning by a vote of 531 to 962.

She also won in Bozrah, Franklin, Coventry, and in her own town, Columbia.

Citizens Party candidate Clair Connelly garnered 97 votes in the 8th, even though she had withdrawn as a candidate on Friday and had endorsed Mrs. Prague.

Residents of Coventry chose Mrs. Prague over Blakeslee by a 550-vote margin. Throughout the campaign, Mrs. Prague had the most trouble in that town. The Coventry Democratic Town Committee had endorsed Robert "Skip" Walsh for the office. Walsh forced a tough primary race which Mrs. Prague won in September. It was thought that Walsh support in the town might have translated into anti-Prague votes.

But Mrs. Prague said she was not surprised by the favorable outcome in Coventry.

"The people in Coventry were very supportive," she said. "I worked very hard in Coventry."

Blakeslee attributed the loss to what he implied was Mrs. Prague's campaign tactics. He also said his loss was part of a nationwide trend.

"In this part of the country, from the first spot on down with the exception of Lowell Weicker, people are voting in favor of more taxes and a few more services," he said.

"If I ever went after another office, I'll answer fewer questions," said Blakeslee. "It's better to be mushy on issues."

Blakeslee implied that Mrs. Prague had been "mushy" during the campaign when asked questions which pertained to specific issues.

Mrs. Prague was criticized repeatedly throughout the campaign because she refused to commit herself on issues like a state income tax. She often countered by saying she wanted to bring those kinds of decisions "to the people."

Mrs. Prague said she plans to "go out and thank the people" of the 8th District will be proud of me," she said.

Johnson, Morrison win to keep party split 4-2

HARTFORD (UPI) — The political complexion of the state's congressional delegation is unchanged, despite Bruce Morrison's apparent upset win in the 3rd District and Republican Nancy Johnson's victory in the 6th District.

When the frantic campaigning ended and the votes were tallied Tuesday, four Democrats and two Republicans were headed to Capitol Hill from Connecticut, including two women.

The makings of an upset emerged early in the 3rd District where Morrison, 37, of Hamden, challenged incumbent Republican Lawrence J. DeNardis, 44, of Hamden, seeking his second term. The lead see-sawed back and forth through the night and the race was still too close to call when all the precincts had reported. Unofficial totals gave Morrison a 61-vote edge on DeNardis, who refused to concede.

State law requires an automatic recount whenever the difference is less than one-half of 1 percent and 2,000 votes.

Morrison announced himself the winner at 9:30 p.m. with about three-quarters of the vote in. "I would like to claim that the 3rd District has a new congressman. Let's remember the reason it has been won because this campaign tapped the heart and soul of the Democratic Party in this district."

In the 6th District, Mrs. Johnson edged Democrat William E. Curry Jr. by 7,200 votes for the seat. "I'm pleased to be back in the U.S. Senate. He lost it in a campaign with bows and arrows going against howlers," Curry promised.

"I'm planning to stick around," Curry promised.

"We're going to do this again and we're going to win."

The largest plurality was in the 1st District where Democrat Barbara Bailey Kennedy was elected to a full-term, beating Republican Herschel Klein by more than 60,000 votes.

"I was absolutely delighted. We don't have winners like this in Connecticut," she said. Mrs. Kennedy won a special election in January to replace the late Rep. William Cotto.

It is the second time in state history two women have served in the House from Connecticut. Republican Clare Booth Luce of Greenwich and Democrat Chase Going Woodhouse of New London served concurrent terms in the late 1940's.

Incumbents were re-elected by comfortable margins in the 2nd, 4th and 5th districts.

Democratic Rep. Samuel Gejdenson beat Republican Tony Guglielmo for the second time in four years, this time by nearly 23,000 votes. "We did a good job getting out the vote, but the Reagan administration did a better job," said Gejdenson's press secretary Janine Griffin.

Guglielmo said he was not likely to try again in 1984. "I've got to be a realist. I've got three kids. I've got to get back to the basics before I take another foray."

GOP Rep. Stewart McKinney won a seventh term, beating Democratic challenger John Aristotele Phillips by nearly 21,000 votes in the 4th District. "It was a rematch between the two. Phillips lost by 50,000 votes in 1980."

"I think people voted for the person and the issues and I'm proud of the results," said McKinney, 50.

Democratic William R. Hatchford had an easy time winning his third term, beating Republican Neal B. Hanlon of Naugatuck.

News analysis Gejdenson is big winner in costly U.S. House race

By Richard Cody
Herald Reporter

U.S. Rep. Samuel Gejdenson may have been right all along in his claim that most incumbents couldn't come close to him.

"I think the negative advertising was rejected in Connecticut," he said.

D. Anthony Guglielmo, the Republican challenger who spent about $450,000 trying to unseat the incumbent Democrat, lost badly Tuesday. The margin was nearly 20,000 votes. He had lost by fewer votes last time when he spent about one-third of that amount.

His revenue-raising capabilities and tactics attracted national attention. It was the most expensive U.S. House race in Connecticut's history.

Gejdenson matched Guglielmo's spending this year. But with the money this time launched a campaign attacking both Gejdenson's record and integrity, while the incumbent was content mainly with highlighting his record and doing a last-minute advertising sweep to affect undecided voters.

"The distortions just didn't work with the voters in the 3rd District," Gejdenson said Tuesday night at his election headquarters in taxes. He told some constituents by letter in April that he had not taken a special tax break Congress voted itself when in fact he had used it to deduct more than $17,000.

EDWARD LOCKE, who engineered the campaign for Guglielmo, said, "Sam's done a real good job politically of communicating with his district."

He attributed the defeat to this aspect of incumbency, and to an anti-Reagan backlash.

"(Republicans) are getting tumbled everywhere."

"I am very surprised, very disappointed, and I fear for eastern Connecticut," he said. He said he was particularly surprised by the outcome in northeastern Connecticut, where Guglielmo had spent a lot of time. He denied Gejdenson's contention that aggressive campaigning hurt the challenger's chances.

Locke said he doubted Guglielmo would try a third time. He worked about as hard as any politician can in three and a half years. It's going to be very difficult for him," Guglielmo had previously indicated that if he didn't knock off Gejdenson this time it would be unlikely he'd have a reasonable chance at doing it after the congressman had two full terms.

Incumbent Skelley defeats Martin in 35th District

By Richard Cody
Herald Reporter

And so ends a race many felt neither candidate should lose.

Democratic State Sen. Michael Skelley of Tolland Tuesday handily defeated Republican challenger Isham "Ham" Martin, the first selectman-woodcarver from Woodstock, in the race for the 35th District Senatorial seat.

Martin lost by 3,691 votes, and conceded early in the evening Tuesday after results came in from the larger of the 14 towns in the district.

For Skelley, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee and a leading legislator in Hartford, as well as a plumber by trade, the victory means a third consecutive term. He said he plans to continue as he has in the past — fighting for laws against discrimination against women in employment, and protection for labor in general. He's been successful on both counts in passing important legislations.

Skelley, an admitted liberal, is also pro-state income tax, and for liberalized gambling and loosening liquor laws.

He is perhaps one of the most outspoken and direct politicians not being afraid of repercussions brought about by his sometimes radical stances.

FOR MARTIN, the defeat ends a hard campaign — one that broke from orthodox politics and attracted regional recognition for its "ethical" and "refreshing" approach.

He brought perhaps the first extended stand against the taking of political action committee money to finance a campaign. Martin refused PAC money from the outset, and tried to raise money by increasing name recognition — by appealing to private voters.

Martin's opinion was that the PACs could influence a politician's vote in office. And Martin appeared when he first came out with his stand, either ahead of his time or reverse would have been prudent. Martin didn't care.

SKELLEY, contacted after the results were in, said Martin's campaign was "anti, negative," for the PAC stance. But he said the difference in the polls was the four-year incumbency.

"I did not anticipate our loss," he said. "I think Mr. Martin ran the campaign he wanted to run."

Martin said Tuesday night, "The people all liked my stuff. I don't think there was any bad reaction to my campaign. I love this stuff. I think the public's awful fickle. First you get the

"I'm disappointed. I thought I felt I was something to contribute. I was just wanting to help. I'm disappointed that I won't have the chance."

"I've got a lot of folks here that love us. We'll be right. I love this stuff, and I always have. I don't know if I'll stay out of it."

STRATFORD (UPI) - A helicopter capable of taking on increased mission tasks - with higher altitudes is being produced by Sikorsky Aircraft and two of its subsidiaries.

The new version of the S-76 Mark II helicopter will be built by Sikorsky, a division of United Technologies.

Robert F. Daniels, president of the Stratford-based Sikorsky, said the helicopter would offer improved mission capability in higher altitudes.

For example, Daniels said, the helicopter's useful load at 5,000 feet and 77 degrees is 1,100 pounds, or 151 percent of the present level.

Nationwide, Democrats do better than many expected

By Wesley G. Pippert United Press International

WASHINGTON - The Democrats rolled to bigger-than-expected gains in the House, defeating a flock of GOP first-termers and other incumbents and threatening the rest of President Reagan's domestic agenda.

At least 14 of the 51 freshmen elected with Reagan in 1980 were beaten Tuesday in all, at least 24 GOP incumbents lost, including veterans Margaret Heckler of Massachusetts and Don Clausen and John Rouselle of California.

The Democratic gain would be somewhat less than the average 31 in World War II midterm elections for the party not holding the White House, but it still would cut deeply into the GOP's conservative Democrat coalition that gave Reagan about all he sought in his first two years.

House Republican leader Bob Michel won narrowly in Peoria, Ill., hard hit by unemployment, although it took most of the night to determine the winner. Five North Carolina Republicans fled to conservative Sen. Jesse Helms' congressional club - including two who were favored - lost.

Republicans lost in two key matchups of incumbents caused by redistricting - Mrs. Heckler, senior woman in Congress, to Democrat Barney Frank in the Boston sub-

Democrats oust 4 GOP governors

By Gregory Gordon United Press International

Democrats ousted Texas Gov. William Clements and three other GOP governors Tuesday to seize command of two-thirds of the nation's statehouses. But California Republican Attorney General

Democrat Thomas Bradley's bid to become the first elected black governor.

Former Democratic Sen. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois sought to pull off another shocker in a tense race with Gov. James Thompson, a possible presidential candidate.

In a race that went down to the last 56 minutes, Dukemejian pulled ahead of Los Angeles Mayor Bradley at 6:30 a.m. EST and was assured of an upset victory with votes yet to come in from the GOP strongholds of Orange and Kern counties.

Democrats scored net gains of at least seven governorships - winning GOP-held offices in Alaska, Texas, Arkansas, Nebraska, Minnesota, Michigan, Nevada, Ohio and Wisconsin. They had a chance at winning an eighth, in Illinois, while losing only in California and New Hampshire.

Besides Texas Attorney General Mark White, who stunned Clements, wheelchair-bound George Wallace took advantage of Alabama's heavy Democratic vote to easily recapture the governor's mansion and former Democratic Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas returned to power.

In Illinois, Stevenson watched his 100,000 vote lead over heavily favored Gov. Jim Thompson disappear. Thompson pulled a 33,000-vote lead with 95 percent of precincts counted at dawn today.

However, some 300 Chicago area precincts, where the vote runs heavily Democratic, were impounded when ballot-counting tickets were not all counted.

seats, leading for 2 Republican seats. Republicans won 7 Democratic seats, leading for no Republican seats.

The Democrats knocked off Rep. John LeBoutillier, 29, an outspoken first-termer. By contrast, the oldest member of the House, Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., 82, a staunch Reagan foe, easily won re-election.

State Sen. Robert G. Clark, a Democrat, lost to Circuit Judge Campbell Franklin in Clark's bid in a new black-majority district to become the first black congressman from Mississippi since Reconstruction.

In Tennessee, Cissy Baker, daughter of Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., lost to Jim Cooper, son of the state's World War II governor. So did Mrs. Lynn Cutler, Democratic national vice chair, in her second race against Rep. Cooper Evans, R-Iowa.

Republican Connie Mack III, grandson of the old Philadelphia Athletics' baseball owner, won in Florida, but former pro basketball player Jack Marin, a Republican, lost to Democrat Tim Valentine in North Carolina.

Former astronaut Jack Swigert, a Republican, won in the Denver suburb. Rep. Charles Whitley, D-N.C., won re-election over Eugene "Red" McDaniel, a Vietnam prisoner-of-war hero for six years.

In other matchups of incumbents due to redistricting, Republican Ben Gilman defeated Democrat Peter Pappas in New York state, and Democrat Tom Daschle defeated Clint Roberts in South Dakota's at-large-district.

Unaffiliated voters decide the Election Day winners

Assembly District race came down to a battle between two very popular people, incumbent Republican Rep. Eric L. "Big" Swenson and former Democratic Mayor John W. Thompson.

"She won on love," said contractor Joseph L. Swenson Jr., the candidate's son. "Everybody loves her."

"I'm very disappointed for Jack," said Democratic State Central Committee member John Sullivan.

"We really tried to give him a push in the last couple of days. I thought he was going to win. John, I thought, ran the best campaign of all."

Thompson's campaign featured public discussion sessions at area schools. But the turnout at those sessions was poor. Mrs. Swenson declined to participate.

Despite that, Thompson only lost one of the five voting districts in the 10th Assembly District. But he lost it big. Mrs. Swenson took the traditionally Republican 4th Voting District 1,020 to 690.

The key to the 4th Senatorial District race was Glastonbury. Democratic Mayor Stephen T. Penny won Manchester by 997 votes over Republican incumbent Carl Azzosero. But Penny lost Glastonbury by nearly 1,400 votes.

"I lost because they don't vote for Democrats in Glastonbury," said Penny, who said he was frustrated that hard work in Glastonbury apparently did not good.

The little goal didn't come off. The GOP loss in the House was more than double the average midterm loss suffered by new presidents since World War II.

Democrats re-established control of governorships in the economically troubled Midwest and Texas. GOP Chairman Curtis M. Smith said, "When the registrars are against you the way it is in Manchester, the only way to win is to run an extremely aggressive campaign."

"I would urge the candidates to run a more aggressive campaign," he said, hinting that the next election for town offices may see more aggressive candidates - possibly himself and Mrs. Mercier.

Smith said he would have to study the numbers and trends in the region and nationwide before commenting further.

Mrs. Mercier, however, said some of the support for Democrats over Republicans may be due to people's unhappiness with Reagan and his administration's policies.

"Maybe people are disappointed at the top and this is their way of saying it," she said. She also speculated that Republican candidates may have brought out the issues too late for them to have an effect on the overall results.

The race for judges of the probate court, most noticeably, heated up in the last week with Diana receiving an endorsement from the United Auto Workers and Democratic incumbent William El Fitzgerald responding with a press conference of supporters.

Diana refused to speculate about the reasons for his failure. "I'm not a political analyst," Diana said. Diana, however, paid in excess of $4,000 to a professional political consultant to assign his campaign.

Reagan monitored the returns at the White House, and according to chief of staff James Baker was in an "upbeat mood."

"I guess the bottom line is there is no question that the president will be able to lead this country effectively over the next two years," Smith said.

In Illinois, former Sen. Adlai Stevenson made an unexpectedly strong showing against Republican incumbent James Thompson that kept the race a cliffhanger.

Probate Judge William El Fitzgerald claimed his victory was helped in part by a backlash against Republican charges that his civic activities could lead to conflicts of interest.

Over all, the Democrats fared better in Manchester. But their two losses - Thompson and Penny - were hard for them to swallow.

Over all, the Democrats fared better in Manchester. But their two losses - Thompson and Penny - were hard for them to swallow.

"I don't know why," said Town Chairman Theodore R. Cummings Sr., when asked to explain the results.

The Republicans blamed their losses - which they found surprising - on Reaganomics, the gubernatorial candidate's strength and other assorted factors.

The O'Neill landslide obviously has a lot to do with it - as did Reagan two years ago, Peter DiRosa, Republican leader on the Board of Directors, said.

"It's pretty tough to beat numbers," GOP Chairman Curtis M. Smith said. "When the registrars are against you the way it is in Manchester, the only way to win is to run an extremely aggressive campaign."

The race for judges of the probate court, most noticeably, heated up in the last week with Diana receiving an endorsement from the United Auto Workers and Democratic incumbent William El Fitzgerald responding with a press conference of supporters.

Diana refused to speculate about the reasons for his failure. "I'm not a political analyst," Diana said. Diana, however, paid in excess of $4,000 to a professional political consultant to assign his campaign.

Reagan monitored the returns at the White House, and according to chief of staff James Baker was in an "upbeat mood."

"I guess the bottom line is there is no question that the president will be able to lead this country effectively over the next two years," Smith said.

In Illinois, former Sen. Adlai Stevenson made an unexpectedly strong showing against Republican incumbent James Thompson that kept the race a cliffhanger.

Probate Judge William El Fitzgerald claimed his victory was helped in part by a backlash against Republican charges that his civic activities could lead to conflicts of interest.

Over all, the Democrats fared better in Manchester. But their two losses - Thompson and Penny - were hard for them to swallow.

"I don't know why," said Town Chairman Theodore R. Cummings Sr., when asked to explain the results.

The Republicans blamed their losses - which they found surprising - on Reaganomics, the gubernatorial candidate's strength and other assorted factors.

The O'Neill landslide obviously has a lot to do with it - as did Reagan two years ago, Peter DiRosa, Republican leader on the Board of Directors, said.

"It's pretty tough to beat numbers," GOP Chairman Curtis M. Smith said. "When the registrars are against you the way it is in Manchester, the only way to win is to run an extremely aggressive campaign."

"I would urge the candidates to run a more aggressive campaign," he said, hinting that the next election for town offices may see more aggressive candidates - possibly himself and Mrs. Mercier.

Smith said he would have to study the numbers and trends in the region and nationwide before commenting further.

Americans select more Democrats

Mrs. Mercier, however, said some of the support for Democrats over Republicans may be due to people's unhappiness with Reagan and his administration's policies.

"Maybe people are disappointed at the top and this is their way of saying it," she said. She also speculated that Republican candidates may have brought out the issues too late for them to have an effect on the overall results.

MINNESOTA GOALIE DON BEAUPRE FILLS GAP AT NET as top scoring striker by Hartford's Greg Adams

Whalers fail short of tie

By Earl Yost Sports Editor

If Mike Veloso is talking to himself today he has good reason. He wasn't a candidate for any political office last night, but he deserves recognition for his efforts in goal for the Hartford Whalers.

The little goal didn't come off. The GOP loss in the House was more than double the average midterm loss suffered by new presidents since World War II.

Democrats re-established control of governorships in the economically troubled Midwest and Texas.

"We played a pretty good hockey team tonight," Coach Larry Kluk of the Whalers observed after catching his breath.

"They are a real good skating team." "We could have folded when we were behind 6-2," Kluk said, "but we didn't. The kids wanted to win so bad that they perhaps tried too hard over the first two periods. With just one goal left, we were in a bind."

A little luck we could have tied the game in the final minute. No one can say that we weren't trying. We gave it our best shot. We won that last period, 4-1, but it wasn't enough.

With Veloso pulled for the final minute, and seconds ticking away, Beaupre came up with a great save on a Brian Stoughton goal try to preserve the tie.

"If the Royals aren't willing to make that kind of commitment now, if they won't honor my request, then I think it would be better for both sides if they traded me," he said.

"I don't think my team has given more to his team than Steve Garvey has given to the Dodgers," he says. "Basically, Brett is looking for the same thing from the Royals as Garvey is from the Dodgers. More appreciation. Yet, if you talk with the Royals or the Dodgers they'll tell you how much they appreciate their two great stars, and what's more, they mean it."

Looking ahead to the future, Brett doesn't want anything to happen to him sometime in the future which is happening to Garvey in the contract struggle he's now involved in with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Player strike in 44th day

By Tony Favita UPI Sports Writer

Although his New York Islanders "fell" to an 11-3 record, coach Al Arbour had trouble hiding his disgust.

"This has been coming," he said Tuesday night, after the last-place Pittsburgh Penguins had topped the three-time Stanley Cup champions 3-1. "We've been playing lazy, we've been playing against the grain."

"Some games you can get away with it, but tonight we didn't." Before stalling away, Arbour nodded in the direction of the Islanders' dressing room and added, "Everybody could see it coming but them in there."

The loss was the first in the regular season for the Islanders at the Nassau Coliseum since last Dec. 29, spanning 30 games, but the Penguins have a history of giving the Isles trouble. Last April, New York trailed by two goals in the fifth and deciding game of the opening-round playoff series.

"No question about it, we needed a win back," said Penguins Coach Eddie Johnston, whose team broke a three-game losing streak, "and there's no better place to get it. This was a very, very important win for us, for our confidence, for everybody."

The Penguins came out aggressively and took a 1-0 lead on a power play late in the first period.

Paul Gardner lifted a shot from behind the net into the second period, and the Penguins tied the game at 1-1.

Pat Boudreau tipped a shot that was blocked but Pat Boudreau poked in the puck during a scramble for the 14th goal and a 3-0 Pittsburgh lead.

Payne tallied twice for the Stars with single tallies coming from Brian Bellows, the highly touted No. 1 rookie pick, high-scoring Dino Ciccarelli, the smooth skating Bobby Smith and MacAdam.

Six Whalers got into the scoring column. Mark Johnson, Don Silimian, Ron Francis, Chris Kotopoulos, Stoughton and Bob Sullivan.

A three-goal Star scoring spree in the second period in less than two minutes broke open a close 1-1 game and vanquished the invaders into a 4-1 margin.

Cooking for a big crowd doesn't faze Julie Patulak

By Barbara Richmond, Herald Reporter

People often ask Julie Patulak of 32 Benton St. how she knows the right amount to cook for 100 people. She in turn asks them how they know how much to cook for eight people. "I just know," she said.

JULIE PATULAK SHARES TEA AND CHEESE SQUARES with friend Vida Turek (right), of Manchester

When she makes the cheese squares for the seniors, she usually multiplies the recipe by four. Mrs. Patulak said it's a shame some elderly don't know about the senior center lunches. Lunches are served at noon five days a week. The charge is $1, except on Thursdays when a larger meal is served.

Her recipe for crepes is a special favorite of her children. She received it from Nancy and Frank Latucca, former Manchester residents, now living in Massachusetts. Latucca was an associate professor in the hotel and restaurant management program at Manchester Community College.

Annual fair Saturday

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Senior Center. It appears in the Manchester Herald on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

By Joe Diminico Activities Specialist

Greetings. Don't forget that our annual fair this Saturday will run from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. This is one of our largest fund raisers with proceeds going to center activities.

Don't forget to bring your appetite also for we will have coffee and pastries as well as grinders.

LAST THURSDAY we had quite a turnout for the distribution of energy kits. As a matter of fact we gave all the kits out.

Coming up on Thursday we will have our Senior Citizens Band for entertainment. If you have never had the pleasure to listen to them, I suggest you attend.

Don't forget the fish shoo scheduled for Nov. 18 from 9 to 11 a.m. here at the center. This year they are asking for a $3 donation to help defray the cost of the vaccine.

Coming up on Nov. 28 from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. we will have additions for our 10th annual variety show entitled "Let's Do It Again."

Don't forget that the center will be closed on Monday at Nov. 11 due to Veterans Day.

Supermarket Shopper

Reader blasts thoughtless 'cart creepers'

By Martin Sloane

DEAR MARTIN: I have a name for the thoughtless shoppers who carelessly leave their shopping carts in the supermarket parking lot. I call them "cart creepers!"

The problems they create start when I pull into the parking area because the spaces closest to the store often seem to have carts smacked in the middle of each space.

Having finished my shopping I once again have to face the possibility of empty carts left alongside my car or even right behind it.

Lecture set

"Ties Between American Jewry and Israel" is the title of a lecture to be given Sunday at 7:30 p.m. at the Quality Inn, Route 83, Talcottville.

He is executive vice chairman of the United Israel Appeal. His lecture is the second in the Suburban Institute of Adult Jewish Studies 1982-83 program.

Kessler has devoted his entire adult life to community and social work and has first-hand knowledge of the subject matter of the lecture he will deliver.

Smart shopper award

The Smart Shopper Award goes to Karen Brown of Gainesville, Fla., who received a $1 discount coupon on any pantyhose purchase.

I bought five chunky candy bars in the supermarket discount cart for 40 cents each. Here's how I used the labels to send for three different offers.

The first $1 refund asked for was a $1 refund form and a 20-cent coupon. I think I got my money's worth.

Ex-B'way Annie licks leukemia

Leukemia—the word itself is frightening—can be beaten, and Shelby Bruce, 17-year-old actress and singer, wants to tell the world that she's whipped the dread disease. Bruce, of East Rutherford, N.J., who starred on Broadway in "Annie," is bouncing back after a year of chemotherapy. But, at the drop of a hat, she'll tell anybody that there can be a "Tomorrow" if the disease is caught in time. She encourages medical exams for children, whose health is rarely checked unless illness strikes.

She lost her full shock of red hair because of chemotherapy treatments, but her entire physical appearance is coming back naturally. She wore a wig when she sang for Nancy Reagan in Washington, D.C. and won a special get-well wish from the First Lady.

"I'm writing a book about my career and how the illness affected my life," said the prettiest. It's called "Tomorrow is Today," and it should be out next year. "I'm not too young to write my story. After all, I've been through a lot."

That's true. And even though she has been found in all kinds of parts on stage and on TV, she found a special love for medicine while she was hospitalized. She's not ready for medical school, but she does plan to study pharmacy.

So someday, when she puts away her music, Shelby Bruce may become your neighborhood drug-gist.

Farrah Fawcett: What's in a hairstyle

Whose name is almost synonymous with long golden locks? Farrah Fawcett's, of course. But Farrah, whose long blond hair helped make her a TV and movie star, has shown her locks and taken on a new look.

It was quite a surprise, since she has signed a lucrative contract to promote a hair shampoo and conditioner, and many Farrah fans think she made a mistake. Not boyfriend Ryan O'Neal though. He likes her close-cropped.

But remember, the boyish cut is just the latest in a long line of hair styles. Take your pick. They're all Farrah. She's come a long way.

Vesco's been spotted in U.S., could be anywhere

Have you seen Robert Vesco, the man without a country? He was seen in Miami and he might be in Chicago, Cleveland, Dallas or Milwaukee. No one knows for sure.

The odds are that he is in the Caribbean, still dodging the FBI aboard his 137-foot yacht, the Patricia, reportedly named for former First Lady Pat Nixon.

Actually, Robert Vesco wants to be, legally, a man without a country, according to some investigators who have been hunting him. He wants the U.S. Justice Department to strip him of his citizenship, but Justice has no intention of giving him his way. It would permit him to establish citizenship in another country and forever escape U.S. prosecution.

Vesco, who absconded with more than $224 million from Investors Overseas Service, has made a wide variety of investments in Antigua, Costa Rica, the Bahamas and probably elsewhere in the Caribbean.

Deborah Muirhead

Stairwell exhibit opens on Friday

The Stairwell Gallery of Manchester Community College, 146 Hartford Road, will open an exhibition of drawings by Michael Michalczyk and paintings by Deborah Muirhead on Friday.

The event will begin with a chamber music concert at 8 p.m. featuring the Spring Trio. They will perform two baroque works by Quantz and Telemann as well as ragtime and jazz selections.

Following the concert, a reception is scheduled in the gallery. The public is invited to attend, and there is no admission charge.

Michael Michalczyk is a freelance illustrator and designer. His illustrations have appeared on the editorial pages of the Hartford Courant.

Deborah Muirhead is an assistant professor of fine art at the University of Connecticut.

The exhibition will continue until Nov. 28. Gallery hours are 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. weekdays and 9 a.m. to noon Saturdays.

Free clinic slated

East of the River Diabetes Club will conduct a free diabetes detection clinic, Saturday at Manchester Memorial Hospital.

Those interested must call 649-9019 or 289-4065, by Friday, for an appointment.

Thoughts

The driver of the cart began loading the few household goods of the Rev. Jon Fawcett. The Rev. Fawcett had preached his farewell sermon at the Baptist Church in Wainage, England. He was 92 years old and had accepted a call to a London parish. The last articles had been loaded in the cart. The minister began his round of goodbyes. There were the young he had married, the children he had held on his knee, the old whose sorrows he had shared. Few of them could read or write, but their devotion was too much for him. He told the driver to untie. He would stay a while longer. His stay ended 54 years later. He died there in 1817.

It was the simple people of Wainage whose devotion inspired him to write:

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian Love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above."

Advice

Sexual instincts sometimes ignore taboos

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Crushed," whose 16-year-old daughter became pregnant by her 15-year-old adopted son, made a point that too few people are willing to acknowledge. All human beings are sexual beings—like it or not. We are born with the instinct to function sexually, so why all the denial?

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

How can people in this society be so technically advanced and so socially primitive? Why don't we teach our children the truth about sex?

Sex between siblings is taboo. It usually (but not always) occurs when the older person exploits the younger one out of curiosity or in search of sexual gratification.

When children are sufficiently mature physically to reproduce—and the sperm meets the fertile egg—pregnancy occurs. The egg doesn't know (or care) if the sperm is a relative.

Incest is far more common than most think. I know. It happened in our family. I was a 15-year-old boy (young man, actually) when my 9-year-old precocious sister came into my bed one night while we were home alone.

Our parents were respectable, churchgoing, middle-class people. They never told us anything about sex. All we knew is what we'd picked up from the other kids.

What went on between my sister and me didn't last long, fortunately. But it did happen. The guilt and shame lasted a lifetime, although we never talked about it. I am 72, and my kid sister died last year at 66. Why am I writing this? Because I hope some "respectable" parents who are too shy to tell their kids about sex will see this. Most parents assume that their kids will "naturally" abstain from having sex with a sister or brother because they will be taught not to. And even then, the opportunities for it should be minimized and all temptations removed.

I know this is much too long for your column, so go ahead and cut it to suit yourself, but please get the message across.

ANONYMOUS IN MINNESOTA
DEAR ANONYMOUS: It's long, but I'll not cut a word. It's well worth the space. Thanks for writing.

DEAR ABBY: I'll get right to the point. Our beautiful, intelligent, grown daughter is shacking up with a creep.

If you have any suggestions to make this parental cross more bearable, we'd like to hear them.

SAN DIEGO
DEAR SAN: You can thank your lucky stars she's not married to him. Or consider this: He may be a creep in your eyes, but in hers, he's the cream of the crop.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding "Thin on Top," who's worried about his appeal to the opposite sex, I'm surprised you didn't respond with my father's old advice: If a man is bald in front, he's bald in back, he's a great lover. If he's bald in the front and back, he thinks he's a great lover. J. McG. IN SHENOROCK, N.Y.

Every teenager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long-stamped (37 cents), addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90083.

Back pain may not be related to spine

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am a 25-year-old female, 5 feet 2 and weigh 173 pounds. I would like to know if you could send me some information about a degenerated disk. Is there any treatment for it and if so what kind?

I injured my back about three years ago. The first doctor I saw wanted X-rays but I could not afford them. Later when I went back he could find nothing wrong. My back is not getting any better so I want to a neurosurgeon. He said he thinks I have a degenerated disk.

I had the X-rays last week but they did not show anything. He has me on some medicine but it does not seem to be helping.

Was I right or wrong in going to see a neurosurgeon? I don't know whether he wants to do surgery or not until I go back to see him.

DEAR READER: If you do have a degenerated intervertebral disk, it is fine to see a neurosurgeon. They do disk surgery if it is needed. You could also have seen an orthopedic specialist. A good place to start is with your family doctor because some back pain is not related to the spine or back muscles at all. You can have referred pain to the back from the colon or other abdominal organs.

Ordinary X-rays are often of limited value in finding a degenerated disk. Special X-rays such as myelograms that inject dye into the spinal column so the displaced disk can be seen are often used. So is the CAT scan.

It is difficult to advise you without a definite diagnosis of what is causing your back pain. It could be muscle spasm for a number of reasons.

To Do About It, which outlines the conservative treatment for backaches and the lifestyle to follow to prevent them. Others can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1561, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019

Social Security meeting due soon

At a moment when confidence in the long-term staying power of our Social Security system is at its lowest ebb ever, and reckless, even vicious, rumors are being spread about how deeply the system is in the red, would you believe: A large number of employee groups actually are considering opting into the system!

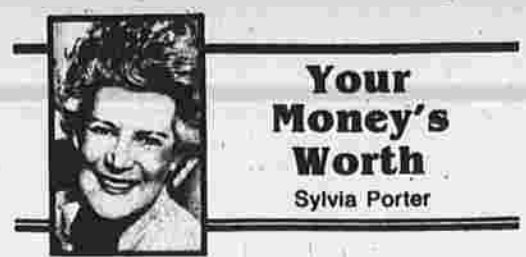

Almost 4 million employees are not now covered by Social Security — but their jobs could be so covered if both employers and employees so choose. For the most part, these are employees of non-profit organizations such as hospitals, covered under Section 501 (c) 3 and exempt under section 501 (a) of the Internal Revenue Code.

Participation by state and local government employees also has not been mandated by law because of a constitutional question whether their governments can be assessed a federal payroll tax for Social Security. Today, about 75 percent of these employees are covered; among those not participating are all state employees in Colorado, Louisiana, Maine, Massachusetts, Nevada and Ohio.

Within the next 10 days, the National Commission on Social Security Reform, chaired by economist and former presidential adviser Alan Greenspan, will hold a critical meeting to decide on its recommendations. The bipartisan commission's written report is due in President Reagan's hands by year-end. It is against this background that groups are considering opting into the system. And it is no secret that among the commission's conclusions will be universal coverage for the work force plus recommendations on how to bring those outside the system into Social Security.

The historical trend always has been SS — with only specially restricted groups permitted to elect out. Question: Is Social Security still a good buy for any of us?

• Some employee groups don't have any pension plans. For them, Social Security will provide a significant portion of their retirement income. This prefers particularly to low- and moderate-income workers.

Your Money's Worth
Sylvia Porter

• In the more than a generation that Social Security has been in existence, Medicare and disability benefits have been added. These benefits, along with cost-of-living adjustments and benefits for divorced wives, have enormously expanded the system's value (as well as its costs).

• Social Security allows complete portability of an individual's accrued credits, "obviously important in a period of high job mobility and high taxation," says A. Haeworth Robertson, former chief actuary of Social Security and now a managing director of William M. Mercer Inc., an employee benefit and compensation consulting firm.

• The needs of employees in groups that previously chose to stay out of SS have changed so that young workers depend to an unprecedented degree on backing from an insurance program such as SS.

• Congress is moving closer and closer to financing a larger part of Social Security out of general revenues (long overdue). When this really happens, more of the cost of the system will be carried by all taxpayers and less borne directly by workers who participate. These are the leading reasons to consider opting in. A decision to remain outside the system, coupled with an appreciation of current benefits and employees' needs, invites reassessment.

In Robertson's words: "It would be unfortunate if sheer inertia prevented a group of employees from re-evaluating past decisions, made under past conditions to solve past problems, and thus prevented the group from more appropriately satisfying employee benefit needs of tomorrow."

It's akin to a breath of fresh air in a stifling room even to discuss opting into Social Security after so prolonged a period of thoughtless condemnation of the system. You and I will not allow this system to collapse; the solutions are so obvious, even easy; the reasons for its troubles so simple to explain. And you and I have the final word. Never forget that.

Stocks rally before vote tallied

NEW YORK (UPI) — Wall Street staged a big rally that pushed the Dow Jones industrial far above the 1,000 level in the belief Reagan administration would not be crippled by the midterm election.

The surprising rallies Monday and Tuesday convinced many analysts that the year-end rally followed average will top its all-time peak of 1,091.70 set Jan. 11, 1973.

The market rallied the previous two sessions on a growing belief Republicans would not lose as badly as feared a few weeks ago and President Reagan would have enough clout to maintain his economic policies.

Several analysts and Standard & Poor's Outlook publication pointed out volume climbed to 104.77 million shares from the 73.53 million traded the day before even though many banks were closed for election day.
