Business advice offered

'Old boys' help women

By Patricia McCormack
United Press International

Help's only a phone call away for a female with a great idea for hitting the road to riches via her own business but not knowing a dime's worth about marketing, raising money or running a company.

The help comes via the American Woman's Economic Business Development Corp. — AWED for short — based in New York City and sired five years ago with seed money from Uncle Sam, businesses and even the Playboy Foundation.

AWED's track record is fabulous when it comes to bolstering the business acumen of women starting a business on a shoestring or wobbling along, unable to take off — to hear Beatrice A. Fitzpatrick, AWED's chief executive officer.

"THE UNUSUAL TWIST to this latest chapter in the American success saga is that AWED, a non-profit agency to help women only, has its own 'old boys' network." This consists of retired and semi-retired male executives, all volunteers, who draw on their experience to advise women who are in business for themselves or itching to get started.

The accountants, merchants, bankers and other types with business stripes are fabulous, too, Mrs. Fitzpatrick said.

Male executives on the AWED advisory board include G.G. Michelson, senior vice president of R.H. Macy & Co.; Lawrence W. Small, executive vice president, North American Banking Group, Citibank, N.A.; and Oscar Dunn, former senior vice president of General Electric and board member of J.S. Penney Co. and AT&T.

MRS. FITZPATRICK spent six months being turned down by foundations, government agencies and companies when she first tried to get AWED off the ground.

Her pitch for funds finally was answered by the U.S. Economic Development Administration at the U.S. Department of Commerce and others, including the Playboy Foundation.

"Now the operation is coming full circle. This year's budget includes $56,000 in gifts from AWED alumni.

WHAT GOT Mrs. Fitzpatrick started was a statistic: Only 4.8 percent of small American businesses are owned by women. Fitzpatrick got her model entrepreneurial assistance program for women moving.

So far, 11,000 women have been advised, in person or by telephone. And some 650 have gone through an 18-month training program, conducted in the evening every other week.

One result of this exposure to super advice and training, Mrs. Fitzpatrick said, is that there have been only three bankruptcies among the AWED alumni. Generally, four out of five businesses fail in the first five years of operation, she said.

SHE WANTS to start AWED satellite programs in Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Dallas, Houston, Washington, D.C., and Philadelphia, cities the Census Bureau says have the largest concentrations of women business owners.

Some in the New York AWED recently asked an AWED spokeswoman how she moved her businesses into seven figures.

Patricia Duncanson, president of her own electrical contracting firm, grosses more than $3 million a year.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick said James Galanos, Mrs. Nancy Reagan's favorite designer, recently asked an AWED businesswoman to design some jewelry for the first lady.

There are hundreds of success stories, including one designer who used to work for another and now designs and manufactures clothes under her own label, Janie Pines.

A DAYLONG AWED workshop Nov. 13 in New York City will tune women into opportunities in the fashion and beauty field: Some 1,800 from across the country have paid the $50 registration fee. There will be 48 different workshops run by a faculty of 220 from the "real world."

Mrs. Fitzpatrick said Women accepted for the 18-month training program — a $3,600 value for $50 — have ranged from widows in their 60s who have inherited a business to housewives with a bright idea and ambition.

"They come from all socio-economic backgrounds and it is exciting," she said.

WHAT DOES A woman need to go for it? "Courage, imagination, talent, skill and perseverance," Mrs. Fitzpatrick said.

If you want to learn to "Mind Your Own Business," write to AWED, 1270 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10020.

Or call the help number, (212) 397-8660. Mrs. Fitzpatrick said you will be told how to arrange for 60 to 90 minutes of counseling, over the phone, by a someone expert at tackling your particular problem.

The fee is $25. Caller pays phone charges.

UConn hopes to fill gap

STORRS (UPI) — The University of Connecticut hopes to fill a gap in southern New England with a doctorate program in business approved Friday by the school's Board of Trustees.

The trustees gave initial approval to programs in accounting, business administration, finance, organizational behavior and marketing leading to a Ph.D. in business administration.

In approving the plan, the trustees said the program was needed to offset a "critical" shortage of faculty for academic business programs in the region, caused by the lack of a doctoral program in Southern New England.

The trustees told the state Board of Higher Education, which must approve the plan, every college in the region with business programs have been unable to recruit enough qualified teachers.

In Connecticut, the anticipated demand by colleges for business professors in the next three to five years was expected to range from 75 to 101 positions, not counting the needs of UConn, the trustees said.

The doctoral program would be based on UConn's masters of business administration program, supplemented by required undergraduate work in mathematics, statistics and computer science.

The students would take about 36-credit hours of class work, then write a dissertation of original research.

Flaring above landmarks of historic downtown Boston are the towers of the $460 million Copple Plaza, the costliest private development in the city's history and one of the largest in America today. It is being built over the Massachusetts Turnpike and an intricate network of rail and subway tracks. The 9.5-acre complex will include two hotels, 100 luxury shops and boutiques, a four-building office structure and 100 apartments.

Plan uses home equity for credit line

HARTFORD (UPI) — McNeill Lynch & Co. intends to introduce in Connecticut a new consumer financial service that enables homeowners to create lines of credit on the equity in their homes.

The plan allows qualified individuals to create credit lines equal to up to 70 percent of the equity in their homes, drawing on the line for a wide variety of purposes. The interest rate is prime plus 2 percentage points.

If the prime rate is 12 percent, for example, interest on the amount of the credit line the borrower has drawn down is 14 percent. Interest on the loan floats daily with the prime rate. Interest is charged not on the full amount of the credit line but on the amount the homeowner has drawn down.

Equity is defined as the difference between the appraised market value of a property and the total unpaid loan against it.

The loans are for 10 years. The borrower pays interest on the loan monthly, on the amount he has drawn down. He pays an annual $35 "maintenance" fee for the credit line, and a one-time fee of two points as an origination fee, which covers the cost of credit checks, asset evaluation and other costs related to setting up the line of credit.

The service, called the Equity Access credit account, was introduced in California last January and is now in place in Arizona.

Stocks plunge at close

NEW YORK (UPI) — Quality stocks plunged Friday in fairly active trading as professional investors sold heavily at the conclusion of the week's volatile weeks in Wall Street history.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which climbed 10.21 points Thursday, skidded 4.81 to 1,038.92. It was the fifth consecutive session in which the Dow had a double-digit loss or gain.

The closely watched average, which challenged its all-time high of 1,065.49 on Tuesday, surrendered 11.86 points for the week.

The New York Stock Exchange index shed 1.96 to 80.70 and the price of an average share decreased 44 cents. Declines topped advances by an 8-to-7 margin.

Big Board volume rose to 95,000,000 shares from the 78,400,000 shares traded during the Veterans Day holiday Thursday.

Oil stocks, which weigh heavily in the Dow average, were hard hit by institutional selling after President Reagan said he was considering an increase in the gasoline tax to generate funds for jobs to repair highways and bridges.

"Professional investors were selling quality stocks, particularly oil, because they didn't like the looks of the market at this point," Trade Latimer of Evans & Co. said.

"At the same time, speculators were buying secondary stocks."

Lech Walesa back at work

GDANSK, Poland (UPI) — Former Solidarity chief Lech Walesa, welcomed home by jubilant supporters and tearful family members after 11 months of martial law internment, left his apartment today to meet with friends and former union advisers.

Family sources said Walesa dodged reporters by ducking into other buildings in the big high-rise suburb where he lives, leaving home to visit his former chauffeur, Matek Wachowski, ailing in a Gdansk hospital.

"He cannot answer any questions now because he is not at home," said Walesa's wife, Danuta, reached in a telephone call from Warsaw.

"He went to work."

Walesa returned to his six-room apartment to meet with reporters, flanked by former Solidarity advisers Andrzej Wielowiejski and Wladyslaw Sila Nowicki, as well as his family priest, Rev. Henryk Jankowski.

Mrs. Walesa said her husband told her he had been held in Warsaw for more than a day after his release while he was lectured by Polish officials on martial law.

The former union chief had dropped from sight for more than 24 hours after officials announced he left the government lodge in remote Arlamowo on the southeast border.

Walesa, who arrived home Sunday, did not try to explain the absence. But he said the final order for his release was not signed until Sunday night.

Polish authorities, in an official PAP news agency report on Walesa's return, stressed that he was a private person now and suggested they would not allow him to take up a political role.

But Walesa, in a speech Sunday from his apartment window to a crowd of thousands of Poles chanting his name, insisted, "We shall win."

"We will need strength," Walesa said, his fingers raised in a V-for-victory sign. "We won't be down on our knees and we will have to operate with courage and thoughtfulness."

But he never mentioned Solidarity, the trade union he led until it was banned by parliament Oct. 8, despite shouts from the crowd of "there is no freedom without Solidarity."

Walesa looked tired and heavier than when he was last seen in public, but sported the same walrus moustache, twinkling eyes and bursting energy. "I cried when he came in, but the children didn't," Mrs. Walesa said Sunday.

She said the Walesas' young son Jerk, however, wept openly later as his father relaxed in the family living room, adorned with a big portrait of the pope.

"It has been an enormous experience, there has been tremendous joy," Mrs. Walesa said. "Now I only wish to be with him alone."

A crowd of 1,500 people, who kept Walesa's return a secret, gathered outside his apartment.

Brezhnev lauded as 'true son of the party'

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union buried President Leonid Brezhnev in Red Square today with cannon salutes, blaring whistles and eulogies praising him for making his communist nation one of the world's mightiest military powers.

New Communist Party chief Yuri Andropov praised Brezhnev as a "true son of the party" and warned of the Soviet Union's determination to expand its armed forces to counter a military buildup by the West.

But after the rites the former KGB chief met with Vice President George Bush, a former head of the CIA, for talks described as "frank, cordial and substantive."

"The challenges, while enormous, are far from insurmountable," Bush said in a statement afterward. On his arrival in Moscow, Bush stressed U.S. willingness to slow the arms race in pursuit of peace.

Bush and dignitaries from nearly 50 nations watched as Brezhnev's casket was mounted on a gun carriage and taken across the vast expanse of Red Square, then lowered into the ground next to the Lenin Mausoleum.

For five minutes, work stopped around the country. Bells pealed and factory whistles blared. They were followed by a moment of silence for the Soviet leader who died of heart failure Wednesday at the age of 75.

Cannon fire marked the moment of Brezhnev's burial at 4:44 a.m. EST in the tiny cemetery on Red Square, reserved for the Soviet Union's most revered leaders.

Cars stopped on Moscow streets and pedestrians faced the Kremlin for two minutes of silence to mark the passing of the man who ruled them for 18 years.

In a eulogy delivered over Brezhnev's open casket, Andropov warned Western leaders the Soviet Union "will multiply our forces in our struggle for security."

"In a complicated international situation, where imperialism is pushing the world to the path of confrontation, our party and our government will do their best to struggle to preserve the interests of our people to rebuff any of those who want war, and to strengthen our defense might," Andropov said.

"We are always ready for equal, honest, mutually beneficial cooperation with any country."

His words were echoed in a separate eulogy by Defense Minister Dmitry Ustinov, who also stressed Brezhnev's support of the armed forces.

Military officers and members of the Politburo then took Brezhnev's coffin to the grave site, a pine-shaded nook directly behind Lenin's tomb where nine other communist leaders including Josef Stalin are buried.

Brezhnev's widow, Viktoria, 74, his daughter, Galina, and his son, Yuri, stroked his head as he lay in the red-lined coffin.

They kissed his cheek and his forehead and then threw handfuls of earth into the grave after the coffin was lowered into the ground.

Foreign delegates watched the burial ceremony from gray stone benches on either side of the marble tomb.

Visible among them were Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, Cuban leader Fidel Castro, who wore a fur hat in the chilly Moscow air, and Palestinian guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat.

After the rites, Bush and Secretary of State George Shultz met Andropov for just a minute at a 35-minute reception in the Kremlin's George Hall. Brezhnev also devoted several minutes to Foreign Minister Huang Hua of China, a nation with which the Soviets are seeking improved relations.

Spacesuit stops walk

By Al Rosaler Jr.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The shuttle Columbia's first spacewalk was canceled today because of trouble with the $2 million spacesuits two astronauts were to wear, but an outing was not immediately ruled out for Tuesday.

Shuttle program manager Glynn Lunney said the option to do a spacewalk Tuesday was kept open for a few hours in case "anybody has any bright ideas" to fix the problems.

If a decision was made to attempt a spacewalk by astronauts Joseph Allen and William Lenoir Tuesday, the mission would be extended one day with a landing in California Wednesday.

"My own opinion is that it is not too likely," Lunney said in Houston, referring to a new spacewalk attempt and lengthening the mission.

Cancellation of the spacewalk today was the first major disappointment in the five-day mission that achieved its primary goal Thursday — Friday by launching two communications satellites to prove the shuttle can serve as a space freighter.

The next scheduled spacewalk is for the 11th shuttle flight in January 1984. Lunney said spacewalks could be tried on an earlier mission next year.

Everything started out smoothly today until Allen and Lenoir put on their brand new spacesuits and started pressurizing them in the ship's sealed airlock.

First a ventilation fan failed in the spacesuit worn by Allen and then a pressure regulator went on the blink in the spacesuit worn by Lenoir. Pilots Vance Brand and Robert Overmyer stood by, awaiting word from mission control in Houston on what to do.

"I'm afraid I've got some bad news for you," said Roy Bridges in mission control. "We're going to have to terminate the EVA prep."

A joint meeting of the Board of Directors real estate subcommittee, which is overseeing the conversion plans, and the Bennet Nonprofit Corp. has been scheduled for Nov. 23 at 8 p.m. in the Lincoln Center gold room for an update from CDC on financing arrangements.

The project will be financed through revenue bonds to be issued by the town. The town will not incur any liability for the bonds, however, because the bonds are secured by Financing for the conversion of the Bennet Junior High School main building to elderly housing may be finalized by the end of the week, General Manager Robert B. Weiss said today.

Weiss said that Community Development Corp., the town's consultants for the Bennet project, is "on the verge" of completing the arrangements for the tax-exempt revenue bonds which will be used to pay for the project.

Details of the financing are "being firm" up this week, Weiss said. A press conference is tentatively scheduled for Friday to announce the details of the financing, he said.

Bush and Shultz meet Andropov at reception

By Steven R. Reed
United Press International

MOSCOW — Vice President George Bush and Secretary of State George Shultz met for the first time today with new Communist Party leader Yuri Andropov at a reception following the burial of Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

The brief encounter at the Kremlin's ornate St. Georges Hall came less than a day after Bush's arrival in Moscow, pledging the Reagan administration's willingness to slow the arms race in pursuit of peace.

Andropov stopped to speak with Bush and Shultz for one minute during the reception before passing on to other foreign dignitaries who converged on Moscow from nearly 50 countries to attend Brezhnev's funeral.

By contrast, Andropov devoted nearly three minutes to an exchange with Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua, reflecting the Kremlin's increased interest in better ties with Peking.

On their way out of the reception, Bush and Shultz took a wrong turn and had to be pointed in the right direction.

They then walked past a portrait of Brezhnev without stopping, unlike other guests who paused in front of the photograph in a gesture of respect for the deceased.

The encounter at the Kremlin's St. Georges Hall was the only scheduled meeting between the Americans and Brezhnev's successor as the party's general secretary.

Bush interrupted a tour of Africa and Shultz flew in from Washington for Brezhnev's burial in a tiny cemetery behind the Lenin Mausoleum on Red Square.

Shultz said no formal meeting had been arranged between the U.S. officials and Andropov, 68, who was chosen to succeed Brezhnev as leader of the Soviet Communist Party.

They both took the opportunity to confer with other world leaders. Bush met today with Pakistan President Zia ul-Haq and Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki.

Exiled Soviet dissident Vladimir Bukovsky said there would be significant change in Soviet policy — but it would be gradual and the result of pressure from within the country — the growing human rights movement.

"Andropov I never met, but we dissidents all felt he had a hand on our throats," said Bukovsky, who was imprisoned for 10 years in Russia before his exile in 1976.

The three men made their remarks Sunday on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley" and CBS-TV's "Face the Nation." Andropov may have been "instrumental in control" of the Soviet Union for some time and predicted there would be "little change" in policy.

Hyland, Toon and Bukovsky had different assessments of Andropov, the man.

"He's much more intelligent (than Brezhnev). He's shrewd, ruthless," Bukovsky said.

"Brezhnev never was a complete ruler. He was not very intelligent. He was a compromise leader who went along the lines accepted by the Politburo — especially the last four years, he was a real zombie."

But Bukovsky said he felt that during his 15 years as KGB chief, Andropov failed to control the human rights movement and predicted it would fall again.

As reports from Moscow of Andropov's savvy as a man of the world, Toon said, "I frankly don't know whether the guy speaks English. When I met him (at Kremlin reception) we spoke Russian. Whether he's fluent in English, I don't know."

"I understand he likes modern art, is more sophisticated than Brezhnev. But that's really confetti," he said. "I think we ought to look at his record."

"He was in Budapest when the (Hungarian) rebellion was crushed. He crushed the dissident movement in the Soviet Union," Toon said.

Hyland said he agreed Andropov was tough, but the man whose KGB days were spent pursuing foreign intelligence reports was "also pragmatic."

"He is better informed and will be more willing to depart from the established line than Brezhnev in the last few years."

The new Communist party boss, Yuri Andropov, 68, stood in the first line up in strict order of rank at the bier, paying their respects.

Formerly Brezhnev's closest aide, Chernenko, 71, was believed to be a leading candidate to succeed him as president of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, one of two top jobs held by Brezhnev before he died Wednesday.

Defense Minister Dmitri Ustinov, 74, was next in line. Opposite the top four officials were Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, 73, Moscow party chief Viktor Grishin, 66, and agriculture boss Mikhail Gorbatchev, 61.

Three regional leaders — Dinn Muhammad Kunayev, 70, of Kazakhstan, Grigory Romanov, 69, of Leningrad and Vladimir Shcharbinsky, 64, of Ukraine — were not present at Sunday's viewing.

In the eighth position was Boris Ponomarev, 77, suggesting that he may soon be promoted from candidate status to become a full voting member of the Communist Party's executive board.

Will Andropov alter policy toward West?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Experts agree Soviet Communist Party chief Yuri Andropov is shrewder, tougher and more informed than his predecessor, Leonid Brezhnev, but whether he will change Soviet policy toward the West is open to question.

William Hyland, national security adviser to presidents Nixon, Ford and Carter, said Sunday he foresees "substantial" and quick change in Soviet policy under the new party general secretary, particularly in handling the nation's "stagnated" economy.

"Andropov is 68," said Hyland, author of "The Fall of Nikita Khrushchev." "He is not going to have 18 years" to rule as did Brezhnev.

Malcolm Toon, former U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union, disagreed and predicted Andropov would stray little from the policy path laid out under Brezhnev.

"I don't think we'll see any change," said the Soviet ambassador under President Jimmy Carter. "He (Andropov) too closely identified with all the Politburo members under Brezhnev."

Exiled Soviet dissident Vladimir Bukovsky said there would be significant change in Soviet policy — but it would be gradual and the result of pressure from within the country — the growing human rights movement.

Moscow says 'nyet' to press

MOSCOW (UPI) — Several hundred journalists from other countries applied for permission to cover Brezhnev's funeral, but the Soviet Foreign Ministry decided to bar all except Moscow-based correspondents.

"No explanations," a senior official of the Foreign Ministry's press department told UPI.

The official verdict rejecting all applications from outside the Soviet Union was given not to individual news organizations—but to the government press attaches of countries with embassies in Moscow.

About 126 non-Communist foreign correspondents are based in the Soviet capital.

Foreign Ministry officials told diplomats they would provide "maximum cooperation" for resident correspondents covering the funeral today.

Special visas were necessary to gain admittance to Red Square, as they always are for the annual Nov. 7 and Nov. 7 parades past Lenin's Tomb. But the number of visas available was more limited than

The steady, relentless buildup of Soviet military capacity has in effect forced the United States, after quite a period of not pushing its defense establishment forward powerfully, to look to our defenses and our strengths," Shultz said.

Shultz specifically cited the Soviet influence in Poland, human rights problems in the Soviet Union and the Kremlin's military buildup as obstacles to improved East-West ties.

"I can't really imagine why anyone could have grievances against our policies and our foreign policies," Shultz said.

"We have demonstrated all over the world that we have a constructive point of view," he said. "We're part of the solution, not part of the problem, and our message here is the same."

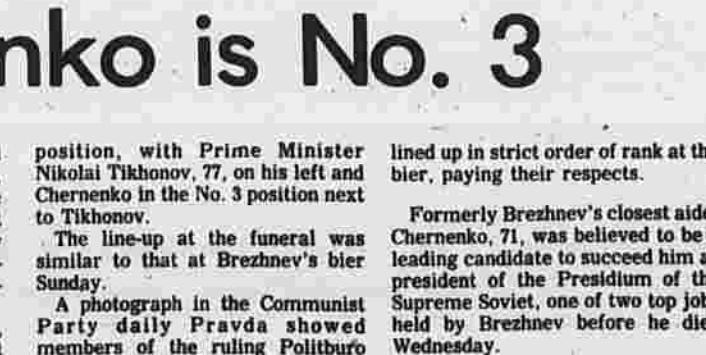

Bush, his wife, Barbara, Shultz, Hartman and his wife, Donna, represented the United States Sunday at ceremonies before Brezhnev's bier, which lay in state since Friday at Moscow's House of Unions building.

The U.S. delegation presented a floral wreath with a banner that read "From the People of the United States" and stood silently for a few seconds at the foot of Brezhnev's casket.

As they were being led away by a Soviet escort, Bush asked if he could speak with Brezhnev's wife, Victoria, 74.

As Bush approached, she stood and smiled and they shook hands.

YURI ANDROPOV SPEAKS DURING BREZHNEV'S FUNERAL Konstantin Chernenko, in No. 3 slot, second from right

MOSCOW (UPI) — Leonid Brezhnev's right-hand man, Konstantin Chernenko, stood in the No. 3 position among the top Soviet leaders at Brezhnev's funeral today.

Chernenko, 71, was believed to be a leading candidate to succeed him as president of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, one of two top jobs held by Brezhnev before he died Wednesday.

Defense Minister Dmitri Ustinov, 74, was next in line. Opposite the top four officials were Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, 73, Moscow party chief Viktor Grishin, 66, and agriculture boss Mikhail Gorbatchev, 61.

Three regional leaders — Dinn Muhammad Kunayev, 70, of Kazakhstan, Grigory Romanov, 69, of Leningrad and Vladimir Shcharbinsky, 64, of Ukraine — were not present at Sunday's viewing.

In the eighth position was Boris Ponomarev, 77, suggesting that he may soon be promoted from candidate status to become a full voting member of the Communist Party's executive board.

The government party was favored to win in 13 mainly rural and poorer, backward states, including Bahia and Pernambuco.

First major snowstorm tapers off; temperatures fall

Israel mourns 75 in Lebanon and Mrs. Begin

JERUSALEM (UPI) — A grief-stricken Prime Minister Menachem Begin arrived home to bury his wife Aliza in a private funeral today with the nation also mourning 75 Israelis killed in the collapse of an army building in Lebanon.

Fifteen Arabs also died in the explosion. A siren blast at noon today local time was to signal the start of a moment's silent tribute in the Jewish state for the dead Israeli.

By contrast, Aliza Begin's funeral three hours later was planned as a private affair, closed to reporters at the family's request.

Begin, on learning during a visit to Los Angeles of the death his wife of 43 years, cut short his U.S. tour five days before he was scheduled to meet with President Reagan at the White House.

Mrs. Begin, who died Sunday at the age of 62, asked to be buried on the Mount of Olives, the site of an ancient Jewish cemetery in the eastern sector of Jerusalem that was captured by Israel in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

She asked to be interred next to the graves of two of her husband's former fighters in the Irgun Z'vai Lemuni underground that fought the British authorities in Palestine before the 1948 creation of the Jewish state.

Dressed in a dark overcoat with a brown cane, Begin looked somber and withdrawn as he landed Sunday in a special Israeli air force jetliner at Ben-Gurion International Airport.

Though he has said his wife's health could affect his political career, Begin's media adviser Uri Porath told reporters he was confident the 69-year-old leader would overcome his personal loss and remain as prime minister.

Israel Radio said Begin's meeting with Reagan will be rescheduled after a 30-day mourning period for his wife. As 51 of the Israelis who died in the Tyre building collapse were buried Sunday, mystery continued to surround the circumstances of the disaster.

Israeli Energy Minister Yitzhak Modai said after a Jerusalem Cabinet meeting that it reports about the incident army investigators had ruled out Palestinian sabotage as cause of the collapse of the building.

But both Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon and Army Chief of Staff Raphael Eitan issued a statement denying Modai's remarks.

In Beirut, Lebanese Prime Minister Cheikh Wazzan, in the toughest criticism yet of Israel by the new government, accused Israel of provoking Christian-Moslem clashes in order to keep its troops in Lebanon.

Lebanese President Amin Gemayel flew to Saudi Arabia at the start of a 24-hour visit expected to end on efforts to remove 30,000 Israeli troops, 25,000 Syrian troops and up to 10,000 Palestinian guerrillas from Lebanon.

"Lebanon is determined...to rid (itself) of Israeli occupation, which has begun to take very dangerous forms," Wazzan said in an interview.

In the Shouf mountains near Beirut, a booby-trapped car exploded in the Druze town of Aramon late Sunday, killing one man and wounding four, security sources said.

The attack raised to nine the death toll from communal clashes in the Israeli-occupied mountains in the past 48 hours.

Democratic vote starts in Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (UPI) — Brazilians lining up early at polling stations, voted today in national and state elections considered the most democratic since the military seized power in a coup nearly 20 years ago.

After weeks of campaigning by candidates of five parties, residents of Rio's Copacabana and Ipanema districts began forming lines before the polls officially opened at 7 a.m. EST.

"I expect that all of us voters are going to choose well, choose responsibly and serious men and women," said President Joao Batista Figueiredo, a general who launched Brazil's "opening" to democracy after taking office in 1979.

An estimated 58 million voters, nearly half of Brazil's 130 million population, were expected to cast ballots in the elections for state governors, federal and state congressmen and small town mayors and councilors.

The election came 18 years after a military coup seized power in 1964, banning parties and driving scores of politicians into exile. Under Figueiredo, political exiles were allowed to return home and form new opposition parties.

The government party was favored to win in 13 mainly rural and poorer, backward states, including Bahia and Pernambuco.

Dirty campaigns to gain finesse

WASHINGTON — The only thing on which there seems general agreement after the recent elections is that they broke all records for negative advertising and campaigning. There have been more odious examples of dirty tricks, to be sure. But the 1982 campaign taken as a whole probably was in a class by itself in the art of running down the opposition.

It used to be that if you came across 10 races, two of them used negative advertising," says Roger Stone, the young consultant for conservative GOP candidates. "Now, negative advertising is a part of virtually every campaign."

So conspicuous has negativity become, however, that many candidates who invoked it lost on Nov. 2, giving rise to speculation that implying that one's opponent is a rotter may have reached a point of diminishing returns. But leading political practitioners say they expect more cautious, less blatant use of negativity in the next election. Last year, Lance Tarrance, the Houston pollster and consultant, says the 1982 experience should lead to more specific and accurate documentation of charges, to avoid their backfiring. "Dirty advertising," says another prominent Republican political strategist, "is going to be cleaner and more clever." It is going to have to be, he says, because credibility is essential in any good attack strategy, and the public at large is increasingly skeptical.

"I assume they will keep at it," he says, "because it's a moneymaking operation. They make a big living out of this thing. They have a game going where they shake a lot of money out of people and have fun spending it. But I think there may be a growing feeling among the public against it."

Some Republican strategists agree that NCPAC has been damaged. "It wasn't the issue earlier the way it is now," one of them says. "It built up enough barnacles on itself." Another NCPAC target this fall, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, says, however, "I don't think we'll have done away with them. They'll find another way."

TERRY DOHAN, NCPAC's boss, says the only change his group may make is in its name, to emphasize that it is a conservative group and to play down the political action committee aspect. He says negative advertising has proved its effectiveness, especially against incumbents. NCPAC spent more than $2.8 million against 14 in-

U.S. shifted support to Phalangists

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency began secretly supporting the Christian militias in Lebanon last year to keep them from falling completely under Israeli influence. The evidence is contained in a starting top-secret memo dated March 6, 1981.

This document correctly forewarned fully 15 months in advance that Israel would invade Lebanon, that the Palestinians would be routed, that the Christian Phalangists would emerge as the dominant Lebanese faction and, therefore, that the United States would "forfeit all influence" in Lebanon unless "military and financial assistance" was funneled to the Phalangists.

Up to that time, it had been U.S. policy to bolster the Lebanese government. But the government was held together by a delicate political and religious balance, which had "disintegrated," the memo declared.

"Since the establishment of a PLO state within a state in the 1970-73 period and the subsequently massive inflow of arms to both Christians and Muslim communities," reported the memo, "the Government of Lebanon has been unable to exercise its authority throughout the country."

The CIA not only saw "no prospect of improvement," but anticipated that the Israelis would lose patience with the Palestinians and come crashing across the Lebanese border to deal with them.

Further Israeli incursions, if not imminent, are nevertheless inevitable," the memo predicted. "The question is not so much whether or when such incursions will occur but the scope and purpose of such incursions, and their potential for igniting a wider and more dangerous confrontation."

Route 52 'natural' addition to interstate map

By Richard Gody
Herald Reporter

The Federal Highway Administration has indicated that designating Route 52 as an interstate highway, now a major step in the progress of 1-84 plans, will be little trouble, according to a state official Friday.

William A. Lazarek, deputy commissioner and director of planning and development at the state Department of Transportation, said the FHWA sees the Connecticut Turnpike, Route 52, as a "natural" addition to the interstate system. He said formal action is expected within six weeks, after the administration determines that Route 52 meets interstate highway specifications. Lazarek said it does. Route 52 would then become I-290.

This action has been important to the state's plans to complete the eastern portion of the I-94 ever since Rhode Island dropped out of the project in the spring. According to federal law, interstates must either connect two cities for hook up to other interstate highways.

The original plan was to have I-84 link Hartford with Providence. Rhode Island dropped out when officials there decided the highway was too much of a threat to the Situate Reservoir and surrounding communities.

After Rhode Island backed out, state officials here scrambled for an alternative way of legally putting the highway through, and came up with the Route 52 plan. Since Route 52 stretches into Massachusetts, Connecticut had to solicit the Bay State's help in applying for the interstate label.

Massachusetts agreed to do so after some politicking by Connecticut U.S. Rep. Samuel Gejdenson. D-2nd. Lazarek said the FHWA has asked for additional information, which will be provided by the state transportation department by the end of the week. He said officials there want documentation that Route 52 is up to interstate standards.

"We don't anticipate any problems at all," he said about the application. He said Secretary of Transportation Drew Lewis in a letter to Connecticut, indicated there should be no problem with the designation once the formalities are taken care of.

Coventry council to discuss problems with Elm Water Co.

COVENTRY — Members of the Town Council will meet in special session tonight to discuss problems with the Elm Water Co., the firm which services 102 families in the Coventry Hills area.

The dilemma over what to do with the firm is the result of a decade of complaints over the quality of water it provides its customers, and of a recent decision by the Department of Public Utility Control. In addition, the firm owes the town about $33,000 in back taxes.

Residents of the development have complained about their water for ten years. It contains abnormal amounts of rust, the result of iron deposits near the well which supplies the system, owned by George M. Koppelman of West Hartford.

Town officials have been faced with a decision over what action to take against the firm because of huge back tax bill it has accumulated. Town Attorney Daniel K. Lamont has begun the process of filing a lien to collect those taxes.

Officials decided during the summer to hold off on taking foreclosure action because they thought the firm might be purchased by Aqua Pump, a Stafford-based company. That deal later fell through after a dispute arose over who would assume responsibility for the firm's outstanding bills.

The DPUC requested in September that the state attorney general's office petition the courts to get a receiver appointed to run the firm. Town Manager Charles F. McCarthy has said the town is now the primary candidate, in the state's eyes, to take over the company.

But both McCarthy and other officials have expressed their opposition to that idea. They have said the town does not have the staff to run a water company. They are also worried that such an action would set a precedent which could send the wrong signals to other owners of small water companies who find themselves in similar predicaments.

McCarthy said Thursday he hopes to meet during the day today with Lamont, a representative from the attorney general's office. John Wittenzeller Sr., owner of Aqua Pump, and members of the Coventry Hills Homeowners Association to try to iron out the problems. The association leadership has accused the town of stalling on the matter. They are in favor of having the town take it over and run the company which is in need of a $50,000 filter system.

Council members will discuss possible solutions to the problem during the meeting. The discussion will take place in regular session so the public may take part, according to Town Council Chairman Joan A. Lewis.

Also at the meeting, the council is expected to formally authorize McCarthy to buy a sander for the town's snow plows. It was revealed by Superintendent of Streets Roger L. Ballard, at a Nov. 1 council meeting, that three of the town's six sanders are in bad shape, and that one is too far gone to be repaired. A new sander will cost $7,500.

Mrs. Lewis said Sunday night the council could appoint a new police chief by next week. Council members will decide how many prospective candidates for the job they will interview before making a final decision.

Two dozen charged in Maine in smuggling 30 tons of pot

PORTLAND, Maine (UPI) — A ball hearing was held today for two dozen people charged with drug smuggling when police seized a fishing boat stuffed with an estimated 30 tons of marijuana in the tiny, mid-coast town of Bremen.

About 50 police officers surrounded a lobster pier in Bremen Saturday night and moved in when people began unloading marijuana from a 90-foot fishing boat, said Peter McCarthy, supervisor of special investigations for the Maine State Police.

Authorities immediately made 21 arrests and three more were arrested in the area Sunday, McCarthy said. Ten were from Maine, four from Michigan, two from Massachusetts and eight from Colombia.

U.S. Attorney for Maine Richard S. Cohen said the arrest of the Colombian nationals marked the first time residents of that country have been arrested in Maine for drug smuggling.

"This is indicative of the increasing smuggling activity we have here along the Maine coast," Cohen said. "The suspects were being held Sunday in Cumberland County jail. A ball hearing was scheduled for Monday in federal court in Portland."

Besides the fishing boat, authorities also seized two small power boats and five trucks. The arrests followed an investigation which has been continuing for

Boy living in elevator shaft bolts shelter for runaways

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — Shaughn Calkin, 15, who lived for nearly two months in a crawlspace in an elevator shaft, has run away from a shelter for runaways, apparently because state officials would not let him return to his mother.

Calkin, described as "very intelligent" and an electronics "whiz kid," left the Douglas House shelter Friday with everything he owned stuffed into two pillowcases. He was still missing today.

Police said they believe Calkin was headed for New York City to join his mother, Judy. The state Department of Children and Youth Services had been looking after Calkin since he was arrested on burglary, larceny and trespassing charges Nov. 3. But the youth was back on the run before DCYS could rule on his mother's request for permanent custody.

Investigators interviewed Judy Calkin last week in New Haven to determine whether she was a fit and competent parent. DCYS officials speculated Calkin was troubled by the delay over custody and decided to join his mother on his own. They said Calkin needed professional help for both mental and emotional problems.

Calkin allegedly used stolen car batteries to provide electricity in his hideaway and pilfered coins from pay telephones for spending money. He rewired the elevator phone to make outside calls and rewired the elevator itself to stop it at a higher level and give more ceiling space to his cramped quarters, police said.

Calkin was reported missing to Douglas House Director Willis Diggs said he was concerned Calkin would run away, but his fears subsided after the youth began to join group sessions at the center.

Boy living in elevator shaft bolts shelter for runaways

"Initially he talked about it (running away)," Diggs said. "But after he got into group sessions and saw other kids had the same problems he settled down."

While at the shelter, Diggs said Calkin tried to fix everything in sight and was allowed to repair a floor and piano. A teenager who knew the youth described him as alternately "sad, calm and very messed up."

"Any program that just plans to do something over, say, a two-year period, and then loses interest or returns the kid to a chaotic family or no family is bound to fail," she said.

Ms. Lewis said many juveniles are locked into a cycle of violence at an early age by physical and psychological damage.

She described the Long Lane School, Connecticut's only facility to treat serious or repeat juvenile offenders, as "the place these kids graduate to when other institutions don't want them."

She said there was a tendency to jail rather than hospitalize troubled male delinquents, especially blacks, when they reach adolescence. "As a result of this practice, corrections facilities in the United States are being asked to function as the mental hospitals of the lower socioeconomic class black population," she said.

Study of juvenile delinquents says many severely abused

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — A psychiatric professor, who found evidence of sexual and physical abuse in the treatment of juvenile delinquents, said mental hospitals for the poor and deprived.

The findings were based on an 18-month study of violent delinquents, their medical histories and referral patterns, at Connecticut's Long Lane School in Middletown between 1977-78.

In a published report Sunday, York University professor Dr. Dorothy Ottow Lewis of New Haven discussed her previously unpublished work. The study has been included in a textbook she has written, "Vulnerabilities to Delinquency."

She said there was a tendency to jail rather than hospitalize troubled male delinquents, especially blacks, when they reach adolescence. "As a result of this practice, corrections facilities in the United States are being asked to function as the mental hospitals of the lower socioeconomic class black population," she said.

Also, Ms. Lewis concluded the present treatment of violent juvenile delinquents was severely

Dump to park and then what?

When the sanitary landfill first came into general use, it was supposed to be the ultimate way to get rid of garbage and refuse.

It cured the messy dump problem by covering over each refuse after compacting it. It avoided the odor and the operating nuisance of incinerators.

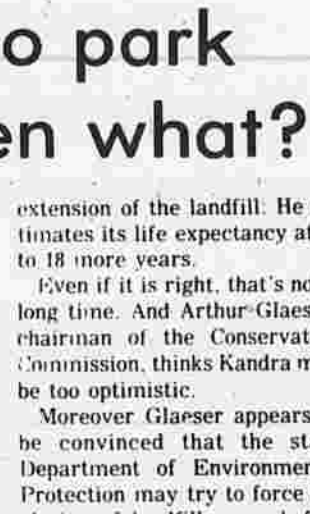

Not only did it avoid pollution, but it made it possible to reclaim otherwise unusable land. Upon a mountain of garbage we will build a beautiful park, went the refrain of the time.

In many places it has not worked out quite that well. Either by good management or by good luck Manchester has escaped the worst problems over the years in which the sanitary landfill off Olcott Street has been in operation. But the town has had some trouble. There have been times when residents of the area could smell no distinction between the landfill and an old-fashioned dump.

It has not always been easy to keep compactors, heavy machines that take a lot of abuse, in good working order. Improvements to the operation have kept a succession of public works directors busy and the current director, George A. Kandra, is now supervising an extension of the landfill. He estimates its life expectancy at 15 to 18 more years.

Even if it is right, that's not a long time. And Arthur Glaeser, chairman of the Conservation Commission, thinks Kandra may be too optimistic. Moreover, Glaeser appears to be convinced that the state Department of Environmental Protection may try to force the closing of landfills even before they are filled.

Party success

To the Editor: On Oct. 30, the Bennet PTSO and the Mahoney Center co-sponsored a Halloween party for Bennet students.

The party was very successful with more than two hundred students in attendance. Many of the costumes were very original and showed great imagination. As representatives of the PTSO we would like to thank all the students for their exemplary behavior.

The Mahoney Center seemed to be an ideal facility for this activity and we would like to express our gratitude to their staff for all their cooperation. The refreshments provided by Bennet parents were greatly appreciated by all the students. Our thanks to all the adults who participated in the night of the party and to Bennet's Student Council members.

Thanks again to the Bennet students for letting us share this fun filled evening.

Raised questions

To the Editor: Your Nov. 8 story about the two joggers being fined $20 each by Manchester Superior Judge Edward Y. O'Connell for running on the wrong side of Wyllys Street raised questions in my mind.

I found it hard to believe these young men were ticketed for moving to the wrong side of the road "to stay clear of a blind curve they were approaching." But I found it even more incredible that Judge O'Connell increased the fine from $28 to $30! Why?

All this happened as the young men witnessed another individual have their $40 speeding ticket reduced to $20 — a rather routine duck session. As I said, elections are over. Members of Congress will feel safe since they have a full two years before they face voters again.

The CIA strategy has been so successful that Lebanon may now wind up as a U.S. protectorate. There has also been a corresponding breakdown in the historic cooperation between the United States and Israel.

KICKING CRIPPLES: When a shortage of space developed at the Agriculture Department's parking lot in downtown Washington last summer, none of the agency's 130 bigshots lost his spot. But 11 handicapped employees did.

One of those who got kicked out of the street was Warren Tilghman, a 44-year-old special-projects officer. He has severe back problems — two discs removed and a third ruptured. In May, his condition was aggravated when he slipped and fell in an Agriculture building, since then he has been able to work only half-days.

Tilghman appealed the ruling that deprived him of the reserved-parking privilege he has had since he joined the department in 1978. In July, a Veterans Administration doctor certified that Tilghman is a "40 percent service-connected disabled veteran," and recommended that he be allowed to keep his parking place.

Jagger headed for altar?

LONDON (UPI) — Rolling Stones singer Mick Jagger admits he has been dashing about town quite a bit but a newspaper reports he is ready to settle down and has proposed to model Jerry Hall.

The 39-year-old Rolling Stone popped the question following a tearful weekend reunion in Paris, the Daily Express said.

The newspaper, however, did not report Ms. Hall's reply.

For more than a week, Jagger's romance with Ms. Hall, 25, had been rumored to be over. Extensive press coverage of her involvement with millionaire businessman and racehorse owner Robert Sangster, 46, seemed to confirm the reports.

But the Express said Jagger told friends, "All these rumors have shocked me. I've been taught a real lesson.

"We've had a few problems — caused by me. She has been trying to pay me back for being jumping Jack Flash," the Express quoted Jagger as saying.

He was referring to his much-publicized dates with a string of teenage beauties, including Venezuelan model Victoria Vicuna.

The Sun also reported Jagger and Ms. Hall were back together in Paris.

"Kiss and make up," the headline said over a picture of the couple embracing at Paris' Charles de Gaulle Airport.

"This was the moment when the couple were reunited after the rockiest period of their five-year much-publicized romance," the Sun said.

Quirks in the news

Utility bill electrifying

KENOSHA, Wis. (UPI) — Dorothy Biss, 80, opened her monthly bill from the Wisconsin Electric Power Co. and it was a real shocker. Her October total was $96.98, she said.

Utility spokesman John Bartel was quick to explain the bill was a mistake.

"We are installing a new billing system," he said. "A clerical worker apparently made a mistake feeding something into the computer. The bill should be $96.98."

"Normally, my bill is between $80 and $110 a month," said Mrs. Biss. "All I live on is my pension check."

The inflated bill caused a laughing matter for Mrs. Biss' granddaughter, Barbara Rowley.

"She was stunned, dumbfounded," Mrs. Rowley said. "That's not good for a woman with a heart condition. How can that happen?"

Profit isn't enough

DALLAS (UPI) — City officials are offering Fausta Valasquez 51 times the amount she paid for her frame house for sentimental reasons.

"What I want is to keep my house and to be able to live here with my kids where they can come and visit me," she said. "This is their home. This is where they were raised."

The city wants to build a symphony on the site.

"It isn't the money that I want," said Mrs. Valasquez, who rejected the city's offer of $255,000 for the house, which she and her husband bought in the downtown area in 1953 for $5,000.

Advice

Man's grudge should die with him

DEAR ABBY: No, no, ten thousand times NO! Your advice to "Seeing Red," who wrote that relative had extracted a deathbed promise that if you showed up at his funeral, he'd throw her out was desperately off the mark. "Seeing" asked for suggestions on how to keep his promise, and you actually helped him!

Abby, except for public figures, church funerals are not private invitations. They are opportunities for individuals to lay aside the divisions that may have separated them in life in order that they can pray for the repose of the soul of the dead. If a reconciliation was impossible while one of the aggrieved parties was living, at least at the funeral the survivor can make some sort of peace.

The church does not bar its doors to people merely because they quarrel. In my opinion, the person who bank and he told me that whatever I leave will automatically go to my nearest of kin. Is this correct?

SACRAMENTO, CALIF. READER

DEAR READER: No, only if you leave no will does your estate go automatically to your nearest of kin. Now, talk to a lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I disagree on something and want you to settle it.

He appreciates his friends and most of our friends are aware of it, so occasionally when we invite guests for dinner, they bring a bottle of wine.

My husband thinks them for it, puts it away, and then he serves a wine of his own choice with our dinner.

Anti-spasmodics relieve spastic colon

DEAR DR. LAMB: I'm at my wits end. For three years I have been having problems with a spastic or irritable colon. I am including a list of my medicines. I've deleted caffeine, popcorn, gassy foods, spices. I'm under no stress except for this ailment. My doctor is ready to throw in the sponge, too.

I have eaten bottles of natural acidophiles, activated charcoal tablets. I eat very selectively and slowly to avoid swallowing air, but I still have gas.

During spastic colon attacks I look nine months pregnant and feel like dying from pain. I never have diarrhea but am rather constipated most of the time.

I've tried a third of a cup of softened bran each morning for six months and bran tablets. I've had good weeks and bad weeks with no difference in my diet. Any help will be appreciated.

DEAR READER: When the lower part of your colon near the rectum goes into spasm the whole colon becomes a closed tube that continues to distend as metabolism work? What about all the extras, like selenium, chromium, potassium and folic acid? What do you recommend on taking vitamins? Are some really helpful to memory?

DEAR READER: You need to individualize, not generalize. If a person has a vitamin deficiency or an inadequate diet for any reason he definitely needs different foods from each of the basic four food groups does not need vitamins or additional minerals.

If there is any question about the adequacy of the diet, a simple multiple vitamin tablet that contains the RDA values of the vitamins is enough. If you need more you need to see a doctor who can individualize what YOU need.

I am a bit less enthusiastic about trace minerals. Many of these in excess can be quite harmful. And unless you have a vitamin deficiency that is

Arbitron expands the race to rate television programs

By Kenneth R. Clark
UPI TV Reporter

NEW YORK (UPI) — 1984 is just around the corner, and while Big Brother is not watching you yet, the A.C. Nielsen Co. is. So is Arbitron, and at the rate Arbitron is expanding its surveillance, nobody is going to get away.

Everyone, of course, knows about the all-powerful Nielsen families. They are the oracles who determine what the rest of us will or will not watch on national television, but how many are aware of that other clan?

Who are the Arbitrons? Poor relations? Folks from the other side of the tracks?

None of the above.

"Let's make clear the difference between the two companies," said Arbitron's executive vice president A.J. Aurichio.

"Nielsen deals with a national panel and that panel reports the ratings for NBC, CBS and ABC on a continuing basis.

"We're locally oriented. We're the Nielsen of New York, San Francisco, Chicago, Los Angeles, etc. — 214 markets to be precise."

And Arbitron is growing both in its metered homes where what the people watch is computer-recorded and in more than 15 million homes where telephone surveys or diaries to be mailed in tell the tale of the tube.

Aurichio said Arbitron is expanding its metered

National Grange ends meeting

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — The National Grange, which ended its 116th annual convention Sunday, has made Social Security reform and maintenance of charitable work its top priorities.

The farm organization's 5,000 delegates from 37 states met for the last week in Providence mapping out a series of recommendations for congressional action.

Grange representatives called for Social Security reform to ensure the system's future solvency. They said the program should be limited to original retirement benefits plus benefits to spouses, surviving dependents and the disabled.

The delegates recommended that nonresident alien felons be excluded from Social Security benefits, eliminating income tax and limits be placed on deductions for charitable contributions, saying such beverages and luxury food donations all this week. Though all non-perishable food is welcome, especially needed are high protein foods such as canned and dried meats, stews and soups, canned milks and peanut butter. The girls are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. John White of 29 Clinton St.

The group proposed new for the U.S. Olympic Committee on alcoholic mitter.

Log home back in style build their own homes rather than hire professionals most likely will encounter the most resistance, he said.

THE OTHER BIG problem in obtaining a mortgage for a log home is establishing market value, Kendall said.

"Typically, market value is based on previous sales of your type of home," he said. "But if you're in log home No. 1 in your area, you've got a little bit of a problem," he said.

There's little information available from the real estate industry to help set those values. The National Association of Realtors, based in Chicago, was unable to provide any information about the value of log homes.

The same was true of the Texas Real Estate Research Center at Texas A&M University. However, Dr. Al Wright, a researcher with the center, said he couldn't imagine why they would appreciate any faster or slower than more conventional homes.

Thoughts

The charter of UNESCO, the United Nations' educational, scientific and cultural organization begins with the words, "Since wars begin in the minds of men..." and goes on to state that its purpose is to help end wars in the minds of men through international programs of educational, scientific and cultural exchange.

I think it is a fair assumption to state that if the mental health of the peoples of the world and particularly their leaders was first rate, there would be no war, no arms race, no exploitation of one people by another.

I believe that mental health and spiritual wellbeing are part and parcel of the same substance. Spiritual beings, as I understand it, feel themselves to be caught up in something far larger than themselves. You can call it what you will: God, Ultimate Concern, Cosmic Consciousness or simply the Love of Life. And this being "caught up" means a sense of profound connections — we belong to all that is and that is being to us — creation, itself, moves in and through us.

The truth is we are faithfully and wonderfully made and we have the capacity for such health that we have the power to do far more for the good and peace of the world than we ever dare imagine.

East win assures tie for HCC title

By Len Auster
Herald Sports Editor

Any fears of a complete letdown were dispelled in the opening series. East Catholic took the opening kickoff and in four plays marched to a 70-yard touchdown en route to a 54-0 thrashing of young St. Paul in HCC football action Saturday morning at soggy Mt. Nebo.

The victory clinches at least a tie for the conference championship for the 3-0 Eagles, who were coming off an emotionally charged 6-4 tie with Xavier that opened concerns of a possible letdown against the winless visitors from Bristol.

They, however, were completely unimpaired.

"The kids have come a long way and they knew they had to do their playing on the field," a muddy East Coach Jude Kelly offered. The fourth-year Eagle mentor, who led the Eagles to co-HCC honors in his first year in 1979, was hoisted aloft by his happy gridders and then unceremoniously deposited in a hugh mud puddle around the 30-yard line.

"The HCC was something we wanted pretty badly and that clinches that and I'm pretty happy about that," the mud-laden Kelly beamed.

He, however, also felt badly for first-year St. Paul Coach Steve Kelleher, who saw his Falcons go to 0-3 in the conference and 0-9 overall with the loss. St. Paul meets Xavier Friday night in Middletown with an Xavier win giving it half share of HCC laurels.

"We've been through that before," said Kelly, recalling two years ago when St. Paul tacked a 38-0 loss on a young Eagle squad. "I hate to be on both ends of a high score. I just told Steve to hang in there."

Kelleher, minus seven starters and using a third-stringer as starting quarterback, had no excuses. "East has a fine team, one of its best in awhile," he said. "I took some lumps and this is the team that took some of the lumps. I would like to help out and beat Xavier but... They deserve a lot with this team. East's backs are among the best we've seen."

Eagle junior Doug Post rushed for four touchdowns, on runs of 29, 1, 43 and 32 yards, to set a school mark with 16 TDs. The previous single season standard was 15 touchdowns set by Tom Healy in 1962. Post finished with 11 carries for 145 yards. Fullback Jim DePersia had six carries for 149 yards, including a 70-yard TD jaunt in the first quarter that topped the count to 15-0. Everything went right for East as a had snap on the conversion was picked up by holder John Giliberto and tossed to Joe Leslie for a two-point conversion.

East's offense was all on the ground, totaling 414 yards. It was third game in which the Eagles had not attempted a pass. "Once you establish something, it opens up all kinds of things," Kelly cites. The East defense, led by Rich Kuronick, who had an intercepted, recorded its fourth shutout of the season to tie the school mark, previously set in 1964.

Post added TD runs of 1 and 43 yards in the second stanza with sophomore Buddy Zachery scoring on a 41-yard punt return. Post and Chris Bowman, the latter on a 5-yard run, tallied in the third stanza for East with Zachery capping the scoring on a 64-yard jaunt in the final canto.

"I'm always optimistic and I felt we would be better than the last two years (1-10, 2-8 records). I definitely felt we'd be a better team. I felt we'd be stronger and with more experience," cited Kelly, who saw his gridders clinch a winning '82 campaign at 5-3-1 with only the Thanksgiving Day morning clash with Manchester High remaining on the slate. A winning season and the HCC were a couple of goals I set for myself, and the kids did, too. Now we can gear everything for the Thanksgiving Day game."

East Hartford, which has a make-up today against Windham at home, leads the CCLL at 7-0 with Penney second at 7-1. The Hornets last weekend just barely got by the Silk Towners by a 7-0 count.

"I told the kids we had to beat Manchester by a big score as a psychological edge against East Hartford," said Penney Coach Ted Knurek, who stretched league rules by going with his regulars for all but the final 23 seconds.

League rules state a team with a 35-point edge going into the fourth quarter must pull the starters.

The talented threesome of Renee Kieff and John Rodegher combined for 53 rushing attempts out of a total of 69. Kieff, 5-foot-9, 185-pound senior fullback, rushed 29 times for 129 yards and three TDs while Rodegher, 5-foot-7, 160-pound halfback, ran 24 times for 120 yards and also three TDs. Kieff scored on runs of 2, 6 and 8 yards while Rodegher's jaunts were of 1, 1 and 4 yards. Rodegher now has 20 TDs for the season.

The Black Knight defense, which has three shutouts in the seven-game winning streak, limited Manchester to a net of six yards offense. The Silk Towners were minus three yards in the rushing department on 29 carries while their signal-callers were 1-for-9 in the air for nine yards. Ray Lata was 0-for-2 and Kevin Pryor 1-for-7 passing-wise for Manchester.

Penney linemen Dave Kravies and Mike Viscintainer and nose guard Mike Heenev made the snap between center Jim Marx and his quarterback most difficult. The linemen were right on his head.

"It's something we use to put pressure on the quarterback," said Penney defensive coordinator Bob Tigno.

Lata and Brophy split time at quarterback, a situation Simmons said likely won't be repeated. "We planned to use Ray as much as possible. We'll start him against Windham in Williamstown Saturday and come in with Kevin in certain situations."

"[But] I feel it won't be a fire drill like that next week. It was a hodge-podge, nothing we planned on," Simmons admitted. "But we were trying to find one with a hot hand. Neither was effective. We didn't have continuity and both were fumbling the snap."

Manchester's lone touchdown came in the third stanza on a 42-yard fumble return by defensive end Kelly Percy, scooping up a Chris Morin fumble. That made it 34-6 with 5:17 left in the period.

Penney's opening touchdown was on a 24-yard TD strike from QB Jim O'Connor to wide receiver Ken Puchalski. Puchalski was well covered, sandwiched between defenders Scott Dickman and Lata, but he leaped to snare the plummeting pigskin.

The Knight lead was 28-0 at the half as Rodegher scored twice and Kieff once. The multi-faceted offense took Penney to a 40-6 bulge after three stanzas with the Knights refusing to let up in the final 12 minutes. They used reserves for only the final 23 seconds.

Penney romps over Indians, 46-6

Using the contest prior to turkey day as a springboard, Penney High showed no mercy as it rolled past outclassed Manchester High, 46-6, in CCLL football action Saturday afternoon at wet Memorial Field.

The Black Knights, who've won seven straight after an opening tie and loss, scored their final touchdown with 23 seconds left—with the first stringers still employed—with the design to gain a psychological edge over Thanksgiving Day opponent East Hartford High.

East Hartford, which has a make-up today against Windham at home, leads the CCLL at 7-0 with Penney second at 7-1. The Hornets last weekend just barely got by the Silk Towners by a 7-0 count.

Coach way out of line

If ever there was a time for sanctions, penalties against a scholastic coach, it is right now against Penney High's venerable Ted Knurek.

It would not be too far to suggest the Penney High principal, Donald Cramer, assign a monitor to all Black Knight games to oversee his football coach.

Knurek had Manchester High dirty and beaten Saturday afternoon, but yet elected to stay with his starters to score a "psychologically clinching" touchdown with 23 seconds left in a 46-6 Penney triumph.

He had the Silk Towners badly thrashed and apparently elected to rub their noses in the mud at Memorial Field.

"He had us beat. He has a good football team and I really don't know what Teddy is trying to prove," Manchester Coach Mike Simmons said calmly, seething inwardly.

"There is an old saying that this is not a lady's game but when you are dealing with young men, it does, indeed."

Penney had the game won by the end of the third quarter, holding a 40-6 bulge after 36 minutes of play. But the only white uniforms that were visible came following the touchdown with 23 seconds showing on the game clock. Penney quarterback Jim O'Connor attempted seven long passes in the fourth stanza in the attempt for the "psychological" edge against East Hartford High, a 7-6 winner over Manchester the previous weekend, in the upcoming Thanksgiving Day clash.

The crusty Knurek's explanation was he was within the rules. "I told the kids we had to beat Manchester by a big score as a psychological edge against East Hartford. And I kept within the rule, the 35-point rule," he cited.

The league rule states a team with a 35 point lead going into the fourth quarter must pull its starters.

Knurek had the audacity to question Simmons' sportsmanship. "He didn't shake hands, which is baloney. You talk about sportsmanship," Knurek said.

"In 18 years of coaching, have I never shaken a coach's hand after a game. This is the first time ever," Simmons said to Knurek's charge. "The winning coach should come over and congratulate the losing coach. I walked and waited about five yards from him," Simmons answered. "How can you (shake hands) when he called timeout with two minutes left to go for a first down. Poor sportsmanship?" Actions during the game speak for themselves.

Knurek claimed he rotated seven running backs. Funny, tri-captain Rene Kieff carried the pigskin 29 times and tri-captain John Rodegher 24 times. Penney attempted 59 rushing plays.

"I called for (back-up quarterback Brian) Donovan to put him in there, but couldn't find him," Knurek said.

The Black Knight coach is apparently from the old school, his 38 years in the profession maybe the testimony, that the feeling is "do it onto him before he does it to me."

But what next year or the year after that when a new group of players is on the scene and it gets rolled over by an opponent.

There is no reason—ever—to embarrass a high school age youngster.

But that's what Knurek went out and did.

If this was an isolated incident, maybe Knurek's actions could be excused. But it's not. Saturday's game followed the touchdown with 23 seconds in the past two years.

Knurek did the same thing a year ago to Manchester. "Last year the kids were struggling and he brings in his first string three times to stop us at the goal line," Simmons recalls.

It was the previous weekend by the same margin over Wetherfield High, with Wetherfield Coach Rick McNamara having some harsh words in print for Knurek.

Knurek remembers that a year ago Knurek and Penney left had impressions after beating up on Windham and Ferni.

It's unfortunate that a coach's actions could/will spoil an otherwise splendid season for the Black Knight football team.

Teddy Knurek is an excellent football coach, no question about that. But he tarnishes his own image severely.

MIAMI (UPI) — Aaron Pryor's personal physician emphasized the need for water when Pryor used illegal stimulants during the fight.

Pryor stopped Arguello on a 14th-round TKO, felling the challenger's quest for an unprecedented fourth world title.

"I can guarantee everyone in this room that there were no stimulants of any kind in Mr. Pryor's water or inhalation or any other means or form," Cheeks said at Sunday's press conference.

Miller said he had filed a protest with the WBA without Arguello's consent, asking the organization to declare the fight a "no contest."

The champion, Aaron Pryor, was administered obvious foreign substances which are against the rules," Miller said.

"What those substances are we have no idea," he said.

Soccer Club blanks foe

Manchester Soccer Club senior team knocked Wallingford PNA out of the unbeaten ranks in a 3-0 decision Sunday at Mt. Nebo in Connecticut Soccer League Premier Division play.

Tom Cleary, Chip Doubleday and Ed Gardiner each had a goal for the goals, 4-2-1 in league play for 9 points and 5-3-1 overall. Dave Farrell played well defensively and goalie Dan Gaspar was a standout for Manchester. Midfielder Tom Cleary sustained a shoulder injury and will be out indefinitely.

Next outing for Manchester is Sunday afternoon against Tri-Town at Ellington High at 2 o'clock.

Games today

Inclement weather washed out Saturday's schedule of state soccer tournament contests, including those involving local teams.

All were rescheduled today.

East Catholic's Class L quarterfinal bout against Wilbur Cross of New Haven has undergone a site change. Originally scheduled in Cromwell, the contest has been moved to Middletown High today with a 2:15 start.

Manchester High will oppose Glastonbury High at Tunnis Meade Park in Farmington at 2:15 in their Class LL quarterfinal encounter.

On the distant side, both Manchester High and East Catholic are on the road for first round engagements and each has the possibility of playing four games in one week, if either makes the final. Manchester girls travel to New Canaan while the Eagles have a shorter bus trip to Suffield High. Both have 2 o'clock starts.

Georgia, Michigan formalize New Year's plans on gridiron

Washington took a large step forward in that regard Saturday as two Arizona State fumbles led to a pair of Huskies' touchdowns.

Washington carried a 6-1 victory over the previously unbeaten Sun Devils and the upper hand in the race for the Pacific-10 Conference crown.

Washington, 9-1 overall and 6-1 in the league, can clinch its third straight Rose Bowl title with a triumph over Washington State next weekend. ASU, 9-1 overall and 5-1 in the conference, could have secured a Rose Bowl berth with a victory over the Huskies. Although Arizona State officially comes off NCAA probation on Dec. 30, the Sun Devils are eligible for the conference title weekend.

"We gave them 14 points," said ASU coach Darryl Rogers. "Against a good football team, you can't make mistakes. They didn't have far to go when we gave them the football."

Washington's Aaron Williams and Jacques Robinson scored TDs after Arizona State fumbles led to Sun Devil territory.

At Starville, Miss. Dana Moore kicked a 45-yard field goal with 20 seconds left to give Mississippi State a 27-24 upset over previously unbeaten LSU, which entered the game with a 7-0-1 mark. The loss may have ruined the fifth-ranked Tigers' chances of a major bowl bid.

At Auburn, Ala., Walker scored on runs of 47 and 3 yards as the Bulldogs topped Auburn. The Tigers mounted a last-minute drive that moved to the Georgia 14, but the Bulldog defense sacked Randy Campbell twice and forced an incomplete pass on fourth down to seal the triumph.

At Ann Arbor, Mich., Carter's TD receptions gave him 25 for his career, one shy of Elmo Wright's NCAA record for touchdown football."

Black Hawks up unbeaten record

By Logan Hobson
UPI Sports Writer

Chicago's Steve Larmer scored the hat trick, but he wanted to put a feather in each of his teammates' caps.

"Everybody worked hard," said Larmer after his three goals sparked the Black Hawks to a 5-4 victory over Minnesota. "Nineteen guys won the game tonight. Minnesota came out skating well. We were ready, but perhaps a little nervous. I was a little more nervous than usual but then we all settled down."

Chicago, which had been tied with Minnesota for first place, scored four goals in the final period — two each by Larmer and Al Secord. The Black Hawks are undefeated in their last nine games while the loss was the fourth straight on the road for Minnesota.

"When we were down 2-0, it could've been a curtain call," said Chicago coach Orville Tessier. "Our power play is pretty good. I'm quite pleased that everybody did his job. Larmer had his biggest night and played strong hockey all season. He's a guy you do not hear much noise from but he does his job and complements everybody."

Larmer scored on a power play to make it 4-3 at 16:34 after he tied it 3-3, taking a pass from Denis Savard and firing the puck in at 14:32.

Second trimmed the North Stars' lead to his 15th goal. He notched Chicago's final goal, pushing the lead to 5-3. Steve Payne of Minnesota scored with 18 seconds left.

Minnesota coach Glen Sonmor was not pleased with his team's defense. "This was very disheartening," said Sonmor. "We played very hard and still it was not good enough. They have the best power play in the league. Give them all kinds of credit. They kept working. We scored four goals and had a two-goal lead in the third period. That should be enough to win."

Celts minus Tiny still beat Bucks

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — There's no need to tell Boston Celtics Coach Bill Fitch what Phil Ford will mean to the Milwaukee Bucks' running game — he has Nate Archibald.

The Celtics beat the Bucks Sunday night 109-98, but they did it the hard way, way — without Archibald. Archibald was out with a jammed thumb.

"We didn't run tonight like we usually do because we didn't have Tiny (Archibald)," said Fitch. "When you really miss a Tiny is a pressure game like this."

The Celtics' offense may have been slower than usual, but they were still quick enough to beat the Bucks, despite Milwaukee's late comeback from a 16-point deficit.

"Milwaukee got in trouble in the first half when nothing fell and we were able to run," Fitch said. "Their running game is going to come now. Ford gives them a Tiny."

The Bucks had to switch to a motion offense when they traded point guard Dan Cousens to the Celtics for Dave Covens this season.

But with the acquisition of Ford last week, Nelson will be able to go back to his running game.

"I'm very pleased with Ford," Nelson said. "He gives us another dimension. I have to be patient because we plan big things. He's a bright guy and really picked up our offense fast. Only one tonight did he get confused."

Nelson said he was not displeased with the Bucks' performance either. "I guess it just wasn't meant to be tonight," he said. "We sure had our opportunities to win. I'm real proud of my guys. They really came back."

Fitch said his new point guard,

Buckner, was doing a good job, but it would take him a little time to feel comfortable and improvise like Archibald.

"Quinn was just trying to do it like the coach wants," Fitch said. "In a month or so he'll be doing better. I'll take a month or so for the players to have the same confidence in Buckner because they've just been playing with him for years and know what he can and will do."

"Tiny's the greatest playmaker in the game," Fitch said.

Larry Bird collected 20 points and 14 rebounds and Cedric Maxwell sank a foul shot with 15 seconds remaining to give the Celtics a 25-24 lead.

The Bucks, who trailed by 16 points late in the first half, took a 29-29 lead with 20:00 remaining on the clock. Steve Nisbitt scored 20 points and Jack Sikma, with 17, led unbeaten Seattle over the wireless Rockets. The Sonics are 10-0 and Houston is 6-4. The Rockets were led by rookie Terry Teague with 22 points in his first NBA start.

Yale and UConn win in weeked grid action

By United Press International

It was a weekend for college football rivalries in Connecticut and Yale University, the University of Connecticut and Southern Connecticut State College had something to celebrate.

Yale defeated Ivy League rival Princeton, 37-19; Connecticut gained a share of the Yankee Conference title with a 26-21 win over Rhode Island and Southern Connecticut whipped Western Connecticut, 24-0, in the traditional meeting of the two schools.

The Elis took some of the sting out of a disappointing season with its Yale Bowl victory over the Princeton Tigers. Junior tailback Paul Andrie rushed for 118 yards and the go-ahead touchdown and Bill Moore kicked three field goals to power Yale.

"I thought they would throw the ball more early in the game but maybe they saw us double covering," said Yale coach Carn Cozza. "It was difficult trying to score pass to Kevin Guthrie late in their quarterback at the same time."

Last year, Princeton downed a 6-0 Yale team, 35-31, to spoil the Elis hope for a perfect season. "People asked me all week about revenge," Cozza said. "But I don't think our players were really worried about that. Eighteen of our kids (last year's seniors) were gone."

The Elis, 4-5 overall and 3-3 in Ivy League play, jumped to a 16-7 half-time lead on Andrie's 2-yard second period touchdown plunge and Moore field goals from 25, 32 and 52 yards. Yale added a third period score on a 1-yard run by John Neville.

Quarterback Joe Dukac scored on a 5-yard run in the fourth quarter. And backup quarterback Mike Luzzi ended the Yale scoring with a 29-yard scoring pass to Rick Crews. In the go-ahead touchdown and Bill Moore kicked three field goals to power Yale.

"I thought they would throw the ball more early in the game but maybe they saw us double covering," said Yale coach Carn Cozza. "It was difficult trying to score pass to Kevin Guthrie late in their quarterback at the same time."

Connecticut took the decision out of the hands of a committee and gave it to BU by defeating Rhode Island 26-21 in the fourth period and the Elis won in the first quarter of their own 14-11 triumph over Bucknell. It had lost to New Hampshire, 21-20, in 1981.

The Crimson thought they had won the game in the fourth period and the Elis won in the first quarter of their own 14-11 triumph over Bucknell. It had lost to New Hampshire, 21-20, in 1981.

Yale tuned up by its showdown with Harvard by knocking Princeton out of contention with a 37-19 victory. The Elis will be trying to avoid their first losing season since 1971 when they invade Harvard Stadium next weekend.

plunge by fullback Dave Neill. Harvard running back Cal Whitfield rushed for 71 yards on 20 carries to become the third Ram player in the school's history to gain 1,000 yards in a season. He now has 1,054 career yards.

Southern Connecticut State College is playing a waiting game. Quarterback Jim Strigano passed for three touchdowns as the Owls whipped wireless Central Connecticut, 24-0, completing its best season in 26 years and improving chances for an NCAA Division II title bid.

Southern, 9-1, tied a school record for most wins in a season set in 1956 and hoped the easy victory would nail down one of eight tournament berths. Central fell to 0-7-1 in its worst season since 1964.

One of the nation's oldest college football rivalries, Trinity College beat Wesleyan University, 37-6. Sophomore quarterback Joe Schuchert passed for 199 yards and three touchdowns to lead the Bulldogs in the 97th meeting of the two schools. Trinity is 5-3, while Wesleyan dropped to 4-4.

The weather took the quarterback options out of the game for both quarterbacks, said UConn coach Walt Nadzak, who was still impressed by Wienke's performance in the gusty wind.

Wienke started his first game as quarterback for Rhode Island, 6-4 overall and 2-3 in the conference, in the place of the injured Dave Grimsick. Rhode Island's scoring came on a touchdown by Wienke, a 14-yard scoring pass by Wienke to T.J. DeStasio and a 1-yard touchdown the final minute. "We've beaten all five of the Yankee Conference teams we've played and that says to me we ought to be in there."

Boston College improved its bowl chances with a 20-13, last-minute win over Syracuse. The win came in front of a Tangerine Bowl representative and the picture looks bright for BC's first bowl appearance in 40 years. The Eagles close against Holy Cross next week, but will know Monday night whether they've been chosen for the Dec. 18 Tangerine Bowl in Orlando, Fla.

Plymouth State wrapped up the New England Conference title and a 10-0 season with a 56-13 rout over Curry. Amherst showed similar prowess in winning the Little Three crown with its 25-26 trouncing of the Wildcats. Bowdoin won the mythical CBB (Colby, Bates, Bowdoin) title with an 18-2 win over Colby.

Elsewhere, AIC edged croston rival Springfield 24-17; Bridgewater State clubbed Westfield State 37-19; Coast Guard nipped Hartford 12-6; Delaware State downed Northeastern 15-7; Maine Maritime crushed Framingham State 44-0; Massachusetts Maritime blanked Western New England 19-0; Millsville defeated New Haven 36-14; Nichols shut out Western Connecticut 10-0; Norwich beat Middlebury 23-14; Southern Connecticut whitewashed Central Connecticut 24-0; Tufts downed Bates 21-0.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The NFL's Management Council has two words for union head Ed Garvey. Sign here.

The league's bargaining arm said Sunday the 79-page proposal to the striking Players Association represents its final offer and indicated the 1982 season will simply wither away unless executive director Garvey accepts the package.

Before the last round of talks broke off Nov. 6, Chuck Sullivan, head of the Council's executive committee, said "89 percent of the league's offer" was on the table, but Council spokesman Jim Miller said Sunday the final fraction is also included in the proposal as the "walkout heads us off to the edge."

Garvey says he is ready to accept our offer and he's back to the bargaining table and that's the only way," said Miller. "If they simply walk out, that's not good enough. We've heard all their lines before; what they say and what they do are two entirely different things."

The league's current four-year proposal, presented to the union as a comprehensive 79-page document Nov. 6, is valued at $1.1 billion according to the Council. The last union offer is for $1.1 billion spread over three years.

The union has maintained that the full 16 game season should be played if a settlement is reached but the league maintains only two of the eight scrubbed weeks can be made up, eliminating a second wild card team and utilizing the idle week before the Super Bowl, scheduled for Jan. 30 in Pasadena, Calif.

Commissioner Peter Rose said Sunday that the league is forced to return $50 million to the major television networks because of scheduled games that were called off. The NFL signed a $1 billion television package this spring scheduled to run through 1986.

In other games, the University of Connecticut now owns a share of the Yankee Conference title, with its 26-21 win over Rhode Island.

Quarterback Rob Trivella threw his first two passes of the game for touchdowns to Brian McGillicuddy, helping the Huskies, 5-6 overall, to a 2-2 league record and four-way tie for the title with Boston University, Massachusetts and Maine.

Peter Kostogy gave UConn the winning edge by returning a blocked punt 22 yards for a touchdown in the fourth quarter and tackling Rhode Island quarterback Dave Wienke for a safety with 5:33 left in the game.

The weather took the quarterback options out of the game for both quarterbacks, said UConn coach Walt Nadzak, who was still impressed by Wienke's performance in the gusty wind.

Weekend boxing results

Mancini, Pryor close to expected fight

By United Press International

Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini and Aaron Pryor moved closer to an expected light-heavyweight showdown, but another young fighter has apparently paid a terrible price for it.

White Alexis Arguello escaped from Pryor's fearsome junior welterweight onslaught Friday night at Miami with relatively minor injuries, Korean boxer Duk Koo Kim remained alive Sunday only with the aid of a life support system after suffering a cerebral hemorrhage during a World Boxing Association lightweight championship bout Saturday against Mancini at Las Vegas, Nev.

Pryor won on a 14th-round technical knockout as Arguello lay unconscious for several minutes, while Kim, 23, lapsed into a coma seconds after Mancini slammed a right hand to his head at the 19-second mark of the 14th round of their scheduled 15-round title fight.

"I am very saddened and very sorry," Mancini said. "I'll keep praying, hoping I'll get some answers to some of the questions I have having the last couple of days."

Kim, who weighed a half pound lighter than Mancini at 134½, had a record of 17-1 going into the title fight. The Seoul native had won his last 12 fights and was the WBA's No. 1 contender in the light-heavyweight ranks. The Las Vegas bout was his first fight outside the Orient.

Dr. Lonnie Hammargren, the neurosurgeon who removed a large blood clot from Kim's head during a 2½-hour operation Saturday, said Sunday Kim's condition worsened during the night and a respirator was attached to the injured fighter to keep him breathing.

"We know there is massive brain damage," Hammargren said. "His eyes are fixed and almost all of his reflexes are gone. We always try to keep a little hope, but his chances of survival are very small."

Hammargren said "in all probability" a small vein was ruptured in the right side of Kim's brain from the blow thrown by Mancini late in the fight.

Pryor, who is unbeaten, ended Arguello's record with a one-punch precedent four division title by hammering him against the ropes at a conclusion of a thrilling fight. The Las Vegas bout was his first fight outside the Orient.

The All-Tournament squad selected by coaches of the four teams includes Syracuse players, Derante, Papaleo of Syracuse, N.Y., Dean Folt of Onondaga, N.Y., and Steven Klaus of Glenside, N.Y.

Syracuse No. 1 in Big East soccer play
