Lego idles 13, cites video games

ENFIELD (UPI) - Lego Systems Inc., which makes plastic building blocks, has idled 13 workers in Connecticut because video games are tying up the lion's share of toy retailers' capital, a company spokesman says. "There's a lot of (videogame stuff out there and it's expensive," said Michael Strammiello, manager of marketing communications. "If a lot of your money is tied up in electronics inventory, you're going to be very cautious."

The layoff of 13 packing and warehouse employees, effective Nov. 12, are the first for the company in Connecticut. Also, the company will close the Enfield plant from Nov. 19 through Sunday and again from Dec. 23 to Jan. 3 and will shut down on Mondays from December through February. Strammiello said Lego sales in the United States are still increasing, probably won't reach expectations.

Penny Richman, media relations manager for Toy Manufacturers of America in New York City, said there will always be a market for Legos because the building blocks are among "classic play items." Videogames, she said, will become a staple of the toy market because the computer age will be a part of the home and videogames in

"I think both are here to stay," Ms. Richman said. Strammiello said he doubted

Vatican admits it was used

VATICAN CITY - The Vatican admitted Friday for he first time the controversial Vatican bank was secretly manipulated and abused for an "occult project" by the now bankrupt Ambrosiano bank. The declaration was made in a document in which the Vatican also released figures on its income and expenditures for the first time, admitting its 1981 deficit was $28 million, its largest reported.

The seven-page Vatican document, released at the end of a meeting of the full college of cardinals, defended the Vatican bank's dealings with the failed Banco Am-brosiano, of which the Vatican bank owned 1.58 percent. For the first time, the Vatican admitted that the late Ambrosiano president, Roberto Calvi, who was found dead in London last June, secretly misused and nanipulated his connection with the Vatican. The document said the Vatican bank, through Calvi's secret manipulation, unknowingly become the main shareholder in 10 mysterious Latin American companies associated with the Ambrosiano. It said the Vatican bank and its president, U.S. Archbishop Paul C. Marcinkus, only became aware of the situation in July 1981. Marcinkus had given Calvi "letters of patronage" and

The document said the Vatican's income was $99 million in 1981 and its expenditures were $95 million.

But $28.6 million in 1981 dollars of its income camefrom part of the yearly worldwide "Peter's Pence" collection and other funds put at the personal disposal of Pope John Paul II for charitable purposes, the docu-

The 1981 deficit amounted to $28 million, the document said. The Vatican's 1979 deficit was $20 million. No official figure was ever released for 1980. It was the closest finish since Charlie Dyson, then a student and star cross country runner at the University of Connecticut, edged two fellow collegians during an Olympic year in 1956.

Dyson, who was in the latest Thanksgiving morning spectacle over Manchester's paved streets, nipped Alan Shaler of Hamilton, N.Y., College and Bob Scharf of

Trinity College in Hartford. Two seconds separated the trio. Shaler was in with a 25:35 time and Scharf next at 25:36. There were some pretty good clu runners in the field that year like Norm Higgins, who now manages Jan Merrill, Charlie Robbins, Bob

Black, Pete Close and George Terry to list a few. All held national titles The 1956 race, which then started and finished on Main Street, in front of the Mary Cheney Library, was an unforgetable one besides the threeman race for first place.

Dyson's at UConn, Chester neared the finish line, collapsed and died two days later from a nonrelated race ailment. The 49-year-old Dyson recalled the 1966 run. "I built up a good lead and I thought I had him (Shaler) but
