Soviets vow to match MX

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet leader Yuri Andropov offered to remove hundreds of nuclear rockets from Europe today but vowed to build a Soviet answer to the MX missile if it is deployed by the Reagan administration.

"A policy based on the desire to achieve military superiority over the Soviet Union is futile and can only escalate the threat of war," Andropov said to a meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee in his first major foreign policy speech.

"We shall have to answer the American challenge by deploying similar weapon systems."

The Soviet leader said President Reagan's war preparations have reached "unheard-of proportions" and his "zero-option" proposal for elimination of medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe was a "mockery."

"Washington's present policy has deteriorated the international situation to dangerous limits," said Andropov, 68, who took over as Communist Party chief on the death of Leonid Brezhnev in November.

Andropov said the Soviet Union would build its own version of the MX missile if the United States deployed the weapon.

Congress Monday resoundingly denied Reagan the nearly $1 billion he wanted for production of the MX.

In excerpts from Andropov's nationally televised speech released by the Novosti agency, the new Kremlin chief said the Soviet Union is considering Reagan's recent proposals for limiting nuclear arms.

"Yet the measures he (Reagan) proposed are not enough to dispel the atmosphere of mutual suspicion and restore trust," he said.

"Something more is needed. There is a need to normalize the situation."

The Soviet leader said Moscow is ready to reduce its medium-range nuclear forces in Europe to equal the nuclear missile forces of Britain and France, "not a single one more."

"This means the Soviet Union would have to reduce hundreds of missiles, including dozens of its latest missiles known in the West as SS-20," he said.

Andropov's offer would reduce Soviet nuclear missiles in Europe from an estimated 600 down to less than 200.

Speaking at a ceremonial meeting to mark the 60th anniversary of the formation of the Soviet Union, Andropov called on U.S. officials and the American public to be "well aware of the real state of affairs."

Andropov denied that the Warsaw Pact was ahead in the arms race and said Reagan's call for "radical cuts" was intended to weaken the Soviet Union.

Trustees back MCC center

By Paul Hendrix and Nancy Thompson Herald Reporters

The proposed performing arts center for Manchester Community College won support Monday afternoon from the state Board of Trustees formally backed the project for the first time.

"It was never made legal before and I wanted to tie up that loose end," said Vincent. "That is what this resolution does."

Vincent said meetings with community leaders now are being held, as supporters of the regional arts center — which would cost an estimated $4.5 million — try to include more arts groups in the region east of the city.

But MCC President William E. Vincent said this morning it will be a while before fundraising for the project will begin.

Vincent said the project previously received encouragement to proceed from the Board of Trustees Budget and Finance Committee and

Coventry's new chief called a 'real worker'

By Jeff Weingart Herald Reporter

COVENTRY — Residents can expect a "real worker" and a "firm gentleman" in newly appointed Police Chief Frank V. Trzaskos.

That was the word this morning from Trzaskos' fellow worker of 25 years, West Hartford Police Department Chief Francis Reynolds.

Reynolds was reflecting on the Coventry Town Council's Monday night decision to approve the town manager's appointment of the 46-year-old Trzaskos to the office of chief, a position which was left vacant last May the departure of former Chief Gary Sousa. Trzaskos will begin his new job on Jan. 3.

"Trzaskos will be paid $2,400 a year, the minimum salary approved by the council. The figure is $2,600 more than Sousa was making when he quit."

Reynolds mourned the loss of Trzaskos from the West Hartford department, where he is a captain.

"We're going to miss him," said Reynolds.

"I have a lot of respect for the man," said Lieutenant William Schaub, who works under Trzaskos. "He is an intelligent and fair-minded person."

Trzaskos agreed with Reynolds' description of himself.

"I sort of like to set strict standards for myself and I expect people under me to do that too," said Trzaskos this morning. "I am hard, but fair."

THE COUNCIL approved the appointment after interviewing the Amsterdam, N.Y., native for over an hour. He was chosen from a field of 17 candidates who had vied for the job, according to Town Manager Charles F. McCarthy.

McCarthy seemed relieved that the council had gone along with his

Alone, frail, needy

One of the people Manchester Area Conference of Churches hopes to help through its Annual Seasonal Sharing Appeal is a woman who has had more than her share of health problems, including a stroke and the amputation of both legs.

She also suffers from glaucoma.

For three and a half years she was in a convalescent home. Now she is living alone, independent once again thanks to meals on wheels, occasional assistance from a homemaker and help from a close friend.

MACC would like to present her with a poinsettia along with her Christmas basket.

Anyone who wants to help this woman and others may leave food and gifts at Manchester Mall, Heritage Savings and Loan Association on Main Street, the Town of Manchester Firehouse on Center Street, or the Eighth District Firehouse at Hilliard and Main streets. Checks may be mailed to MACC Seasonal Sharing, Box 773, Manchester, Ct. 06046.

ANGELS DECAPITATED IN HOLIDAY VANDALISM
 ...ornaments broken after 34 Christmases at Shady Glen

Hark, the headless angels

Since 1948, a choir of angels has sung out each year at Christmastime from the roof of the Shady Glen Restaurant at East Middle Turnpike.

From the mouths of the life-sized statues came the music of the season.

Bernice Rieg, who operates the restaurant, said parents have come with children to show off the angel choir they remember from their childhood.

Little years ago, however, the Christmas, but it will never be coming from the bodies of the angels.

Someone — Mrs. Rieg says "the meanest thieves in town" — broke the heads of the six angels last night. Two of the heads were dropped, but four others disappeared, carried off by someone who climbed the roof and then left in a car.

The restaurant was open until 11:30 p.m. so the vandalism had to have occurred after that.

New offices due on Main Street?

Economy Electric Co. which has its Main Street building for sale, is rumored to be in negotiations with a professional firm that might be interested in locating its offices there.

A spokesman for Economy declined to discuss details of the matter today because talks are in a preliminary stage.

Economy vacated the building when it moved to its present Oakland Street location.

The structure contains two stories with about 2,000 square feet on each. The full basement contains about the same square footage. It has an elevator.

A representative of Economy did say that the proposal calls for rehabilitation of both floors into offices and use of the basement for file space.

Such renovation would be eligible for a tax credit under the Economic Recovery Act of 1981. The 40-year old structure would qualify for a 20 percent federal tax credit for major renovations to the interior, he said.

The building, on the west side of Main Street, north of Park Street, is located about 100 feet from the town parking lot on St. James Church property and about 200 feet from the town-owned Birch Street lot.

If the building is sold for offices, it will follow the trend of other former retail buildings on downtown Main Street. The former House and Hale building is condominium offices. The Dewey-Richman building has been converted to office space by the law firm of Phelon, Squatrito, and Fitzgerald.

News Briefing

Consumer prices up 0.1 percent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices rose just 0.1 percent in November in a strong indication that 1982's inflation rate will be under 5 percent, the lowest since at least 1978, the Labor Department said today.

Through November the year's inflation rate was only 4.5 percent.

Housing and clothing prices dropped in November, but food prices increased by 0.1 percent, the department said.

With no major price surge in December — and one is not expected — the year could end with a rate under 1978's 4.8 percent and perhaps the lowest since 1972's 3.4 percent.

Later today, the Commerce Department will be offering an unofficial projection of the gross national product and revise its figures on the third quarter GNP, which at last report showed no growth.

Christmas shoppers found that toys, sporting goods, hobby products and other products categorized as entertainment items were cheaper than last year, but balanced by increases in entertainment services to produce a zero rate of change in the overall index component.

Congress ready to adjourn

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The lame duck 97th Congress, which worked until the early morning passing legislation to keep the government running and to raise gasoline taxes a nickel, finally appears ready to adjourn.

The Senate early today voted 56-34 to send the gas tax bill, with its job-costing highway construction program, back to the House for negotiations on a final version to give President Reagan.

The bill, long delayed in the Senate by a hasty filibuster by four GOP conservatives, would then bounce back to the Senate for final congressional approval, where it could be delayed again. But one filibusterer, Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., said he would no longer block it.

The House and Senate on Monday, after five days of frantic, nearly nonstop legislating, gave Reagan the money measure needed to pay for the operation of most government agencies.

GNP sinking at 2.2% annually

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government economists today projected that the broadest measure of the economy's gross national product is sinking at an annual rate of 2.2 percent.

The tentative projection, known as the "flash" GNP report, is based on partial data for the October-through-December quarter that is still under way.

The projection is used for internal government budget estimates and is disclosed four times a year as the final revision of the previous quarter is published.

Social Security gets Fleece

WASHINGTON (UPI) — This month's Golden Fleece award goes to the Social Security Administration for allegedly spending $6.7 million to do the same job twice, but retirement system officials say they were only following Congress' orders.

The Golden Fleece — awarded monthly by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., for what he believes is the biggest waste of taxpayers' money — went Monday to Social Security officials who allegedly paid $6.7 million for "bureaucratic failure insurance."

The money was spent on two consultants to plan this year's move to the agency's new computer center. Proxmire said agency employees urged against hiring the consultants because government workers had already drawn up the plans.

Jerry Lewis undergoes surgery

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Comedian Jerry Lewis underwent open heart surgery today for "serious irregularities of his heart rhythm," a Desert Springs Hospital spokesman said.

Spokeswoman Barbara Scarrantino said Lewis walked into the hospital emergency room shortly after 9 a.m. PST Monday complaining of chest pains. He was listed in stable condition until 8:30 p.m., when he began experiencing "serious irregularities of the heart rhythm," Ms. Scarrantino said.

Caracas blaze toll: 106 dead

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — U.S. and Canadian firefighters today helped battle strong winds and explosions keeping a Venezuelan power plant in flames for a third straight day in a giant blaze that killed at least 106 people.

Rescue workers feared the death toll could reach 200 in what was considered one of the worst disasters in Venezuela's recent history.

Caracas Federal Police Chief Gabriel Lago told reporters that by late Monday 106 bodies were recovered from the rubble. Only 22 of the charred bodies, many burnt beyond recognition, were identified, Lago said.

The official count of those injured in the explosion-triggered blaze at the Tacoa power plant was 300.

Non-smokers' rights expanded

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — An attorney fired for demanding a smoke-free work area can sue his former employer, an appeals court says.

In a decision expanding the rights of smoke-sensitive workers, the state Court of Appeal ruled Monday that patent attorney Paul Henzeli could sue the Singer Co. for "intentional infliction of emotional distress."

In a related case, a federal appeals court ruled in October that federal government workers were entitled to a smoke-free environment if it damaged their health and that "environmental limitations" could be considered as disability hearings.

Nativity scene OK - judge

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — The steps of City Hall will be adorned with figurines of Jesus, Mary and Joseph this Christmas until a federal judge decides whether the nativity display has a constitutional right to be there.

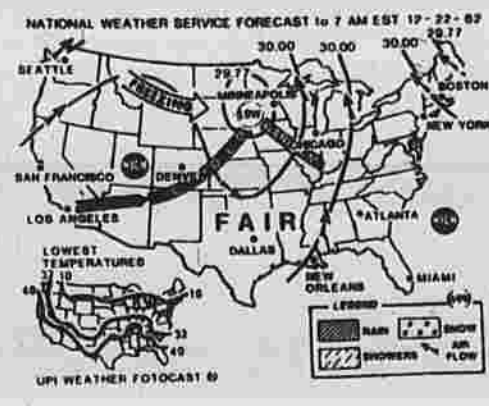

U.S. Senior Judge Raymond J. Pettine sidestepped the constitutional issue Monday as he refused a request by the American Civil Liberties Union to have the creche removed.

The ACLU sought an injunction against the city for allowing the Knights of Columbus, a fraternal Roman Catholic organization, to erect the creche under the municipal Christmas tree on city property.

Judge: Patriarca too sick for Fla.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — A federal magistrate, saying the trip presented a "clear and present danger of death," refused today to order reputed New England mob boss Raymond L.S. Patriarca to Florida to face labor racketeering charges.

"I am not only convinced beyond a reasonable doubt, but beyond all doubt, that preparation (and) travel would present a clear and present danger of death," U.S. Magistrate Jacob Hagoian said. "For me to order (Patriarca to Florida) would be a reckless disregard of human life and I will not be a party to it."

Brennan goes home

Actress Eileen Brennan, in a wheelchair and with her right leg in a cast, went home for Christmas nearly two months after she was critically injured by a speeding car while leaving a restaurant where she had dinner with Goldie Hawn.

"I greet you all in love and respect and thank you for being here," the Emmy-winning actress told a group of about 50 reporters Monday shortly before she was released from Daniel Freeman Marina Hospital in Los Angeles.

"Never in my life have I experienced such an outpouring of love from fans, from famous people, from everyone. They have sent me thousands and thousands of letters. Every day I have delighted in reading them and I intend to answer each letter myself."

Miss Brennan, who played Capt. Doreen Lewis in the "Private Benjamin" movie and television series, spoke haltingly while sitting in a wheelchair with her right leg extended in a cast and holding an orchid on her lap. She was accompanied by her two sons, Patrick 16, and Sam, 11, and her sister.

Contract time

CONTRACT TIME: Two famous folks have signed new contracts, and a third has quit.

In Boston, conductor and film score composer John Williams signed Monday with the Boston Pops. Williams, who wrote the scores for "E.T.," "Star Wars" and "Superman," among others, signed an "evergreen" contract that is firm until 1987, when salary and schedules will be renegotiated.

Mike Wallace also has just signed a new five-year contract to continue on "60 Minutes" for CBS. According to Newsweek, one CBS source puts his salary in the final year at $1 million.

Sherry Lansing, 38, Hollywood's top woman executive, quit Monday as president of 20th-Century Fox, possibly to head a new major movie company formed earlier this year by Columbia, CBS and Home Box Office.

Real women

Dolly Parton and the Queen Mother are "real women," but Bo Derek and Princess Anne are not. It all started with the book "Real Men Don't Eat Quiche" that gives a tongue-in-cheek description of today's "real men."

But who are today's "real women?" pondered People magazine.

Upfront cost: $100,000 for Bennet gas

By Paul Hendrie Herald Reporter

Although the installation cost of gas heat for the proposed Bennet housing project might run $100,000 higher than electric heat installation, gas is being considered because it might be cheaper for tenants.

Democratic Director Stephen T. Cassano, chairman of the Board of Directors Heat Exaltate Committee and the leading supporter of the Bennet conversion, said this morning consultants still are trying to determine the most economical heating method. The board is expected to vote on the project on Jan. 14.

Original plans called for providing electric heat. But at a public hearing last month, several people argued that electric heat is more expensive than other heating methods, especially in a building that was not designed, built and insulated for electric heat.

THE CONCERN was heightened when the Bennet Housing Corp. decided to make tenants pay their own heating bills. Some people at the public hearing worried that the per-tenant cost could skyrocket if electric heating costs rise drastically.

Cassano said this feat of rising electric rates convinced Bennet conversion supporters to take another look at gas. Although it might be to the town's advantage to spend $100,000 less up front to install electric heat, gas heat may be provided to protect the tenants, he said.

However, there are problems. The gas main that serves the southern portion of Main Street is inadequate to service Bennet, so a new main would have to be installed.

Also, Cassano pointed out, there is no guarantee natural gas prices won't rise dramatically, now that the fuel has been deregulated.

Oil heat has been ruled out, he said, because there is no way to meter it individually. For that reason, a combination oil-gas heating system also is not feasible, said Cassano.

The advantage of a dual oil-gas system would be that the cheaper fuel at any given time could be purchased.

Democratic Deputy Mayor Barbara B. Weinberg, the only Democrat on the board who has indicated she might not support the Bennet project, said a change to gas heat could make the conversion more palatable to her.

"I think, long haul, when you're looking at the tenant paying for the heat, gas makes more sense," she said.

MEANWHILE, MRS. Weinberg said she recently met for several hours with Arthur N. Greenblatt, the town's consultant for the project, to talk about possible changes in the language of the lease.

Mrs. Weinberg had questioned some portions of the proposed lease, which she said did not adequately protect the interests of the town. The meeting with Greenblatt is an apparent effort to satisfy some of her criticisms and win her support.

Cassano said negotiations between the town and the Bennet Housing Corp., through attorneys, is proceeding and a lease should be made final by the Jan. 14 meeting.

A MAJOR CONCERN for the town is the amount of money it would receive in lieu of taxes. The final figure will result from the negotiations, but Cassano said he expects it might not be much different from the 10 percent of the annual net cash flow that was proposed earlier.

The three Republicans on the board have opposed the Bennet conversion. They plan to propose an alternative use for the building sometime after Christmas. Their plan would involve selling the building and using the proceeds to build low-income elderly housing elsewhere.

Psychiatric hearing slated for Boyle

VERNON — Edward F. Boyle, the former Manchester resident accused of slaying while attempting to rape a Columbia woman in 1980, has been scheduled for a psychiatric hearing Thursday in Tolland County Superior Court.

Jury selection is also scheduled to begin.

Boyle, 32, is charged with felony murder and attempted first-degree sexual assault and commission of third-degree sexual assault. A Grand Jury indicted Boyle on the charges April 22. The accused later pleaded innocent.

Louisa M. Scott, 20, of Columbia, was found dead in the Skungaug River in Coventry May 31, 1980. She had been strangled.

She was last seen alive in Coventry center, according to police.

Boyle is at present serving a six to 12-year prison sentence in Somers Prison for raping a middle-aged Manchester woman in 1980. He also has been recently charged with several more rapes that occurred that same summer.

Boyle is reported to have confessed to the crime involving Ms. Scott. The defense is expected to argue that the connection was made under extraordinary psychological conditions, and isn't true.

Army violations costly to correct

Code violations which prompted the National Guard to close the Manchester Army, at 330 Main St., to public functions will be expensive to correct, but the violations are not serious enough to warrant closing the building to Guard activities, according to officials.

The National Guard will continue to operate out of the building and will use it, if necessary, for emergency shelters, National Guard officials said.

The building has been used on occasion for functions, like dances. That will not be allowed until the code violations are corrected. But National Guard officials feel there would be enough supervision there during public emergencies for the building to be safely used.

Code violations include open interior stairways and the lack of smoke and fire detectors. There are no sprinklers, either, but they are not required.

There have been serious fires recently in armories in other states, prompting safety concerns in Connecticut.

A National Guard study found code violations in 17 of the state's 24 armories. Nine armories were closed in August and four more were partially closed.

Manchester man among those booked

Police charge three for prostitution

A Manchester man was among three people arrested Monday in connection with a police investigation of an East Hartford encounter club.

East Hartford police spokesman Robert Kenary said Gerrold Stratton, 42, of 871 Tolland Turnpike, turned himself in at East Hartford police headquarters. Police had a warrant to arrest him on charges of promoting prostitution in the second degree. If convicted, he could face up to one- to 10-year prison sentence and a fine of up to $5,000.

Kenary said Stratton is the owner of the House of Foxes, the scene of a police raid two weeks ago. The Little House of Foxes, an encounter club on Main Street in Manchester, is affiliated with the East Hartford establishment.

Also charged in the Foxes' bust was Ronald Cagne, 38, of West Willington, described by Kenary as the manager of the club, and Constance Bumgarner, 19, of Hartford, a club employee. Cagne was charged with promoting prostitution in the second degree; Ms. Bumgarner was charged with prostitution.

All three suspects turned themselves in at police headquarters, Kenary said. They were released on $500 non-cash bonds for Jan. 10 appearances in Manchester Superior Court, he said.

Kenary said Monday's arrests were the result of a complaint from a 24-year-old man who visited the club two weeks ago.

He said police are trying to obtain warrants for seven to nine additional arrests in connection with a police raid on the club the same day the complaint was received. Evidence from the raid is still being analyzed, he said.

Toxin chemical cleanup may never end

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government's massive effort to clean up the nation's 418 worst toxic waste dumps will leave more than 13,000 other sites still contaminating the environment and threatening public health, state officials warn.

The gloomy prediction was prompted by the Environmental Protection Agency's unveiling Monday of a list of the worst hazardous waste sites targeted for clean-up under the federal "Superfund" law.

While acknowledging the EPA's "national priority list" is a milestone in America's war on hazardous wastes, state officials are pessimistic about whether the chemical contamination of water, land and air throughout the United States will ever be remedied completely.

"We will do it as rapidly as we can on a worst-first basis," said Michigan Natural Resources Director Howard Tanner. "Remember, it took us 15 to 20 years to get into this hole."

MICHIGAN HEALTH Director Bailus Walker Jr. said a complete cleanup of the state's 46 priority sites will have only a small impact on Michigan's 400 confirmed and 400 suspected toxic waste problems.

Some $1.6 billion is committed to finance the Superfund effort and prosecute companies responsible for illegal waste disposal. While the law focuses on cleaning up the 400 most sites, even EPA Administrator Anne Gorsuch admitted there are about 14,000 hazardous chemical dumps in the United States.

Other state officials predict that even high-priority Superfund action will come slowly. EPA started reviewing 160 "interim" sites identified earlier this year. The agency placed 153 of those on its national list Monday.

"I would think that within six months or so it's entirely possible that some remedial work could begin," said Sloan O'Donnell of the New York Environmental Conservation Department.

The announcement comes while EPA's LIST includes the infamous Love Canal neighborhood in Niagara Falls, N.Y., where a discovery of buried chemicals in a residential area helped to spark a drive in Congress to pass Superfund legislation.

The hazardous dumps are scattered from Maine to American Samoa in the South Pacific, although two-thirds of the sites are concentrated in a dozen states, led by New Jersey, Michigan and Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Gorsuch noted that a 60-day comment period follows the unveiling of the list, and that some sites may be added to or subtracted from it.

The announcement comes while EPA and Mrs. Gorsuch is embroiled in greater controversy than at any time in the agency's history. She was cited last week for contempt of Congress for refusing to provide a House subcommittee with internal files on the 160 interim hazardous waste sites.

Mrs. Gorsuch vowed Monday, "The time period for compromise (with Congress) has passed."

ONE OF HER leading congressional critics Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., charged EPA's announcement is 18 months overdue, and said the agency has cleaned up no more than five sites out of the 14,000. "They've been reluctant to spend any money," he charged.

EPA's list was compiled with a "hazard ranking system" that measured a site's pollution threat three ways — in ground water, in surface water and in the air.

The site ranked as the most serious environmental threat is an 11-acre landfill in Fridley, Minn., where FMC Corp. disposed of solvents, paint sludges and plating wastes.

Ground water "discharges into the Mississippi River, which serves as the water supply for the city of Minneapolis, 80 feet downstream of FMC property," EPA said.

But Louis Breinhardt, executive director of the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency, said FMC's dump is not the worst in his state and "certainly not the most serious in the nation."

Southington dump agrees to cleanup

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — A Southington hazardous waste site, listed by federal officials as one of the nation's worst toxic waste dumps, will clean up polluted drinking wells in what could be the first agreement of its kind.

A lawsuit filed in 1979 by the Connecticut Fund for the Environment and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency against Solvents Recovery Services of New England was to be heard today in U.S. District Court in Hartford.

The environmental group said the agreement filed with the court Monday was the first to seek a cleanup of contaminated drinking water under the federal Resources Conservation and Recovery Act.

Fred Krupp, an attorney with CFE, said, "In a way this settlement is a landmark case and may be an example of things to come around the country. It means it will be easier to get relief in other suits."

Spokeswoman Suzanne Langille said the group would monitor the company's efforts to clean up the site and block further seepage of contaminants to two wells that provided municipal drinking water to the town of Southington.

"This case is ending, but our work has just begun," she said in a New Haven news conference, adding it would be several years before the wells can be used again.

Ms. Langille said the lawsuit did not seek damages, but left the door open for civil suits by Southington residents who might claim future health problems occur because of the polluted drinking water.

The suit claimed Solvents Recovery Services had dumped toxic wastes into unlined lagoons or 10 years ago, and had allowed "substantial leaks and spills until 1979."

"If the suit really did raise the consciousness of a lot of people in the relationship between the dumping of toxic wastes and the contamination of drinking water, I think it has established an awareness across the country," she said.

In a separate action Monday, Solvents Recovery Services was one of four Connecticut sites included on the EPA's list of the worst toxic waste dumps in the country. The others were Yaworski Lagoon in Canterbury, Beacon Heights landfill in Beacon Falls and Laurel Park landfill in Naugatuck.

CFE claimed several hazardous chemicals flowing from Solvents Recovery Services were polluting the public water supply in Southington, including tetrachloroethylene, chloroform and trichloroethylene. The group petitioned the EPA in July 1979 on behalf of several concerned Southington residents to halt the use of the drinking water and bring action against the company.

State sites no surprise to the DEP

HARTFORD (UPI) — State Department of Environmental Protection officials are not surprised four Connecticut sites were on a federal list of the nation's worst toxic waste dumps.

The list, made public by the federal Environmental Protection Agency Monday, included Yaworski Lagoon in Canterbury; Beacon Heights landfill in Beacon Falls; Solvents Recovery Services of New England, a Southington-based company; and Laurel Park landfill in Naugatuck.

The sites were targeted for clean up after a consultation with DEP. "Other sites in the state are still being investigated and may be added at a later date," DEP officials said.

The DEP said Yaworski Lagoon received industrial wastes from the 1960s until 1972. "Although it (Yaworski Lagoon) is near the Quinnaug River, no adverse water quality impacts have been measured on the river," the DEP said. "Because of its isolated location, there is no danger to drinking water supplies."

"The lagoon is in the process of being stabilized and closed as a result of a DEP order."

Clean up will require the lagoon to be "dewatered" — covered with material of low permeability to prevent rainwater leaching through to industrial wastes and maintaining the cover in good condition for 30 years.

The Beacon Heights landfill was an open dump for more than 50 years prior to its closure in 1979, the DEP said.

"It received an unknown amount of industrial waste during this time from a wide variety of industries," the agency said. "No contamination of potable water supplies has been identified from this source as yet."

The DEP said Solvents Recovery Services distills used solvents for re-use and a lagoon in operation from 1955 to 1987 contaminated the groundwater in the area.

"The company has agreed to restore groundwater quality to the standards consistent with the state's groundwater classification system," the DEP said.

OPEC facing a price war

VIENNA, Austria (UPI) — Dispirited OPEC oil ministers returned home today with their cartel facing a "free-for-all" price war because of failure to agree on how to share the dwindling petroleum market.

The 66th formal meeting of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries crumbled Monday after ministers could not agree on any key issue — except a previously agreed decision to keep the base price of crude oil at $34 a barrel.

The only other item agreed on was a cosmetic raising of OPEC's collective ceiling of 17.5 million barrels daily.

Failure by the ministers to solve the crucial problems of production quotas and price differentials during two days of fruitless talks could force a sharp decline in crude petroleum prices, industry experts said.

"Without a production sharing agreement, the base price means nothing," a senior OPEC economist who asked not to be identified said. "It will collapse."

Although the ministers officially raised the cumulative total output to 18.5 million barrels a day, the move was superficial since daily production is currently at 20 million barrels as a result of individual quota violations.

Kuwait oil minister Ali Khalifa Al-Sabah appealed to other countries to cooperate in keeping within the new ceiling. "If we do not keep this in mind, the $34 price will become invalid."

Humberto Calderon Berli, Venezuela's oil minister, said even with the new ceiling, "the problem now is how are we going to distribute it."

One conference source said, "It's going to be a free-for-all."

OPEC President Yahya A. Dikko of Nigeria said failure to agree meant that "we will all have to exercise our sense of responsibility" to cut back the flow of oil into a glutted market and defend the $34 price.

The worldwide recession and price undercutting by nonOPEC producers such as Britain, the United States and Mexico has given the cartel a collective deficit of $18 billion this year.

Whether the situation can be turned around and the $34 price protected depends largely on Saudi Arabia, conference delegates said.

Oil minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani said Saudi Arabia has no intention of abandoning the benchmark price, unless other countries encroach on Saudi markets through overproduction and price slashing.

DeLorean had IRA backing?

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Maverick automaker John DeLorean boasted of a "very tight relationship" with the Irish Republican Army and told a government informant the IRA would help finance a cocaine deal to save his sportscar company, federal papers said.

Assistant U.S. Attorney James Walsh Jr. submitted a sworn affidavit Monday citing statements allegedly made by DeLorean during a Sept. 4 meeting with an unidentified government informant at the L'Enfant Plaza Hotel in Washington.

"DeLorean claimed that the IRA was a partial sponsor of our project" and that the IRA was "our protectors," the affidavit said.

Walsh said the government would not identify the informant to protect him.

British authorities had no comment on the affidavit but one of DeLorean's attorneys said it was "ludicrous" to link his client with the IRA.

Howard Weitzman chastised Walsh for including the allegation in the affidavit and saying the action was "unprofessional" and "sounds to me like he's trying to try the lawsuit now."

DeLorean, 57, was arrested Oct. 19 during a meeting with undercover agents at a hotel near Los Angeles International Airport. He was released on $10 million bail 19 days later. Attorneys last week asked a federal judge to reduce the bond to $500,000 or let him remain free on his own recognizance pending start of his trial April 19.

Walsh, who supervised the investigation that led to DeLorean's arrest, said DeLorean told the informant that the IRA would partially finance the cocaine transaction he was trying to arrange.

The affidavit said DeLorean claimed he maintained a "very tight relationship with the IRA" and said that was the only way his company, located in Belfast, could survive "in the most difficult terrorist area in all of Northern Ireland."

"The statements by DeLorean regarding the IRA were made in the context of a threat that his interests would be protected by the terrorist strength of the IRA," Walsh said.

He said DeLorean also boasted of "an intimate relationship" with the terrorist group and claimed in other taped conversations that "his contact man in the IRA had come into the United States to check on arrangements for the financing of the load of narcotics."

Lebanese talks nearer Sharon recalled to massacre probe

By United Press International

The Israeli commission investigating the Beirut massacre summoned Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon for more questioning amid a flurry of diplomatic activity triggered by his secret peace negotiations with Lebanon.

In the Lebanese Shouf mountains east of Beirut, Christian and Druze Muslim militias battled with rockets and artillery in 11 villages Monday, killing eight people and wounding at least 12 others, security sources said.

In Beirut, U.S. envoy Morris Draper briefed Lebanese President Amin Gemayel Monday on Israel's concession that negotiations with Lebanon need not be held in Jerusalem, which Beirut refuses to recognize as the Israeli capital.

Draper was returning to Israel today, relaying the Lebanese response. Lebanese officials said they expected peace talks within three weeks, but state-run Israel Television said the talks could begin in a few days.

"We really are approaching the point where Lebanon can become a free and independent country," Israel's U.S. Ambassador Moshe Arens said today on ABC's Nightline.

"There is hope that within the next few days we may be able to initiate something (an agreement)," he said.

In Washington, President Reagan was meeting Jordan's King Hussein today in efforts to draw the monarch into negotiations with Israel on Middle East peace. Hussein met with Secretary of State George Shultz on Monday.

U.S. envoy Philip Habib was also attending the talks after returning to Washington Monday from the Middle East. Negotiations on withdrawal of 40,000 Syrians, 10,000 Palestinians and 30,000 Israeli forces from Lebanon.

Hussein is the key to Reagan's Sept. 1 Middle East peace plan calling for a freeze on Jewish settlements on the occupied West Bank and the creation of a self-governing Palestinian entity in the region linked to Jordan.

Gemayel was sending an envoy to the Arab League in Tunis today to explain the expected Israeli-Lebanese talks, which Lebanon's Central News Agency said may take place in Geneva, Switzerland.

A government source in Beirut said the Lebanese Cabinet was expected to approve a negotiating agenda on Wednesday.

In Jerusalem, the commission of inquiry probing the September massacre of hundreds of civilians in two Beirut refugee camps honored a request of a senior army intelligence officer and summoned Sharon for a second appearance.

The defense minister claimed credit for working out a three-page memorandum, not yet initiated by the Lebanese government, that led to the guidelines for talks with Lebanon adopted Sunday by the Israeli Cabinet.

Following the Sharon negotiations, Israel dropped its demand that talks be held in Jerusalem on formal security arrangements, normalized relations and ending the state of war that has existed between the two countries since 1948.

Clark stands, breathes on his own

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Artificial heart recipient Barney Clark stood up, breathed on his own and made jokes in sign language. Doctors hope his next milestone will be to utter his first words since a series of seizures two weeks ago.

Surgeon William DeVries, who performed the operation 19 days ago to give Clark the world's first permanent artificial heart, said he hoped to have his patient talking today and that doctors were looking forward to the day Clark could leave the hospital.

"I think his chances are good of going home," DeVries told reporters Monday. "There seems to be no infection anywhere. In fact, we are taking him off antibiotics."

Doctors planned today to replace a cumbersome respirator tube leading into a tracheotomy slit in Clark's windpipe with a smaller tube that would allow him to cover a small air hole with his finger and speak audibly for the first time since he suffered postoperative seizures two weeks ago.

But DeVries cautioned that Clark was still a "very, very sick man" and the surgeon would not predict how many days or weeks it might take for him to recover enough to move out of the University of Utah Hospital to a specially prepared residence in Salt Lake City.

The 61-year-old retired Des Moines, Wash. dentist had his dying heart replaced with the polyurethane device Dec. 2. He has suffered a series of setbacks including surgery one week ago in which doctors had to reopen his chest and replace a malfunctioning left ventricle — the main pumping chamber of the heart.

The 6-foot-4 Clark put his feet on the floor and stood up without assistance for the first time Monday. He then was helped to a chair near the window of his room where he sat with his wife Tina Loy and looked at the snow-covered Wasatch Mountains.

Krugerrand yule

CRYSTAL LAKE, Ill. (UPI) — Salvation Army worker David Schneider at first did not recognize the five coins that were dropped into the donation bucket.

An anonymous donor dropped the golden disks, South African Krugerrands worth about $2,000, into a Salvation Army collection bucket at a shopping mall. Neither Schneider nor the volunteer working the post knew who did it.

"It's the talk of the Midwest in Salvation Army circles. I couldn't hardly believe it. It's a big plus for Crystal Lake," said Schneider.

"It was almost like throwing diamonds in."

The donation was made Friday.

"We'd like to acknowledge it, so their act is recognized," said Schneider, who added the gift will be especially appreciated this year since the work load for the Salvation Army has gone up due to a sour economy.

Schneider said he did not realize at first what the coins were or their value. After some inquiries, he realized the magnitude of the donation.

Lawyers' greed may aid legal aid

WASHINGTON — One of the great ironies in the revelation that President Reagan's appointees to the Legal Services Corp. have soaked it for exorbitant legal consulting fees is that in their greed or indifference, they probably have helped keep alive the federal agency that Reagan so abhors.

Jack Germond and Jules Witcover
Syndicated columnists

Rather than discrediting the corporation that provides free legal aid to the poor, the Reagan appointees have with their own excesses diverted attention from and hence seriously damaged the president's argument that the corporation is a wasteful boondoggle.

Harvey and another board member, William Olson, are serving as Reagan interim appointees but neither has been confirmed by the Senate, so will be out at the end of this year unless given another interim appointment.

the other interim appointees too, leaving the corporation's future direction in limbo. Because support of the legal services concept in Congress and within the legal establishment has proved to be so strong, the president has backed away from trying to abolish the agency altogether. Instead, he has given interim appointments to individuals who critics claim would so restructure or weaken it as to render it ineffective.

That, indeed, has been the demand of the New Right, which has tried all year to fuel a crusade to "defund the left." ...

HARTFORD (UPI) — The state Supreme Court today rejected separate appeals by a woman convicted of swindling her family and friends in a confidence scheme and a man found guilty of kidnapping and sexual assault.

The high court ruled the failure of a trial judge in 1980 to advise Ricky L. Shockley, then 23, of his right to a jury trial did not merit overturning the subsequent guilty verdict after trial.

An opinion written by Justice Arthur H. Healey, the court said, then Hartford Superior Court Judge Anthony J. Armentano did not make a reversible error when he failed to specifically point out Shockley's options for trial.

choice. He had been acting chief since Sousa's departure.

"I've been trying to get rid of this for some time now," said McCarthy as he handed over the police chief's badge to Trzaskos.

Trzaskos, who came to the state at age 21 after being laid off from a job in New York, has been working for the West Hartford Police Department ever since. He is in charge of 28 men there. He graduated from the University of New Haven in 1976 with a bachelor's degree in criminal justice, and has also completed other police-related training programs.

McCarthy made a strong case for Trzaskos in a letter of introduction to the council.

"In my interviews with him, I find him to be, first and foremost, a professional," he wrote. "Mr. Trzaskos is a deliberate man who will not be led by the seat of his pants."

Chief Reynolds agreed.

"He's the type of guy that will survey the whole problem before he makes a rash move," said Reynolds.

"Then he will take care of the problems."

"I AM AWARE of some problems that may exist, but only from the town manager's point of view," said Trzaskos minutes after the approval came. "I wish to get my own point of view before I make any decisions."

He said he had heard of problems within the department in the areas of training, record-keeping, and enforcement.

A police study, done last year by Police International in Washington, D.C., pointed out problems with staffing and patrolman backup, and found that record-keeping should be improved.

Trzaskos had his own version of the department's needs.

"It seems that the biggest problem in the department right now is organization," he said this morning. "They need a leader and guidance."

Town, police, fact-finder try to break stalemate

Officials from the Manchester police union and the town administration met today with a state-appointed fact-finder in an effort to break the stalemate holding up a new police contract.

It could be several months before fact-finder Harry Purcell issues his non-binding opinion on how to resolve the contract dispute. The town's contract with the police union expired July 30.

"We're starting all over again," police union president Edward Tighe said this morning, a few hours before the 10 a.m. meeting with the fact-finder was scheduled to begin.

Town and union officials reached tentative agreement on a new two-year contract in August. But the agreement was shot down by the police rank and file by an overwhelming vote. Tighe said officers objected to a clause that would have improved patrol officers work schedules, but left unchanged the schedules of detectives and administrative employees.

Tighe said union leaders are prepared to accept smaller wage increases than those awarded to firefighters and public works employees in their contracts, in return for across-the-board scheduling changes that would give more days off to union members.

Assistant Town Manager Steven R. Werbner, the town's chief negotiator, said today that it's impossible to establish a uniform schedule for all police union members, since detectives and administrative workers have different schedules from patrol officers.

He said the town has offered the union a better money package if it agrees to drop the demand for scheduling changes, but the union has refused the offer.

Both the town and the union may appeal the decision of fact-finder Purcell. If appealed, the contract dispute will go to binding arbitration.

HRC to decide on request

The Human Relations Commission tonight will consider a suggestion thought by the town of Manchester to hire a fact-finder on the Board of Directors that the HRC drop its inquiry into the hiring of the assistant town manager.

The HRC will meet at 8 p.m. in the Municipal Building hearing room.

The board of Directors last month encouraged the HRC to discontinue its inquiry. The HRC had asked for more information on the hiring process.

The HRC also had asked the board to rule whether the town administration should turn over information on the applicants — specifically copies of all applicants' resumes, which General Manager

Robert B. Weiss has refused to provide to the commission.

The directors answered by saying they are satisfied that the hiring process was conducted properly and encouraging the HRC to stop its investigation. HRC Chairman Robert A. Faucher said there he was not happy with the directors' response.

In other business, the HRC will review the ordinance that created it. Faucher said today that the review was sparked by remarks made by Arthur L. Green, head of the state Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities, at a seminar cosponsored by the Manchester HRC and the East Hartford Human Rights Commission.

Arthur Rubinstein, pianist, dead at 95

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Polish-American concert pianist Arthur Rubinstein, whose brilliant career spanned eight decades, died in bed at his Geneva home from respiratory problems caused by flu. He was 95.

The doctors said it was a common type of infection like a heavy cold, which has been going around Geneva.

"Miss Annabel Whitestone, Rubinstein's companion, said after the pianist's death on Monday.

Rubinstein, who rarely left his apartment during the past year because of failing health, died in his bed while suffering the breathing problems.

"It was very difficult for him to get around and of course his eyes were also very bad," Miss Whitestone said.

A diminutive 5-foot-8, Rubinstein combined his musical genius with an Epicurean love for life.

Throughout his 80s he continued to give annual programs of concerts. At age 85, he was prevented from speaking at a music festival in Lucerne, Switzerland, only because of surgery for a broken hip.

"He was a natural, born to play the piano," wrote music critic Harold C. Schonberg today in the New York Times. "He gloried in playing the piano. He was an extrovert, an actor, a 'ham' if you will."

Conductor Leonard Bernstein, in a statement released in New York, said "I will always miss Arthur — my perfect playmate, whether playing music or being a joyous companion in the scherzo we call 'civilized living.'"

Irving Kolodin, long-time music editor of the Saturday Review, called Rubinstein "an extremely well-informed, versatile, cultivated and articulate individual. He was one of the great artists of our period."

Rubinstein was honored at the Kennedy Center of the Arts in Washington, D.C., and received by former President Carter at the White House in December 1978.

"I can't complain," he told an interviewer as he approached his 90th birthday. "I have led a beautiful, interesting, busy life."

Born on Jan. 28, 1887, Rubinstein was the seventh child of a well-to-do manufacturer of textile looms. He performed in his first informal concert at age 6 in Warsaw and began studying three years later in Berlin where he gave his first formal performance at 11.

A leading interpreter of Chopin and Rachmaninoff, he was equally at home with Mozart, Beethoven, Brahms and Stravinsky.

Elegy to a deadbeat

By Andy Rooney

He was Hollywood's idea of what a war correspondent should be when I first met him, a kind of James Bond of journalism. He was quick, bright, tough and good-looking in his belted trench coat.

To me, he was one of the Big Guys. He knew the story he was after, and when he'd written it, he'd sell it for a lot of money to the Saturday Evening Post, Collier's or the Reader's Digest.

His name doesn't add anything to the tragedy and I'm not going to use it. The last I heard from him he needed money. He always needed money.

We all have friends who have borrowed and we may have done some of it ourselves, but this man was an all-time, world-class borrower.

He'd borrowed money from everyone he'd ever heard of and he'd touched the best — men like Art Buchwald, Budd Schulberg and Walter Cronkite.

He had different ways of asking for money from different people and he never suggested you were giving him anything.

It was going to pay you back next Thursday. He had sold an article to the Reader's Digest and they'd told him the check was in the mail, so it was just a matter of a few days to tide him over.

His name appears in more than 100 entries in the Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature for articles he wrote for America's most prestigious magazines... but the last entry is one he wrote for Coronet magazine in 1968. It had been downhill ever since.

In the beginning this peckish borrower did things in a big way. He ran up tabs of hundreds of dollars at the best watering places in New York. When he was poor, he didn't mingle with the poor people. He went to the 21 Club and mingled with the rich.

In the beginning he'd ask for loans of $1,000 or $1,500, but in recent years he reduced his demands to $100 or less. The last time he called me was just six weeks ago.

He was suffering from a rare blood disease, he told me, and desperately needed $30 for medicine. It was so like him to make it $30 instead of $25, because it sounded more believable.

I didn't give it to him.

Still fresh in my memory was the time 10 years ago when he'd come to my office with tears streaming down his cheeks.

"Dear Walter," he said, he had a rare eye disease and would I loan him $250 so he could take his son to Boston where there was a doctor who knew how to treat the problem. Too late I'd found out that the story of the ailing son was pure fiction.

Yesterday, I was sitting in the back seat of a car with Walter Cronkite and he pulled a letter out of his pocket.

"Dear Walter," the letter began. "Your friend is dead." The letter mentioned his name. "He died December 1st in the library at 11 East 40th Street or just outside in the cold. Positive identification was made at the City Morgue."

"I've known him for the past five years," the letter continued. "I'm a bartender at McAnn's on Third Avenue."

Over the past five years he would speak about his World War II days with you. He was quite good at telling anecdotes. We spent many hours talking about many subjects under the sun. He brightened up many days which would have been otherwise boring for me. I thought you would want to know.

The bartender Bill Bryson's letter to Walter was a warmer and more sincere obituary than anyone else could have written.

"I consider it a privilege to have known him," Bill wrote.

"Unfortunately, I met him in the twilight of his life. He died of a rare disease, the name of which I can't even pronounce."

Highland park critics say:

'Attila the Pun' is a 4-star winner

By Nancy Thompson Herald Reporter

Perhaps you think today's children, raised on Sesame Street and Pac Man, are too sophisticated to be attracted by books. After all, can a worn-out bear and his 10 hunny jars compete with the thrill of trying to climb the ladder to escape Donkey Kong?

Yes. Don't believe it? The Highland Park Critics Club, a group of sixth grade students that meet weekly in the school library, has reviewed all of the new books at the Mary Cheney Library this fall. They summarized the books and rated them from none to four stars.

HERE ARE SOME of their favorites, highly recommended by these critical readers for Christmas giving to your favorite child:

"Attila the Pun" by Daniel Pinkwater — four stars.

According to a summary by Neil Bousquet, Attila the Pun is about two boys who run a restaurant called the "Magic Moscow" and a man named Lamont Panumba who casts a magic spell. The spell brings the ghost of Attila the Hun's brother, Attila the Pun, up from the dead. Attila is driving everyone crazy, but finally they let Attila tell his jokes in front of the crowd at a nightclub. After this, everything turns out fine.

THE CRITICS recommended the book for students in grades three through six. Their comments included: "very funny, pleasurable to read," "easy to understand," and "you'll laugh your pants off."

"A Word From Our Sponsor of the Month" by Julie Angell, four stars.

Chrissy L. Skinner's summary says, "It all started when Arthur's brother thought a toy called 'Muscle Man' was rich. While Arthur washes... his brother's new magic mug's color starts to fade. With a lead-poisoned mug on the loose, Arthur's father can't even stop the mug from being sold. What will Arthur and his friends do now?"

The critics recommended the 140-page book for grades four through seven. It is especially good for kids who love detective work. It also "shows you what good science classes can teach," they said.

"How to Travel with Grow-ups" by Elizabeth Bridgman, four stars.

"This is a story about a family touring Europe. It tells you what to do and what not to do on a vacation with kids. It will cheer a boy or girl who has the blues." Mark Longchamps and Matt Clough said in their summary.

"Stanley Longchamps is (or at least was) a regular boy... until a bulletin board hanging over his bed fell on him while he was sleeping. Being flat can be useful... But everyone is making fun of Stanley because he's flat. Will Stanley be flat forever?" Neil Impelluso said in the summary.

"THIS BOOK is good to read to grades kindergarten through two and good for grades two to four to read themselves. It is a 'very funny, adventuresome' imaginative and creative tall tale' with 'many laughter-filled pages,' the critics said.

"Elzworth and the Cats from Mars" by Patience Brewster, three stars.

Neil Bousquet wrote: "A cat named Elzworth had a dream about grade students that meets weekly out to be true and he is given a spaceship and hat. This turns out to be one exciting experience for Elzworth."

"The CRITICS recommend this for grades one through three, calling it 'fun to read' and 'a sweet colorful book with real-life pictures on each page.'"

Many thanks to the Santa's helpers who wrote the book reviews, including — in addition to those who wrote the summaries — Kerry Davis and Renee Fournier.

And remember, good books make good gifts.

Here's an alternative to video: books

By Nancy Thompson Herald Reporter

Of all the gifts I've received to this day, these two books made the biggest impression on me.

"Charlotte's Web" and "The World of Pooh" by A. A. Milne.

M.I.T. over the summer to be retrained as electrical engineers. Except for the occasional college commercial, all of the advertisements advise little ones to request and big ones to give video games.

I'll leave out my lecture on the evils of video games. Let's just say that the name starts with "V" and that rhymes with "T" and that stands for trouble. I'll even admit that my vehemence against the games is directly related to my total lack of the hand-eye coordination necessary to be successful at them.

"THIS IS THE season for merry gentlemen to be dancing down holly-decked halls, so I won't dwell on the negative aspects of sitting in front of a TV screen for hours destroying cities and eliminating aliens.

I WILL INSTEAD offer a positive alternative: books.

When I was a child — back in the days when televisions received three network stations and educational TV and video games were "Jeopardy" and "Password" — the only items I remember really wanting for Christmas, from among the hundreds I must have requested, were books. Two in particular, in two different years: "Charlotte's Web" by E. B. White and "The World of Pooh" by A. A. Milne.

"Charlotte's Web" — the story of the spider who saves a pig's life by some clever public relations written in her web — may have even influenced my career choice by showing me the potential power of words — even those written on air.

And books do not have to be asked for to be appreciated. The first book I received as a Christmas present — "Green Eggs and Ham" by Dr. Seuss — was definitely not on my list. But Santa knew what he was doing when he left it under the tree.

"The Messiah" by George Frideric Handel. There is probably no other choral work whose performance is guaranteed to fill a hall with an audience. It is a seemingly indispensable part of the Christmas season. So it was Sunday evening when a crowd of ample number filled the sanctuary of South United Methodist Church to hear a sampling from this baroque masterpiece.

Soloists Barbara Adams Pierce, soprano; Deborah Benson, alto; Peter Harvey, tenor, and Kenneth Holton, baritone joined the Manchester Symphony Chorus and Orchestra under the baton of Dr. Jack Heller for the performance.

THE CONCERT OPENED with a performance of "The Magnificat," composed in 1723 by Johann Sebastian Bach. The work opens, as is Bach's custom, with a movement involving the complete choral and orchestral ensemble. The basic Bach orchestra of pairs each of flutes, oboes, and bassoons, strings, and continuo (bass instruments, organ, and harpsichord for this performance) is augmented in this work by three high trumpets and tympani.

"I consider it a privilege to have known him," Bill wrote.

One wish

If you had one wish what would it be?
 Would you wish for good grades forever, A's instead of D's?
 If you had one wish what would you wish for?
 Would you wish to be tall instead of a runt?
 If you had one wish what would you wish for?
 Would you wish for money, or happiness, or friends galore?
 Did you ever think about being granted one wish?
 Would you use it on that adorable boy you've been loving to kiss?
 If I had one wish I know what I would wish for.
 I'd wish to be granted at least 10 wishes more.

Memories never die

My dear friend you died today,
 you're resting now, in peace you will stay.
 We will never forget the love you always had to give,
 you were so full of life, you wanted to live.
 This is only good by until we meet again,
 I know when we do I will love you even more, my friend.

So many tears have passed my eyes,
 you are gone now, but your memory will never die.

You kissed the wind

You kissed the wind,
 I wonder why.
 You kissed the wind,
 I stand and cry.
 I never thought you'd go this far,
 No one thought, but here you are.
 Questions,
 Answers,
 Never clear.
 We all thought that you'd be here,
 We didn't know but yet we did.
 Why didn't we is left unsaid.
 You kissed the wind,
 With a hard good-bye.
 You kissed the wind,
 Why did you die?

How much longer?

I have dreams that never come true.
 My fantasies never come to be.
 My hopes never come to pass.
 Life is a reality of whose pain I am deadened to.
 Acceptance is all too easy.
 Striving to be is what one must do.
 Life is so simple so why the agony of living it.
 All too short and fleeting is each special moment.
 Like the sands of time we can never turn back.
 A desert of eternity stretches far beyond.
 Each step becomes more difficult.
 Each problem more complex than the last.
 Each different situation is harder to cope with.
 Walking ceaselessly in every direction, traveling in circles, getting no where ever.
 Living with lies, living on false imagination, grasping at a gossamer strand of courage barely there.
 How much longer can this travesty continue?
 How much longer before the thread of life breaks to send me tumbling down into an abyss of loneliness.

CHARGER BALL CARRIER CHUCK MUNCIE stopped short of gain by Bengals' Jim Leclair

Fouts rewrites NFL record book

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The Cincinnati Bengals were no match for San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts Monday night and neither was the NFL record book.

Fouts helped establish three NFL records in pacing the Chargers to a 50-34 victory over the Bengals.

"No quarterback has ever played on an offensive team like this one," Fouts said. "I have great receivers and an excellent line to protect me."

Fouts threw for 435 yards, the only time an NFL player has had back-to-back 400-yard passing performances. Fouts passed for 450 yards in the Chargers' 41-37 win over San Francisco Dec. 11.

Fouts and Bengal quarterback Ken Anderson combined for 66 pass completions for 883 net yards in the air to break the former NFL total completions record of 65, set in the Chargers-49ers shootout, and the NFL record for net yards passing of 834 set in a 1962 game between Philadelphia and St. Louis.

"They scored 50 points, what else can I say," said Bengal coach Forrest Gregg. "We are a better team now than we were last year. The Chargers are better right now than they have ever been."

The previous time the teams met was for the AFC championship last year and the wind chill factor was a numbing 50 degrees below zero at Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium. The Bengals advanced to the Super Bowl with a 27-7 victory Monday night's game was played under considerably different conditions. Temperatures were in the mid-50s and a light breeze swept off the Pacific Ocean.

"This was a very emotional game," said Fouts. "We came in

'No quarterback has ever played on an offensive team like this one. I have great receivers and an excellent line to protect me.'
 Dan Fouts of San Diego

with revenge on my mind and we know we were playing a quality team, probably the best we've played all year."

Wes Chandler caught 10 passes for 260 yards and a pair of touchdowns, one of them a 66-yard halfback option loss from running back Chuck Muncie.

Chargers running back James Brooks scored three touchdowns, the longest a 48-yard run in the third quarter.

Cincinnati scored first when Jim Brech kicked a 19-yard field goal 3:41 into the game. Muncie and Chandler combined less than two minutes later to give San Diego a 7-3 lead.

The Bengals responded with an 80-yard drive capped by a 12-yard dash into the end zone by Anderson to take the lead 10-7. Cincinnati opened a 17-7 lead midway through the second quarter when Bengal linebacker Bo Harris picked off a Fouts pass and raced 62 yards for the touchdown.

But the Chargers cut the deficit to 17-14 late in the half when Brooks ran 17 yards for a touchdown. Following a 6-yard Anderson pass to Chris Collinsworth to put Cincinnati ahead 24-14, with 28 seconds remaining in the half, the Chargers got close enough for Roll Benrice to kick a 43-yard field goal, with 1 second left and cut the Bengal lead to 24-17.

The Chargers took the second-half kickoff and drove 82 yards to the 1-yard line. Muncie sprinted around right end to tie the score at 24-24.

Charger defensive tackle put San Diego in front for good a few seconds later when he sacked Anderson in his end zone for a safety that made the score 26-24.

Gregg said the safety was "the turning point of the game" for his 5-2 club.

Fouts hit Chandler a minute later for a 38-yard touchdown that gave San Diego a 33-24 advantage.

"Fouts was just tremendous," said Charger coach Don Coryell. "Wes Chandler just has to be the best wide receiver in the league."

The Bengals cut the Chargers lead to 33-27 at 7:53 of the quarter when Brech capped a 77-yard drive with a 27-yard field goal.

The Chargers scored two minutes later when Brooks burst up the middle for a 48-yard score and extended the San Diego lead to 40-27.

Anderson struck back, throwing 17 yards to tight end M.L. Harris to narrow the deficit to 40-34.

Benrice kicked a 26-yard field goal and Brooks scored from 1 yard out to round out the scoring.

"We have five wins now," Coryell said. "Most people think five wins will get you in the playoffs."

Rangers get freak goals

Meyer's feelings better after wins

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — Two weeks ago, Ron Meyer was an unhappy coach after a sloppy New England loss to Chicago. The Patriots, he said, "are not a very good football team."

Now, after successive shutouts and coming off their best outing of the year, the Patriots are one win from the playoffs.

And that surprises the coach, who'd like nothing better than to have his two-week-old diagnosis proved faulty.

"A good football team is like a green apple on a tree," the coach said Monday after the Pats' 16-0 whitewash Sunday of the Seattle Seahawks. "It's not long until it starts getting rotten."

"Two weeks ago I said we were a bad team. Now we have the opportunity to prove me wrong. We're still not a dominant football team." The Patriots dominated the Seahawks, controlling the ball for 42 minutes. This is exactly what Meyer wanted. He had hoped the offense would use the clock so his young defense wouldn't be tested so often.

"Quite honestly, this is what we envisioned before the season — a team that controls the ball without turning it over and a defense that plays good field position and getting turnovers," he said. "The defense is obviously getting more play good defense when you're out on the field 18 minutes. We've cut down drastically on mental mistakes and that's most important."

The Patriots' next foe is Pittsburgh, which has looked poor in dropping back-to-back games to Buffalo and Cleveland. New England's last two opponents, the Steelers and Bills, are both AFC teams hoping to become one of eight conference playoff teams.

"The nice thing about the Super Bowl tournament is that maybe, unlike in previous years, we don't have to depend on anyone else," the coach said. "But we can't try to just win once. We have to approach it like we have two football games to win. I like to have high expectations for each game."

As for the Steelers, the coach said he hadn't seen the films and didn't think the Patriots would be able to catch Pittsburgh by surprise "because they're a veteran-dominated team and No. 12 (Terry Bradshaw) always seems to rally the troops. I still consider Bradshaw the finest quarterback in pro football."

'Honor' to coach Alabama

Ray Perkins disagrees he's asking for trouble

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (UPI) — New York Giants coach Ray Perkins says he disagrees with people who say he's asking for trouble by replacing Bear Bryant, the most successful football coach in college history.

Bryant announced last week that he is retiring as coach after the Dec. 29 Liberty Bowl game against Illinois, but will remain the school's athletic director.

In a joint news conference Monday with Bryant, Perkins said, "For the most part, coaches that followed legends in the history of the game have not had success. The one thing I can achieve — the thing I think we will achieve — is following the greatest coach there has ever been in history, and successfully following that man."

Perkins told reporters it was an "honor" to be able to coach Alabama, since he spent the first five years of his marriage at the school and his two sons were both born in Tuscaloosa's Druid City Hospital.

He also announced that Crismon Tide assistant head coach Ken Donahue, who has been at Alabama since 1964, would remain with the team as defensive coordinator, but said no other staff decisions had been made.

"I intend to talk with the staff and find out which ones are interested in staying," he said.

The former star receiver for Alabama in the mid-1960s confirmed he had talked informally with Jacksonville State head coach Jim Fuller, a former Alabama teammate, about a job on the Tide staff.

There have been rumors that Fuller, who coached the Gamecocks to the Gulf South Conference championship this year, will replace Moore as Alabama's offensive coordinator.

"Jimmy and I are close friends. We have talked in a very casual way, as far as that possibility," Perkins said. "I told him I don't know why he would want to leave because he has a great situation."

Bryant said he hadn't thought a lot about what it will feel like to coach his final game in the Dec. 29 Liberty Bowl against Illinois.

"I don't know what it will be like next fall, either," he said.

The coach said school officials had not intended to announce Perkins' hiring along with notice of his retirement last week, but word leaked

Carter out in job quest at NC State

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Holy Cross Coach Rick Carter is expected to be out of the running for the head football coaching job at North Carolina State because his current employer will not let him out of a long-term contract.

The Raleigh Times said Monday that Carter met with Holy Cross officials but was unsuccessful in obtaining a release from a five-year contract that has three years remaining.

"He (Carter) is under contract here and he will be here next year," said Holy Cross President the Rev. John E. Brooks. "I had a talk with him earlier this morning."

Carter was reportedly the leading candidate for the job to replace Monte Kiffin, who was forced to resign Dec. 1. At least three coaches considered for the job, including Tulsa's John Cooper, removed themselves from consideration for the post since screening began.

Cooper was offered the job. The coach said school officials had not intended to announce Perkins' hiring along with notice of his retirement last week, but word leaked

"I haven't seen him since he met with Father Brooks," said Holy Cross Athletic Director Ron Perry. "I expect he's cooling off."

Denver running back Gerald White does backflip in end zone after scoring touchdown Sunday in second quarter against Kansas City. Score helped Broncos post 37-16 triumph.

Otherwise the Giants might have won yesterday," said Bryant. New York lost to Washington 15-14.

He said he thought Illinois had a good football team, but he was more worried about his own team than the Fighting Illini.

"I don't know how we've done (in practice) because we've had other things for the players to think about — exams, Christmas," said Bryant.

"The best thing about Saturday's practice was they were enjoying it. They were making some noise."

Tribe hockey skein snapped

Two quick goals didn't prove to be a big deterrent for homecoming Watertown High as it came from behind for an 8-4 win over Manchester High in non-conference ice hockey action Monday evening in Watertown.

The loss was the first after three wins for the Indian ice team while the victory was the first for the home club after a pair of reversals.

Manchester's next action is Wednesday evening against Glastonbury High at the Hartford Arena in an 8:40 start.

"We came out like a house on fire with the two quick goals," said Indian Coach Wayne Horton, "but they then coughed us. They were more hungry coming in at 0 and 2. We fell back a little bit and never got the edge back."

Villonis and Todd Gregory had goals in the middle session for Watertown, sandwiched around Dan Duff's first goal of the season at the 7:59 mark.

Dean Gustafson, with an unassisted goal, made it 4-4 with 4:42 left but Villonis and Tom Spag responded for Watertown for the final reading.

Manchester had 23 shots against 32 for Watertown. Pat McNamara started in goal for Manchester and was replaced in the third period by sophomore back-up Ian Blood. "McNamara took a shot off his right knee in warm-up and I could see it did hamper his movements a little bit," Horton said.

Chambers, Gustafson, Dan Senkow and Mark Keith played well for the Silk Towners.

Big Ten means trouble for Marquette to date

By Fred Lief
UPI Sports Writer

The Big Ten means Big Trouble for Marquette.

The Warriors, a traditional Midwest power, have lost two games this season, both courtesy of the Big Ten. The first came in an 87-66 blowout at Iowa. The next indignity came Monday night with Minnesota storming to a 104-66 victory. It was the Warriors' worst defeat since a 100-63 loss to Wichita State in 1964.

"You can't feel sorry for yourself," said Marquette coach Hank Raymond, whose club is 4-2. "We've played well so far this year but against two very good ballclubs, we've been pretty ineffective."

Randy Brewer, Minnesota's 7-foot-3 center, scored 23 points and blocked 7 shots. There was a strong supporting cast with Marc Wilson finishing with 16 points and Tommy Davis and Jim Petersen adding 14 each. Terrell Schlund led Marquette with 17 points and Glenn Rivers, one of the nation's top scorers, was held to 6.

Minnesota, 5-1, bolted to a 45-32 halftime lead, limiting Brewer to 6 points. But that changed in a hurry behind 20 points by Leroy Combs, 11 of 11 shooting and adding 14 rebounds to help Alabama raise its record to 7-0. Harry Kelly had 20 points and 15 rebounds for Texas Southwestern.

In tournament play in Toledo, Ohio, Ken Epperson scored 20 points and Toledo rolled past Vermont 82-55 in the opener of the Blade-Glass City Classic. Oklahoma State, first-half deficit to win its seventh in a row. The Bruins opened the second half by outscoring LSU 17-0. Leonard Mitchell of the Tigers scored 18 points with just 4 in the second half.

At Columbia, Mo., Steve Stanovich scored 25 points as unbeaten Missouri won its seventh straight. Missouri, troubled by zone defenses, pulled away in the last four minutes. Gus Rulph had 23 points for Tennessee-Martin.

At Tusculoo, Ala., Bobby Lee Hurt scored 25 points on 11-of-11 shooting and grabbed 14 rebounds to help Alabama raise its record to 7-0. Harry Kelly had 20 points and 15 rebounds for Texas Southwestern.

Names in the news

Bobby Unser

NEW YORK (UPI) — Giving family considerations priority over a desire to continue auto racing professionally, three-time Indianapolis 500 winner Bobby Unser announced his retirement Monday.

Unser, 46, who recently announced his intention to return to driving in 1983, said the decision to retire was prompted by thoughts of his family and close friends.

"This is the hardest decision I've ever made," said Unser, who made the announcement with Pat Patrick, the President of Patrick Racing, Inc. "I was really excited about driving for my good friends, team owner Pat Patrick and team manager, Jim McGee."

Wally English

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Wally English, who is leaving the pro ranks to become Tulane University's football coach, is optimistic about building a successful program and has set his sights on national prominence.

"I think there's a tremendous opportunity that exists here for a football program to be successful," English said. "I think there is a great potential to be a nationally known football team."

Pete Falcone

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Atlanta Braves, who have been searching high and low for a left-handed starter, Monday signed free agent Pete Falcone to a two-year contract.

The Braves earlier this month tried to land free-agent pitcher Floyd Bannister, but the pitcher signed with the Chicago White Sox. The Braves were one of five teams to select negotiating rights to Falcone in last month's re-entry draft of free agents.

Trio of deflection goals for Rangers

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Rangers got a little help from an unexpected source Monday night — a trio of Penguins.

Mark Pavelich, Mike Allison and Bob McClanahan were credited with goals during a 1-3 span of the first period — the goals deflecting off Pittsburgh defencemen — and the Rangers made the lead hold up for a 3-1 triumph over the Penguins.

Their first three shots went off our guys," said Pittsburgh coach Ed Johnston. "We played good. We outplayed them and we came up with nothing. We played a solid game and we got beat 6-3. But I was pleased with the way we came back."

After the Rangers jumped to their 3-0 lead just 4:39 into the game, the Penguins fought back, added by their power play.

At 15:01, with Robbie Flores serving an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty, Randy Carlyle scored to make it 3-1. In the second period, the Penguins narrowed the gap to 3-2 when, with Dave Maloney off for roughing, Pat Graham scored his first goal of the season — a 45-foot shot that went between the legs of Pittsburgh goaltender Steve Weeks.

"I think we got a little overconfident," said Pavelich of the Rangers' early lead. "We slowed the game down and let them back in. I think we gave up a little in the second period but we finally took over in the third period."

McClanahan agreed.

"We scored three times on three shots. That can have an adverse effect on you," he said. "It seems too easy and then you get up a little. We let them get back with their power play. We took some penalties we could have avoided, but we knew we had to play harder later in the game."

Wilkins replaces Dantley and paces Jazz over Kings

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Jeff Wilkins replaced injured Adrian Dantley and led Utah Jazz to a 119-117 overtime victory over Kansas City that led the Kings with plenty of regrets.

"Let a few guys rest and the Jazz retained the momentum," Kings coach Pat Riley said. "I think we were a little overconfident."

He said he learned his team about feeling overconfident with the NBA's leading scorer on the sidelines.

"I told our guys before the game that when you have somebody out, that someone will step in, and tonight it was Wilkins," said Fitzsimmons.

Wilkins scored 10 unanswered points to cut a 12-point gap in the fourth quarter, then contributed six of 11 points in overtime. He finished with 35 points, exceeded only by the Kings' Eddie Johnson with 39.
