Sudan: Libya is threatening

KHARTOUM, Sudan (UPI) — Sudan charged Friday that Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy was massing troops and warplanes along the Libyan-Sudanese border and announced the arrest of a group of Libyan-backed conspirators.

"Sudanese troops and security forces were, and still are, fully prepared to confront any aggression that may be carried out by the Libyan regime against Sudan," the state-run Omdurman Radio said in a broadcast quoted by the Cairo-based Middle East News Agency.

The announcement was the first Sudanese confirmation of U.S. reports earlier in the week of a Libyan build-up against Sudan, and came as Sudanese President Gaafar Numery and Chadian President Hissene Habre declared they were ready to combat "subversive" acts by neighboring African regimes.

Habre said Thursday he was determined to expel Libyan troops occupying his nation's northern territory.

The Sudanese official said the build-up was taking place along the Sudanese border and at the Al-Kufra oasis, north of the Libyan-Sudanese border about 100 miles from Egypt.

The Omdurman Radio broadcast said Sudanese authorities uncovered an "organization of revolutionary committees, whose members were trained in theories of the Green Book and in subversive operations."

The "Green Book" is a pamphlet authored by Khadafy expounding his theory of government.

The report said those arrested made "full confessions that made it possible for Sudanese security forces to arrest other members of the organization who had infiltrated into Sudan."

Reagan administration officials denied that the busy movement of U.S. officials and the reassignment of the AWACS and the Nimitz were in response to Libyan military build-up against the Sudan and Chad.

Assistant Secretary of Defense Francis West arrived in Egypt, where he will be joined Saturday by Lt. Gen. Robert Kingston, the commander of the United States Rapid Deployment Force which is designed to protect U.S. oil supplies and allies in the Middle East.

The United States has dispatched four AWACS surveillance planes to Egypt and the aircraft carrier Nimitz to Mediterranean waters off Libya, Egypt and Sudan, which share a common border, are strong U.S. allies.

Two Libyan aircraft approached the Nimitz earlier this week but turned back when the aircraft carrier launched F14 fighters to intercept them, a Pentagon official said.

Libya's state-run JANA news agency charged the AWACS were jamming Libyan civilian communications and said the U.S. military moves might be part of a plot to give the United States an excuse to invade Libya.

The Middle East News Agency quoted a Sudanese official as saying the Libyan build-up included mechanized infantry units, fighter planes and long-range bombers "directed against Sudan."

The Sudanese official said the build-up was taking place along the Sudanese border and at the Al-Kufra oasis, north of the Libyan-Sudanese border about 100 miles from Egypt.

Auto squeeze

Claude Farmer, a retired Salinas, Calif., policeman, stares at his car after another landed on it in a hotel parking lot just as and his wife were walking toward it Friday. Alvarez Policarpio, 37, of Salinas, escaped injury when his car blew a wheel, ran over a divider strip and iceplant and sailed end-over-end before landing upside-down on Farmer's car of the Town House Quality Inn. Policarpio apologized for landing on his car, Farmer said.

White House tried to delay plane report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House unsuccessfully sought to delay a network report that President Reagan had dispatched an aircraft carrier and four AWACS radar planes to discourage a Libyan attack on Sudan, officials said Friday.

National security adviser William Clark called Ed Fousy, chief of the ABC News Washington bureau, Wednesday after learning the network was about to broadcast the exclusive report, which he considered "inaccurate," a White House official said.

Clark told Fousy he would "appreciate it if the network would hold off for 24 hours," the official said.

The official said Clark believed his request "was in the national interest" but "made it clear he was making no demand." He merely asked them to consider the sensitivity of the information, the official said.

Administration officials have since indicated that the Airborne Warning and Control System planes were dispatched to Egypt and the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Nimitz left its position off Lebanon to make a pass near the Gulf of Sidra off Libya because of reports that Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy had massed troops near the Sudanese border.

Despite what one network source described as the "full-court press" by the administration, ABC executives decided to go ahead with the report.

The White House official said ABC called Clark's deputy, Robert McFarlane, to say that someone else had had it and that they had considered the sensitivity and would go with it.

ABC said it already had delayed broadcasting its story one day at the request of Pentagon sources. McWehly gave the report on the network's 6:30 p.m. EST news Wednesday and CBS and NBC matched it in newscasts later Wednesday night.

Reagan, asked about the ABC report at his nationally broadcast news conference 90 minutes later, said there had been "no naval movement" by U.S. forces off Libya's coast but that the United States and Egypt regularly conduct joint military exercises. An aide said later the Nimitz was on a separate exercise.

Fousy said Clark called him after failing to reach ABC News President Rooney Arledge. "The White House was unhappy with the story and... he asked us to delay it. Not cancel it, delay it," Fousy said.

"They came in with a full court press to get (ABC) to stop it," a network source said. "They were extremely upset."

Knowledgeable sources suggested the administration might have wanted to delay the report to give the Nimitz time to move away from the area. The Nimitz left the area late Wednesday.

Africans meet, hit Khadafy

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — The Organization of African Unity recommended Friday that Libya be scrapped at the site of a twice-postponed summit of African leaders in a blow to Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy.

The emergency meeting of representatives from 12 OAU member nations was held against a background of sharpening tensions in North Africa where Libyan forces were reported massing on the border of Chad and the Sudan.

The meeting, attended by seven heads of state and five cabinet level officials from radical and moderate states, decided to recommend that the third attempt to hold the 19th OAU summit take place in the Ethiopian capital of Addis Ababa in either May or June.

The permanent headquarters of the OAU is located at Addis Ababa and is considered by OAU members to be "neutral ground."

Conference sources said the recommendation would probably be put to African leaders at the non-aligned summit in India next month. Most OAU members are also members of the non-aligned group.

The committee meeting was called to smooth over two major issues that have hamstrung the OAU over the past year, Chad and the western Sahara.

The two problems caused the collapse of the previous two attempts at the summit in Tripoli, Libya in July and November, blocking Khadafy's taking over the chairmanship of the OAU from Kenyan President Daniel arap Moi.

The leader of the host country for the summit normally assumes the chairmanship.

The July summit fell apart when Morocco led a boycott over the seating of the Polisario guerrilla front contesting Morocco for control of the former Spanish colony of the western Sahara.

The Polisario agreed to stay away from Tripoli, but that summit collapsed because Libya refused to seat Hissene Habre's pro-Western Chad delegation.

The final communique issued by the committee Friday gave no indication that it had resolved these issues through compromise or that the third summit attempt would actually take place.

Merry Christmas

HARTFORD (UPI) — The state got a belated Christmas present Friday when it reported $140 million collected in sales taxes in December, slightly higher than the 10.3 percent increase forecast for the month.

"I certainly was hoping for it and not expecting it, but we'll take it and be very happy," said state budget chief Anthony Milano.

But, Milano added, "Although we feel good about it, I'm not ready to declare that this could reduce the current deficit" of $55 million.

BRITAIN AND NORWAY SLASH OIL PRICES BY $3.00 PER BARREL TO $30.50

By United Press International

Britain and Norway slashed their crude oil prices Friday, prompting worried Arab oil producers to call an emergency meeting to discuss what was expected to be a new round of global oil price reductions.

The state-run British National Oil Corporation cut the price of Britain's crude exports, which average 2.2 million barrels a day, by $3 to $30.50 a barrel.

The new rates mean Britain's North Sea oil is $3.50 a barrel cheaper than the OPEC bench-

Britain, Norway cut prices for crude oil

The United States, Egypt and the Soviet Union had already cut their prices after OPEC's summit meeting failed to agree on pricing schedules and quotas in Geneva, Switzerland, last month.

In the Middle East, the Qatar news agency said Arab nations would hold "important" consultations under the auspices of the Gulf Cooperation Council within the next few days to discuss the price cuts.

The Council, set up in Abu Dhabi in May 1981, groups Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Bahrain and the Sultanate of Oman.

EPA files open

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration agreed Friday night to give House committee members full access to toxic waste enforcement files that had been blocked by Environmental Protection Agency chief Anne Gorsuch.

Under the compromise worked out in a four-hour Capitol Hill negotiating session, members of the House Public Works Committee will get full access to documents that had previously been denied Congress, congressional and administration negotiators announced.

The announcement was made by Rep. Elliott Levitas, D-Ga., chairman of the House Public Works oversight subcommittee that subpoenaed the files. Deputy Attorney General Edward Schmitt and White House counsel Fred Fielding.

The House voted Dec. 16 to hold Mrs. Gorsuch in contempt of Congress for refusing to turn over the documents to the Levitas subcommittee. She cited executive privilege and orders from President Reagan not to yield.

Levitas said the compromise "would make further proceedings under the contempt citation unnecessary."

The committee is investigating whether the EPA mismanaged and showed political favoritism in the $1.6 billion Superfund program to clean up the nation's worst toxic waste dumps.

Levitas said the files on enforcement of the law might be turned over as early as next week and that access would be granted committee members on Capitol Hill — not at EPA headquarters as had been discussed earlier.

"We have just signed a memorandum of understanding which I think is an historic document," Levitas told reporters.

"It is an agreement which fully satisfies our vital needs for conducting a thorough investigation of EPA's toxic waste cleanup program, he said.

Schmitt said Reagan approved the compromise at the White House.

Mrs. Gorsuch will take time out to get married Saturday. Mrs. Gorsuch, who is divorced, will marry Robert Burford, director of the Interior Department's Bureau of Land Management, in suburban Alexandria, Va.

The chairman of two of the six House subcommittees probing the EPA held a news conference to charge the agency mismanaged Superfund cleanup funds and called for an independent audit by the General Accounting Office.

Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., said a Feb. 11 draft audit report by the EPA inspector general shows "mismanagement of the Superfund monies is becoming a very serious problem."

"Based on a quick review of 10 cleanup contracts audited, the inspector general found that $1,348,650 had been erroneously claimed by contractors and improperly charged to Superfund," said Synar.

News Briefing

Suspected spy arrested

BOON, West Germany (UPI) — Police arrested the suspected head of the Soviet KGB spy network in West Germany, snaring him as he tried to buy a decoding machine used by West German intelligence, authorities said Friday.

Gennadiy Batsachev, 42, a Soviet trade official, was arrested Thursday as he met a West German double agent in the crowded square in front of the cathedral in Cologne, 15 miles northwest of Bonn.

West German agents moved in and grabbed Batsachev after the double agent handed him technological information in the field of electronics — secret information on the decoding machine used by West German agents, a Justice ministry spokesman said.

Batsachev had been tailed by agents of the Federal Criminal Office, West Germany's equivalent of the FBI, since he joined the 85-member Soviet trade mission in Cologne in mid-1981 as a computer expert, an Interior Ministry spokesman said.

Agents were put on his trail because he was believed to be the head of the Soviet KGB agents in West Germany, the spokesman said.

Reporter with rebels?

AGUILAR, El Salvador (UPI) — An American reporter and two Swedish journalists who disappeared five days ago in an area of heavy fighting probably are traveling with leftist guerrillas, government soldiers said Friday.

Michael Lujan, 30, of Bloomington, Ind., a freelance writer for the Dallas Morning News, and Jens Rydstrom, 27, and Tom Thulin, 22, of Sweden's Dagbladet, left their hotel Monday, telling the manager they would be gone several days.

National guardsmen near Aguilar, 21 miles north of San Salvador, said the reporters' rented car was found Tuesday by peasants after the newsmen left on an isolated road, apparently to travel with rebels controlling the area.

An Aguilar national guard lieutenant Thursday said the "gringos are in the mountains," referring to the guerrilla camp on the slopes of the nearby Guazapa volcano.

Dynamics biggest contractor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — General Dynamics Corp. received $5.9 billion worth of defense contracts in 1982, heading the list of 18 companies that each did more than $1 billion in business with the Defense Department, the Pentagon's annual report said Friday.

McDonnell Douglas Corp. was second with $5.6 billion in contracts and United Technologies Corp. of Hartford, third with $4.2 billion, the Pentagon's statistics said.

General Dynamics, with headquarters in Fort Worth, Texas, builds the F-16 fighters, nuclear-powered missile and attack submarines, the M-60 tank, the Tomahawk sea-launched cruise missile and other major weapons.

House full of sewage

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — A sanitation crew attempting to clear a blocked sewer line evidently hooked up a pump the wrong way and managed to pump Mark Timothy O'Guin's house full of raw sewage.

"I'd have been lucky if I'd had a fire, then the insurance would have covered it," O'Guin moaned Friday.

O'Guin's house was flooded with up to eight inches of sewage Wednesday when the sanitation crew tried to clear the line. Sewer sewage also was pumped into the home of O'Guin's neighbor, Don Klutts, but most of it was confined to the bathroom in the Klutts' home.

"Evidently that crew ran the pump the wrong way, pumped it up the line instead of down the line," said O'Guin, an environmental sanitation inspector for the local health department.

Newark tops poverty list

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nearly one of every three people in Newark, N.J., had incomes at or below the poverty level in 1979, giving it the worst poverty record of any large city, Census Bureau experts reported Friday.

At the other end of the income scale — among cities with 100,000 or more people — was Livonia, Mich., reporting just over two people in 100 at or under the poverty line for that year.

According to census data taken in April 1980, 32.3 percent of Newark's 228,000 population reported incomes at the poverty level or lower the previous year.

A decade earlier, the rate in Newark was 22.5 percent. However, the agency said it had not had a chance yet to match all the latest figures against those from the previous census.

The findings for 1979 showed Livonia with only 2.2 percent of its 103,424 people at or under the poverty figure.

Population figures for the cities used to develop the list are fractionally smaller than total populations for the city reported by the Census Bureau, a division expert said because of calculating the rates, people in institutions, college dormitories and military barracks were excluded.

Today in history

On Feb. 19, 1945 U.S. Marines landed on Iwo Jima to start one of the bloodiest battles in the Pacific during World War II.

Crewman: Ship patched

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (UPI) — A shore-based crewman of a coal carrier that capsized in the Atlantic with the loss of 31 lives testified Friday it was common practice for the ship's rusty hatch covers to be sealed with tar or putty in violation of marine regulations.

William Long, who helped load the Marine Electric with coal before it left Norfolk last week, told a joint Coast Guard-National Transportation Safety Board inquiry he and one of the three survivors had discussed the deteriorating hatch covers a short time ago.

The Marine Electric capsized and sank in a gale early Saturday 30 miles off the Virginia coast. Only three of the crew of 34 survived.

"It's a very old ship, let's face it," Long said he told Chief Mate Robert Cusick, Scituate, Mass. "Bob thought they were fine. We had talked about Bob maybe getting the skipper's job and he said he'd rather stick around as chief mate because he didn't want to run the North Atlantic with those hatch covers."

Police cars ticketed

BOSTON (UPI) — The Boston Police Department has learned the first rule of the city's parking war: no one escapes the meter maid's pen, not even unmarked cars parked in official spots next to headquarters.

Those hired to enforce the law have the single largest tab for unpaid tickets — $6,789 — according to a computer printout of the "top 2,000" scofflaws published Friday by the Boston Globe.

Police spokesman Peter Woloschuk said unmarked cars used by the drug and anti-crime units "are regularly parked around police headquarters... Even though the area is posted with signs that it is reserved for police vehicles the meter maids ticket knowingly. It's very frustrating. It's a waste of time and money."

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority weighed in with 11,380 in fines, spokesman Paul DiNatale said the tickets were collected by vehicles responding to transportation emergencies. He said the agency "has an in-house strict policy against having employees getting T-vehicles ticketed during non-emergencies."

Rostow warns against war

MEDFORD, Mass. (UPI) — Nuclear war is inevitable unless the world political system ceases its slide toward anarchy, former U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency Director Eugene Rostow said Friday.

Wars in the Middle East and Falkland Islands point to a breakdown in enforcement of the United Nations Charter against conventional and nuclear war, he said.

"The world political system is slipping towards a state of anarchy which can only result in war," Rostow told students at Tufts University's Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy.

"No one can prevent the escalation of conventional war to nuclear war," he warned.

Rostow said he supported the concept of détente as "collective security" among nations, whereas Soviet Premier Yuri Andropov sees détente as a nations pursuing neutrality with the Soviet Union.

Andropov's idea of détente is for Western nations to turn their heads to Soviet aggression, he said, quoting from a speech Andropov gave nearly five years ago in which he described in glowing terms Soviet relations with Finland — a neutral country.

State is urged to provide help for homeless

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International

HARTFORD — A former hunger striker joined representatives of church and other groups Friday to urge a legislative committee to provide state help to shelter the thousands of homeless people in Connecticut.

Matthew Vitucci, who with a companion staged a recent hunger strike to bring a soup kitchen to Westport, said the plight of the homeless was a problem facing both the state's larger cities and small towns.

And, Vitucci told the Human Services Committee, failure to spend money now to provide for the homeless could cost the state millions of dollars to care for them in the future.

"We will pay to shelter and house these people now or we will pay to institutionalize and fall them later," when their despair leads them to desperate acts in order to survive," Vitucci said.

The Human Services Committee is considering a bill that would provide up to $300,000 in the next fiscal year for grants to cities and towns to provide shelter for the homeless.

The Coalition for the Homeless, which is made up of church, social service and other groups, said a preliminary survey of 16 communities showed 2,400 people in need of shelters in these communities alone.

However, the coalition said, the state has only 20 operating shelters with a capacity of 425 people, leaving demand far ahead of the space available.

"This does not just happen in the large cities," Vitucci said of the plight of the homeless. "It happens everywhere."

"In fact, I could take you for a walk down the quiet streets of Westport and probably show you four or five people who could be dead in six months if they are not helped," he added.

Joyce A. Phipps, a councilwoman in Hamden and member of the Coalition for the Homeless, said the proposal to provide state grants for shelters would save taxpayers money.

She said the town of Hamden now pays for emergency shelter at commercial motel rates and is reimbursed for 50 percent of the cost. The state, using other sheltering arrangements would cost less, Ms. Phipps explained.

Also supporting the proposed bill were the Office of Urban Affairs of the Catholic Archdiocese of Hartford and Hartford Mayor Thomas L. Milner, who said the state's cities faced a "very serious situation" with the homeless.

Milner said homeless people from throughout surrounding areas were "flooding" to already depressed cities where they can obtain social services, making the problem of the homeless regional in nature.

Patricia M. Wallace, social issues advocate for the archdiocese's Office of Urban Affairs, said the private sector could help address the needs of the homeless, but not alone.

"Shelter is a basic human right," she said in testimony submitted to the committee. "When other means are not adequate it is our conviction that government must ensure that this and other basic human rights are protected, basic human needs are met."

CHARTER OAK STREET APARTMENT RESIDENTS DON'T LIKE PARK SHELTER PLAN ... warming hut unlikely to be used soon as haven for street people

Neighbors oppose shelter plan

By Paul Hendrie
Herald Reporter

In March, the shelter, as proposed, would close for the season at the end of March.

The shelter has been proposed by the Manchester Area Conference of Churches and an ad-hoc committee established by former state Rep. Walter H. Joyner. It would provide a basic, overnight shelter during the winter months for the homeless who wander Manchester's streets.

The petition by the apartment dwellers was presented Thursday to Democratic Director Arnold M. "Ike" Kleinschmidt, at a board comment session.

It confirms rumblings of opposition in the Charter Oak Street neighborhood reported recently by General Manager Robert B. Weiss. Kleinschmidt said the petition convinces him that the neighborhood opposition to the shelter site is widespread, particularly among elderly people who live in the area.

"I don't know how the board feels, because we haven't talked about this, but personally, myself, I don't like the site," said Kleinschmidt. "I hope we can find a different site. I can't see having them down there around the people skating. I think once they get used to coming down there, they'll be coming down in the summer too, when the softball games are going on."

Kleinschmidt said Cheney Brothers left Charter Oak Park to the town explicitly to be used for recreation — not to anyone else.

The idea of using the warming hut as the shelter came out of discussions between Joyner's committee and the town administration to find a suitable location. Other proposed sites, including the Spruce Street Fire House, were rejected as inappropriate for various reasons, including neighborhood opposition.

Weiss suggested the warming hut as a site he could recommend to the directors.

"I really can't understand the objections," Joyner said Friday. "I would think the neighborhood people would feel more secure with these (street) people all under one roof. I can understand that people are afraid of these (street) people — they fear because they don't know. I think some of these street people are more of a danger to themselves than to anyone else."

Joyner also said there has been no skating this season at Charter Oak Park anyway, so he thinks the fear that the street people would interfere with skaters is unfounded.

Brawl ends in 3 arrests

It started with some young men bumping their car into another car they thought was owned by somebody they knew and ended with a free-for-all brawl with two men injured and three arrested.

Mark A. Strasser, 17, of 183 High St., James T. Harrison, 20, of 30 Laurel St., and Scott Dickman, 17, of 183 High St., were each charged with breach of peace in the early Wednesday morning incident.

Strasser was also given a motor vehicle warning of following too close.

Police said they were notified of a fight involving six men at Harrison's home shortly before 3 a.m. Wednesday, and when they arrived on the scene, they found Strasser fighting with Daniel Bjorklund, 20, of 17 Walnut Drive.

Strasser had to be physically restrained from fighting, police said, and he was immediately charged with breach of peace. But while Strasser was being held back, Dickman started fighting with Bjorklund, police said. Dickman was then charged.

Harrison was charged after police determined what the whole thing was about.

They said Strasser, while driving a car, had at the intersections of Church and Park streets, "bumped" from behind a car driven by Harrison, shortly before the fight.

The second bump pushed Harrison's car into a snow bank, they said.

Strasser then followed Harrison home, where the latter and his passenger, Bjorklund, went into the house. As Strasser pulled up, Harrison came out of the door with a shotgun, later determined to be being allegedly being hit by a tire iron, police said.

Police said the people in Strasser's car had thought they knew the people in Harrison's car before bumping cars, but found out they didn't afterward.

Harrison, Dickman and Strasser were each released on $200 bonds for Manchester Superior Court dates of March 7.

Woman pleads innocent

One alleged member of the recently busted group that police said was selling narcotics obtained with forged prescriptions pleaded innocent Friday in Manchester Superior Court to 15 narcotic-related charges.

Nancy MacPherson, 20, of 315 Spruce St., is charged with possession of hashish, two counts of possession of drug paraphernalia, forgery of prescriptions, possession of narcotics, possession of marijuana, illegal possession of controlled substances, two counts of obtaining controlled substances by using a false name and address, illegally obtaining a controlled substance, and two counts of obtaining controlled substances by forgery.

She has not yet pleaded. Police said the two were members of a ring that forged prescriptions based on bona fide ones group members obtained by going to a doctor's office and complaining of illness. They would then buy dilaudid and percodan, controlled pain killers, using the phony prescriptions. The capsules were sold on the street for about $100 each, netting the four members of the team about $2,500 a week.

The other two alleged members of the group are Jeffrey Buckler, 24, and Raymond C. Nopper, 23, both of 131 Charter Oak St. Police said they busted the ring in late January, when they raided the Spruce Street apartment and seized "boxes" of the controlled drugs.

The investigation was closed on Feb. 10 when the names of the MacPhersons.

7-11 franchise holder vows to take fight for store to top

Sheridan Vernon, who's battling a national corporation for control of a Main Street 7-11 franchise, said Friday he's taking his fight to the top.

Vernon said he will send a letter, with copies of the numerous newspaper articles that have been written about his dispute, "down to God in Dallas, Texas," where good old Dallas, Texas, where Souland Corp., 7-11's parent company, has its headquarters.

He said he's sending the material "right to the president of the corporation. I'll tell him I'm a shareholder myself, and that his company is spending an enormous amount of money and abusing the judicial procedure."

The Willimantic resident will be heard by Superior Court Tuesday, his 35th birthday, for a hearing on one of three lawsuits Southland has filed in attempts to enforce its eviction order.

Another hearing is scheduled later in the week on an injunction filed by Vernon's lawyers, the Manchester firm of Beck and Pagano, to stop Southland from filing any more lawsuits to oust Vernon.

In the Tuesday case, Southland wants an injunction to evict Vernon on the grounds that he damaged the company's business reputation in statements he made to the news media and his customers, and a sign he placed in his store window.

The old sign said "7-11 Corp. is trying to take this store as of 9-14-82. We are still here. Vernon has installed a new sign with a similar vein. This one publicizes his upcoming court date, and his claim that Southland is suing him for "freedom of speech."

Souland's lawyer, Peter W. Benner of the Hartford law firm of Shipman and Goodwin, insists Southland is simply trying to enforce its eviction order. The company wants Vernon out because he violated the terms of the 7-11 franchise agreement, Benner said.

Youth arrested in burglary

Police have arrested an 18-year-old man who they say broke into a local service station Feb. 2, stole several cases of soda and $100 in pennies, and then drove out in a $5,000 Mercedes that was in for repair.

Royal E. Isham, of 140-12 Spruce St., was charged on a warrant Wednesday with first- and sixth-degree larceny and third-degree burglary, police said.

He was released on a written promise to appear in Manchester Superior Court Tuesday.

Police said after the burglary at a suspect smashed a bay window to gain entrance to Taboada's Arco at 264 Hartford Road, and then bit a bay door while driving the Mercedes out.

In an unrelated arrest Wednesday, police charged Gal D. Walker, 26, of Hartford, with sixth-degree larceny in an all-Street shopping incident. She was released on a $100 cash bond for a court date of March 7.

The puzzling campaign of Gary Hart

WASHINGTON — Gary Hart enters the 1984 presidential campaign in a remarkably contradictory position.

On the other hand, there are seasonal political professionals who will tell you that the Democratic surge from Colorado is the one candidate likely to become the prime challenger to Walter F. Mondale if Sen. John Glenn should falter over the next few months.

Jack Germond and Jules Witcover
Syndicated columnists

alternative.

BUT HART'S strengths and weaknesses as a candidate — at least insofar as they have been revealed in the months of preliminaries that have led to his official declaration — do not support the conclusion that even if those premises are correct he is necessarily the candidate likely to emerge.

His prime strength at this point is the perception of himself he has encouraged, with considerable skill at playing the media game, as the candidate of new ideas and new approaches to chronic old problems. That is a quality that obviously attracts both the young and liberals, who are inclined to share the quaint notion that issues matter in politics.

At the same time, however, Gary Hart does not possess little to satisfy the glandular hungers of potential supporters who want to make an emotional as well as intellectual commitment. This is a question of style, pure and simple. "He's too cool, maybe even cold," says a leading liberal activist from New England. "He's too calculating," says another.

To some degree, this is simply a product of the fact that Hart is something less than electrifying as a political speaker. On the other hand, he is clearly able to think on his feet, and he is adept at handling the press. And over the long haul for a presidential campaign, that ability to handle himself is likely to be far more important than winning the Boys' State oratorical contest.

However he accomplishes it, winning liberal support is clearly an impressive for Gary Hart, if only because he has so little claim on other elements of the Democratic coalition.

HE IS NOT likely to have significant labor backing so long as Fritz Mondale is there ahead of him. At least two politically important unions, the Machinists and the United Auto Workers, have had problems with him in the past that are not likely to be solved by such things as his lack of enthusiasm for the "domestic content" bill.

Beyond that, he has no special rapport with blacks, and no important connections to big city Democratic organizations. In the South, his history as George McGovern's campaign manager in 1972 — irrelevant though it may seem these days — is going to make him hard to sell to even moderately conservative Democratic leaders.

But the lesson of the last several presidential campaigns is that nominations are not won or lost on the part of various voters and the increasing number of rank-and-file Democrats who participate in caucuses.

That is obviously Gary Hart's game — the quick strike that allows him to exceed modest expectations in the early test in Iowa and New Hampshire. That is why he has had a professional operating in Des Moines for the last three months and it is why he has put together the nucleus of an excellent local organization in New Hampshire.

Death hinders trial

WASHINGTON — Not long ago, a tragic young woman named Helena Stockeeky stepped out of the shadows to save a man from life in prison. She told my office a story that brought her nothing but grief and threats. Last month she was found dead in her hideout apartment in South Carolina.

Her statements implicated a black witchcraft cult whose members, she said, had threatened her with violence. Her story also embarrassed the authorities who may have sent the wrong man to prison.

Stockeeky was a key witness in the murder case against Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald, the Green Beret doctor who is now serving three consecutive life sentences for the 1970 murder of his wife and two young daughters at Fort Bragg, N.C.

WHAT MADE Stockeeky a crucial witness in Capt. MacDonald's case was that she had said she was a member of the cult that, she said, perpetrated the murders. This corroborated MacDonald's claim that he, but a drug-crazed "hippie group" had killed his family and seriously injured him.

Unfortunately for MacDonald, Stockeeky's post-trial disclosures were not admitted as evidence to support the appeal of his conviction. At his trial, Stockeeky had said she couldn't remember the events of the tragic night at Fort Bragg.

Since then, however, Stockeeky told my associate Donald Goldberg that MacDonald was telling the truth. She admitted being part of the drug-oriented cult that committed the killings. She said the motive for the murders was that MacDonald had refused to supply illicit drugs to the group, which included soldiers at the base.

At MacDonald's 1979 trial, Stockeeky said, "I was afraid that I was going to go to prison." So she claimed she couldn't remember what happened.

There was more than just fear of prison, though. "At the trial I was hit on the nose," Stockeeky said. "My nose was broken by one of (the members of) the cult. He told me the same thing I've been (warned) the whole time now. He said 'Keep your mouth shut.'"

SHE DESCRIBED the circumstances of her attack at the hotel where she was staying during MacDonald's trial: "I went out to the ice machine. Well, then he followed me upstairs and the next thing I know he just — he punched me in the nose and broke it."

That wasn't the only time Stockeeky had been intimidated by members of the cult, she said. They tracked her down last year in a shopping-center parking lot. There, she said, she was beaten up and her infant son was knocked to the ground.

South Carolina police officials say there was no evidence of foul play in Stockeeky's death. But Prince Beasley, a former detective in Fayetteville, N.C. believes that she may have been murdered.

Beasley had known Stockeeky for 15 years; he even picked her up with other cult members the night after the MacDonald family killings. But Beasley lacked authority in the case, which had taken place on the military base outside of town. He held the suspects for Army investigators for nearly two hours. They never showed up, so Beasley had to let the suspects go.

Our students must also learn to use the resources of the social scientist — the psychologist, the economist, the political scientist — in order to understand better the forces behind our social, political and economic systems.

And then, just as our students in scientific and technical fields need the historical perspective, the communications skills and the social understanding that come from a liberal education, so too our historians, writers and sociologists need a better understanding of the technology that affects our world, our homes, our families and our livelihoods. Communications, as we all know, has to be a two-way street if it is to be successful. The same applies to education.

Banks have duty to Uncle Sam

On Saturdays the Manchester Herald reprints editorials from other New England newspapers. This is from the Boston Globe.

America's "full service" banking institutions don't want to be tax collectors for Uncle Sam. They have mobilized their considerable lobbying clout in Washington to repeal a measure that would withhold 10 percent of interest and dividends paid to customers.

The banks have one persuasive point: nobody likes to pay taxes. Their propaganda juggernaut on Congress, fueled by hysteria and false claims, provides "full service" to demagogues. More than 200 congressmen have been stampeded into calling for the repeal of the provision, passed last year as part of a $98-billion tax measure.

The banks have been astonishingly successful at depicting themselves as hapless, helpless and technologically ill-equipped to withhold 10 percent of investment income. They have told customers they will be "penalized" by the withholding provision and have asked depositors to lobby legislators with bank-provided postcards.

The tactics have been particularly effective among older bank customers, even though the current law specifically exempts most taxpayers over 65. According to the Treasury Department, 85.7 percent of the elderly population will be exempt. It is true that over 65 taxpayers must file for exemptions, but to suggest that they are unable or unwilling to do so demeans older Americans.

Another significant statistic is that the 2.7 million elderly taxpayers subject to withholding earn $48 billion in interest and dividends each year. Large depositors share with banks an antipathy toward giving Uncle Sam "a float" each quarter. Salaried workers provide the government such a "float" each week through withholding.

The tactics have worked. Five Massachusetts congressmen for instance have enlisted in the bankers' crusade against the Treasury, co-sponsoring the repeal legislation filed by Rep. Norman D'Amaours of New Hampshire.

Congress passed the measure last year, convinced that the $16.5 billion in revenues withholding will generate in the next five years was important for closing future deficits. The legislation addressed the fact that many people don't report such income and the Internal Revenue Service doesn't pursue each case.

Since 1942, most companies have been ordered by law to withhold Uncle Sam's portion of workers' salaries. The companies don't like it. Nobody likes taxes.

The banks, starting a blizzard of postcards, want special treatment. Members of Congress should not be intimidated. They should tell banks and other investment institutions that they, too, have a duty to Uncle Sam.

Commentary

A forgotten skill

By Bill L. Atchley

The story goes that a prominent scientist and nutritionist of the 1950s once appeared before a group of public officials to explain how he had developed a certain "enrichment mix" that would improve the quality of grain meals.

The good scientist carefully explained that his formula contained so many milligrams of iron, and so many milligrams of niacin, etc.

After listening to all this for about half an hour, one of the officials rose and said, "Well, all that sounds just fine, but I'll tell you one thing: I don't want no milligrams in my food."

The scientist and the official were not speaking the same language.

Much has changed in the 30 years since that exchange is supposed to have happened. The public is much better informed and educated in the workings of science and technology today than in years past.

At the same time, though, advances in technology have complicated our language far beyond the "milligram stage," and we as a society have become increasingly dependent on the services of technology to get us through our daily lives.

As a result, the need for those who speak the foreign tongue of science and technology to communicate with those who don't has never been greater. A new kind of technologist is required today: one who not only understands the machinery of technology, can build it, maintain it and make it work, but one who also understands technology's role in shaping society and who can communicate that understanding to others.

AMERICAN INDUSTRY is demanding this kind of technologist. I hear over and over again from my colleagues in industry that graduates of American engineering and computer science programs are extremely well-prepared technically but are lacking when it comes to communications skills.

A company may hire communications professionals to handle its advertising and public relations needs, but there'll be nothing to advise if the company's scientists and researchers can't explain their ideas and discoveries to management.

Make no mistake about it. We can graduate the brightest kids in the world, but if they can't communicate, innovation in America will cease.

Then there is the link between technology and democracy. For a democracy to work, you must have an informed people. Yet we in this country are in the situation where 95 percent of our people don't understand the basic technology that supports our way of life. And when people don't understand something, they feel skeptical, threatened and sometimes downright frightened by it.

I am not suggesting that everybody should be a technological expert. In fact, it is a tribute to technology that all of us don't have to be experts. Much of our technology is so sophisticated and so efficient that we take its benefits for granted. By the same token, though, when the risks involved in that technology come to light, they are magnified.

People need to know enough about technology to be able to weigh the alternatives and make informed choices. They need the tools to evaluate the trade-offs, to determine if the benefits are worth the risks.

When that happens, fear and skepticism will take a back seat to constructive concern. It is not ignorance of technology itself that threatens the decision-making process in this country. It is ignorance of the fact that we need technology for our society to function and what we must strive to strike a balance between the positives and negatives of that technology.

We in engineering education must take the lead in fighting that second kind of ignorance.

We must impart to the young people in our engineering schools right now the skills and know-how to communicate — to speak and write with an effective voice both within their own organizations and in addressing the world at large.

That means more than tacking on a technical writing or public speaking course at the end of a curriculum. We must give our students a comprehensive view of how the world works — not a frill, not an afterthought, but a basic understanding. That requires a thorough grounding in literature, history, languages and the arts so that a student can truly grasp the diversity of our culture and of the cultures of the world.

Our students must also learn to use the resources of the social scientist — the psychologist, the economist, the political scientist — in order to understand better the forces behind our social, political and economic systems.

And then, just as our students in scientific and technical fields need the historical perspective, the communications skills and the social understanding that come from a liberal education, so too our historians, writers and sociologists need a better understanding of the technology that affects our world, our homes, our families and our livelihoods. Communications, as we all know, has to be a two-way street if it is to be successful. The same applies to education.

ASTRO-GRAPE

Bernice Bede Oso

February 20, 1983

In the year following your birthday you'll have more than your share of opportunities to better your lot in life. However, nothing will be handed to you on a silver platter. You'll have to develop those opportunities. Unless you definitely plan to complete them, it may be best to begin things today. February starts out with a lot of projects hanging fire. 1983 predictions for Pisceans are now ready. Send $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to state your astro sign. Send an additional $2 for the NEW Astro-Graph Matchmaker wheel and booklet. Reveals romantic combinations and compatibilities for all signs.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It's important to think before you speak today, or you might unintentionally blurt something out which another could find offensive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be clear of risky ventures today! In areas where you lack know-how or expertise, you could get involved in something over your head.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your image will suffer today if others see you as being too self-serving. Look out for the welfare of associates, as well as your own.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Rather than tell others what they should do or not to do today, first set the proper example. Words without deeds may have little effect.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be optimistic today but also be realistic, especially money-wise. Spending funds you've not received could be a big mistake.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Confusion will reign in the household today if you and your mate disagree regarding ways to manage the youngsters. Be supportive, not contradictory.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Normally you organize your work efficiently, but today your good habits could desert you and you may make big tasks out of little ones.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Have fun and enjoy yourself today, but be careful not to overindulge or to be extravagant. Both present possible problems.

Workers can talk to press

HARTFORD (UPI) — State Attorney General Joseph Lieberman issued a new order allowing department employees to talk to the news media, but Friday denied he was reversing an earlier order. "I'm not reversing my policy. It's just a clarification of my earlier directive" issued Jan. 17, Lieberman said at a Capitol news conference.

Lieberman, through his communications assistant James Kennedy, gave reporters a list of phone numbers for assistant state attorneys "who can probably get you what you need most quickly."

"Please feel free to call them or any of the other employees of this office," Lieberman's memo said. The attorney general had instructed all employees to contact him before talking to reporters. He refused to call it a gag order, but admitted it could have been interpreted as one.

He said criticism of the original policy had nothing to do with his latest memo. Lieberman said it was only meant to "clarify and improve my original intention to open up the process. However, there apparently was some misunderstanding among the assistant attorneys general on this matter," he said.

The Jan. 17 order stated, "None else may speak for the office of attorney general unless specifically authorized by the attorney general, his deputy or the executive assistant for communications."

Lieberman said the language "apparently left something to be desired and this straightens things out."

"There is no need to call me on minor matters, but matters of policy would still be bounced up to the attorney general," he said Friday.

Panel to review DPUC

HARTFORD (UPI) — A legislative committee voted unanimously Friday to review operations of the state Department of Public Utility Control, prompted by complaints over rising utility rates and other constituent concerns.

The Program Review and Investigations Committee decided to look into the DPUC after putting a hold on its planned review of the operations of the Connecticut Resources Recovery Authority.

The committee is expected to compare the DPUC's purposes as outlined in actual functions and to look at alternative ways to regulate utilities.

"It's an agency that I as well as most legislators are having an increasing number of constituent complaints about," said Senate Majority Leader Richard Schneller, D-Exeter, who moved for the committee to undertake the review.

The constant upward increase of the price of all of these regulated services is becoming a severe irritant and a squeeze" on the public, Schneller said after the committee vote.

Rep. Dorothy Osler, R-Greenwich, co-chairman of the bipartisan program review committee, said the review would try to determine if rate hikes granted to utilities by the DPUC were too high.

Debt deeper Social Security outlook worsens

WASHINGTON — (UPI) The outlook for the future of the Social Security system over the next 75 years is worse than previously predicted, partly because a lower birth rate will produce fewer tax-paying workers, retirement system officials said Friday.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform estimated its proposed plan would collect two-thirds of Social Security's 75-year debt, estimated at 1.8 percent of the nation's taxable payroll.

But Social Security Commissioner John Svinin, in new economic projections to be sent to Capitol Hill, said the long-term debt is 2.69 percent — 16 percent higher.

The new projections show Social Security deeper in the hole partly because of lower fertility forecasts. The commission said 2.1 babies would be born per 1,000 women of childbearing age; the new figures put the number at two.

Social Security's actuaries said if Congress stops state and local workers from dropping out of the retirement system that is now optional for them — which the commission recommended — the debt will drop to 1.96 percent of taxable payroll.

The commission's $165 billion package would raise payroll taxes, freeze benefits for six months, tax checks of well-to-do pensioners and require new federal workers to join Social Security next January.

Svinin sent projections to Congress last week showing the plan would keep Social Security afloat through 1999 under moderate economic conditions and with speedier tax collections. Under grimmer projections, it would fall short.

House Democratic leaders, reaffirming support for a national commission's Social Security financing plan, Friday assured angry federal workers they will not lose benefits by being required to join.

For Garvey, it's a new ballgame

Running on about running

By Stacey Joel Smith

The rumble of "Will-Run-Again" is being heard across the land louder and more persistent. The experts are saying it depends on how the economy is going. If the economy picks up, he'll run for re-election, they think, but if the recession continues and unemployment remains high, he'll retire to his ranch in California.

I don't think that's the way it'll work at all. Reagan is much more apt to run again if things still aren't too good in another year than he is if things are wonderful by then. He's going to be visualizing those history books written in the year 2000 and he's not going to want any of them saying he quit while he was losing.

AS HE SETTLES onto a wooden chair, he reports he's spent most of the week at his new headquarters doing Padres promotion work. And when he's asked how he deals with those members of the San Diego press corps who've made Dodger digs a specialty, he simply says, "Turn on their side. I'm playing for them now."

WHETHER YOU LIKE him or not, you have to admit Reagan doesn't quit easily, and quitting when you're ahead is a more natural and satisfying thing for almost anyone to do than quitting when you're behind.

THE POLITICAL prediction that Reagan will drop out if the economy stays the same and will run for re-election if things improve dramatically doesn't make any sense at all, but predicting political events is like predicting the weather. It makes interesting reading even though it doesn't usually have much to do with the way things turn out.

SECOND, I THINK predictions made with authority give the rest of us confidence that it's an orderly world, proceeding in an orderly, predictable way. We like to believe that there's an explanation and a solution for every problem if only we could find it. We think that if we assemble all the facts and feed them into the computer, the right answer to the problem will come out the other end.

It works sometimes, but too often we feed the computer the wrong material. We stuff it with mistakes and fuzzy thinking and what comes out that isn't the right answer at all. That's what political writers have done with their predictions about whether Reagan will run again. They've put the facts in upside down.

PADRES' STEVE GARVEY
...he's started new chapter to his life.

THE FIRST SERIES "was terribly frustrating," Garvey recalls. "We got to know a lot of the athletes so well, and knew that for some of them 1980 would be their last time in the Olympics. All of a sudden President Carter decided to boycott, and I could just feel for those people — as an athlete, and as someone who knows what the Olympics are about."

Garvey handled both the studio and in-the-field interview chores for the '80 series, and camera crews followed him city to city as he wedged his interviews between his ballpark dates. This time around, L.A. sportscares Jim Hill took most of the load of the field work.

Garvey's new chapter to his life. "I did just a few of the interviews this time. They've explained the scope of the show, now literally going to all parts of the country. With my traveling schedule, with the logistics of doing more would have been impossible."

Second tickets issued

Republican Director Peter Di-Rosa has also received one. Police had vowed to give out second tickets to those who failed to clear their walks after the first ticket. According to town ordinance, homeowners have 24 hours after the cessation of a snowfall to clear their walks, or be subject to a fine.

Police are also seeking a change in the law that would allow them to have town workers clear the walk if the homeowner cannot be located. The homeowner would then be billed, according to the proposal.

Trespass charged

COVENTRY — A man police charged Wednesday with arson was arrested Thursday night on charges of first-degree criminal trespass and first-degree criminal mischief, police said Friday.

Michael S. Souza, 21, of 2037 Main St., was found Thursday night in home on Cranford Road after police received a report of a suspicious person, they said.

He was held on a $500 bond for a court appearance Friday.

He was arrested Wednesday on a warrant charging third-degree arson in connection with the burning of a cottage last month on Birch Bend Road, police said.

Some computer language is blue

The man across the desk stopped my expetive deleted deep in its tracks. "I've heard enough of that this morning," he said.

He didn't yell. He didn't preach. It was just a simple statement of fact and I can't say I blame him. There's been a lot of swearing going on at the Manchester Herald lately.

In fact, since they put the new computers in, lots of us have been brushing up on favorites we'd put on ice long ago.

So, instead, you make the air turn purple with a few good ones. "Golly, darn it!" just don't hold a candle to the real ones. Not when you're sitting in front of a machine which has just taken 14 years off your life.

In Focus
Adele Angle
Focus Editor

You can't smash the computer — that is a very quick way to get on unemployment. And you can't smash the person next to you, either. People around here frown on that sort of thing.

So, instead, you make the air turn purple with a few good ones. "Golly, darn it!" just don't hold a candle to the real ones. Not when you're sitting in front of a machine which has just taken 14 years off your life.

I see nothing wrong with a little swearing in the workplace. I'm not sure how OSHA regards blue language, but I don't think it ever hurt anyone. Nobody ever got cancer from hearing language best reserved for a cowboy ranch.

And think of the alternatives. EXPRESSIONS SUCH AS "Oh, shoot," and "Oh, sugar," and "Golly, darn it!" just don't hold a candle to the real ones. Not when you're sitting in front of a machine which has just taken 14 years off your life.

Using such expressions is like using powdered milk. Or pretending that carob is as good as chocolate. Or telling relatives at Christmas time to donate any money they'd been saving for presents for you to the World Relief Fund.

Forget it. These things simply don't make the grade. Of course, like any of life's great practices, you have to keep a few rules in mind when you swear, that's all.

Naturally, you don't swear in front of your Brownie Troop. Nor do you swear in front of grandmothers or members of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

It is also wise not to swear in front of the top management of your company. It's not that they haven't heard the words before; it's just that they feel better pretending that those who work for them don't know it.

They have offices with doors which can be closed in case they want to indulge themselves. Those of us who don't have offices have to settle for the room that.

ANOTHER thing about swearing. I don't like to see it written down. There's a sidewalk at Hartford Road someone scrawled all kinds of things on. I pass that sidewalk every day, and I wish the language wasn't there. It gets in my way.

But as first aid for computer-bruised phrases, I say, fine.

Advice

Father's funeral on her birthday too big a burden

DEAR ABBY: Two months ago, after a very long battle against cancer, my beloved father died. My mother and I were with him until the last moment. When it became apparent that this might happen near my birthday, I quietly and respectfully asked my mother not to bury Dad on my birthday. And although this could easily have been avoided, that's exactly what she did.

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

The thought of "celebrating" my birthday on the anniversary of my father's death depresses me beyond my ability to describe. The normal process of grief doesn't capture me. At 52, this isn't a new emotion. But never again will I be able to enjoy a birthday knowing it also is the day of my father's funeral.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 42-year-old divorced woman with a great job and two wonderful children. The normal process of grief doesn't capture me. At 52, this isn't a new emotion. But never again will I be able to enjoy a birthday knowing it also is the day of my father's funeral.

DEAR ABBY: A salesman of religious books was at my house the other day when my sister stopped by. The salesman had a beautiful display of "The Bible Story" set up on my dining room table. I happen to like beer, so I had a can of beer in my hand at the time. After the salesman left, my sister really took me apart. She said, "At least you should have ditched the beer when the salesman was here!"

Nuclear fear breeds cloud of doom

By Tom Tiede

Some 37 years after the advent of the nuclear age, Sanford Teller can look out his window to witness one of the consequences. He is a middle-aged advertising executive, his office is located high over the West Side of Manhattan, and the view is profoundly disturbing.

On a clear day he can see the future. He says it's not good. "I can't get rid of the feeling that sooner or later another bomb is going to fall. And then another, and another. I sit here at the window and I don't see the sun shining. I don't see fluffy white clouds; I see the flash of an explosion — and the clouds all look like mushroom clouds." Teller has a fear of frying. This is to say, he is convinced that there is something going on that is not a good thing. It's not just a phobia, he says. It's a phobic obsession. Some people are afraid of heights or airplanes; Teller is afraid that the world is coming to a terrible end.

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

By Elaine Stanfield MACC Project Genesis coordinator

Something quite beautiful happened in the Project Genesis Office this week, something I would like to share with you. It was not the first time that I saw the chain reaction of caring, but somehow each time I see it is just as exciting as the first time.

Part of the program for both Re-entry and Genesis is to teach people to be supportive of each other. Sarah came to us following a six-week hospitalization for severe depression. Her family can no longer cope with the ups and downs of a long-standing mental illness, and she is cut off from her husband and children. She is lonely, isolated, disoriented and guilty. When I first saw her, I was reminded of a line of poetry that said, "The world is too much with me."

TEARS FOR MY BIRTHDAY

DEAR TEARS: I think it's important for you to confront your mother with your pain and anger. She may be able to justify her decision. And there's a possibility that in her grief she was not thinking clearly. Don't bear this awful burden alone in silence. Share it with someone who can listen to the grieving and depressed. Easter! The death resurrection of Jesus is the heart of every Christian celebration and his living memory is enmeshed in every Christian life. The Lord promises that life and growth are yours even in the midst of pain and adversity, that the final victory over death is yours.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS by Eugene Brewer

In this space last week I affirmed my faith in God. I found myself in the testimony of the scriptures — faith comes by hearing the word of God. I'm not sure if you're a believer or not, but I'm sure that whatever you are, you can find faith in God. (Matt. 18:19-20)

Names would help fans

There was a time when big Jim "Red" Sheldon was one of the state's best basketball players... He's still very much interested in the sport and is still very much in the game as a spectator and a close follower of the University of Connecticut team... Sheldon, who starred with the Rangers under the late Hugh Greer on the local scene and in Rec League warfare, posed an interesting question after a recent visit to the Hartford Civic Center to watch the UConn perform...

Earl Yost, Sports Editor

"It would be a great help to the fans if the players all had their names on their uniforms... Many college teams, and even some high school teams, have followed the practice of the professional squads and part of their official uniform includes the last names of the players... Most teams, from schoolboy to the pros, at least feature the names of each player on their warmup jackets, which is a help to Joe Fan.

Fouts, Moseley Players of Year

By Ira Kaufman
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI)—A golden right arm and a muddy right shoe earned their rewards today... San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts bested Ken Anderson, the NFL's leading passer, to earn UPI's AFC Player of the Year honors while record-setting kicker Mark Moseley of Washington topped teammate Joe Theismann as the NFC Player of the Year... Fouts threw for 2,889 yards and 17 touchdowns in the strike-shortened regular season and led the Chargers to the playoff semifinals... Moseley, an All-Pro this season for the second time in a distinguished 11-year career, made NFL history with his 23rd consecutive South course, left him at 133, 11-under-par after two rounds... BUSINESS

Some 'reforms' are dangerous

Cosmetic vs. real consumerism

Cosmetics involve many real consumer issues. As a mere sampling: How safe are the ingredients? Are rabbits abused in testing for irritation potential when concentrates are dropped in their eyes? Are any or all allergy-causing substances disclosed on labels?

But there also is another kind of cosmetic consumerism: the use of important-sounding "reforms" that create an impression of really tough action to protect the consumer when in fact there may be none. This kind of cosmetic is doubly dangerous.

It replaces the real thing, since officials or legislators can brag about what they "did" and not have to face up to the real, thornier issues swept under the rug.

2) When the predictable happens and the great reforms adopted with such fanfare do no real good, the public is even further alienated—and you may decide that the entire system cannot work for you at all. You then may "drop out" and become indifferent to the whole thing or actually hostile to our unprecedentedly open society. The consequences can be tragic, depending on just how you express your hostility.

HERE ARE SOME KINDS OF "cosmetic" consumerism to be on guard against and, if you can, to stop:

— Adoption of exciting substantive rules with no workable procedures to carry them into effect.

Laws are frequently passed giving all sorts of theoretical rights to us, as consumers, but there are no ways to put them into practice. It is possible to insist that meaningful procedures be included in the laws, but if a law was a sham to start with, sponsors may stall the entire effort.

Some questions you might ask: Is there a governmental agency with a record of effectiveness assigned and empowered to enforce the substantive right you have been given? Can you, as an individual consumer, sue and collect your legal fees if you prevail—but at the same time not risk losing your lifetime savings if a judge decides your claim is "frivolous"?

— Licensing where laws already ban the malpractice.

Your Money's Worth
Sylvia Porter

ces but aren't enforced.

Don't be naive. Agencies love to demand new "tougher" laws so that they seem to be protecting you vigorously—while they keep the spotlight away from what they aren't doing with powers they already have. Licensing proposals are a perfect example of this: They can bring in lush fees to feed the bureaucracy; protect the "ins" from outside competition; also often raise prices you pay for products or services provided by a certified "expert." The Federal Trade Commission, for instance, found the costs of TV repairs were significantly higher where licensing was required. But the licensing may not result in any extra protection of the public. Often whatever is wrong with an industry already is illegal and the agencies involved simply aren't doing anything about it.

— Create a new agency. The trendy solution to problems in the 1960s was to create a new agency to attack an old problem without any new tools to attack it. It was thrilling to see headlines announcing the Department of This or That or Whatever being established. It was less thrilling to pay the taxes to support the agency and watch its performance (or lack of it).

— Reorganize! Moving around the contents of bureaucratic boxes or organizational charts can be an absorbing form of action. This was "in" entertainment in the 1970s. The number of agencies was now reduced instead of increased. The boxes were consolidated and appeared more rational on diagrams; the garbage inside the boxes weren't altered at all.

— More policy planning, preferably involving computers. Modern Management is the phrase of the 1980s, replacing the New Agency of the 1960s and the Reorganization of the 1970s. But what comes out of it at the end for you and me? More bills for expert consultants—for computer malfunctions; paper for printouts and cathode ray tubes; coordinators; planners. These are guaranteed results. Less effective decision-making can be another, as facts are sifted through multiple layers of experts and no one stays close to the initial facts.

— Turn the problem over to another level of government. Recognize this as today's approach? It is: dumping the problems back on states and localities even if they are national in scope. The trend of the 1960s to a complicated maze at the federal level has been turned around.

— Shift budget figures and focus on the latest budget crisis. With mirrors (it seems), numbers meaningless to you and me are shifted, digested and served up again to justify an ever-new bite on your pocketbooks or cut in services in some fashion.

— Aren't you fooled by all this emergency action and relentless crisis management? How can you complain when superhuman efforts are being made to protect you in every field? How dare you demand better (or even any) results? I can prove to you just about anything with numbers. But what we experience day-to-day is how we are actually doing!

WHAT CAN BE DONE to change the situation? In the short run, probably very little, for you, as an American citizen, are allowing it to work. You're rewarding—not punishing—the perpetrators of the frauds who come from all political spectrums—left, right and center.

But over the long run, if you really become fed up or annoyed enough to stay angry (a very big IF), you, the public, are the bosses and you can exercise your awesome power. To illustrate:

A) Follow up on all grandiose official announcements of any program. Check up, say, a year later with one innocent question: What happened? If the answer is "nothing," act!

B) Insist on enforcement of existing laws by those charged with that duty. Most malpractices are illegal. What have those charged to enforce the law done? If lawsuits to enforce a law dragged, why?

C) Demand that bureaucracies be simplified. Probe into an "effort" to "modernize and improve" to see if all it does is add more paperwork, involve more futile approvals of the simplest move, more computer reports, more high-level policy planners. This is happening right now even as you read this! We can change it—if we mean it.

D) Look at problems in terms of the efforts special interests are asking. Political action committees (PACs) sponsored by specific industries, lobbyists for special interests who can deduct the expense of lobbying from their tax returns, are working 24 hours a day for their clients. Legislators are under immense pressure to please these powerful groups—but they must look good to us.

The dilemma is solved by cosmetic consumerism. Ask these terribly simple questions: What do these interests want? How do the lobbyists affect "me" as a consumer and a citizen? The questions alone (much less the answers) can be devastating! Try them, I plead with you, just try!

In Brief

Traffic increases

BOSTON — Logan International Airport set a record for passenger traffic last year, despite reduced flights resulting from the 1981 air traffic controllers' strike, a Massport official said.

In 1982, 15.9 million passengers flew through Logan Airport, a 7 percent increase over 1981. The national average for the year was 2.9 percent. Eleven of Logan's domestic carriers reported gains in traffic in 1982, while three reported decreases.

The controllers' strike against the Federal Aviation Administration led to a sharp reduction in scheduled flights nationwide.

Teleco earnings up

MERIDEN — Teleco Oilfield Services Inc. has reported record service earnings of $51,904,000 in 1982 compared with $27,503,000 in 1981.

Earnings from operations for 1982 were $12,224,000 compared with $5,494,000 in 1981, while net earnings in 1982 were $6,914,000 compared with $5,678,000 in 1981.

Taiwan deal starts

FARMINGTON — Emhart Corp. said it has begun production operations at a new $4 million shoe machinery plant in Taiwan, the third plant for the company in the Far East.

The 400,000-square-foot plant in the Chung-Li Industrial Park is adjacent to Emhart's shoe materials plant there. The company last year opened a glass machinery manufacturing facility in Singapore.

Sales drop listed

NORWALK — Perkin Elmer Corp. has reported sales of $250 million for the second quarter of its fiscal year that ended Jan. 31, a drop from $260 million during the same period in 1982.

Net income for the quarter was $10.2 million, equivalent to 24 cents per share of common stock. Net income for the same period in 1982 was $14.0 million, equivalent to 33 cents a share.

Net earnings rise

MIDDLETOWN — Raymond Engineering Inc. has reported net earnings increased 42.9 percent in 1982 to $2,908,000 compared with $1,405,000 in 1981.

The company also reported sales were $32,973,000 for the year ending December 31, 1982, a jump of 11.1 percent over the same period last year. Per share earnings increased to $1.71 in 1982 compared to $1.21 in 1981.

The changing face of Hartford

Even in mid-winter construction proceeds on the skyline of Hartford, as seen from the east bank of the Connecticut River in East Hartford. The downtown has been experiencing a building boom that shows no signs of abating.

But still below U.S. rate

New England unemployment increases

BOSTON (UPI) — The New England unemployment rate jumped to 7.4 percent in December, still far below the national average of 10.5 percent, and for the 40th consecutive month fared better than the nation, the Bureau of Labor Statistics announced Friday.

Regional Commissioner Anthony J. Ferrara said Rhode Island experienced the sharpest one-month jump — from 9.5 to 10.9 percent — while Vermont reported the fewest out of work — 6.8 percent.

For the year, unemployment increased from 6.7 percent to 7.4 percent as 47,000 New Englanders were added to the jobless rolls. The sharpest yearly increase was recorded in Rhode Island, where the rate jumped from 7.6 percent to 10.9 percent, the highest in the region.

Over the same period the national average increased from 8.3 percent to 10.5 percent, an increase of 2.6 million people. In Massachusetts, four months of improving employment ended when the December rate increased from 6.5 to 7.1 percent. Connecticut and New Hampshire also recorded 7.1 percent rates while Maine increased to 8 percent.

Ferrara pointed out only 16 states nationally recorded rates of 8 percent or less — five were in New England.

The jobless rate declined in only three of the region's 19 metropolitan areas, Ferrara said, with Bridgeport and New Britain and Manchester, N.H., recording slight decreases.

Stamford, Conn., while up fractionally, maintains the lowest rate of 221 metropolitan areas nationwide at 4 percent. Boston, at 5.6 percent, had the lowest rate in Massachusetts and the second best in New England. Unemployment jumped from 9.8 to 12.7 percent in New Bedford, Mass., giving that community the highest rate in the region. Providence, R.I. at 10.9 percent, and Fall River, Mass. at 10.7 percent were the other areas which topped the national average.

In a related matter, Connecticut experienced a 9.8 percent reduction in unemployment compensation claims for the two-week period ending Feb. 12, according to the state Labor Department.

There was an average of 64,194 unemployment claims in the two-week period, compared with 70,925 in the previous two weeks.

The Labor Department said the decline in claims could be attributed mainly to a reduction in temporary closings.

Columbia pictures is a good stock bet

By David R. Sargent

QUESTION: I read that the Christmas movies did really well this year. Which companies fared best? And are there any stocks in the field you like now? S.C., California.

ANSWER: The big difference between the movies released this past Christmas season and those of the year before is that the 1982 crop has had what they call in industry parlance "legs." That is to say, they have shown staying power — opening strong and, in many cases, staying strong. The late 1981 films were early bloomers but then quickly withered on the vine.

According to Variety, U.S. box office receipts for 1983 to date are running about 50 percent above those of 1982.

As to which company fared best, the runaway winner this season has been the Columbia Pictures division of Coca-Cola Co., acquired by Coke in June, 1982. Its surprise hit, "Totie," has already grossed more than $80 million.

Another Christmas offering from Columbia, "The Toy," is making good money despite bad reviews. And the epic film, "Gandhi," also Columbia, has been hailed by most critics and has opened strong, but its big contribution is yet to come since it is playing in a limited number of theaters. "Gandhi" looks like a sure bet for Oscar nominations.

While Columbia is still a relatively small part of the overall Coca-Cola picture, its recent success has led some security analysts to boost their 1983 Coke earnings estimates to $4.50 a share or better, vs. around $4 last year. Another major plus for Coca-Cola, number one in soft drinks, recently has been the warm reception given its new sugar-free Diet Coke. Of course, the movie business is notoriously volatile, but Columbia's management team is highly regarded and is broadening its stake in home entertainment. We rate Coke a promising buy.

The other Christmas films were pretty well spread out among the leading distributors — most of which are divisions of much larger companies or, as in the case of Twentieth-Century Fox, privately owned. A good way to participate in the fortunes of the movie industry, however, is by owning the stock of General Cinema, the nation's leading film exhibitor, as well as the leading independent soft drink bottler.

GCC's 1,000 or so screens show all of the big movies, earnings have trended steadily upwards over the past decade. The shares are still in a good buying range. (Mr. Sargent cannot answer all mail personally, but will answer all questions possible in his column.)
