

Detroit betting sports cars will catch on

By Micheline Maynard
United Press International

DETROIT — Convertibles, which grabbed the 1982 automotive spotlight, are going to have to take a back seat in 1983 to the renaissance of the sports car. Foreign and domestic companies already are jockeying for leadership with cars featuring high performance, exciting handling, sleek appearance — and little attention to price. The battle for the sports segment will hit high gear in the fall, when the top American automakers unveil their new offerings. Several new Japanese products already are on the market. There are going to be more sports cars than the public knows what to do with," said analyst Mary Ann Keller of Paine, Webber in New York.

Another view takes a less philosophical view, terming the sporty trend just another automotive fad, although he thinks the cars will sell. "Is it real? Sure it is. Is it more than two years? I doubt it," said Chase Econometrics Vice President William Pochlik. "These kind of fads go in two or three year waves." The biggest factor in the success of the sports models will be the price of fuel, Pochlik said. Recent OPEC developments could be a key factor in the success of the sports models. A continued reduction in fuel prices will "definitely support" the move to sports cars, Pochlik said. "There's also an abstract factor called fun," the analyst said. "That's still important to some people. But we know that that's standard related to the price of fuel."

CHEVROLET'S 1984 CORVETTE WAS PRESENTED IN CHICAGO chief engineer David McLellan and designer Jerry Palmer attend preview

The shift to sports cars seems a logical phase after last year's emphasis on convertibles. The industry, which for the past five years has been concerned mainly with fuel economy and quality improvement, warily watched Chrysler unveil its K-car convertibles in late 1981. Chrysler had hoped to sell up to 10,000 of the ragtops, which had not been offered by the major companies since 1976. Instead, it sold 16,637 in 1982.

General Motors and Ford quickly followed with Buick Riviera and Ford Mustang convertibles respectively. This year, just about all the major firms in Japan and the United States are preparing to introduce or have launched sports models.

Mrs. Keller said the trend represents automakers' efforts to meet the changing demographics of the American car market. There are many more single households than 10 years ago, and younger car buyers are demonstrating they, too, are interested in speed and handling. "That type of automobile emphasizes youth and offers the illusion of performance and mirrors what the companies think is happening out there," Mrs. Keller said.

As with many trends in the modern auto industry, the Japanese companies seem to be out in front in the past five years in the sports segment. Datsun's 280-Z — smaller and perhaps less intimidating than the current 280-ZX — was a standard. Toyota's high-powered Celica and Mazda's RX-7 were big successes. They were the precursor of all these cars," Mrs. Keller said. "Now the American companies are going to try and see if they can get it (the segment) all back." GM and Ford already have entered the market. Last year, GM unveiled redesigned versions of its aging Camaro and Firebird. The autos, with aerodynamic styling and a lot of smokes, curved glass, were immediate hits even though there were several design defects that required recalls. Ford came up with high-powered versions of its Mustang and Mercury Capri models. One Capri features a bubble back styling similar to a Porsche. Chrysler has slipped into the sports market with Dodge Shelby Charger, designed by Carroll Shelby. It will go on sale this month. Shelby designed the Shelby Cobra Mustang for Ford in the 1960s and was lured out of retirement by his old boss, Lee Iacocca, who once was president of Ford and now is chairman of Chrysler. Shelby and Mrs. Keller are somewhat critical of the GM sports offerings. Shelby told a Detroit newspaper the Camaro and Firebird — though among the most beautiful cars ever designed — are simply too heavy and "to call them performance cars would be a misnomer." Mrs. Keller agrees. "The Camaro-Firebird almost qualifies as a passenger car," she said. "It has a back seat and a trunk." Shelby, who considers the V-8 Mustang "a nose-heavy leaded," says he does not think the American companies are committed to building true sports cars. "Everybody is building performance cars — so they say. But they aren't really performance cars," he said. "A lot of it is just PR and advertising. They know they need one, so they are calling them performance cars." Nevertheless, both his boss, Chrysler and GM are set soon to come up with additional sports car entries. Chrysler's Laser and Dodge Daytona. Both will have front-wheel drive and turbo-charged engines. GM will launch a redesigned Corvette in March on the West Coast, with other states getting the car later in the year. The plastic auto was supposed to come out much earlier, but quality problems at the automaker's Bowling Green, Ky., plant pushed back the introduction date. Pontiac this fall will introduce the two-seater Fiero, another "plastic" car that will be smaller than the Camaro and Firebird. Company officials are confident it will be the surprise of the year. Volkswagen of America, which is struggling to keep alive in the U.S. market, is selling a high performance version of the Rabbit called the GTI. The auto, advertised heavily on television, has not yet taken hold although it is popular in Europe as the Golf GTI.

Sports cars are loved by Hollywood for their glamor in displaying stars to their best advantage. Some of the best movies of Cary Grant, Humphrey Bogart and James Dean featured fast cars (not to mention beautiful women) that seemed to be standard equipment. Those autos might have been Fiat from Italy, MGs from England or Mercedes from Germany. This year, however, the import sports car market is dominated by Japanese entries. Japanese companies in the past did not have many sports models because they lack the production capacity to build them, Pochlik said. But two years ago, the Japanese government agreed to voluntarily limit exports to the United States. This prompted the Japanese automakers to enrich their model mix by shipping fewer small cars on which the profit margin was not as great, and adding more costly luxury, larger and sporty cars.

Each of the major companies has one or more offerings. Toyota's Celica has been restyled into an aerodynamic, starker version of the once rounded auto that was the company's first wedge into the sports segment. Toyota now offers the Supra, which has a dashboard like a jet plane and a powerful engine. Resembling the Celica somewhat is Nissan's new Pulsar, a companion to the 280-ZX which is still popular among fans of the original "Z." Honda has just introduced a sporty version of the its Prelude, which uses aerodynamics to turn the little sedan into a competitor for the other Japanese models. Other Japanese entries include the Mitsubishi Starion and the Mazda RX-7. The Japanese have not been in the segment very long and have not yet gained the same reputation for sporty autos that they have for subcompacts. This might lead some buyers to turn to American products. However, the year ahead may show one big advantage for the Japanese: price.

Powers trial: O'Neill aide can't testify

"CHAD" MCCOLLAM FIELDS QUESTION ... But the jury wasn't there to listen

HARTFORD — Testimony about how a gubernatorial aide called former Transportation Commissioner Arthur B. Powers on behalf of consultants seeking state work cannot be used in Powers' corruption trial, a judge ruled Friday. Superior Court Judge Walter R. Budney said Friday the testimony by Charles M. "Chad" McCollam Jr. may be "interesting," but was "an absolute expedition into matters that are not relevant" to the six corruption counts against Powers. The ruling also was believed to affect testimony the state planned to seek from Democratic State Chairman James M. Fitzgerald and former state Chairman John N. Dempsey Jr., son of former Gov. John N. Dempsey. Although not presented to the jury, McCollam explained to Budney how he called Powers to pass on names of consultants who complained they hadn't received state work or would like to be considered for work. McCollam, executive aide to Gov. William O'Neill and the late Gov. Ella Grasso, also testified with jurors out of the courtroom that he was asked by O'Neill to look into rumors the governor heard about Powers in summer 1981. Budney warned the testimony about the rumors was in "areas that might be quite sensitive to other people." At the judge's suggestion, prosecutors decided not to pursue the issue until possibly later in the trial. McCollam said he and gubernatorial legal counsel Jay Jackson, were called in by O'Neill in summer of 1981 to discuss rumors the governor heard about Powers while traveling about the state. One rumor concerned Powers' daughter's wedding, and McCollam said he spoke with Powers and was shown a check stub indicating Powers paid for the wedding. Powers is charged with receiving a $1,000 bribe, fabricating and attempting to tamper with evidence, tampering with a witness, perjury and violating state ethics codes. In its formal listing of charges, the prosecution claims Powers accepted cases of liquor for his daughter's wedding and other gifts from consulting engineers and an architect in violation of the Code of Ethics for Public Officials. ALTHOUGH leaving open the possibility of further testimony by McCollam on the alleged rumors, Budney flatly barred the jury from hearing testimony about calls McCollam made to Powers as commissioner consulting engineers. Special Assistant State's Attorney F. Timothy McNamara refused comment, but the ruling also was believed to apply to Fitzgerald and Dempsey, who were listed at the outset of the trial as possible prosecution witnesses. "I have other witnesses but they will simply testify about things you have already ruled as irrelevant," McNamara said in an apparent reference to the two men, who were at the courthouse and spoke with prosecutors before the ruling. Before Budney's ruling, McCollam told he had called Powers to pass on the names of consulting engineers who had asked to be considered for state work. Both McCollam and Fitzgerald have acknowledged they called Powers while he was commissioner with names of consultants seeking work, but denied any wrongdoing in making the calls. Powers is accused of lying when he denied having intervened in the DOT process for choosing consultants for non-work and denied intervening to hike fees offered to consultants by the DOT during negotiations on fees for non-bid work. McCollam said he received monthly printouts from the DOT listing consultants chosen for contracts, the amount of money they were paid and a description of the project involved. "The purpose was to see how work was progressing, how it was going... (and) obviously to see where the work was going," he said. McCollam said he was interested in seeing "that as many Connecticut firms as possible were used" for the work he said he called Powers when consultants would complain to the Governor's Office they hadn't received work or ask to be considered. "Did you ever call for a consulting engineer who was not a contributor to the Democratic Party?" asked McNamara. "I don't know, there were so many over the years... possibly," McCollam replied. Asked if there were times he was interested if a consultant he called about received work if "all other things" were equal, McCollam replied, "That's a fair question, yes."

EARLIER FRIDAY, a DOT accountant testified she was directed to "bury" in a fee computation for a consultant contract $25,850 in instance prevention and under-DOT policy could not be paid for directly by the state. Paula Liostro said she was told by superiors to figure the money into other costs in the contract, awarded to Luchs and Beckerman for design work on Interstate 84. "It's buried in various places, it's added in," she said, adding she thought the instructions for her to revise the fee computation and "bury" the fee were unusual.

Drug stores will see some drastic changes

By LeRoy Pope
United Press International

NEW YORK — The drugstore business, which has undergone great change and considerable shrinkage in the number of stores in recent years, faces even more drastic change in the 21st century. The drugstore will become highly automated and will be operated largely with the use of computers. There will be fewer pharmacists than now and at least half of them will be women. Moreover, the pharmacist in the 21st century will have a degree equal to a university graduate and the profession may have limited rights to prescribe as well as to dispense medicines. There will be considerably less prescription compounding on the premises of the drugstore. Most drugs will be targeted to specific physical conditions. The total number of drug items available to the public at any given time may be reduced from 25,000 to 8,000-10,000 as improved scientific knowledge causes many marginal drugs to fall by the wayside. These conclusions were advanced in a special edition of the magazine Drug Topics devoted to the future of pharmacy. Naturally, not all the prognosticators the editors talked with agreed about the future trends. Some doubted if pharmacists ever would get to prescribe medicines even to a limited degree or take down medical histories or do anything now customarily done by the physician because the number of physicians is increasing steadily. But there was general agreement that, in addition to the things he or she learns now, the 21st century pharmacist will have to be well trained in immunology, biochemistry, pathology, environmental health, preventive medicine, data processing and information systems. Drug Topics turned up some other interesting predictions: A practical male birth control pill eventually will be a big item in the drug business. Some drugs may be manufactured in space vehicles in orbit in order to get maximum purity or meet other specific manufacturing requirements. The average human life span will be well above 80 years and may approach 100 years, so geriatric medicine will be an increasingly part of the pharmacy business. Many families will have their own medical requirements recorded in the drugstore's computer. The family's preferences in toothpastes and cosmetics may even be recorded.

Nicaragua claims it crushed rebel force

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — A top Nicaraguan leader said Friday that government troops had crushed an invasion by 2,000 Honduran-based rebels after three weeks of fighting. "The Somocesta counter-revolutionary guards who infiltrated into the interior of the country no longer represent a threat," said Agriculture Minister Jaime Wheelock Roman, a member of the nine-man Sandinista directorate that runs the Central American country. Wheelock gave no other details on why the rebel threat had ended. Nicaragua calls the rebels "Somocistas," charging they are mostly former members of the late dictator Anastasio Somoza's exiled guard, who fled into exile after his ouster in July 1979. A Western diplomat said while the invasion had never constituted a threat to the 30-year old regime, it was significant that the rebels had operated within 80 miles of the capital for the first time. The diplomat said the rebels almost certainly would continue their actions against the leftist regime in Managua. Nicaragua charged Thursday that Honduran troops entered its territory to back the invasion, but the diplomat said there was little probability of a war between the two neighboring countries. About 2,000 rebels infiltrated into the country from Honduras over the past three weeks, Nicaraguan leaders said, including hundreds dropped by airplane into a central province. Nicaragua accuses the United States of backing the rebels and both U.S. reports and congressional sources have said the United States is supplying funds to the rebels through the U.S. Embassy in Honduras. The Sandinistas, who led the rebellion that deposed Somoza, take their name from Cesar Augusto Sandino, who led an uprising against the dictator's father in the 1920s. In Moscow, Nicaraguan junta leader Daniel Ortega met with Soviet leader Yuri Andropov on the rebel invasion and received pledges of continued Soviet "political and material support." The Soviet news agency Tass said. Tass said Andropov and Ortega gave considerable attention to the "dangerous policy being pursued by the United States, which seeks by all means to prevent the people of the area from determining their future themselves."

Nicaraguan Interior Minister Tomas Borge warned Honduras Thursday it was "playing with fire" in allegedly supporting the invasion by exiles opposed to the government. State officials have expressed concern that federal highway funds would be withheld should Connecticut continue its long-standing ban on the double trailers. Ms. Niedermier said the only option available to the federal government would be to initiate a lawsuit because the power to hold up funding is limited to violations of requirements on height, width and weight of trucks. The measure before the committee includes provisions to protect the state in the event of a suit and also sets strict requirements for operators of tandem trailers which would be limited to use on secondary roads, she said. "I want to be protected so we don't have an open door to tandem trailers," Ms. Niedermier said.

Governor backs ban on tandems

HARTFORD (UPI) — The chairman of the Legislature's Transportation Committee said Friday Gov. William O'Neill has pledged his support for a bill to continue a ban on tandem trailer trucks on Connecticut highways. Rep. Christine Niedermier, D-Fairfield, and other committee members met with O'Neill and state Transportation Commissioner J. William Burns to discuss the double trailers, which she called a "serious safety hazard." Ms. Niedermier said the bill to continue the ban will be aired at a public hearing Tuesday, after which she said the committee was expected to approve the measure with action by the Legislature coming as early as next week. "Our real concern is over the very nature of attaching two trailers that has been proven through studies to have a tendency to jack-knife and cause accidents and serious injuries," she said. "We believe the state should have a prerogative to protect its own citizens from those hazards on our very congested highways."

Ms. Niedermier said. O'Neill voiced his support for a continued ban and agreed to seek a waiver on a new federal policy which takes effect April 1, she said. The change will allow double trailers on all interstate highways in the nation as a provision of the 5-cent a gallon tax on gasoline.

Oil magnate affirms he will keep trying

By Victoria Bowles
United Press International

DALLAS (UPI) — Even if T. Boone Pickens Jr. did not have such an unforgettable name, he would be hard to ignore as one of the few oil and gas magnates making daring deals in today's depressed, frightened industry. The man who founded Mesa Petroleum Co. in 1956 with a $2.50 investment is now one of the highest-paid executives in the country — his 1981 salary as president and chairman of the board was $750,000 — and presides over an empire that had 1981 revenues of almost $407 million. It's the Amarillo, Texas, oil man's fervor for takeovers, however, which made him the toast of Wall Street and the scourge of other energy corporations' boardrooms. Last summer he unsuccessfully sought to buy Cities Service of Tulsa, Okla., an industry giant with 20 times the revenues of Mesa, and last fall he made a similar failed attempt at Dallas' General American Oil Co. "We were after 'em," Pickens said, but he acknowledged he does not mind the "consolation prizes — millions of dollars made from the accompanying stock sales, $34 million in the case of GAO. Ask Pickens, a 54-year-old physical fitness fanatic who has a reputation for ruthless raucousness, whether those thwarted takeovers dulled his liking for the tactic, and his eyes twinkled. "There's no reason to believe that our management philosophy has changed. So consequently you've got to think that we're interested in acquisitions," he said recently following an address before the Society of Petroleum Engineers. Everyone wants to know what Pickens will do next, and he enjoys commenting tongue-in-cheek. Recently he told a meeting of major stockholders: "We've come up with a new idea. If you would all go in... and move the price up to $20 a share, we would send you a confidential note each week on takeover tips."

There is more to the attempted takeovers than just the thrill of the chase, and last year's two highly publicized efforts were not Pickens' first. In the past he has made unsuccessful bids for the Southeastern Royalty Co., Atzec Oil and Gas Co., and Imperial American. He seeks acquisitions, he said, because it fits his philosophy of keeping Mesa viable by replacing its reserves. "If you're not replacing your reserves then you're liquidating," he said.

Weicker visits Bolton for a bipartisan hello

WEICKER GREETES DEMOCRATS RYBA (CENTER) AND AHEARN ... While Bolton GOP Chairman Converse looks on

BOLTON — "I want to know if any of you can guess which is the Democrat and which is the Republican," U.S. Sen. Lowell P. Weicker exclaimed here Friday night as he was greeted warmly by a large, bi-partisan gathering of residents. "I think this is great. To me, I feel especially privileged in being greeted by the Democratic first selectman and a Republican gathering," the Republican senator said. About 60 people showed up Friday night at the Community Hall, including Manchester Republican Town Committee Chairman Curtis M. Smith and Andover Republican committee Chairman Vito Anson. Bolton Democratic First Selectman Henry P. Ryba was one of the first to meet Weicker as he showed up in Bolton center. Weicker stayed only about 25 minutes — he said he had already been to Stonington and Colchester, and was on his way to New Haven and then finally Greenwich on a brief, two-day trip to visit constituents. But he took enough time Friday to meet town officials and political candidates, and to advocate a new Republicanism. Weicker, in an unprepared statement, said Connecticut Republicans have to soften their positions if they are ever to gain control of state government. "We have no competition in this state," he said. He also took the opportunity to criticize the Democratic state leadership. He said Connecticut, the second wealthiest state per capita in the nation, has two of the top 10 poorest cities in the union. He blamed the Democratic leadership. The senator then said if the party is to become powerful in Connecticut, it must build from the roots. "The way to build the Republican party the way we want it is to build from the ground up," he said. Weicker then brought his comments to the local level. "I guess the Republican party here pretty well runs things," he said. "The first selectman has his hands full. This guy," he said, looking at Ryba, "probably keeps you on your toes, though." Republicans usually dominate town politics in Bolton. "I'm very pleased that he came, and I think that he's basically right," Bolton Democratic Town Committee Chairman Aloysius J. Ahearn said after Weicker left. "In order for Republicans in this state to be effective, they have to be more liberal."

"He's presenting a new style Republicanism," Anson said. "I like his style."

News Briefing

Wall Street rally comes to a halt

NEW YORK (UPI) — Wall Street's latest stock market rally came to a halt Friday as hints of rising interest rates sent prices sliding.

The Dow Jones industrial average dropped 5.81 to close at 1,140.00. The Dow hit a new all-time high of 1,145.90 Thursday.

Declines led advances 891-693 among the 1,946 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

The NYSE index dropped 0.39 to 87.81. The price of an average share was off 15 cents.

Floor volume was about 77,330,000 shares, down from 92,340,000 Thursday.

Some analysts said investors were staying on the sidelines, waiting for the latest figures on the money supply before making any new commitments. The market has always reacted strongly to any indication the Federal Reserve may restrict the swollen money supply, thus forcing up interest rates.

Henry Kaufman, the influential Salomon Brothers economist, helped fuel this worry in his weekly column when he suggested the Fed was moving cautiously to tighten the money supply and may have to be more aggressive if it wants to succeed.

Major storm hits Rocky Mountains

A major storm from the Pacific plastered the central Rockies with up to 2 feet of snow and pushed into the Plains Friday while southerners had a bang up time on icy streets before record snows began to melt.

Record early-morning cold temperatures spanned from Michigan to Dixie, ranging from 9 below zero at Marquette, Mich., to 25 degrees in Chattanooga, Tenn. The latter equaled the March 25 mark set back in 1940.

Hardy residents of Marquette took the winter blast in stride. "It sounds a little cold but it's not really that unusual," Randy Johnson said at midday. "I wasn't outside when so I couldn't really tell how it was. But it's sunny now and must be about 40."

Up to 2 feet of snow fell on high elevations of Utah mountains in a 24-hour span. Flagstaff, Ariz., reported 14 inches of new snow in two days.

A winter storm warning for up to a foot of snow was issued for Colorado. Storm watches were in effect for southwest Wyoming, Nebraska and Kansas. Kimball, in southwest Nebraska, had 4 inches of snow by mid-morning.

If the snowstorm lived up to its 6-inch prediction in Denver, it would make this year the snowiest March in the Mile High City's history. A record already has been set in Denver for total moisture.

The National Weather Service said Denver already has received 29.6 inches of snow this month. The record for March, set in 1944, is 22.5 inches.

Speedy-trial bill signed by O'Neill

HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. William O'Neill has signed a bill clarifying the effective date of a so-called "speedy trial" law adopted last year by the Legislature, the Governor's Office said Friday.

The measure, signed Thursday evening by the governor, spells out the law's provisions requiring defendants to be tried within a given time apply only to people arrested on or after the effective date of rules to implement the law.

There had been concern the law would have required the release of defendants who were arrested before the rules take effect because they were not brought to trial in the time frame required by the law.

With the bill signed by O'Neill, the state must have rules in place by July 1 requiring a defendant to be brought to trial within 18 months of being arrested or charged. The time will fall 12 months as of July 1, 1985.

O'Neill also signed a bill changing the wording of the oath administered to jurors in criminal cases. The change replaces the phrase "prisoner at bar" with the word "defendant."

Colleges face loss of federal aid

HARTFORD (UPI) — More than a dozen colleges in Connecticut will lose a total of $431,000 in federal aid because of high default rates on student loans, increasing available funding for other schools in the state.

The U.S. Department of Education said Thursday it would deny the funds for the 1983-84 school year to 14 colleges with default rates exceeding 10 percent. The money will be awarded instead to colleges with better loan collection records.

"There is a bigger pot of money (for other colleges) remaining in the state," said Ralph Seastrom, program officer in the department's Boston regional office.

The University of New Haven is one school that will share in the windfall, with officials saying the federal government has "blessed UNH" with twice as much money as it received this school year.

Metro-North talks to resume

NEW YORK (UPI) — Negotiators agreed Friday to meet next week to resume talks aimed at settling the 18-day Metro-North commuter rail strike, but both sides said they had nothing new to offer.

The talks, stalled since Tuesday, were scheduled for 10 a.m. Monday at the Metropolitan Transportation Authority's headquarters in Manhattan.

A spokesman for mediator Arvid Anderson said the United Transportation Union had requested the meeting. Union officials had said earlier they feared a new round of talks would be held until next month following the Passover and Easter holidays.

"We've been requesting they reconvene the negotiations," said Richard Frear, UTA general chairman for Metro-North's Hudson and Harlem lines. "In fact I had suggested that we meet today. I don't think it's right and proper for us not to sit down and talk."

A spokesman for Anderson said no new proposals had been made.

Pope kicks off new holy year

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John Paul II opened St. Peter's Basilica's sealed holy door with an ivory and gold hammer Friday to inaugurate Roman Catholicism's extraordinary jubilee year marking the 1500th anniversary of Christ's death.

The opening of the bronze door, bricked and sealed up at the end of the last holy year in 1975, was the symbolic beginning of 13 months of religious activities expected to draw an estimated 9 million visitors to Rome.

During holy years, usually held every quarter century, Roman Catholics can attend selected religious services to receive special dispensations from the church for the forgiveness of sins.

The Vatican has been celebrating jubilees since the year 1300.

For the first time in history, the pope ruled that during this holy year Catholics around the world can receive the same forgiveness of sins simply by attending special services or praying with a visiting priest in their own home parishes.

John Paul, dressed in specially tailored white papal vestments, opened the jubilee year by striking the bronze portals of the holy door with the ornate ivory and gold hammer once used by the late Pope Pius XI. The doors opened at 11:41 a.m. EST.

Hazardous waste board is urged

HARTFORD (UPI) — The Legislature's Environment Committee approved a bill Friday to establish a board to develop and possibly operate a hazardous waste disposal facility.

The measure, which was referred to the Government Administration and Elections Committee, would allow the governor to appoint a five-member Connecticut Hazardous Waste Management Board.

The board would estimate the amount of hazardous waste in Connecticut by Dec. 31, 1985, and prepare a disposal plan for the Legislature to act on.

The intent of the proposal is to coax a private company into establishing a hazardous waste disposal facility. If not, the board would have the power to build and operate a plant.

One section of the bill would give the board the power to designate a number of proposed sites for the facility and to take the land over by condemnation if the owner refuses to sell.

"It would be necessary for the state to operate a facility, unless private industry steps in," said Rep. Torrance Bertinuso, D-East Windsor. "A public necessity could arise and the state may be forced to take the property, if the owner refuses to sell the land."

Tsongas warns of energy lack

PROVIDENCE (UPI) — Americans must face the fact there is an energy problem in this country because of an overdependence on fossil fuels, Sen. Paul E. Tsongas, D-Mass., said Friday.

Tsongas, a member of the Energy and Natural Resources Committee, spoke as part of an energy lecture series at Brown University.

"People don't want to address the problem of an energy crisis," he said. "There is a tendency to avoid the unpleasant reality of it."

He said the problem stems from the fact Americans are too dependent on fossil fuels, which are a "finite, diminishing energy source."

There is a need for a transition to renewable energy sources such as solar power, he said, but Americans have "disrespect" for conservation renewables.

As an example he cited an amendment he proposed in 1977 to have the Department of Transportation look at ways to use bicycles more efficiently.

Tsongas said there was widespread fear in Congress that such legislation would hurt the auto industry.

Although the nation will be developing some renewable energy sources as well as continuing to use oil, gas and other liquid fossil fuels, the remainder of the nation's energy must come from coal or nuclear power, he said.

"It's an either-or situation. We have to accept one or the other," he said.

Almanac

Today is Saturday, March 26, the 85th day of 1983 with 280 to follow. The moon is approaching its full phase.

The morning stars are Jupiter and Saturn. The evening stars are Mercury, Venus and Mars. Those born on this date in history are under the sign of Aries.

Poet Robert Frost was born on this date in 1875, as were dramatist Tennessee Williams, in 1911 and composer Pierre Boulez, in 1925.

In 1859, astronomers reported sighting a new planet in a new orbit near that of Mercury. They named it Vulcan. It is now believed to have been a "rogue asteroid."

In 1952, Dr. Jonas Salk announced a new vaccine for immunization against polio.

In 1979, Israel and Egypt signed a peace treaty at the White House, ending 30 years of hostilities. Israeli Prime Minister Begin and Egyptian President Sadat gave President Carter credit for the treaty.

A thought for the day: American poet Robert Frost said, "Most of the change we see in life is due to truths being in and out of favor."

Your neighbors' views:

Should Connecticut enact a law protecting the rights of gays?

GIL LABASSE, Manchester: "It really doesn't matter to me."

SUZANNE HENDESSI, Manchester: "I'm neutral on it."

ROBERT KENYON, Manchester: "I think everybody has their own right of the way they want to be. And if this is the way they want to be, then they should have that right. This is supposed to be a free world."

ROB CROSBY, Manchester: "Yeah. They deserve rights too."

TOM HAJBUCKI, Manchester: "Not really. I don't think so. I'm not for gays."

JIM McVEY, Windsor: "Probably. They got a right for whatever they want to do."

BARRY BARROWS, DAVID LADABOUCHE, Manchester: "Yeah. They're human too. They have their own rights to do whatever else has rights. They want their lives."

DEP probing wells for hazardous chemical

By Raymond T. DeMeo
Herald Reporter

Town health department officials will test wells that supply water to about a dozen businesses on Route 83 in Manchester to see if they have been contaminated by hazardous chemicals.

The state's Department of Environmental Protection requested the testing after finding hazardous levels of a de-greasing solvent in a well serving the Court House One racquetball complex on Route 83 in Vernon, and traces of the solvent in two reserve wells owned by the Connecticut Water Co. of Vernon, also on Route 83.

The DEP has also requested health officials in Vernon and South Windsor to test wells in the vicinity of a site where 200 barrels of paint and paint thinner were found recently.

"If the tests indicate contamination, we'll do ground water tests and take immediate action to get whatever's causing the pollution out of there," Edward Parker, principal sanitary engineer for the DEP's hazardous waste unit, said today.

Town OFFICIALS will test wells of businesses located along Route 83 north of Denning Road. Town engineer John Salcius said they'll be on the lookout for unusually high concentrations of solvents and hydrocarbons. Hydrocarbons would be present if oil or gasoline had contaminated the wells, he said.

Ellen Z. Harrison, senior environmental analyst for the DEP's water compliance unit, said a test of the Court House One well turned up trichloroethylene, a chemical used to clean automobile engines, in concentrations of 40 parts per billion. Federal regulations classify the chemical as hazardous in concentrations greater than 20 parts per billion.

The racquetball complex used the water to sprinkle its lawn, and not for drinking, she said.

She said the source of the pollution is unknown, although there are many potential sources in the area, including several service stations and automobile dealerships.

A spokesman for the Acadia Restaurant, one of the businesses whose well will be tested for contamination by town officials, said Friday the restaurant had noticed nothing unusual about the taste or appearance of its drinking water.

DEP officials said this week that hazardous levels of lead were found in water samples taken from the bottom of a slope where the state Department of Transportation dumped about 200 barrels of paints and solvents in 1974. The slope is located just south of Gerber Scientific's headquarters in South Windsor, near the town lines of both Manchester and Vernon.

THE MATERIALS in the barrels is potentially flammable, Parker said. In 1974, some solvent from one of the barrels spilled into the engine of a backhoe and caused a fire, he said.

The closest homes in Manchester to the barrel dumping site are in the Denning Road area. Salcius said he "wouldn't expect any kind of contamination" in those wells because ground water from the site flows away from Manchester.

Democrats planning to honor six

The Democratic Town Committee Thursday night unveiled the list of honorees for the annual "honoring friends" dinner to be held June 4 at Willie's Steak House.

They are:

- Stephen T. Penny, the current mayor who is Manchester's first ever three-term Democratic mayor.
- John J. Sullivan, the veteran state central committee member.
- Alphonse Reale, Democratic chairman in Voting District 7 and a long-time town committee member.
- Mary O'Connor, active in town committee politics since the early 1950s. She was involved in the caucus of 1983, when John D. LaBelle was elected Democratic town chairman, making the Democratic Party a viable political force for the first time.

Wife of Reagan's attorney is murdered; her son, 20, is charged after questioning

PALOS VERDES ESTATES, Calif. (UPI) — The wife of President Reagan's personal attorney was found dead late Thursday in the bedroom of the family's home and their son was arrested for the bludgeoning slaying early Friday, police said.

The body of Marguerite Miller, 52, wife of prominent Los Angeles attorney Roy B. Miller, was discovered by police in the master bedroom of the sprawling, ranch-style home, located on the Palos Verdes Peninsula.

Detectives said the victim's son, Michael David Miller, 20, was contacted at the home of a relative Friday morning and asked to come to the police station for questioning.

During the interview with Los Angeles Sheriff's homicide investigators, Detective Art Clabby said, the young man was arrested and booked for his mother's murder.

Clabby said no motive had been established and could not discuss how the victim was killed. But asked if she was hit on the head with an object, the detective said yes.

A coroner's spokesman said an autopsy would be performed during the weekend.

The older Miller, a senior partner in the Los Angeles law firm of Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, telephoned police after arriving home about 11 p.m. FST Thursday, Sgt. Ed Jaakola said.

"Mr. Miller stated that when he arrived home he entered the front door and saw blood and a broken pair of glasses on the floor," Jaakola said. "He called his wife's name and when there was no response he went to a neighbor's house to call police."

Jaakola said there was no sign of forced entry to the house, located in the 4.5 square-mile community of 17,000 residents where houses cost up to $3 million.

Miller, 52, a tax specialist, began representing Reagan after William French Smith became attorney general in 1981.

The attorney is representing the Reagans in the trial of a couple accused of trying to defraud the president by making a phony offer on his ocean view home. A pretrial hearing on the case against Ann and James Yarbrough was scheduled for April 1.

Miller, who earned his law degree at Stanford in 1954, also handles all the president's tax matters.

White House spokesman Mark Weinberg said the Reagans were acquainted with the Millers, but he did not know if the two couples were personal friends.

Teacher takes over wheel, bus crashes, nine killed

GRUBBS, Ark. (UPI) — A school bus carrying 42 students and teachers on a "fun trip" to a vocational education contest ran off a highway and overturned Friday, killing nine people and injuring 28, officials said.

Killed were five teachers and four students who were looking forward to competing in the Skills Olympics at Little Rock, 100 miles southwest. One of the teachers who died was driving the bus.

A trip like this is supposed to be a fun trip," said Mike Jasiniski, an Arkansas, Ark., student who rushed to the scene after the accident.

The injured, some of whom had to be cut from the mangled wreckage of the overturned bus, were taken to hospitals in Jonesboro and Newport. Three in critical condition were transferred to Little Rock and Memphis, Tenn.

The bus overturned about 6 a.m. CST at the intersection of highways 214 and 18, an intersection nearby residents described as dangerous.

Odie Kinard, who lives less than a mile away, said the curve was badly designed.

"There have been numerous, numerous accidents happened there," he said.

State Highway 214 makes a short, sharp curve and dead ends into Highway 18. The driver apparently did not know that the road ended and the bus skidded across Highway 18, hit a ditch and flipped over on its side.

"It was a terrible mess," said James Kinard, whose wife owns a grocery store at the highway intersection and was the first person on the scene.

Kinard said one of the students told him the bus already had started to turn over when it rounded the sharp corner.

When he arrived, Kinard said 10 students had managed to get out of the bus and two or three were lying on the ground. Kinard said he was only able to move one more student out of the bus.

"The rest were trapped in the front," he said, until emergency crews arrived in about 30 minutes. Kinard said he could see a boy and a girl in the bus "just barely breathing" but could not get to them before they died.

"There are no plans to turn the heat back on" in chilly barracks, post houses and offices because the base must save the rest of its 1983 energy budget for summer air conditioning, an officer said Friday.

The base already has used $4.4 million of its $9.6 million fiscal year allocation for energy and has shut down gas, electric and oil heating systems in all buildings except medical clinics, child care facilities and the chapel.

"There are no plans to turn the heat back on although we are monitoring the conditions," said Capt. Phil Howell, public affairs officer for the 9th Mechanized Infantry Division. "Everyone is affected, regardless of rank."

The heat cutoff affects about 10,000 soldiers and their dependents, some of whom have complained vigorously to Army officials as overnight temperatures have slipped into the 30s this week.

Howell said utility consumption at the base 50 miles west of Alexandria is running about 12 percent higher than last year, but officials have no idea why energy-saving measures have been so unsuccessful.

"The only thing I can really say is the energy consumption is higher," he said.

Officials turned off the heat "to take advantage of the relatively mild spring period and try to conserve some energy" in anticipation of the summer months, Howell said.

"Air conditioning draws the most out of our utilities program," he said. "It costs more to run air conditioning during the summer than heat during the winter."

Howell said there have been no reports of sickness because of the heat cutoff, but heat would be turned back on for ill residents or others with special needs.

81-year-old may be evicted by his relatives

GALVESTON, Texas (UPI) — An 81-year-old man, being evicted by relatives from the house he has rented 42 years for $26.50 a month, said Friday he would rather move to a cemetery than leave his home and tomato garden.

"I hope I go to the cemetery," Stafford Schmidt said. "I'm too old to move. I'm going on 82-years-old and I just don't feel like I could make it."

Schmidt has rented the two-story house he and his brothers built in 1941 on property owned by Schmidt's nephew. At that time, Schmidt said, he signed a lifelong lease with his nephew Herman Hoke guaranteeing the rent.

Schmidt said he has misplaced the agreement or it was stolen, and this week he lost a court battle with the new owners of the house, who want to raise the rent almost ten-fold.

Hoke's heirs, Kathy Ward, 31, and her brother John Lunning, 26, both of Houston, said they can no longer afford to rent the house for $318 a year, especially when they have a potential renter who is willing to pay $230 a month.

A Galveston County probate judge ordered Schmidt to vacate the property within 30 days.

"I sympathize with him," said Judge Jerome Jones. "But you've got to follow the law. It just boiled down to he didn't have the evidence in writing."

Several people testified in the trial that they had seen the lease, but Jones ruled in favor of the homeowners.

Schmidt's attorney Scott King of League City said he plans to try to work out an agreement to allow his client to stay in the house at an increased rent.

Schmidt's only source of income is $213 in monthly pension benefits.

Ms. Ward said although she does not want to force the old man from his home, she has no choice.

"This whole thing has been horrible. I realize it might not sound like a fair thing to do, but he has put us in a box. I don't like forcing him to leave," Ms. Ward said. "It upsets me, but we need the money. He boils down to our not being able to afford to have him living there and only paying $26.50 a month."

Army rejects warm facilities

FORT POLK, La. (UPI) — The Army has "no plans to turn the heat back on" in chilly barracks, post houses and offices because the base must save the rest of its 1983 energy budget for summer air conditioning, an officer said Friday.

The base already has used $4.4 million of its $9.6 million fiscal year allocation for energy and has shut down gas, electric and oil heating systems in all buildings except medical clinics, child care facilities and the chapel.

"There are no plans to turn the heat back on although we are monitoring the conditions," said Capt. Phil Howell, public affairs officer for the 9th Mechanized Infantry Division. "Everyone is affected, regardless of rank."

Clark's funeral set; many in medicine planning to attend

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Utah medical researchers said Friday it was time to honor "Barney Clark, the man" for his contribution to science rather than dwell on what was learned during his 112 days on an artificial heart.

Preparations were under way to fly Clark's body back to the Seattle suburb where he lived and practiced dentistry for most of his adult life and where funeral services will be conducted Tuesday.

"We want to lower the university's profile until after the funeral," said University of Utah Medical Center spokesman John Dwan. "No one is going to talk or say anything."

"It's time to honor Barney Clark, the man. Our perspective is that all the focus should be on Dr. Clark and his tremendous contribution to science and the legacy of knowledge he left."

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the Federal Way Wash. State Center of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Heart surgeons William DeVries and Lyle Joyce, artificial organ pioneer Willem Kolff, artificial heart inventor Robert Jarvik and social worker Peg Miller all planned to attend the services. Several nurses and medical technicians who worked closely with Clark at the medical center also hoped to travel to Seattle.

Clark's widow, Lina Loy, asked that in lieu of flowers contributions be sent to the Artificial Heart Research Fund at the university, which paid the $150,000 to $200,000 in bills for Clark's stay at the medical center.

Flags across Utah flew at half-staff in honor of Clark, who was hailed by Gov. Scott Matheson as "one of the preeminent pioneers of science."

President Reagan praised Clark as a "brave and courageous man" Thursday in a brief telephone call from the Oval Office to Mrs. Clark at her brother's home in Salt Lake City. The president "expressed his deepest sympathy," a press aide said.

Dwan said messages of condolence for Clark's family were pouring into the university hospital.

While they wouldn't discuss specifics, the Utah researchers said the next recipient of a Jarvik-7 artificial heart will benefit from Clark's sacrifice and the setbacks he suffered.

Jarvik said Thursday changes will be made in hardware and procedures because of convulsions that wracked Clark's body a few days after the implantation and a broken valve connector that forced an emergency operation.

"The things that have been learned are going to be very useful," he said.

But Dwan said the researchers don't want to discuss the scientific findings that resulted from Clark's experiment.

"They want to leave it general for the lay press until their professional papers are written," he said.

"Their reports to the lay press are too open to misinterpretation and the professional journals feel they are unprofessional."

A Christian pays debt of conscience

Nancy Carr is active in so many good causes in town it may come as a surprise to some — it certainly did to me — that the director of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches is also a committed participant in a movement that has very little direct relevance to Manchester: the drive to alleviate the plight of Soviet Jews.

She has just returned from Jerusalem. A Roman Catholic, she was one of only 13 American non-Jews invited there to attend the World Conference on Soviet Jewry.

It took up the greater part of last week. "There are very few things I would like that much time out for," said Mrs. Carr. But this is a cause she has identified strongly with for more than a decade.

THE PURPOSE of the conference was to publicize the dilemma of Jews in the U.S.S.R. They are treated horribly, and there are ominous signs of worse treatment to come.

Mrs. Carr was invited to Jerusalem as a representative of the Hartford Interfaith Group on Soviet Jewry, of which she became co-chairwoman eight years ago.

You couldn't exactly call her a latecomer to the cause. While in Jerusalem, she helped draft a Christian's statement of support for Soviet Jews, and she said this week she plans to get the topic placed on the agenda in April of the National Workshop of Christians and Jews, a gathering of religious leaders.

She says it's almost inconceivable that this workshop has scheduled discussions on dozens of different moral issues, but not on Soviet Jews.

YOU'D THINK Mrs. Carr had enough to keep her busy these days, but then she's always busy. Why has the plight of Soviet Jews such claim on her energies?

She admits that many groups of people in the world are subjected to more extreme human rights violations than are the Soviet Jews. At least they are not being systematically killed.

What makes the difference for her, she says, is the memory of the Holocaust, when so many millions of Jews were murdered while most of the world watched with near-indifference.

She says a conference she attended a few years ago on the Holocaust "sensitized" her. She was so appalled by what was revealed there of the German atrocities and the world's failure to intervene that she made a promise to herself: "Never again as a Christian was I going to be silent on the condition of Jews," she says.

MRS. CARR was one of the main speakers Thursday at a press briefing in Hartford on the Jerusalem conference. She and the other speakers told how under his leadership, Yuri Andropov, the U.S.S.R. has squeezed Jewish emigration to a trickle. About the only Jews allowed to leave these days are over age 65.

Mrs. Carr heard one lecturer in Jerusalem tell of a new game in Russian schools: "Concentration Camp." Jewish pupils are assigned numbers by their non-Jewish classmates and are taunted about the Holocaust. Pamphlets accusing the "Zionists" of causing trouble are peddled on Russian streets. This is on top of the job discrimination and religious persecution Russian Jews have always had to endure.

One speaker at the Jerusalem conference said he was beginning to believe that Soviet Jews are in mortal danger. "We were on the verge of something very drastic in the Soviet Union. The evidence is more and more compelling that the Jews are in a real physical danger in the Soviet Union," said Rev. Gordon S. Bates of East Hartford, summarizing what this speaker said. Bates was another of the few Christians who attended the Jerusalem conference.

Mrs. Carr concedes that the conference may have done nothing to improve the lot of Russian Jews. But she believes it is better to complain loudly about the U.S.S.R.'s policies than to do nothing. "Never again will Christians be silent while their Jewish brothers and sisters are suffering persecution of the kind that is going on in Russia," she says.

Lavelle under scrutiny

WASHINGTON — Sens. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., and Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., will turn over to the Justice Department material that indicates Rita Lavelle, fired last month from the Environmental Protection Agency, lied to the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee in public testimony on Feb. 23.

Lavelle is already being investigated by the Justice Department, but she has not yet been criminally charged.

The latest controversy centers on a meeting Lavelle had with state environmental officials in April 1982, shortly after she took over the EPA's toxic waste division. Essentially, Stafford and Moynihan want to know if Lavelle deliberately told the state officials one thing that last April and the Senate committee something else 10 months later.

SPECIFICALLY, they want to know:

- Did Lavelle tell the committee that an $820,000 grant had been given to the states for toxic waste cleanup when in fact it had not?
- Did she tell a state official that a letter he had sent to Moynihan, almost held up her nomination, and then deny it before the Senate committee?

On the first point, an EPA official told my associate Tony Capaccio that the cleanup grant to the states had never materialized. "In fact, the official said, it was 'only after the last-minute intervention of Rita Lavelle that it was approved.'"

YET WHEN Moynihan asked Lavelle of Lavelle's meeting with the state officials, she contradicted her sworn testimony that she did not accuse Norman Nosenchuk, a New York state environmental official, of obstructing her nomination.

Citing these "outstanding questions" about Lavelle's February testimony, Sen. Moynihan observed in a note to Sen. Stafford, "The committee had a great deal of trouble with your testimony... perhaps too much trust."

Stafford responded: "I would be happy to join with you in asking the Justice Department specifically to look into the matters you have raised."

Footnote: Lavelle's attorney commented: "If they think she lied, it makes sense to me that they send it to the Justice Department."

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: The tariff on imported work gloves is higher than that on dress gloves, so many sneaky foreign manufacturers are disguising their work gloves as dress gloves. Domestic glove makers have asked Congress to tighten the rules.

Some high-level Democrats are convinced that Republicans are secretly aiding black leaders who want to field a favorite son candidate for the 1984 presidential primaries. The Republicans' alleged goal is to disrupt the Democratic Party.

Some of West Virginia Governor Jay Rockefeller's associates say he may run for the U.S. Senate, when incumbent Jennings Randolph retires next year.

Congressional investigators say the Defense Department could save millions if only the various services would forget their rivalries and use similar equipment.

One example: A five-inch guided projectile used by the Navy could be fitted with an inexpensive sleeve to fit the Army's needs, but the Army insists on building its own.

How does White House chief of staff Jim Baker keep his job after repeated clashes with presidential counselor Ed Meese? Sources say one reason is that the most trusted Reagan aide, Michael Deaver, is a Baker ally.

An atrocity in New Bedford

Editor's note: On Saturdays the Manchester Herald reprints editorials from other New England newspapers. This is from the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram.

The first reports of the gang rape of a woman in full view of other bar patrons. The bartender apparently didn't even raise a protest, let alone try to stop what was going on. Yes, the other patrons stood by and watched, some are reported to have clapped and cheered.

We have to face the fact that this bestiality did take place right here in Massachusetts in the year 1983. Try to explain it if you can.

The rapists are one thing. Rapists are sick primitives who do not conform to ordinary standards. But how explain the behavior of the onlookers? Was it fear that kept them from responding to the woman's cries and pleas? Did some deep and loathsome prurience seize their fantasies and make them willing spectators?

Whatever the cause or the explanation, the terrible crimes in New Bedford touched a nerve. The anti-rapist rally, hastily organized as it was, attracted a crowd of more than 4,000 to New Bedford. It provided a needed catharsis for a society that was choking on the bitter reality.

Now comes the long process of the trial. It's going to be hard to keep in mind that no one has yet been proved guilty. It's going to be easier to keep in mind that justice must be done.

Commentary

An imperfect analogy

If U.N. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick's suggestion of a coordinated aid effort similar to the Marshall Plan is tried, Americans had better be prepared for something considerably short of the prototype program's success. The circumstances are not comparable.

Western Europe in 1947 was struggling with one overwhelming problem common to every country. Both the vanquished and the victorious had been flattened by the war, economically and physically.

NONE OF this fits Central America. Far from being able to help themselves, the populations — with one exception — are largely illiterate subsistence farmers. Far from being able to help themselves, they are largely illiterate subsistence farmers. Far from being able to help themselves, they are largely illiterate subsistence farmers.

The infrastructure for rapid economic development — transportation facilities, distribution networks, power grids — is virtually nonexistent. With economies completely dependent upon agriculture, all suffer from the slack world market for their products. But in differing degrees and ways.

Costa Rica, the region's one genuine democracy, spent itself into technical bankruptcy with expensive social programs. But the educated, homogeneous Ticos are the most likely to succeed because they have a sufficiently generous helping hand.

Miller takes 'Salesman' to Communist China

By Michael Ross
United Press International

PEKING — In 1948, the Communists came to power in China and "Death of a Salesman" premiered on Broadway.

Now, time has brought those two events together again and Peking audiences are about to see the first Chinese production of the play, directed by none other than its author, playwright Arthur Miller.

"It wasn't my idea. It was theirs," Miller said Friday, stretching out on a couch before a crowd of reporters in a reception room at the Capital Theater, where he has been busy rehearsing his Chinese cast for the past week.

Miller confessed the idea seemed impossible to him when he was first approached by Ying Ruosheng, the Chinese actor and director who played Kublai Khan in the Marco Polo television mini-series.

"I don't speak the language and they don't speak English," Miller said. "I thought we were so far apart culturally that it would take me forever to make things comprehensible to the actors. It's one thing to understand a declarative sentence, but it's quite another to understand complicated emotions. I was scared."

But gradually, "after the first shock, it got to seem feasible," said Miller, who is relying on Ying's excellent translation and the universality of the play's themes to hit home with Chinese audiences.

And so Miller, who doesn't speak "a syllable of Chinese," and his photographer wife Inge Morath, who speaks the language fluently, came to Peking, where the production opens May 7. "I think now I was too frightened at first," Miller said. "I've only been in a few days but I'm hardly worried any more. It turns out they (the Chinese) are human."

The first American to direct a play in China, Miller is gambling on a conviction built on four decades of observing and transferring the drama of human lives onto the stage. The conviction, in the playwright's words, is that there is a "universal human being" buried beneath the surface of contrasting cultures.

"If I succeed," Miller said, "the production will make a statement that human beings are human beings, that cultures are tremendously different but that underneath there is homo sapiens. He's there and I'm hoping to reach him."

China's leadership is extremely sensitive to the influence of "bourgeois decadence" and in the past has admitted only Western art that is either tame or supportive of its contention that life is better under communism.

But despite the light the play throws on the dark side of the American dream, both Miller and Ying are confident that the merits and message of "Death of a Salesman" will outweigh any propaganda point it might otherwise serve.

Head-on accident

At least two persons were injured in an apparent head-on crash Friday night at about 10:30 on North Main Street. Above, firefighters are shown as they try to free a person trapped in the pickup truck. Meanwhile, rescue workers were trying to free another person in the station wagon. There were no details about the accident available Friday night.

How new becomes not new

If it weren't for the fact that new things are so satisfying to buy, it would be depressing how soon they start to deteriorate after you acquire them.

When I buy a new car, which isn't often, I always wait with a feeling of dread for the day I put the first scratch or dent in it. Sooner or later it has to come. Once I scraped the side of my car on the green paint of the garage door when I was hurrying to put it away during a rain storm. One new car I had got its first dent in the parking lot of a supermarket.

Some guy parked too close to me and the edge of his door banged into mine when he opened it. It wasn't much of a dent but it doesn't take much to change your attitude toward a new car. Once it happens, even if it's within the first few weeks after you bought it, the car seems used and you begin thinking of your next one, pristine and undented.

WE BOUGHT a new carpet for the living room eight years ago. On the third night after we got it, I took a cup of coffee into the living room after dinner to drink while I watched television. I drank most of it but by the time I got to the last half inch it was cold and I put the cup on the little table next to my chair.

Half an hour later I reached for the second section of the newspaper and dumped the cup on the floor, spilling the cold coffee. For an instant I was pleased that the cup hadn't broken but then I saw the spot on the rug.

I ran to the kitchen for a damp cloth and tried to remember whether it was lemon juice or club soda you use on coffee spots. Nothing took the coffee stain out and from its third day that new carpet has been just another old rug with a spot on it that I'd like to get rid of.

WHEN I WAS 12, my mother bought me a corduroy suit. It must have been the first real suit with matching pants and jacket that I ever had. It even had a vest.

That Sunday we went to my uncle's house for dinner and I wore my new suit. I was very proud of it, especially the vest. When we came home late that afternoon, our English bulldog had been locked in the house most of the day so I took him out in the backyard to play.

For some reason, I didn't bother to change my clothes first. Spike, the dog, loved to pull on a heavy leather strap we had and I started to play tug of war with him. He weighed almost as much as I did and it was always a close contest.

Somehow he got me over by the fence at the side of the yard. He gave me a hard tug and I caught my new corduroy pants on a nail sticking out of the fencepost. It tore a jagged hole in them just above the knee.

As you can imagine, that was not one of the best days in my life. I felt terrible about tearing my pants and even worse about how mad my mother was.

My mother sewed them up and I wore them for several years but never with any pleasure. As a matter of fact, that experience gave me a complex about new suits. Whenever I buy a new one, I'm nervous every time I wear it during its first six months. I can still see that jagged tear in the knee.

Fortunately, there are characteristics possessions have or acquire that we sometimes prefer to brand newness. If we keep a car long enough, we lose the feeling that it's a new car we banged up, and start thinking of it as a somewhat battered but lovable old friend.

It's a good thing we can take as much pleasure from oldness as newness because, for the most part, we have to live with more oldness. When we buy something new, we're looking for something, unlike ourselves and our other possessions, perfect.

Supermarket assault leads to arrests

Manchester police have arrested a second man in connection with the assault of a 69-year-old woman and a 17-year-old at the A&P on Tolland Turnpike about three weeks ago, they said. Eric Scott Wells, 29, of Hartford, allegedly drove the getaway car in the incident, was charged Monday with criminal liability for second-degree larceny.

Arrested March 11 was Justo Cruz, 27, of Bloomfield, on charges of assault of a victim 60 years or older in the second degree, third-degree assault, the same degree of criminal mischief, and second-degree larceny.

He is being held at the Hartford Correctional Institute in lieu of $20,000 bond.

Wells was released on $200 bond for a Manchester Superior Court date of April 4. According to the warrant affidavit for the arrest of Cruz, the Bloomfield man went into the A&P and pulled a wallet from the pocket of a 69-year-old woman who was bending down in one of the aisles. During Cruz's getaway on foot, according to the affidavit, a 17-year-old male tried to stop him. But Cruz punched him, and caused $200 damage to the front door of the store, the court record states. Cruz then jumped into the car driven by Wells.

There was a small amount of money in the wallet, according to the affidavit. Manchester police are not expecting any more arrests stemming from an alleged cocaine bust Friday night on Essex Street, Det. Capt. James Sweeney said.

Sweeney had said Monday police were expecting more arrests. Sweeney, however, said the investigation is closed. "There was information we got (from the seizure and arrests) that we thought would take us further," he said. "At this point, the investigation is closed." Police arrested four persons and seized $5,500 worth of cocaine Friday night at what they called a drug factory at 22 Essex Street. Arrested on narcotics charges were David L. Berzins, 22, Janet M. Sahr, 19, Walter A. Korner, 21, all of 22 Essex St., and William A. Herzog, 25, of 169 Maple St. Herzog was arrested on charges not directly related to the alleged cocaine selling operation.

A 16-year-old Olcott Street resident was charged with breach of peace Monday after he allegedly threw two eggs on a car and refused to clean them off, police said Wednesday. Joseph Lavigne II, of 40 Olcott St., was released for a court appearance on April 4. Police said they responded to a report of eggs thrown on a car near 40 Olcott St., and discovered that Lavigne had allegedly thrown them. According to the report, the officer told the teenager he had to either clean the eggs off or be arrested. He refused to clean the eggs off, and was arrested.

The alleged theft of $3.60 worth of empty beer bottles from the cellar of a North School Street home led to the arrest and jailing of a Warehouse Point man early this morning. Police charged Joseph A. Perelli, 39, with third-degree burglary and sixth-degree larceny after an officer allegedly observed him placing a case of Heineken beer bottles in his car. Police said Perelli broke into the cellar hatchway of the home of Bradford Driggs of 54 N. School St. He allegedly stole three cases of bottles before being apprehended around 5 a.m.

Advice

Moustaches only make deceased more lifelike

DEAR ABBY: Something has been bothering me for a long time and I hope you can do something about it.

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buran

I am up in years (72) and have noticed at the funeral homes an item that bothers me. When I go to pay my respects to someone who has passed on - especially the older ones - I get a shock when I see moustaches so plainly conspicuous on the faces of women!

I do hope you publish this, Abby, so funeral directors will be aware of it. It doesn't sound like much, but I think it's important.

LOVE FROM OKLAHOMA

She is constantly telling me not to mention something she has told me in her letters to me. Recently we had some bitter words over the phone because of something I mentioned in one of my letters. I told her these letters were for her eyes only, and I should be able to write whatever I darn please. She said, "Write the highly confidential things on a separate piece of paper!"

What is your opinion? Must I watch everything I say in my letters to my mother and defer to her age in a polite way? Or am I justified in being angry that she shares my letters without my permission?

NO NAMES OR TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAMES: Yes, you are justified in being angry, but you are not entirely blameless. Even though you should be able to write whatever you darn please to your mother, now that you know you can't, if you're wise, you won't.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 39923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I have read in your column about people who had attacks of sudden fast heartbeat. I have some experience with help someone else as it has helped me.

I started having attacks of a fast heartbeat which would come on all of a sudden for no apparent reason. They started when I was in my mid 20s and I am now 72 years old. They made me very weak if I didn't get them stopped.

I would lie down on my stomach and take a deep breath and hold it for a couple of seconds, and then repeat. That stopped my fast heartbeat as quickly as it started.

I had one of my spells come on me when I was in the doctor's office and I laid down on the doctor's table and it stopped as soon as it started. He couldn't explain it to me. But it works.

DEAR READER: Thank you for trying to help others. Yes, the maneuver of holding your breath will stop some attacks of rapid heartbeat. It is wise to lie down because holding your breath in such situations can make you faint if you are upright.

This will not work on rapid heart rates caused by an irritable center in the lower heart (ventricles) but does often help in those caused by an irritable spot in the top of the heart (supraventricular, nodal or atrial).

DEAR P.M. BLAKER: Your readers will probably be shocked when I tell you that I divorced my husband because he never complained.

Everything was OK with him. However I wanted things done, that was the way we did them. It might seem nice at first but I ended up making all the decisions and doing everything that needed doing. In other words, he used his all-accepting attitude to get out of all work.

Once the cellar was leaking, I asked him to take care of it. He said that I should do it if it bothered me. It didn't bother him. I'm telling you. That can drive a person crazy after a while. I lasted, for 23 years.

DEAR READER: You are not really writing to ask a question but to explain the reason for your divorce. Many people must have wondered why you would leave such a "nice guy."

Well, you have described your situation with great clarity and I am certain that all my readers understand why that must have been an extremely frustrating situation.

If you are afraid of anger, you may be attracted to someone who doesn't care about anything. That way, you can always have your own without having to stand up to your spouse.

Thoughts

Christians will celebrate Palm Sunday tomorrow. The day has touches of triumph and tragedy. It was a grand entry into the Holy City, but it was also the last entry.

Today that very spot outside the city there is a little chapel named Domini and saw the city he wept over it. He wept over Jerusalem because the people "did not know the things that make for peace."

God still must weep over our cities. We still have not learned the things that make for peace. During this holy season, let us pray for the things that make for peace.

Rev. Shephard S. Johnson over our cities. We still have not learned the things that make for peace. During this holy season, let us pray for the things that make for peace.

Prepare for electrical breakdowns today

This is the season of the year when electrical breakdowns occur most frequently — and I've found (as surely you have) almost always at the most inopportune time, late at night, on weekends when professional help is unavailable, or when no stores are open anywhere near. The winter's stress is behind us; we're sprucing up our homes, cars, boats. And what do we find? A damaging short circuit, even an electrical fire.

Your Money's Worth

Sylvia Porter

The embarrassing fact: Often the whole problem could have been prevented or easily solved by one simple, inexpensive purchase: a fuse.

As an admitted idiot with the mechanics of a house, I'll confess it took a serious emergency to convince me I had to find where the fuses were located in our home in exurbia. Now I know, and I am an enthusiastic advocate of easy-to-learn fuse know-how. I shudder when I think of the money I've wasted calling a professional to handle the simple replacement of a fuse.

The best approach to an electrical emergency — which could lead to a devastating fire — is the first step: Have an extra fuse on hand and learn how to replace one.

Last year, in fact, Underwriters' Laboratories adopted new standards for holiday light strings under which the addition of a replaceable fuse is mandatory as a significant new safety factor for preventing against electrical fires.

When properly applied, says James N. Mills, president of Bussman Division, McGraw-Hill, one of the world's largest manufacturers of fuses, a fuse can keep electricity under control.

electrical protective device.

They are installed in almost every modern commercial and industrial building, from the 10-story Sears Building in Chicago to the huge Superdome in New Orleans (as well as space shuttle Columbia). They protect circuit breakers against massive short-circuit currents. A fuse acts like a safety valve; it turns power off if something goes wrong.

There has to be a good reason for a fuse to blow (open). A fuse opens because something is wrong in the circuit it is protecting. Find out why the fuse opens, correct the problem, and then put in a new fuse. Do not replace a fuse until you've found out why it opened and have removed the overload or short circuit. Be sure to cut the main power before replacing a fuse.

A COMMON FAULT: A fuse alerts you to circuit overloads. (Sound familiar?) Most fused circuits of a house are designed to carry 15-ampere current. Such a circuit should be protected with a 15-ampere (or smaller) fuse. But if you plug into that circuit a number of lamps or appliances that draw more than 15 amperes (say, 20 amperes) at the same time, you've overloaded the capacity of the circuit. The 15-ampere fuse will open automatically and cut off power before serious damage is done to the house wiring.

Before you replace the opened fuse, you must reduce the circuit load to 15 amperes or less by operating fewer appliances. You can then install a new 15-ampere fuse. The ampere rating of a fuse should never be greater than the circuit-carrying capacity of a circuit. It's unsafe to use, say, a 30-ampere fuse in a 15-ampere circuit. (Learning along with me?)

Electrical appliances, power tools, lamps, fans, switches and cords can become defective through abuse or years of service.

If your appliances, tools, etc., cause a fuse to blow or show any sign of defect or improper operation, they should not be used until inspected and properly repaired or replaced.

AMONG BUSSMAN'S major guidelines:

- 1) Don't wait for an electrical emergency to occur. Prepare for it. Check your homeowner's, car or boat owner's manual for the locations of all electrical installations where fuses are used. Note the location and preferably make a diagram for posting on an accessible home bulletin board; keep a flashlight or battery-operated lantern nearby.
- 2) Find out the size and model number of the fuse in each location, and store spare fuses in a nearby cabinet not accessible to children.
- 3) Practice locating and changing fuses before an emergency arises. Some fuses can be replaced by hand, others require a simple tool.
- 4) Don't stand on a wet floor when replacing a fuse.
- 5) Don't overload a circuit and certainly don't use defective appliances or frayed extension cords.
- 6) Don't engage a fuse with pliers or other metal tools.
- 7) Don't insert a new fuse until you have found and removed the cause of the fuse blowing.
- 8) Don't stand on a wet floor when replacing a fuse.
- 9) Do call an electrician if lights keep flickering (not just dim).
- 10) Do call an electrician if a fuse keeps blowing.
- 11) Do call an electrician if a fuse keeps blowing.
- 12) Caution: When smoke, burning odors, fuse replacement is not the answer. The problem is serious, and professional help is urgent.

You're not just saving money by learning about fuses; you're saving your life.

Grant given

HARTFORD (UPI) — The Neighborhood Housing Coalition has received a $10,000 grant from the Greater Hartford Chamber of Commerce to stay afloat until it raises more money.

The housing group has been trying for several months since December when the chamber took over the Greater Hartford Process, a city-oriented agency that provided research and support services for the housing coalition.

Home construction gaining

Construction of single family houses in Manchester appears to be picking up again, permits issued by the town Building Department indicate.

Five permits for single family houses were issued in a single day this week, and for the month of March there have been 11 permits issued for new one-family houses.

For a long while, with interest rates high and the market for houses down, a request for a permit for a new individual house was rare, with most of the permits being issued for conversions, ex-
