Stolberg opposes tax referendum

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International

HARTFORD — A fragile compromise on a $772 tax package to balance the state's next budget teetered Friday as House Speaker Irving Stolberg, D-New Haven, balked at a provision to hold an advisory referendum on an income tax.

Gov. William O'Neill said he would be open to a referendum on the income tax issue, an idea Senate Democratic leaders raised to break a budget stalemate and move nearer agreement on a tax package for the 1983-84 fiscal year.

Stolberg, however, was openly cool to the idea and said he could not see how the question could be posed on the ballot to get an accurate reading of sentiment on an income tax and not just a vote against all types of tax increases.

The proposal for an advisory referendum on an income tax was raised by Senate Democrats as a trade-off to muster the votes needed to pass a more conventional $772 million tax package for the upcoming fiscal year.

O'Neill told reporters Friday he would be open to the idea of a referendum but said, "I have a feeling that the people will speak loudly and clearly."

Stolberg, who has vowed repeatedly to veto a tax reform package including an income tax, declined to predict defeat for the tax in a referendum but said, "I have a feeling that the people will speak loudly and clearly."

Israel, Syria both on alert

Lieberman will fight

U.S. sues state on tandem ban

HARTFORD (UPI) — Attorney General Joseph Lieberman welcomed a federal suit filed Friday challenging Connecticut's ban on tandem trucks, and promised to take it to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary.

Federal officials last week cut by 387 miles the list of Connecticut roads opened to tandems. The new list would allow the trucks only on the state's interstate highways.

Lieberman said he would challenge the ban on tandem trucks, and promised to take it to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary.

Grand juries come to an end

HARTFORD (UPI) — Connecticut's grand jury system, in existence in some form for 346 years, officially went out of business at 1:50 p.m. Thursday with the sweep of a pen by Gov. William O'Neill.

O'Neill signed into law a bill implementing a state constitutional amendment that eliminated indicting grand juries, established in colonial Connecticut and viewed as a buffer between the public and prosecutors.

The law, the signing of which was announced Friday, requires probable cause hearings where a judge will decide if a person charged with crime punishable by life in prison or death should stand trial.

The change was mandated by the constitutional amendment approved by voters last November to eliminate the grand jury system, which in recent years was criticized as antiquated and merely a rubber-stamp for prosecutors.

Former SLA soldier goes free

CHINO, Calif. (UPI) — Emily Harris, a soldier in the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army jailed for eight years for kidnapping Patty Hearst, cheerfully left prison early Friday and headed for a reunion with her paroled husband.

A smiling Mrs. Harris, accompanied by a woman who identified herself only as "a friend," quickly ducked into a car waiting outside the California Institute for Women and was whisked away, dodging reporters and television camera crews awaiting her release.

She left through the front door of the prison, located about 60 miles east of Los Angeles, at 12:45 a.m. PDT. Mrs. Harris refused to talk to reporters. "She asked me not to discuss her whereabouts, what she's doing or anything like that," Mrs. Harris' Oakland attorney, Stuart Hanlon, said Friday in a telephone interview.

Whatever she's doing is personal and I'm not in a position to talk about it for her.

The Harris, who once vowed to continue the "struggle against oppression" they began in the small terrorist group, were sentenced to concurrent terms of 10 years and eight months to life for the April 1974 kidnapping of the newspaper heiress and to 11 years to life for a shootout during a robbery at Me's Sporting Goods store in Los Angeles.

Running the gauntlet to Berlin

By William Strocener
United Press International

CHARLESTON, S.C. — The nine-hour Military Airlift Command flight from Charleston to Berlin ends with a 100-mile run through a gauntlet of Soviet missiles.

Defense Department flight charts carry this chilling reminder to pilots flying the narrow corridor between Frankfurt and Berlin: "Warning: Aircraft intruding upon non-free flying territory may be fired on without warning."

Air Force Maj. Kimel K. Evans of Dothan, Ala., said he's seasoned military pilots make the Charleston-Berlin run because "it's a very high stress job. A mistake could cause an international incident." Evans, an electronics warfare officer, and an expert on the Berlin corridors, is a regular Air Force spokesman on the subject.

French and U.S. military and civilian aircraft make daily flights over East Germany along the three narrow air routes that link Berlin — the last occupied area of World War II — to Western Europe 100 miles away.

THE ORIGINAL agreement with the Soviet Union allowed the allies to use the 20-mile-wide corridors from zero altitude to infinity.

"The East Bloc used the higher altitudes, and now they will guarantee the safety of our flights above 10,000 feet," Evans said. "We exercise our right to use the corridors, but we don't use the altitude above 10,000 feet."

East bloc aircraft also fly across the corridors regularly, which increases the possibility of in-flight collisions.

"The corridors are as heavily traveled as any area in Europe since the allies can fly only 10,000 feet or less," said Lt. Col. John Lankenshove of St. Louis, Mo., N.Y., who spent two years supervising air traffic controllers in Berlin.

"It might be pure luck, but the weather in the corridor at that altitude always seems to be cloudy and hazy. More times than not when we fly the corridor we don't see the ground or other aircraft. But we know they are out there. It's very close flying, and we've had a few near misses, mostly with civilian planes. They've come within 200 feet.

Flight charts tell pilots of the consequences of straying from the 20-mile-wide corridors on the airlift flight routes between Charleston, S.C., and Berlin. The original agreement with the Soviet Union has made the flights a very stressful job.

"The real danger to us is not staying in the corridor. At 250 knots, an aircraft can drift out of the corridor with a two or three degree heading error. For all practical purposes, the crews are trained to map read themselves through the corridor."

The Military Airlift Command C-141s are over East German territory about 30 minutes during the 75-minute flight from Rhein Main Air Force Base in Frankfurt to Tempelhof Airport in Berlin.

that can perform the task. The flights are used for shipping routine military cargo such as mail, food, clothing and perishables. But sometimes the cargo is unique. In one instance the Air Force transported 1,200 saplings requested by the U.S. Army to replace trees it ran over in a field maneuver.

Any East Coast Military Airlift Command wing could make the flights, but they are scheduled from Charleston to diversify the missions in the Air Force, Evans said. The flight to Frankfurt takes almost nine hours.

A typical crew consists of three pilots, two navigators, two loadmasters and two flight engineers; at least two pilots and a navigator must be on every flight.

ALTHOUGH THERE has been a free flow of traffic and a civil relationship between the two sides since portions of the Berlin agreement were renegotiated in 1972, the Soviets have been quick in the past to pounce on aircraft that stray out of the corridors.

Two Soviet fighters fired at an Air Force flight in 1982, seriously wounding a stewardess and two passengers, while the aircraft was within the corridor's boundaries. A year later, they downed a British Royal Air Force transport plane carrying seven crew members.

One of the last surviving joint operations of the occupying powers that the Soviets participate in is the Berlin Air Safety Center, the approving authority for all air traffic entering or leaving the divided city.

The Air Force is required to give the center 30 minutes advance notice of any flights planned in the corridor so air defense systems can be alerted.

"We have self-imposed rules to preclude an incident," said Lankenshove, a 39-year-old evaluation pilot assigned to the Charleston Air Force Base. "We have to be in radar contact with Berlin just prior to entering the corridor so we can identify the aircraft."

BECAUSE Berlin is 100 miles inside the East German border, the planes are equipped with sufficient fuel to make a return trip without landing in Berlin. A navigator is included on every flight even though each aircraft has an inertial navigation system

Your neighbors' views:

Do you favor mandatory national service for young people? (Asked at the Manchester Community College campus)

John Foley, Hartford: If it's mandatory service, that would be good if it provided educational benefits. It is incredibly difficult to get a job without training and it is difficult to get into a training program because they don't exist.

PF Craig Scarfo, Amherst, Mass.: It would be a good idea to have mandatory service. It's something the country could use. It's nice to have as volunteer service, but we need to keep up our national defense.

James Parkowski, Manchester: Fine if you're not in school or in college. Otherwise it takes away the time and money you've invested.

Darlene Lepack, Manchester: I'm against it because I have more valuable things to do. It is difficult to get jobs. Many people could not put in the time. They have to meet expenses.

John Wabrek, Manchester: How could you take a man that's going to be a doctor and ask him to do cleaning work in a nursing home? I think mandatory military service will come eventually. I'm sorry to say.

Shirley Sarkis, Manchester: I don't agree with "mandatory." If it were like the CCC (Civilian Conservation Corps) of pre World War II, I think there would be as great turnout.

Frank Amsden, Manchester: I don't agree with "mandatory." If it were like the CCC (Civilian Conservation Corps) of pre World War II, I think there would be as great turnout.

Tim Lepack, Manchester: I'm generally a lazy person so this would not work for me.

Not kryptonite, but sour economy rough on Superman's home town

By Rick Pearson
United Press International

METROPOLIS, Ill. — Bob Westfield says he still believes in Superman, despite a dose of economic kryptonite that dashed hopes of a multi-million dollar theme park in the "Man of Steel" hometown a decade ago.

"He's as real as God made little green apples," said Westfield, professional football player turned dry cleaner, satellite dish salesman and self-described promoter who talks faster than a speeding bullet.

"I have seen him take adults and kids out of them. I've seen him with the mentally retarded and become their hero. I've seen the eyes of kids widen after they see someone who can fly and who can't be hurt by things." Westfield said. "He must be alive."

The vision of turning Metropolis, a city of 7,000 perched on rolling hills along the Ohio River, into a major tourist attraction was very much alive in the early 1970s.

In January 1972 more than 3,000 people gathered to watch as Metropolis — the only town bearing that name in the U.S. Postal Service's directory — officially adopt Superman as a resident.

The Rev. Charles Chandler, a Baptist minister, donned the caped costume and performed several stunts before national newspaper, television and radio reporters. "We got excited about that and said, 'Well, what else can we do?'" said Clyde Wills, editor of the weekly Metropolis Planet.

In 1973, a corporation made up mainly of residents purchased $250,000 worth of stock to create a venture called "The Amazing World of Superman." They began planning a museum, shopping complex and theme park.

They paid $50,000 for the use of Superman's name and, in the summer of 1973, a museum was opened in a converted skating rink.

Three months later, the corporation ran out of money, the museum closed and its contents put up for auction.

"Things just pretty much died after that," Wills said. "Everybody was upset about losing the money they invested and Superman was just pretty much a dirty word around here for several years."

Almanac

Today is Saturday, May 28, the 148th day of 1983 with 217 to follow.

The moon is moving toward its last quarter.

The morning star is Mercury.

The evening stars are Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Gemini.

British statesman William Pitt was born on this date in 1759, as were novelist Ian Fleming, in 1903 and the Dionne quintuplets, in 1934.

On this date in history:
In 1794, President John Adams was empowered by an official act of Congress to recruit an American army of 10,000 volunteers.

In 1871, the Paris Commune was defeated after the state Department of Transportation took control of the city.

In 1940, the evacuation of British, French and Belgian troops from Dunkirk on the English Channel coast of France began. A total of 337,000 men reached Britain safely but 13,000 were killed by German military units.

In 1979, Greece became the 10th member of Western Europe's Common Market.

A thought for the day: Spanish writer Miguel De Cervantes said, "My honor is dearer to me than my life."

Republican has nothing to hide

HESPERIA, Calif. (UPI) — Virginia Lee Wanick has been called a "good Republican," but she may be a bit more liberal than her GOP colleagues would care to admit.

The recently elected president of the Hesperia Republican Women's Club was once a Democrat. Not exactly scandalous.

But she was also once a nightclub stripper known as the "Bazoom Girl" and "Miss 44 and Plenty More." "I'm an what I am," said Miss Wanick, 54. "I'm an ex-stripper and an actress. I have nothing to hide." She said she became a Republican in 1952 because she wanted to vote for Dwight Eisenhower.

Build your own log garage

KANNAPOLIS, N.C. (UPI) — A manufacturer of build-it-yourself log homes has added a live-in log garage to its line.

The free-standing, two-story, build-it-yourself garage can be put together with only a hammer and a come-along, the manufacturer says. It is a one-to-one portable lifting device.

The 624-square-foot building accommodates two cars on the ground floor. An equal space on the second floor includes living and dining areas, a kitchen and a bathroom.

It comes in kit form with precision cut, 8-inch diameter logs.

The kits are sold by dealers in all 50 states, Canada and South America and by mail from Lumber Log Homes, Inc., 6000 Lumber Lane, Kannapolis, N.C. 28081. A free descriptive flyer is available from that address.

Rain hurts WKSS, GOP turnout

The Memorial Day weekend started off wet Friday, and while the rain let up late in the afternoon, a damp chill carried over to the evening, maybe cutting down on early evening attendance at the Republican carnival and at the safety promotion being conducted by radio station WKSS along Interstate 84.

Town dignitaries pose at ribbon-cutting of new footbridge.

Footbridge opened over Avery Brook

Town Mayor Stephen T. Penny recently joined Hookanum River Linear Park Committee Chairman Dr. Douglas H. Smith in cutting a significant ribbon for hikers the one officially opening the new Avery Brook footbridge to the public.

The footbridge was constructed by the state Department of Transportation as an "essential link" in the park committee's system of hiking trails running through Manchester, Smith said.

The DOT built the bridge — located just off Interstate 84 near exit 94 — as part of the ongoing I-84 widening project. It spans Avery Brook near the point at which the brook enters the Hookanum.

Attending the opening ceremony Tuesday in addition to Penny and Smith were Robert B. Weiss, town general manager; Robert Leclerc, DOT project engineer; James F. Burns, DOT district engineer; Robert S. Thomson, town recreation director; Arthur Glaeser, conservation commission member; Robert Harrison, superintendent of parks; Joel E. Janenda, Advisory Recreation and Park Commission chairman; and Art Joyce, Hookanum River Linear Park Committee member.

Smith said the new bridge enabled the committee to complete the clearing earlier this spring of a new section of hiking trail. The trail section runs north from near Economy Electric Supply across an old footbridge spanning the Hookanum at the end of Oakland Street. It then proceeds along the north side of the river across the new Avery Brook bridge and upstream along the Hookanum to the area near the Steak Out Restaurant on Hilliard Road.

Although close to the highway, the new trail passes through a "scenic section of preserved woodlands and marshes close to the river bank," Smith said.

Sanitarian Salcius receives state honor

Sanitarian John Salcius of the Manchester Health Department has been commended by the Epidemiology Section of the state Department of Health Services for a report on a food poisoning outbreak which struck town schools in March.

More than 150 Bennett Junior High School students became ill after eating tacos that were contaminated by the pathogen Clostridium perfringens. The health department found the foodborne outbreak probably occurred because meat for the tacos was not completely cooked.

A letter to Health Department Director Dr. Alice Turk from George H. Cooper, a public health program assistant, thanks the Manchester Health Department for its investigation of the outbreak.

The letter says the state department found the report, prepared by Salcius, "both complete and accurate and of the highest epidemiological standards."

A copy of the report has been forwarded to the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Aging mother's plea cause of daughter's heartaches

DEAR ABBY: How does one answer the seesawing elderly nursing home patient who asks, "Why am I here?"

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

My mother, who is in her late 80s, has been in a small, comfortable nursing facility for almost five years. She is in fairly good physical health, but her mind has been failing for 10 to 15 years.

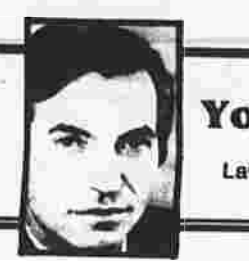

There are days when she doesn't know me and nights when she gets up at 2 a.m. to provide the nursing home searching for her husband who has been dead for five years, but in her more lucid moments she asks, "Why am I living here with strangers?"

DEAR GETTING OLD: An increasing number of people are experiencing the same kind of heartache.

DEAR ABBY: Last night my 17-year-old daughter came home from a date at 1:15 a.m. She invited her date and they went to the family room to watch TV.

Take care with magnesium, it can cause aging signs

DEAR DR. LAMB: I recall that you had a column once about how magnesium could be harmful. I have been taking an antacid that contains magnesium and wonder if it's safe for me.

Your Health

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR READER: This is a neglected topic, but an important one. The original work was reported by doctors from the University of Connecticut Health Center.

DEAR DR. LAMB: When I was 12 years old I had a testicle lowered. I can be cured by omitting magnesium, there are other abnormalities that you do not have.

Happy families all alike? They share certain traits

DEAR DR. BLAKER: Everyone is always talking about problems, and columns like yours perpetuate the fallacy that all families are having troubles. Is that really true?

Ask Dr. Blaker

Karen Blaker, Ph.D.

DEAR READER: People who have problems do tend to reach out for help, and one of the places they turn to is to advice columnists.

DEAR DR. BLAKER: I am sure you will receive many letters reacting to the advice you gave to the woman who was worried that her husband-to-be did not want children.

Engagements

Alison Marion Watson

Mr. and Mrs. Lynwood Watson of 523 Taylor St. Vernon announce the engagement of their daughter, Alison M. Watson, 17, of K. Tudor Lane, to John Joseph Maston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Maston of 36 Lyndale St.

Leslie Jay Granquist

Mr. and Mrs. Nels Granquist Jr. of 66 Arrott Road announce the engagement of their daughter, Leslie Jay Granquist, to John J. Kajtor, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Kajtor of West Haven.

Wendy Susan Kemp

Dr. and Mrs. Alan Kemp of 28 Plymouth Lane announce the engagement of their daughter, Wendy Susan Kemp of Scarborough, Maine, to Norman M. Janson, of Scarborough, Maine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Janson of Forestdale, Mass.

DEAR END: You can't send a 15-year-old incorrigible child anywhere to "make her behave."

Ticket bought in Milford unclaimed

Lottery winner $200,000 richer — if he knew it

HARTFORD (UPI) — Some lucky person may have a long forgotten lottery ticket worth a minimum of $200,000 stuffed into a drawer, pocket or peekabook of the Connecticut State Lottery says.

Lottery officials appealed Friday for the holder of the "Win For Life" instant match ticket to come forward and claim a prize of $1,000 a month for the rest of their life.

The game ended last February and the winner has until Feb. 28, 1984 to claim the prize. The valuable ticket was the only one of the 18 "Win For Life" winners sold printed in each stage — making the odds at winning the top prize one in two million.

The holder of the ticket is due $1,000 for life or, in the event of death, a minimum of $200,000 to be paid to the estate of the deceased.

Lottery officials said the silver and green ticket has seven prize boxes, with three containing "BFFF" symbols. If the prize is not claimed, the money will go into the Lottery's unclaimed fund as the largest forfeited prize in the history of the Lottery.

He said the unclaimed ticket was the second sold by the Hartford newsstand to contain the winning combination for the top prize.

Lottery Unit Chief J. Blaine Lewis Jr. urged the ticket holder to come directly to Lottery Headquarters in Newington or contact the claims department.

Manchester championship squad

The old South Manchester High basketball team of 1926-27 has been said to be one of the best in school history.

Manchester roared in 20's

Strolling down memory lane in sports, Manchester old-timers often point to the 1926-27 basketball team that represented South Manchester High School.

Nino Boggini, 73, now a successful Manchester businessman, took a look back — 55 years to be exact — and recalled the feats of the Red and White five which, under the coaching of Will Clarke, wound up as co-winner of its first Central Connecticut Interscholastic League title.

The six-school loop was formed that year and included Meriden, Middletown, East Hartford, Bristol and Windham of Willimantic.

"We tied with Tommy Monahan of Bristol High for the title," Boggini said. The two schools split a pair of regular season games.

"During the regular season, we won 15 of 17 games. We qualified for the state tournament in New Haven, the eight best teams in the state, beat Bridgeport Central, 19-18, but lost to Bristol in the semifinals, 14-13. They led at halftime and then stalled most of the second half.

"Bristol went on to win the title.

"The biggest and most memorable game of that season took place after the tournament, Fitchburg, Mass. High won the New England League title, 19-18, but lost to Chicago and won the National High School Tournament.

"A game was scheduled against Fitchburg at the East Side Rec which was our home court. The Rec floor was a distinct advantage for our team and we won, 27-24. There were mere curtains on the sides in front of the bleachers which were playable, and a rain of raindrops during the game, which hampered Fitchburg," Boggini said.

"We had over a thousand people in the gym. They stopped the sale of tickets long before the game was slated to start.

"We played team basketball, no individual play, and that was the difference. Individually, Fitchburg had better players. They led 7-4 at the quarter and 12-10 at halftime.

"We came back strong in the second half, gained the lead and held on to the final whistle," Boggini recalled with pride.

The Manchester starters, who played most of the way, were Boggini, Bill Dowd, captain Ty Holland, Jim Gorman and Ding Farr. Boggini was the only underclassman on the team.

Boggini went on to New York University and played both baseball (as a catcher) and basketball with the Violets as a freshman but had to give up both sports because of illness. One of his hoop teammates at NYU was Joe "Sugar" Hugret, who helped Bristol High whip Manchester in the state tourney. Hugret, a big, rugged basketball center and a great college and pro football player, was later a resident of Manchester.

Hank Greenberg, who became a Hall-of-Famer in baseball, was another of Boggini's teammates with the NYU frosh baseball team.

"NYU was at the top of the heap at the time in sports. Our football team played its home games in Yankee Stadium under coach Chick Meahan and our basketball teams, under Howard Cann, were nationally recognized.

"There was an oddity at Yale when we played Bristol," Boggini went on. "When we arrived on campus, we were assigned room no. 13. Bristol had room no. 14... and that was the final score of our game."

Boggini is founder and president of the N. Charles Boggini Co., which specializes in manufacturing beverage flavor extracts. He's still active in sports, getting out to play golf several times each week. Prominently displayed in his office is a plaque noting the goal of every golfer — a hole-in-one he achieved several years ago.

On court, Gildemeister looked as if he was in need of protection as Connors raced through the first round match in a devastating style.

The Wimbledon and U.S. Open champion, who made his first attempt at this unofficial world clay championship crown 10 years ago, started off like a man in a hurry before losing concentration in the third set. But any hopes Gildemeister had of mounting a serious challenge were killed off in the fourth set when the 30-year-old American left-hander switched back into gear.

Producing all the shots in the book, and throwing in others which have yet to be included, Connors blitzed his bewildered opponent. In one stretch Connors reeled off 15 successive points, bursting into a 4-1 lead with three love games and going up 4-0 on Gildemeister's serve in the next.

Connors went on to complete his victory in 2 hours 15 minutes and had no complaints about the way he had adapted to the slow surface.

"I am playing much better on clay now," he said. "I am not trying to keep the ball in play and I don't mind hitting 15 to 20 balls before winning a point."

Connors is determined to land the French Open before he retires, which is why he changed his mind about returning to Paris after saying he felt he was too old to play in Europe.

"This is the only grand slam title I have not won and I would like to have this title before I quit. There is an open space in my records," he said.

Third-seeded Czechoslovak Ivan Lendl, who is seeded to clash with Connors in the semis, also came through the third round fairly comfortably, beating Bolivian Mario Martinez, 6-0, 6-2, 3-6, 6-0.

Lendl's fourth-round opponent is 12th-seeded American Brian Gottfried, who came from behind to beat Sweden's Magnus Tideman, 3-6, 6-3, 6-0, 6-0.

The only other major title contender in men's action Friday was sixth-seeded Frenchman Yannick Noah, a 7-5, 7-6, 6-2 winner over American Pat Dupre.

Second-seeded American John McEnroe goes into third round action Friday, along with reigning champion Wilander.

In the women's event, Evert took only 77 minutes for her 6-2, 6-2 victory over Goolagong with the Australian obviously not match tight following injuries and two retirements.

The two are long-time adversaries and their clashes are usually close affairs. This time, however, Evert was never under pressure.

"Evonne hasn't played much tennis over the last few years and needs a lot more matches," Evert said. "I am amazed she can run around on court as she does. Especially after having had two children."

Andra Jaeger, seeded third, also made the last 16, but was taken the full distance before beating South African Beverly Motsepe, 6-4, 6-2.

Hana Mandlikova, the eighth-seeded Czechoslovak who won the title two years ago, powered her way to a 6-0, 6-1 victory over American Anne White, while 10th-seeded Hungarian Andrea Temesvári outgamed Yvona Brzakova of Czechoslovakia, 6-0, 6-3.

NL roundup Reds leave Bucs blue

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Eddie Milner and Kelly Farr each hit two-run doubles in the fifth inning Friday night to trigger a seven-run outburst that carried the Cincinnati Reds to a 5-0 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates behind the five-hit pitching of Mario Soto.

The Reds sent 11 batters to the plate in the fifth against loser John Candelaria, 3-5, and scored six earned runs.

Soto, 7-2, struck out eight and walked two in recording his second shutout and fifth complete game of the season.

Alex Trevino led off the Reds' fifth with a double and went to third base. He faced before surrendering to a double play. After Gary Redus walked to load the bases, Milner doubled to score Trevino and Soto and give Cincinnati a 2-0 lead.

AL roundup Tudor lowers boom

TORONTO (UPI) — John Tudor allowed one hit — one earned run — in the fourth inning to outduel Jim Clancy and lead the Boston Red Sox to a 2-0 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

The victory improved the first-place Red Sox' lead over Toronto to two full games. The Sox are 25-7, while the Blue Jays are now 23-19.

Tudor, 3-2, retired the first 10 batters he faced before surrendering to a double play. He followed by walking Barry Bonnell but then got the next 16 batters in order. Tudor struck out eight and walked two.

Clancy, 4-3, allowed a run in the third inning on a single by Gary Allenson and a single by Glenn Hoffman and was touched for a solo homer by Jim Rice, his 10th, in the ninth inning. Rice now has 34 RBI for the season.

Toronto mounted its only threat in the ninth when Collins walked with two out and stole second. But Bonnell flew out to center to end the game.

Yankees 4, A's 3. At New York, Graig Nettles' lead-off home run in the seventh inning enabled the New York Yankees to snap a three-game losing streak Friday night with a 4-2 triumph over the Oakland A's.

Nettles hit a 1-2 pitch of Mike Norris, 4-5, following a walk to Reggie Smith and a single by Oscar Gamble and a single by Butch Wynegar.

Ron Guidry, 6-3, allowed five hits, walked three and struck out eight in 7 1/3 innings before being relieved by Rich Gossage. Gossage finished up to record his seventh save.

Oakland took a 2-0 lead in the first inning. Rickey Henderson led off with a walk and stole second. Mike Davis struck out, but Bill Almon singled to score Henderson. After Almon was caught stealing, Jeff Burroughs lined his fourth homer of the year into the lower left field stands.

In the bottom of the first inning with two men out, Dave Winfield, the Yankees left fielder, objected to a trashback pitch under his chin and hit his first home run of the year in his first at-bat for the Expos to extend their winning streak to five games. Tim Lincecum walked ahead of Vail's homer and the Expos added another run off loser Steve Carlton, 6-4, on doubles by Al Oliver and Tim Wallach.

At Atlanta, Jody Davis ripped a tie-breaking homer in the sixth and added a solo blast in the eighth Friday night to power the Chicago Cubs to an 8-4 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

With the game tied 6-6 in the sixth, Davis belted a 2-1 pitch over the left field fence off loser Rich Behenna, 3-3. Davis then smacked a 2-2 pitch off the left field foul pole in the eighth off Gene Garber for the sixth homer, making reliever Warren Bruster, 1-1, the winner.

For some like the nameless player mentioned earlier, it is far too high.

"In my experience, we have discovered that the injury rate is three and a half times higher in the spring than in the fall," said Dr. James Garrick, a noted sports medicine researcher. "There is no physical carryover from spring football except injuries. Conditioning levels just don't last that long."

Umpire Cousins ejected Winfield but allowed Heath to remain in the game, which caused Yankees manager Billy Martin to play the game under protest.

Mariners 7, Brewers 5. At Milwaukee, Julio Cruz lined a two-out single to left field to key a four-run ninth inning and Steve Henderson had three doubles and four RBI Friday night to lead the Seattle Mariners to a 7-5 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Cruz' first game-winning RBI of the season came off losing reliever

Tom Tellmann, 3-1, and gave the Mariners their sixth victory in nine games.

Angels 5, Indians 4. At Cleveland, Bob Boone singled home rookie Darryl Scotters from third base with one out in the 12th inning Friday night to lift California to a 5-4 victory over the Cleveland Indians and extend the Angels' winning streak to five games.

Tigers 7, Twins 4. At Detroit, Glenn Wilson's seventh-inning groundout delivered Enos Cabell from third base with the tie-breaking run and Chet Lemon followed one out later with an RBI double Friday night to give the Detroit Tigers a 7-4 victory over the Minnesota Twins in the first game of a two-night double-header.

Meaningless injuries a concern Spring grid practice comes into question

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A college athlete with a promising football career takes a bone-crunching hit on a meaningless April afternoon.

His career hangs in jeopardy. As he is helped from the field it is noticeably quiet, the few fans scattered in the stands were more concerned with catching a few rays than the carnage that was going on below them.

For some like the nameless player mentioned earlier, it is far too high.

"We do it because everyone else does," said University of California head coach Joe Kapp. "You have to stay competitive. If no one else did it, I don't think we would."

But what is the price of being competitive in the megabucks industry of college sports?

Dr. Ron Smith, a sports psychologist specializing in sports burnout at the University of Washington, agrees with Restic.

"People need a break from the stresses and strains of athletics to perform well," he said. "We're finding more and more that athletes who are exposed to lengthened seasons have a diminishing level of performance."

But with all the mounting evidence that there are very few benefits to conducting spring practice, why hasn't there been any changes made?

"Changes take time," said Steve Morgan, of the NCAA's enforcement division in Shawnee, Kansas. "It all lies in the sentiment of the Division I coaches. If they wanted to stop spring practice, I'm sure rules could be passed to stop early enough for next spring."

Morgan said special clauses could be put in the rule to allow schools to conduct spring practice under certain circumstances — like when a new coach takes over a team.

Kapp, who took over the California program after the 1981 season, said his first spring was crucial to the Golden Bears' successful 7-4 campaign last year.

"It definitely made a difference," Kapp said. "We were able to put in our system and improve the skills of the players. It made for a much better football team."

Hever the future goes with the college game, Garrick, other sports physicians and many coaches from around the country agree — time has come to take a close look at the spring game.

In brief Lakers unhappy bunch

According to several of the Los Angeles Lakers, never have so few done so little and yet virtually determined the outcome of a basketball game.

The few were referees Darrell Garretson and John Vanak. The little was personal foul calls against the Philadelphia 76ers in their 103-93 victory over the Lakers Thursday night.

The Lakers shot five free throws the entire game, and none in the entire second half. "I'm convinced the league just doesn't want us to win it again," said one member of the defending NBA championship team.

Indy 500 Sunday

INDIANAPOLIS — The endorsements and publicity that usually accompany the prospect of a champion racing car driver have failed to materialize fully for 1982 Indianapolis 500 mile champion Gordon Johncock.

The quiet, affable driver, who won his first Indy classic in 1973, reveals that he's been contacted by a number of manufacturers of sports cars and a situation with a Detroit auto manufacturer is being worked out. But there's none of the hoopla that followed Rick Mears' 1979 victory.

Johncock admits he hasn't become the household name like Mears and is a bit peeved because he never received the recognition he felt he deserved.

"I'm going to have to say that Roger Penske has a lot to do with Mears being in the spotlight," says Johncock. "As soon as Penske hooked up with Mears, you began seeing Mears in television ads."

"That really upset me because I haven't done anything for me. We win the greatest race any place and we don't do anything for us? Nothing."

"It's hurt me. It's hurt them. It definitely hurt me and I'm really unhappy about the situation. Maybe it's up to my car owner Pat Patrick. Who knows? This may be more personal for me than him."

Asked about race plans, Johncock replies: "How do you plan race strategy? How do you know the exact fuel mileage you can get out of the car? How do you know how fast you can run? As far as I'm concerned, strategy is planned as you go along, lap by lap. The race is in progress."

Having rookie Teo Fabi on the pole won't affect any game plan Johncock might have. He feels Fabi has a lot of experience from Formula One and Can-Am racing. "He's had high speed experience. I Fabi had come from Super Vees it definitely would have bothered me. It's pretty cool. I don't foresee any problems at the start of the race."

All Johncock wants is perfect weather for race day. Shift winds might hamper some drivers and cars. Such a situation occurred earlier this month when a sudden gust pushed veteran driver Johnny Rutherford into the wall and he suffered fractures of both legs.

"However, if a car is set up the way you want, it takes a pretty strong gust of wind to put you out of control and make you get into trouble," Johncock emphasizes.

"If you have a car that isn't properly set up and you're making changes here and there, it's very bad to try and get the car working properly because you never know what's happening."

Johncock fails to cash in

Nevertheless, Johncock will be in there pitching Sunday along with Mears, surprise pole-sitter Teo Fabi, a rookie, and all the rest.

Johncock has been in the background this month because his car failed to achieve a 200-mile qualifying average and he isn't sure there will be much improvement in Sunday's race.

"Speedwise, we're right on our present stage. We didn't have much time to dial in before qualifying but we're a little more comfortable if I had run 200 in qualifying. It means that you could run 200 in some part of the race and you're much more capable of running constant 198's at race speed. That's more than I will be able to do. It'll be easier for the other drivers than for me."

"Still, if you remember last year the best I ran was a 200. I mean, I had a 207 in qualifying. But when it came down to the race we were working in the 190's and there, I was 155. I was working as good as better than Rick. We'll be working on the car all through Sunday's race. As you know, when you're running 150 miles, you can make the adjustments. You have time, Jim."

Asked about race plans, Johncock replies: "How do you plan race strategy? How do you know the exact fuel mileage you can get out of the car? How do you know how fast you can run? As far as I'm concerned, strategy is planned as you go along, lap by lap. The race is in progress."

Hot Bean baking Memorial; Crenshaw down two shots

DUBLIN, Ohio (UPI) — Matched the day's best score of 67, Peter Jacobsen (69) and Waddins (72).

Two other former Memorial champions moved into contention with good second rounds. Tom Watson, the 1979 winner, stood at 4-under-par with a second day 67 and Ray Floyd, last year's winner, shot 69 and was at 3 under par.

Bean said his caddy, Wayne Beck, gave him a putter last Sunday that has helped worked magic on the greens.

The 6-4, 210-pound Bean said the putter is similar to what he has always used except it is at least two inches shorter than his previous clubs.

"I hope Wayne knows 70 I'll be happy," he said. "It's hard to shoot four good rounds here and that's all I want to do."

Crenshaw started the day with a bogey but promptly moved back to six under-par with birdies on the second and third holes, both par 4s, and he then recorded 15 straight pars.

"It was a dull round after No. 3," said Crenshaw, laughing. "I was as steady as Tom Kite."

Bean said he is confident of his game and believes the difficulty of the course will make it tough for competitors to catch him if he continues to play well.

"We've got two days left and if I can keep it under 70 I'll be happy," he said. "It's hard to shoot four good rounds here and that's all I want to do."

Former sweethearts are enjoying France

By Morley Myers UPI Sports Writer

PARIS (UPI) — One-time sweethearts Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert both chasing different ambitions, followed each other on center court Friday to clear their third round hurdles for a place in the last 16 of the $11 million French Open tennis championships.

Connors, now estranged from his wife Patti, outgained Chilean Hans Gildemeister, 6-3, 6-1, 5-7, 6-1, in pursuit of the only grand slam title to have eluded him, while Evert, married to British Davis Cupper John Lloyd, outclassed Australian Evonne Goolagong-Jawley, 6-2, 6-2, in her bid to recapture the women's title she has won four times.

While the two Americans were entertaining the fans with their stroke play, French police were laying on security for the Swedes, including defending champion Mats Wilander, following kidnap threats from an Armenian terrorist group. Tournament Director Christian Duxin said the French interior ministry had been contacted regarding the threat and is taking care of it from now on.

All the Swedish contingent—players, coaches and trainers—are under police protection, Duxin said.

A spokesman at the Swedish embassy confirmed a player had received a telephone call saying one of the Swedes at Roland Garros would be kidnapped in an exchange for an Armenian terrorist being tried on drug charges in Stockholm.

Swedish Davis Cup coach Hans Ollsen commented: "We called the police and contacted the Swedish embassy. It is in their hands."

On court, Gildemeister looked as if he was in need of protection as Connors raced through the first round match in a devastating style.

The Wimbledon and U.S. Open champion, who made his first attempt at this unofficial world clay championship crown 10 years ago, started off like a man in a hurry before losing concentration in the third set. But any hopes Gildemeister had of mounting a serious challenge were killed off in the fourth set when the 30-year-old American left-hander switched back into gear.

Producing all the shots in the book, and throwing in others which have yet to be included, Connors blitzed his bewildered opponent. In one stretch Connors reeled off 15 successive points, bursting into a 4-1 lead with three love games and going up 4-0 on Gildemeister's serve in the next.

Connors went on to complete his victory in 2 hours 15 minutes and had no complaints about the way he had adapted to the slow surface.

"I am playing much better on clay now," he said. "I am not trying to keep the ball in play and I don't mind hitting 15 to 20 balls before winning a point."

Connors is determined to land the French Open before he retires, which is why he changed his mind about returning to Paris after saying he felt he was too old to play in Europe.

"This is the only grand slam title I have not won and I would like to have this title before I quit. There is an open space in my records," he said.

Third-seeded Czechoslovak Ivan Lendl, who is seeded to clash with Connors in the semis, also came through the third round fairly comfortably, beating Bolivian Mario Martinez, 6-0, 6-2, 3-6, 6-0.

Lendl's fourth-round opponent is 12th-seeded American Brian Gottfried, who came from behind to beat Sweden's Magnus Tideman, 3-6, 6-3, 6-0, 6-0.

The only other major title contender in men's action Friday was sixth-seeded Frenchman Yannick Noah, a 7-5, 7-6, 6-2 winner over American Pat Dupre.

Second-seeded American John McEnroe goes into third round action Friday, along with reigning champion Wilander.

In the women's event, Evert took only 77 minutes for her 6-2, 6-2 victory over Goolagong with the Australian obviously not match tight following injuries and two retirements.

The two are long-time adversaries and their clashes are usually close affairs. This time, however, Evert was never under pressure.

"Evonne hasn't played much tennis over the last few years and needs a lot more matches," Evert said. "I am amazed she can run around on court as she does. Especially after having had two children."

Andra Jaeger, seeded third, also made the last 16, but was taken the full distance before beating South African Beverly Motsepe, 6-4, 6-2.

Hana Mandlikova, the eighth-seeded Czechoslovak who won the title two years ago, powered her way to a 6-0, 6-1 victory over American Anne White, while 10th-seeded Hungarian Andrea Temesvári outgamed Yvona Brzakova of Czechoslovakia, 6-0, 6-3.

Young secures LPGA lead

CORNING, N.Y. (UPI) — Kathy Young shook off several distractions Friday en route to the second round lead of the $150,000 LPGA Corning Classic being played at the Corning Country Club.

Young, who stands at Sunday-par 129 so far in this the fifth annual, 72-hole tournament, tied the course record for the front nine by shooting a 5-under-par 31. On the back nine, she was 1-over-par 37.

"It was very thrilling," said the 28-year-old Florida, Ore., resident, who had seven birdies and three bogeys. "I had chills up and down my body at some times (during the round). I'm easily excitable and my heart speeds up."

After 12 holes, Young was 8-under-par for the tournament, but she then bogeyed the 13th, 14th and 15th holes,
