Lingard to pass up reelection bid

By James P. Sacks
Herald Reporter

Citing both personal and political reasons, Republican town Director Joan R. Lingard unexpectedly withdrew from the 1983 race for the Board of Directors at a press conference this morning.

Personal reasons, said Mrs. Lingard, played a key role in the move, with political motivation running a close second. The one-term director — a newcomer to Manchester politics at the time of her election in 1981 — said she had initiated her own withdrawal from the race, and did not rule out re-entering town politics in the future.

Mrs. Lingard becomes the second member of the board to decide against seeking re-election. Veteran Democratic Director Arnold M. "Ike" Kleinschmidt announced last week he wouldn't have time to run again this year.

Mrs. Lingard's move leaves the Republican party with two incumbents running for the board this fall — minority leader Peter DiRosa Jr. and local attorney William J. Diana. The party should be able to fill the remaining four slots for the board on the ticket without difficulty, Town Republican Chairman Curtis M. Smith said at the press conference. The six Republican candidates will face five Democratic incumbents and one as-yet-unchosen candidate, who will replace Kleinschmidt and be named by the Democratic nominating committee Aug. 3.

MRS. LINGARD said her withdrawal from the race will allow her to devote more time to personal interests. She said she had spread herself "too thin" between political activity and her job as a social worker in the Manchester school system, and had little time left over.

She also cited the need to assess her "comfort level" with the Republican party. While her voting record has served the Republicans well, Mrs. Lingard said, especially in bi-partisan efforts, she has taken what she called "some very liberal stands" which have probably not pleased more conservative party members.

"There have been times when I have voted primarily with Mayor Stephen T. Penny or (Democratic Director Stephen T.) Cassano," Mrs. Lingard said.

As one example, Mrs. Lingard noted that she had supported the Human Relations Commission last summer when it was the subject of controversy among board members.

Smith said the only time Mrs. Lingard had actually broken with the party was earlier this year, when she suggested that the town consider applying for a federal Community Development Block Grant. This was the same program that Manchester withdrew from in a controversial referendum in 1979. Mrs. Lingard raised the issue again this year without informing the Republican party beforehand of her position.

David Frost, Republican selection committee chairman, said the committee had voted without dissent to retain Mrs. Lingard as a candidate this year.

Smith added that Mrs. Lingard would have won on the floor with no problem. "From a party viewpoint there is no dissatisfaction" with Mrs. Lingard, Smith said.

BEFORE THE unexpected withdrawal of Kleinschmidt last Thursday, the Democrats had announced that all six incumbents on the board would run again.

Kleinschmidt's withdrawal left five Democratic incumbents in the race — Mayor Penny, Cassano, Deputy Mayor Barbara B. Weinberg, James F. Fogarty and Kenneth N. Tedford.

Former Board of Education member Eleanor Colman, now chairman of the Cheney Hall Commission, has expressed interest in running and has received a favorable reception from local Democrats, including Town Chairman Theodore R. Cummings. Mrs. Colman, who was a strong vote-getter during her 10 years on the Board of Education, will be among those considered for the nomination, local Democratic politicians have said.

Even if Mrs. Colman is on the ticket, Smith said at the press conference, the Democrats "have really got four-and-a-half incumbents" in the race. Smith referred to the fact that Tedford replaced state Rep. James R. McCavanagh on the board after McCavanagh was elected to the Capitol last November, and so has not previously faced a general election.

"Ninety percent of the game is exposure," said Smith. "Now we have a new one and they have a new one."

Smith said that though a number of Republicans in addition to the incumbents — including HRC member Louis C. Kocis, Republican Vice Chairwoman Donna Mercier, Zoning Board of Appeals member Harry Reinhorn, Joseph Hachey and John Tucci — have said they wanted to run, the Republicans are still open to new candidates. "Out of those seven," Smith said, "we would end up with a balanced ticket." Frost added that the prospects for the ticket represent a cross-section of the views in the party.

The Republicans will make their nominations Aug. 3.

SMITH PREDICTED the Republicans will make a better showing in 1983 than they did in 1981. He called 1981 a "disaster" and said the Republicans had not sufficiently developed either candidates or issues.

Mrs. Lingard said she had enjoyed serving on the board, which she described as a "very cooperative group to work with."

As a member of the minority party, however, she said she had at times seen her work fail to reach fruition for political reasons.

Republican directors, she added, are not often named to subcommittee chairmanships and other positions of power.

"You put a lot of work in it (various projects), but it might not have the impact you want it to have," said Mrs. Lingard.

Asked about a possible re-entry into town politics, she said, "You're taking a risk in doing

Reagan says NEA has 'brainwashing' as apparent goal

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — President Reagan today accused the National Education Association of promoting "curriculum guides that seem to be aimed more at frightening and brainwashing American children" than teaching.

He made the remarks in an address prepared for delivery to the 67th annual convention of the American Federation of Teachers, whose president, Albert Shanker, has been more receptive to White House education goals than the NEA.

While he mentioned no names, Reagan's bitter attack was aimed at the rival 1.7 million-member NEA, which has opposed the president on some education reform issues, including merit pay.

"Nothing is gained by finger-pointing," assistant press secretary Anson Franklin. "He's talking about attitude."

Reagan, speaking after a four-day vacation at his mountaintop retreat, has used the education issue as a springboard for a series of campaign-style speeches over the past several weeks.

"I want to commend the AFT for its recognition of the need to upgrade math and science education, and for its ringing condemnation of those organizations who would exploit teaching positions and manipulate curriculum for propaganda purposes," he said.

"On this last issue, you stand in great contrast to those who have promoted curriculum guides that seem to be more aimed at frightening and brainwashing American school children than fostering learning and stimulating balanced, intelligent debate."

Reagan was referring to Shanker's condemnation of a booklet on the nuclear freeze and a brochure on the Ku Klux Klan printed by the NEA.

Reagan's speech was heavily loaded with praise for the AFT and several not so subtle digs at the NEA, which endorsed Carter in the 1980 election.

Shanker was anxious to give Reagan, who was blasted in several speeches by delegates the day before, a good reception. He chided the AFT delegates Monday for booing and hissing when he mentioned Reagan's name during his keynote speech.

"No. Don't do that tomorrow unless you want him re-elected," Shanker said.

Lebanon says Israeli troops must remain

By Uigted Press International

Secretary of State George Shultz met with President Amin Gemayel today amid warnings Lebanon might scrap a troop withdrawal accord with the Jewish state if Israeli undertakes a partial pullback of its forces in Lebanon.

Shultz met briefly with Gemayel before going to Damascus later today to try to persuade the Syrians to withdraw their forces from Lebanon — an effort already dismissed by the Syrians as an "impossible mission."

Shultz, who arrived in Beirut from Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, told reporters aboard his plane he believed Syria's President Hafez Assad wants constructive talks with the United States on the presence of its 40,000 troops in Lebanon.

"But I don't have a basket of things to offer or anything of that kind," said Shultz, who flew to the Middle East Monday amid signs the troop withdrawal accord he arranged between Israel and Lebanon in May was unraveling.

"Breaking a deadlock is a big phrase," he said. "I do not use words as breakthrough or anything like that at all."

Assad vetoed an Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal agreement in May because it allows a residual Israeli military presence in southern Lebanon and he refused to withdraw his forces from the strategic Bekaa Valley.

The Israelis have countered by considering a partial pullback of its 30,000 troops to southern Lebanon, a move opposed by the United States because it could lead to a partition of the war-torn nation by Israel and Syria.

A senior Lebanese official warned Lebanon might scrap its accord with Israel if the Jewish state goes ahead with a partial pullback.

"Lebanon would not feel obligated to go ahead with its part of the agreement," said the senior official at the presidential palace in suburban Baabda where Shultz met President Amin Gemayel.

The official said Lebanon would only accept a partial withdrawal if it were part of a definite timetable for a complete Israeli pullout.

Lebanon has also voiced concern about a security vacuum that would be created in the mountains outside Beirut if Israeli troops abruptly leave. Rival Lebanese groups have been kept in check by the Israeli presence.

Andropov: U.S.S.R won't bend

MOSCOW (UPI) — President Yuri Andropov today said agreement on limiting nuclear missiles was still possible, but warned that deployment of U.S. missiles in Europe would be "a deep and dangerous mistake" that heightened the threat of war.

Andropov made the comments to West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl at a meeting held a day behind schedule because of the Communist leader's unspecified health problems.

A member of the West German delegation present at the beginning of today's session said Andropov, 69, moved his legs and arms with difficulty "but spiritually he made a lively impression."

"Politicians of the NATO countries constantly repeat that the U.S.S.R. will make concessions in Geneva after installation of new American rockets in Western Europe," he told visiting West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

"This is a deep and dangerous mistake. If it comes to deployment, we will not give up our position, will not weaken our defense, but we will take timely and effective counter-measures, protecting the security of the U.S.S.R. and its allies," Andropov said.

The text of his comments was released by Tass, the official Soviet news agency, after the two leaders spoke alone in the Kremlin.

Sources in the West German delegation said Andropov seemed mentally alert but weak.

"I'm sorry I couldn't take part in the talks and the dinner yesterday," the sources quoted him as saying. "It was a pity it wasn't possible."

Andropov said the NATO plan to begin deploying U.S. Pershing-2 and cruise missiles in Europe by measures, from the over-stretching of Central Europe with all sorts of weapons of massive destruction.

Would it not be better, he asked, to reach an agreement limiting medium-range nuclear weaponry?

"An agreement is still possible as long as they have not yet moved to deployment," he added.

He said the Soviet side approved Kohl's statement that West Germany understands the historical reasons for Moscow's concern about its security, a reference to the last world war.

"It would be good for both countries and for the cause of peace in Europe if these words found their reflection in the practical policies of the FRG (Federal Republic of Germany)," he said.

"At the same time he stated the known position of the ruling circles of the NATO bloc on the question of deployment of new American atomic rockets on the territory of a number of Western European countries, primarily West Germany," Tass said.

Walesa faces firing threat

WARSAW, Poland — Former Solidarity union leader Lech Walesa is on a new collision course with Polish authorities over an unauthorized vacation from his job at the Lenin Shipyard in Gdansk.
Shipyard bosses Monday said Walesa would be fired unless he returns to work by Wednesday afternoon with a satisfactory explanation for his absence.
Walesa, 39, reportedly was hundreds of miles from Gdansk, visiting relatives in a rural Polish province near Warsaw. His friends, who would not reveal where he was, said Walesa knew he risked disciplinary action before he left Gdansk Sunday.
One of Walesa's aides, Maciej Szyzyczewski, said he would be back in Gdansk July 7. "He hopes the shipyard management will understand his position," he added.
While Walesa mysteriously disappeared from Gdansk, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, Poland's Communist Party leader, traveled to the Baltic Coast port during the weekend to defend his martial-law policies and condemn Western sanctions against his military regime.

Drunk laws keep deaths down

Millions of people rushed home from the long Fourth of July weekend, swelling the nation's highway death count past 400 today, but officials in several states credited tough new drunk-driving laws and massive arrests with keeping fatalities down.
An exception was California where traffic deaths far exceeded those of 1982.
A United Press International count reported 414 deaths in the holiday period that began at 6 p.m. last Friday and ended at midnight Monday.
The National Safety Council estimated 420 to 520 people would die in traffic accidents during the long weekend, with another 20,000 to 24,000 suffering disabling injuries. Last year, 470 people died during the Independence Day holiday.
Texas reported 49 deaths, 14 of them pedestrians, and California 46, with 16 of them caused by drunken drivers.
Florida counted 22 dead, Illinois 21, New York 15, South Carolina, Georgia and Ohio 13, Tennessee, Alabama, West Virginia, Michigan and Oklahoma 12, and Louisiana, Pennsylvania and Virginia 10.
Reporting no deaths during the 78-hour holiday were North Dakota, South Dakota, Delaware and Alaska.

Flintstones go to court

LOS ANGELES — A federal judge must decide if the reputations of Fred, Wilma and their friends — as well as the sanctity of the phrase "Yabba Dabba Do!" — are being damaged by a motel offering guests a night in the "Flintstone Room." Hanna-Barbera Productions Inc. filed suit last week against the Madonna Inn of San Luis Obispo, a gaudy pink inn on the Central California coast, for copyright infringement of the cartoon characters.
The suit charged the Madonna Inn's "Flintstone Room" features the word Flintstone, likenesses of Fred and Wilma and the phrase "Yabba Dabba Do!" which Fred yells out "when he is especially pleased or excited."
Hanna-Barbera's attorneys are asking for an unspecified amount of monetary damages and an injunction prohibiting the Madonna Inn from using the likenesses of Fred and Wilma as well as the words "Yabba Dabba Do," whether it is spelled with one "o" or two.
"They haven't got a leg to stand on," motel owner Alexander Madonna said.

Peace Camp near nuke site?

ROMULUS, N.Y. — Hundreds of feminists from three countries opened a women's encampment for a "future of peace" next to a suspected nuclear weapons storage site, refusing to display a donated American flag and barring men from the main grounds.
About 500 women from across the United States, as well as England and Canada, gathered at a 32-acre farm in rural upstate New York Monday for the official opening of the Women's Encampment for a Future of Peace and Justice.
"It's amazing, it's exciting, to see so many of us together," shouted Kris Eberlein, an encampment organizer, as women of all ages applauded and cheered her welcoming speech. "In our protest and our revolution, may we all be heard."
The women are camped out on a farm they purchased next to the Seneca Army Depot in Seneca County, about halfway between Syracuse and Rochester. They are among many who say nuclear weapons are stored at the depot, although the Army refuses to confirm or deny the claim.
Monday's ceremony drew crowds of supporters who traveled to the hot, dusty campsite to help plant a rosebush at the gate of the depot, to symbolize their hope for peace through disarmament.

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Constituent Assembly President Roberto d'Aubuisson warned leftist Salvadoran rebels to accept the government's amnesty offer and predicted they will soon lose backing from Cuba and Nicaragua.

U.S. anti-Reagan peace activists go to Nicaragua

By John Lantigua
United Press International

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — More than 150 American church representatives and peace activists headed today to Nicaragua's war-torn northern border region to protest the Reagan administration's backing of anti-Sandinista rebels.
At least 132 people from some 30 states organized by the Carolina Interfaith Task Force on Central America plan to leave at dawn for the overland trip to Jalapa, a town of some 10,000 inhabitants, group spokesman Joseph Moran said Monday.
Jalapa, almost 200 miles from Managua, is some 10 miles from the Honduran border.
The Jalapa Valley has been the scene of heavy mortar barrages and ground assaults the past month by U.S.-backed anti-government rebels trying to topple Managua's leftist Sandinista government.
Moran, a former Roman Catholic priest and member of the group from Raleigh, N.C., said the task force, which includes churchmen and peace activists, planned to unfurl banners bearing pleas for peace during their vigil today in Jalapa.
"There is something really fishy going on down here. We're willing to risk our lives and go to the border and stand with the Nicaraguans who do it every day," said Beverly Keene of New York City, another organizer.
President Reagan approved covert CIA funding of anti-government rebels in late 1981 and charges the Marxist-led government of banding with Cuba to spread violent revolution through Central America.
The Sandinistas and the Honduran army, which supports the rebels, have exchanged mortar fire over the border in recent weeks, heightening fears the two countries could go to war.
A leader of the Honduran-based Nicaraguan Democratic Forces rebels, a separate group fighting along Nicaragua's northern border, claimed to have wounded 5,000 government troops during the past 10 months.
The claim could not be independently confirmed.
The Sandinistas have said about 500 people have died since the beginning of 1983.

Thunderstorms raked West Texas, spinning off a tornado Monday near Big Springs.
Storms soaked 100,000 people at a concert at the Washington Monument, collapsed a furniture store roof in Orlando, Fla., killing one woman and injuring another, and canceled fireworks and a concert by the Pittsburgh Symphony at the city's Point State Park.
As a crowd of 40,000 people ran for cover from the Pittsburgh storm, at least a dozen were injured, three seriously, police said. Some were attacked by muggers as they fled.
A possible tornado hit Midland in extreme western Pennsylvania, ripping the roof off a building and injuring a woman. High winds tore through Barkeville, 50 miles north of Pittsburgh, uprooting trees.

Two states' sewage battle getting hotter

By Joseph Manowamy
United Press International

WASHINGTON — A battle of sorts is simmering anew between downstate New York and neighboring Connecticut over partially treated sewage finding its way into Long Island Sound.
The confrontation took a few new turns last week — both in Congress and the federal bureaucracy — when the Environmental Protection Agency tentatively ruled that 19 plants in the New York City area and Long Island could not receive waivers from strict sewage treatment requirements.

On Capitol Hill, the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee reported out a bill to renew the Clean Water Act. The measure had contained language which would have made it almost impossible for the facilities to even be considered for such waivers, but Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., prompted a softening of that approach.

That action was followed by a move from Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., who introduced legislation which, although not as sweeping as the original language in the bill, would in effect also make waivers almost impossible to obtain for New York City area plants.
Dodd's office said the legislation would probably be offered as a floor amendment to the Clean Water Act renewal when that bill comes before the full Senate in late July or early August.

At issue are the questions of how much treatment sewage should go through before being discharged, and how much money the treatment plants should have to spend to effectively do their jobs.
New York City officials contend that in the cases cited by Connecticut, the current level of sewage treatment is adequate and the city could find better use of the estimated $450 million it would save by not upgrading to provide the additional treatment.

"That's quite a hefty chunk of money for a city Congress had to bail out not too long ago," argued one New York congressional aide.
However, Dodd has downplayed the fiscal problems, arguing instead that the sewage discharge levels resulting from the waivers pose a threat to the future of Long Island Sound.
Even though most of the waiver requests were tentatively denied last week, Dodd aides argued the New York plants could appeal and re-apply.
"The waiver provision was intended to avoid unnecessary and costly secondary treatment in areas where the ocean can assimilate the wastewater," according to a statement from the senator. "Instead, it is threatening our coastal waters by opening a floodgate of applications in areas for which it was never really intended."

However, a city representative countered by arguing some members of Congress appeared to harbor "bad feelings about New York City — that we haven't been a good neighbor. There's a feeling... to get New York, regardless if it's rational or not."
Whether that's true, the House version of the Clean Water Act renewal being considered on the other side of the Capitol is more strict than the Senate measure in terms of sewage treatment waivers.
The prime sponsor of that bill is Rep. James M. Wright, D-Texas, head of the Public Works and Transportation Committee, whose state has had its own set of complaints about New York City sewage.
An aide to the committee argued last week that while the costs might be significant to New York City, there was a feeling on the New Jersey shore the city should pay for its own cleanup, rather than hurt another state.

"There's a whole history of a series of problems over the years because of what New York City has put in that part of the ocean," the aide said.

Police continue hunt for teen who killed 7

BOSTON (UPI) — Police continued an intensive search today for a teenager who, in a one-man crime spree, robbed seven people, stabbed an elderly woman, assaulted a man, stole a car and snatched three women's handbags, including one belonging to a nun.

Police were looking for a youth, described by his victims as black, between the ages of 15 and 17, about 5-foot-7, with a thin build and closely cropped hair.
Authorities said the three-hour crime spree through four sections of the city began early Sunday when the youth forced open the back door of a home in Dorchester and stabbed Amy Frost, 74, in the face. Officers said Mrs. Frost was doing a crossword puzzle when the intruder burst in.

He went through the woman's pocketbook, taking the keys to a car belonging to the woman's daughter, Jane Michel, officials said, and then robbed George Sherlock, 57, another relative at knife-point and drove off in the daughter's 1973 Chevrolet Nova with an undetermined amount of money.
"The guy is a sadist if he could do that to my mother, an old woman," said Ms. Michael. "All he had to do is squeeze her arm or something. That would have been enough."

Mrs. Frost was taken to Carney Hospital, where she received 30 stitches, and was released.
Patrolman William Ingersoll said less than an hour later the youth stopped Rosemary Kean, 36, and told her he was holding a weapon under his brown sweater.
"If you scream, I'll kill you," he reportedly said and demanded she hand over her purse with $1.
Officials said the same youth robbed Sister Grace McDonald near the convent at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, also taking her handbag which contained less than $5.
The youth then followed John Lehtonen, 88 into his home, struck him on the head and face, and stole $1, police said, and went on to seize a handbag from Dorothy Rasom less than an hour later.
Ingersoll said he spotted the stolen green Nova in Boston's Roxbury section, and waited for someone to approach the car. When no one appeared, the police towed the car to a lot for fingerprinting.
"We had every cop in the area chomping at the bit, trying to run him in," Ingersoll said.

Ferry service is back

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Normal ferry service between Providence and Block Island resumed Monday with a substitute vessel taking the place of the ferry Yankee, which was damaged Saturday in a collision with a freighter.
John Wronowski, president of the New London-based Interstate Navigation Co., which operates the ferry service, said the Yankee's regular run was taken over by one of the four vessels that regularly run between Gallipee and Block Island.

Ronald Rege and his daughter, Shell Ann, 8, listen to the annual Fourth of July performance of the Boston Pops on the Esplanade. An estimated 275,000 people attended the concert and fireworks display.

Highways were unusually safe

The Independence Day holiday weekend ended for many motorists with a long, slow, hot but generally safe haul home as state police with an eye out for drunk drivers reported a relatively low 10 traffic fatalities in New England.
Massachusetts recorded four deaths, Connecticut reported two, while Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont each had one since the reporting period began Friday night.

Public safety officials hoped the July 4th weekend would go down as one of the safest in recent history. Last year, Massachusetts alone had 10 road deaths for the three-day weekend.
Police reported despite heavy, slow moving traffic on most major highways in the six-state region, few delays were encountered by motorists leaving festivities to prepare for a bleary-eyed return to work today.
Two of the fatal accidents in Massachusetts involved pedestrians.

Boston Pops draws throngs to riverside

BOSTON (UPI) — An estimated 275,000 people jammed the banks of the Charles River for the traditional Fourth of July celebration as the strains of the Boston Pops Orchestra under the baton of conductor John Williams resounded through the sweltering but festive air.
Scores of pleasure craft crowded the river's lower basin which offered a close-up view of the what officials Monday called one of the greatest fireworks displays in 10 years because of a "high sky."

"It appears now that we're going to have what we call a high sky which forms a kind of a canvas. What that means is that the fireworks will bounce off of the high sky giving us what I hope will be one of the most spectacular fireworks displays we've had in the past 10 years," said Michael Goldman, spokesman for the company sponsoring the fireworks display.
Roofs of surrounding brick townhouses were crowded with those fortunate enough to have their own personal birdseye view.
Day-long Independence Day festivities were held throughout New England, with bonfires, carnivals, and tug-of-war contests. A Western Massachusetts version of Boston's festivities were held in Springfield, with an outdoor concert by the Springfield Symphony Orchestra and fireworks capping off a day of events including hydroplane races on the Connecticut River.

In Hartford, Connecticut, about 300,000 people turned out for boat races, and a tug-of-war across the Connecticut River. At day's end, the Hartford Symphony Orchestra provided patriotic music as a massive fireworks display erupted in front of the State House.
The crowd had been heading to the Esplanade all day in an effort to get as close as possible to the Hatch Shell where Maestro Williams took his orchestra through the paces of his newest compositions from the blockbuster movie "Return of the Jedi."
Hundreds of people had camped overnight in front of the Shell intent on securing ringside seats.
"There was a lot of parking, no one got any sleep," said David Federman, 37, of Boston, crawling out Monday afternoon from under a tent.

Take advantage of opportunity

Once again environmentalists are making shrill complaints about their favorite whipping boy, Interior Secretary James G. Watt...

The occasion for the latest attack on Watt was the release last week of Interior Department guidelines for opening up the nation's national wildlife refuges.

Under the guidelines, the 8.8 million acres of refuges would be open to just about anything people wished to do, including not just hunting and fishing but also timber harvesting, grazing, farming, haying, and oil and gas extraction.

Russell W. Peterson, the president of the National Audubon Society, said, "Nowhere is President Reagan's single-minded, commercial approach to America's natural resources more disturbing and potentially damaging than in his treatment of our national wildlife refuges."

"What is at stake here is the integrity, and even the survival, of our national wildlife refuges," Peterson said.

It's possible the new guidelines will be the disaster Peterson predicts. But it is also possible that they will be used judiciously by federal officials, as Watt's spokesmen insist.

Environmentalists can take some comfort in the knowledge that Reagan may be in power only another year or so, hardly time for per-

A thickening plot?

WASHINGTON — Much as the White House wishes it will all go away, the furor over the purloined Carter debate briefing papers is not expected to die down immediately.

At his news conference last week, President Reagan was bombarded with questions about the propriety of his aides in obtaining and using documents that were prepared for President Carter by his debate with Reagan.

So far, no one has come forward to claim the honor. Nor has the White House identified, publicly at least, anyone who might have had a hand in securing the secret papers on strategy and tactics.

The mystery is how four administration officials could have received such papers without anyone recalling how they got them. Reagan himself said that he did not know that they existed and only learned about them from reports in the press.

White House aides are charged. Deputy press secretary there shouldn't be unethical things done in campaigns, even such things as accusing the other candidate of being a racist, and things like that.

Reagan indicated he was still chatting at remarks made about him in the last campaign.

With another campaign coming up, all candidates will have their work cut out for them to keep it clean.

NEVERTHELESS, questions remain unanswered, and with the Justice Department conducting an inquiry, it appears the White House will be answering more questions as time goes on.

Carter aides are saying they believe that more than the debate books left their campaign premises. If that is true, the plot will thin.

"Well, I don't happen to believe politics should have a double standard," he said. "I think it should be above reproach. And

Behind 'Zero's' failure

WASHINGTON — This is the story behind the story of Commander Zero's cease-fire in the guerrilla war against the Sandinista regime in Nicaragua.

When CIA-backed exiles, including many former Somoza national guardsmen, launched their counter-revolution from Honduras in the north, Pastora struck from Costa Rica in the south.

"I sent my associate Jon Lee Anderson to march with Pastora inside Nicaragua. In fact, Anderson was standing by Pastora's side...

"The CIA wants us around," he told my associate. "They want us fighting. But they don't want us to get big enough to be a threat to their puppets."

"They have been trying to get us to join the FDN, something we will never do, because its commanders are still ex-officers in Somoza's national guard," Pastora said.

Humidity and food poison

HARTFORD — Connecticut Health Commissioner Dr. Douglas Lloyd has warned vacationers the dangers of food poisoning from bacteria such as staphylococcus and salmonella, increase tremendously on hot and humid days.

"The state subsidizes 100 percent of the general assistance payments to workforce participants and 90 percent for those not in the workforce program."

Lloyd offers these tips: 1. Be certain all utensils are clean. 2. Wash hands. 3. Cook food thoroughly and at a high enough temperature.

"Pastora said the Reagan administration's refusal to provide funds for Pastora's operation was something he could tolerate. They had been getting money from private donors, including several U.S. corporations, and from some governments in Europe and Latin America."

"The CIA has told potential supporters of ours to lay off," Pastora complained. "They want us alive only to legitimize their puppet FDN force in the north."

Pastora said he had less than $600 left when he announced his temporary cease-fire on June 23. Ironically, it was the very success of his anti-Sandinista movement that drove it into bankruptcy — by bringing in more recruits than he could arm, clothe or even feed.

JIMMY CARTER duped?

Connecticut In Brief

Divers recover missing bolt

GREENWICH — State police divers have recovered a 1-inch-diameter steel bolt missing since a portion of a Connecticut Turnpike bridge collapsed a week ago, killing three people and injuring three others.

The bolt, part of an assembly of steel pins and hangers connecting the collapsed span to the rest of the Mianus River bridge, may be a crucial clue to why a 106-foot section of the bridge gave way last Tuesday.

"We did locate the bolt early this morning," state Transportation Commissioner J. William Burns said Monday.

He said the bolt "had a hunk missing from the end, but the divers found the missing piece too" from the river bottom.

Investigators say the cause of the collapse is still unknown, but their probe has focused on possible failure in the pin-hanger assembly.

Other possible causes include faulty design, flawed or fatigued steel, improper maintenance or a combination of factors.

Many citizens chose to cool off at lakes, the seashore or the backyard pool where barbecues were part of the traditional celebration of the nation's independence.

The biggest public observance of the holiday took place in Hartford Sunday where crowds were treated to day-long activities near and on the Connecticut River.

There were boat races, displays of a variety of boats including military vessels, music, picnicking and a tug of war across the river between teams representing Hartford and East Hartford.

The Hartford team was declared the winner but only after an opposing team member suffered a sprained ankle.

The evening was climaxed by a rousing Hartford Symphony concert with its traditional finale of "The Stars and Stripes Forever" and a booming, spectacular $25,000 fireworks display over the river that lit up the Hartford skyline.

The temperature, which reached 94 degrees, failed to dampen the spirit of the celebration although Red Cross officials reported they were busy throughout the day treating people at special stations for mostly heat exhaustion.

"We've also had a lot of folks stop by for blisters, insect bites and sunburn," said emergency medical technician David Scribner Jr.

Vendors had a run on anything wet and cold. Many of the street sellers ran out of soda and ice cream and ice was at a premium.

One Hartford vendor said he went through 700 cases of soda in five hours. "I started out with 800 pounds of ice and had to send someone out for 600 pounds more," said Ken Bussett.

But with the heat, there was not much call for food. "I barely sold any food, no one's eating in this heat," said Bussett.

Highlight of state's July 4th

Over 300,000 at riverfront festival

By United Press International

Residents across Connecticut took part in hot but happy Fourth of July weekend celebrations, capped by a massive turnout of more than 300,000 people at a Hartford riverfront salute to America's 207th birthday.

Special church services, town picnics and parades were held in communities across the state Monday under blistering, hazy skies that pushed the temperatures into the mid 90s.

Investigators say the cause of the collapse is still unknown, but their probe has focused on possible failure in the pin-hanger assembly.

Other possible causes include faulty design, flawed or fatigued steel, improper maintenance or a combination of factors.

"I enjoyed my years in the Legislature, especially as Speaker," the Democrat said. "I'm not spent yet."

Many thought his loss to incumbent Gov. William O'Neill was his political swan song. But the 39-year-old, including Pastora, says he's too young and too enthusiastic to give up politics.

Abate last week endorsed the Stamford mayoral bid of fellow Democrat, Ernest Abate.

Abate said he is interested in running for Serrani's Senate seat.

If successful, Abate would return to the Capitol where he served four terms as a state representative, including two terms as House Speaker.

"I think it's a double thing," Van Norstrand said, adding that Carson was best able to find backers because of his constant dealings with businesses and the type of people who have money to invest.

A USFL team wouldn't be the first pro football team to play in Connecticut.

The New York Giants played home games for a time in the 1970s at the Yale Bowl in New Haven, one of the sites Van Norstrand says could be used for a USFL team.

Van Norstrand, a football fan who played in prep school and used his "limited talents" briefly on the gridiron as a college freshman, said he had faith that the USFL would succeed.

The requirements were put simply: $50,000 for an application fee, $6 million to buy the franchise, payable in four installments starting with a $2.5 million downpayment, and an additional $1.5 million stand-by letter of credit.

And, expansion coordinator Debra Franklin wrote, if the state was seriously interested and willing to work quickly, the league might be able to extend the June 15 deadline it had set for applications for new franchises in 1984.

Needless to say, Carson wasn't out to buy a franchise in the USFL, the pro league that began play this year with teams in a dozen cities from Boston to Los Angeles.

Carson had written the USFL in response to a request from House Minority Leader R.E. Van Norstrand, D-Darien, who had asked Carson to look into the possibility of having a pro team in Connecticut.

Though Connecticut missed the deadline for applying for a franchise in 1984 and the Department of Economic Development sounds wary of the idea, Van Norstrand hasn't given up.

Van Norstrand says having a USFL team based in Connecticut could reap economic benefits for the state and would be a natural location with the potential for a natural rivalry with existing USFL teams in Boston and New York.

"It's an unfortunate situation that the roads, bridges and infrastructure are in as poor a condition as they are," said Marvin Morganbesser, executive director of the association, including businesses which build highways and bridges.

A study conducted by the construction group showed 67 Connecticut bridges are structurally inadequate, although they may not be in any immediate danger of collapsing.

City meets workfare quota

NEW HAVEN — Welfare Director William Lee said the city has met its quota placing two-thirds of its able-bodied welfare recipients in jobs for the first time this year.

The state penalizes the city $250 per month for each eligible person who is not placed and provides a $35-per-month incentive for each program participant.

The state subsidizes 100 percent of the general assistance payments to workforce participants and 90 percent for those not in the workforce program.

In May, the city placed 1,476 clients for a net gain of $52,773.

The accident was blamed on an overheated "hotbox."

Amtrak Operations Supervisor John Wise said a temporary track for a while Monday while crews worked to make it more stable. Passengers on three trains had to be bused between Springfield and Hartford before the temporary track was restored at 11:11 a.m.

Amtrak operates 12 trains per day on the damaged link, including the Montrealer, which travels from Washington, D.C., to New York, through New England and on to Canada.

Police said a Conrail locomotive pulling 10 cars collided with a refrigerator box car. The locomotive and refrigerator car derailed across from an access road leading into the freight yard.

The engineer then left the locomotive unattended, running and in gear and it struck a utility pole, police said.

No injuries were reported. The rear end wheels of the box car were sheared off and the track and utility were damaged.

Connecticut toll: traffic mishaps kill two, hurt 50

By United Press International

At least two people died and 50 were injured in traffic accidents on Connecticut highways over the Fourth of July weekend, state police said.

State police had made 1,376 motor vehicle arrests on state highways, including 754 for speeding, 24 for drunken driving and 754 for other offenses before the midnight end to the holiday.

The final report for the holiday was incomplete late Monday.

Police said two people died and 50 others were injured in a total 215 accidents. State police said they also handed out 254 warnings before the traffic rush expired Monday night.

The two fatalities involved motorcyclists. Police said Thomas McGann of West Hartford was injured fatally Sunday night when his motorcycle went over a red light at a Hartford intersection and swerved to avoid striking a car.

The motorcycle struck a curb at Flatbush Avenue and Chandler Street about 6 p.m., throwing McGann over a foot fence, police said. He died several hours later at Hartford Hospital.

On Friday night, Daniel Simmons, 26, of Haddam, was killed when his motorcycle went out of control on Route 9A near Haddam and struck a center guardrail.

State police said the kickstand was down and caught the road on a curve, Simmons was pronounced dead at the scene.

State police said a teenager was injured critically when he was struck by a vehicle that left the scene early Monday in Oxford.

John Destefano, 17, of Seymour, was struck on Route 94 about 1 a.m. after he had left a private party at a friend's home, state police said.

Destefano was listed in critical but stable condition at Griffin Hospital in Derby.

Harry James, 67, great bandleader

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Bandleader Harry James, who was one of the hottest trumpets in show business for more than 40 years, died Monday night. He was 67. James, who suffered from lymphatic cancer, had been ill since April but had performed as recently as June.

He was born March 15, 1916, in Albany, Ga., where the Mighty Haag Circus was pitched at the time. His mother performed on a trapeze until one month before his birth. His father conducted the circus band.

They proudly christened their son Harry Haag James.

By the time he was 6, James had begun his musical career under his father's direction. At 10, he was playing solo trumpet and at the age of 12 was given the job of conducting the No. 2 circus band. When he was 15, he got tired of playing marches for the circus and began sitting in with dance bands around the Southwest. Within a few years he was offered a job with Ben Pollack's orchestra and he wrote a song, "Peckin'" which started a dance craze among a newly spawned group of jazz music lovers who were known as jitterbugs.

Record number sit on death row

WASHINGTON (UPI) — At the end of 1982, there were more state and federal prisoners on death row, 1,056, than ever before in history, the Justice Department says.

The report by the Bureau of Justice Statistics said Monday the record figure reflects an increase in the number of sentences in recent years and the effect of many lengthy appeals.

The number includes 1,650 state prisoners, including 13 women, on death row and six men under the death sentence in military facilities.

More than two-thirds of the total were in the southern states. Only one northeastern state, Pennsylvania, held prisoners on death row. Thirty-seven states have death penalty laws, but only 31 states held at least one condemned prisoner last year.

Some 264 people were sentenced to death in 1982, an 8 percent increase over the number condemned in 1981. The largest number of sentences were handed down in California and Florida, each with 39, followed by Texas with 28 and Alabama with 26.

The number sentenced to death during the year was higher than in any other year except 1975.

Two men were executed during 1982, one in Virginia and one in Texas. So far this year, one man was executed in Alabama, bringing to seven the number executed since 1976.

An execution was set for Wednesday in Mississippi, but a federal appeals court issued a stay. The state has asked three Supreme Court justices to lift the stay; two have refused and a third, Chief Justice Warren Burger, has yet to act.

There were no executions in the United States between 1967 and 1976 when legislatures made major changes in state death penalty statutes because of a series of Supreme Court rulings.

Fullers to be buried in same ceremony

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — R. Buckminster Fuller, the science-fictionist, philosopher, futurist and geodesic dome creator, will be buried with his wife in a private ceremony in Cambridge, Mass.

Fuller's wife, Anne, died two days after her husband suffered a fatal heart attack after suffering a heart attack while visiting his wife at Good Samaritan Hospital. The couple celebrated their 66th anniversary July 12.

"She was a tremendous behind-the-scenes supporter of Buck's," Landsman said.

Mrs. Fuller was born Anne Hewlett on Long Island, N.Y., and married the designer, mathematician, philosopher, futurist and inventor while he was in the Navy. Her father, James Monroe Hewlett, influenced Fuller to become involved in housing design.

"I think it's leading up to a very serious problem," said Mrs. Fuller, who noted that her families are being affected because of recent layoffs by housing. After World War II Fuller invented the geodesic dome, which encloses the most space with the least surface area and is one of the strongest structures ever devised.

Truck driver shoots at car driver

A driver who passed a pickup truck on the right Sunday on Center Street narrowly escaped serious injuries when he was shot at by the driver of the truck, police said today.

The driver was not injured. The shot went through the driver's window, through the passenger and driver's backrests and lodged in the driver's door, police said.

Police said the victim told them following the 8 p.m. incident that he was traveling the truck because it was passing too slowly. He then turned onto Center Street and the truck pulled along the right side of his car.

A gun was pointing out of the truck, and its bearer asked the victim several times if he wanted it. "Yeah, go ahead," the victim said. The driver of the truck then fired.

The shooter then drove on Center Street and turned left onto Edgerton Street.

Police indicated they may have a suspect.

Police have charged a second man in a June 15 three-man sexual assault of a 29-year old woman, they said today.

Stanley J. Nasuta, 16, of 609 Main St., Apt. 9, was charged with first-degree sexual assault, first-degree unlawful restraint, second-degree robbery and third-degree assault. He was detained on $2,500 cash bond and scheduled to appear in Manchester Superior Court today.

CRT seeking more surplus food

HARTFORD (UPI) — Administrators of the state's food-distribution program have called on the federal government to release more surplus food to feed the state's needy.

More food is urgently needed to feed the growing number of poor and unemployed people, said Mary Potter of the Community Renewal Team, which administers the regional food program to 21 towns in the Hartford area.

"People are going to have to compete for the food and they're going to get angry when they don't get it," she said.

She said the Hartford region will be allocated 1,000 blocks of cheese during the first day of a food distribution program. But it is less than the amount distributed in Hartford alone on the first day of a similar program in 1971.

"I think it's leading up to a very serious problem," said Mrs. Potter, who noted that her families are being affected because of recent layoffs by housing. After World War II Fuller invented the geodesic dome, which encloses the most space with the least surface area and is one of the strongest structures ever devised.

Righetti just perfect

NEW YORK (UPI) — It was almost a year ago that Dave Righetti said Goodbye, Columbus. On Monday, he said hello to the New York Yankees history books. Righetti, ranked by his absence from the American League All-Star team, took out his frustrations of Boston by firing the major-league's first no-hitter in nearly two years, hurling the Yankees to a 4-0 triumph over the Red Sox.

Yankees manager Billy Martin had recommended Righetti for a spot on the AL All-Star pitching team after firing the major-league's first no-hitter in nearly two years, hurling the Yankees to a 4-0 triumph over the Red Sox.

Righetti, whose mother was celebrating her birthday July 4, received a standing ovation from the holiday crowd of 41,077 when he took the mound in the ninth. He was mobbed by teammates after Bogg's, the second-leading hitter in the league, struck out swinging on a wicked 9:2 slider.

The no-hitter was the first in the majors since Nolan Ryan's record-breaking classic against the Los Angeles Dodgers on Sept. 25, 1961. The last no-hitter in Yankee Stadium was Don Larsen's perfect game in Game 5 of the 1956 World Series against the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Ironically, Righetti wears uniform No. 19 — Larsen's old number.

Righetti became the seventh pitcher in the Yankees' 80-year history to throw a no-hitter and the first left-hander to achieve the feat since George A. Mogridge no-hit the Red Sox in 1917.

"Give my good credit," said Boston manager Ralph Houk. "We only hit four balls hard off him all year. He's a different pitcher than I know. He's got a different feel to his throwing. He shows what good pitching can do to good hitting."

The Red Sox had raked Yankee pitching for 31 hits, including nine homers, in winning two of the first three games in the weekend series.

John Tudor, 35, held the Yankees to two hits over the first four innings, but yielded the first run in the fifth on three successive singles with one out. Steve Pearce beat out an infield hit to first, moved to second on Smalley's ground ball and scored when another was erased on a double play and the other two advanced no further than second base.

"I was glad to get a couple of

White Sox 12, Twins 6
At Minneapolis, rookie Greg Walker, who earlier clubbed a two-run homer, launched a bases-clearing double to highlight a four-run eighth. Don Sutton, 55, relieved Floyd Bannister with two out in the third and held the Twins to one run the rest of the way.

Royals 5, Angels 1
At Anaheim, Calif., before a league-high crowd of 68,132, Paul Spittorff pitched a four-hitter and Leon Roberts drove in two runs with a single and a sacrifice fly to pace the Royals. The injury-riddled Angels played without All-Stars Rod Carew, Doug DeCinces, Fred Lynn and Reggie Jackson.

Brewers 8, Indians 3
At Cleveland, Ben Oglivie belted his fourth career grand slam and Ted Simmons singled home two runs to power Milwaukee behind the strong pitching of Don Sutton. Oglivie smashed Len Barker's 3-and-2 pitch deep into the right-field stands in the first inning for his first home run since May 14 — when he hit three against Boston. Gorman Thomas honored for the Indians.

A's, Rangers 3
At Oakland, Calif., Rickey Henderson stole three bases and scored on three sacrifice flies at the A's. Henderson's steals tied the AL's single and scored when Andre Dawson hit two home runs as Montreal snapped a five-game losing streak behind Steve Rogers, 12-3.

Astros 5, Dodgers 4
At Houston, Jose Cruz smacked his third home run in three games, snapping a 4-4 tie in the eighth inning and leading the Astros. Reliever Dave Smith, 21, picked up the win and Frank DiPino pitched the ninth for his seventh save. Steve Howe, 23, took the loss.

Braves 5, Reds 3
At Atlanta, Chris Chibbis led a 14-hit attack with three hits and drove in three runs for the Braves. Reliever Pete Falcone, the second of three Atlanta pitchers, improved to 7-1. Donnie Moore went four innings to pick up his seventh save. Bruce Bereny, 49, took the loss.

Padres 4, Giants 3
At San Diego, Sixto Lezcano drove in two runs and Terry Kennedy and Juan Bonilla accounted for one each, helping the Padres overcome two home runs by San Francisco's Joel Youngblood. Rookie Mark Thurmond, 20, was the winner. Gary Lucas notched his ninth save.

Cardinals 2-11, Pirates 7-4
At Pittsburgh, Darrell Porter hit a grand slam and George Hendrick and Ozzie Smith each had four hits in a game where both clubs salvaged a split for St. Louis.

Whalers going to name Evans

HARTFORD — Rumors that have abounded since the naming of Emilio Francis as president and general manager of the Hartford Whalers are expected to end Thursday when the naming of Jack "Tex" Evans as the Whalers' new head coach.

Evans, 55, has been coach of the St. Louis Blues' Salt Lake City affiliate in the Central Hockey League for five seasons, having previously coached in the NHL at Oakland and Cleveland.

Francis, who came to the Whalers from St. Louis, is expected to announce Evans' appointment at a Thursday press conference. Evans remains bound by contract to the Blue organization, who is currently being controlled by the NHL office. He could, however, be released from that obligation, much as Francis was when he joined the Whalers on May 2.

Evans will replace John Cumfitt, who is returning to coach Hartford's Binghamton affiliate in the American Hockey League. Cumfitt, who began last season coaching at Binghamton, will be taking over for Rick Ley, who was relieved of his duties last week by Francis.

Whaler selection among ice picks

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (UPI) — Lou Vairo, the coach of the 1984 U.S. hockey team, can see light at the end of the tunnel.

"Happily, we have completed the first step — the selection process of our team," he said. "We picked 27 players instead of 26 because there were a couple of boys we could not decide between and we wanted to give them the benefit of the doubt."

Vairo, replacing Herb Brooks — who miraculously won the 1980 Gold Medal at Lake Placid — has the immediate problem of trying to talk forwards Brian Lawton and Pat Lafontaine into joining his squad. The team roster was announced Monday.

"They have not signed professional contracts and until they do, they have been selected for our team," said Vairo. "Lawton and Lafontaine are negotiating with NHL teams which have drafted them and they need more time to make their deals after the Olympics."

The roster includes three players who have just completed their junior year in high school — David Jensen, Ed Olesky and "Jeff" Jensen, 17, of Newton, Mass., who played for the Whalers' No. 2 pick in the recent National Hockey League draft. He was a Lawrence Academy in the Bay State a year ago where he scored 41 goals and 48 assists for 89 points in 23 games.

When Lawton, the first and 48th overall draft pick in the NHL entry draft, reports Aug. 7 at Colorado Springs or waits until

Phillie odies sitting pretty

By Mike Tollis
UPI Sports Writer

Regarded as too old by some, the Philadelphia Phillies were supposed to be watching the pennant race from a rocking chair. At the traditional halfway point of the season, however, they are sitting pretty.

Bob Dernier squeezed home a run Monday night and 38-year-old Steve Carlton evened his record at 9-9 with his 54th career shutout, leading the Phillies to a 4-0 triumph over the New York Mets before Veterans Stadium season-high crowd of 32,710.

The decision left the Phillies 1½ games behind first-place Montreal in the NL East, and suddenly their age looks more like experience.

"The atmosphere in the club is real good right now," said the Phils' 42-year-old Pete Rose. "On the field, in the dugout, in the clubhouse, around the batting cage. Everything was quiet for a while but now we seem to be coming together."

Carlton allowed four hits and struck out nine to raise his career total to 3,580, eight ahead of 199 with his 54th career shutout. Starter Walt Terrell, 1-3, took the loss for New York but was hurt by Padres' bullpen.

Ivan DeJesus singled to open the third, stole second and continued to burn when catcher Junior Ortiz's throw bounced into center. Dernier then dropped a suicide squeeze bunt.

"I anticipated I'd get the sign and it came on the first pitch," Dernier said. "I felt good to get a run home from third base. I felt that there the last few games."

Chicago friendly to AL stars

CHICAGO (UPI) — While the National League has had things pretty much its own way in all-star competition, the American League can take some solace in knowing it probably has had more success in Chicago for its 50th anniversary game for the last time. The AL earlier won the inaugural game 4-2.

The game hasn't been played at Comiskey Park since 1959 when Red Schoendienst's homer in the top of the 14th carried the National League to victory.

The weather, which plagued the nearby Western Open most of the week, apparently will cooperate.

Temperatures in the mid 70s under fair to partly cloudy skies are forecast for Wednesday night's opening pitch.

More than 750 media credentials have been issued to cover the anniversary contest. A news conference will be held Tuesday morning for National League Manager Whitey Herzog of St. Louis and Milwaukee Manager Harvey Kuhn to announce their starting pitchers.

Already there have been some casualties among the participants, with California's Reggie Jackson the latest to bow out, with a rib injury. Kuhn and Ben Oglivie of Milwaukee will replace Jackson in the AL starting outfield.

The idea of staging the 50th anniversary game in Chicago was the brainchild of former White Sox owner Bill Veeck. The colorful showman started lobbying to bring the game to Comiskey Park last year.

In 1981, Veeck split his controlling interest in the club's group led by Jerry Reinsdorf and Eddie Einhorn and hasn't been back at Comiskey Park since.

Wednesday, Commissioner Bowie Kuhn presumably will serve as host for the last time of the commissioner's luncheon.

Advice to the wary

Tourists, beware of urban hazards

NEW YORK — A first-time visitor to any major city need not wear a sign telling all that he is an out-of-towner. Savvy natives, both honest and dishonest, can spot a tourist unaccustomed to the ways of the big city in a second. He's the one who is gawking away excitedly on the bus while perusing a map, or striking up conversations with strangers while riding public transport for the first time. He has expensive cameras slung carelessly over his shoulder. She puts her handbag on the empty seat beside her on the bus. And they're always halting in the middle of an onslaught of pedestrians to stare upward at skyscrapers. The problem is worldwide. New York City usually is regarded as the fun capital — and the crime capital — of the world. To help first-time visitors avoid crossing paths with a rotten apple in the Big Apple or any other large city, here are some pointers suggested by Det. Jack Meeks of the New York City Police Department's crime prevention unit. "Don't ask for trouble. You can't prevent targets. You have to use a common sense and some alertness." —Keep cash, credit cards and keys (no identification attached) in different locations on your person. Take only enough cash to get you through the day. Use travelers checks, personal checks and credit cards for major purchases. Leave extra cash in hotel safe deposit boxes, not in the room. —Keep separately photostatic copies of all identification and credit cards and all pertinent phone numbers for easy and quick cancellation of accounts. —For women, try not to keep anything of real value in your handbag, which is the first target of thieves in restaurants. Keep bags containing valuables on the lap at all times, not on the floor or behind the chair. Stand close to the edge is asking for trouble. On rare occasions, "express bandits" have been known to lean out from between cars of moving trains and latch onto the top of the train. In such a case, get down, get under, and get away from the train as fast as you can. —Prostitutes: apart from the fact that prostitution generally is illegal, ladies of the evening often can be come-ons for other crimes, such as extortion and robbery. —The New York police department, while not advocating that victims give in passively in all situations, suggests you "use your head." If it appears that bodily injury is likely, you are better off not offering any resistance — or lip — to your predator. Police ask that you quietly observe as much as possible about your accuser, and then immediately dial the police emergency number. —Pickpockets are a cunning lot who often work in teams. They love crowds and city buses and may be well dressed. Warnings against pickpockets often are scribbled on bus walls. One retired transit police officer says pickpockets often watch as passengers gear up on the train while in public. Tuck neckties in his wallet to make sure it's still there. At the moment's stop, the pickpocket, now aware of where the loot is hidden, follows him off the bus and "burps" him. —Expensive jewelry and coats are best left at home or with hotel security. If you simply cannot bear to remove your diamond rings, turn the stones to the inside of the hand while in public. Tuck neckties under clothing. Take note that some brown briefcases have been known to reach into the necks of coats and yank away. —Expensive cameras: a dangling object is always a target. Say Meeks. What to do? Use your best judgment, depending on the situation, but try not to carry bags slung over your shoulders or around necks, or dangling loosely from hands. —Con artists are everywhere. Most people know not to buy the Brooklyn Bridge from the guy with the shiny eyes. But you may not be aware that Three-Card Monte players — an illegal type of shell game performed with playing cards atop an upturned cardboard box — are using sleight of hand and shills to entice the unsuspecting to drop $20 or more on their scam. There is no way to win at this one. —Street peddlers, though not all unsavory, have been known to sell "knock-offs" or cheap imitations of famous fashion items. If you succumb to the temptation and your purchase falls apart back in the hotel room, don't go looking for a refund. He won't be there. —Luggage: never leave it unattended. Beware of seemingly nice individuals at terminals offering a hand. Better to carry your own or find a porter to assist. Anyone else might just turn off into the night.

Advice

Problem drinkers can test the patience of their families

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you printed a list of test questions for the excessive drinker. My husband took the test, found he needed help and started going to Alcoholics Anonymous. He hasn't had a drink in five months and he can thank A.A. for that.

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

At the same time, I started attending Al-Anon meetings. It certainly helped me to cope with my home situation regardless of whether my husband was drinking or not.

6. Are mealtimes frequently because of the drinker?

7. Do you make threats, such as, "If you don't stop drinking, I'll leave you"?

8. When you kiss the drinker hello, do you secretly try to smell his or her breath?

9. Are you afraid to upset someone for fear it will set off a drinking bout?

10. Have you been hurt or embarrassed by a drinker's behavior?

11. Does it seem as if every holiday is spoiled because of drinking?

12. Have you considered calling the police because of drinking behavior?

13. Do you feel that drinking is more important to your loved one than you are?

14. Do you think that the drinker's behavior is caused by his or her companions? 6. Are mealtimes frequently because of the drinker? 7. Do you make threats, such as, "If you don't stop drinking, I'll leave you"?

Things have changed

No one is sure exactly what year this picture was taken. But things certainly have changed at Watkins Funeral Home. Notice that the horses pulling the hearse

Grand Canyon on muleback: It's painful but exhilarating

By John DeMers United Press International GRAND CANYON, Ariz. — The leather-faced cowboys have names like Bud and Bill. Their mules answer to the like of Phantom Ranch can assure you the trip is no sanitized tourist attraction.

It may be no sweat to the real cowboys and Indians who live and work in the canyon. But in anyone else's mouth, the strenuous two-day journey leaves the real dust of northern Arizona.

Sure-footed mules were lugging water jugs into the canyon long before it became a national park in 1919.

These who venture down into the chasm are rewarded with the most spectacular views of all. Exploring the inner gorge gives you a greater appreciation of the grandeur of the canyon, which averages a mile deep and 4 to 18 miles across.

The mule train stops for a short rest at the adrenal gland. The largest source of progesterone in the body is the adrenal gland. The release of the adrenal gland is the second part of the menstrual cycle. And it is produced by the placenta.

It calms the uterus to enable pregnancy. It does not cause cancer and it has been used successfully to control hot flashes in some women during the menopause.

Progesterone also helps to develop the breasts' mammary glands at the end of pregnancy.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am a 74-year-old female, widower for five years. About 10 days ago I had surgery and was in the hospital for eight days. (Nothing serious.)

I had a middle-aged nurse taking care of me. She went out of her way to be nice to me and was extremely patient and good-natured. Just before leaving the hospital I told her how much I appreciated her, and tried to give her a $20 bill. She refused to accept it. In fact she acted a bit insulted.

Abby, was I out of line by offering her a little tip for her services? DEAR ABBY: We work in a public office and have contact with many people every day. Our problem is one coworker who constantly chews gum in a manner that is very irritating to those of us who must work closely with her. The incessant noise of her chewing, popping and tracking crumies without consideration for coworkers or clients.

We have nothing against chewing gum if it's done in an unobtrusive way, but this person is driving us up a wall with her noisy chewing, cracking and popping. Help! DEAR ABBY: We work in a public office and have contact with many people every day. Our problem is one coworker who constantly chews gum in a manner that is very irritating to those of us who must work closely with her. The incessant noise of her chewing, popping and tracking crumies without consideration for coworkers or clients.

DEAR OUT: If the gum chewer is unaware of her offensiveness, one of you should tell her privately, in a friendly way. If she is aware and doesn't care, tell her supervisor. And since there are several of you, there's clout in numbers. So get cracking!

"I'm a Democrat," an 11-year-old girl wrote me in a letter the other day. An 11-year-old probably doesn't know whether she's a Democrat or a Republican but that doesn't make her much different from the rest of us. We may think we know and we may announce what we think we are at regular intervals but don't ask us for a list of the differences between the two parties.

When I was a kid, my father always voted Republican but I don't think he had a lot of well thought-out reasons for it. Like most people, he picked a couple of little things he thought the Republicans stood for that he agreed with, and concluded from those that he was one of them.

When I asked my father the difference between the two, he told me the Democrats wanted to lower the import taxes on the things foreign countries shipped her to sell and the Republicans wanted to raise the taxes to keep foreign goods out.

Generally speaking, the Democrats have always been thought of as being on the side of labor and the Republicans on the side of business.

Butter usually has more to do with his political affiliation than his ideals do. You can't trust anyone's definition of what a Republican or a Democrat is. Each party likes to pretend it has hard and fast economic, social and philosophic principles that are cast in stone but that's not the case.

Must woman have surgery for uncontrollable bladder?

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am a 28-year-old female. I have had two children. Both were over 9 pounds. I've gynecologist told me I should have a hysterectomy to correct the problem of my being unable to hold my bladder, mainly while standing.

I had a second opinion. It was that I should not have the surgery. However, my bladder problem is becoming increasingly worse. I have to urinate every half hour or so and during sex, which has become quite painful. Should I have a third opinion? The Keg exercises haven't helped at all.

DEAR READER: The most common cause of this problem is that the muscles and ligaments that support the bladder and urethra are stretched or torn. Childbirth is usually a factor. The cystocele, urethrocele, and prolapse of the bladder and fallopian tubes are all part of this problem.

Yes, get another opinion but ask specifically about having your bladder problem corrected without having a hysterectomy.

You work on your gut while she works on her gut. If you can talk openly with your daughter and it sounds like you are not in agreement, you might be able to help each other. Going through this difficult time together will strengthen your relationship.

DEAR READER: She will stop crying when she has cried long enough. Her grief is probably difficult for you to handle.

Now, she is regretting her decision and I guess I feel somewhat guilty for letting her go through with it. I do think, however, that she did what was best.

Instead of relying on the guidance from me, why don't you try to gain some confidence in your ability to rely on yourself? If you really don't want to lose either person, maybe you can figure out some kind of compromise.

DEAR DR. BLAKER: My best friend hates my boyfriend because she thinks he is no good for me. The problem has become so bad that I feel must choose between the two.

I cannot decide whom I would miss most. And I just thought you might be able to help me make this decision.

DEAR READER: You have given me very little information yet. I expect me to solve your problem. That makes me think that the situation might be at least somewhat exaggerated by your inability to think for yourself.

Your friend is telling you to drop this guy. The man, on the other hand, obviously still wants a relationship with you. And you are equally torn between the two and can't make a decision.

Instead of relying on the guidance from me, why don't you try to gain some confidence in your ability to rely on yourself? If you really don't want to lose either person, maybe you can figure out some kind of compromise.

DEAR DR. BLAKER: My 17-year-old daughter has had an abortion about two weeks ago. When she discovered she was pregnant, she came to me and we discussed the alternatives. She didn't like the idea of an abortion but finally decided that it would be best.

Now, she is regretting her decision and I guess I feel somewhat guilty for letting her go through with it. I do think, however, that she did what was best.

Instead of relying on the guidance from me, why don't you try to gain some confidence in your ability to rely on yourself? If you really don't want to lose either person, maybe you can figure out some kind of compromise.

Your Health

related and are formed in several chemical steps. Progesterone actually is used to form testosterone, the male hormone, and testosterone goes on to form estrogen. So it is no wonder that men and women both have estrogen, progesterone and testosterone.

One of the hormones can be formed by the ovary, the testicle and the adrenal cortex (outer shell of the adrenal gland). The largest source of progesterone in the body is the adrenal gland. The release of the adrenal gland is the second part of the menstrual cycle. And it is produced by the placenta.

It calms the uterus to enable pregnancy. It does not cause cancer and it has been used successfully to control hot flashes in some women during the menopause.

Progesterone also helps to develop the breasts' mammary glands at the end of pregnancy.

DEAR DR. LAMB: You hear a lot about estrogen but very little about progesterone. I know it is the other important female hormone. But does it cause cancer, like estrogen does? Where does it come from and what does it do?

New issue market booming and you can play the game

Everyone knows the new-issue market is sizzling — with the 277 companies joining the public ranks this year shooting up an average of 59 percent (way above the Dow gain of around 19 1/2 percent).

But still to be reckoned with are these puzzlers:
 • At what point does the new-issue boom turn into a new-issue bust? It always does.
 • And if you believe the boom is going to last for a while — which most market pros believe — what's the best way to play the game now?

For some answers, I solicited the thinking of 35-year-old Norm Fosback, the brains behind New Issues, a non-lit monthly newsletter out of Fort Lauderdale, Fla. It was the country's hottest performing investment newsletter in May — but more relevant, editor Fosback has a dazzling record of picking winners during the nearly five years the letter's been in business.

Fosback's latest view: The boom's got at least another six to 12 months to go.

But before presenting his thinking, let's look at his performance.
 Since starting in September of '78, New Issues has recommended 17 stocks. All told, 113 are up, 24 are down. The average gain of all of them — factoring in the current price of those still held and the recommended sale price of those liquidated — is exactly 150 percent, Fosback tells me. The Dow in the same period is up around 30 percent.

Last year, New Issues made 19 buy recommendations. Of the 19, 18 are up, one down. The average gain from the offering price: 127 percent, reports Fosback. The average holding period was 10 months.

OF THIS YEAR'S 17 recommendations, 16 are up, one down. The average advance: just over 75 percent. A lesser, but still substantial '83 gain — 53 percent — is reported for New Issues by the Hulbert Financial Digest, a Washington, D.C., outfit that tracks the performance of the leading investment newsletters.

Fosback attributes the discrepancy to two things: (1) Hulbert ignores a "hold" recommendation; it assumes that a hold is, in effect, a sale; (2) Hulbert rates new issues from their initial trading price, not the offering price.

In May, according to Hulbert, New Issues led the newsletter pack with a gain of 19 percent vs. a same-period drop of 2.1 percent in the Dow.

Now to Fosback's thinking.
 The new-issue market, he observes, rises and falls with the market itself. And what we're unmistakably seeing is greater investor confidence — with lots of money moving from conservative to more speculative-type investments.

"Ultimately, all new-issue booms become new-issue busts . . . but we're not even close," says Fosback.

He reasons that if you accept the obvious view that you need a favorable general market to maintain a high level of interest in new issues, then stock prospects remain quite bright for new companies in the public arena.

Fosback observes that despite the general market's big move, both dividend yields and price-earnings multiples are not unreasonable by historical standards. He also cites — as do many bulls — the still-substantial amount of cash in both institutional and public hands that has not yet been committed to the equity market.

The end of new-issue booms, or the late stages of them, comments Fosback, are characterized by intense speculation in low-priced and purely start-up companies (as was the case during the new-issue peak of mid-'81, when the penny market went wild).

IN CONTRAST, says Fosback, the current new-issue boom is characterized more than anything else by the large number of high-quality companies coming into the market. Most are not start-ups and have an extensive history of sales and profits. And many of those that do not have such an extensive history were well-financed during the period they were private — thanks to huge venture capital financing.

OK, since Fosback's a bull and a winning stock picker, I asked him to name his 10 favorites — new issues that came out during the past 18 months. And from those 10, I asked him to pick his top three. The 10 — with Fosback strongly recommending a package of new issues to help minimize the risk, and a longer term investment strategy (2 to 3 years, and in some cases, 5 to 10 years) — are as follows:

Altos Computer (18); Biogen (15 1/2); Data Switch (38 1/2); LSI Logic (39 1/2); MASSFOR Systems (39 1/2); On-Line Software (21 1/2); Priam 2201; Quality Micro Systems (19 1/2); Rehab Hospital (19 1/2) and Technology For Communications (19 1/2).

His top three: Biogen, Priam and Rehab Hospital. Biogen, which went public in March at $23 a share, is Fosback's only losing new issue this year. The company is viewed as one of the big four in bio-technology (or genetic engineering) — the area rated by Fosback as the single greatest growth industry for the balance of this century. Any meaningful profits, though, are several years away. But given a longer range investment view, Biogen, Fosback believes, has the potential to be a $100 stock in three to five years.

PRIAM, WHICH makes high-performance disc drives that are used to store data in large-scale computer systems, earned 5 cents a share in its June '82 fiscal year on sales of $30 million. Fosback's fiscal '83 forecast: 20 to 25 cents a share on sales of $65 million. The fiscal '84 projection: a share or better on a volume of $125 million to $150 million.

Given the market's current willingness to reward such fast growth with well-above average price-earnings multiples, Fosback believes the stock could double or triple in present levels within 12 months. The company went public early this month at $17 a share.

The big play in Rehab Hospital, which went public last February at $8.25 a share, is its plan to create a chain of rehabilitation hospitals. At present, the firm has one such hospital and several more in the works. The company earned 28 cents a share last year on revenues of $5.3 million, and Fosback believes that within five years both revenues and profits should increase more than tenfold. Its potential stock price: $50 within three years, in Fosback's view.

As for new public offerings coming down the pike, here's a number of them that look attractive to Fosback: Koff Medical, Williams-Sonoma, Applied Communications, Lifeline Systems, Integrated Automation, Crown Books, Circon, Avant-Garde Computing and Zymos.

If Fosback's enthusiasm has whetted your appetite, you might want to give some thought to one of his dampening comments as well: "In this kind of market, the worst kind of garbage does best . . ."

Employee benefit programs will make choices tougher

By LeRoy Pope
 United Press International

NEW YORK — Both employees and employers are going to have to work hard at achieving satisfactory benefit programs in the years to come.

That's the message to be drawn from a recent seminar on "Communicating Benefits in the 1980s," held by William M. Mercer, Inc., the New York consulting firm.

Changes in the structure of society and business will create opportunities for greater benefits but also will make choices tougher, the seminar speakers said.

"Benefit programs will seem complex, difficult to understand and possibly even negative to workers," said Leslie C. Krantz, one of the consulting panelists. She said failure to make employees understand the multiple choices will lead to poor utilization of benefits and problems in their old age.

Among the structural problems that will cause complications will be intense competition for jobs, especially in middle management, said Victoria M. Novak, another panelist. She said the impact of the baby boom generation and the drastic slimming of middle management means that, by the end of this decade, there may be 20 reasonably qualified persons vying for every middle management job.

The big problems in framing benefit programs for these baby boom people, who are now middle aged, are that most of them change jobs every three years on the average and most are very dissatisfied with the money they're making and more dissatisfied about their chances for advancement.

Also, all the Mercer panelists agreed, the working force is going to get older as people retire later and it is going to become much more diversified.

Malcolm M. Hirsh, another panelist, said de-coupling of medical and life insurance plans and such new benefits as legal insurance, child care, salary reduction plans with multiple investment choices and pared-down medical plans are examples of the complex choices that must be made comprehensible to workers.

He said this means it probably will be impossible in the future to put out a new benefit program with brochures only every five years. It will have to be a process of continual change and education. "Employees will have to be taught to perceive their own needs more accurately and make intelligent choices from options that may seem equally attractive," he said.

Another structural change in business that likely will have a profound effect on employee programs in the future is the trend towards decentralization of management and smaller organizational units and "networking," Hirsh said.

He said this may force employers to cease trying to communicate with workers about benefits on a mass basis as most do now and to bring the whole matter to more personalized and individualized communications between bosses and workers.

He said the supervisor of each working unit probably will play a bigger role in the actual workings of benefit systems than the mass mailing of print materials by the central office. He said this means line managers must be better trained in explaining company benefits and company philosophy to workers.

Hirsh said a survey conducted in 1982 on a sample of 2,000 U.S. and Canadian workers showed that 92 percent preferred to get information about their benefits from their unit supervisors than from the central offices.

Soil erosion plagues Midwest

By Pamela J. Huey
 United Press International

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Wind whipping topsoil from farm fields into ditches and across highways in parts of the Midwest this spring has at times given the appearance of drought and dust bowl days in the Midwest.

But rain has been plentiful in most places, excessive in some. Late planting, heavy rains and high rates of evaporation led to higher rates than usual of both wind and water erosion, conservationists say.

"Our folks in the field this year believe water erosion has been much more severe than it has been in the past several years," said Ray Herman, resource conservationist with the U.S. Soil Conservation Service in Champaign.

The spring storms have come in rapid-fire succession, Herman said, saturating soils and causing runoff. To complicate the problem, low humidity and high winds dried out the topsoil quickly, while subsoil levels remained very moist.

Another factor contributing to erosion was late planting and slow development of crops, he said.

Robert Walker, University of Illinois extension natural resources specialist, said the heavy rains also smothered the soil.

"Under these smooth conditions, we've had quite a bit more dust blowing," Walker said.
